Orden had read about the story behind this proverb when he first created Kurukuru. The story spoke of a foolish and reckless mantis who tried to stop a moving wagon. Still, its boundless courage impressed Orden and he hoped his servant would be as loyal and brave as that mantis.

"Live on."

"..."

The king gave his last order. Kurukuru understood and trembled in sorrow.

"I have no regrets."

The king slowly closed his eyes and Kim Suho staggered up.

The servant stared at the king's lifeless body for a long time. Insects didn't possess the ability to cry, so Kurukuru only kneeled in front of the king and kowtowed.

The lonely king's tale finally came to an end.

* * *

[Africa]

Boss deactivated her shadow armor after the colossal explosion. She could see the blue sky and vast grasslands just beyond the horizon. Orden's palace had been completely destroyed by none other than Orden himself.

"Boss."

A childlike voice called her from behind. Boss turned and her long hair fluttered in the wind. Jain disguised herself as Park Hanho's daughter and waved.

"What's this? Everything is over, right?"

"Seems so. Did it work?"

"It surprisingly did."

Jain secretly met with Rumi two weeks ago and learned that Orden admired humans. She didn't understand at the time, so she disguised herself as a humanoid monster and infiltrated the palace. She finally understood after seeing Orden in person.

"I think he's into small and cute humans."

Unfortunately, her assumption missed the mark.

"Small and cute humans?" Boss frowned and disapproved of the implication.

“Yeah, but how’s Hajin?”

“He’s in the bunker, so he should be fine.”

“Yeah? Then let’s go find Orden’s body.”

The Chameleon Troupe originally functioned as a group of thieves. Of course, they wanted Orden’s corpse.

“Yeah, let’s go.”

The two walked down the street while tracking Orden’s scent.

Whish—

The wind carried a particular scent.

“...?”

Boss froze after noticing this scent. The same happened to Jain. They both exchanged glances and turned towards the scent.

PbF by: traitor/SEN

The Novel's Extra

WUXIA
WORLD

The Novel's Extra

- 소설 속 엑스트라 -

- VOLUME 4 -

-AUTHOR-
Ji-gab-song

[Wuxiaworld]

Chapter 301

After the War (1)

A familiar scent blew through the air. Boss would never forget this magic power scent.

She found it impossible, but ran towards it anyways. Her heart pounded as the scent grew stronger. She stopped at a certain point after running like crazy. Jain caught up and also stopped. The two of them looked forward in a daze.

A certain man stood on top of the crumbled throne. He calmly sat on the rubble and seemingly waited for someone.

“...!”

Boss’ eyes widened when she saw him. He had his back towards her, but it looked all too familiar. She couldn’t believe her eyes and glanced at Jain standing next to her. That meant the man in front of her couldn’t be Jain in disguise.

It all seemed too real to be an illusion. She questioned whether she might be dreaming. That man should’ve been dead, so did this person just look like him?

Whish—

A gust of wind blew the man’s hair and fully revealed his face. Boss became speechless.

“Ah...”

She subconsciously yelped. The man on top of the rubble also sensed her presence.

He tilted his head and slowly turned around. Boss carefully examined his appearance. His well-defined facial features came into full view as the wind blew his hair.

She would never forget the Chameleon Troupe's former boss, Yi Yeonjun, whom she considered her father.

* * *

My body sunk into a bottomless ocean. I couldn't open my eyes or breathe, but I already grew used to such pain. I knew this illusion would end as long as I endured.

"Chae Nayun..."

A voice seeped through the water's surface. The echoes took the form of a devil and swallowed me. The devil wore my mother and brother's face before entering my heart as despair.

"Chae Nayun!"

The sharp voice pierced my heart. I gasped for breath as if someone strangled me. The loved ones I could no longer see appeared and my heart trembled.

Why do I have to be the only one who feels such pain? Why do I always have to send off my loved ones?

Chak!

A fiery pain woke Chae Nayun.

"Huu!"

Her eyes shot open and she coughed. Shin Jonghak and Yun Seung-Ah appeared right in front of her.

"Uwuaaak!"

“Woah!”

“Kyak!”

She screamed in surprise and Shin Jonghak and Yun Seung-Ah also screeched. Chae Nayun pushed them away and shot up.

“Haa, haa, haa...”

She clutched her chest and took several deep breaths.

“Geez... huu...”

Her nightmare felt worse than usual perhaps because Orden’s magic power swept through her.

“Are you okay?” Yun Seung-Ah approached and patted her on the back.

Chae Nayun nodded and asked, “I’m okay. What’s the situation?”

“It’s mostly taken care of,” Shin Jonghak replied. He looked around with the Conqueror Spear resting on his shoulders.

“Orden’s magic power disappeared without a trace. The master rank heroes also took care of the humanoid monsters with the Genkelope Vessel’s help.”

“So everything is over?”

“No,” Yun Seung-Ah replied.

“Many humanoid monster villages still exist in Africa with even more brainwashed people. We’re just getting started.”

“Ah...”

Chae Nayun scratched her neck and looked around. Orden’s palace had completely crumbled and revealed Africa’s vast wilderness.

Heroes sat or lay on the ground while agents from the Genkelope vessel treated them.

“Ah, where’s old man Heynckes?”

She suddenly recalled Heynckes at the heart of the magic power explosion.

“...”

Yun Seung-Ah’s expression turned grim and Chae Nayun’s heart immediately sank.

“W-What? What happened?”

“Well...”

Yun Seung-Ah pointed to her right without any explanation. In the middle of the wilderness where she pointed stood a man frozen like a statue. Chae Nayun’s heart dropped. The man’s silver armor beautifully shone. The star had finally turned into steel.

“...!”

She didn’t have time to think and quickly ran over. However, she could only stand there and dumbfoundedly stare at his silver helmet.

“What...”

She touched the helmet and muttered. Her voice trembled with sadness.

“This is a lie, right? Old man?”

She choked with tears in front of the reality. The days she spent on the cold Himalayan mountain exchanging swords with him flashed before her eyes. Then...

“I told you not to call me old man!”

“Aaak, Jesus!”

The helmet came off as Heynckes shouted. The startled Chae Nayun fell backwards on her butt.

“Uhahahaha, that was fun.”

“A-Ah, my heart... Old man, you...!”

“Why am I your old man? Your old man just left after treating you.”

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened at Heynckes’ words.

“Eh? Grandfather did?”

“Yep. Well, that happened 30 minutes ago. Don’t be too harsh on him. Joochul is a busy man.”

“Grandfather has always been like that.” Chae Nayun nodded without complaints.

“What about you, old man? Are you feeling okay?”

“I’m not sure, but I seem fine for now,” Heynckes replied.

Kim Suho appeared from the distance with a Genkelope agent helping him walk. He clearly looked exhausted.

“Oh, here comes the Sword Saint.”

“Kim Suho!”

Everyone ran over to him. Kim Suho smiled after seeing his friends all seemed fine.

“It’s nice to see all of you again.”

“Ah, but rather than that—”

“Did Orden die?”

Heynckes cut off Chae Nayun and asked. His expression turned more serious than Chae Nayun had ever seen.

“Yes, Orden is dead.”

Kim Suho nodded. He had witnessed Orden’s death. The monster king peacefully closed his eyes and passed away.

“Did you confirm his corpse?” Heynckes asked again.

“Yes.” Kim Suho nodded. “It scattered to dust.”

“Dust? It turned to dust?”

Kim Suho smiled without answering him. Kurukuru had taken Orden’s corpse. The king’s servant would surely take care that no one ever find it.

“Yes, it turned to dust.”

“Hmm...”

Heynckes’ Steel Eyes could discern the truth from lies. However, he simply wore a gentle smile and tapped Kim Suho’s shoulders.

“Well done! As expected of a Nine Stars candidate.”

“You overestimate me.”

“Ha! Nine Stars candidate?” Shin Jonghak’s jealous interjection made everyone laugh.

Tirring— Tirring—

“Ah, geez.”

An emergency alert rang from their smartwatches. Every hero present looked down at their wrists.

[Disaster Alert. A large group of humanoid monsters have invaded England at 3:13 P.M.]

“It’s England this time?”

Chae Nayun frowned, but Yun Seung-Ah stared at the message and shook her head.

“No, this is from earlier in the day. We must have gotten it late because of Orden’s signal interference.”

The message had occurred during the middle of their operation. A follow-up message arrived to prove her conjecture correct.

[Update on England’s Disaster Alert. The situation has been taken care of with the help of Princess Rachel and the 9 star magician Ah Hae-In.]

“Rachel and the 9 star Ah Hae-In...”

Chae Nayun shrugged. She didn’t know exactly what happened, but...

“I guess it was an easy fight.”

* * *

Treatment of humanoid monsters became a major issue across the world five days after the Orden operation.

— I recently received a strange request.

Yoo Yeonha became so busy she couldn’t even sleep, but still made time for Yoo Jinhyuk’s call.

“Request?”

— Yep. I want to take care of it alone, but you know how busy I am. I thought I'd ask my beloved niece for help, hahaha.

Yoo Jinhyuk had never contacted her first for more than 20 years, but now asked for help. She felt curious more than anything.

“What’s the request?”

— Looking into someone. It sounds simple, but we haven’t been able to crack it.

Yoo Jinhyuk sent a file over the call. It contained the target’s picture and personal information.

[Yi Yeonjun (real name unknown)] [183 cm 77 kg] [Male] [Birthday unknown] [Ability unknown] [Place of birth unknown] [Family relations unknown]

“Yi Yeonjun? Everything’s pretty much unknown?”

— Yep, we don’t even know if that’s his real name. He’s a dangerous one for sure since he’s the Chameleon Troupe’s founder.

Yoo Yeonha flinched. “The Chameleon Troupe?”

“Yeah, I received a request to investigate Yi Yeonjun’s past about a month or two ago. I put it off, but the client kept increasing the price.”

“Hmm...” Yoo Yeonha rubbed her chin and sighed.

“Won’t it be too dangerous?”

— I’m the one in charge of the investigation, so I’ll be the only one in danger. You just have to look into his past whereabouts.

“Past whereabouts?”

— Yep.

Yoo Jinhyuk nodded with a smile.

— Find out where he was a few years ago. I want you to narrow down the range of his past that I need to experience.

“Hmm... Your gift seems lively as ever.”

— I’ve saved it for times like this. The payment is the highest I’ve seen in the past 20 years.

Yoo Yeonha glanced at what the client offered and almost choked. A cool 7.7 billion upfront and 22.3 billion after completion. Just the grand total of 30 billion won would’ve made it hard to refuse, but the client even offered two pinnacle grade artifacts. Which maniac would pay so much?

— So? Want to help? I’ll give you 20%.

“Hmm.”

Yoo Yeonha fell in thought, but quickly concluded. Investigating the Chameleon Troupe felt like a duty she had to fulfill. Yoo Jinwoong and Chae Joochul. Chae Joochul and the Chameleon Troupe. The Chameleon Troupe and Kim Hajin. Kim Hajin and me. She knew the Chameleon Troupe held the key to unraveling these complicated relationships.

“Okay, I’ll help.”

A bell rang in her head when she replied. It came from her unique sixth sense skill. She didn’t know whether it signaled danger or an opportunity because of its low level, but it always turned out to be important.

— Perfect. Do you know what to do?

“Of course. I can track him down if he used the internet even once.”

In the Falling Blossom guild, a man named Kim Hosup had risen to number 1 in tracking. No one in the digital age lived without using the internet. Kim Hosup could find anyone born after the 1980s when he linked to a supercomputer worth billions of won.

— Great, then I'll wait for the good news. Be careful.

“Okay, talk to you later. I have a meeting now.”

— Ah, wait. How's the guild business doing?

“Guild business? Pft.”

Yoo Yeonha laughed. Essence of the Strait had become the undisputed number 1 in the world after the recent Orden incident. Creator's Sacred Grace skyrocketed to rank 2 because of Kim Suho and Yun Seung-Ah, but the gap between them remained huge. Essence of the Strait also made great achievements thanks to guild leader Yoo Jinwoong, vice leader Yi Jin-Ah, and the rising star Chae Nayun.

The guild aside, Essence of the Strait's subsidiary businesses simply couldn't be surpassed. Essential Pharmacy, Essential Dynamics, and other conglomerate-scale businesses achieved record high revenues in their respective fields.

“It's going great. At this rate, people might start calling me the queen of Korea instead of the queen of Seoul.”

— Ooh... Well, that's great to hear. Looks like I can live off my niece when I grow old.

Yoo Jinhyuk playfully laughed.

— Then see you later.

“Yes, see you uncle.”

Tkk—

“Let's see... Falling Blossom team, answer.”

Yoo Yeonha relayed the mission to Falling Blossom after she hung up.

[You have completed the third phase with high contributions.] [A streak of stigma has been added.] [Master Sharpshooter's proficiency has increased.] [You have gained a significant amount of SP.] [Young Dwarf's Dexterity...]

Several sentences entered my faint consciousness. I also heard Chae Nayun's voice.

[Kim Hajin, are you awake?] [You didn't run away again, did you?] [I heard from old man Heynckes that you'll get stabbed by his knife if you don't reply to me.] [Message me when you wake up.]

Humanity seemed to have won. I tried messaging Chae Nayun.

[I'm up.]

The constraints on me began to loosen. I couldn't move yet, but I could reply to her [Infinite Communication].

[...]

Chae Nayun didn't reply no matter how long I waited. She must be busy with something.

“...”

I tried to focus on my eyes and needed to see before anything else.

“Huu!”

Thankfully, it didn't take long to open them. A white ceiling filled my vision.

Ssk— Ssk—

Next, I focused on my fingers and toes. It took a bit longer, but I eventually regained control of my body after 10 minutes of struggling.

“Sigh...”

I turned towards the ruffling sound of papers.

“Huh?”

An unexpected scene greeted me. Jin Sahyuk lay on a couch while reading a comic book.

“Hm? Oh, you’re awake.”

She spoke with her eyes still fixed on the comic and I blankly stared at her.

“Why are you here?”

“What do you mean?”

Tak— She closed the book and stared at me. Then she muttered something I couldn’t comprehend.

“I’m protecting you.”

Chapter 302

After the War (2)

I couldn't understand Jin Sahyuk, but she didn't seem to be joking. Honestly, we weren't close enough to exchange jokes, so I simply asked.

"You're protecting me?"

"Yep, you heard it right."

She even placed down the comic book and seriously looked at me.

"I'm going to need more details."

"I don't know much either. Bell just told me to." Jin Sahyuk shrugged.

"Bell?"

"Yeah, he said Yi Yeonjun planned on killing you. I know you're not the type to go down easily, but the people Bell warns me about are usually strong."

"...?"

Is it because I'm still drowsy? I feel like I just heard something crazy.

I frowned and she shook her head.

"I already told you. I don't know much. I just took you out of the bunker because Bell said it would be dangerous for you to be around the Chameleon Troupe. I saved you in a sense."

"Wait, did you just say Yi Yeonjun?"

Yi Yeonjun used to be the Chameleon Troupe's former boss who died because of Bell. At least that's what Boss told me.

"Yeah."

"Isn't he dead?"

"Hmm..." Jin Sahyuk stroked her chin while sorting out her thoughts.

"I don't know the details, but I heard he came back to life."

"How's that possible?"

"How would I know? More importantly..." Jin Sahyuk placed her index finger on my chest.

"It's your turn to speak."

"About what?"

"You said Bell confessed to you."

"Confessed? What the hell are you..."

Then I recalled what Bell told me about being Baal's incarnation and that I'd have to kill him to reach a happy ending. Jin Sahyuk brushed her hair and looked at me.

"Bell said he told you all his secrets."

"Ah, so that's what you meant. Well..."

I shrugged and told Jin Sahyuk everything I heard from Bell. Her expression grew more intense as I continued. She even started biting her fingernails when I told her Bell might become Baal.

"That's all he told me."

I finished and turned on my smartwatch. Lots of messages arrived from various people, including Kim Suho and Evandel. Boss' message caught my attention first.

[Hajin where are you?] [Where are you?] [I have someone I'd like you to meet. Where did you go?]

[Don't worry. I'm on the Genkelope Vessel.]

I replied and got out of bed. Then I took a quick tour around the place. The kitchen and bathroom looked clean. I could see the East Sea beyond the windows and the ocean waves danced in the dark. It felt as if the final arc I didn't know about also lurked in that darkness.

"What are you looking at?"

Jin Sahyuk came up to me. She gazed outside at the sea as I asked.

"Do you still think I'm Kindspring?"

I smiled wryly at her misunderstanding. Sorting it out with Jin Sahyuk would cost me a lot. Bringing up Kindspring just now raised my synchronization by 0.3%.

[Current Synchronization — 13%]

Jin Sahyuk didn't look too upset. Perhaps Kim Chundong's emotions also affected her. She looked me in the eyes and slightly chuckled.

"Not anymore, but I'm sure you have something to do with Kindspring."

I smiled in silent affirmation.

"I'll be by your side until I figure out your relationship with Kindspring."

"Is that also an order from Bell?"

“Yeah, so just tell me one thing every month.”

We turned back to the sea. The unknown still danced in the shadows, but something suddenly crossed my mind.

“Do you still plan on returning to your homeland?” I carefully asked.

“Of course.” Jin Sahyuk nodded without hesitation.

“Why?”

“Because people are waiting for me there.”

“Akatrina has already fallen.”

“No, you never know. Akatrina is stronger than you think.”

“...”

I knew Akatrina had fallen for good as the original author. Not to mention, 30 years had passed since Jin Sahyuk’s death. Akatrina wouldn’t have survived for that long.

“What if Akatrina doesn’t exist? Are you still going back?”

I coldly asked. I felt somewhat sympathetic towards the king who hoped for something impossible.

“It doesn’t matter.”

I thought Jin Sahyuk might get mad, but she calmly shook her head.

“I have no reason to live without Akatrina.”

“...”

She carried the most resolute determination in the world. Jin Sahyuk lost many things, but still held on to this hope.

“I’ll gladly meet my death in my homeland.”

Akatrina meant everything to her.

[Someone inside you has responded to the king’s conviction.]
[Synchronization has increased by 2%.] [Current Synchronization — 15%] [Warning! Be careful not to lose yourself.]

It seemed Kim Chundong also held genuine loyalty towards Jin Sahyuk.

“...”

I turned away and distracted myself by calling Spartan. He appeared out of the void and landed on my shoulder.

“What’s that?”

I ignored Jin Sahyuk’s question and looked at my smartwatch.

[Hajin, I miss you. π-π] [I’m bored.] [This is the spirit beast I made today. Cute kitty, do you like it?] [π π Why won’t you reply?] [I miss you.] [π π]

All these messages came from Evandel. I couldn’t answer because I’d been unconscious. They made me forget all about synchronization.

“Spartan?”

— Piek?

“Let’s go see Evandel.”

— Prrr.

“What? Where do you think you’re going—”

With a nod, Spartan immediately teleported.

We arrived in a dense forest filled with spirit beasts. This forest belonged to Evandel and most humans could never enter because of the magic power inside their bodies. I could thanks to my [Magic Dysfunction Physique] and the [Black Lotus Uniform].

I walked towards Evandel's cabin with Spartan on my shoulder. My gift, [Master Sharpshooter], had increased to grade 1 and I knew where to find her the moment I arrived. I completely understood the forest's structure at a glance.

[♥ Evandel's Cabin ^-^ ★]

Soon, I arrived at a cabin with a cute door plate. I smiled and knocked. Then I heard a noise inside and couldn't wait any longer, so I peeked through the door. Evandel rubbed her eyes in bed and just woke up.

"Evandel, it's me."

I whispered and her eyes immediately widened. She sprung out of bed and bolted to the door.

"...!"

Her eyes became even bigger when she saw me.

"How have you been?"

"Aaaang!"

The tearful Evandel jumped into my arms after being alone for months. She repeatedly called my name and made me tear up as well. Hajin! Hajiiin! I hugged her and patted her head.

Our reunion felt quite touching. We toured around the cabin and went outside to play with the spirit beasts. Evandel introduced me to all of them one by one and we went back inside after 4 hours.

“Do you want to meet Rachel now?”

“Rachel?” Evandel squealed with joy.

“Yes, but we can’t meet her in person. We’ll just call her.”

“Ah...”

She seemed a bit disappointed, but soon smiled. I opened the hologram app for a more vivid experience. Then I sent Rachel a text asking her to video call me.

Tirring—

My smartwatch rang and I picked up Rachel’s call.

[Entering Hologram Chatroom]

A hologram of Rachel appeared in front of us. It looked so realistic as if Rachel arrived in person.

“Hi.”

— What’s going on? How did you get in there, Hajin?

“I have my ways.”

“Rachel.”

Evandel spread out her arms and went to Rachel. She wanted a hug, but passed right through the hologram.

“Ah.”

— Hold on a little longer, Evandel. We’ll see each other soon.

Rachel gently smiled and Evandel nodded. The heartwarming atmosphere didn’t last for long. Beep— Beep— Several messages popped up accompanied by alarms.

[Administrator will now enter the chatroom through admin permission.]
[Code:1231]

An administrator's interference? A different hologram appeared in the cabin.

— Hmm. So it was you two after all.

“What the...”

My heart skipped a beat from the surprise. Yoo Yeonha had hijacked our chatroom as the administrator. She looked at Evandel, Rachel, and me before smiling.

— She's that child?

Yoo Yeonha pointed at Evandel.

“H-Huh? What do you mean?”

I quickly hid Evandel behind me, but Yoo Yeonha frowned like a demon.

— I already heard everything from Rachel.

“What?”

I turned to Rachel and she nodded with a bitter smile.

— She's right, though we more or less got caught. However, she promised to become Evandel's patron. I left you a text because you didn't answer. I guess you didn't see it.

Yoo Yeonha grinned and held out her hand towards Evandel.

— Hi, it's nice to meet you.

“Ah, yes. Hello...”

Evandel seemed a bit shy, but courteously responded.

— Hmm... What a cute girl.

“How did you even manage to enter this room?”

Yoo Yeonha proudly folded her arms.

— My company made this app. More importantly...

Tadadak— Yoo Yeonha began typing on a keyboard and sent a private message to me.

[You're the one who asked Yoo Jinhyuk to investigate Yi Yeonjun, right?]

“...!”

I flinched and quickly glanced at her. She seemed convinced that I made the request. I really couldn't get anything past her. At this point, she wouldn't believe me even if I denied it.

“Cough.”

I cleared my throat and slightly nodded.

[I knew it. We're currently putting our all into the Yi Yeonjun investigation. The whole thing seems a bit shady. Why are you looking for a dead man?]

So she already figured out Yi Yeonjun had already died. I felt impressed and sent her a private message.

[Rumor has it he's alive.]

— Pardon?

Yoo Yeonha frowned even deeper.

[Oh, then maybe...]

She didn't finish, but I knew she wanted to ask about the Kwang-Oh Incident.

[Yeah, Yi Yeonjun led the Chameleon Troupe during the Kwang-Oh Incident. Back then, the Chameleon Troupe acted even crueler than now.]

[I see.]

Her expression looked somewhat sad.

[I get why you want to catch him.]

Tadadak— She continued typing.

[I get it, but don't do it alone. I know how much you resent the Chameleon Troupe. Just promise me you'll work with me this time.]

Regret, sadness, determination, and resolve... All those emotions could be seen in Yoo Yeonha's expression.

[Okay, I'm counting on you then.]

I replied with a faint smile. However, Rachel had been left out and suddenly narrowed her eyes.

— What are you two doing?

— It doesn't concern you. It's something important.

Yoo Yeonha waved her off as if shooing a fly. Rachel shut her mouth in embarrassment and tweaked a few settings to take revenge. She shrank the size of Yoo Yeonha's hologram.

— What the... What are you doing? Can't you tell I'm in the middle of a conversation?

— No, I'm the one on a call with Hajin. You're the intruder, Yeonha.

— What? Are you kidding me? Wha—

Yoo Yeonha's voice suddenly became high-pitched. Rachel not only altered her size, but also her voice.

— What do you think you're doing? Change me back! We didn't make this feature so you could do something like this!

— Hahaha. You're quite cute when you're small, Yeonha. Would you like bunny ears as well?

Rachel tapped on the screen a few times and Yoo Yeonha's nose turned red. A pair of bunny ears also popped up on her head.

— Hey! Are you crazy?

Yoo Yeonha couldn't let such things slide. She used her administrator privileges to make Rachel even smaller than Evandel.

— Ah, what is this? Change me back!

— You started it.

— Stop being childish.

— You're one to talk.

Yoo Yeonha and Rachel became 130 cm tall and glared at each other. Evandel watched them like a play as I called Spartan.

“Spartan?”

— Prrr.

Spartan and I didn't require any words. He could read my mind and always did what I wanted.

“Nothing's wrong with the invisibility cloak, right?”

— Prrr.

“Good. Be careful. Return immediately if you get caught.”

I asked Spartan to monitor Yi Yeonjun and Boss. I wanted to see what Yi Yeonjun might be planning and also protect Boss.

— Kiaaaa!

Spartan flapped his wings and disappeared into the sky.

— You’re holding your head too high just because the media is calling you the Elemental Swordsman.

— Don’t you know it’s a crime to use company admin rights to spy on a private chatroom?

Meanwhile, Rachel and Yoo Yeonha continued arguing. They kept shouting and pointing at each other, but I couldn’t understand half of it because of their voice alterations. It didn’t look like they would settle down anytime soon.

“Evandel, do you want to go play outside?”

“Yeah!” Evandel grinned.

“Okay, let’s go.”

The two holograms continued quarreling as we left the cabin.

The view outside came straight out of a fairy tale. Evandel’s spirit beasts filled the forest. A unicorn flew in the sky, a cat and squirrel raced each other, and a hare and tortoise scratched each other’s backs. Everything felt peaceful and heartwarming.

* * *

[Pandemonium, Chameleon Troupe’s Hideout]

Yi Yeonjun looked down from the rooftop at Pandemonium. This city once belonged to the Chameleon Troupe. The greed in his dark eyes could completely devour Pandemonium.

“You did well, Byul. I’m proud of you.”

Yi Yeonjun patted her on the shoulder. She looked at him in confusion because she always believed he had died. Yi Yeonjun had become her father after she killed her own parents. She couldn’t accept the fact that he returned alive so easily.

“Um... Boss.”

“No. You’re the boss, Byul. Don’t call me that.”

His voice, scent, the way he talked, and even his magic power felt the same.

“I’m no longer a Chameleon Troupe member. The Chameleon Troupe belongs to you and I don’t plan to take it away.”

Yi Yeonjun replied as they stared at each other.

“However, the seat of black you took in... Was it Kim Hajin?”

Yi Yeonjun suddenly said something unexpected.

“He’s dangerous.”

“Pardon?”

“It’s not a surprise you don’t know, Byul. He teamed up with Bell. The same Bell who killed me.”

A voice flowed into Yi Yeonjun’s ears as he spoke.

— You’re selling my name already?

This mental transmission came from Bell. Yi Yeonjun replied with a straight face.

— Byul thinks you're the enemy. If I can use you to turn her against him, then I will. You need to understand.

— Hmm. I'm not sure that'll work.

As Bell expected, Yi Byul quickly shook her head.

“No, you're wrong. Hajin would never do that.”

Yi Yeonjun stared at her and faintly smiled.

“Really? I hope so. Mmm, I should go back now.”

“Pardon? To where?”

“My body isn't completely recovered yet. Don't worry. I'm not mad at you.”

“Boss, I mean... Wait.”

Yi Yeonjun tried to leave and cited health reasons, but Boss worriedly chased after him.

— See? I told you. Kim Hajin ruined Byul. She's completely different now. You'll have to get rid of him yourself.

Bell sounded cheerful as he made fun of his friend's failure. Yi Yeonjun remained silent with a nonchalant expression.

Meanwhile, a bird watched them from the dark.

“Prrr—”

Spartan delivered not only the conversation between Boss and Yi Yeonjun, but also the mental transmission between Yi Yeonjun and Bell.

‘Yeah, I’m listening. Go after them, but come back if it looks like you’ll get caught.’

Kim Hajin ordered Spartan as the bird chased after Yi Yeonjun in the night.

Chapter 303

After the War (3)

I woke up on a small bed in Evandel's cabin. The temperature inside felt quite pleasant as Evandel slept on my arm. I could hear her calm breathing and felt all sorts of emotions as I looked at her: pride, gratitude, sadness... She wasn't my real daughter, but I treated her as such.

"Sigh..."

I felt sorry and ashamed. This feeling would only grow stronger in the future. A long time had passed since I came to this world. The farewell that seemed so far away steadily approached. I would most likely return to Earth after the final arc and this world would continue without me.

"..."

I looked at Evandel sound asleep. The morning light shone and gently caressed her face. An unknown feeling rose in my heart.

I don't want to leave.

That thought surfaced in my head for the first time. Just like that song I once heard in my original world... I feared not being by their side.

"Sigh..."

I couldn't sleep anymore. I picked up my smartwatch from the drawer next to the bed. Then I searched through the social media accounts of those who participated in the Orden mission.

[Yi Jiyeon] Jiyeon2Nayun, Suho, and team leader Yeonha came to visit me at the hospital. #ImFineNow #OneStepStronger [♡ 9,154,352]

Yi Jiyeon, the social media addict, just recently posted last night. Tigris had torn off one of her arms, but she managed to avoid being permanently disabled thanks to quick treatment.

*[Chae Nayun] IM_Chae_Na_Yun To protect. My final sword.
#EssenceOfTheStrait #ChaeNayun [♡ 6,104,952]*

Chae Nayun posted a picture of two greatswords she recently bought.

“Huh?”

My eyes widened when I saw them and my gift, [Observation and Reading], activated.

[Unknown Greatsword] [???] [???] [Crusader's Zweihander]

I didn't know which one Chae Nayun used as her main weapon, but even [Observation and Reading] couldn't see through that [Unknown Greatsword]. It must be a high rank artifact at the very least. She got quite lucky if she bought it or Essence of the Strait didn't know its true value if they lent it to her.

[Kim Suho] Saver_KIMI Love you all. Thank you and sorry. I will continue living my life to the fullest. [♡ 53,953,112]

Kim Suho only had a post comforting the Orden incident's victims. As expected of the Swordsman of Wish, he received more than 50 million likes.

[Temple of Justice] Justice_Temple Spirit Speech Master Aileen has been appointed as the Temple of Justice's 5th chairman. "I will do my best to atone for my predecessor's sins and proudly march forward." [♡ 14,003,112]

Temple of Justice, Essence of the Strait, Yun Seung-Ah, Creator's Sacred Grace, Shin Jonghak... I looked through social media posts for about 20 minutes before carefully getting out of bed. Then I walked to the window and looked through Spartan's memories. The conversation between Boss and Yi Yeonjun and the secret message between Yi Yeonjun and Bell played again in my mind.

“Yi Yeonjun...”

I calmly muttered the most mysterious character’s name. I didn’t know his motives, but I knew he wanted to kill me.

“Bell, you bastard...”

I understood why Jin Sahyuk cursed at Bell 24/7. He knew about Yi Yeonjun, but purposefully kept it a secret.

“Hmm...”

A bitter aftertaste lingered in my mouth. Killing Yi Yeonjun before he killed me seemed to be my best option, but that would make Boss sad. She might even hate me. I knew how much she longed for Yi Yeonjun from the rare instances she talked about him. I didn’t want to kill him since being hated had tired me out.

“...?”

Several messages popped up as I stood in thought. They looked like the previous ones I received from the co-author.

[★ Announcement ★ The final phase will begin soon.] [The demon realm transformation will resume.] [As the original author, you may view a map of the regions undergoing the demon realm transformation.] [It is recommended that you visit these sites.] [Don’t forget. You still have the right to ask me one question.]

“Yeah, thanks.”

The co-author didn’t even make me mad anymore. His messages simply passed by like water. After all, getting mad wouldn’t change anything.

I felt slightly sad the final phase had arrived.

“Mmm...”

Evandel tossed and turned in bed. She pulled on the blanket as if searching for me. I grinned and turned on the smartwatch to message Yoo Yeonha.

[Hey, let's meet in two days.]

[In two days?]

She replied quite fast.

[Yeah, I need to tell you something about the demon realm transformation.]

Yoo Yeonha's guild and businesses stood at the forefront of humanity's battle against the demon realm transformation. I suddenly grew curious about something else.

[By the way, did your guild give Chae Nayun those two swords she uploaded on social media?]

[Yeah, we bought them and permanently lent them to her. They were the only greatswords on the market.]

"Mmm."

I nodded and typed back.

[She's using both?]

[No, Nayun said she'd only use the Crusader's Zweihander. We lent both of them so she could decide which one she liked best. We'll lend the other one to another hero once she returns it. For some reason, we couldn't appraise that one. It's probably damaged.]

Damaged? Yoo Yeonha surprisingly misjudged the weapon. To be fair, 95% of artifacts that couldn't be appraised usually turned out to be trash.

[Don't give it to anyone else. Bring it with you when we meet. I'll see you in North Hamgyeong Province...]

* * *

I spent two days with Evandel, made her pretty clothes, crafted comfortable furniture, and installed various equipment so she could talk to her friends.

“I’ll drop by once a week.” I knelt in front of Evandel and smiled.

“Okay!”

She teared up, but didn’t cry. Instead, she cheerfully replied and I realized how much she had grown over the past 8-9 years. I warmly hugged her one last time before calling Spartan.

“I’m leaving.”

“Ah, so are you coming next Tuesday or Wednesday?”

“Mmm, Tuesday.”

“Yay!” Evandel smiled and nodded.

“Then I’ll see you Tuesday.”

“Okay! I’ll be waiting.”

I waved goodbye and gave Spartan a location. He nodded from my shoulder and we teleported away.

— Prrrr!

Like that, I arrived in North Hamgyeong Province. A high rank monster danger zone existed nearby and Evil Society also resided not too far away in Russia’s Vostok region. However, this area had undergone great development through national defense weaponry and magic engineering.

“Keep your eyes out for any strange occurrences! Private citizens will be in danger if anything gets through!”

The demon realm transformation had already begun at the northernmost border of North Hamgyeong Province. The Korean military, along with heroes from the association, currently monitored the situation beyond the [Essence Barrier].

“When are the hero reinforcements coming? There’s a battle every hour. Shouldn’t they send at least 4 more heroes?”

I glanced at the grumbling soldier. He seemed to be the captain in charge from the symbol on his chest.

“My apologies. We’ve notified the association, but they seem to be busy taking care of the recent incident’s aftermath.”

“Who cares about the aftermath? We need to find out what that thing is and do something about it! Those damned association bastards.”

The captain shouted and pointed at the field burning black. About 200 meters of land had already transformed into the demon realm.

— Kuek, kuek.

Four giant boars stepped onto the contaminated land.

“Ah, damn it! I told you to kill them before they touch that land!”

Immediately after the captain shouted...

— Kueeeeeeeek!

The boars’ flesh melted and they became undead monsters that charged at the soldiers.

[Undead Wild Boar] [Intermediate Rank, Grade 2]

The wild boars turned into intermediate rank monsters just by touching the land. The captain took out a sword and I also walked towards them with my Desert Eagle.

“Get ready!”

The army prepared for battle.

“Fire on command!”

Each of their magic bullets cost a million won, but bullets without attributes couldn’t kill undead monsters. They only planned to weaken the boars for the captain who could use magic power. I decided to help them out.

Click—

I fired my Desert Eagle. My magic bullet flew along with their bullets, but it displayed a beautiful white color instead.

— Kuek!

My magic bullet pierced each boar one by one.

“...?”

To the human eye, it looked as if all the boars just suddenly fell. The soldiers expressed their shock when a golden snowmobile appeared in the air. Yoo Yeonha arrived in the dwarven supercar I gifted her.

“You’re already here?” She descended with a smile.

“I just arrived.”

We shook hands while countless soldiers looked at us. Soon, the captain recognized her and rushed over.

“This is Captain Yi Joonkyung. I heard you were coming, but never expected you to appear from the sky!”

“Keep standing on the lookout. Don’t mind us.”

“Yes! Understood!”

The captain took the hint and quickly left. Yoo Yeonha and I observed the contamination spreading across the land. The ground had turned reddish-black and ominous flames flickered above it. It looked like a powerful enemy would rise from the ground.

“Why did you want to meet here?”

“I think something will happen here today. I just wanted to see and plan accordingly.”

Once again, I read the system message in front of me.

[North Hamgyeong Province’s demon realm transformation is currently underway. A special change will occur in 20 minutes.]

I figured I should witness the first special change on Earth.

“Really? I don’t have much time. Oh right, here.”

Yoo Yeonha handed me a long piece of metal.

“What’s... Oh, that’s the greatsword.”

“Yep.”

“It didn’t look like this in the picture Chae Nayun posted.”

“I infused magic power into it to see if anything would happen and it changed into trash. We really shouldn’t have paid 3 billion for it.”

Yoo Yeonha shrugged.

“Hmm...”

I infused stigma's magic power into my eyes and appraised it again with [Observation and Reading]. Seeing it in real life should make a big difference. I blankly stared at the window that popped up.

"You can have it if you're interested." Yoo Yeonha offered.

I flinched. This had to be the work of my luck.

"Really? You're giving this to me?"

"Yeah, I don't see why not."

"If you say so. I'll gladly take it." I placed the sword on my back without hesitation.

"Do you know what this is?"

"I told you, we couldn't appraise it. Why? Do you know what it is?"

I pitied Yoo Yeonha for the first time in a while.

"Yeah, I do."

"You do? Well, I don't really mind."

Yoo Yeonha didn't pay much attention and handed me an envelope full of documents.

"This is what we found on Yi Yeonjun."

"Ah, thanks." I stored the envelope away.

"Also, have you heard?" Yoo Yeonha continued.

"A riot broke out in Pandemonium."

"A riot? What happened?"

“It’s because of the demon town that appeared there. Something seemed to have happened between the djinns and demons. It’s still a big secret for now. Here.”

She took out another envelope and I received it while furrowing my brows.

“You sure have a lot.”

“It’s a request for a mission.”

“Mission?”

I took out the documents inside. The first few words read, [Escort Mission Contract].

“I’m going to Pandemonium too, so could you be my escort?”

Yoo Yeonha brightly smiled at me.

“...”

I glanced at her before placing the documents away. I should probably participate in the major plot points since I didn’t know the future anymore.

“I’ll think about it.”

“Think about it positively. It’ll help us with future disasters if we can excavate the mineral there.”

“Mineral?”

“Yes, but... Ssh—” She suddenly placed a finger on her lips.

“Looks like you haven’t heard, but I can’t tell you anything until you accept.”

“What?”

“You have until next week.”

“Hmm... Okay.” I nodded.

“Good.”

She smiled leisurely and glanced at the sword hanging on my back.

“So, going back to that. You know what it is?”

“Oh, yeah. I do.”

“I didn’t know you had a hobby for appraisal.”

“It’s more like my eyes are that good rather than a hobby.”

“Ah, you’re right. So, what is it?”

Yoo Yeonha playfully asked and I seriously replied.

“It’s Balmung.”

“Ah, Balmung...?” Yoo Yeonha answered with a smile that soon faded and her expression stiffened.

“C-Come again?”

“Balmung. You’ve heard of it, right?”

“Pardon?”

Yoo Yeonha tilted her head. For the record, I told her exactly what I saw with [Observation and Reading].

[Unknown Greatsword] [???] [???] — A greatsword of unknown origin.

[Observation and Reading] along with stigma’s magic power has unlocked a portion of this item’s description.

— Balmung. — The treasure of the Nibelungs acquired by Siegfried. Golden mithril envelops the huge blade like silk. — It can reflect magic power and its strength will be amplified when used. — One must infuse 500 ml of blood and receive the sword's qualification to become its master.

— More details will be unlocked once the item awakens.

“Haha, you’re funny. Balmung, haha.”

“I’m not kidding.”

Yoo Yeonha tried to escape reality, but I didn’t let her.

“If you’re not kidding then that sword... It’s really the Balmung that I know?”

She asked with a stiff face and stared at the sword on my back with a strange gaze.

“Yeah, it’s the one written about in the song of the Nibelungs.”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha swallowed hard. I grew curious about her thoughts, but didn’t have the time to find out.

[The contaminated land will undergo a major change.]

The moment the system message popped up...

“U-Um, c-can you return that to m-me...” Yoo Yeonha asked while stuttering.

KOONG!

The contaminated land in front of us erupted.

“Hmm.”

Jin Sahyuk looked over the items Kim Hajin left behind. A magnifying glass, a robe, the basilisk’s leather, colorful crystals, etc. They all seemed inadequate for the time and effort she spent protecting him.

“What’s this?”

She tilted her head and picked up the magnifying glass. Prihi, the little king, had gifted this to Kim Hajin in Akatrina’s recorded past.

“Since it originally belonged to me...”

Jin Sahyuk placed it in her pocket without any guilt. She also took a few pieces of the basilisk’s leather and tried on the robe Kim Hajin left behind. It felt excellent.

Then...

Koong! A strange vibration rumbled through the East Sea.

“...?”

Jin Sahyuk felt quite comfortable in Kim Hajin’s robe, but stopped and raised her head. Soon, more vibrations occurred.

“What now?”

She snickered and longed for such excitement. Finally, she might be able to relieve her boredom.

“Yaawn...”

Jin Sahyuk stretched and activated her Reality Manipulation. A portal appeared in front of her with another space inside it.

“Let’s go.”

She stepped into the portal without hesitation.

Chapter 304

Lawless Zone (1)

The explosion turned over the land and crimson pillars of flame shot into the air. The flames penetrated the protective walls and stretched in every direction.

Aether moved before I could think. It stretched towards the flames and transformed into a thick barricade that stopped the fire from spreading. The explosion ended, but the chaos continued.

Koong!

The earth violently shook and shifted beneath us. Everywhere I looked, the ground slithered like a snake. Suddenly, a giant door appeared at the center of the contaminated land. It looked like a rectangular, metallic door.

“Uaah, uuk!”

Yoo Yeonha leaned against me as we swayed back and forth from the earthquake. I created a foothold with aether to stand on. She coughed in embarrassment and turned around as we regained our balance.

“What is that?”

“I have no idea.”

Runic language that I couldn’t understand floated around the mysterious door. They looked rather strange as I carefully studied them.

[Interpreting the runes with your gift, Observation and Reading.] [This is the first step in the demon realm transformation — Erosion.] [30 days until the door to the demon realm opens.]

“Looks like bad things will happen when that door opens.”

Yoo Yeonha spoke with a frown, “Although I’m not exactly sure what that is—”

“Be quiet while I interpret these runes.”

“What?”

Her face distorted into a scowl. I ignored her and continued working.

[This demon realm gate will increase the surrounding land’s rate of transformation.]

“This demon realm gate will increase the surrounding land’s rate of transformation.”

I spoke out loud so Yoo Yeonha could hear. Her expression returned to normal as she listened.

[The Door of Challenge will open in 30 days. A total of 200 people may rise to the challenge.]

“The Door of Challenge will open in 30 days. A total of 200 people may rise to the challenge.”

[This door will disappear forever if the challengers win.] [However, the door will completely open and a devil shall descend if the challengers lose.] [Entrance is first come first served.]

Demons suddenly rose from the transformed earth as I finished interpreting. They looked similar to humans, except for their horns like the demons in the Tower of Wish.

“The demon realm gate...”

It sounded strangely familiar. The demon realm gate, the demon realm gate... I kept repeating it in my head. Then I suddenly remembered.

“Ah, this is—”

One of the settings I discarded. It differed from the regular erosion and I went on hiatus before using it. A new world with challenges for a memorable ending.

“This is— What?”

“Huh? Oh, it’s nothing.” I shook my head at Yoo Yeonha’s question.

“Be sure to keep all the information I just told you a secret. I don’t want any djinns to enter that gate in 30 days.”

“Of course, you didn’t think I’d know that?” Yoo Yeonha shrugged, slightly offended.

“I already heard everything.”

Jin Sahyuk suddenly spoke up. Startled, I turned to the side and spotted her smirking at us.

“I’ll definitely be one of the 200 challengers.”

“...”

I felt self-conscious because of Yoo Yeonha. I had to pretend not to know Jin Sahyuk at all.

“I’ve seen her before. She’s Crevon’s former knight commander,” Yoo Yeonha remarked.

“Ah, you’re right.” I nodded at her words.

“This is ridiculous.”

Jin Sahyuk dug into her pockets as loud footsteps approached from a distance. Heroes finally made their way to the disastrous scene.

“What is she doing?” Yoo Yeonha stared at Jin Sahyuk with slight suspicion. Jin Sahyuk pulled out a magnifying glass and peered through it at me.

Wait... a magnifying glass?

“Hey, hey! Stop!”

I stretched aether towards the magnifying glass, but... Boom! It shattered before I could reach it. Chwaak... The shards of glass fell on the ground.

“Damn it.”

I had no idea why it suddenly shattered. Maybe Jin Sahyuk caused it or it naturally broke.

I knew one thing.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk definitely saw something. Her eyes widened and she wore a dazed expression.

I didn’t have time to react.

“Hey! What happened here? I’m high-intermediate rank hero, Kim Wajung, from Creator’s Sacred Grace!”

Soon, hundreds of heroes and reporters poured in. I took my eyes off Jin Sahyuk for a split second.

“Damn it.”

She disappeared.

* * *

[Heart of Pandemonium — Chameleon Troupe Building]

“A request, you say?”

Boss received a call from Kim Hajin. He informed her about accepting Yoo Yeonha’s request as Jeronimo’s Fenrir.

— Yes, they want to hire me as a bodyguard.

It made sense considering Pandemonium’s dangers. Ordinary civilians could never imagine this place’s vastness and brutality.

“Are you heading to the west?”

Initially, Pandemonium began in the Mongolian plains. However, the territory stretched beyond Xinjiang into Kazakhstan as djinns gained more power.

— Yes, to Kazakhstan.

Boss nodded with her gaze still fixed on the TV screen.

[The demon realm gate at North Hamgyeong Province’s border has forced the association to call for an emergency meeting...]

Reports of the demon realm transformation in North Hamgyeong Province already spread. Boss focused more on Kim Hajin and Jin Sahyuk than on the news. She briefly saw the two of them together on the screen.

“Are you going alone?”

— Yes, it’s highly confidential.

“...”

She said nothing, but her imagination ran wild as Kim Hajin continued.

— I’m sorry I’ve been so busy lately, but my gift should’ve arrived by now. Boss, did you not get it yet?

“Gift?” Boss raised her eyebrows.

— Yes, some new clothes and a robe.

“I didn’t get any—”

Boss shook her head when she suddenly recalled last night's strange incident. Jain wore a dress and a robe she had never seen before. Then when she asked about them, Jain feigned surprise and dismissed her questions.

Did she really...?

Boss felt anger welling up in her heart.

“It appears Jain stole them.”

— Ah, Jain? Again?

“Again? I can’t believe this.”

So Jain did something like this before. Why didn’t I notice? Soon, Boss realized Jain must’ve disguised as her several times in the past.

“Jain...” Boss muttered.

“How dare you insult me, your boss.”

She clenched her fists.

— Boss?

“I’m hanging up.”

She hung up and immediately called Jain. Her hands shook with rage, but she tried to remain calm. She knew even the slightest hint of anger would drive Jain away.

— Hey Boss. What's up?

Thankfully, Jain picked up right away.

“Jain, where are... Cough.”

Boss nervously cleared her throat and smiled. She feigned kindness to lure in Jain.

“Where are you?”

— Huh?

Jain had never seen Boss smile and speak so warmly. Slightly bewildered, she began to stutter.

— Um... I'm in Paris for a party. Why did you call?

“Ah, nothing. I just wondered when you were coming home?”

—...

Jain felt wary of Boss' overly friendly demeanor. As the old saying goes, Too much water drowned the miller. She carefully asked from the other side of the smartwatch.

— Boss... did you, um... by any chance... find out?

* * *

Yoo Yeonha left her mansion under the full moon and concealed herself with a robe and mask. Only two people accompanied her on this top-secret mission: her secretary Jin Sechan and master rank hero Jin Seyeon. The two already arrived in Pandemonium and just sent her a message that they found a place to stay.

Once again, Yoo Yeonha scrutinized the most crucial piece of information before departing.

《Dimensional Entropy》 — ★★★ x 300,000,000 The most important item right now. — A source of unknown energy buried somewhere in Pandemonium's lawless zone. — Rumor has it the djinns and demons are fighting over it.

She made this her first and foremost goal. They only gave it a temporary name since no one knew whether it was actually an ore or something entirely different. However, she knew with certainty that this new energy would span across the entire globe. Therefore, she couldn't risk it falling into the hands of djinns or other entrepreneurs. Yoo Yeonha believed that only she, the Queen of Seoul, could handle such an item.

"With this, I'll have the entire world in my palm."

She clenched her fist when a man appeared from the garden's shadows. Yoo Yeonha crossed her arms at Kim Hajin.

"You're here."

"Yeah, where's the dwarven supercar?"

"Wait a second."

She approached the pond in the corner. The water looked crystal clear and carp happily swam inside. Yoo Yeonha pushed a button on her smartwatch and... Shooong— A huge platform rose from the bottom of the pond.

"Woah... You did a good job hiding it."

The dwarven supercar, sleek and shiny, sat on the platform.

"It's become a hobby to go out for a ride whenever I'm too stressed. I can't risk having it stolen."

Yoo Yeonha smiled.

"Let's get going then."

“Right.”

Kim Hajin sat in the front with Yoo Yeonha in the back. Immediately, he activated the [Random Consolidation System] and something amazing happened. Not only did the vehicle become sturdier and more efficient, but the seats also became wider and cozier.

“You’re really mysterious,” Yoo Yeonha muttered in awe.

“I’ll drive slowly, so you can take a nap. It’ll take at least an hour.”

“I’m not sleepy. More importantly, did you finish reading the Yi Yeonjun files?”

Kim Hajin nodded.

“I did. He’s more dangerous than I thought.”

Yoo Jinhyuk was still exploring Yi Yeonjun’s past based on Kim Hosup’s reports. However, what he found so far already confirmed Yi Yeonjun’s numerous evil deeds.

“He is.”

Yi Yeonjun always got what he wanted at all costs. Yoo Yeonha acted similarly in a sense, but Yi Yeonjun didn’t care about rationality or practicality. He only relied on violence to meet his needs.

“Ah, right.”

Yoo Yeonha casually brought up the subject that kept her awake these days. She had been wanting to ask for a while now.

“You lied about Balmung, right?”

He must’ve lied. How could he recognize Balmung so quickly when even professional appraisers couldn’t?

“No, I didn’t.”

Kim Hajin sounded unwavering and Yoo Yeonha felt the confidence in his voice. It made her heart heavy.

“Then give it back.” Yoo Yeonha pulled his sleeve.

“Give it back.”

“Give what back?”

“I planned on giving it to Nayun anyways...”

“Pft.”

Yoo Yeonha sounded pitiful, but Kim Hajin only smiled.

“Okay, how about we make it a lease? I want more shares.”

“You have plenty already.”

“No.” Kim Hajin bitterly shook his head.

“I need a lot more to prepare for the future.”

* * *

[Pandemonium — Kazakhstan’s Lawless Zone]

Most Central Asian countries declared a dissolution of state because of the recent monster invasion. Kazakhstan did the same, but its legacy lived on as humanity continued referring to the lawless zone as Kazakhstan.

“We’re here.”

The sky began to fade when we arrived in Kazakhstan’s notorious lawless zone.

“Huh?”

The flight took exactly an hour. I woke up Yoo Yeonha, who had fallen asleep while working in the backseat. Then I placed the dwarven supercar in her vehicular spatial pouch.

“Are you sure we’re in the lawless zone?”

Yoo Yeonha doubtfully muttered. Everything seemed too peaceful for a land infested with over 3 billion monsters.

“Just because this is the lawless zone doesn’t mean everyone is fighting 24/7. It’s because of the circles here.”

“Ah, I get it.”

“The circles—”

“I researched it in advance. I don’t need your explanation.”

“Hmm.”

A circle referred to a group of djinns similar to Satan’s servants. All djinns living in the lawless zone belonged to a circle. It looked peaceful for now because of the power balance between different circles. One hasty move could lead to a full-blown war since insulting a circle member meant insulting the circle itself.

“Huh?”

Yoo Yeonha pointed into the distance. “Look over there. Looks like they even sell food here.”

I turned towards where she pointed.

[Skewered Pork]

The stall featured skewers of meat on display. No ordinary meat could make Yoo Yeonha drool like that. The meat came from an intermediate rank, grade 5 monster called the [Effellie Boar]. Effellie boars only lived in Central Asia and couldn’t be found in Korea.

“Should we get some?”

“Well, if you insist.”

We approached the stall with a grim-looking djinn roasting the meat.

“How much?” I asked.

The djinn glanced at me. “300,000 won or 300 DP.”

It seemed they used both won and DP in Pandemonium. However...

“Fuck that.”

“Eh? W-What?”

Yoo Yeonha seemed surprised at my cursing. Of course, I could easily pay 300,000 won. However, all these djinns belonged to a circle. The other members would undermine me if I let this one off. Djinns considered weakness a sin.

“Fuck that?”

The vendor glared at me. His threatening appearance didn’t scare me.

“Yeah, fuck that.”

“Then get lost.”

“I would, but you haven’t sold me the food yet.”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha seemed confused.

“What’s wrong with you? I told you we have to keep a low profile,” she whispered, but I ignored her.

“Are you gonna pay in DP or won?”

The djinn finally gave up.

“Won.”

“It’ll be 70,000 won each.”

That sounded much more reasonable. I paid 250,000 won for 4 skewers.

5 minutes later...

“It tastes even more amazing because of the discount. Let’s head to the hotel now.”

Nom, nom— We walked to the hotel while eating.

“This place is far more dangerous than you think. Remember to keep your robe on at all times.”

“Yes, I know. Ah, there it is.”

Finally, the hotel came into view. The wooden building looked more like a pub than a hotel and its name also sounded quite cheesy, [Djinn Days].

“Let’s go.”

“Yeah.”

Kiik— We entered the hotel.

“Mmm?”

“Wow, this is surprising.”

Our eyes widened when we opened the door. The hotel appeared shabby on the outside, but the huge lobby even had a bar. Lots of customers walked around as well.

“Let’s get going.”

“Okay. They said room 303.”

Yoo Yeonha quickly passed through the lobby when I spotted a man sitting alone in the corner. He stood out with his disheveled hair and bushy beard.

Then the morning sunlight seeped through the window and shone on his face.

“...!”

Immediately, my hair stood on end.

I couldn’t tell whether he looked drunk or sleepy as he leaned against the window. I had seen him before through Spartan’s eyes and also in the composite sketches. Yi Yeonjun suddenly appeared.

Chapter 305

Lawless Zone (2)

Yi Yeonjun sat at a table in the lobby. I certainly saw the same man through Spartan's eyes.

At first, my thoughts suddenly froze. Spartan would've told me if Yi Yeonjun came close or planned anything suspicious.

I made sure not to stare for more than 3 seconds. Yi Yeonjun should know my face, so it would be bad if he spotted me.

— Spartan, where are you?

I transmitted my thoughts and quickly climbed the stairs.

—...

Soon, my connection with Spartan returned. Of course, he had been sleeping. It slightly dumbfounded me, but I understood. After all, Spartan possessed fairly low stamina.

— Did you sleep well? You know Yi Yeonjun is right there, right?

—...!

Spartan's consciousness spiked and he gave an excuse. I planned to chase him after a quick nap. I only slept 6 hours.

— Don't worry about it. From now on, just tell me if you're going to sleep. Seeing Yi Yeonjun startled me. Anyways, continue following him once you're refreshed.

I ordered Spartan, who began washing his face at a nearby lake. He would probably eat something before heading over.

“What are you doing over there?” Yoo Yeonha asked while leaning against the guardrail.

“Nothing.”

I glanced at Yi Yeonjun one last time. He sipped on alcohol while exchanging mental transmissions with Bell.

“Do you want to grab a drink? We don’t have much time,” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“No, it’s nothing.” I shrugged and continued moving.

We met the two people waiting for us in room 302.

“It’s been a while, Hajin.” Jin Seyeon greeted me with her usual gentle smile.

“Nice to meet you. We’ve met once before. I hope you remember me.”

Jin Sechan respectfully reached out his hand.

“Ah, yes. How can I forget? I’m still using the Desert Eagle you gave me.”

I shook his hand and took off my robe. Jin Seyeon took it from me and smoothly hung it on the hanger. Then Yoo Yeonha sat at the head of the table and began our meeting.

“Cough.” She put on a serious expression.

“I’m sure you all know why we’re gathered here.”

She projected a holographic video from her smartwatch. It took place deep underground. Faint lights hung from the ceiling and lit the dark surroundings.

“One of our agents took this. He infiltrated Pandemonium 5 years ago as a djinn.”

Koong— Koong— Koong—

Something large rumbled and the agent marched towards the source. Yoo Yeonha sped it up until the agent arrived at the end of the mine shaft.

“Here.”

Yoo Yeonha wanted this item.

“I call this transcendental energy, [Dimensional Entropy].”

Dozens of djinns surrounded a spherical ore emitting a dark-green glow.

— What are we going to do with this? The demons in the north are demanding it.

— I’d hand it over to Terror before those bastards.

Yoo Yeonha paused the video.

“As you can see, the djinns and demons aren’t getting along. At least not with the demons in the north. Not only do demons look more grotesque, but they also serve a different devil. Furthermore, these demons don’t have any money. Only demon merchants possess DP.”

Demons and demon merchants appeared throughout the world a few months before we defeated Orden. They both came from the demon realm, but received completely different treatment.

— I don’t know about that either. Who knows what Terror will do with this? Wouldn’t it be better to give it to Wicked?

— No.

The djinn who seemed to be in charge shook his head.

Yoo Yeonha paused again and explained.

“By the way, this djinn is called Vicious. The original Vicious died and a new djinn took his place. He’s currently the lowest ranked member of the Nine Evils, but he holds substantial influence over this lawless zone after uniting several circles. Now, let’s keep watching.”

Vicious spoke as the footage resumed.

— This ore has enough power to destroy the balance of djinn society. We’ll have to submit to the demons if it falls into their hands. However, we also don’t know what will happen if it falls into Terror or Wicked’s hands. Unfortunately, we can’t have it for ourselves since we can’t protect or use it.

Several system windows popped up in front of me.

[Information has been added after witnessing a special settings change.]
[Dimensional Entropy – Clusters of condensed energy created when demons crossed over dimensions.] [Co-author’s opinion – Properly using it will help you.]

The co-author seemed to be more talkative as the ending neared. I sighed and smiled. I wanted anything helpful regardless of the co-author’s intentions. I had to thoroughly prepare for the final arc. That way, everyone could reach the proper ending.

— Instead, we’ll sell it to humans for money and artifacts. Oi, Licros!

The camera moved towards Vicious when he shouted. That seemed to be the name of Yoo Yeonha’s agent.

— Go to Essence of the Strait and tell them I, Vicious, will sell them a life-changing item.

With that, Yoo Yeonha stopped the video.

“That’s how this mission came about. You get the gist, right?”

Jin Seyeon and I both nodded.

Yoo Yeonha continued with her arms crossed. “That ore can’t be transferred through normal means. Its size is too noticeable and magic power will cause it to explode. We need a special case and vehicle to move it.”

Yoo Yeonha paused and Jin Sechan stepped up. He placed a case on the table.

“This is a tilonium case. Lightning magic has already been applied and we built it to withstand the dimensional entropy according to Vicious’ information.”

“Mmm... So we’re going to store the ore in this case and transport it with the dwarven supercar?”

Yoo Yeonha shook her head at my question.

“The dwarven supercar runs on magic power. It still wouldn’t be 100% safe with the case protecting it, so we prepared another vehicle to return to Korea.”

“Is there a reason you personally came? It’s a bit dangerous to return to Korea from here.”

I worried about her safety. Yoo Yeonha had only reached high-intermediate rank, grade 2. Her growth speed could be considered quick for her age, but nowhere near geniuses like Chae Nayun or Kim Suho. Despite that, Yoo Yeonha wore a resolute expression.

“This is my job, so I’ll do it. Plus, only the five of us can know about this.”

Five of us... Ah, including the agent. I thought to myself.

“According to international law, mysterious items transcending common sense must be turned over to the association. We can’t let anyone else find out, knowing how corrupt they are.”

“I agree. Yeonha is far more trustworthy than the association,” Jin Seyeon quickly replied.

“Huh? You really think so?” I asked because the Hero Association loved Jin Seyeon more than any other hero.

She answered with a bitter smile. “I’m quite disappointed in the Hero Association because of recent incidents. Park Hanho, the girl of authority... they all seemed to have lost their founding principles. That’s why I decided to follow Yeonha.”

“Ah...”

The association kept the girl of authority’s kidnapping a secret. Only after Park Hanho’s betrayal did the entire world find out and it caused a huge uproar. It slightly stung my conscience as the person who abducted her.

“Oh right, did Park Hanho’s daughter actually come back to life?”

“Pardon? Ah, I don’t know much about that.”

“No.” Yoo Yeonha answered my question.

“That girl isn’t Park Hanho’s real daughter. It was a chameleon humanoid monster with Park Yeonhee’s transplanted brain. I guess it could be debated since the humanoid monster really believed she was Park Yeonhee.”

“Ah... I see. Yeonha, do you know what the association will do with senior Park Hanho?” Jin Seyeon bitterly asked.

“My guess would be execution.”

The atmosphere turned grim at her words and a cold wind carrying the scent of blood and magic power seeped in from the window.

Chak, chak!

Yoo Yeonha clapped to lighten the mood. Then she spoke with a smile.

“Let’s stop talking and get some rest. We’ll have to wake up early tomorrow.”

* * *

[Vicious’ Mine Shaft]

We went underground early in the morning and quickly moved without any sightseeing. I carried a spatial pouch filled with 50 billion won and Jin Seyeon carried 6 high rank artifacts that would all be traded for the [Dimensional Entropy].

“Hand over the items and money first.”

Vicious and his comrades stood before us in a dark underground space. They showed no signs of compromise.

“Here’s 50 billion won, cash. The artifacts will be given once we retrieve the item and leave.”

Yoo Yeonha took the spatial pouch from me and threw it over to Vicious. One of his comrades checked the contents.

“50,000 won bills and 100,000 of them. It’s 50 billion won, alright.”

“Great, you know us djinns hate checks.”

Yoo Yeonha smirked at Vicious’ words.

“The spatial pouch will be a gift. It’s a pinnacle grade one that’ll easily fetch 3 billion won.”

The djinn holding the spatial pouch flinched and glanced at it in shock. Vicious stared at Yoo Yeonha before taking a deep breath and nodding.

“Good. We’ll open the way. Follow me.”

He turned around and we followed. Tak, tak. The path became narrower as we walked and the soot in the air stuck to our skin. Even qi reinforcement didn't help here.

“Haaa...”

Yoo Yeonha's breathing grew rough and Jin Sechan worriedly looked at her.

After 5 minutes of walking...

“...!”

A fierce gust of magic power suddenly blew and pressured us. I held back from vomiting and walked over.

“It's here.”

Vicious announced as we looked forward in a daze. Chwaaa... A mysterious, spherical ore pulsed with dark green magic power.

[Dimensional Entropy] [Durability 10/10] — A transcendental stone with the condensed power of multiple dimensions. — Will release magic power until its durability runs out.

“Take it. If you can, that is.”

I stepped up and grabbed the dimensional entropy with aether. The ore seemed to be as big as a baseball, but weighed over a ton. Aether burned from the ore's searing magic power.

“Whew.”

I carried it over and placed it in the tilonium case. The case gently hugged the ore and sealed it inside. The dark green light in the mine shaft immediately disappeared along with the queasy feeling in my stomach.

“Oh? As expected of Essence of the Strait, that's an interesting piece of equipment. Is it light?”

“It’s enchanted with weight-reducing magic.”

I picked up the case and Yoo Yeonha turned around without a word. She seemed to be in a hurry to leave. Then again, most girls wouldn’t want to stay in this mine shaft. Jin Sechan quickly followed her while Jin Seyeon handed over the 6 artifacts.

“Here you go.”

“Ohoho. Oi, Lilac! Appraise them.”

“Go ahead, Hajin. I’ll finish the trade.”

I trusted Jin Seyeon and left the mine shaft. Two identical cars waited outside. They seemed to be made from adamantium, the strongest known metal in the modern world. The jet-black windows also couldn’t be seen through. These two sedans could be compared to war tanks.

Tok, tok—

Someone knocked from inside the car parked in front. I opened the passenger seat with the tilonium case in hand.

“Hmm?”

Yoo Yeonha sat in the backseat and a man I didn’t know sat in the driver’s seat. She explained after seeing my dazed expression.

“You saw him in the video, right? This is our agent, Licros. I hired a separate driver, so you could focus on guarding the item.”

Licros nodded at me. “Nice to meet you.”

“Ah, yes. Nice to meet you too.”

I sat next to him after our greeting.

“We’ll leave once Jin Seyeon comes back.” Yoo Yeonha informed us.

Jin Sechan and Jin Seyeon would ride in the other car in case anything happened.

Soon, the Divine Archer came out and got in the other driver's seat. Jin Sechan waited in the back seat, so they immediately took off after Jin Seyeon started the engine.

“Let's go.”

Licros nodded and stepped on the accelerator. Vroooooom— The gas engine sounded rather nostalgic as I often teleported now.

Suddenly, Yoo Yeonha began acting strange in the back seat. She moaned, struck her chest, and bit her nails.

“Are you okay?” I asked as she massaged her temples.

“Yeah... I'm fine. I just hate confined spaces.”

“Oh... you have claustrophobia?”

“It's claustrophobia, not clausticphobia. I'm a bit embarrassed about it, but it's quite severe.”

“I see.”

I obviously knew since I created her background setting. She also had germaphobia, paranoia, coulrophobia... Yoo Yeonha lived with countless mental illnesses that would only worsen as she experienced constant threats due to her position.

“Just sleep. I'll take care of the rest.”

“Heh, okay.” Yoo Yeonha laughed and nodded.

The sedan left the heart of the lawless zone and finally reached the outskirts. I looked outside with my heightened senses and didn't sense any threats.

“We’re about to leave the lawless zone.” I reassured her.

“Got it.” Yoo Yeonha seemed to be feeling better and smiled.

“Oh right, the association finished deciphering the runic language around the demon realm gate. They should begin gathering heroes in a few days.”

“Gathering heroes?”

“They need 200 to enter the demon realm gate. You’ll participate, right?”

“Why would I? I can just sneak in.”

“Pft, I won’t help if you get caught.”

I shrugged and Yoo Yeonha leaned back. She looked comfortable, so I didn’t worry too much.

I faced forward when— Something sharp flew towards us.

“...?”

It broke through the window before I noticed. Bullet time also didn’t activate. Something simply pierced the window and the driver’s head suddenly exploded.

“Eh?”

A dazed voice rang out. I turned to the side and saw the arrow that replaced Licros’s head.

Then I checked on Yoo Yeonha covered in Licros’ blood and brain fluids.

“What...”

She blankly muttered as another arrow flew towards us. I formed a shield with aether and slightly veered the arrow off course. It pierced Yoo Yeonha's shoulder and missed her head.

“Kyaak!”

Yoo Yeonha screamed, but I shouted even louder.

“DUCK!”

She didn't listen and kept panicking. Yoo Yeonha probably never witnessed such a gory death before.

I couldn't reverse time either because of the skill cooldown, so I quickly strengthened the sedan with aether and stigma.

Chwaaak—

Aether enveloped the car. A mere arrow wouldn't be able to break through anymore, but I couldn't do anything about the shattered window.

I shouted again.

“Duck! Duck, Yoo Yeonha!”

“Ah, aah, aah...”

She struggled to breathe and clutched her arms while whimpering.

Another magic arrow flew towards us. As expected, it couldn't break through.

I moved over to the back seat. Yoo Yeonha suffered from a panic attack and violently shook. First, I pushed her head down.

“Calm down. Calm down.”

Then I caressed her head with stigma's magic power.

“It’s me. Look at me!”

Yoo Yeonah slowly raised her head and stared at me with eyes full of fear. Tears flowed down her cheeks.

“Kuhuk!”

She suddenly coughed and a piece of Licros’ shattered skull came out of her mouth. She saw it too and must’ve subconsciously swallowed it. Immediately, her eyes rolled and her body swayed.

“Hey, snap out of it!”

“T-This...”

“Just keep your head down. We just have to keep out of the shooter’s line of sight. The arrow can only come in through the broken window. It can’t do anything about the car.”

“...”

“Got it?”

Yoo Yeonha nodded.

“Geez, talk about a surprise.”

Is this how people feel when they face Black Lotus? I muttered and sent a mental transmission to Jin Seyeon.

“Jin Seyeon, where are you?”

— Hajin! We’re—

She quickly responded, but...

Tzzt— Something cut her off and they seemed to be under attack as well. Without a choice, I called Spartan over and took out the Desert Eagle. I couldn’t do anything inside the car, so I prepared to leave.

“W-Wait!” Yoo Yeonha firmly grabbed my hand.

“A-Are you leaving?”

“You wait here. It’ll be safer.”

“No, no! I don’t want to!”

I shook off her hand and opened the door. She reached out and desperately shouted.

“Don’t go! Don’t go!”

I left and an arrow immediately greeted me. Bullet time didn’t activate this time either. Instead, a system window popped up explaining why.

[Warning! You are facing a sharpshooter with a similar level of gift. Master Sharpshooter’s sub-gift will be temporarily sealed.]

“Similar level my ass...”

I gritted my teeth and took out the Desert Eagle. I just had to strengthen my gift with stigma if we stood on the same level.

“Ah...”

I suddenly realized something important. I needed aether to transform the Desert Eagle into its sniper form, but aether currently fused with the car to protect Yoo Yeonha. As such, I could only use my bow and arrow.

Chapter 306

Lawless Zone (3)

I hid behind the car and commanded Spartan. He quickly appeared in the sky and looked down at us.

Whoosh!

Another arrow flew towards us at the car tire. Aether tried to block it, but the tire couldn't withstand the attack. Kwang! It popped like a balloon as Spartan shared his vision with me. I spotted the enemy about 5 km to the east. The shooter made their location even clearer when they shot at Spartan.

—...!

Spartan flapped his wings and dodged, but the arrow turned and chased after him. Chwaaaaa... The arrow flew quicker than Spartan and he would die at this rate. I ordered him to escape as the arrow grazed his feathers. Spartan teleported away just in time and the arrow shot through the air. An unpleasant system alert popped up.

[Spartan's wing has been injured. He can no longer use his authority.]

I bit my lips as my field of vision returned to normal. I looked around the lawless zone and spotted a few pubs and inns nearby. Fights frequently occurred here, so no one would help even if we asked.

"Tsk..."

Only the sedan enveloped in aether protected me, but it wouldn't be able to withstand more of those terrifying arrows.

Without any other choice, I took out [Temujin's Bow Blessed By Horus] and [Athena's Moonlight Arrow]. I didn't hesitate to save myself and Yoo Yeonha. I needed to do this.

Master Sharpshooter's senses heightened the moment I grabbed an arrow. I looked to the east and my vision quickly stretched until it reached the target 5 km away.

I finally saw a clear view of the sharpshooter attacking us.

The woman held a black bow and her dark eyes seemed to be staring directly at me. No, she most certainly stared at me. We exchanged glances 5 km apart.

Kiik—

She drew her bowstring, but I felt like I knew her. Blue hair flowed down her black leather armor. Slightly tanned skin and fair facial features... This sharpshooter looked exactly like who I imagined while writing.

“Leraje...”

That should be her name. One of the ten devils I thought of using for the story's final arc, Leraje the Green Devil.

The color green represented her, but she hated that color so much she dyed her hair blue. Leraje possessed more moderate views than most devils. She still seemed to be in her incarnation body by the looks of it. Still, I couldn't easily deal with the only archer among the devils.

“Sigh.”

Why did the 14th ranked devil appear here? I felt annoyed by the sudden turn of events, but complaining wouldn't do me any good.

I took a deep breath and nocked [Athena's Moonlight Arrow]. Then I poured everything into it: stigma's magic power, the [Random Consolidation System], and [Constraints and Amplifications]. The moonlight arrow emitted a terrifying magic power with brilliant rays of light. The moon's holy power enveloped the earth and heavens as I aimed at the devil.

However, I didn't fire due to Leraje's strange reaction.

—...

She placed her bow down and stared at me. Her gaze held no hostility or killing intent. Her expressionless face only showed off her cold beauty. Leraje finally muttered something after a long time.

— My name.

A fleeting voice escaped her coy lips as she placed away her bow and arrows. I couldn't understand why, but she no longer intended on attacking. As such, I also placed my weapon down. Then Leraje disappeared like a mirage.

“What?”

I felt quite taken aback.

“Did my arrow scare her away? No, I doubt it.”

Regardless, the current situation benefitted us. Not only did I conserve my strength, but I also didn't have to risk my life fighting her.

[A huge luck has erupted!] [A Single Word Pays Back A Thousand Gold Debt – Your thoughtless mumbling has saved your life!] [The great rank 14 devil Leraje has taken an interest in the human who recognized her.] [Information regarding Leraje has been added to your gift, Observation and Reading.] [You have obtained 333 SP!] [Narrow Escape from Death (7/9) – Special stat, Accumulation of Luck, has partly unlocked!]

[Narrow Escape from Death] popped up again.

“My luck caused that?”

I exclaimed in surprise and suddenly recalled someone.

“Ah!”

I ran to the sedan and opened it. Yoo Yeonha sat in the corner with a pale face while trembling.

The car's interior had been completely cleaned. Licros' corpse had disappeared and a current of electricity crackled inside.

Yoo Yeonha had burned everything away.

* * *

[North Pandemonium – Undeveloped Area]

A temple no human knew about existed in Russian territory north of Pandemonium. Monsters swarmed the area and a coniferous forest shrouded the temple. Countless djinns and demons gathered to worship the rank 14 devil in this dark temple.

"She should be fine on her own, right?"

The djinn assigned to this temple, Destruction, worriedly spoke. Many djinns and a few demons also waited for their lord's return.

"The outside world is dangerous. Remember what happened to Plucas."

Destruction had carefully helped the rank 14 devil descend more than anyone else when the demon realm transformation began. He also made sure no one would ever find out after what happened to Plucas.

"Don't worry. Lord Leraje is a noble among the strongest in the demon realm."

The devil's henchman seemed more carefree. Corte, the most human-looking servant among the demons, spoke with a smile.

"Lord Leraje isn't someone a mere human can injure."

Leraje suddenly returned to the temple. Her ability allowed her to freely change her body's composition. She took the form of wind and quickly arrived at her throne. The servants all respectfully bowed.

“...?”

However, Corte noticed something off. Leraje didn't return with the [Dimensional Entropy] that she personally left to obtain.

Corte made eye contact with Leraje and flinched. The devil gave them a simple command.

— Rise.

She didn't speak, but projected letters using Earth's technology known as a smartwatch. The constraint placed on her caused her to expend life force every time she spoke, so Destruction gave her a smartwatch to express her thoughts.

— I didn't bring the object you mentioned.

Corte and Destruction stared at the words in the air.

— A mysterious human knew my name.

Leraje leaned against her throne. Her youthful look and soft figure shone seductively. Corte felt displeased. They required the [Dimensional Entropy] for devils to descend, but Leraje gave up on it because of a mere human.

“Lord, you are a renowned noble across the demon realm. It wouldn't be strange for tales of your strength to spread on Earth, so—”

Leraje furrowed her brows and cut him off.

— Humans don't know me. This isn't the demon realm.

Tadadak— Leraje typed on the holographic keyboard and looked around.

— He knew my name.

“Is that so?”

— Of course, I never lie.

Leraje yawned and slept often since her descent hadn't been completed.

— I'm sleepy. Wake me if those old devils contact us. Also, look into the human who recognized me. He seemed quite interesting.

Leraje fell asleep after giving them such orders. Corte stared at her sleeping figure and turned towards Destruction.

“Destruction.”

“Yes sir.”

“Look into this human Lord Leraje has taken an interest in. You'll also have to bring back the [Dimensional Entropy].”

“...?”

Destruction widened his eyes before smiling. He had been longing for such a mission.

He recently learned the human who took the [Dimensional Entropy] was none other than Yoo Jinwoong's daughter.

“Understood. Please leave it to me.”

Destruction happily replied and laughed.

* * *

[Central Asia]

I threw the car away. It could be repaired, but its tattered state would pose a huge risk if someone attacked us again. I summoned Sannuri, whom I turned into a card, and rode on her with Yoo Yeonha. Sannuri ran fast as ever despite also carrying the [Dimensional Entropy].

Click— Clack—

I checked Yoo Yeonha's condition as Sannuri sped forward. She trembled sporadically, her body felt freezing, and her breathing remained rough. All the strength had left her body like a bird drenched in rain. Yoo Yeonha needed some rest.

I spotted a natural cave surrounded by greenery and headed there.

"Get down."

"..."

Yoo Yeonha got off Sannuri without a word. She staggered, but didn't fall and simply sat against the cave wall. Then she stared at me and pretended to be fine. I took this moment to message Jin Seyeon.

"Jin Seyeon, are you okay?"

—...

Tzzt. Static rang out a few times before she replied.

— Yeah, we survived. The car broke down, but we escaped. Where are you now?

As expected, a master rank hero couldn't die so easily. She even managed to protect Jin Sechan.

"I'll send you the coordinates. Tell me if you're too far."

I sent her our current location and she replied with a troubled voice.

— Yeah, we're quite far. About two days away on foot. We went in different directions...

"Send me your location. I'll pick you up."

— Pick me up?

I looked at Sannuri. She immediately understood and unhappily snorted.

“Yes, I have a horse. She’s incredibly smart, beautiful, and kind.”

Sannuri’s expression brightened as Jin Seyeon sounded confused.

— A horse?

“Yes. Anyways, send me your coordinates first.”

— Ah... yes.

Soon, my smartwatch beeped and I showed their location to Sannuri. She stared for about 10 seconds before neighing. She seemed to be in a good mood now.

“It’s pretty far, so you can run as much as you want.”

— Hiiiing.

“Yep, you don’t have to carry anyone on your way there. Run as quickly as you want. Feel free to kill any monsters or demons.”

— Hiiiing!

Sannuri cheerfully cried before bolting out of the cave. Whoosh! She disappeared like lightning and black soot flickered where she passed over.

“Haha.”

I chuckled and sat as well. Yoo Yeonha kept staring at me from the side. Her face looked pale like a patient on the brink of fainting. I met her gaze and asked.

“Are you okay?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha nodded. Did she lose the ability to speak? She hadn't said a word since we got on Sannuri.

“You look like you're going to die soon.”

I mischievously joked to lighten the mood and make her talk.

“...”

Still, she didn't say a word and only stared. After a long time, she gulped and finally spoke.

“I saw it.”

“Saw what?” I nonchalantly asked.

“You using a bow.”

A gust of wind blew and a strange humming echoed off the walls. I couldn't properly hear her.

“You saw?”

“Yeah.” She nodded resolutely.

“Your bow, arrow, and the huge magic power you aimed at the enemy.”

“...”

“I feel like an idiot for never suspecting it. You possessed extraordinary skills with the bow even at Cube. I still remember the curve shot you showed at the festival.”

I didn't say anything and simply scratched my head. I hoped she wouldn't notice while panicking, but that didn't turn out to be the case.

Yoo Yeonha sighed.

“I know what that bow is. No, anyone with decent information would recognize Black Lotus’ bow.”

I sat still and contemplated a response. Should I admit it or deny it? I couldn’t think of any excuses.

When I heard Yoo Yeonha’s next words...

“You’re willing to go that far to take revenge on the Chameleon Troupe?”

My head turned blank. I just stayed silent and allowed her to continue.

“You’re willing to dirty your hands and hurt yourself to—”

Yoo Yeonha paused and pitifully looked at me. I had no idea why. The only reaction I could give...

“...?”

I simply tilted my head at her.

Chapter 307

The Stories That Become Bridges

(1)

Blood, flesh, and the shattered pieces of a skull covered her. Cranial fluid splashed into her eyes and brain matter flew into her mouth. The incident from a couple of hours ago replayed in Yoo Yeonha's mind. Chwaaak! An arrow flew into the car before anyone realized and the driver's head exploded like a balloon. The sickening texture, smell... everything disgusted her. She still felt sick after emptying her stomach. The stench of death clung to her like a leech and she couldn't get it off.

“...!”

Yoo Yeonha tossed and turned in her nightmare before waking up. She sweated all over and only darkness greeted her. Yoo Yeonha grew nauseous and staggered up while leaning against the wall. She couldn't help but throw up again.

“Ah...”

She collapsed from sheer exhaustion. What happened today traumatized her. Death felt much more horrific than she expected, especially up close. She thought she would be indifferent and believed she had become tougher. Yet...

Is it because I stayed away from real battles for too long? Am I still too young?

Yoo Yeonha clenched her teeth and blamed herself. She recalled Licros and personally selected him as a Falling Blossom agent. The brave Mexican volunteered to be a spy despite having a wife and two children. Today, he disappeared without a trace. Yoo Yeonha had cremated his body herself.

“I’m sorry.”

He died because of her selfishness and she vowed to remember him forever. His family would be taken care of with all her efforts.

She wiped her tears and looked around. Kim Hajin had disappeared even though he stayed beside her until she fell asleep.

“Where did he go?”

She instinctively turned on her smartwatch out of fear.

[T-The number you have c-called cannot be reached at t-this time—]

Her broken smartwatch refused to work, so she walked to the cave entrance without a choice. She didn’t want to be alone.

“Haaa...”

Yoo Yeonha cautiously approached with her whip, but sighed in relief when she spotted Kim Hajin sitting by the entrance. He must’ve been standing guard until he fell asleep. She smiled and placed her whip down. Then she staggered towards him.

“...”

She recalled her nightmare again after seeing him asleep. Kim Hajin had held Black Lotus’ bow and arrow.

“You poor thing...” she pitifully murmured.

Just how much weight did he carry? Yoo Yeonha couldn’t imagine the pain and pressure he bore. Kim Hajin refused to comment, but she felt certain he joined the Chameleon Troupe out of revenge. He walked straight into the monster’s mouth to earn its trust and bring it down for good. He even willingly dirtied his hands for this goal.

“He who fights with monsters must take care, lest he becomes a monster himself.”

If you gaze long enough into the abyss, the abyss also gazes into you. Yoo Yeonha recalled Friedrich Nietzsche's famous quote and her heart grew heavy. She slowly stretched out her hand and smoothed Kim Hajin's ruffled hair. He looked like a child in his sleep, which made him all the more pitiful.

A person can't bear so much weight alone. You can ask your friends for help, so why won't you?

"..."

Yoo Yeonha sat next to him since the area around him felt warm. Perhaps this heat came from his clothes.

"Yaawn..."

The warmth made her sleepy again. This time, she felt positive she wouldn't have a nightmare.

"Uhm... Ahmm..."

Yoo Yeonha slowly dozed off. She leaned against Kim Hajin's shoulder and used it as a pillow for pleasant dreams.

5 minutes later...

The cave slightly shone from moonlight. A breeze blew and the wide-awake Kim Hajin opened his eyes. He stared at Yoo Yeonha leaning against his shoulder.

"Why does she always misunderstand?"

Kim Hajin grumbled, but couldn't deny her sleeping face looked quite adorable. He covered Yoo Yeonha with a blanket made from aether. She fell deeper asleep from the warmth and smiled.

* * *

A new day dawned and the sun rose. Sannuri brought back Jin Seyeon and Jin Sechan. I could only imagine the hardships they faced from their appearances. We celebrated our reunion with a simple hug.

“An archer ambushed us. We managed to escape, but our car was destroyed and djinns kept chasing us.”

“You too?”

Leraje had attacked both cars at the same time. A truly impressive feat.

We began a strategy meeting to safely return. The association couldn't be relied on for reinforcements. Fortunately, we could use Sannuri for transportation.

Our meeting concluded, but Sannuri hated being around the [Dimensional Entropy]. I had to chop some trees and carve some stones to make a carriage. Thankfully, Sannuri didn't mind pulling a carriage.

“Hop inside.”

I led them to the newly made carriage. I only invested 3 hours, but it could comfortably fit four people thanks to [Young Dwarf's Dexterity].

“It's surprisingly cozy in here.”

“I agree.”

Yoo Yeonha and Jin Seyeon exclaimed, but I still had more to show off. I placed my hand on the carriage and activated the [Random Consolidation System]. The number 60 appeared and the carriage grew even bigger and lighter. The interior could now fit four people laying down after being enhanced by 60%.

“Enchant.”

Lastly, I activated my [Four-Colored Enchantment].

“Black, flow, isolation.”

I muttered these keywords as stigma seeped into the carriage and blended it with the surroundings. I used this enchantment for [Concealment].

“Let’s go.”

I climbed inside and the trio stared in awe before climbing in as well. Sannuri began moving after everyone boarded. I kept an eye out for any possible ambushes.

“I’m glad I chose you to be my bodyguard.”

I simply smiled at Yoo Yeonha’s compliment and still felt a bit awkward because of her misunderstanding.

Sannuri raced across the grasslands at about 400 km/hr. The view outside quickly changed as we headed towards Pyeongan Island in Korea. We should arrive in two days at our current speed.

I suddenly recalled that cold, yet beautiful voice.

— My name.

Leraje had muttered as she stared at me. I checked the new information from our encounter.

[Leraje] [Current Power 9.3 / Potential 9.85] — Rank 14 Devil — Invasion Alignment – Neutral & Moderate — Has taken an interest in you. — Likes archers like herself. — Loves board games such as chess...

I came up with some of those settings, but not all of them. I carefully went over the list when...

[Sorry, I turned off my smartwatch during training. Just saw your text.]

I received a text from Chae Nayun.

Jin Sahyuk returned to Seoul and visited the Hero Plaza alone.

The large domed stadium sat at the heart of Seoul. Heroes used it for ranking battles and grade promotion battles. Heroes, managers, and reporters currently filled the stadium that could accommodate 60,000.

— We'll now begin the second preliminary round for the Gate of Glory!

Only the winners of this tournament could enter the Gate of Glory, formerly known as the demon realm gate. The association avoided all the horrors and only publicized wealth and fame. They dealt with the issue in stereotypical fashion.

— A total of 10,000 candidates remain. Today, the judges will handpick 1000 and 500 will advance to the next round!

Jin Sahyuk looked down at the stadium filled with hopeful heroes. She spotted Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Bell, and Rumi among them. They had to complete a maze for the second round. Two heroes would be randomly paired and had to proceed through the gigantic maze built in the stadium's basement.

"Haaa."

Jin Sahyuk deeply sighed. Not because of the maze, but something else bothered her.

"I don't understand."

She took out the magnifying glass from her pocket. The glass had shattered, but the frame remained. She recalled the words that appeared. They represented Kim Hajin's true feelings towards her.

"..."

She waved the magnifying glass from side to side while contemplating Kim Hajin's emotions.

[Pity]

She would've simply been mad if that was all there was. However...

[Sympathy] [Mild Animosity]

Those two seemed to contradict, but still didn't confuse her. The countless words that appeared afterwards truly baffled her. They overflowed and shattered the magnifying glass.

— The following emotions will increase along with synchronization (Currently at 15%) — [Loyalty] [Faith] [Happiness] [Reason to live] [Guilt from being unable to help] [Desire to be together] [Desire to protect]
...

Jin Sahyuk's heart grew chaotic and she couldn't understand these emotions. The word, synchronization, confused her the most.

What in the world is synchronization? What happens when it increases and how do I increase it?

"Haaa..."

She sighed and looked below. A certain man made eye contact with her. Kim Suho's expression stiffened and he hurried up the stairs. Tong — Tong— Tong— A hollow sound rang out as he climbed up and stood next to her.

"Are you here as a candidate?"

"Why would I miss out on the fun? Isn't it obvious? Idiot."

Kim Suho only smiled despite her insult.

"You should stop if you plan on doing anything rash. This is important."

"Who do you think you are?" Jin Sahyuk frowned.

“...”

“Who do you think you are to order me around?”

She repeated and they silently stared at each other for a minute. Suddenly, Kim Suho smiled and playfully remarked.

“Or else I’ll tell Hajin.”

“What did you say?” Jin Sahyuk’s face stiffened.

“Mmm? So I guess you don’t want Hajin getting mad at you.”

“I dare you to say that again, bastard!”

Jin Sahyuk grew angry. No, not angry. She actually became flustered. Did Kim Hajin tell Kim Suho? Does he know about the things on the magnifying glass?

“I’m just kidding.”

Kim Suho shook his head, but Jin Sahyuk still suspected him. She glared at him with flames in her eyes. Unfortunately, she ran out of time to interrogate him.

— Next up is the candidate you’ve all been waiting for, the Swordsman of Wish Kim Suho! He turned down a special offer from the association and chose to participate in the preliminary rounds! Kim Suho will participate in this mission with intermediate rank hero Yi Yijin!

The host declared Kim Suho’s turn.

“I have to go now. Try not to cause a commotion, okay?”

Kim Suho left with a faint smile. Jin Sahyuk continued glaring at him until... She noticed someone else staring at her. The mere sight of Chae Nayun annoyed her, but she recalled Bell’s words.

Aren't you curious about the relationship between Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin? I assure you it's much more scandalous than you think.

It might be related to the synchronization matter. Bell acted like an asshole, but he never lied about such things.

Jin Sahyuk glared at Chae Nayun and activated Reality Manipulation. Her magic power altered reality ever so slightly. Now, the next team would be Chae Nayun and Jin Sahyuk.

Chapter 308

The Stories That Become Bridges

(2)

Jin Seyeon looked out the carriage window. The steppes of Central Asia looked quite different from textbooks. Weeds grew to knee-length, trees reached towards the sky, and small djinn groups even formed villages.

“It feels like I’m in a fantasy world,” Jin Seyeon muttered in a daze.

Jin Sechan also looked out, but couldn’t see the same view with his eyesight. He turned back to Yoo Yeonha.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha stared at the tilonium case in her hands and seemed to be deep in thought. Jin Sechan worried about her, but couldn’t bring himself to say anything. He could only watch from the sidelines as her secretary.

“Are you okay?”

Jin Seyeon smiled at Jin Sechan before moving next to Yoo Yeonha.

Yoo Yeonha glanced at her and nodded. “I’m fine.”

“Don’t keep that case too close. It’ll have bad effects on you. We can still call a demon merchant if you want.”

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled. They had already considered calling demon merchants who would do anything for DP.

“No, demon merchants are still demons. They’ll desire it as well.”

She didn't trust them with no guarantee that they wouldn't want something other demons desperately sought. Yoo Yeonha deeply sighed and looked at the case containing the [Dimensional Entropy].

"Is it that important?" Jin Seyeon asked.

Yoo Yeonha nodded and replied without hesitation. "Yes, I can tell from the skills I obtained in the Tower of Wish. My [Basic Skill – Lv.9 Law of Thoughts] amplifies my thinking and my [Special Skill – Lv.9 Appraisal Eyes] allows me to appraise items."

The analysis of [Dimensional Entropy] continued in Yoo Yeonha's head. Essential Dynamics possessed the best technology in the world at extracting magic power from crystals and mana stones.

"This item will save countless people."

"..." Jin Seyeon smiled at her.

"I hope so too." Yoo Yeonha feebly smiled back.

"Hmm..."

Kim Hajin observed them and couldn't understand. They shouldn't have any special connections. When did they develop such a sister-like bond?

"How did you two get so close?" He couldn't help but ask.

They glanced at him and leaned against the carriage without saying anything.

"What the..." He pouted and furrowed his brows.

"I'll tell you later." Yoo Yeonha found this side of him quite cute and replied.

"Tsk."

Kim Hajin unhappily nodded before his eyes suddenly widened. He began scanning the air.

[Where are you? I'm taking the test for the Gate of Glory.]

Chae Nayun messaged him, but Kim Hajin simply smiled and shook his head.

[I can't tell you.]

[What? Why not? Actually, that's probably for the best.]

[Huh?]

Chae Nayun gave up surprisingly quick and Kim Hajin tilted his head.

[I don't think I'll be able to talk in front of you. I'm not ready yet... you know what I mean?]

Heh. Kim Hajin smirked.

[Yeah, I guess it's still a bit awkward. So?]

[Right, so... I thought we could just talk a couple of times a day like this to get familiar with each other. We can also play games. Did you know a new version of Gladiator of the Century came out?]

[No.]

[Download it. It's popular among heroes because it helps with image training. They added a bunch of skills, so it's super popular. Tournaments regularly get over 900,000 viewers...]

As expected of an avid gamer, Chae Nayun began talking about the latest news. Kim Hajin just listened with a smile while Jin Seyeon and Yoo Yeonha stared at him like he had gone crazy.

[Ah, wait. The heck? I'm paired up with Jin Sahyuk.]

[What? Jin Sahyuk?]

[Yeah, I'm hanging up now.]

"What are you doing?" Yoo Yeonha asked after Chae Nayun hung up.

"...!"

Kim Hajin's expression stiffened. Not just him, but Jin Seyeon felt it too with their supernatural perception. An outsider observed them from far away.

"..."

"..."

Kim Hajin and Jin Seyeon silently exchanged glances. Soon, she sent him a mental transmission.

— We should just let this person keep watching. I don't know who it is, but I don't sense any hostility. Let's act normal.

Kim Hajin nodded.

"By the way, everyone's raising a sponsored character with DP, right?"

Jin Seyeon brightly smiled at everyone.

Anyone who hunted demonic monsters received the DP system. Those who earned more than 50,000 DP could play something called the minigame. Sponsoring the people of Lailos grew quite popular recently.

"Of course, you'll be surprised to know who I'm sponsoring," Yoo Yeonha proudly declared.

"Oh, really? Show me."

Jin Seyeon asked and Yoo Yeonha displayed her individual with a grin. She sponsored the high rank knight Gimitos.

“Wow, Gimitos the Berserker! You sponsored him? The Lailos community is always praising him.”

“Lailos what?” Kim Hajin asked in surprise. He didn’t know an online community had developed for Lailos sponsors. The site already boasted more than 200,000 members.

“There’s a post every time Gimitos buys a new armor or weapon. Didn’t he recently buy the black flame dragon armor?”

“Well, I don’t want to brag. What about you?” Yoo Yeonha shrugged and changed the subject.

“I’m raising an archer. Look.”

Jin Seyeon sponsored an intermediate rank archer named Lekio. Yoo Yeonha and Jin Sechan looked at him with sparkling eyes.

“That bow looks like it’s made from emetos ore. Ah, his armor is made from quality leather as well.”

Kim Hajin decided to check on Litrain as they talked.

[Litrain became the youngest master rank knight and obtained the title, Starlight Knight. She didn’t stop training even after becoming knight order commander. The once small Extra Temple receives over 1000 visitors per day and dozens of apprentice knights serve under her. An order of knights called the Starlight Knights also formed and Litrain holds great influence in the kingdom. However, she still worries about one thing. Recently, her disciples and the Extra Temple followers have grown suspicious of Lord Extra. Over a year has passed since he last sponsored Litrain...]

Litrain had grown tremendously since Kim Hajin last saw her. He had earned over 200,000 DP from her and immediately sent back a third of it.

“Who are you sponsoring, Hajin? Show us,” Jin Seyeon finally asked.

“Well, it’s her.”

Kim Hajin slightly hesitated before answering. He casually displayed Litrain’s information, but everyone else’s jaws dropped.

“Wait, Litrain... She’s the most famous in the community... My Gimitos...”

Yoo Yeonha’s jealous voice rang out.

* * *

Leraje specialized in watching others from afar and didn’t have any trouble following them. She carefully observed the man known as Kim Hajin. He knew her name and hadn’t thoughtlessly muttered it. Leraje could discern someone’s state simply based on their voice.

“What are you up to lord?”

Her henchman, Corte, suddenly asked.

— Bored. Being alone here is boring. Did you get in touch with those old devils?

She simply replied.

“Yes, three devils have obtained incarnation bodies: rank 3 Prince Vassago, rank 29 Count Astaroth, and rank 62 Valac.”

Leraje immediately frowned after hearing this.

— The old man hasn’t escaped his curse yet?

She meant Baal.

Corte smiled and shook his head.

“No, King Baal has yet to escape the curse. The demon realm’s gate will soon open, so he will eventually descend.”

— How long will it take?

“Three months and not a day more.”

That sounded too long. She might wander around out of boredom, but Corte wanted to hide her identity as much as possible. He took out the electronic device he had prepared.

— What’s that?

“It’s called a game console. Humans like to entertain themselves with it. You’ll never grow bored with this.”

— Is that so?

Leraje seemed interested. Corte knelt and offered her the virtual reality gaming console.

— How do I use it?

“You just have to wear the helmet and turn it on by moving your fingers.”

—...

Leraje did as he said and her vision briefly turned black before a blue screen popped up. A strange feeling like being transported to another world enveloped her.

[I will explain how to use this console. Please follow my instructions.]

A message popped up in front of her before she could get used to the sensation. Leraje furrowed her brows.

— Who are you to tell me what to do?

[Try moving your fingers.]

— I don’t want to. Introduce yourself first.

[Try moving your fingers.]

— Impudent.

Leraje moved her fingers and intended on destroying this impudent being. However, the world suddenly changed after she moved her fingers. The blue room transformed into a vast grassland.

Leraje widened her eyes in surprise.

[Here is a list of popular games. Please click the one you wish to play.] [1. Gladiator of the Century] [2. Reolesk] [3. Grand Theft Auto]...

She stared at the messages before clicking on Gladiator of the Century.

*[You already own the game. Accessing Gladiator of the Century...]
[Welcome to Gladiator of the Century.] [Please set your ID.] [Your ID will be your name inside Gladiator of the Century.]*

— You're kind, unlike the one from before.

Leraje nodded in satisfaction before typing her ID.

[Lijengy]

She misspelled her own name, but didn't notice.

[Welcome, Lijengy.]

— What? Lijengy? You...

She expressed her anger at the machine for calling her the wrong name.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait's rising star, Chae Nayun, and the tournament's black horse, Jin Sahyuk!]

Chae Nayun and Jin Sahyuk ended up on the same team at Seoul's Hero Plaza. They entered the maze side by side.

"Screw off."

Of course, Chae Nayun didn't intend on working together. She bolted away in the opposite direction as they entered the maze. No one recommended randomly running in the maze, but Chae Nayun's intuition gave her an undeniable edge. She believed she would soon find the exit.

"..."

Jin Sahyuk had no intention of letting that happen. She activated Reality Manipulation and changed the maze's structure.

Kiiik— Kiiik—

The exit disappeared, but Chae Nayun thought the maze just shifted as part of the trial.

"She really is an idiot."

Jin Sahyuk sneered since Chae Nayun would no longer find an exit. She just had to wait until Chae Nayun grew tired and came back.

Plop—

Jin Sahyuk sat on the floor and sent Bell a mental transmission to pass the time.

* * *

[Central Asia]

The carriage raced through Central Asia as Jin Seyeon, Yoo Yeonha, and Jin Sechan glued their eyes on Litrain. They watched her every move and exclaimed once in a while at her beauty, strength, and kindness. They had become avid Litrain fans by the time they fell asleep.

The carriage reached China after we slept for about 3-4 hours. The safe zone neared, but we kept our guard up.

“The gaze went away,” Jin Seyeon said.

“Yeah.” I nodded.

Clack, clack. The carriage peacefully continued as I turned to Jin Seyeon. She also looked at me and must’ve felt the unusual presence approaching us.

“Yeonha, we should prepare for battle.”

Jin Seyeon’s words startled her, but Yoo Yeonha courageously took out her whip.

“We’re surrounded with no way to break through. We should go out and face them rather than being ambushed,” Jin Seyeon suggested.

“I agree.”

It would be annoying if they destroyed the carriage. I opened the door and walked out. The other three followed. Immediately, we felt the hostility and killing intent. The wind carried demonic energy as the enemies drew closer.

“Don’t worry. We’ll win for sure. I’m 100% certain.”

Jin Seyeon took out her bow and reassured Yoo Yeonha. I also took out my Desert Eagle.

Guooooo—

Demonic energy suddenly filled the air like a storm as a shooting star shot down from the sky.

KWANG!

The shooting star landed in front of us and turned out to be a living being.

“Haha, how are you all doing on this fine day?”

“...”

I recognized him from the mask covering half his face. Destruction appeared with dozens of djinns surrounding us.

“Uhahahaha.” He burst into laughter and Yoo Yeonha clenched her teeth.

“It’s been a while, Yoo Jinwoong’s daughter.”

“You know him?” Jin Seyeon asked.

“A little bit. He lost to my father back in the day.”

“Pardon?”

“He went crazy from his inferiority complex and ended up losing half his face to my father.”

Destruction’s face heavily contorted after hearing her words. He angrily glared at Yoo Yeonha.

“It seems the daughter is just as trashy as the father.”

Then he stepped forward with a grin and all the djinns released their demonic energy to transform. Unsurprisingly, Destruction’s subordinates seemed quite skilled.

“Where’s the dimensional entropy? Inside the carriage? I’ll let you die peacefully if you hand it over.”

However, Yoo Yeonha shook her head and Destruction furrowed his brows.

“Trust me. I’ll cleanly chop off your head and send you mostly intact to your dear father if you hand it over. Otherwise—”

“Shut it. Your breath stinks.”

“...”

Destruction’s expression turned ugly as I transformed the Desert Eagle into a machine gun.

“Huuu...”

He deeply sighed and scratched his head with his long nails, which began to turn black. Without a doubt, he partially used his devil transformation.

“Looks like I’ll have to go back on my words.”

A giant horn protruded from his head and his body turned black with demonic energy. Destruction bent his body like a track runner at the starting line and shot forward like a bullet. No, he tried to.

“Stop.”

A child-like voice rang out from the sky and magic power shackled his body. Not just Destruction, but the entire world responded. Even Destruction’s subordinates and the wind froze.

“Ku... uk.”

Destruction desperately turned his head towards the voice. A small individual floated 10 meters above the ground. Her symbolic white hair beautifully shone and her proud eyes glared at him. The hero who defined a generation had arrived.

“Why did you come so late?” Jin Seyeon smiled at her.

“I came as quickly as I could. You told me to come secretly, but I’m the chairman of the Temple of Justice. You think it’s easy to leave work without anyone knowing?”

Aileen grumbled and hopped down from the puff of cloud she stood on. Tadat— She lightly landed inside the area frozen in time.

“Look at all the trash here,” she said with a sneer.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha snapped out of her daze and glanced at Jin Seyeon for an explanation.

Jin Seyeon smiled and whispered.

— I told you we would win. I secretly called for backup.

“Kuuu... uuuuk...”

Destruction tried to resist Aileen’s Spirit Speech and forcefully twisted his neck.

“You’re... Ai...”

“Shut your mouth.”

Aileen silenced him, but his eyes still glared with killing intent.

“You’re annoying. Just get crushed!”

Her voice rang out in the empty field.

“Uk, uuuuuuak!”

Destruction’s body folded on itself before exploding. It simply ended like that.

“...”

“...”

We stared at the scene in a daze. Aileen had grown far more powerful than the last time we saw her. She almost reached the level of a transcendent now. Just what happened?

“Pft, impressed? I found an amazing unique skill from the Tower of Wish. This is nothing to me now.”

Aileen strutted her chest and looked around. The leader of the djinns had died, but the remaining ones couldn't move because of Aileen's Spirit Speech. She ignored them and approached Jin Seyeon.

“Anyways, why are you here?”

“Yes? Ah... about that.” Jin Seyeon scratched her neck and placed her hand on Yoo Yeonha's shoulder.

“Let me introduce her first. This is Yoo Yeonha, the chief officer of my guild.”

“Chief Officer? What do you mean? You're not in a...” Aileen's eyes suddenly widened.

“Wait, you mean...?” Yoo Yeonha also realized what Jin Seyeon meant.

“Ah!”

Jin Seyeon finally responded to the offer she made a long time ago. Yoo Yeonha looked at her, Aileen, and then me.

“Y... Yes!”

She jumped in excitement.

Chapter 309

The Stories That Become Bridges

(3)

[Seoul, Korea — Hero Plaza Maze]

Chae Nayun realized something had gone wrong after 3 hours. Her intuition told her this maze didn't have an exit, but how could that be? They designed this test to pick out 200 challengers for the Gate of Glory. She explored for 2 more hours to confirm her doubt.

Meanwhile, Jin Sahyuk grew restless as she watched Chae Nayun. She assumed Chae Nayun would give up, but had misjudged. Chae Nayun's tenacity went beyond her expectations.

“Sigh.”

Jin Sahyuk stood up to intervene when...

— Sahyuk.

A voice flowed into her ears. She widened her eyes and turned around. There, a semi-transparent fog glimmered in the air. Without a doubt, Bell came to see her.

“Bell, you bastard—”

Had they been apart for too long? She jumped at Bell with excessive force and grabbed his gaseous state by the collar. Bell smiled and looked down at her grip.

“Where have you been—”

— Shh.

He placed a finger to his lips.

“Shh? Are you crazy?”

— Hey, keep it down. I’m only here because it seemed like you might be eliminated from the tournament.

“Eliminated my ass...”

— You’ve accomplished nothing in the last 6 hours. Don’t you want to enter the demon realm’s gate?

“Is there a reason why I should enter?” Jin Sahyuk flatly remarked. She felt the need to revolt because Bell pissed her off.

He smiled and found her attitude quite cute.

— Of course, you do. You have to kill me inside the gate.

“What?” Jin Sahyuk’s face stiffened, but Bell appeared comfortable as always.

— I know you’ve already heard most of it from Kim Hajin.

“...”

She remained silent as Bell solidified and placed a hand on her shoulder.

“Please continue to work hard. I believe in you, Sahyuk.”

His voice, clearer than before, rang in her ears.

“I’ve repeated the past countless times and finally found you.”

Jin Sahyuk looked at him. She couldn’t understand his unwavering trust and the earnest hope in his eyes.

“My death...”

Bell placed his hand on her head and recalled their first meeting. Back then, they couldn't even see eye to eye when Bell crouched. Now, she had grown into an adult.

“You can do it, right?” A broad smile spread across his face and Jin Sahyuk nodded.

“Of course, I'll kill you if that's what you want.”

Jin Sahyuk confidently smiled. Death seemed like a fitting gift for this frenemy she'd known for 20 years.

“The end is finally near.”

“But...” Jin Sahyuk interrupted him.

“I have one condition.”

She needed to know one last thing before killing Bell.

“Do you know what synchronization is?”

* * *

[East Asia]

Aileen didn't ask much. She seemed confused as to why we couldn't use portals or skills, but still provided us with top-grade protection.

“Are you sure you can leave for this long?”

“I'll take this as a vacation. Honestly, I've been so annoyed from all the work.”

Aileen shrugged at Jin Seyeon's question.

“And this is the first time I’ve ever been in a carriage. Oh right, what are you going to do with this carriage afterwards? Can I keep it if you’re going to throw it away?”

“Huh? Ah, of course. You can keep it, Aileen.”

“Really? Wow, thanks!” Aileen beamed at my reply.

“Cough.”

Her smile quickly faded as she looked at Yoo Yeonha with her usual expression.

“Anyways, I won’t ask what you did. I’m sure you’re careful enough not to do anything illegal.”

“Of course.” Yoo Yeonha nodded and suddenly pointed outside.

“Ah, it’s Pyeongan Island!”

We all sat up like meerkats. As she said, I could see the Korean border in the distance. Yoo Yeonha didn’t hide her joy and I texted Boss after our reception came back.

— Boss, I’ve completed the mission.

— Good job. Rest well.

She quickly replied.

Clunk— The carriage stopped and Sannuri threw a tantrum. The border guards approaching us with guns and swords startled her.

“I’ll deal with them.” Yoo Yeonha stepped out first.

“Who are you?”

One of the guards spoke before they all recognized Yoo Yeonha and immediately bowed 90 degrees. Then they escorted us back to the mainland.

Yoo Yeonha led us to Essential Dynamics' non-divisional unit in South Pyeongan Province. The base looked even bigger than most universities. She had been preparing this place ever since hearing about the [Dimensional Entropy].

“This is where we'll open the dimensional entropy.”

Only Jin Seyeon, Jin Sechan, Yoo Yeonha, and I remained in this enormous base.

“And this is the celestial extractor, the culmination of magic engineering to activate the dimensional entropy.”

Yoo Yeonha walked towards a large machine with the tilonium case. The machine's center contained the energy heart, a place to lay the crystal or magic ore. Several mechanical discs revolved around the heart and reminded me of the solar system.

We stared at the magnificent scene in awe. Even Yoo Yeonha, the architect, seemed fascinated by the machine.

“The energy extracted with this machine can be used for bullets, artillery, engines, barriers, power... basically everything. Essence of the Strait will take humanity to the next level and we'll stand against all threats from now on.”

The energy glowed green and I continued to stare at the miniature solar system before turning around with a smile. Yoo Yeonha looked slightly confused at me.

“Are you leaving?”

“Yeah, I'm busy.”

I had to deliver the last dress to Medea in the Tower of Wish. I also had to visit Evandel as promised.

“Sure, thanks again for the hard work. You can always come back if anything happens—”

“Just remember to send me those shares,” I said and turned towards Jin Seyeon.

“Do you really plan on joining Essence of the Strait?”

The Divine Archer gave me a big smile. “Yes, it’s finally time I start considering politics.”

“...”

I smiled and looked at Jin Sechan next, but didn’t have much to say. He noticed my gaze and bowed first.

“We only survived because of your efforts. Thank you.”

“N-No, thank you for the hard work.”

Our mission finally concluded.

“I’m leaving now. Take care.”

“Yeah, see you later.”

I said goodbye to Yoo Yeonha and left the base. Then I immediately headed to Evandel’s forest with the completely healed Spartan.

[♥ Evandel & Hayang’s Cabin ^^ ★]

One more word had been added to the adorable door plate. I entered the cabin without knocking.

“Evandel.”

She had been playing house with Hayang in the living room and widened her eyes. Then she looked at me in a daze and dropped her doll on the floor.

“Hajin!”

She jumped into my arms with a radiant smile.

* * *

I lay in bed with Evandel at 11 P.M. and surfed the web.

[The Gate of Glory’s second preliminary round has ended.] [What lies beyond the Gate of Glory?] [The Future Road of Korea, Chae Joochul’s speech received a standing ovation...]

The internet only featured news regarding the Gate of Glory. Everyone seemed excited instead of panicking, probably because the association changed the gate’s name.

“Mmm?”

I spotted the virtual reality helmet on the floor. I brought it in case Evandel wanted to play.

“Hmm.”

She fell asleep and I felt a bit bored. I stretched and grabbed the helmet.

“Scan.”

I wore the helmet after enhancing it by 59%. Jiing— It usually took 2 minutes to boot, but finished in 10 seconds after my enhancement. I looked over the list of games.

[Popular Games] [1. Gladiator of the Century] [2. Reolesk] [3. Grand Theft Auto]...

Gladiator of the Century caught my eye. Chae Nayun asked to play with me, so I should practice.

[Purchasing Gladiator of the Century... Purchase completed.] [Accessing Gladiator of the Century...] [Welcome to Gladiator of the Century.]

[Please set your ID.]

Of course, I registered as Extra7.

[Your username is Extra7.] [Welcome. Would you like to view the tutorial?]

“No.”

I skipped it and checked the [Current Rankings]. Games could only be fully enjoyed against strong opponents.

[Current Rankings] 1. Fralo (161 matches: 130 wins, 31 losses) 2. BritishSpirit (146 matches: 121 wins, 25 losses) 3. Lijengy (70 matches: 70 wins) 4. Wolf (150 matches: 103 wins, 47 losses)...

“Let’s see...”

First, I sent a match request to the No.1 player.

[Failed to request a match from Fralo. This user automatically declines requests from strangers.]

“Ah, right.”

Most rankers only turned on match requests from their friends. Otherwise, newbies would always pester them.

Should I just play ranked games? I thought to myself when I noticed Lijengy, the only ranker who didn’t turn on their [Automatically Decline Match Request] option.

“70 matches and 70 wins...”

She looked strong. I sent a request after briefly thinking about it.

[You have sent a match request to Lijengy.] [Lijengy has accepted your match request.]

“Oh?”

I teleported to the arena when Lijengy accepted my request.

[Map – Gladiator Colosseum]

The crowd’s cheering filled the arena along with dust. My opponent stood on the opposite side with a strangely short sword that almost looked like a dagger. I chose a baseball bat after some thought.

[You have chosen the baseball bat, a beginner weapon.] [3, 2, 1] [Begin!]

The duel began. Taat! I charged with the baseball bat and swung as hard as I could. Whish— Lijengy tried to evade, but I relentlessly swung.

— Quadruple Baseball Bat Swing!

I shouted. Whoosh— Whoosh— Whoosh— Whoosh— My bat moved back and forth 4 times and the battle ended.

— Kyaaak!

Lijengy couldn’t withstand the attack and died.

“What the...”

It made sense once I thought about it. I had enhanced my console by an astounding 59%, so my character existed in an accelerated world like a speed hack.

“This is bad.”

I should probably turn off the [Random Consolidation System]. It trivializes the entire game.

As I prepared to turn off the game...

[Lijengy has requested a rematch.]

I accepted, but the results remained the same.

— Quintuple Baseball Bat Swing!

— Kyaak!

[K.O.] [Winner – Extra7]

The match ended in less than 3 minutes, but Lijengy persisted.

[Lijengy has requested a best of 3 rematch.]

“Someone’s competitive.”

I accepted her request and appeared in the Colosseum. Then I jumped and swung my bat at her. Lijengy lost, but immediately asked for another rematch.

[Lijengy has requested a best of 3 rematch.] [Lijengy has requested a best of 3 rematch.] [Lijengy has requested a best of 5 rematch.] [Lijengy has requested a best of 5 rematch.] [Lijengy has requested a best of 7...]

I kept winning after 50 rounds and Lijengy continued requesting rematches.

[Lijengy has requested a best of 9 rematch.]

“Let’s not...”

Best of 9 is just excessive. I thought to myself when I received a text from Jin Sahyuk.

[Kim Hajin, where are you? Let’s meet.]

I declined the rematch request and replied to Jin Sahyuk.

[You have declined Lijengy’s match request.] [Lijengy has sent you a message.]

“What’s wrong with her?”

[Why did you decline my request, Extra7?] [You’re the strongest human I’ve ever met.] [Accept my request.] [Don’t decline.]

“Is she crazy?”

[Accept my request right now. I haven’t completely lost yet.] [Answer me. Don’t test my patience.] [Don’t make me wait.]

I took off the helmet without replying. Then...

Whish—

I received a signal from the Tower of Wish. It came from [Tomer’s Crystal Ball] that I stored in stigma.

* * *

[Tower of Wish – 8F Crevon]

I spent some time with Evandel and returned to Crevon with Jin Sahyuk.

“Why did we come here again?”

She asked as we walked down the hall of Tomer’s mansion.

“I think Tomer wants to talk about something.”

I also planned to deliver the finished robe to Medea.

“Ah, why did you text me yesterday?” I asked back.

Jin Sahyuk leered at me. “You said you’d stay by my side for half a year. It hasn’t been half a year yet.”

“Yeah?”

I felt surprised she kept track and quickened my pace to arrive at Tomer's office. Tok, Tok— Tomer replied as soon as I knocked.

— Come in.

I opened the door and entered. Kiik— The wooden door screeched open and Tomer sat all alone in her modest office.

“Welc— Oh? Well, if it isn't the former knight commander!”

“She's with me. Is that okay?”

“Yeah. Sit down.” Tomer gestured towards the chairs and we sat.

“So?”

“So what?”

“Why did you call me?”

“Ah.”

Her face stiffened at my question. She looked at us before speaking in a low voice.

“I wanted to talk to you about the descent and the prophecy.”

“Prophecy?”

“Yeah, it came from Crevon's administrator.”

Tomer showed me a piece of paper with only two sentences on it.

[An enormous calamity shall descend upon the outside world.] [The inside and outside must unite to overcome this ordeal.]

I widened my eyes and Tomer's mouth slanted upwards.

“The queen wishes to speak with you... about the prophecy.”

“Queen? You mean Araha?”

“Hey, watch your mouth.” Tomer frowned and I bitterly smiled.

“What does Her Majesty wish to speak about?” I rephrased my question.

“The second sentence sounds quite tricky. It says the inside and outside must unite.”

An idea naturally crossed my mind. A temporary descent of everyone from the Tower of Wish to fight against the devil and demon realm transformation.

“Yeah, but why did the queen pick me? I’m not famous here or anything.”

“How should I know? Listen to me carefully though. Araha is a tyrant.”

“Araha? Are you sure you can call the queen by her name?”

“I’m allowed to.”

Tomer replied and took out a pen.

“Now, listen carefully. I’m about to tell you what you can and can’t do.”

Chapter 310

The Stories That Become Bridges

(4)

“Araha hates black clothes. She also hates arrogant people and being ignored even more. She has an inferiority complex because she wasn’t the first in line to become king.

“She probably called you because of Prestige. After all, you’re the master there.”

“I don’t know what she thinks about the prophecy, but I assume it’s a mix of interest and displeasure.”

We visited the royal palace after receiving all of Tomer’s advice. Everything looked much grander than before.

“By the way, did I kill you once or twice?”

I asked Jin Sahyuk as we walked. She frowned without replying. It must’ve hurt her pride to recall.

“I’m not making fun of you. I’m just asking how many skill slots you have left.”

“Five...”

“Five? Three basic and two special? You didn’t learn any?”

Jin Sahyuk nodded.

“You’re more prudent than I thought. Well, you’ll be learning some today.”

The royal palace should have a few passive skills to buff her. I would be surprised if they didn't have anything.

"No, I don't need any." Jin Sahyuk shook her head and grumbled.

"I can't learn any ultimate or unique skills because of you, so I don't need trash skills."

"What? No."

I had to make her stronger now that she became redeemable.

"Synthesized basic skills and special skills that take up two slots are worth learning. We'll look through the vault to see what's available."

"The hell does that mean?"

"It's fine if you don't understand. Let's go."

We entered the palace and showed our royal invitation letter to a guard. Then a knight came down to greet us.

"My name is Wilhelm Tell. Follow me. Her Royal Highness is waiting."

Most may have forgotten him on Earth, but his story remained a small legend. We followed Wilhelm past a huge garden and passed countless knights lined up along the hallway. I didn't know if they came to greet or threaten us.

"Go in."

Eventually, we arrived in front of a fancy door.

"Yes."

I turned the doorknob and slowly pushed. The door smoothly opened and I could see Araha sitting at the head of a long table. She smiled with Lancelot and Lü Bu beside her.

“Welcome, master of Prestige and former knight commander, Shin Jahyuk,” Araha greeted us.

“We’re humbled to be in your audience.”

I greeted her the way Tomer instructed. Jin Sahyuk, on the other hand, simply nodded. It seemed to be a matter of pride since she also used to be a king.

“I see you haven’t changed, knight commander. Please sit.”

Araha didn’t seem to mind and guided us to our seats. I tilted my head at her reaction. It seemed different from what Tomer told us.

“Hajin?”

A woman who sat near Araha called me. The knight had blonde hair and sparkling eyes.

“Rachel?”

We exchanged curious glances.

“Hm? You two know each other?” Araha showed some interest with a smile.

Rachel looked back and forth between me and Jin Sahyuk before asking. “How did you two...”

“Ah, Jin Sa—, er, knight commander Shin Jahyuk came as my companion. Her Royal Highness called us here.”

“Please sit, or do you plan on keeping me waiting?” Araha interrupted us with a cheery voice.

“Ah, yes.”

We sat down while Rachel looked confused. Araha clapped and several servants walked in with plates of food.

“Go ahead. I heard there’s a saying in your world that one should fill their stomach before enjoying the mountain view.”

We began to eat. I munched on a king crab leg and Jin Sahyuk cut up a premium steak.

“You’ve heard about the prophecy from Margrave Tomer, correct?”
Araha asked us.

“Yes.”

“I’ve called to talk about that. We discovered a pathway that leads to your world, Earth.”

My eyes immediately widened.

Araha slowly continued as she munched on an escargot.

“However, this pathway seems quite dangerous and requires a huge amount of energy to open. Crevon isn’t capable of providing such energy.”

Energy... That shouldn’t be a problem with the [Dimensional Entropy] in our hands.

“I should be able to take care of the energy. Where’s the pathway?”

I asked and she stared at me before deeply sighing.

“The 9th floor.”

“Pardon?”

“The pathway to the outside world...”

Araha paused and muttered in a heavy voice after collecting her breath.

“It’s deep within the 9th floor filled with mythical monsters.”

[Desolate Moon Guild Building – Vice Leader Shin Jonghak’s Office]

Desolate Moon’s new vice leader, Shin Jonghak the Conqueror, currently decorated his office. He placed his spear, the main reason why he gained his title, on a shelf beside a sculpture of himself.

“Hahahaha.”

Just looking at the sculpture he received a long time ago brightened his mood. It suited the interior design and perfectly represented him.

“Sigh.”

He smiled in satisfaction until he recalled that Kim Hajin sculpted this piece.

“That guy, why don’t I ever know where he is?”

Shin Jonghak clicked his tongue and sat in his chair. Then he opened a newspaper with every page talking about the Gate of Glory.

*[The 3rd round of selections will begin for the Gate of Glory. Rising star Chae Nayun, Kim Suho the Sword Saint, Shin Jonghak the Conqueror]
[Norwegian hero Bjornmoj steps up to the challenge... High-intermediate rank hero Leitlison fails at 2nd round...]*

— Vice leader, urgent news!

“Uwoah!”

A loud shout startled him as he read. Shin Jonghak ripped the newspaper and sighed.

“What is it?”

— I’ll send it over right now!

He received the news on his computer and it mentioned Essence of the Strait.

[Breaking News! Master Rank Hero, Divine Archer Jin Seyeon Joins Essence of the Strait!] [Essence of the Strait Stocks Skyrocket... Up 19% in 5 minutes!]

“Pft.”

Shin Jonghak laughed while reading the report. Jin Seyeon joining Essence of the Strait certainly shocked him since she had remained independent for a long time. However, it felt nice seeing a long-time friend like Yoo Yeonha do so well. He didn’t feel happy about Essence of the Strait far surpassing Desolate Moon, but he knew Yoo Yeonha couldn’t match his battle prowess. He continued reading with a smile. Then his gaze subconsciously landed on the frame next to his monitor.

“...”

The young Shin Jonghak happily smiled with his grandfather, Shin Myungchul.

“Haaa...”

He picked up the frame with a sigh. Shin Myungchul, the brightest of the Nine Stars, whose name will be forever remembered. Shin Jonghak still couldn’t understand why Shin Myungchul sacrificed himself. Wasn’t his life worth more than a few million ordinary people? Didn’t he know that, or did he sacrifice himself regardless?

“Grandfather...”

Shin Jonghak recalled an old memory of him crying in his grandfather’s arms. Just being by his side consoled him. Shin Jonghak felt prouder of him than anyone else and considered him humanity’s eternal hero.

He bitterly muttered as he looked at his younger self in the frame.

“I still resent you.”

Calls continued to flood Essence of the Strait. Yoo Yeonha summoned Chae Nayun, one of the guild's most famous heroes.

Chae Nayun shouted as soon as she entered Yoo Yeonha's office. "Is it true? Jin Seyeon is joining our guild!"

Yoo Yeonha grinned and nodded.

"Wow..."

Chae Nayun's jaw dropped since most master rank heroes who didn't serve as guild leaders rarely belonged to guilds. Jin Seyeon joining Essence of the Strait truly deserved all the buzz, but the surprises didn't end there.

"Anyways, Nayun."

"Hmm?"

Yoo Yeonha lightly smiled and took out Balmung that Kim Hajin had returned. Chae Nayun tilted her head.

"Take it."

"What's this? A baseball bat?"

Yoo Yeonha expected such a reaction since Balmung currently looked like a long stick.

"This artifact is perfect for you."

"This? Is it the stone club Beowulf used?"

"No, just try holding it."

Yoo Yeonha wanted to surprise her, so she handed over Balmung without any explanation. Chae Nayun held it full of curiosity. Whoosh!

Yoo Yeonha formed a small whip with her magic power and slightly slashed Chae Nayun's arm.

“Ow!”

Blood flowed from the cut and seeped into the sword. Tk, tk—

“What was that for?” Chae Nayun angrily stared at her.

“Just watch.”

“I’m bleeding, geez.”

“Right.”

Yoo Yeonha shrugged. Balmung required 500 ml of blood to awaken, so she had to make the cut a little deep.

“Right? Look at my arm! It’s bleeding a lot!”

“Look at what’s in your hand.”

Chae Nayun looked down while seething.

“...!”

Her body shook as the stone lump sucked her blood.

“H-Hey, what’s...”

She didn’t have the time to ask. Balmung emitted a bright light once it absorbed enough blood. They both instinctively covered themselves in qi reinforcement.

Kwaaaaa— The erupting light soon returned into the stone.

“Uh...”

Silence descended until Chae Nayun made a faint sound. The lump of stone in her hand had transformed into a sword with a navy blue blade and a golden hilt. Like in the myth of Siegfried, both light and dark coexisted in this 1.8 meter greatsword.

“That’s Balmung.”

Yoo Yeonha finally told her.

“Bal... this... holy...”

Chae Nayun remained dumbfounded while Yoo Yeonha took out a contract for the weapon’s permanent lease.

“You want it, right? You can have it if you sign here.”

“Huh? Oh, yeah. Of course.”

Chae Nayun signed it without even looking.

“What’s happening?”

Yoo Yeonha’s door burst open and several heroes who detected Balmung’s magic power rushed in. Their gaze turned to the odd object once they confirmed Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun’s safety.

“Wow.”

“The heck...”

Balmung, the legendary sword from countless stories. Yoo Yeonha smiled at the heroes’ dazed expressions.

“This is Balmung. Our major shareholder, XJ, lent it to us.”

XJ stood for Extra Hajin. Everyone knew the well-known nickname of this major Essence of the Strait shareholder, but no one knew his real identity.

“Cool, right? Feel free to take pictures and brag to your friends.”

Having such a valuable weapon boosted a guild’s image. The heroes could only blankly stare even after Yoo Yeonha’s explanation.

* * *

[Tower of Wish – 8F, Crevon]

It began raining in Crevon as I sat in the royal palace’s reception room in thought. Araha said a pathway existed on the 9th floor, but I didn’t know if she told the truth or not. I could probably leave it to the Chameleon Troupe. After all, Cheok Jungyeong always itched for a fight.

“Why haven’t you responded to my messages?”

I heard Rachel speaking to Jin Sahyuk.

“Do I have a reason to?” Jin Sahyuk replied.

“I see.”

Rachel nodded without the slightest change in expression, but anyone could tell this blunt response hurt her feelings.

“Hajin?”

“Yes?”

I turned to Rachel and we exchanged smiles.

“It’s been a while.”

“Ah, yes.”

“...”

Meanwhile, Jin Sahyuk looked back and forth between us. Rachel felt her gaze and also turned to face her. Like that, a silent battle began between them.

“Haha... huh? What’s that?”

I spotted a pool table in the corner of the room. From what I heard, players had spread all sorts of trendy sports in Crevon.

“Um, do any of you want to play some pool?”

“Huh? Pool?” Rachel’s eyes brightened.

“I’d be happy to. Are you good, Hajin?”

“Uh... It’s hard for me to be bad at it, I guess?”

After all, I possessed Young Dwarf’s Dexterity.

“Pft.”

Rachel only snorted and I’d never seen her sneer before. It must’ve came out subconsciously as she immediately fixed her expression. Still, it surprised me.

“Ah, sorry. It’s just that I’m... quite good at pool. I even won a tournament.”

“Ah... I see.”

I thoughtlessly nodded at Rachel’s proud comment, but that ended up triggering Jin Sahyuk’s competitive spirit.

“What pool are you talking about?”

“English billiards, straight pool, carom, eight ball? It doesn’t matter to me.”

“Yeah? Then let’s go with carom.”

“Sure.”

Rachel seemed full of confidence and Jin Sahyuk didn't like that. She stomped towards the pool table and grabbed a cue. Rachel also grabbed one with a grin.

“Shall we begin?”

“Ah, it's a bit boring if we don't bet anything. What should we bet?”

“A bet... What about a wish?”

“Sounds good.”

Everything happened in the blink of an eye, but as the match began...

“...?”

Spartan contacted me from outside the Tower of Wish.

— Yoo Jinhyuk messaged that he completed his investigation on Yi Yeonjun. Yi Yeonjun seems to be up to something. It doesn't seem urgent. Currently on lookout.

I stood up to return to Earth after receiving Spartan's thoughts.

“I'm leaving now. Have fun.”

“Huh? Where are you going?”

“She's right. Kim Hajin, you're playing too.”

They both grabbed me and Rachel even handed me a cue.

“Don't run away. You're playing for a wish too.”

“Me too?”

“Of course.”

They prepared to go all out.

“Uh... okay.”

I agreed to quickly stomp them and leave since Spartan didn't seem to be in a hurry.

“Then I'll go first.”

I chalked my cue tip, but they didn't even pay attention to me.

“I'm curious how good you are, former knight commander.”

“I'm curious too.”

“Please teach me.”

“I don't know if you're good enough to be my disciple.”

“Annoying. Is that a tactic?”

“Please, why would I need to stoop so low against a beginner?”

“...”

Little did they know, they wouldn't even have the chance to show off.

“I'm going.”

I planned on ending it in one turn.

Chapter 311

Virtual Reality Containing the Truth (1)

“...”

“...”

Rachel and Jin Sahyuk sat in the royal palace’s reception room in shock. They never got to use the pool table or cue sticks in front of them. The game had instantly ended.

Neither of them could remember how many points they played for. They didn’t even want to think about how the game unfolded.

Kim Hajin, the man responsible for this mess, instructed Rachel to give Jin Sahyuk some skill books and told Jin Sahyuk to follow Rachel. Then he left the royal palace without looking back.

Everything felt futile.

“This game shouldn’t be that easy.”

Jin Sahyuk muttered and placed her cue stick on the table.

Hit too hard and the ball breaks. Hit too weak and the ball loses its course. They couldn’t use magic power, so pool became even more difficult for superhumans who possessed above average strength.

Tak!

She properly posed and struck the cue ball. The ball hit the first target, bounced against the wall, and hit the second.

“I’m in good condition today. Can’t believe the game ended before I got to play. Oi, you...?”

Jin Sahyuk casually turned to the side only to be shocked by Rachel. The princess looked as if her soul had left.

“Are you crying?”

“Eh? N-No.”

Kim Hajin didn’t know, but Rachel took great pride in this game as the three time winner of Crevon’s pool tournament. Rachel had reigned as queen of billiards for a long time with her delicate technique developed from dealing with spirits.

“It doesn’t matter anymore. Please follow me.”

The shocked Rachel beckoned to Jin Sahyuk so they could check the skill books as Kim Hajin instructed.

“Sure.” Jin Sahyuk willingly followed her.

“Special and basic skills, right?” Rachel walked ahead and asked.

“Yeah, something that will be useful in real life. Got anything good?”

“There should be since this is the royal palace.”

They walked down the hallway and arrived at the library that only royal family members or close associates could access.

“Come in.”

“Oh...”

Jin Sahyuk expressed awe at the huge library and its high ceiling. Every single carefully carved bookshelf looked like a masterpiece. Of course, they couldn’t compare to Plerion.

“Why don’t you look around and see if anything catches your eye?”

Jin Sahyuk did as Rachel instructed and slowly walked around while skimming books. Skill books, history books, magic books, educational books, etc. This library contained everything.

She spent some time studying various skills and thought most of them would be useless, but they all seemed interesting.

“Excuse me, Shin Jahyuk.” Rachel suddenly called her.

“Mmm?”

Jin Sahyuk responded with her eyes still on a book.

“Um...” Rachel hesitated.

Jin Sahyuk found it strange and raised her head at Rachel. Like that, 10 seconds passed.

Finally, Rachel asked with a small sigh.

“What kind of relationship do you have with Hajin?”

“Hmm? Uh... nothing, I guess.”

Jin Sahyuk already knew Kim Hajin’s secret. She had learned about synchronization from Bell. Kim Hajin would change once she managed to increase his synchronization rate.

“For now.”

She added with a meaningful smile.

* * *

I returned to the Genkelope's Vessel roaming above the Genkelope zone on the 16th floor. They continued their mission to recapture the zone.

"Welcome back commander."

Horner came out of the commander's office where he had been observing the land below. I welcomed him with a smile.

"Good to see you. And my guest?"

"She's waiting in the VIP lounge."

Today, I would deliver the [Ceremonial Descent Robe] to Medea. She would be my last guest in the Tower of Wish.

"Okay, thanks."

I headed to the VIP lounge as the crew warmly welcomed me wherever I went. I held a beautifully adorned box and opened the door. As expected, Medea waited for me inside.

"You're finally here."

She looked at me with a surly expression. I didn't mind since I went past the deadline. I smiled and held out the gift box.

"I put in a lot of effort to make this."

"Well, even though you're late..."

Medea stomped up with her face glimmering in joy. She couldn't hide her desire.

"Give it."

I had to ask one last thing before handing this over. "Are you planning on descending soon?"

“Probably?” Medea nonchalantly nodded with her arms crossed.

“And you haven’t forgotten our promise, right?”

“Promise?”

I took out the copy of [Heynckes’s Dagger].

“Oh, that?”

We swore an oath over this dagger to never betray humanity and help humans at all costs. I couldn’t risk having Medea run away like the former Nine Stars, Oh Jaemin.

“Of course, I haven’t.”

Medea nodded with a smile. I felt glad since Greek mythology mentioned Medea several times as a great sorceress.

“I don’t want to see the world I’m going to live in fall apart either.”

A person of such caliber would be of great help.

* * *

I left the tower after delivering the robe. Spartan informed me that Yi Yeonjun went to France, so I teleported to Paris. More precisely, I went to the Champ de Mars where the iconic Eiffel Tower stood. I planned on observing Yi Yeonjun from there. However...

[★ Hosting the Gate of Glory’s 3rd preliminary round ★] [Welcome to Paris.] [Essence of the Strait’s Paris branch welcomes you!] [Heroes, please join us at the Eiffel Tower!] [We love you Kim Suho ♥] [Hero discount...]

“What’s going on?”

Paris seemed to be in the middle of a celebration. The city remained brightly lit late at night. Parades and carnivals happened everywhere.

They seem excited to host the 3rd preliminary round and big banners in Korean could be seen everywhere.

“Is it worth getting this excited?”

This qualification tournament’s global attention felt excessive as if Paris would host the World Cup. I began searching for Yi Yeonjun under the bright lights.

“Where is he?”

I couldn’t spot him and relied on Spartan’s vision again. Then I found him underground.

“What the...”

The man next to Yi Yeonjun looked familiar. No, more than just familiar. He always switched sides on a whim and acted notoriously fickle. However, he never accomplished anything like Team Rocket.

“Team Rocket? I mean Lancaster?”

I eavesdropped on their conversation.

— I offer you England.

As expected, Lancaster wanted to scheme against England again. He sure kept at it.

— I have top-secret information about British national security as well as other confidential documents. With this, you can turn England into a second Pandemonium. The class 1 security codes can neutralize the entire British system and disable all their shields.

Yi Yeonjun silently stared at him. Lancaster thought he sensed greed in Yi Yeonjun’s nonchalant expression and offered a proposal.

— I only want one thing. Please destroy the British royal family.

Lancaster claimed to know top-secret information, but only Yi Yeonjun concerned me right now. I took out my smartwatch and opened the Violet Times.

*[Violet Times] [Investigator Yoo Jinhyuk has completed your request.]
[Here is the flash drive containing information about Yi Yeonjun's past.]
[Please pay the complete amount in two weeks.]*

A small portal appeared above the smartwatch and I placed my hand inside to pull out Yoo Jinhyuk's flash drive. Then...

"What are you doing here?" A familiar voice struck my eardrums and I looked up in shock.

"You scared me."

Cheok Jungeyong smirked and placed his hand on my shoulder.

"It's been a while."

"You're right, but why are you here Cheok Jungyeong?"

"Me? They're hosting the 3rd preliminary round or something. That's what I'm here for."

"Alone?"

"Yep, fun things should be done alone."

"Mmm."

I nodded and turned back to the flash drive and Yoo Jinhyuk's message.

[Yoo Jinhyuk: I've put together the most important information regarding Yi Yeonjun's past. I even included it in a flash drive as a gesture of goodwill for such a VIP customer.]

[Directions: Infuse your magic power into the flash drive and insert it into a virtual reality capsule or virtual reality helmet.]

[I recommend a whole body capsule instead of a helmet for a more engaging experience.]

[Yoo Jinhyuk's Flash Drive] — A flash drive containing the extracted past.

"Mmm."

So he could do something like this.

Yoo Jinhyuk delivered it as a flash drive so his customers could experience the same things.

"Oi, what's that? Looks sort of fun." Cheok Jungyeong shoved his head towards me.

"Nothing. It's just..."

I prepared to change the subject when an idea suddenly crossed my mind. No one said this flash drive would only work for one person. More than two people could simultaneously play a game or watch a video with the party option in a whole body capsule.

"Cheok Jungyeong?"

"Hm? What?"

"Do you know Yi Yeonjun?"

Cheok Jungyeong slightly frowned. "No, not really. I just know he used to be the Chameleon Troupe's former leader and also Boss' savior."

Cheok Jungyeong honestly replied as I looked down at the flash drive. He didn't have any prior relationship with Yi Yeonjun and even seemed disgruntled by the former leader's presence. Then...

"Cheok Jungyeong, follow me."

“Eh? Why?”

“This...” I held up the flash drive.

“You said it looked fun, so let’s look at it together.”

“Hmm.” He folded his arms and pretended to be uninterested, but soon smiled and came closer.

“Where can we look at it?”

“Right over there.”

I pointed at [Capsule de Mars], the largest capsule cafe and one of the most famous tourist attractions in France.

“Capsule? So that thing runs on a capsule?”

“That’s right. Let’s go.”

“I’ve never used a capsule before.”

I headed to the capsule cafe with a confused Cheok Jungyeong.

“Welcome.”

I paid the cafe owner and borrowed two capsules. An extra large one for Cheok Jungyeong and a medium one for me. I sent Cheok Jungyeong a friend request after we went online.

“Cheok Jungyeong, are you ready?”

— Uh... wait... this is so damn complicated... Ah, there. I accepted your friend request and party invitation. Am I all set?

“Yeah, give me a moment. I’m putting in the flash drive.”

I infused stigma’s magic power into it.

“Here we go.”

Then I plugged it into the capsule.

Chwaaaa—

“What the...”

A mysterious light shot out from the capsule and enveloped my entire body.

* * *

Meanwhile, Kim Suho and Chae Nayun busily played games in the capsule cafe. They made up the excuse to relieve stress and relax before the 3rd preliminary round, but actually came because of Chae Nayun. Such an avid gamer couldn't pass up the opportunity to visit [Capsule de Mars], a world famous capsule cafe.

“Uhahaha. Kim Suho, you sucker! You're terrible at games. I can't even keep track of how many times you've lost!”

Chae Nayun teased him inside the virtual world after he lost again. Kim Suho scratched his neck in embarrassment.

— Ah, this is kinda hard.

“Who's up next?”

Currently, they played a game called Gladiator of the Century. Chae Nayun won against Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, and Yun Seung-Ah. She ranked number 1 for a reason.

— Nayun, can't we just play something else?

Yi Jiyeon suggested after their duel wore her out.

— Good idea. We should play something else. I'm getting tired of this.

Shin Jonghak agreed.

“Something else?”

Chae Nayun looked at her friend list. Her online friends included Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Yun Seung-Ah, Yi Jiyeon, and... Yoo Yeonha?

[Yoo Yeonha – Playing at Capsule de Mars, Paris]

“What the... Yoo Yeonha is here?”

— Yoo Yeonha? The Yoo Yeonha?

Yun Seung-Ah widened her eyes as a hologram.

“Yeah, it says she’s playing at Capsule de Mars. She must be here in Paris. Unni, can we include Yeonha and play GTA 3 on 3?”

— Sure, anything but Gladiator of the Century.

Kim Suho and the others nodded in agreement.

“Okay then.”

Chae Nayun invited Yoo Yeonha to her party. Yoo Yeonha briefly hesitated before accepting. Five holograms appeared in Chae Nayun’s common area.

“Hey, Yeonha.”

— Hey, so you came too Nayun.

Yoo Yeonha looked at Chae Nayun with her arms crossed.

“Of course, but why are you here?”

— I came to Paris as an association member. I have some documents to go over regarding the capsules.

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled and showed Chae Nayun the stack of documents. Chae Nayun felt sick at the mere sight of them.

“Damn, put that down and let’s play.”

— Sorry, I’m busy.

“Hey, this is your chance to rest. There’s more to life than just work! You don’t have to take care of that right now.”

Yun Seung-Ah, Kim Suho, and Shin Jonghak also chimed in.

— Why don’t you rest a bit, chief officer? I’m a guild leader and even I’m slacking off. You’re making me feel guilty.

— Exactly, take a break.

— They’re right, Yeonha. Just play one game.

— What did you say?

Yoo Yeonha glared disapprovingly at Shin Jonghak, but heaved a sigh and nodded.

— Fine, I’ll play just one game. I need to talk to Jonghak anyways.

“Yay! Okay, wait a second.”

Chae Nayun pulled up their next game, Grand Theft Auto XS.

“Let’s go.”

[Asking party members to join...] [All members have entered.] [Accessing Grand Theft Auto XS.]

Their game began to load up when—

Chwaaaaa...

A giant ray of light swallowed them and Chae Nayun closed her eyes.

“...?”

Chae Nayun, Yun Seung-Ah, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Jiyeon, Kim Suho, and Shin Jonghak found themselves in an unfamiliar area.

“Wow... Nayun, what’s this game called again? It feels so real. Ah, my eyes still hurt.”

Yi Jiyeon remarked.

Kim Suho and Yoo Yeonha also turned to Chae Nayun for an answer.

“...”

Chae Nayun became speechless. She had played [Grand Theft Auto XS] for an astounding 200 hours, so their current situation confused her.

“Where are we?”

[Grand Theft Auto XS] definitely didn’t look like this.

Chapter 312

Virtual Reality Containing the Truth (2)

“What the...”

Chae Nayun looked around in awe. They stood over a barren field at night, but she could see neon lights and tall buildings in the distance.

“This is some amazing technology. It feels so real.”

Yoo Yeonha’s remark startled Chae Nayun.

Did they go through a major update or something? No, I would’ve known if they did.

“Right, but are we in the slums?”

Her comrades continued talking as Chae Nayun tried to make sense of the situation.

“Slums?”

Kim Suho widened his eyes and Yun Seung-Ah nodded with a smile.

“You guys wouldn’t know, but neon cities like this used to exist on the outskirts of Seoul and Suwon. Most of them were in the slums.”

“Of course, you’d know since you’re in your thirties.”

Yoo Yeonha caught her off guard.

“W-What?” Yun Seung-Ah hissed like a cat, but the younger girl simply shrugged.

“It’s true.”

“Sure, but... You don’t have to point that out, chief officer.”

“Pouch!”

Chae Nayun suddenly shouted and everyone glanced at her.

“Phew.”

She sighed in relief and held a pouch in her hand.

Yun Seung-Ah tilted her head. “Hm? What’s that Nayun?”

“Ah, this is the inventory in the form of a pouch. It’s common for open world games like GTA, I mean Grand Theft Auto, to call their inventory something else.”

Chae Nayun smirked and checked inside her pouch. “My level is high, so this pouch should be able to hold 300 kg.”

However, the maximum capacity of her pouch only reached 3 kg. Chae Nayun became silent.

“Pouch! Wow, it really works!”

“Pouch.”

Kim Suho and Yun Seung-Ah also summoned their pouches. They examined it in detail, mesmerized by the technology.

“Enough with the chitchat. We should get going since I don’t have much time. I have to finish this quickly and go back,” Yoo Yeonha announced.

“...”

I have to finish this quickly and go back. Yoo Yeonha's words instilled a sense of unease in Chae Nayun.

"Okay, let's get moving. How do I take screenshots? I want to upload some photos on social media."

"You should seriously take a break from social media, Yi Jiyeon."

The party moved towards the neon city. Chae Nayun began walking with Shin Jonghak by her side.

"So we just destroy things and fight when we get there, right? At least that's what everyone does on YouTube."

"Huh? Oh... N-No, be quiet and stay calm."

"Isn't that what this game is about?"

"Ugh, just leave me alone."

She deserted Shin Jonghak and Yun Seung-Ah approached her.

"Nayun, how do you level up in this game? I'm having trouble controlling my magic power. I think my level is too low."

"Huh? Um... give me a second."

Logout, logout, logout, logout... Chae Nayun muttered to herself dozens of times, but the logout window and the settings page wouldn't appear.

"Dammit. I'm totally screwed."

She grumbled and finally gave up.

"Oh? Look, it's a sign." Kim Suho led the way and discovered it first.

[Suwon Area A]

“Suwon Area A... It’s just as you said, guild leader. This is Suwon.”

“Really? Interesting. This map must be based on Suwon before the administrative changes if they’re still calling this Area A.”

The party passed the sign and entered the city.

Neon lights lined the street along with market stalls, pubs, red lanterns, and motels. The city appeared quite enigmatic up close.

Yoo Yeonha gazed across the unfamiliar cityscape.

“Nayun, what year does this game take place in?”

“Huh? Oh... we might have to visit the PC cafe or motel over there to find out.”

“How about money? How do we make money?”

“Eh? Money...?”

A group of men suddenly jumped out of the back alley. They held knives, baseball bats, and wooden sticks.

“Uhahaha! You!”

A man wearing a bandana seemed to be the leader and came forward.

“Hand over everything you have if you value your life!”

The party silently stared at him and Chae Nayun pointed at the thugs.

“There it is. Money!”

* * *

I opened my eyes to a faded ceiling and felt a bit hazy. An unbearable pain suddenly struck the right side of my body.

“...!”

It came from my right arm and fully woke me up. Only then did I realize what happened.

First, I delivered the robe to Medea at the Tower of Wish. Then I teleported to Paris where I received a flash drive from Yoo Sihyuk containing Yi Yeonjun's past. Next, I went to [Capsule de Mars] to check the contents. The flash drive suddenly absorbed stigma's magic power when I plugged it in. It happened so quickly I couldn't control the flow of magic power.

“You're finally up?” Cheok Jungyeong's deep voice rang out.

“Huuu.”

I sighed and examined my arm. It looked so bruised I couldn't recognize stigma's symbol or move my arm at all.

“Oi, you okay?”

“I'm fine. By the way, where are we?”

“I don't know. Some sort of shrine or church. Why are we here?”

Shrine? Church? I tilted my head when a sharp pain shot through my right arm again. The familiar magic power inside stigma grew faint.

“Ugh... Logout!” I shouted to escape from the pain, but nothing happened.

“Video information, pause, connection status...”

The other system functions also failed as if they had been intentionally blocked.

“What's going on?”

“That's what I'd like to know. What are you doing?”

Something felt off. A recorded video definitely wouldn't feel like this. Yoo Jinhyuk's flash drive and stigma must've caused some sort of reaction when they fused. Overclock had also been activated judging from my arm's condition. That must be why Cheok Jungyeong also got swept up in this.

Was I too naive? Should I have been more careful before plugging in the flash drive? No, I never would've imagined something like this could happen. More importantly, I believed in my luck. I still didn't know if my luck saved me or caused this turn of events.

"Oi, you hurt your head or something?"

Cheok Jungyeong frowned. Beep— The message Yoo Jinhyuk left popped up in the air.

Yoo Jinhyuk's Message: [Dear customer, I noticed a strange relationship between Yi Yeonjun and the current Chameleon Troupe's boss while investigating Yi Yeonjun's past.] [I believed you might be interested, so I focused on those two.] [My messages will arrive in the order I intended.]

"Oi?"

I turned to Cheok Jungyeong and got up. The surroundings resembled a church more than a shrine.

"Looks like we're in a church lounge. Follow me Cheok Jungyeong."

We stepped outside. A chapel, a nursery, and a lounge surrounded the large, barren field. I could hear kids laughing and talking in the nursery from where I stood.

"Hey, over there."

Cheok Jungyeong suddenly slapped my shoulder as I examined the nursery. He pointed at the field with a serious look and I turned towards that direction too.

"Ah..."

I couldn't help but exclaim. A child sat alone in the bleachers at the corner of the field.

"She's the one, right?" Cheok Jungyeong asked while stroking his chin.

"Yeah." I nodded.

Disheveled black hair and dull eyes. She stared straight ahead as if waiting for someone to come back. My heart ached just looking at her all alone in the cold.

"That's Boss."

* * *

Chae Nayun and the others arrived at a motel somewhere in Area A. The room could barely fit 6 people, but it felt less stuffy after Kim Suho and Yun Seung-Ah left for a walk.

"This place has a lot of robbers, but only in the alleys. The main street has shops and pubs, so it's not as bad as Pandemonium. I wouldn't say the level of difficulty is too high."

Yoo Yeonha analyzed the game while looking down at the street from the window.

"Nayun, shouldn't we run around the city to receive missions? Like main quest and side quests?" Yi Jiyeon excitedly asked.

"Huh? Oh, y-yeah. Sure, but the thing is..."

"Oh, right."

Clap—

Yoo Yeonha suddenly clapped. "Do you think this computer works?"

"Uh... I-I don't know. Try turning it on."

Yoo Yeonha examined the dusty computer full of curiosity. “This is so old. How do I even turn it on?”

A desktop felt quite unfamiliar. She managed to find the power button after carefully investigating the computer case.

“Woah, it’s on.”

Vroom— The screen lit up after a buzzing sound. The others stood next to her and watched. Vroom— Vroom— Vroom—

“...”

“Yaawn.”

“It’s so slow.”

They all stared at the screen for 3 entire minutes. Finally, it finished booting and Yoo Yeonha checked the date.

“December 18, 2006?”

Yoo Yeonha hadn’t even been born yet.

“Woah, so we’re in the 2000s?” Yi Jiyeon exclaimed with a big smile.

“Yeah, but the mid-2000s is... a weird setting for a game.”

Superhumans began appearing in the 70s and 80s after the tumultuous 60s. Korea recaptured its stolen territories in the 90s with the help of superhumans and first established the hero system. In the early 2000s, Korea experienced major growth in technology as the population of heroes also grew. However, the period between 2000-2010 simply served as a transition. The gap between the rich and poor widened with technology’s rapid advancement. The slums increased beyond government authority and many considered it a shameful era.

“At least the details seem accurate...”

Yoo Yeonha turned off the computer after surfing the web. Then she looked around for Shin Jonghak and found him training.

“Jonghak, do you want to go for a walk?”

“A walk?”

“Yeah, we can look around the neighborhood and see what there is. We still have some money from the robbers, so we can buy things too.”

Shin Jonghak seemed reluctant until Chae Nayun intervened.

“Sounds fun! Go, go!”

Chae Nayun pulled him towards Yoo Yeonha and acted strange, but they left without saying much.

Only Yi Jiyeon remained with her. She looked at Chae Nayun with her big, round eyes.

“Haaa...” Chae Nayun sighed and fell onto the bed with her hands over her head.

“Nayun?”

“I think I need some sleep. Why don’t you go outside and play?”

Yi Jiyeon nodded, but sat in front of the motel computer instead of leaving. She had never seen this type of operating system before, but quickly got the hang of it.

Like that, 3 hours passed.

Chapter 313

Virtual Reality Containing the Truth (3)

“Mmm.”

Yi Jiyeon pulled away from the computer and stretched. Yoo Yeonha and Shin Jonghak returned at that precise moment. They brought back a dagger, spear, sword, and other weapons.

“Here, this weapon is for you Nayun.”

She received the [Typical Iron Sword] without putting up a fight. Kiik — The door opened again and Kim Suho and Yun Seung-Ah also came back. They handed out snacks and food to the rest of them with a smile. Then the group spent some time eating snacks and chewing gum.

15 minutes later...

Yoo Yeonha chewed on some dried squid legs while pretending like it didn't suit her taste.

“Nayun, how do we log out of this game?” she finally asked.

“...!”

Logout. The word surprised Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha asked again.

“What's wrong?”

“H-Huh? What?”

“I said, how do we log out of this game?”

“Um... Uh...” Chae Nayun glanced at her friends all looking at her.

“I don’t know... How did I do it before?”

Yoo Yeonha frowned. “Stop joking and tell me. It’s already been 4 hours. I have to attend an event soon.”

“R-Really? It’s been 4 hours already? Time sure flies.”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha glared at her and Chae Nayun shuddered in fear.

“So? How do I log out?”

“...”

“Nayun?”

“Huh? Oh... that’s...”

“Say it.”

“...”

Chae Nayun shut her mouth as Yoo Yeonha scowled at her. Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Yi Jiyeon, and Yun Seung-Ah all focused on her.

“T-That’s... uh...”

Her heart pounded and her breathing grew heavy. Cold sweat trickled down her back and her head spun. She began to feel dizzy. Gulp. Chae Nayun swallowed her saliva and... Kooong! She smashed her head on the floor.

“Sorry! I have no idea where we are! I don’t know how to log out of this thing!”

A cry of despair filled the motel room.

* * *

[Nameless Nursery]

“She’s not doing anything,” Cheok Jungyeong noted.

“You’re right,” I replied.

“Are you sure that’s Boss?” Cheok Jungyeong asked.

“Yes, I’m sure,” I replied again.

We silently stared at the girl. About 3 minutes passed and Cheok Jungyeong leered at me.

“So you’re here to spy on the young Boss?”

“No, I’m here to investigate Yi Yeonjun.”

“Yi Yeonjun?”

“Yeah, he doesn’t seem to like me for some reason.”

“Really?”

“Yes, but I didn’t expect this to happen.”

“Hmm.” Cheok Jungyeong stroked his chin.

“So you’re saying that flash drive and your magic power responded to each other and created a whole new world?”

I spent the last 3 hours explaining this phenomenon to Cheok Jungyeong.

“It’s not an entirely new world. It’s just a fully manifested virtual reality based on data of the past. You got most of it right.”

“Uh, so how do we get out of here?”

“That... we’ll have to see.”

I stared at Boss as she waited for someone. Yoo Jinhyuk probably only wanted me to see the most important events, so something would eventually happen.

“Oi, but what if we spend so much time in here that everyone outside ends up dead?” Cheok Jungeyong worriedly asked.

“Don’t worry. We’re inside a virtual reality, so the concept of time only applies to our brains.”

“What the heck does that mean?”

“It means time flows differently here. It’s okay even if we stay for a long time.”

I could somewhat tell based on my connection with Spartan. I couldn’t pin down the exact ratio, but time passed a lot quicker here than in the real world.

“I’ll kill you if you’re lying.”

“Sure.”

A luxury sedan suddenly appeared and Boss reacted to the headlights. She stood up with a faint smile.

“Hide.”

We hid as best as possible. The sedan glided across the field in the dark. Soon, a man and a woman got out. Boss nervously walked up to them.

Then I received Yoo Jinhyuk’s message.

[Yoo Jinhyuk's Message] [The man and woman are the girl's parents.]

The man approached Boss first. He stopped in front of her and frowned.

— I told you not to come outside.

I already knew this part of her past since it came from my original settings.

— Why are you here?

Boss weakly smiled despite her father's cold demeanor. She seemed happy just to see him.

— Um, this.

She took something out of her pocket. A bracelet made of flowers and shadows. She probably made it herself. However, her father suddenly clenched his fist and... Tak! He smacked the bracelet away.

— I don't need anything made with that cursed power of yours, you little freak.

“That bastard—”

I grabbed Cheok Jungyeong's wrist and tried to calm him down.

“Shh. It's all just a virtual reality.”

Her mother also came forward with eyes full of disdain and clicked her tongue.

— You really are a cursed child. Haven't I told you not to pick flowers? Don't you feel bad for the flowers?

Their cruelty made me doubt whether they really gave birth to her. The couple trampled on Boss' bracelet and headed towards the nursery. Boss stared at their backs as they left, but didn't cry. Her expression didn't change as she picked up her bracelet and... Grumble

— She began walking towards the nursery.

“Hmm.”

“Those bastards. I'm gonna tear their stomachs open and jump rope with their intestines.”

“Ugh, be quiet.”

I placed my hand over Cheok Jungyeong's mouth and stood up. I felt bad, but these events had already happened. Another message arrived.

[Yoo Jinhyuk's Message] [Find out where her parents came from and you'll find Yi Yeonjun.]

Yoo Jinhyuk left quite useful messages. Ssssk—

“...?”

Sssk— I felt a presence behind the bushes across the field. No, not just a presence.

[User]

They had a marker above their head that read, [User].

“User?”

What's that?

I widened my eyes and activated my gift, [Observation and Reading].

[User ID: GreasyPaper] [Play Time: 7236 hours]

“Why is there a user here?”

A realization struck me like a hammer to the head. The thought that crossed my mind gave me goosebumps.

“Mmm. I see a couple of people over there. They don’t look hostile.”

Even Cheok Jungyeong’s voice sounded distant. I began to think. Like regular PC cafes, the [Capsule de Mars] used a shared public network. The number of customers at the cafe reached over 1000 at the time. Maybe when I connected the flash drive to the capsule, everyone at the cafe...

“Uh, wait. I think we have a huge problem.”

I scratched my neck. The other information marker also bothered me. That user’s play time read: 7236 hours. A problem with the time axis might’ve also occurred.

“Uh, I—”

I only just realized the scale of the disaster I had caused. I got up while ruffling my hair.

“Cheok Jungyeong?”

“Yeah.”

“You see those people over there?”

“You want me to catch them?” Cheok Jungyeong grinned and I shook my head.

“No, don’t catch them. Just politely ask them to—”

Cheok Jungyeong already raced across the field like a beast before I finished.

* * *

[Suwon Area A, Motel]

The sky glowed a dim blue in the early morning. The sun would rise, but the motel's atmosphere still felt dreary.

"I have to leave... I have to leave..."

"Sigh..."

Yoo Yeonha scratched the wall in agony while Kim Suho and Yun Seung-Ah sighed at the thought of the 3rd preliminary round that would begin in 3 days. Shin Jonghak tried to comfort Chae Nayun.

"..."

Chae Nayun couldn't face her friends. She still didn't know what caused this situation, but she had forced them to play. Chae Nayun sighed again and her gaze drifted to Yi Jiyeon in front of the computer.

"Jiyeon, did you find anything?"

"Mmm? Oh, no. I'm just looking at blogs and stuff."

"Ah... yeah?"

Blogs? So she's just killing time.

Chae Nayun suddenly recalled something as if lightning struck and she widened her eyes. Blog. The words her precious person once said a long time ago still lingered in her heart.

— I'm going to take lots of pictures of you and your brother and post them on my blog.

She could still clearly hear that voice.

"Ah!"

Chae Nayun jumped to her feet and ran to Yi Jiyeon.

“Show me. Show me!”

“You scared me. What’s the big deal?”

“Just show me.”

Chae Nayun saw the blog site on the computer screen. She closed her eyes and rubbed her temples. What was mom’s ID again? She buried her head in her hands. Think!

“Ah! Bellflower!”

“Huh? What’s Bellflower—”

“It’s an ID! Quick, search for Bellflower!”

Yi Jiyeon tilted her head, but did as instructed. Only one user had that nickname and Yi Jiyeon clicked on the link.

“...”

“Ah...”

Chae Nayun’s heart suddenly stopped and so did Yi Jiyeon’s.

“This is...”

A streak of tears trickled down Chae Nayun’s cheek.

“What’s wrong? Chae Nayun, Yi Jiyeon?”

The rest of the party gathered around the computer. Shin Jonghak came first, followed by Kim Suho, Yun Seung-Ah, and Yoo Yeonha. All of them fell silent when they saw the computer screen.

“...”

[Bellflower] [●Currently Online] [Blog of eternal happiness. I write about my son.]

Photos of a young Chae Jinyoon filled Bellflower's blog.

"Ah..."

Chae Nayun muttered in a daze. Her tears flowed and a sad smile spread across her lips.

"They're alive."

Kim Suho and everyone else looked at Chae Nayun. Shin Jonghak stretched his arm towards Chae Nayun, but Yoo Yeonha stopped him.

"My mom and brother too."

"Yeah..."

Yun Seung-Ah stood next to Chae Nayun and hugged her. Chae Nayun stared at the photo of her mom and her brother smiling together while resting her head on Yun Seung-Ah's shoulder.

"Hey Jiyeon, does this have a live chat feature?"

"Hm? Oh yeah. Wait a sec—"

Their peace didn't last long.

Chwaaak—

Silver wires danced outside and shattered the windows before spreading across the room.

"What the..."

The party quickly grabbed their weapons, but the enemy acted faster.

"Shh. Don't move. This is just a game, not reality. I'll kill you if you move.”

The voice threatened them as a sharp wire stopped in front of their necks.

“This...”

Kim Suho had seen these silver wires before. He clenched his teeth and glared at the shattered window. The man hidden under the robe leaned against the wall.

“You’re...”

Kim Suho recognized his eyes and familiar build. They had been enemies ever since they first met in the Tower of Wish. Only the Chamelon Troupe’s seat of silver, Kaita, used steel wires as his main weapon.

“Long time no see, Kim Suho.”

Kaita smirked and a [User] marker floated above his head.

“Are you the one behind all this?”

Kaita shrugged at Kim Suho’s threatening gaze.

“Nope. I have no idea what’s going on either, so don’t glare at me like that. After all, I’m only here to help. You guys don’t even know what this game is about, right?”

Tap— Tap—

“FYI, at least 1500 other users besides you and me came here. About 300 in Suwon and 50 of them were aiming at you guys until just now.”

Kaita explained. Then he sat on the nearest bed and continued.

“All 50 of them ran away because of me! I helped you guys out. Do you understand? Now stop with those faces.”

Kaita smirked in the center of the six heroes that kept glaring at him.

“I’ll take that as a no. Shall we just continue talking then?”

Chapter 314

The Virtual Reality Containing Truth (4)

[Motel in Suwon Area A]

“First of all, I don’t know why I’m here either.”

Kaita continued explaining in the motel room full of wires. He told the truth, but his audience didn’t believe him as evidenced by their faces. Kaita shrugged, feeling somewhat helpless.

“It’s true. I’m too great to be stuck in this shabby past.”

“Why don’t you free us first?” Kim Suho suggested. He sounded calm, unlike Shin Jonghak, who still struggled with the wires.

Kaita nodded after a brief silence. “Fine, but only you.”

Tak! He snapped his fingers and the wires binding Kim Suho returned to his gauntlet. Kim Suho stood straight again and looked around at the silver wires stretched like a spiderweb. He would’ve easily destroyed these wires under normal circumstances, but found it difficult to control his magic power in this virtual reality.

“Secondly, all of you sure are lucky.” Kaita kept speaking.

“I’ve lost count of how many damn years I’ve spent in this fake world, but you only just got here?”

“What are you talking about? Everyone arrived at different times?” Kim Suho asked with a frown.

“That’s right. Apparently, time outside flows much slower than here. It took me two years to figure that out. Others say this whole situation has something to do with brain science, virtual reality, and dimensional systems. Blah blah blah... I really couldn't care less."

Kaita sat on his wires with a smirk. "Would you like to work together?"

"Work together?" Kim Suho furrowed his brows in confusion. That didn't sound like something Kaita would say, so Kim Suho couldn't help but doubt him.

"Yeah, I just want to get the fuck out of here as soon as possible. I'm sick and tired of idiots settling for this fake world. I'd kill them all if I could."

Chwaaak! Kaita withdrew all his wires. Freed at last, the party took a minute to calm down before shifting their attention to Kaita and Kim Suho. Everyone remained silent while trying to figure out what to say. Yoo Yeonha broke the silence first.

"We should hear more, but..."

She smiled at Kaita. "You're a Chameleon Troupe member, no?"

"Hmm? You shouldn't mention that name so casually."

Kaita looked annoyed, but Yoo Yeonha didn't falter. She knew they fundamentally acted as thieves no matter how heinous their crimes. She could always bring up Black Lotus if things took a turn for the worse.

"Anyways, we need more information about this world and how to escape. We'll cooperate if necessary."

Time outside flows much slower than here. Yoo Yeonha regained her usual confidence thanks to this crucial piece of information. Kaita nodded with a smirk.

"Okay, but I'm only going to say this once. Listen carefully..."

[Office Building, Outskirts of Seoul]

Cheok Jungyeong and I left the church. We moved to our new base, an abandoned building near Boss' nursery, with our two new companions.

"Clean this place up and it'll be decent enough to use for the next couple of days."

The building featured 3 floors, each about 640 square feet. Spiderwebs and mold covered everywhere, but I didn't care.

"It's too damn filthy to clean."

Cheok Jungyeong, on the other hand, seemed irritated. Believe it or not, he cared quite deeply about hygiene.

"It'll only take an hour."

"Excuse me, hyungs?"

One of our new companions spoke. They had been beaten so badly I couldn't tell them apart from their faces. Only their different hairstyles gave them away. One sported a mohawk and the other had a shag.

"What do you... plan on doing from now on?" Mohawk carefully asked.

"I'm not sure," I softly replied. I didn't want to be harsh on them as the one responsible for this situation. In my defense, Cheok Jungyeong had beat them up.

"What have you two been doing until now?"

"We just tried to survive. Our base is GTA."

"Base? GTA?"

“Yes.”

Cheok Jungyeong and I frowned in confusion. Fortunately, our quick-witted companions explained.

“Oh, your base refers to the game you were playing when you first got dragged to this world. Our base is Grand Theft Auto.”

“Hmm... Could you explain from the top? From the very beginning?”

“Ah, of course.”

Mohawk began telling their story. “So about 300 days ago, wait, was it 300? Anyways, we were playing a game at a capsule cafe in Paris...”

They had been playing Grand Theft Auto XS at Capsule de Mars when a system message suddenly popped up. [You have been disconnected from the game]. Afterwards, they lost consciousness and found themselves in early 2000s Korea when they opened their eyes. Soon, they found out about a game-like feature called privilege in this world. However, user privileges depended on the genre of their base games and GTA turned out to be the worst.

“The privileges of GTA users are stealing, mugging, and those sorts of things. We chased after that sedan to rob them.”

Our two companions honestly told us everything.

“I see.”

“That’s our story. And... what are your bases?” Shag asked us.

“Huh? Oh... we’re...”

I shook my head after briefly hesitating. Mohawk told us his base game had reduced his physical abilities and gave him certain talents called privileges. However, Cheok Jungyeong moved the same as always half an hour ago. Maybe a little slower than usual, but by no means any weaker.

“I don’t think we have a base. We weren’t playing any games at the time, so our base must be reality.”

In other words, we came into this world without any limitations and possessed our full physical strength within the capsule’s limits.

“Wow... Oh, but the fact that new players are coming must mean this is an actual game being hosted somewhere.”

“No, you’re probably wrong about that.”

I shook my head. Each user probably arrived at different times because of me. Stigma must’ve spread out when I plugged in the flash drive. Those closest to me arrived at a similar time and those farther away probably traveled back in time. Cheok Jungyeong became an exception as my party member, but I couldn’t tell them all this and changed the subject.

“A lot of users must’ve also arrived.”

“Oh, no. The playable area covers half of Korea, but users only amount to about a thousand,” Mohawk informed us.

“Mmm... Are there different factions?”

“Only a few are worth noting. There’s the Gladiator Union with players from [Gladiator of the Century] and the Church Union with players from the [Holy Magical Battle]. However, the strongest is Silver Flash.”

“Silver Flash?”

“Yes, he’s terrifying. Nobody knows which game he came from. He uses silver threads as his main weapon and that thread—”

“Silver threads?” Cheok Jungyeong and I both frowned.

“Yes, his threads are made from steel,” Shag confirmed.

Cheok Jungyeong and I smiled at each other.

“What’s he doing here?”

“I wonder.”

I stretched with a grunt. An unexpected ally, though not exactly reliable, made me feel more comfortable.

“Anyways, it’s our first day here.”

I continued with a sigh. “So let’s clean up this place first.”

An hour should be enough to clean up this mess. Cheok Jungyeong looked at my right arm and asked, “Can you do it with just one arm?”

“One is more than enough.”

“And we’re not going to do anything about Boss?”

Cheok Jungyeong sounded worried and sympathetic. I picked up the broom and dustpan with a bitter smile.

“We have no choice for now. Let’s be extra nice to her when we return.”

We spent the next two hours cleaning the office. I definitely struggled with just one arm, but we quickly finished thanks to our companions.

“I appreciate the help.”

“No problem. Like we said, you can talk comfortably around us.”

Shag and Mohawk became our loyal supporters. They instinctively realized, maybe through Cheok Jungyeong, that their chances of survival would be better with us.

“Then could you go out and get us something to eat? Maybe a pot and a burner too. I’m a bit hungry.”

“Of course!”

“We’re on it!”

The two left as I looked out the window. The sunset’s glow poured in through the window.

Then Cheok Jungyeong asked, “So do you know how to get out of here?”

I nodded with a smile. “I do.”

“How?”

“It’s simple.”

The co-author messaged me the moment I got dragged into this virtual world. I just discovered it late because I lost consciousness when I first arrived.

[This is a message from the co-author. I assume you will be very confused.]
[This is a side arc to take a closer look at Boss’ past.] [Therefore, the logout feature will be reinstated once you observe at least one of the events that Yoo Jinhyuk has prepared.] [Do your best to witness the events.]

The first event would take place today as I read over Yoo Jinhyuk’s message.

Yoo Jinhyuk’s Message: [Tonight at 9 PM, track down the girl’s parents.]

“We’ll be able to return after we witness the relationship between Yi Yeonjun and Boss.”

This world would cease to exist once I witnessed what Yoo Jinhyuk wanted me to see. Of course, something could go wrong if the users intervened, but that seemed unlikely. After all, I had Cheok Jungyeong by my side.

“Their relationship?”

"Yes. It's 5 o'clock now, so we'll have to wait 4 more hours."

"Yeah?"

Cheok Jungyeong nonchalantly nodded and slumped on the floor next to me. Kooong— Even his simple act of sitting sounded loud. We slouched on the floor together and gazed at the sunset through the window.

Soon, Mohawk and Shag returned with some food and a burner.

* * *

Later that day, we tailed Boss' parents as Yoo Jinhyuk instructed and ran after their expensive sedan on the highway. Mohawk and Shag followed behind on a motorcycle.

"Look, they're stopping."

An hour passed and Boss' parents arrived at a building in Seoul. Cheok Jungyeong frowned as they drove to the underground parking lot.

"Do we need to follow them down there?"

"No, let's not risk it. We'll just watch from here."

"I can't see them from here."

"I can."

"What good is that for me?"

"Shh—"

I shushed him and widened my eyes. Master Sharpshooter seemed to work fine in this world as I peered through the building.

Boss' parents parked their car and took the elevator to the top floor.

Ding—

The elevator opened at the penthouse and revealed a robed man. I recognized him right away as Yi Yeonjun. Boss' parents approached him with big smiles.

— We're back, elder.

They bowed and respectfully addressed him. However, Yi Yeonjun said something quite cruel without even greeting them.

—...!

The parents froze in shock, but soon regained their composure and nodded as if they had heard it before. They had been preparing for this day.

I clenched my fists and my heart began pounding.

Then I received another message.

Yoo Jinhyuk's Message: [At first, the girl's parents were faithful devotees and benevolent philanthropists.] [They tried to understand their daughter's dark powers.] [However, Yi Yeonjun brainwashed them. His lies and schemes led the couple to believe their daughter's powers were a curse.] [He ruined her family.] [Today, Yi Yeonjun ordered them to kill their daughter.] [He knew about the girl's enormous potential and planned all of this to win her trust.] [The couple will now try to murder their daughter and you'll soon witness the consequences of their actions.] [Now, please watch until the end.]

[Nothing is impossible — Yoo Jinhyuk, Investigator]

A cruel story like this never happened in my original setting.

— We'll get rid of her today.

The couple replied and I swallowed a sigh. It traveled down my throat and mixed with my rage. I brushed my hair back with trembling hands.

“Cheok Jungyeong...”

“What?”

He nonchalantly responded as I kept my eyes on the building.

“Looks like we might have to kill someone.”

Boss’ parents went back to the parking lot and got into their car. They planned on heading back to their daughter and carrying out Yi Yeonjun’s orders.

“Will you help me?”

“Sure, why not?” Cheok Jungyeong casually nodded.

“Really?”

“You’ve always been right, so I believe in you.”

The couple’s sedan left the building.

“Let’s follow them.”

“Okay.”

We put on our hoods and chased after the car. Wooong— Their engine roared and we ran after them. Chwaak! A silver wire stretched out from the right side of the road and twisted around the sedan.

“Huh?”

We stopped in surprise. KOOONG! The wire crushed the car and slammed it against the ground. KWAAANG! Then the car flipped upside down and exploded.

“...?”

Silence filled the air after the devastating car accident. I might've thought this actually happened in the past if that man didn't suddenly fall from the sky.

“What the... What's he doing?”

Cheok Jungyeong chuckled in disbelief. The Chameleon Troupe's seat of silver, Kaita, gracefully landed on the wrecked car. He withdrew his wire with a smile and he leaned into the car seat before whispering something.

“Oi!”

Cheok Jungyeong's thunderous voice rang out. Startled, Kaita turned towards us and widened his eyes.

“Cheok Jungyeong and... you too black?”

He muttered in a daze.

I knew this Kaita came from the present because he called me black.

“Yep, it's me. What are you doing here?”

As Cheok Jungyeong approached Kaita...

KWAAAAANG!

A magic power explosion occurred at Yi Yeonjun's building and I sensed multiple magic powers. The sudden explosion caused us to look back in surprise.

Chapter 315

Virtual Reality Containing the Truth (5)

After 3 years, Kaita finally discovered a way to escape this perfect reproduction of a past Korea. The solution turned out to be quite simple, yet complicated. He just had to destroy this world's core. The core could be a person, location, or object. However, Kaita knew for a fact it was a person thanks to his base game, Isekai Dating Simulator.

His privilege gave him eyes that could identify the [Importance] and [Level of Difficulty] of people in this world. His physical abilities also remained quite high because his base game took place in a fantasy world.

Eventually, Kaita found someone he thought could be this world's core. That man possessed an [Incalculable] importance and a [Near Impossible] difficulty. His entire existence practically screamed to be the core. Kaita knew him well and had lived with him for a long time. He regarded Yi Yeonjun as his savior.

Kaita couldn't bring himself to kill his savior even in a virtual world. He also hesitated because he didn't possess the strength to face Yi Yeonjun alone, so he watched from a distance while diligently training.

Soon, Kaita realized Yi Yeonjun might not be the person he thought. He began to feel betrayed while observing his former boss.

The Chameleon Troupe also existed in this world. They acted like vicious criminals and obtained whatever they wanted through violence. Their cruelty didn't bother Kaita since he grew up surrounded by blood, violence, and death.

However, Yi Yeonjun had destroyed Boss' family because he wanted her for himself. He sought to control Boss' life.

Seeing Yi Yeonjun carry out such a heinous scheme made Kaita wonder about himself. He always thought his meeting with Yi Yeonjun felt like fate, but maybe their encounter had also been prearranged.

Kaita recalled when someone forcefully injected him with a drug at 11 years old. He could still feel the rush from that high as he killed all those people. His life changed after that day.

Could that have been planned?

Kaita pondered for 3 years. Maybe everything in this world might be fake. He spent many nights wondering if all of it could be an elaborate scheme to turn him against Yi Yeonjun. In the end, the truth felt too clear and he decided to kill Yi Yeonjun to escape this world. Fortunately, he gained several dependable allies like Kim Suho, Yun Seung-Ah, and the other heroes.

For two months, Kaita helped them regain their original strength. The heroes gladly cooperated because they wanted to escape this fake world too.

Today, they would carry out their plan.

* * *

KWAAAAANG!

A magic power explosion erupted at Yi Yeonjun's building. I sensed multiple magic powers as we looked back in surprise.

I spotted a group climbing the building towards the top floor where Yi Yeonjun resided. I recognized them right away. Kim Suho, Yun Seung-Ah, Chae Nayun, Shin Jonghak...

Cheok Jungyeong watched for a while before turning back to Kaita.

“Oi, what the hell are you doing?”

“Can’t you tell? I’m trying to go back to the real world.” Kaita sighed after regaining his composure.

“Why did you have to destroy that building?”

I left them to talk and ran towards the car. Then I pushed my head inside, but Boss’ parents already turned into digital fragments and forever disappeared.

“Haaa... Why did it have to be today?”

I ruffled my hair and glared at Kaita. Of course, I already had a good idea of how this story would end. The couple planned to kill their daughter, but she would survive and become Boss. Perhaps it turned out best that I didn’t see this through.

“Some things can’t be forgiven even in this fake world,” Kaita said to Cheok Jungyeong.

He sounded surprisingly dignified and I realized Kaita somehow found out the truth about Yi Yeonjun.

“...”

We looked at each other and Kaita nodded. Cheok Jungyeong couldn’t understand our silent conversation.

“How long have you been here, Kaita?” I scratched my neck and asked.

“I don’t know. Three years? Maybe four?”

I pointed at the penthouse. “How about them?”

“Two months.”

KWAAAANG! Magic power exploded once again.

“Do you think two months of training is enough? I heard there’s something called privileges in this world,” I worriedly asked. However, Kaita spoke with a confident smile.

“Don’t underestimate them.”

Clang! A giant sword pierced through the penthouse’s ceiling. Chae Nayun’s longsword, wrapped in magic power, seemed like it would split the sky.

“All six of them are pretty damn strong.”

Golden magic power also flashed in the distance. It came from Kim Suho’s reinforced sword qi. Chwaaa— His sword qi traveled forward and cut off all light in the area. The world briefly turned dark.

“We might be in virtual reality, but our real base is our own body,” Kaita casually stated.

Shin Jonghak’s black flames rose into the air. Kim Suho continued slashing as Shin Jonghak burned everything. His fire engulfed the building and swallowed it whole. Such a scene looked terrifying.

“Two months. It only took them two months to achieve what took me over a year.”

Clang... Lightning blossomed like a flower. This came from Yun Seung-Ah’s white flowers, a graceful technique to incapacitate her opponents.

Shin Jonghak, Chae Nayun, Yun Seung-Ah, and Kim Suho. These four could be considered some of the strongest characters in the novel. Even Yi Yeonjun wouldn’t last against all four.

“Amazing.”

It didn’t look like they needed any help. I stood still and watched them when...

System Alert [An event has been interrupted. An error has occurred.] [The system will run a test to identify and fix the problem.] [Your session will be forcefully terminated if no solution is found.] [Running diagnostics...]

Several system alerts popped up.

“Hyungs! What happened here?”

“Uwaaaa, it’s coming down. It’s coming down!”

Mohawk and Shag finally arrived and trembled in fear at the magic power before them.

* * *

The night sky turned deep blue after midnight. Mohawk, Shag, Cheok Jungyeong, and I returned to our office. I sent Kaita back to Kim Suho’s group, hoping he could serve as a messenger between us.

“Aren’t you all hungry? Let’s eat.”

I began cooking with one arm using the ingredients Mohawk and Shag brought. I chopped up the ingredients and stirred them in the pan with some seasonings. Meanwhile, Cheok Jungyeong gathered Shag and Mohawk.

“Is anyone bothering you?”

“Pardon?”

“Just tell me if anyone’s bothering you. I’ll crush them for you.”

“Ah, thank you!”

Tzzzt— It took me only 10 minutes to cook with my one arm.

“It’s all done. Let’s eat.”

“Oh, thank you. Wow, look at all this!”

I prepared a beef steak, stir-fried pork, and other delicacies. Then I leaned against the window and looked at the moon in the sky. My thoughts drifted to Yi Yeonjun.

Today, Kim Suho and the others successfully killed him. His death felt too banal for the Chameleon Troupe's notorious founder. Perhaps only Orden or Chae Joochul could counter the combined force of Chae Nayun, Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, and Yun Seung-Ah.

However, Yi Yeonjun still lived in the outside world and schemed like a snake beside Boss. She still didn't know he ruined her life.

Keung, Keung—

Suddenly, I heard a sound from below.

Keung, Keung—

Somebody kept sniffing. I looked down and froze. There, I spotted a little girl. She looked scruffy and skinny as if she hadn't eaten in a long time. Perhaps she came looking for her parents who would never return. Did she really come all this way to find them?

I sighed at the sight of her. Nothing I did in this fake world would matter, but I held a plate of leftover food and jumped down.

"Hello," I carefully called out.

"...!"

The girl flinched and stepped back. Dark magic power rose from her because she couldn't control her dangerous power yet.

"It's okay. This is for you to eat."

I wanted to calm her down, but she only moved away as I spoke. Young Boss acted totally different from adult Boss, who always seemed full of confidence. She might run away and never come back if I went any closer.

“...”

I set the plate on the ground and left a note. [Come back anytime if you're hungry]. Then I returned to the office. Mohawk and Shag shouted when they saw me.

“Wow, this stuff is amazing!”

“We love you, boss!”

They kept calling me boss now. I smiled at them and looked out the window again.

— Keung.

Yi Byul sniffed the food on the plate. I knew she wouldn't be able to resist that smell.

— Keung. Gulp.

She sniffed for a while before looking around and snatching away the food.

— Nom, nom nom.

She hid behind the bushes and stuffed her face like a small animal rather than a human. It felt heartbreaking seeing her like that. My heart ached for her more than I expected.

“...”

Did I sympathize with her? Would sympathy hurt this much? Suddenly, I wanted to see Boss again. The 6 years I spent with her overlapped with the little girl before me.

“Haaa...”

I sighed and soon chuckled. What should I do if I actually felt this way? Nothing seemed stranger than falling in love with a character I created.

— Tiriring.

A notification rang out.

System Alert [Unable to resolve the error. The rewind feature has been disabled due to an unknown reason.] [The interrupted event will play as a video.] [The logout feature has been reinstated.]

A screen appeared in front of me and showed the original event that occurred in the past.

— Kuaaaaak.

The couple planned on killing their child and she had no choice but to kill her parents. Painful cries and the sound of blood spurting rang out. I clenched my teeth as I watched Boss' past. It felt much more horrifying than I imagined and I tried my best to suppress my anger.

“...?”

I felt a gaze and discovered Yi Byul looking at me. She held an empty plate in her hands and wanted to return it. I smiled and whispered.

“Tell me if you're still hungry. I'll give you more.”

—...!

She suddenly trembled and ran away after placing the plate on the ground. I watched her leave and checked the system.

[247 hours and 30 minutes until logout]

That amounted to roughly 10 days. Yi Byul would keep coming back because she couldn't forget the taste of my cooking.

“Cute.”

She even burped while running. I smiled at little Boss as she ran away with small steps.

* * *

[Kaita's Hideout, Luxurious Mansion in Seoul]

Tap, tap, tap—

[He's so cute! How can a kid be so handsome?]

Chae Nayun sat in front of a computer after successfully completing their mission. She exchanged private messages with a blogger.

[Bellflower: Thanks, as always.]

Chae Nayun and her mother, Bellflower, had been exchanging messages for two months now.

[I can totally tell he's going to be a great hero one day.]

[Bellflower: Ah! How did you know my son has a gift?]

[I can tell from his face. He just looks special!]

[Bellflower: Wow... interesting. I really hope he becomes a great hero as you said.]

Chae Nayun's eyes filled with tears as she typed.

[So is Jinyoon going to Military Agent Academy soon?]

[Bellflower: No. He's talented, but I want him to attend a regular school until he's at least 11.]

[I see...]

Chae Nayun briefly paused. Unfortunately, she didn't exist in this world yet. Then she resumed typing after a small sigh.

[Oh, I hope I'm not being rude, but do you maybe plan on having another baby?]

[Bellflower: Of course, I've already thought of a name.]

Chae Nayun's heart immediately sank. She forced her hands to stop trembling and continued typing.

[Do you want the baby to be a girl or a boy?]

[Bellflower: Hmm... I don't know. I'll love them the same no matter what.]

[Bellflower: For some reason, I keep thinking it's going to be a girl. It's strange since I'm not even pregnant yet.]

Chae Nayun sighed in relief. So her mother didn't feel disappointed that she turned out to be a girl.

[Then... have you thought of her name?]

Someone placed his hand on Chae Nayun's shoulder. Surprised, she raised her head and saw Shin Jonghak worriedly looking at her.

"Are you sure you don't want to visit her?"

"No, this is enough."

Chae Nayun faintly smiled and shook her head.

Her mother still lived somewhere in this world, beautiful and gentle as always. She didn't know what she would say if they met. Just watching from a distance might break her, so Chae Nayun settled for chatting online.

"How about you? Don't you have anyone you want to see?"

"I don't..."

“Pfft, liar.”

“It’s true. Something like virtual reality can’t recreate the person I admire.”

He sounded sincere. As he said, Shin Myungchul didn’t exist in this world because a mere virtual reality couldn’t replicate him.

“Yeah?”

Chae Nayun nodded and received a reply from Bellflower.

[Bellflower: Name? Hmm... I do have a name for a girl... but I wonder if it's okay to tell you...]

[Oh, you don't have to if you're uncomfortable.]

[Bellflower: No, it's fine. I'll tell you because you're special, Jajanggirl. If I have a girl...]

Chae Nayun swallowed her saliva as the computer screen glowed blue. Heavy tension filled the air and... Tirring— Bellflower’s reply arrived with a cheerful ring. Shin Jonghak also smiled as he read the message.

[Bellflower: Nayun (娜允)]

[Bellflower: It means true beauty. Isn't it pretty?]

Chapter 316

Demon Realm Gate (1)

[Bellflower: Nayun (娜允)]

[Bellflower: It means true beauty. Isn't it pretty?]

Chae Nayun deeply sighed as bitterness rose from the bottom of her heart. True beauty. She didn't think it suited her, an empty shell who lost everything.

[Yes, it's pretty.]

She wanted to end the conversation.

[Bellflower: I want my child to be beautiful just the way she is.]

Bellflower continued.

[Bellflower: She might fall and get hurt, but I want her to overcome everything in the end.]

Looking at the messages stung Chae Nayun's heart, but she couldn't turn away. She brushed her hair back and grumbled.

[How is that beautiful? That's just not knowing when to give up.]

[Bellflower: You're right. To me, true beauty isn't weak, but strong and stubborn.]

Chae Nayun's fingers hovered over the keyboard.

[Bellflower: Being hurt, regretting, and grieving. However, also accepting that pain and sadness as a part of her.]

[Bellflower: Accepting herself and standing up on her two feet as a person...]

Her mother's voice, the same one she recalled years ago, seemed to flow into her ears through the messages.

[Bellflower: That's what Nayun means to me.]

"I'm heading out..."

Shin Jonghak read the mood and left. Chae Nayun wiped the tears around her eyes and typed.

[I'll remember that.]

She knew this was only a fake world, but decided to believe anyways. She decided to remember the meaning of her name and hold onto it.

[Always.]

Of course, that didn't mean her outlook on life would change overnight. Her memories of Kim Hajin, Chae Jinyoon's death, and Chae Joochul's sins. She still found everything hard to accept and would likely continue doubting herself.

However, she would also recall the meaning of her name that she learned today. Eventually, she might truly change one day.

[I have something to attend to. Thank you.]

[Bellflower: Ah, okay. Let's talk later. ^^]

Chae Nayun ended their conversation and turned off the computer. Yoo Yeonha appeared at the perfect time.

"You're done chatting?"

"Yeah..."

Chae Nayun stood up with a short reply. Yoo Yeonha became startled when she saw Chae Nayun's face and brightly smiled.

"Looks like you received a good piece of advice."

"Huh? Ah, no. It's nothing like that."

Chae Nayun shook her head and went out to the living room with Yoo Yeonha. Her comrades gathered inside the large penthouse living room surrounded by glass walls.

"Why can't we log out? You lied to us, didn't you?"

Yun Seung-Ah complained to Kaita while Kim Suho greeted Chae Nayun with a smile.

"Would I be here if I was lying? Just wait ten days."

Chae Nayun walked past the arguing Kaita and Yun Seung-Ah. Then she sat on the couch. A cool breeze blew in from the window and gently caressed her hair. She felt the peaceful atmosphere while staring at her comrades and slowly opened her mouth.

"Everyone."

They all turned to Chae Nayun. She let out a small breath and smiled as if a huge burden had been lifted off her shoulders.

"I'm going to meet my mom and oppa."

* * *

[D-6 Until Logout]

Cheok Jungyeong went to work with Shag and Mohawk in the morning. He left for the mountains because he knew many hidden experts lived there in the 2000s. Cheok Jungyeong enjoyed a happy daily life repeatedly fighting strong opponents. Shag and Mohawk dutifully witnessed his battles.

I chose a more peaceful lifestyle.

“This is the flower you like?”

Byul nodded from beside me. She held two yellow flowers as I checked the name with [Observation and Reading].

[Evening Primrose]

“Evening primrose?”

“...?”

Byul only tilted her head. From the looks of it, she didn’t know the flower’s name either.

“That’s this flower’s name. Now you know if you didn’t before.”

I stretched and stood up. We played ball for about an hour. I read her a fairy tale and we went flower hunting. Then the time to eat finally arrived.

“Let’s go eat dinner now.”

“...”

Byul nodded while keeping three steps away. She remained just as expressionless as before. However, I could tell from our 4 days together that she actually felt extremely happy. The corners of her mouth slightly twitched.

“Alright, follow me.”

“...”

Byul silently nodded and chased after me like a duckling following her mother.

On a side note, I purchased this orphanage 4 days ago to win over

Byul's heart. Kaita gave me the money. I didn't know how he made so much, but he basically became a mogul in this world.

Of course, I lied to Byul that her parents suddenly disappeared because they abandoned her. She didn't express any shock or sorrow. Instead, she acted normal even though she must've hurt on the inside.

"Oh right, what's your favorite meal out of all the ones I've made so far?"

I asked as we walked together. This virtual world came into existence because of the extreme synergy between Yoo Jinhyuk's gift and stigma. This young Boss should have the same taste as the present Boss.

"..." Byul remained silent.

"Pasta? Pork belly?"

She didn't answer no matter how many times I asked.

"Chicken? Pizza? Candy? Dumplings?"

However, she stopped at dumplings.

"Dumplings?"

"..."

She looked up and I smiled at her sparkling eyes.

"That's unexpected."

I never made dumplings for Boss now that I thought about it.

"Perfect, let's go with dumplings."

"..."

Byul nodded and even excitedly walked ahead. The kid who always followed from behind now skipped to the kitchen.

“Pft.”

I laughed and chased after her.

* * *

[D-2 Until Logout]

Chae Nayun arrived at a traditional Korean house on the outskirts of Seoul. She lived here all her childhood and walked to the front gate in delight.

[Chae Family Home]

The nameplate, written in Chinese characters, looked slightly less worn than what she recalled. She stood in front of the gate with a grin. Suddenly, a voice flowed into her ears.

— Hey, don’t get caught. They’ll notice if you act suspiciously. You know when they go out for a stroll, so just aim for that moment.

Kaita’s voice informed her. Chae Nayun walked away from the house and headed to the nearby trail surrounded by grass, flowers, a mountain, and a stream.

She sat on the nearby bench and knew exactly which path her mother would take for her daily stroll.

“Whew...”

She took a deep breath and felt the surrounding spiritual energy. Kaita’s voice rang out again after she waited about 20 minutes.

— She’s out. Chae Jinyoon’s with her.

Chae Nayun immediately tensed with nervousness. A woman and a young boy appeared about 3 minutes later holding hands.

“...!”

Chae Nayun shot up and recited the sentence she prepared beforehand.

“Oh, if it isn’t it Bellflower? Wow, what a coincidence. I also come here often.”

She practiced the line again to sound as natural as possible.

“Sigh...”

This is it. Don’t be scared. Don’t be afraid. They became scars in my heart because I loved them so much. Walk towards them slowly.

Chae Nayun courageously stepped forward.

* * *

[15 Minutes Before Logout]

The sky turned dark. I sat on a chair and stared at Byul sleeping on the bed. She only ate dumplings for the past week and began smelling like one too.

“What a shame.”

I stayed with her for a week. Cheok Jungyeong and Kaita dropped by to see her, but Byul spent most of her time with me. A week felt too short and she never once smiled.

[10 minutes remaining until logout. The virtual reality will shut down in 10 minutes.]

That’s the one thing I regretted, but my time here hadn’t gone to waste. After all, I learned about Boss’ past and figured out what she liked to eat. I felt more than satisfied.

“Byul.”

I smiled and placed my hand on her forehead. She felt warm now.

[7 minutes until logout...]

I turned off the system alert and I stared at her for the remaining time.

Time continued to pass as I calmed the emotions in the corner of my heart.

Then, in the final minute...

“See you tomorrow.”

I said my farewell.

[The virtual reality will now end.] [Forceful logout commencing.]

* * *

Wooong—

The capsule opened with a hum and I immediately checked the time.

[9:45 P.M.]

Only 3 hours had passed in the real world.

“Hmm.”

This experience truly felt mysterious. Some spent 3-4 years there, but only 3 hours passed.

“Huu...”

I shook off my grogginess and came out to the capsule room’s hallway.

Woong— Woong— Woong—

I could hear other capsules opening and hurried to Capsule de Mars' exit.

"You're leaving?"

Yoo Yeonha's voice rang out as I grabbed the doorknob. I turned to the side and looked at her.

"You knew I was here?"

"I suspected as much when I saw Chameleon Troupe members in the virtual world."

"I see."

"I have a good hunch as to what happened. Anyways, it served as a nice healing trip for us."

Yoo Yeonha stretched with a grin. I looked at her oddly.

"Healing?"

"Yep. For me, I didn't have to work for 2 months. As for Nayun..."

Yoo Yeonha paused and glanced behind her. No one had left the capsule room yet.

"She met her mother and older brother."

"..."

"It's all thanks to you." Yoo Yeonha softly spoke and placed her hand on my shoulder.

"You can go. Looks like the others will come out soon."

She opened the door for me. I briefly looked at her and left.

Paris' Mars Plaza came into view. The festival hadn't ended yet, but I only wanted to do one thing right now.

I turned on my smartwatch and called Boss.

— What's up?

She picked up immediately. I calmed my heart before speaking.

“Boss, are you also in Paris?”

— I am.

“Then wait for me. I'll be right there.”

— Hmm? Now? What—

I hung up and found her location with Spartan. Currently, she ate some fish cakes at a street stall.

First, I ran to a flower shop and asked the owner for evening primroses. He pointed to a flower bouquet and I quickly left with the yellow flowers after throwing him the money.

Soon, I arrived at an alleyway filled with street stalls. I spotted Boss munching on the fish cakes and called her with a bright smile.

“Boss!”

She turned around and curiously tilted her head. “W-What is it so suddenly?”

“ ... ”

I stomped towards her and handed her the bouquet. Boss' eyes widened and a question mark popped up above her head.

“What’s this?”

“A present.”

I shoved the bouquet into her arms. She furrowed her brows before nodding and looking at the flowers.

“Ah...”

Her shoulders faintly trembled as I stared at her.

“They’re called evening primroses. It’s a beautiful name, right?”

“...”

Boss looked at me. Flustered, she repeatedly blinked and my body moved on its own.

I... pulled her into my embrace.

Our robes touched and Boss’ forehead leaned against my chest. Time slowed as if bullet time activated.

Boss froze like a statue as my face rested on her shoulder and I quietly whispered.

“I wanted to see you.”

* * *

[Paris, France]

The Gate of Glory’s 3rd round of selections proceeded without any problems. A total of 1000 candidates would be selected. Only 200 would be chosen after the 4th and 5th rounds to enter the demon realm gate.

“Our farewell is soon.”

Bell murmured from on top of the Eiffel Tower.

“Yeah.”

Jin Sahyuk replied while floating next to him.

“Don’t let your personal feelings cloud your judgment. Don’t hesitate or you’ll miss the opportunity.”

This time, Jin Sahyuk didn’t reply. Normally, she would say something like, I’ll kill you before you even have the chance to revive! However, she felt somewhat bitter and sad now that the end finally neared.

“Convince Rumi for me too.”

Bell seemed calm and composed as always. He had no hesitation or regrets.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk silently nodded.

“Good. Then I’ll see you next week.”

Tk, tk. Bell tapped on her shoulder before turning into his gas state and disappearing. The top of the Eiffel Tower became quiet. Jin Sahyuk deeply sighed by herself.

“Huu...”

Soon, Baal would descend from the demon realm gate. She would be able to return to Akatrina. Didn’t she want that?

“Tsk.”

Where did this bitterness come from? She couldn’t figure it out and created a portal to leave.

Chapter 317

Demon Realm Gate (2)

I prepared for the future after returning to Seoul. First, I purchased an entire block of single houses in Hannam-dong. Then I began renovating their basements. I no longer knew the future, but I knew we didn't have much time before most of the world transformed into the demon realm.

I designed the blueprint for an underground city with the help of Young Dwarf's Dexterity. With [Buster Call], I summoned Genkelope's Vessel and began construction using their maintenance ships.

The assembly quickly progressed because Yoo Yeonha lent me all of the required equipment. The ship's crew also praised my top-notch blueprint.

"What's this?"

Today, I brought Boss to the construction site. Jiing— Boss widened her eyes at a robot making parts with its laser hands.

"I'm building this place to prepare for the demon realm transformation."

"Demon realm transformation?"

"Yes."

We needed to prepare for the incoming crisis to achieve the happy ending everyone deserved.

"This is the crystal that can stop the transformation."

I took out [Akatrina's Purification Crystal]. Prihi, from the recorded past, had given it to me. However, its effects could only be used in a 5 km radius.

“This crystal can also purify the soil and air. We can easily produce underground crops with it.”

According to Horner, we could even build an artificial sea. We wouldn’t have to worry about food shortages if we could grow crops like the [meat-flavored corn] from the Tower of Wish.

“That’s interesting.”

Boss nodded. Tirring— I received a video call on my smartwatch.

“Excuse me for a minute, Boss.”

The call came from Yoo Yeonha. I adjusted my smartwatch’s angle so Boss wouldn’t be seen.

— Hello?

Yoo Yeonha appeared in the air as a hologram.

“What’s up?”

— How’s the construction going? Is everything okay?

“Yep, I think it’ll be finished in a month.”

The underground city looked massive, but Genkelope's crew worked unbelievably fast. They could work without rest thanks to the [Orb of Regeneration].

— Mmm... You said you were using technology from Genkelope’s Vessel, right?

“Yeah.”

— Then could you help me?

Yoo Yeonha carefully asked.

“Help you?”

— Essential Dynamics is also working on underground cities in Seoul, Busan, and Ulsan. We’re also planning some in the U.S. and Japan too.

“Ah, really? That sounds like a good plan. I’ll help.”

Yoo Yeonha acted meticulously as always.

— Thanks! I’ll send my people to you later. I have to go now.

“Ah, wait up.”

I suddenly recalled something and turned towards Boss glaring at me. I muted Yoo Yeonha and asked.

“Boss, the Mountain Sage members are still locked up, right?”

“Yes...”

“It’s time to use them.” I unmuted the smartwatch with a smirk.

“We’ve been keeping tabs on some wonderful informants.”

Yoo Yeonha tilted her head at my words.

— Informants?

“Yeah, they’re called the Mountain Sage.”

Yoo Yeonha specialized in persuading people. The Mountain Sage had yet to reveal who ordered my assassination despite being locked up for 6 months. Perhaps Yoo Yeonha could make them talk.

— Mountain Sage? The Mountain Sage!

Yoo Yeonha's calm voice became unusually high-pitched.

"I'm pretty sure we're talking about the same people. They're incredible."

—...

Yoo Yeonha's cheeks became flushed. She would always get extremely excited whenever she discovered exceptional talents.

"You can have them if you persuade them." I said with a grin.

— What do you mean by that?

"I'll text you the details later."

Sadly, our call would have to end here. I had no choice since Boss kept glaring at me.

— Ah, okay. I'll be waiting.

"Yeah, bye."

— Bye!

Yoo Yeonha clenched her fists and hung up. I turned to the pouting Boss.

"What?"

"You've been on the phone too long. Also, I don't want to hand them over. They tried to kill you."

"Ah."

She sounded angry. I placed my hand on her shoulder with a gentle smile.

“That’s why I’m handing them over. To find out who tried to kill me.”

The Mountain Sage members all possessed immunity against mental interventions. Neither torture nor hypnosis worked, but I knew Yoo Yeonha would find a way to break them.

“...”

Boss said nothing, but her silence always meant consent. I slowly reached for her hand.

“Now, should we get something to eat?”

Boss looked down at our clasped hands and slowly nodded.

“Let’s go.”

I pulled her towards the restaurant with her favorite dish, dumplings.

* * *

[The last round of the Gate of Glory’s qualification tournament will be held at the Temple of Justice.] [It has been a long journey. Now, the remaining 1000 heroes are headed for the temple.] [This will be the last hurdle for the countless heroes.]

The internet overflowed with news articles after the 4th round. Social media only talked about the tournament and gambling sites hosted real-time bets on who would be included in the final 200.

“These three are the judges?”

The Temple of Justice became the center of global attention. Aileen looked around the judges’ waiting room.

“It’s four in total, including you, Chairman Aileen.”

Her secretary replied, but Aileen seemed rather dissatisfied with the lineup.

“Good to see you, little one.”

Heynckes of the Nine Stars called her. Aileen sat in her chair and sighed in disapproval.

“What’s wrong, little one?”

“Dammit, stop calling that.”

She snapped at him.

She didn’t feel dissatisfied about Heynckes. No one would be more suited than an active member of the Nine Stars. However, she had a problem with the woman sitting next to him.

Yoo Yeonha, Essence of the Strait’s chief officer, could only be considered a high-intermediate rank, grade 1 hero at best. Aileen couldn’t understand why so many people called such a weakling the Queen of Seoul.

“Hello.”

Yoo Yeonha slightly bowed with a smile. Aileen snorted and turned to the man sitting opposite Heynckes. Yoo Sihyuk, the master of Baekdu Mountain, busily read a book and didn’t even spare Aileen a glance. It had been a while since they last saw each other, but he still acted snobby as ever.

“Ah, right. Lord Heynckes.”

Yoo Yeonha spoke and Aileen looked at her. She handed a pill to Heynckes.

“What’s this?” Heynckes asked. Aileen also stared at the pill with sparkly eyes.

Is it vitamins? She wondered to herself when Yoo Yeonha courteously explained.

“It’s the cure to your side effect that we talked about before.”

“The cure?”

“Yes.”

Kim Hajin had given her these pills and asked her to give them to the Nine Stars. Yoo Yeonha gladly accepted his request.

“Is this what you tried to give me last time?”

“They’re similar.”

“...”

Heynckes stared at the pill for a while before placing it in his pocket. Then he bashfully spoke, “I do need to stay alive until the demon realm gate opens.”

“Thank you for accepting it.”

“I should be the one thanking you. I don’t think my heart has much time left and I’ve been regretting your last offer.”

Aileen turned away and began organizing her papers.

“I like gifts and pills too,” she muttered. Aileen had grown more interested in health as she neared her 40s.

“Oh, I have a gift for you as well Chairman Aileen.”

Of course, Yoo Yeonha wouldn’t miss such an opportunity. She prepared a box of top-class medicinal pills for Aileen. Each pill contained a small amount of [Dimensional Entropy] and cost at least 100 million won. The box contained 60 of these pills.

“H-Hmm. Yeah? I guess I’ll take it if you so insist.”

Aileen tightly hugged the gift box.

“Well then, should we get on with the meeting? Let’s discuss how we’re going to judge?” Aileen beamed in satisfaction and Yoo Yeonha bit her lips to hold back her laughter.

“Look, we have to pick 200 out of 1000 people. Do we even have enough time to meet all the candidates? Of course, we don’t. First, we should pick out the most qualified candidates and—”

“Ah, about that...” Yoo Yeonha interrupted her. Aileen felt more forgiving than usual because of the gift she just received.

“What is it?” she casually asked.

“...”

Without a word, Yoo Yeonha pushed forward an envelope. It featured a black and golden lotus symbol embossed on it. Kim Hajin gave her this letter hoping to earn himself a spot in the final 200.

“This is...” Aileen frowned at the symbol on the envelope.

“Yes, it’s a letter from Black Lotus.”

Heynckes and Yoo Sihyuk widened their eyes.

Yoo Yeonha glanced at them and carefully continued.

“Black Lotus sent this letter to my guild. It appears he also wants to enter the gate. What do you think? I’d like to hear your opinions.”

* * *

[Korea — Demon Realm Gate]

A cold wind swept across the land under the gray sky. This weather felt unusual for April. The qualification tournament had ended and they finished the selection process. Black Lotus would secretly enter as one of the participants. I visited the demon realm gate and realized its 30 day deadline would soon end.

“Hmm...”

The area around the gate had been sealed off to the public. Everything felt calm and quiet for now.

I hid on a nearby mountain and looked around. Several heroes and djinns gathered below, hoping to enter the gate.

Whish—

The wind blew and a certain person appeared next to me.

“You’re here,” I muttered.

“Yeah, I am.” Jin Sahyuk nodded with [Alexander III’s Cape] fluttering behind her.

I spotted Chae Nayun, Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Jin Seyeon, Aileen, Yoo Seung-Ah, Rachel, Yoo Jinwoong, Kim Junwoo, Vast Expense, and even Bell. All of them possessed enough strength to represent humanity.

“I see Bell over there.”

“Not just Bell.”

Jin Sahyuk seriously remarked, “Tons of djinns too. The greatest devil of all time will be born from that gate.”

“The greatest devil... are you talking about Bell?”

I took out my bow and arrows. As Jin Sahyuk said, too many djinns had gathered here. I could see them underground and even in the sky. They all waited for a chance to enter.

“Yes, Bell will die inside the gate and Baal will be born.”

“...”

I notched my 5 [Dark Ore Arrows] and shot. Chweeek— The arrows flew like hawks and ear-splitting shrieks followed.

Keuk—

Keuk—

I retrieved the arrows and notched them again. Then I asked Jin Sahyuk.

“Does that mean we’re 100% sure Baal will descend?”

“Kill me inside the demon realm gate and eliminate Baal.”

Jin Sahyuk mimicked Bell’s voice. She sounded quite similar and I couldn’t help but laugh.

“That’s what Bell said.”

“Yeah, I agree. We can’t bring him to Earth if Baal descends. We’ll have to end him in there.”

Baal would be even more powerful than Orden and closest to a god-like existence. Earth would be destroyed for good if he escaped.

“What are you going to do, Jin Sahyuk?”

She would need Baal’s powers if she wanted to connect Akatrina and Earth. Therefore, Jin Sahyuk had no choice but to cooperate with Baal if she didn’t give up on returning to her homeland.

“Bell and I will take care of that.”

“How—”

“I’ll make sure it doesn’t cause you any problems, so stay out of it.”

Jin Sahyuk seemed adamant, so I reluctantly nodded and fired my arrows again. The [Dark Ore Arrows] danced in the sky towards the djinns. A dozen djinns died before the arrows returned.

— Fuck! Someone’s shooting arrows!

— It’s dark arrows! Dark arrows!

— Dark arrows... that means it’s Black Lotus.

— Damn it, that son of a bitch!

The djinns activated their devil transformation, but the heroes immediately detected their demonic energy. Aileen jumped in the air first and tracked them down. She mercilessly destroyed them with Spirit Speech like the grim reaper.

— What do you think you’re doing? Vermins, you’ll be crushed!

Her Spirit Speech literally crushed the djinns. Yoo Sihyuk’s white wolves also jumped in, followed by Yoo Jinwoong’s lightning and Shin Jonghak’s dark flames.

“Jin Sahyuk.” I called her as the scene unfolded before us.

“What.” She looked at me.

“...”

I hesitated and couldn’t look her in the eye. I opened my mouth before closing it again. It took me a while, but I finally managed to say it. I wanted her to hear this.

“Can’t you just stay here?”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk remained silent. I waited for an answer, but she didn’t say anything. Suddenly...

Guooooo—

The demon realm gate released its magic power in every direction and shook the earth. The djinns and heroes stopped fighting as runic symbols rose above the gate. I translated the symbols with [Observation and Reading].

[The demon realm gate shall determine who is worthy to enter.]

Magic power branched out from the half-open gate when I finished reading.

— Kieeeeeek

Two of the branches came our way and wrapped around me and Jin Sahyuk.

“What the...!”

“Dammit.”

We didn’t even have time to react. Whish! The branches of magic power instantly dragged us inside.

Chapter 318

Demon Realm Gate (3)

“Hello, we are here at the Gate of Glory’s opening.”

Reporters from all over the world gathered in Hamgyeong Province. They couldn’t approach the gate, but filmed from a distance.

“On estime que la porte...” (“It is estimated that the gate...”)

“Zarban and Leonardo have been selected for the final 200...”

“ここにはまた、世界の有名人が集まっています...” (“Here, the world's celebrities are gathering again...")

Various languages could be heard and Yoo Yeonha busily greeted celebrities in front of the cameras.

“You’re here too, Soohyuk?”

She finished meeting several corporate leaders and spotted Park Soohyuk, SH Agency’s CEO, who had become one of the world’s greatest individuals.

“Haha, yes. I was lucky enough to receive an invitation.”

“It might get dangerous when the gate opens.”

“I’m sure it’ll be fine, especially with Essence of the Strait members protecting us.”

Yoo Yeonha smiled at Park Soohyuk’s subtle praise. Many members including Kim Youngjin, Yi Jin-Ah, Leonel, Yohei, Shen Yuan, Ah Hae-In, and even Heynckes stood guard.

“Still, stay alert. At least make sure you’re wearing protective gear.”

“Oh, protective gear?”

Park Soohyuk smiled and tapped his smartwatch. Immediately, reinforced magic power rose from the watch and shrouded him.

“Hmm.”

Yoo Yeonha nodded in satisfaction. Park Soohyuk’s smartwatch featured a magic enchantment powered by [Dimensional Entropy]. Essential Dynamics developed this commercial product called the protect watch. It boasted reinforced magic power that rivaled an intermediate rank, grade 1 hero and functioned as portable armor. Unsurprisingly, it cost well over 100 million won.

“It’s scary how far Essence of the Strait’s technology has progressed. I can’t imagine the future anymore.”

Park Soohyuk shook his head in amazement.

“Huhu, the new technological revolution is only beginning.”

[Dimensional Entropy] contained infinite potential. Yoo Yeonha smiled just thinking about it.

Wooong!

A huge surge of magic power erupted and the area grew noisy.

“I-It looks like the gate is opening!”

“What a brilliant flash of mana!”

The ground shook as reporters and spectators screamed. Yoo Yeonha and Park Soohyuk clad themselves in reinforced magic power while Jin Sechan, Kim Youngjin, and the other guild members ran to Yoo Yeonha.

“Chief Officer!”

They planned to lead Yoo Yeonha to safety, but...

KWANG!

Several magic power branches shot up and dragged her underground before anyone could react.

“S-Shoot!”

Kim Youngjin and Jin Sechan immediately threw themselves into the crack in the ground.

* * *

My head hurt and my body felt weak. It felt like floating on water exhausted. I couldn't see anything or sense the passage of time.

My consciousness slowly grew clearer. I remembered who I was and why I was here. What I needed to do... My understanding gradually returned.

“Haa...”

I heard someone breathing. Actually, I couldn't tell if it came from me or someone else. I simply focused on the sound and tried to regain my senses.

“Huu...”

I heard another breath and now recognized it as mine. I took deep breaths and tried to move. Soon, my eyes opened.

“...?”

My vision returned and I spotted an old drawer. It looked worn and moldy with bugs crawling over it.

I frowned and twisted towards the ceiling. Kiik— The bed I lay on creaked. The ceiling looked even moldier than the drawer.

“Am I in a prison cell?”

I murmured in confusion and got up. Immediately, a huge wave of dizziness swept me and I fell back onto the bed. Crack— The shabby bed broke.

“Argh...”

I had no choice but to rest a bit more. I massaged my temples for the next 5 minutes before getting up again.

“Auu.”

I still felt dizzy, but could properly move now. First, I checked the room’s interior. It contained a bed, drawer, and closet with two uniforms. Besides that, I only noticed some other random items on the drawer.

“Hmm...”

I examined the writing utensils on the drawer. A notepad, pen, bag, half-eaten bento box, and an identification card. The identification card obviously caught my attention the most.

[Lorenzo Secret Service, F Rank Sharpshooter – Kim Hajin] [ID Number – 02937102]

“F rank sharpshooter... Kim Hajin?”

I frowned and didn’t know anything about how the demon realm gate worked. Naturally, I had no clue about this situation.

I closely examined the identification card, but didn’t find anything noteworthy. Next, I opened the drawer with a crossbow and arrows stored inside.

“Sharpshooter...”

I guess I am one. I inwardly laughed and opened the second drawer. It only contained casual clothes and nothing else. Same for the third drawer.

“What kind of situation is this?”

I don't even get a hint? As I thought that, a series of messages popped up.

[This is the world where Baal was first born.] [You will participate as a supporter in this world. Your goal is to annihilate Baal.] [Your variable stats have been suppressed from the dimensional travel, but do not worry. They will gradually return or you can further increase them through training.] [A total of 200 individuals from Earth have entered the demon realm gate.]

“...”

I read the messages and checked my stats.

[Strength 4 (+1)] [Stamina 4 (+1)] [Speed 4 (+1)] [Perception 4 (+1)] [Vitality 4 (+1)] [Magic Power 4 (+1)]

Status Effect: [Rejective Force] will temporarily reduce your variable stats.

Gift ▷[Master Sharpshooter] [High Rank] [Composite Attribute] [Evolving] [Grade 1] ▷[Young Dwarf's Dexterity] [High Rank] [Illusion Attribute] [Evolving] [Grade 2] ▷[Random Consolidation System] [Intermediate Rank] [Spirit Attribute] [4 Stage Consolidation] ▷[Constraints and Amplifications] [Intermediate Rank]

Physique (2/3) ▷[Magic Dysfunction] [High Rank] [Illusion Attribute] [Evolving] [Grade 2] ▷[Random Consolidation System] [Intermediate Rank] [Spirit Attribute] [4 Stage Consolidation]

Status Effect: [Rejective Force] will temporarily reduce all gifts and physiques.

I didn't know anything about this rejective force and checked stigma's magic power. Guoo... Thankfully, I still had all 5 streaks. However, the weapons I stored inside had disappeared, including the Desert Eagle and aether.

“Wait, hey! Where are my weapons?”

I asked, but no one replied. I grew worried since I couldn't do anything without my gear. Then...

— It's time for food! Come out, everyone!

Someone shouted from beyond the door. The voice sounded so loud it even shook the room. I flinched and looked out the window. The navy sky indicated twilight. They're eating at this time of day?

— Food!

Other voices rang out and I opened the door to check. A hallway stretched out and I could see others busily running towards one direction. This place seemed to be a dorm of some sort.

“I'm coming.”

I changed into the uniform hanging in the closet and chased after them. We arrived at a cafeteria 5 minutes later. It felt similar to when I served in the Korean army in my original world. I just followed the others and sat at a random table after receiving my food.

“Ah, you idiot!”

A man who seemed to be an instructor pointed at me and shouted. Everyone in the cafeteria turned and I stood up in a fluster. I reacted the same way when I messed up in the army.

“Are you a D rank? Why are you sitting at the D rank table?”

“Sorry!”

I could guess my mistake. My identification card stated I belonged in F rank. I shot up and apologized.

“Sit down at the correct place next time. You brainless fool!”

“Yes! My apologies!”

“Screw off now.”

I glanced at the instructor before looking at the table. Indeed, they clearly inscribed the letter D on it. I left and began looking for a table labeled F.

“Ah.”

I found a table on the brink of collapsing in the corner. I scurried towards it and sat next to someone I didn't know. Soon afterwards, a man with disheveled hair came and sat here as well.

“...”

I looked at the man in front of me. More precisely, I looked at his uniform. He wore a sword-shaped nameplate and a light green uniform like mine. Next, I turned to the D rank table I just left. The individuals sitting there all wore slightly greener uniforms.

“Mmm...”

The uniform's color seemed to indicate one's rank. I nodded and spoke to the guy sitting next to me.

“Excuse me.”

“...?”

He looked at me curiously. I thought about what to ask before giving up. It didn't seem like a good idea to ask about our location or situation.

“No, nothing. Do you want to eat my share as well?”

“Huh? Uh, sure.”

* * *

— One, two! One, two! One, two!

A morning training session took place after the early breakfast. I used stigma's magic power to make it seem like my right arm was rotting and skipped it to collect information about this world.

“An army?”

A large castle sat on the right of the military training ground. I checked it with [Observation and Reading] and it read, [Duke Lorenzo's Castle]. Most likely, it belonged to this place's military commander.

I looked to the left of the military training ground and spotted the dorm where I woke up. Several structures stood there. The entire place seemed to be called, [Lorenzo Knight Training Institution]. The military training ground and dorm seemed like trash compared to those other buildings.

“Hmm...”

I slowly walked towards the left and arrived at a large building about 500 steps from the training ground. The sign above it read, Library. Luckily, I found the perfect place to learn about this world.

I walked in without hesitation. No one seemed to be inside because of morning training.

“Let's see. History, history, history...”

I went to the history section and picked out several books. The information I obtained after 30 minutes of reading included:

■ The Lorenzo clan ruled this dukedom as part of the Arunheim Kingdom.

■ Duke Lorenzo served as commander here and the Lorenzo Knight Training Institution trained not only knights, but also foot soldiers.

■ Unsurprisingly, I served as a common soldier. Even among them, I received the lowest F rank and would only be a meat shield.

“Did I possess this guy’s body?”

I frowned and inwardly complained about being a common soldier. Still, I felt content in learning about the world beyond the demon realm gate.

I stood up from my seat and found a mirror in the library. I still looked like myself, Kim Hajin.

“Hmm... Ah.”

I suddenly recalled and nodded. I didn’t take over someone’s body, but simply transmigrated into this world.

I took out the notepad from my room and jotted my current goals:

■ Recover my strength and find other heroes from Earth.

■ Find Bell. He will be the key to Baal’s descent.

■ Find my weapon. In addition to the Desert Eagle and aether, the Misteltein bullet will be critical for annihilating Baal.

■ Annihilate Baal.

As I finished writing my goals...

“Oi!”

Someone shouted and grabbed my neck.

“Ak!”

“You idiot! Who do you think you are? This isn’t a place you can enter!”

I turned around in shock. A red-haired knight glared at me with his hand on my neck.

“Huh? Sorry, I, aaak!”

I couldn’t resist because of the huge difference in strength. The knight simply dragged me away.

“H-Hold on a minute!”

“This is the first time I’ve seen a soldier sneak into the library.”

“W-Wait, I didn’t sneak in. I just wanted to read some books...”

“That’s what sneaking means.”

“But—”

“Shut it.”

I couldn’t breathe as his grip tightened around my neck.

“Kak...”

I blacked out just like that.

* * *

“An F rank soldier sneaked into the library?”

Knight Commander Airun furrowed her brows at the unexpected report. She held the highest position in the Lorenzo Knight Training Institution and became the sworn sister of Duke Lorenzo’s daughter.

“Yes, we threw him into a cell for now.”

“What would a foot soldier even read there? I’m sure he just got lost.”

The male knight shook his head at Airun’s question.

“That’s what I thought when I first received the report, but we found the stack of books he was reading.”

“Interesting.”

A foot soldier reading books in the library. Airun nodded and snickered at the strange idea.

“It isn’t too big of a crime if he was only reading.”

“But he’s an F rank soldier from a commoner background. He isn’t even allowed to walk up the stairs to the west wing.”

“Draven?”

Airun interrupted the knight and stared at him with her ocean eyes. Draven shut his mouth and lowered his head.

“Don’t be so tough. You should first figure out what motivated him if a soldier acts out of line. The punishment comes afterwards.”

Draven didn’t respond and Airun smiled at his obedience. He possessed a good character along with skills, but cared too much about social hierarchy. This disappointed Airun since she believed he could become a good leader without that flaw.

“Alright. Keep him imprisoned for a week. I won’t allow any more than that.”

Chapter 319

A New Path (1)

Currently, I found myself in a guardhouse. Well, perhaps it could be called a prison cell. They locked me up, so I decided to work out. Push ups, plank, pull-ups, etc.

[Your strength has increased by 0.1] [Your vitality increased by 0.1]
[Your stamina has increased by 0.1]

Exercising went pretty well as the above alerts indicated. My stats increased by 0.6 points in just 36 hours. I could never have experienced such a rapid increase on Earth.

“...”

I looked at the veins protruding from my forearms. At this rate, I would regain my original abilities in a few months.

KWANG!

The door burst open and I looked up. Tap, tap. Heavy footsteps approached. Clang. The sound of metal striking metal. A robed individual stood in front of my cell.

“Are you F rank sharpshooter Kim Hajin?”

A beautiful voice flowed into my ears. No one would ever forget such a voice once they heard it.

“I am,” I replied.

The woman under the hooded robe faintly smiled.

“Is it true you broke into the library to read books?”

The woman looked at me and asked. Only then did I realize her name and status. [Observation and Reading] activated slightly late and finally showed me.

[Airun – Knight Commander]

“Yes...”

“Does that mean you can read?”

Did this world have a high illiteracy rate? Airun smiled when I said I could read.

“Great, that’s good to hear.”

She took out a copperplate and a card from inside her robe.

“Only those who are competent may enter the Lorenzo Secret Service. Statistics show that soldiers in the Secret Service are usually a rank or two better than soldiers from other squads.”

Airun threw a copperplate and card into my cell.

“I heard it’s only been 3 months since you joined the army.”

I examined the copperplate with short sentences written on it.

[1:30 A.M., March 8th, A stable near Lorenzo’s eastern gate] [I need a sharpshooter to guide me through the Rotio Mountains.] [He needs to be able to read this copperplate.]

I found the last sentence a bit odd, but moved on to the card. It read, [Supply Card].

“Can you read that copperplate?”

“Pardon? Ah, yes I can. 1:30 A.M. March 8th...”

Airun smiled as I read the copperplate.

“Alright, listen up. I’d like to hire you on a secret mission. Surely you’re aware as an F rank soldier that your army career may end at any moment now that you’re in jail.”

I carefully listened since I didn’t know anything about my current situation.

“However, I’ll guarantee you a spot in the army if you come back alive from this mission. Not just as an ordinary soldier, but as a commissioned officer. Oh, and you’ll be released immediately if you accept my offer.”

It turns out she came here to ask for help.

“Mmm...”

I wondered whether to accept or not when several sentences suddenly popped up.

[New Event] [Summary – Airun has chosen you as Harin’s bodyguard.] [Difficulty – High] [Goal – Escort Harin safely to the Republic of Leores in the south.] [Reward – A piece of equipment you have lost.]

“I’ll do it.” I immediately nodded.

“Good. You’ll change into regular clothes and depart tomorrow. You’ll be able to get all the equipment you need from the armory with that card.”

Airun smiled and gracefully turned around. The guard opened the cell as she left.

“You’re being released, F rank sharpshooter Kim Hajin. You’ll have to fill out a short form before leaving.”

* * *

KOOOONG!

The guardhouse door closed shut. Airun sighed as she watched the iron door slam. As always, it felt too heavy and bulky for her taste. A simple magic enhancement would've sufficed, but whoever constructed it didn't care.

"So this is where you went."

An annoyed voice caught Airun's attention. Startled, she turned around and spotted Draven waiting for her.

"Draven."

"Commander, are you up to something again?"

"That's no way to speak to your superior."

Airun wore a solemn expression, but Draven persisted. He blocked Airun's path and looked more serious than before. Airun sighed with no other options left.

"An old friend has asked to lend her a sharpshooter."

"An old friend?"

"Yes."

Airun bitterly smiled and continued, "I'm sure you know her as well."

"...!"

Draven widened his eyes. He could only think of one person. The sister of the man who had been executed for spreading false rumors about the prince.

"Commander!" he exclaimed in shock.

"Shh..."

"They might think we're working with the traitors. They—"

“It’s okay. That’s why I specifically came.”

Only Harin, the Leon clan’s eldest daughter, survived after her entire family had been executed because of her brother’s treacherous prophecy: The prince will one day become the devil and destroy the world.

“She’s in need of a sharpshooter to escape. He’s not even D rank. I can spare an F rank soldier. No one would notice he’s gone anyways.”

Airun already tested the F rank sharpshooter named Kim Hajin. The copperplate she showed him could only be read by those with good eyesight. They specifically designed the magic item for that purpose.

“Lending her a soldier won’t change her situation, but it could change ours—”

“Draven.”

Airun adamantly interrupted him.

“It’s something I decided and you have no right to stop me. You’re also indebted to Leon.”

“...”

Drevon fell silent. As the commander said, the duke of Leon had ardently supported Arunheim’s knights. He supported those with talent regardless of their status and offered financial support so beneficiaries could focus on honing their sword skills. Airun also used to be one of Leon’s beneficiaries. She and Harin drifted apart because of something in the past, but she never forgot about all the support from their family.

“Fine.”

Draven, a local aristocrat and another beneficiary, finally gave in.

“Commander, it’ll be fine if that soldier dies during the mission. However, I’ll kill him myself if he comes back alive. We need to keep this to ourselves.”

“...”

Airun remained silent. She quietly walked away as Draven followed her.

* * *

[New Event] [Summary – Airun has chosen you as Harin’s bodyguard.] [Difficulty – High] [Goal – Escort Harin safely to the Republic of Leores in the south.] [Reward – A piece of equipment you have lost.]

I scrutinized the details of this important mission and changed into new clothes as soon as I got out of the guardhouse. I started feeling itchy again the moment I put them on.

Next, I headed to the armory. The guards tried to stop me at first, but stepped aside when I showed them the card. They provided me with all the necessary equipment.

“Chainmail, hunting backpack, crampons, iron crossbow, and 40 bronze magic bolts. Are you all set?”

“Yes sir.”

I picked out the best equipment from the armory. Everything still seemed mundane, but I could further improve them through the [Random Consolidation System].

“Good luck.”

“Thank you.”

I exchanged greetings with the guards and left. Then I headed to the shooting range. My mission would begin tomorrow and I felt the need to sharpen my skills.

“It’s big.”

The shooting range stretched 15 meters wide and 500 meters long. It seemed pretty well taken care of too.

I stood in a lane and took out the crossbow.

Kiik—

I loaded a bolt against the bowstring and aimed at the target. Then I fired. Tang! I immediately shot a second after the first. Tang! The second bolt chased after the first as if I shot them at the same time. Only my gift could achieve this rapid fire technique.

Koong! Koong!

A heavy sound rang out. The first bolt struck the center and the second bolt split the first in half to hit the target.

“...”

I nodded in satisfaction. My stats had decreased, but the results still seemed great. I felt confident in dominating most enemies with a single shot thanks to my accuracy and stigma.

“I wonder what everyone else is doing.”

I suddenly grew curious about the 200 that arrived in this world. Did they all start at the very bottom like me or did they start higher? Maybe some of them became aristocrats and could better grasp our situation. I took out the Book of Truth to find out.

“Where is Kim Suho in this world?”

I assumed this question would take 2 streaks, which might be risky given my limited physical abilities. However, I wanted to know Kim Suho’s location no matter what.

[Kim Suho is in the Republic of Leores in the south.]

“Oh?”

My eyes widened.

“That’s where I’m going.”

I couldn’t help but laugh and thanked my luck again.

* * *

[Arunheim, March 8th of Kairos Calendar, Late Night at Duchy of Lorenzo]

“Huu...”

Short blue hair and sharp facial features. Not even dirt and bulky armor could hide the beauty that once charmed the entire kingdom.

Anyone would notice this mysterious, yet filthy woman. This fact made Harin, the last survivor of Leon, tremble in fear even more.

“Huu...”

She wandered alone in a stable near the castle wall and managed to arrive at the duchy of Lorenzo thanks to the help of her knights. Her only companion had left to divert the enemy.

— Wait!

She suddenly heard a man shout.

“Hup!”

Harin hid behind a wall and covered her mouth.

— Let’s search elsewhere! The night is still young.

— Great idea! Let’s go!

“Haa...”

She waited in the dark for the aid from Airun to arrive. Footsteps from passersby and wild animals constantly startled her.

“How much longer do I have to wait?”

She felt humiliated asking Airun for help, but had no other choice. Staying alive felt more important than her dignity. She had asked for a sharpshooter and needed to cross a rugged mountain range to escape.

“Wait, did she...?”

She couldn't rule out the possibility that Airun betrayed her. She knew Airun wasn't the type to go back on her word, but... Harin clasped her hands and prayed for Airun to remember all the good things the Leon clan had done. Then...

“Is that you?”

A voice captured Harin's attention. Startled, she stepped back and raised her head. There, she saw a robed man hidden in the shadow of the castle wall. Harin gulped and looked at him.

“You are?”

She felt relieved, but only briefly. The tension in the atmosphere returned as she suspected the man might be an assassin from the royal family.

“I'm the receiver of this copperplate.”

The man showed Harin the copperplate she had given Airun. This proved he belonged on her side, but Harin still couldn't deny the possibility that Airun might've betrayed her.

“Did Airun send you?”

“That's right. I'm the pawn.”

“Pawn?”

Harin felt confused by his words, but chose to believe him. She wouldn't make it to Leores no matter what even if Airun did betray her.

"Nice to meet you. I'm Renha." Harin gave an alias and reached out.

"I'm Kim Hajin."

The man also introduced himself and they shook hands. He would now become her bodyguard.

"Kim Hajin..."

His name sounded rather strange, which made him more suspicious.

"Yes, that's me."

The man nodded without suspecting anything. This made Harin feel slightly more comfortable. He seemed too lax for an assassin.

"I only have one horse. Do you know how to ride horses?" Harin nonchalantly asked.

"Hm? Ah, yes. I can."

"Well then..."

Harin nodded and pulled her horse out of the stable.

"Let's ride her together. Ah, but before that..."

Harin suddenly realized she didn't know her bodyguard's rank.

"Are you..."

However, she stopped midway. It would be rude to ask for his rank if he was a knight. It might be better if they knew nothing about each other if she actually made it out of Arunheim alive.

“A sharpshooter?”

She decided to change her question and wanted to confirm that Airun sent a sharpshooter.

The man nodded with a smile.

“Yes, I’m a sharpshooter.”

Harin felt more than satisfied with that, but her bodyguard added another sentence she would've been perfectly happy without.

“I’m Kim Hajin, an F rank sharpshooter.”

“Pardon?”

Harin’s mind went blank. F rank? Did this man mean the same F rank she knew? The F rank that symbolized trash?

Harin dumbfoundedly looked at the man for a while before asking.

“Did you say... F rank?”

“Yes.”

“...”

Only then did Harin finally get a good look at the man. He dressed nothing like a knight and looked more like a common soldier. Coincidentally, the man even showed her his ID.

“You can trust me. This is my identification card with my name and rank.”

[Secret Service Soldier, F rank Sharpshooter Kim Hajin]

“This is just—”

Trust me? How could I trust you? Harin suddenly grew dizzy and stumbled from her stress-induced anemia.

“F rank...”

She grabbed her head and only felt resentment.

Airun, how could you? I know I was asking for a lot, but an F rank is just too much. He won't even survive the mountains I have to cross...

“Why...”

The troubled Harin sank to the floor.

Chapter 320

A New Path (2)

[The Rotio Mountain Range, 1400 km in length and 240 km in width, is located between the Republic of Leores and the Arunheim Kingdom. Each mountain peak has a unique environment and is filled with powerful monsters that prevent humans from living there. Keilin Mountain and seven others, all over 5000 meters, are included in this mountain range...]

A safe road existed between the duchy to the republic, but Harin chose to travel over the mountain range. That told me enough about her situation.

“Did you study up?” Harin asked.

I placed the book down and nodded.

“Somewhat.”

We stayed in the stable with Harin’s beloved horse. I ran to a bookstore first thing in the morning and picked up a book about the Rotio Mountain Range.

“...”

Harin gave me an odd look. She doubted my trustworthiness and most likely lamented having to depend on a mere F rank soldier.

“It’s fine if you give up.”

Harin bitterly spoke after some time.

“The Rotio Mountain range is infamous. It’s not a place a mere soldier can survive. I’m confident in my martial prowess because of my knight training, but I can’t guarantee your safety on such a dangerous trip.”

She honestly spoke instead of blaming anyone or complaining.

“No, it’s fine.”

I accepted the situation. Climbing a mountain didn’t pose any problems with parkour. My art only performed better with more obstacles. Moreover...

[Harin – Eldest Daughter of the Leon Clan, Devil Hunter]

Harin’s status showed a surprising detail, Devil Hunter. Obviously, I had to keep an eye on her.

“Sigh... I wonder where your confidence comes from.”

Harin furrowed her brows before gulping a bottle of water in one go.

“Then let’s make something clear before we set out. I won’t hesitate to leave you behind if anything happens.”

“Yes, I understand.” I nodded.

“Then shall we go?”

Tzzzt— tzzt— A square box Harin set in the corner emitted strange noises. It spat out a piece of paper like a printing machine. Harin snatched the paper and began reading it.

“What’s that?”

“I asked my friend to investigate your background,” Harin simply responded.

“...”

Don’t people usually keep background investigations a secret? I didn’t know whether to call her honest or shameless.

Harin glanced at me and murmured, “Please understand. It’s just to confirm whether your identity is real or not.”

“Ah, yes.”

I felt curious about my background as well, so I sat still. Harin’s eyes widened after a while.

“You were an herbalist?”

“Huh? Ah, yeah.”

“Yeah?”

Harin’s eyes turned sharp since I subconsciously spoke in a casual manner.

“Ah, my apologies.”

“I don’t know when we will say farewell, but please don’t forget your manners.”

Harin glared at me before reading the paper again.

“Your family...”

She paused and didn’t finish her sentence. Then she slowly raised her head and dropped the paper in a fluster when we made eye contact.

“C-cough.”

Her honest reaction meant I didn’t have parents in this world. The co-author sure kept that one detail consistent.

“Are you finished?”

“Yes, but I want to ask again. Will you really not give up?”

I grinned and nodded.

“Understood then. Leines!”

Harin lightly sighed and led her horse, Leines, out of the stable. Meanwhile, I glanced at the paper lying on the floor.

[Lorenzo's F Rank Knight, Kim Hajin] [Special Note – Has experience working as an herbalist at the duchy's outskirts.] [Training Records – 510 shots, 610 lookouts, 410 close combat... Has the potential to become a B rank sharpshooter.] [Family – Orphan. Came to the Lorenzo Temple at 6 years old and stayed for 10 years before becoming an herbalist.]

“Do you really know how to ride a horse? Ah, I'll get rid of the report.”

Harin asked again. She saw the report in my hand and burned it with her magic power.

“Do you know how to ride a horse?”

“Of course...”

I took the reins and led Leines as the sky grew brighter.

* * *

Harin thought to herself while sitting on her horse. This sharpshooter, his horse-riding skills are better than I imagined. I've never seen anyone handle Leines so well.

— Hiiiing!

Leines suddenly cried and came to a stop. Kim Hajin pulled the reins back.

“It seems like we're here.”

“Already?”

She hid her surprise and looked around. A sky-high mountain range filled the distant view. Only 40 minutes had passed from the duchy to Rotio Mountain Range. Their speed felt incredible.

“You’re right.”

Harin hopped down from Leines’ back and undid the reins and saddle. Leines understood what that meant and shook her head while clacking her hooves. Unfortunately, Leines’ journey would end here.

“You can go now.”

Leines stomped and expressed reluctance.

“You did well to get me here. You’re an excellent horse, so you’ll be able to live happily with an owner of your choice.”

Harin consoled the horse. She stood at the entrance to the mountain range and spoke with determination.

“Let’s go.”

I nodded at her. “I’ll take the lead.”

The first mountain we had to overcome was Ploriun. A bone-chilling cold filled the air like any other mountain over 2000 meters.

“Will you?”

Harin still seemed doubtful, but asked in a nicer tone than when we first met.

“Don’t worry. I have good eyes,” I confidently replied.

* * *

[24 Hours Later, 2350 Meter Mark on Ploriun]

“Haa... Haa...”

I lay on a cold rock halfway up the mountain. I could easily climb thanks to parkour, but my stamina ran out. After all, we climbed without stopping for 24 hours.

[Your stamina has increased by 0.3 points.] [Your vitality has increased by 0.2 points.] [Your strength has increased by 0.2 points.] [Your stamina has increased by 0.1 points.]...

Of course, my stats quickly rose again. Harin said it would take at least 3 months to get over the mountain range, so my stats should mostly recover by the end of this trip.

“Are you okay?” Harin looked down at me and asked.

I silently nodded.

“Your stamina is better than I thought,” she murmured. Then she examined the grass in the area and harvested some. She also picked up some sticks for kindling and stored them in her bag.

She even took the time to explain as I stared at her.

“We have to gather as many herbs, kindling, and food as possible. The forest will disappear once we get up into the extreme cold.”

“I see.” I nodded and raised my body.

Harin gave me a strange look. “You’re done resting already?”

“Pardon? Ah, yes. Let’s go.”

My stats increased as I used up stamina, so always keeping myself a little tired would lead to the best results. We picked up our bags and began climbing again. Icy dirt replaced the greenery as we moved further up. The chilling cold cut into my skin like blades, but [Random Consolidation System] also boosted the heat-resistant properties of my clothes. I endured it slightly better.

I looked at Harin enduring the cold with qi reinforcement. Seeing this reminded me of her setting, [Devil Hunter]. She undoubtedly served an important role against Baal in this world. Without a doubt, I had to keep her safe.

“Haa, haa.”

The extreme chill became too harsh to endure once we reached the 4000 meter mark. I had no choice but to strengthen my equipment with stigma’s magic power.

“Are we going the right way? I can trust you, right?” Harin suddenly asked and sounded extremely cold.

“Yes, just follow me.” I confidently replied, but perhaps my tone provoked the mountain as snow poured down.

“It’s a snowstorm! Be careful!” Harin immediately shouted.

She headed in the opposite direction as she said that. The person who told me to be careful lost her sense of direction due to the whiteout. I grabbed her wrist and pulled her back as she headed towards a cliff.

“Ah! W-Who is it! Is it you?”

“Yes, it’s me. I can hear you fine, so you don’t have to shout. Just follow my lead.”

This snowstorm even contained magic power, which made it all the more difficult to endure.

“Whew... I see a cave ahead.”

No one would curse us for taking a break considering how long we climbed without rest.

We trudged to the natural cave about 500 meters away.

* * *

[28 Hours into the Climb, Cave on Ploriun Mountain]

Tk— Tk—

A campfire burned as three skewered fish cooked above it. Harin smacked her lips and swallowed her saliva. She murmured as if to give an excuse when I stared at her.

“It’s been a while since I’ve eaten meat.”

“Really?”

“Campfires leave behind tracks.”

“Mmm... You’ve been on the run for a long time?”

Harin flinched. Her eyes trembled until she deeply sighed and spoke, “Yes, I’m on the run. That’s why I chose this mountain range.”

“Why are you running away?”

“It’s better if you don’t know. In case I get captured, that is.”

With that, Harin picked up a skewer. I felt a bit disappointed in not hearing the full story, but left it for another day. I looked outside the cave, but the snowstorm showed no signs of ending. Then I turned back to Harin.

Nom, nom—

She busily ate the fish and finished it in the blink of an eye.

“By the way...” Harin sat straight and looked at me somewhat suspiciously. She turned serious.

“Are you really an F rank soldier?”

“You’ve seen the report,” I replied with a grin.

“An F rank soldier can’t possibly endure Ploriun’s extreme cold.”

Her words made sense, but I simply gave the same answer she did.

“It’s better if you don’t know.”

A new alert suddenly popped up.

[A core character in this world, Devil Hunter Harin, has taken an interest in you.]

“I see.”

Harin closed her mouth. We didn’t talk to each other after that and just stared at the snowstorm outside. Soon, Harin glanced over and handed me a skewer. I told her she could have it.

“I have another question.”

She asked while nibbling on the fish.

“Why did you join Lorenzo’s army?”

I didn’t have an answer to that question. I planned on remaining silent, but came up with a good idea instead.

“Cough...”

I leaned against the cave wall to set the atmosphere. Then I wore a solemn expression and purposefully looked a bit nervous.

“To defeat a devil, maybe?”

“...!”

Her body shook and she widened her eyes. I just wanted to feel out her [Devil Hunter] title, but it worked better than expected.

“Devil?”

“Yes,” I nonchalantly replied. It didn’t matter what she asked from here. She already found out about my orphan status through her investigation. No one knew my background before I came to the orphanage, so I could make up anything as I pleased.

“You...” Harin swallowed hard and asked again.

“Do you actually believe devils exist?”

I put on the best act imaginable after hearing her words. I clenched my teeth and fists so hard my veins showed and I roughly brushed my hair back.

Harin carefully observed my reaction.

“...”

I remained silent and shook my head. She grew impatient and approached me.

“Tell me. Do you believe in the existence of devils?”

“...”

I sharply glared at her to stop her from asking any further, but Harin didn’t back down. We got into a staring contest for a few minutes. Then I muttered as though I gave up.

“When I turned six... it killed my family.”

Harin’s face turned stiff. Most likely, she thought about my family background that she read.

“A human turned into a horned monster and killed everyone.”

I tried to act angry.

“A devil is the only word to describe him.”

“ ... ”

Harin fell silent and backed away. She closed her eyes and pondered in the dark cave. Soon, she nodded with a sad expression.

“I see.”

She seemed to have reached her own conclusions and confidently spoke.

“I understand now.”

Harin stared at me like a fellow comrade.

“I understand why Airun sent you to me.”

She took the bait.

Chapter 321

A New Path (3)

[Republic of Leores]

A mysterious world lay beyond the demon realm gate. Three kingdoms and one republic existed on the continent of Kruni. Kim Suho became one of the republic's sword commanders in this unfortunate world that would soon be destroyed.

“So you're saying Baal will soon destroy this world?”

Aileen wore a somewhat worn-out uniform and asked Kim Suho in his sword commander office. She served as a maid to a high ranking politician in the republic.

“That's right.”

“And we have to stop Baal to pass the gate's test?”

“Yes, exactly.”

Kim Suho nodded and handed Aileen a book. She frowned at it.

“What's this?”

“It's an item I got as a reward for clearing a quest.”

“Quest? Oh, right. I have a quest too. What was yours?”

“I had to enlighten the president's daughter in the way of the sword.”

“What kind of quest is that?”

Aileen grumbled and received the book. The title read, [Summary of the Past and Future].

“Hmm.”

She frowned once again after opening the book because it only contained blank pages.

“What the heck. I don’t see anything.”

“Huh?”

Kim Suho widened his eyes, but soon understood the situation.

“Ah, I guess I’m the only one who can read it.”

“What? Why?”

“Here, let me read you the most important chapters.”

Kim Suho slowly recited the book so Aileen could understand.

“First of all, this world is also currently undergoing a demon realm transformation. Fortunately, the people of this world discovered an ore called purification crystals and managed to slow the process.”

To summarize the past, the people of Kruni successfully averted the demon realm transformation thanks to the purification crystals and devil hunters.

“Devil hunters?” Aileen widened her eyes.

“Yes, they’re humans who are particularly strong against devils. Devil hunters can inflict lethal harm upon devils whether or not the devil has fully descended or remains in an incarnation body.”

According to the book, devil hunters of this world had already killed a total of 8 devils.

“Well, sounds to me like stopping Baal is awfully easy then.” Aileen shrugged.

“No, the next part is the most important.”

Kim Suho read the paragraph out loud.

“The devils decided to stir up division among the humans. Baal possessed the prince of Arunheim and ousted the Leon clan, whose members served as devil hunters for generations. The Leon clan’s eldest daughter, Harin Von Leon, attempted to escape to the republic. However, she failed and died. Baal descended two months later.”

Baal, the strongest devil, easily crushed this world without devil hunters.

“Baal...” Aileen muttered.

“So we only have 2 more months.”

“Two months and three days. Baal destroyed the world in 3 days after he descended.”

“What? 3 days? Seriously?”

Aileen’s expression stiffened. Even Orden couldn’t destroy the world in 72 hours.

“Yes, it took him 71 hours to be exact.”

“...”

Aileen subconsciously bit her fingernails and Kim Suho faintly sighed as he watched her.

“Aileen, you should quit your job and become my maid.”

“What? Your maid? Are you out of your mind?”

“We don’t have a choice. The most important thing right now is to stick together. Also, we have to restore our strength and gifts.”

Kim Suho shrugged. He managed to locate Aileen since he could mobilize informants as a sword commander. He should be able to find the others too with the right composite sketches.

“First, I’m going to gather our party and save the Leon clan’s eldest daughter.”

“Save her? Isn’t she already dead?” Aileen doubtfully asked, but Kim Suho only grinned.

“Who knows? After all, there are 198 of us in this world.”

* * *

[Rotio Mountains, Peak of Plorium]

We reached the peak, but felt as if our bodies would crack due to the severe -50 degree temperature. However, we adapted over time. Harin and I exchanged glances before descending the mountain.

“Six more peaks like this and we’ll reach the republic.”

She said while leaving footsteps across the snowfield.

“Thank god,” I sarcastically remarked.

“Hang in there.”

She smiled and seemed much more comfortable after the cave incident.

“Oh, and... the one who murdered your family was probably a djinn, not a devil.”

Harin whispered from close behind. I glanced at her.

“You’ve been thinking about what I said this entire time?”

“Of course, how could I not?”

Harin smiled and we continued to walk. Climbing down felt much easier than going up. The cold drastically decreased after 3 hours. Wild boars, hawks, and monsters such as Yetis began to appear. We easily dealt with them. The boars and hawks served as a great food supply and we stored them in Harin’s spatial pocket.

“Wait.”

However, I felt a faint presence spying on us when we reached the midpoint. Definitely not a monster or a passerby. What kind of person would voluntarily climb this mountain?

“Take out your sword.”

Harin did as I instructed. Sssk— I also took out my crossbow and nocked a bolt. Kiiik— Nothing could hide in such a quiet and open place as this mountain range. The enemies noticed our hostility.

Six assassins in white robes jumped out from the snow-covered hills and trees.

“It’s Icarus.”

Harin muttered as she glared at them. She sounded angry and troubled.

“Icarus? What’s that?”

“They’re a group of assassins who secretly work for Arunheim’s royal family. Looks like they’ve been waiting for us.”

“Mmm.”

I nodded and looked at the assassins surrounding us. It would be hard to handle all of them in my current state.

Then something strange happened. One of the assassins looked at me and began trembling. Confused, I turned towards this assassin who looked too small to be a man and had black hair poking out of her robe. Finally, she called my name.

“Kim Hajin?”

“Huh?”

My eyes widened when I saw through the assassin’s robe. The woman underneath possessed eyes that sparkled like obsidian.

“Boss?”

“Y-Yes! It’s me!”

She quickly nodded and... slowly approached one step at a time. The other assassins looked at us bewildered. I whispered into Boss’ ear when she came close enough.

— What are you doing here?

— I don’t know. I was with them when I woke up.

— Ah, really?

Boss probably became an assassin the same way I became an F rank sharpshooter. I glanced at the assassins over her shoulder. They stood still in confusion.

“W-What’s going on? Have you been working with them this entire time?” Harin shouted in shock.

“Huh? Oh, of course not. I’m on your side.”

I shook my head and pulled Boss towards me. The fight just went from 2 against 6 to 3 against 5. Everything felt much more balanced now.

“Boss?”

“Hmm?”

“Could you take care of them?”

“Of course.” Boss nodded with a smirk.

“How much of your abilities have you recovered?”

“I’ve still got a ways to go, but...”

A dark shadow rose from behind her and turned into sharp blades that resembled spider legs.

“I can take care of them.”

The shadow blades flew towards the assassins and they stepped back in surprise. Only their leader came forward.

“Aiken! Just what are you doing—”

“My name is not Aiken.”

However, Boss had no intentions of listening to him. Chwaaak! She wielded her shadow and her blades swiftly pierced the assassins. Chwaak... Scarlet blood splattered on the snow. Harin accidentally dropped her sword as the scene unfolded.

* * *

We made a campsite on Ploriun about 1300 meters above sea level and decided to take a break before moving on to the second mountain, Lokio. Harin kept the tent in her spatial pocket and I set it up.

“How do you two know each other? You called her Boss. Were you members of the same squad?”

Harin looked at us in the cozy tent and I could only shrug.

“She’s a friend of mine from back home. Don’t worry. She’ll be a great addition to our team.”

Harin still looked uneasy despite my word of honor. I glanced at Boss and she placed a hand on Harin’s shoulder.

“Worry not. I’ll protect thee.”

“...”

Why is she speaking like that? I suppressed my laughter and Harin also frowned in suspicion. Soon, she nodded with a sigh.

“It’s not like I have a choice. I’m tired. Let’s get some rest.” Harin bitterly remarked and lay on the tent floor.

Boss pointed at her and mouthed a silent question.

— Who is this woman?

— An important client. She’s a devil hunter.

I replied.

— Devil hunter?

— Yes, I’ll explain the details later.

“Enough with the silent conversation.”

I said with a smile.

“We should get some sleep too.”

I felt exhausted after climbing a 5000 meter mountain in 3 days.

“Okay.”

Boss nodded as I lay on the tent floor.

“Yaawn.”

I closed my eyes. Ssk— ssk— However, I heard a sound shortly afterwards and opened my eyes again. Boss spread her blanket and prepared to lay next to me.

“Ah...”

“...”

Our eyes met and we silently stared at each other. Boss coughed and spoke first.

“We don’t have much room.”

Zzz— Zzz— We could hear Harin snoring. I glanced over to make sure she actually fell asleep and nodded.

“It’s okay. Please lay down. I’ll allow it this time.”

“You’ll allow it? Well then...”

Boss lay next to me in a sulking manner and our shoulders touched in the small tent.

Around 10 minutes passed in absolute stillness.

I felt tired, but couldn’t sleep for some reason. I turned to the side and saw Boss lying straight as a vampire in a coffin with her eyes closed.

“Boss, are you sleeping?”

No answer. She seemed to have fallen asleep even though I recalled her saying she never needed to sleep. I stared at Boss with a smile.

“Hmm...”

Was it because I hadn’t seen her for so long? Maybe we met at such an unexpected place that I felt extra glad to see her. She looked prettier than usual. I slowly reached for her hair and brushed the soft, silky strands.

“...”

Still no response, so I proceeded to pinch her cheek. Streeetch— Her cheek easily stretched. It felt soft and tender like a mochi. I could get used to playing with Boss’ cheek.

“...”

Boss opened her eyes and turned to look at me. I slowly let go of her cheek.

“What are you doing?” she asked.

“Hmm? Oh... nothing. It’s just that...”

I smiled and stretched my hand towards her head. Then I picked up a leaf in her hair.

“You had something stuck there.”

“...”

Boss looked at me without a word. We stared at each other for a long time. Long enough for me to notice her hair and clothing had become disheveled.

Suddenly...

Her scent struck me from our close distance. I could feel her breath and her red lips came into view. A certain desire consumed me.

— Gulp.

I swallowed hard and my heart raced. Then I moved without thinking.

Chapter 322

A New Path (4)

I reached out to Boss. My crude hand touched her cheek and I could feel her softness. A bitterness rose within me as I saw my calluses from nocking the crossbow. I had grown used to this world more than I imagined. The urge within me disappeared and an unknown heaviness replaced it.

However, Boss moved this time instead. Her cold, yet warm hand grasped mine and kept it from shaking. We looked at each other while holding hands. Neither of us said a word in this strange atmosphere.

I slowly approached her. Close enough for our bodies to fully touch. My heart grew louder and I could also hear another heartbeat. Did she feel just as nervous? I felt a little embarrassed and happy at the same time.

Just as our breath mixed and our lips almost touched...

“Cough.”

An intentional cough rang out and the romantic mood disappeared. We widened our eyes in surprise. Gulp— I swallowed hard and stared at the corner of the tent. Harin took up two people’s worth of space and only then did I realize how close Boss and I became.

“...”

I scooped away with a bitter smile. Boss remained expressionless, but soon glared somewhat aggressively at Harin.

“I’m tired.”

I loudly murmured and lay down. I stretched out my arms and stared at the tent's ceiling. My heart still thumped and a smile lingered on my face. Nothing happened, but my mood felt great. I decided to fall asleep while this feeling lasted. I wanted to enjoy every moment with the end approaching. I closed my eyes.

“...?”

Something pressed on my arm. I curiously opened my eyes again and saw Boss' head over my arm. She slept on it like a pillow. I couldn't tell whether she actually fell asleep or just pretended. Regardless, I turned back to the ceiling with a smirk. It felt a bit uncomfortable, but I didn't mind. Boss' small head barely felt heavy at all.

* * *

We climbed past the second peak, Lokio, and arrived at the third peak, Kilata. Kilata's environment resembled a jungle with all sorts of threats like giant mosquitoes, elemental snakes, crimson monkeys, and king alligators. It also contained quicksand swamps and magic-eating plants.

We managed to traverse this hellish mountain with Boss' strength and my incredible eyesight. Boss didn't lose too much of her strength because of her assassin background.

“Kilata is more difficult than the previous mountains. It's worse than I imagined.”

Harin murmured. It took us 5 days to reach the mountain's midpoint at 3500 meters. In comparison, Ploriun and Lokio only took us 2 and 4 days respectively to climb.

“Just finding a place to stay the night is annoying here.”

Kilata didn't have any caves and sleeping on the ground would be impossible because of the monsters. We could only sleep in the sky or not at all.

My stats recovered to a certain extent and I could easily build a shack with my eyes closed. I built us treehouses with stigma's magic power and all the wood surrounding us.

“I’ve seen it multiple times, but... your craftsmanship is beyond human...” Harin muttered as she looked around the shack. I inwardly laughed since this one might be my best work yet.

“I’m a descendant of the dwarves.”

“Dwarves?”

“Yep, I’m not kidding either.”

“...”

Harin blinked in a daze. I’m not sure if she believed me, but she seemed to have heard of dwarves.

Whish—

Boss arrived with a strong gust of wind. She took charge of procuring food and arrived with some birds and berries.

“Do these look edible?”

“Yep.”

According to [Observation and Reading], the bird could be considered a delicacy called [Licor]. The berries simply appeared as [Delicious Tropical Fruit]. I seasoned the bird meat and started a campfire. Then I skewered the meat and placed it over the fire. Six skewers finished in the blink of an eye. Each person received two and I presented the berries as dessert. We finished our meal in 15 minutes.

“It’s getting dark.”

Night time arrived earlier in the swampland. Darkness surrounded us by 5 in the afternoon.

“Thanks for the meal. Should we rest now?” Harin leaned against the wooden wall as she rubbed her belly.

“Sure.”

I spread out the bedding I made with soft leaves from the jungle. Harin immediately lay down and I lay across from her. Boss lay next to me and stared as if asking to use my arm as a pillow again.

“You two”

Harin suddenly opened her mouth and we subconsciously flinched.

“W-What’s up?”

“You said you believed that devils exist, right?”

Harin sounded serious, so I strained my ears. I could tell this would be an important piece of information.

“Yes.”

“Then do you remember the incident from a month ago?”

“Incident?”

“The noble Leon clan was destroyed for committing treason. You know, for spreading the rumor that the prince was an incarnation of a devil.”

I only heard about this for the first time, but nodded anyway.

“Yes, I have.”

“It’s hard not to have heard about it.”

Harin paused and deeply sighed. “It’s not a lie.”

She continued more seriously than before.

“Arunheim’s prince, Krisbell, houses the devil Baal in his body.”

“...”

I quietly listened and reflected on Harin's words. Then something she said caught my attention. Arunheim's prince, Krisbell. Baal's incarnation body. Krisbell and Baal. Kris... bell.

“...!”

I turned to Boss with wide eyes. She also seemed to have realized something and wore a shocked expression.

* * *

[Arunheim's Palace – Arun]

Arunheim Kingdom ruled as a superpower on the continent along with the Republic of Leores. It advocated a caste system, but also featured something called the common promotion system. This allowed talented commoners to rise in status. Some called it the kingdom where the shackles of slaves looked most beautiful.

Jin Sahyuk stepped into the heart of Arunheim Kingdom, the palace Arun. She walked through the palace halls and reached the most decorated place, the king's quarters.

“This is your past?”

Jewels and ornaments adorned the room. Just the king's quarter could buy an entire castle.

“Foolish and arrogant.”

Jin Sahyuk muttered as she looked around. She couldn't protect her country as a king, but never indulged in luxury like this.

“Yep, this is me.”

Bell answered while sitting on the corner of his bed. His outfit looked different from what he wore on Earth. He wore a gown engraved with gold, enchanted bracelets around his wrists, and enchanted rings on his fingers. Bell called them the kingdom's greatest treasures.

"Royalty from a ruined world and the incarnation body of Baal. That's who I am. A bit complicated, right?"

Jin Sahyuk deeply sighed at Bell. "So I have to kill you here?"

"No, not yet." Bell shook his head, but looked forward to his death and smiled.

"We have two months left, so you don't have to rush. Baal will descend the moment you kill me. I'm sure you need time to prepare."

"..."

Jin Sahyuk looked around the room again. Countless treasures filled this place, but nothing looked useful.

She turned to him once again. "I'm curious about something."

"Hm? Oh, go ahead. I'm about to die, so I'll answer any of your questions as long as I don't have to repeat the past."

Bell looked truly relieved as Jin Sahyuk asked in a small voice.

"How did you become Baal's incarnation body?"

Bell's face stiffened a bit. However, his smile quickly returned.

"I wanted to see someone one more time even if I had to sell my soul to a devil."

"Sell your soul?" Jin Sahyuk frowned.

"Yes, humans all have something they want. For me, it was going back in time."

Jin Sahyuk's eyes widened. Such a phenomenon transcended miracles.

To go back in time while maintaining one's memories. Only Earth's Shin Myungchul ever achieved that.

"Going back in time?"

"That's right. I'm a regressor. I sold my soul to Baal in exchange for going back in time."

"..."

Jin Sahyuk found it hard to understand. She furrowed her brows and glared at him, but he simply smiled. Kiik— The door opened and another man walked in.

"So you're Jin Sahyuk."

She turned towards a man with a sharp expression. Jin Sahyuk knew he had to be Yi Yeonjun.

"That's right. And you're what... his boyfriend?"

Jin Sahyuk smirked and pointed at Bell. Yi Yeonjun frowned and Bell shot up with a flustered expression.

"No, no. Of course not. That's not even funny."

Bell pulled on Jin Sahyuk's shoulders while Yi Yeonjun continued glaring at her.

"Both of you calm down. This meeting is so we can peacefully discuss how to achieve what each of us wants."

Bell seated them down and began their meeting.

* * *

Meanwhile, Shin Jonghak and Chae Nayun met at the house of a noble family called Pritun some distance away from Arunheim's capital.

“So this Leon clan spread a false rumor about the prince being a devil?”

“Yes, now you understand.”

Shin Jonghak clapped and nodded. He woke up as the successor to the Pritun clan and Chae Nayun became his knight.

“Hmm... but why would the Leon clan spread such a rumor? It’s obvious what would happen to them.”

“Probably because they housed a devil themselves, so they spread that rumor to draw attention away. Our clan received orders to kill the devil that escaped from their clan,” Shin Jonghak confidently replied.

“Our clan? Really?”

“Who cares? It’s nice being a noble.” Shin Jonghak grinned and Chae Nayun made a vomiting gesture. Then she asked again.

“So... we have to catch the devil that escaped?”

“Right, catching and killing that devil is the demon realm gate’s first trial.”

“Hmm... It’s surprisingly simple.”

They hadn’t reached anywhere near the truth, but seriously nodded at each other. Their analysis might seem cute from a third party perspective.

“Alright, I’m going to train now that we know our ultimate goal.”

“Huh? Oh... How much strength have you recovered?”

Shin Jonghak grabbed Chae Nayun as she prepared to leave. He didn’t want to let her go after she became a clan member.

“I’ll be back to normal in a month,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

“Then what’s your quest?”

“Recovering my strength is my quest.”

“And the reward?”

“My weapon, Balmung. Why are you asking me all this?”

“Huh? Oh, well... because you’re my knight.”

“I think you’re too into this. Snap out of it.”

Chae Nayun left with a scowl. Shin Jonghak wanted her to stay, so he asked another question.

“Wait. Have you thought of any ways to contact the others?”

“How would I do that? This world doesn’t even have a phone.”

Then Chae Nayun suddenly recalled her 8 star card, [Infinite Communication]. She couldn’t help but wonder if it worked in this world.

“No, wait. Maybe I do have a way.”

Chae Nayun closed her eyes and focused on sending a telepathic message to the most familiar person, Extra7.

— Hey, can you hear me? It’s me, Chae Nayun. Reply if you can hear me.

“Gulp...”

Time continued to pass: 5 seconds... 10 seconds... 1 minute... 3 minutes... No answer ever came back.

“Guess it doesn’t work.”

Chae Nayun smacked her lips and turned back.

“Looks like we’ll have to directly look for them.”

Suddenly...

[Chae Nayun? Is that really you?]

Extra7 finally replied.

Chapter 323

Break-Even Point (1)

[Mount Kilata]

We reached the peak at about 5120 meters. The view at the top looked nothing like the other mountains. The temperature didn't decrease at higher altitudes due to a magic power phenomenon. Kilata maintained the jungle's humid temperature even at its peak.

"We have 3 more peaks left."

Harin muttered as we looked down. We had to climb 3 more mountains to arrive at the republic. I dragged myself up with a sigh.

"Should we get going then?"

Harin glanced at Boss, who nodded and looked into the distance.

"Yes, let's go."

We walked through Kilata's dense forest and swamps again while slaying monsters as they appeared. Our surroundings slightly changed after about an hour.

"Fog?"

A thick, dense fog blocked our view. First, it stayed around our ankles, but soon ballooned and entirely covered Kilata in less than 30 minutes. Harin and Boss couldn't see anymore and stopped.

"It looks like Mirinae's fog drifted down here." Harin calmly informed us.

"Mirinae?"

“Yes, Mirinae is also known as the mountain of fog. I’ve heard of its nickname, but never imagined its fog would be this thick.” Harin bit her lower lip.

“It’s okay.” I grabbed their hands since not even this thick fog could block my thousand-mile eyes. I could still see like usual.

“I’ve got great eyes.”

We continued walking while holding hands. Harin awkwardly followed and Boss willingly trusted me.

This fog felt more like a blessing than a curse because it also blocked the view of countless monsters. We quickly descended thanks to the fog. It only grew thicker, but we traveled from the peak to the midpoint in less than 3 hours.

Then...

[Hey, can you hear me?]

I suddenly heard a voice and stopped.

[It’s me, Chae Nayun. Please answer if you can hear me.]

It sounded like Chae Nayun. She must’ve contacted me through her 8 star card.

“Hajin?”

Boss and Harin looked at me confused as I thought of a reply. However, I found it difficult to form any sentences in my head. This world’s rejective force probably disrupted the card’s communication. I couldn’t form any long sentences and barely managed to send a short one.

[Chae Nayun, is that really you?]

“Kim Hajin? Is there something up ahead?”

“Uh, no.”

Boss prodded me and I began walking again. I received a reply from Chae Nayun after 3 minutes.

[Yeah, it's me. You're also inside the gate, right?]

[Yeah, I'm on my way to the Republic of Leores with the Leon clan's daughter.]

I replied as we walked.

Again, it took her 3 minutes to answer.

[What? Isn't she a devil? Why are you going to Leores? Turn back and bring her here!]

“...?”

What the hell is she talking about?

I tilted my head in confusion.

* * *

[Republic of Leores, Basement Training Room, Presidential Residence]

Kim Suho looked at the woman in front of him holding an iron sword. Her posture appeared flawless and the magic power surrounding her sword felt sharp. His student's growth amazed him. The president's daughter instantly absorbed everything he taught her like a dry sponge.

“You're growing fast.”

The president's daughter, Seraine, didn't smile and only focused on her training despite his heartfelt praise.

“Hi-yah!”

She swung her sword with all her might. Her magic power scratched the floor and rushed towards Kim Suho, but he easily sliced it in half.

“Your magic power is hard as steel. You’ve achieved a lot considering it only resembled a breeze when we first started.”

“—!”

Seraine dashed towards him without a word. Tat! She covered the 100 meter distance with a single jump and slammed her sword down. Kim Suho blocked it with his sword and sparks flew.

Kiik— Kiik—

“I hear you have a favor to ask me.” Seraine spoke as their swords clashed.

Kim Suho smiled as his efforts finally bore fruit.

“Are you finally acknowledging me?”

“I’m not acknowledging anything—”

Seraine focused her magic power around her arms. This increased her muscles, but she still couldn’t push Kim Suho away. She kept pushing until she realized it wouldn’t work and stopped.

“Haa... I’ve merely realized the rumors were wrong.”

Everyone throughout the continent recognized Seraine as a prodigy. In contrast, rumors floated around about Kim Suho being incompetent. Everyone claimed he only became sword commander through connections.

“Is that so? Thank you.”

Initially, she only asked him to teach her the sword because she regarded him as her father’s mistake. She planned to embarrass Kim Suho by beating him in a sword fight, kicking him out, and appointing a more fitting person as sword commander.

However, Kim Suho went beyond her imagination. He possessed enormous strength contrary to the rumors. His sword and magic power couldn't be more harmonious. His sword seemed flawless and Seraine felt the desire to learn from somebody for the first time in her life.

“No need. So what is this favor you— Ah!”

Kim Suho suddenly struck the back of her foot with his sword. Seraine flew into the air, but had experienced this situation hundreds of times. She performed a backflip in midair and escaped from Kim Suho's reach. She moved as if she belonged to a circus.

Kim Suho proudly looked at her.

“I heard there's a clan called Leon in the northern kingdom.”

“Leon?”

Seraine loosened her grip around her sword and Kim Suho calmly continued.

“Yes, they've been falsely accused and exterminated in Arunheim.”

“I know who they are. What about them?”

“The Leon clan's eldest daughter is on her way to the republic.”

“...”

Seraine sheathed her sword. Kim Suho didn't take that as a good sign from someone so obsessed with the blade.

“I understand what you're trying to say.”

However, Seraine adamantly shook her head.

“The answer is no.”

Tak— She snapped her fingers. The door immediately opened and a crowd of knights entered. They served as Seraine’s personal bodyguards.

“Surely you’re aware of our history with Arunheim and all our sacrifices to achieve peace with them. I can’t betray my father and this country just to save Leon.”

Seraine left the training room and her flock of knights followed.

“Sword commander.”

Lekendol, Seraine’s highest ranked bodyguard, wore a black armor and cape. He looked at Kim Suho full of animosity.

“Don’t be so proud.”

“Of course.”

Kim Suho shrugged. Lekendol grilled him some more before finally leaving. Soon afterwards, Aileen entered the training room with Kim Suho’s clothes and a towel.

“Ah, thank you.”

“Why are they so rude to you? Want me to beat them up?”

Kim Suho smiled at Aileen’s suggestion.

“Please calm down. You haven’t fully recovered your abilities yet.”

“Still, she said she would grant you a favor, but didn’t even listen when you actually told her? What’s with that?”

“She doesn’t have a choice. I get it. After all, her country is at stake.”

Kim Suho and Aileen’s conversation continued when...

[Hey Kim Suho!]

Kim Suho suddenly heard a desperate voice. Anyone would recognize Chae Nayun's voice and he listened in confusion.

[It's me, Chae Nayun! Kim Hajin is in this world too! Where are you? Answer me!]

Ah, this is her 8 star card!

Kim Suho smiled after that realization.

Answer... how do I answer again?

He closed his eyes and focused.

— I'm at the Republic of Leores.

He heard Chae Nayun's voice again after 3 minutes.

[Thank god! Kim Hajin is on his way to Leores with Leon's eldest daughter right now! You have to meet them!]

Kim Hajin is coming here with Leon's devil hunter?

Kim Suho widened his eyes.

“Ah, this is, Seraine!”

Kim Suho quickly wiped his sweat and darted out of the training room.

* * *

[500 Meters Above Sea Level, Entrance to Mount Mirinae]

We successfully escaped from Kilata and currently climbed Mirinae, the mountain of fog. The magic fog only grew thicker with each step and even I couldn't see much further ahead now.

I asked with my gaze fixed to the front.

"Harin, what should we look out for on this mountain?"

"We need to look out for people."

"People?"

"Yes."

Harin seriously nodded. On a side note, she already confessed her true identity as Harin, the Leon clan's eldest daughter, when she told us about Krisbell.

"Mount Mirinae is special because of the magic fog that surrounds it. The fog that blocks our view also increases the magic power density in the air. This makes Mirinae the perfect place for training."

Harin continued as we walked side by side.

"For that reason, this place is crawling with hidden experts. Martial artists who seek to become stronger and criminals on the run from the kingdom."

"Mmm..."

Her explanation made sense. This mountain sounded similar to the Himalayas in my settings.

"I understand. For now, let's keep moving until we find a place to rest."

I carefully proceeded since I could only see up to 100 meters ahead. Suddenly, a huge rock appeared in front of us. The oddly shaped rock stood about 30 meters tall. It completely blocked our path and only a cliff lay beyond it. I stopped Boss and Harin.

“I think I’m lost.”

“You, Kim Hajin?” Boss sounded surprised, but I quickly admitted it.

“Yes, this fog is too thick even for me. I see a rock up ahead...?”

Chwaaa! Magic power suddenly erupted from the rock and the fog disappeared from the surrounding area. We could clearly see again and also heard a voice at the same time.

“Who are you?”

The voice resounded with magic power and I spotted a woman sitting cross-legged on top of the rock.

“I asked you a question, dimwit. Answer me.”

Her long hair looked disheveled and she wore a worn-out coat. However, the magic power she emitted felt second to none. Her voice overflowed with magic power and I noticed that Harin completely froze.

“Shimurin...” Harin whispered in a daze.

“Hmm?”

The woman raised her eyebrows. “Look at you. So you’ve heard of me, huh?”

Gulp— Harin swallowed hard and replied.

“Not a person in this world doesn’t know you.”

“Mmm? Well, I guess that makes sense.”

The woman stood up with a smirk. She looked quite tall as I looked up at her.

“That’s Shimurin, the grand magician,” Harin whispered to us.

“Grand magician?”

“Yes, she’s a magician who used to serve the kingdom. However, her genius led her astray and she got involved in strange research.”

“What are you whispering about?”

The grand magician Shimurin viciously looked down at us.

“Do you have the time to talk? I could swallow you alive right this minute.”

A system window popped up in front of me.

[Quest] [Level of Difficulty – Hardest] [Summary – Shimurin is a magician who studied interdimensional migration. She became disillusioned with secular society and took refuge on Mount Mirinae. She abhors humans.] [Goal – Persuade Shimurin to return to the republic or survive against her.] [Reward – Your aether armor.] [Failure – Probably death.]

The highest difficulty and death as failure. I turned to Boss in shock. Her eyes also wandered in the air. It appeared she received the same quest.

“Boss... did you also get a quest?”

“Mmm? Ah.”

I carefully asked and...

“I did. It has the highest difficulty.”

Boss slowly nodded.

* * *

[Arun, Arunheim Royal Palace – VIP room]

The crescent moon’s dim light shone through the darkness below. Jin

Sahyuk deeply pondered in the middle of the night on a terrace where the leaves trembled and owls mournfully cried. She thought about Bell, Kim Suho, Kim Hajin, and herself.

The end is near...

Bell had told her. However, she had no idea what Bell's end would look like. She didn't even know if he would keep his promise. All the uncertainties left her confused, but something else concerned her the most.

"Kim Hajin..."

Bell told her Kindspring was Kim Hajin. A mistake had occurred because of the distortion in time and space. Jin Sahyuk could only believe this after witnessing [Synchronization] with her own eyes. She saw the emotions Kindspring harbored for her inside Kim Hajin.

"Hmm..."

She sighed and turned towards the endless darkness. A cold breeze ruffled her hair and her royal beauty shone even in the dark. She thought about Kim Hajin and Kindspring, who left a scar in her heart. Then she came to a decision.

"If I can go back..."

If she could return to her kingdom full of her mistakes, sorrow, pride, agony, love, and regret...

"I'm bringing you with me."

The synchronization rate referred to the extent in which Kim Hajin became one with Kindspring. She felt confident it would drastically increase if Kim Hajin lived in her kingdom, in their world...

"..."

Jin Sahyuk sighed again and glanced at the invitation on the table.

[Arunheim Nobles' Gathering]

Bell strongly advised her to attend the social gathering. She usually loathed this hypocrisy peculiar to nobility. However...

“I guess I should at least grant his dying wish.”

Jin Sahyuk stuffed the invitation into her pocket.

Chapter 324

Break-Even Point (2)

[Mirinae Mountain]

The grand magician brought us to her home. It looked like a prehistoric hut, but the interior could fit 20 soccer fields. Shimurin locked us in and went outside.

“Shimurin was famous as Arunheim’s grand magician.”

Meanwhile, Harin explained some background information to us.

“She became an official magician at the age of 8, a grand magician at the age of 18, and reached the highest realm in history at 28. That’s why she received the title, the One Closest to the Truth.”

Harin looked around and continued.

“However, she left the kingdom 10 years ago when she turned 30. Her juniors reported her saying she wanted to leave this world before completely disappearing. That’s why everyone thought she committed suicide.”

“I can’t believe she’s been hiding here this whole time.”

“Yes, but I don’t know why.”

Harin nodded.

“Mmm...”

I checked the quest summary once again.

[Quest] [Level of Difficulty – Highest] [Summary – Shimurin is a magician who studies interdimensional travel. She took refuge on Mount Mirinae after being disillusioned with secular society. She abhors humans.] [Goal – Persuade Shimurin to come to the republic or survive against her.] [Reward – Your aether armor.] [Failure – Probably death.]

The summary said she studied interdimensional travel. She probably came here because of that.

“To think Shimurin hid on Mount Mirinae all this time. I’m surprised no one ever noticed.”

“She probably killed everyone who did.”

I shrugged and Harin raised her eyebrows.

“What do you mean?”

“No one noticed because she killed everyone who saw her. She said it herself when we first met. That she could eat us alive.”

“...”

Harin’s face froze, but she soon forced a smile and shook her head.

“No way, a grand magician would never—”

Whoosh. Shimurin suddenly returned like a gust of wind and Harin immediately froze. I stared at the book in Shimurin’s hand. According to [Observation and Reading], [Shimurin’s Magic Book] contained all her research on magic.

“...”

Shimurin began murmuring a spell and her magic power seeped into the book. Boss instinctively covered just the two of us with her shadow barrier.

“W-Wait, what about me—”

Harin muttered as I thought about what to do. The solution should be quite simple. After all, the quest window already showed what Shimurin desired. I took a deep breath and shouted.

“Are you studying interdimensional travel?”

Shimurin’s expression immediately stiffened.

* * *

[Republic of Leores – Underground Prison]

Kim Suho ended up being imprisoned after receiving Chae Nayun’s message and hastily bursting into Seraine’s room. She screamed and fell. Then all the knights guarding her arrested him.

“Geez, couldn’t you have knocked? They almost executed you for an attempted assassination.”

Seraine stared at him dumbfoundedly. He didn’t suffer any harsh treatment thanks to her.

“Seraine, my friend will soon arrive with the Leon clan’s eldest daughter,” Kim Suho spoke from behind the bars.

“Then we’ll let Arunheim Kingdom know a wanted criminal has arrived.”

“...”

Kim Suho clenched his teeth and looked genuinely angry. I guess I shouldn’t have made that joke. Seraine stepped back and cleared her throat.

“Anyways, we can’t let her cross the border even if we don’t tell Arunheim Kingdom.”

“They will be valuable allies.”

Kim Suho refused to give up.

“I know the Leon clan’s eldest daughter is a powerful knight. I’m sure she has the potential to rise to a high position in Leores, but—”

“No, I’m not talking about the Leon clan’s eldest daughter.”

“Pardon?” Seraine tilted her head in confusion.

Kim Suho spoke full of trust and faith in someone else.

“My friend accompanying Leon’s eldest daughter can stop this war by himself.”

“What?”

“You’ll know when you see him.”

Kim Suho knew from experience the terror of bullets compared to arrows. Kim Hajin could easily kill a hundred soldiers with his bullets and overturn any battle.

“But...”

“Lady, don’t listen to him. He’s only here because of his connections.”

Lekendol approached Seraine, but Kim Suho didn’t give up and stared into her eyes. Seraine had no choice but to comply after meeting his gaze for a long time.

“Sigh... fine.”

Honestly, what Kim Suho said had won her over. A man who could stop the war by himself. As someone deeply interested in martial arts, she wanted to know this person highly praised by the sword commander.

“I’ll talk to my father and try to secretly deploy a squad, but make sure no one finds out. Otherwise, we’ll both be killed.”

“Thank you—”

“One more thing.” Seraine held up her index finger.

“We’ll test their skills first if they manage to arrive. Especially the man you speak of. They’ll have to prove their worth. As for the method...”

Seraine pointed at Lekendol.

“He’ll test them.”

Lekendol smiled in satisfaction.

“Yes, I understand. Let’s do that.”

Kim Suho sighed in relief. He trusted Kim Hajin would succeed no matter what.

“Good. Okay, we’ll release you now.”

Seraine looked at Lekendol and he promptly opened the cell.

* * *

[Arunheim]

A gathering of nobles took place at Arun Summit before matters of national emergency. They came together at the royal palace to uphold a long tradition.

“I detest the Republic of Leores.”

Prince Krisbell spoke from next to Jin Sahyuk.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk seemed to be thinking with her eyes closed as Bell continued while staring out the window.

“Because the republic killed someone I loved.”

“Didn’t you go back in time to see this person again?” Jin Sahyuk asked.

“Yeah, and I got to see her for another 6 years. She died at 20 in the original timeline and at 26 in the second. It’s almost as if death is set by fate. Someone fated to die young won’t live past 30 and someone fated to die old will always live past 70. Funny, isn’t it?”

Bell smiled, but his voice soon turned cold.

“A transnational peace conference will take place in the Republic of Leores next month. Representatives from every nation will gather to discuss the demon realm transformation. That’s where I summoned Baal.”

Bell closed his eyes and recalled the past. The peace conference transformed into hell as Baal descended at the heart of the continent and destroyed the world in just 4 days.

“I want you to change that future, Sahyuk. Release me from that fate with death.”

Jin Sahyuk didn’t reply and simply stared at the door. She felt a presence behind it just now.

“Did you call someone?”

She turned to him and asked.

“Hm? Oh, is he here already?”

Bell grinned and raised his body. Then he went to open the door. Kiik — A nicely dressed Shin Jonghak appeared and Jin Sahyuk immediately scowled.

“Shin Jonghak?”

He also noticed Jin Sahyuk and his expression similarly soured.

“What... crazy bitch, why are you here? Prince, this woman might look pretty, but she’s a psychopath. I’ll hold her back, so please escape.”

Shin Jonghak looked back and forth between Bell and Jin Sahyuk. She glared at Bell and demanded an explanation. Bell simply shrugged.

“Characters mentioned multiple times are bound to appear again.”

“What bullshit is that?”

“Bullshit? You’re speaking to the prince! I see you have no manners in this world either.”

Shin Jonghak muttered while pointing at her.

“What the hell are you saying? Don’t you know who this is?”

Jin Sahyuk pointed at Bell and Shin Jonghak closely observed him. He should’ve seen Bell’s face during the Orden Assassination Mission, but he couldn’t recognize the changed appearance. He simply went back to glaring at Jin Sahyuk.

“Shut up—”

“Alright, why don’t we start now that Shin Myungchul’s grandson is here.”

“What?” Shin Jonghak paused at his grandfather’s name. It struck him like cold water.

“Wait, you...”

He finally recognized Bell, who wore a calm expression.

“Take a seat. You’re also part of this story I’m about to tell.”

“...”

Shin Jonghak frowned and refused to sit, so Bell added another sentence.

“Listen up. This is a story about your grandfather and me. A story about regressors.”

Bell took out a crystal ball and threw it at him. It rolled over to Shin Jonghak's feet and he stared at the young Shin Myungchul reflected from within.

* * *

[Mount Mirinae]

“What did you do?”

Harin whispered as she glanced at Shimurin. The grand magician currently led us somewhere else.

“Let's just say we came to a mutual understanding,” I shrugged and replied.

“Mutual understanding?”

“It's a bit difficult to explain.”

Shimurin chased them away to talk with me after I mentioned interdimensional travel 30 minutes ago.

First, she asked how I knew about her research topic. I honestly told her that we came from another dimension. She asked for proof, which no one else would have. However, I possessed stigma and Shimurin could feel the inexplicable power from it as a grand magician. Then I projected the world we came from using stigma's magic power.

Negotiating became a piece of cake after that.

“Tell me. What mutual understanding did—”

“Damn it.” Shimurin suddenly turned around.

Harin froze and didn’t finish her question. What Shimurin said next eased her fears.

“Do we have to keep walking?”

“Pardon?” Harin tilted her head.

Shimurin unleashed her magic power as if all this walking bothered her.

“I’m talking about teleportation. Why can’t we use something like that?”

“N-No, we can. Of course, we can. Why shouldn’t we?”

Harin fiercely nodded and encouraged her. She wouldn’t hesitate to beg on her knees if they could immediately leave this mountain range.

“I can? Good, then I’m going to use it. Is that okay?” Shimurin turned to ask me.

I nodded and her magic circle immediately enveloped us.

“__”

Shimurin muttered a strange chant only she understood and activated her magic circle.

Woong—

The world distorted and I felt a floating sensation. I closed my eyes and my feet soon touched the ground again. I didn’t feel any pain or nausea at all. She had cast a perfect teleportation spell.

“You can open your eyes now, scaredy cats.”

“...”

Everyone opened their eyes.

“Wow.”

I exclaimed in awe. The mountain fog had disappeared and Leores' buildings spread out before us in a city that resembled modern England. We crossed several hundred kilometers in just 3 seconds.

“Let's see... HJ?” Shimurin said while pointing at me.

“Huh? Me?”

“Yeah, you. Follow me. We're going to my workshop. You didn't forget our promise, did you?”

“Ah, yeah. Sure, but it's Hajin. Not HJ.”

“Your name doesn't matter. I just need your magic power.”

Shimurin marched forward.

“Um, what do you mean by workshop? You have something like that here?”

Harin asked as she chased after us and the grand magician nodded.

“Yeah, it's easy to fake your identity here because this country doesn't have a damned caste system.”

She scowled at those last words.

Chapter 325

Break-Even Point (3)

We arrived in Thaines, a small port city in the Republic of Leores. Shimurin guided us to her workshop near the coast. It looked like a huge mansion or a vacation home owned by a millionaire. The gentle ocean breeze brushed past us.

“This way.”

Shimurin deactivated the security magic and opened the door. We slowly entered and the interior looked just as fancy as I imagined.

“So this is where you’ve been all these years? In the middle of a city?” Harin muttered.

“Just because I’m a magician doesn’t mean I have to live in isolation. I only go to Mirinae when I have to meditate or gather research materials,” Shimurin replied with a snicker.

She deactivated her transformation and looked filthy because she hadn’t taken a shower in a long time. However, it only took her 3 seconds to clean herself with simple magic.

“You must be tired from all that climbing. Pick any room you want and rest. Oh, you can explore the city too if you want. Except you.”

Shimurin pointed at me.

“Hejin, follow me to the basement.”

I simply nodded, but Boss frowned from beside me.

“Hajin, I don’t sense any hostility, but be careful. It’s hard to figure out what she’s thinking.”

“Yeah, I’ll be fine. Get some rest, Boss.”

“...”

I dismissed her concerns with a smile and followed Shimurin to the basement.

The mansion’s basement looked more like a typical workshop with magic circles everywhere. A mountain of scrolls sat on her desk and strange plants grew in the corner.

“Is this where you’ve been studying interdimensional travel?” I casually asked.

Shimurin suddenly stopped in the center and turned around. She frowned and her gaze felt sharp as a blade.

“Oi.”

“Yes?”

Her voice grew heavy and I backed away from her overwhelming aura.

“I don’t care how you found out about my research.”

She announced as her magic power flowed out.

“Your strange magic power isn’t enough proof you’re from another dimension. Anyone can create illusions through magic power.”

Her enormous magic power pushed down on me and my breathing grew rough. It felt as if my organs twisted from within.

“I’m only interested in you for one reason.”

The pressure disappeared and I collapsed, desperately gasping for air.

“Your magic power feels close to the truth.”

Her gaze seemed to be piercing through me.

“That pure magic power flows from the strange scar on your arm.”

She looked at my right arm and her magic power ripped my clothes apart. Stigma became completely visible.

Shimurin continued while staring at my tattoo.

“Truth, origin, essence... your magic power contains everything. That’s why I thought it could be the key to my grand magic.”

She turned on the lights after finishing her speech. A staircase led deeper below the basement and she began walking down.

“Should I go with you?” I asked.

“No.”

She stopped and scanned me from head to toe.

“You’re already surrounded by my magic. Rest, and I’ll summon you when I’m ready.”

She continued down after a somewhat threatening declaration. Several system alerts suddenly blocked my view.

[You have completed a high level quest.] [You have completed a quest of the highest difficulty.]

I also received all my equipment back: [Aether], the [Desert Eagle], my [Black Lotus Uniform], and boxes of bullets that included the god-slaying bullet.

“I’ve missed all of you so much.”

Words could not express my joy.

Welcome home, my dear friends.

I equipped myself with all my gear and sent Chae Nayun a message.

[Tell Kim Suho we've arrived in the republic. We're in Thaines.]

* * *

[Arunheim – The Prince's Residence]

The setting sun lit the afternoon sky a blazing red. The prince's spacious room felt almost empty.

"He just left," Jin Sahyuk muttered in a daze.

"Hahaha... Yeah, he did." Bell shrugged.

Only he and Jin Sahyuk remained in the room. Shin Jonghak stomped out after Bell mentioned Shin Myungchul.

"Is it okay to just let him go?" Jin Sahyuk nonchalantly asked. She hadn't expected someone as arrogant as him to leave without a word.

"It's fine. I thought this might happen," Bell calmly replied.

Shin Jonghak's beliefs and values all came from Shin Myungchul. He would continue to evade any discussions on Shin Myungchul out of fear that he might come to doubt his beliefs.

"I'm curious. Can't you just tell me?" Jin Sahyuk muttered.

Everyone knew the legendary Shin Myungchul and his fame aroused her interest. Bell only faintly smiled at her.

"About Shin Myungchul?"

"Yeah."

Shin Myungchul had accomplished a lot in life. He recaptured Seoul with Chae Joochul, drove the djinns out of Korea, established the Hero Association with his colleagues, founded the Jinsung group, and saved millions of lives at the expense of his own.

For these reasons, the people also called Shin Myungchul the one true hero. He embodied virtue and humanity's last hope.

"We were quite similar."

Bell knew everything about Shin Myungchul, including his past life.

"Similar?"

Jin Sahyuk couldn't make sense of that. How could Bell, who she knew as trash, be compared to the respectable hero Shin Myungchul?

"Yeah."

Bell recalled his first encounter with Shin Myungchul and bitterly smiled.

Long, long ago...

He had warned Shin Myungchul about the regression stone and told him it would only lure in devils. The ghost of regression, Baal, would most definitely destroy him and his world for going back in time.

However, love could easily blind a person.

Shin Myungchul readily sold his soul and his world to the devil for a chance to meet his loved one again.

"Yeah?" Jin Sahyuk nonchalantly responded.

"You don't sound surprised. That's the truth about the legendary hero, Shin Myungchul."

"I'm more interested in Baal. Just what is he?"

"He's just a pervert who likes to collect different worlds," Bell simply announced.

“What?”

“Some people collect books and figurines. Baal’s the same. He collects worlds for pleasure.”

Jin Sahyuk boiled with rage and clenched her teeth.

“Then—”

“Baal didn’t meddle with your world though. Akatrina fell by itself.”

Bell answered her question before she even asked. The slightly embarrassed Jin Sahyuk coughed and changed the subject.

“I-I wasn’t going to ask that. So, what’s the demon realm gate then?”

“This place? This place is just a condition.”

“A condition?”

“Yeah, it’s sort of like a contract. A great force requires an equally great restraint. Kind of like Newton’s third law.”

Baal’s existence transcended reality, so he had to go through a proper process to descend.

“The demon realm gate is not an ordeal given to men by Baal.”

Baal chose the demon realm gate as the solution.

“It’s an ordeal Baal placed on himself to descend.”

The demon real gate reenacted the first world he descended on and used that as a medium to transfer himself to another dimension. Baal had chosen this method to descend on Earth.

“Baal won’t be able to descend on Earth if you stop him in this world.”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk only silently stared at Bell. Their staring contest lasted for some time.

* * *

[Downtown Thaines]

I went to the downtown area with Boss and Harin. The ocean breeze gently blew through the bustling harbor city. We toured around, enjoyed the food from vendors, and visited some shops. Seeing a world I didn't create felt somewhat refreshing.

“Hajin.”

Boss called me as I examined magic scrolls in a shop.

“Yes?”

“Look at that.”

Boss pointed to a stall.

[Stuffed Dolls. Starting at just 8 shillings.]

She stared at a particular stuffed bear.

“Do you like bears, Boss? I guess that explains why you liked that bear helmet so much.”

“No, I wouldn't say that. Do you have any money?”

She asked me like a delinquent.

“Ah, yes. I do.”

I grinned and gave her a gold coin. It came from the payment to escort

Harin.

“Mn, thanks.”

Boss walked to the stall and picked up the stuffed bear. One didn't seem like enough, so she also picked up a stuffed cat. I watched her with a smile before turning towards another stall.

Then...

“What.”

Several robed men suddenly surrounded me. They looked huge as though fully armored underneath and each carried a sword on their belt.

“...”

Did the Arunheim assassins already arrive?

“Who are you?”

Boss quickly returned and released her magic power. I also took out my Desert Eagle, but the man who seemed to be the leader spoke respectfully.

“Kim Hajin, correct? We've come to pick you up according to Sword Commander Kim Suho's orders.”

* * *

[Republic of Leores – Basement of Seraine's Mansion]

Seraine received a message from Kim Suho that Harin and her companions had arrived in Thaines.

The fact that they entered the republic without being noticed by the border guards surprised her. She promptly ordered her knights to summon them.

“He’s an F rank sharpshooter from the Lorenzo duchy according to our research.”

“What?”

However, the man highly praised by the sword commander turned out to be an F rank sharpshooter.

“That’s impossible. Perhaps he’s staying at F rank on purpose?”

“Perhaps, but he’s also a rookie who only joined the army a year ago.”

“...”

Seraine fell silent and looked at the man inside the glass prison. He didn’t seem to know they had imprisoned him and nonchalantly yawned in his chair.

“What about the others?”

“We’ve confirmed the identity of the Leon clan’s daughter, but the other one can’t be identified. We couldn’t find any records of her whatsoever.”

“Hmm...”

Seraine furrowed her brows and rubbed her chin. An F rank sharpshooter stopping the war by himself? It sounded like the funniest joke ever. This sharpshooter didn’t seem to be hiding his strength either. He looked dumb and she couldn’t feel any magic power from him. All powerful beings leaked magic power. Not even Kim Suho could prevent that.

“Does Lekendol even need to test him? Did the sword commander lie?”

As Seraine judged Kim Hajin...

KWANG!

The basement door burst open and a knight urgently shouted.

“My Lady, a monster pathway has opened in the capital!”

“What?”

She immediately scowled and the knights guarding Kim Hajin ran out. Seraine continued staring at Kim Hajin.

He looks like an ordinary F rank soldier no matter how much I observe him. It would be fine to leave him here, right? No, what if father finds out?

Koong. Koong. Koong.

“Kyak!”

The man inside the glass prison suddenly knocked.

“Geez, you surprised me! What is it?”

Seraine jumped and realized the man had said something.

“Huh?”

She walked up with a frown and read his lips.

— If they're ordinary monsters... no matter how many there are... I can take care of them... by myself...

“What does he mean?”

The man held up a strange object as Seraine murmured to herself. The Desert Eagle only looked like a lump of metal to her.

“What's that?”

She asked and Kim Hajin grinned.

— A weapon specialized for slaughter.

“Slaughter?”

KWANG!

An artificial earthquake occurred and a large hole appeared in the ground.

Kwaaaa... A mixture of monster cries rang out from the hole. A long time had passed since a monster pathway had appeared so close to the capital. Seraine clenched her teeth and pulled out her sword.

“...”

Then she glanced at Kim Hajin. He stared at her like an innocent child while knocking on the glass. Kim Hajin spoke when their eyes met.

— Let me out.

He looked too relaxed.

KWAAAAA!

The cries of monsters grew louder.

Koong, Koong, Koong.

The man inside the glass prison urged her.

— Just let me out. I’ll take care of them for you.

Seraine frowned as she read his lips.

“Hmph, why don’t you just break out if you’re so confident?”

However, she pushed the button to open the prison. Whish— The door to the glass prison opened and the man leisurely walked out. He stared at her and arrogantly muttered.

“I don’t want to be charged for destruction of property.”

At that moment...

KWAAAAA!

Demonic monsters shot up from the hole in the ground.

Chapter 326

Transnational Peace Conference

(1)

[Leores Sword Institution – Commander’s Office]

Kim Suho paced back and forth in his office. He immediately informed Seraine of Kim Hajin’s arrival when he heard from Chae Nayun. However, he worried about Seraine’s previous declaration that she would test Kim Hajin’s abilities.

“Why are you so worried? Kim Hajin knows how to take care of himself.”

Aileen yawned and slouched in her chair.

Kim Suho awkwardly scratched his neck and also took a seat. “Will he be okay?”

“How should I know? He’s not a kid.”

Mnnn... Aileen stretched.

“By the way, I found some more people.”

“What? Really?” Kim Suho widened his eyes.

“Yep, three more. Rachel, Yoo Yeonha, and Yi Jiyeon.” Aileen smirked at her accomplishment.

“Wow!” Kim Suho exclaimed in surprise.

Then he thought about someone else and his heart sank. Yun Seung-Ah. She had been dragged into this world too.

“The three of them are running a business in a local city.”

“A business?”

“Yeah.”

Kim Suho tilted his head and Aileen handed him a crumpled piece of paper. This document outlined Yoo Yeonha, Rachel, and Yi Jiyeon’s current status. He silently read the paper.

Indeed, Yoo Yeonha seemed to be running a business. She became a merchant’s daughter and her family had run a local business for generations. Rachel served as Yoo Yeonha’s maid and Yi Jiyeon turned out to be a local aristocrat there.

“Looks like they’ve joined hands. Apparently, they’re making tons of money.”

“That’s hardly surprising. Yoo Yeonha is the type who can thrive anywhere.”

She'd even survive stranded on an island. Kim Suho placed the document down with a smile.

Yoo Yeonha had settled in Lecor, a provincial metropolis.

I should visit her after taking care of the current matter with Kim Hajim.

Then...

— Emergency! Emergency! A monster pathway has appeared!

The siren wailed through the speakers. Koong, Koong! Kim Suho immediately rose from his seat and ran out.

“Sigh...”

Aileen stretched and yawned again before chasing Kim Suho.

[Basement of Seraine's Mansion]

“...”

Seraine couldn't believe her eyes even though she stood in the middle of everything.

Kwaaaaaa!

Monsters flooded through the giant hole in the ground. The man extinguishing them looked just as unrealistic.

Tudududu...

The man aimed a strange object at the monsters. His shooting seemed unruly, but his attacks surprisingly killed the monsters with stunning precision. Monsters struck by a bullet immediately died as their heads and hearts exploded. Every single bullet possessed far more power than Seraine at her best.

“Wow, this is endless.”

Kim Hajin chuckled.

He hadn't shot like this in a while, so the excitement and thrill made his heart race. However, he knew he shouldn't waste any bullets since he only had a limited supply here.

Kim Hajin took out the grenade he ordered from Essential Armory that contained dimensional entropy. He had upgraded it with [Bomber], the trait he earned from the Tower of Wish. He also enhanced it with the [Random Consolidation System] and a streak of [Stigma]. The grenade only looked as big as a baseball, but its power would exceed most bombs.

Roll—

He threw it into the hole where the monsters came from.

Then he turned and spoke to Seraine.

“Cover your ears.”

Seraine flinched and covered her ears as instructed.

Chwaaaaa!

The grenade exploded.

Koong!

The giant explosion shook the ground and white pillars of light erupted from the hole because of the grenade’s light attribute.

“...”

Silence descended after the huge explosion and Seraine ran her fingers through her hair.

“Keuk—”

She felt a severe headache coming. What is this? What am I seeing?

Her head felt like it would explode from confusion.

“Mmm.”

In comparison, Kim Hajin calmly moved and looked inside the hole. All the monsters had been wiped out without a trace as expected.

“This place is safe now.”

He proudly declared while carrying the Desert Eagle that transformed into a machine gun.

“Excuse me, Seraine. Does this place have a rooftop?”

“Rooftop?”

She asked back in a daze and swallowed her saliva.

“Yeah, there are more outside, right? I have to get to the rooftop to kill them.”

“There... is one.”

Kim Hajin surrounded himself in aether after Seraine’s confirmation.

“I’ll go on ahead.”

Parkour also increased his physical abilities as he stepped on the walls and quickly climbed to the rooftop like a spider.

“That’s a lot.”

He looked down from the windy rooftop at the monsters that escaped and caused a ruckus on the streets.

“Hmm.”

Kim Hajin lightly sighed and lifted his machine gun. With the thousand-mile eyes, he estimated roughly 20,000 monsters. That meant he had to kill at least 30 monsters with a single bullet.

“Will it work?”

His gift’s power had been reduced, so he didn’t think his bullets would be as accurate. However, these normal monsters probably wouldn’t stand a chance. He aimed at multiple targets, calculated the trajectories, and pulled the trigger without hesitation.

Dudududu...

Bullets rained from the mansion’s rooftop.

[2 Hours Later, Leores Sword Institution]

I went down to the basement with Harin. Seraine, Kim Suho, and several knights waited for us.

“Hello.”

Harin greeted them. Seraine silently looked at her and finally nodded after Kim Suho’s signal.

“Yes, nice to meet you, Lord...”

Seraine stopped midway since no one here should know Harin belonged to the Leon clan. The Leons had been officially annihilated.

“...Harin.”

“Thanks for taking me in, Lord Seraine.”

The way she had been called didn’t offend her. Honestly, Harin could bow down to Seraine for saving her life.

“Yes, and...”

Seraine looked at me completely different from when we first met. Then she stared at Kim Suho before finally opening her mouth.

“Seems like everything you said was true, commander.”

Kim Suho’s expression brightened and his lips twitched. He couldn’t contain his joy and burst into laughter.

“Hahahaha. Didn’t I say so? So, how was my friend?”

“Sigh...”

Seraine took out a document.

“According to our reports, the monsters that came out of the hole included 15,912 low-intermediate ranks, 6534 intermediate ranks, and 301 high ranks. This could only be called a grand invasion. We would’ve suffered serious losses in lives and properties. It would’ve also taken at least 3 days to subjugate all of them. However...”

Seraine stopped and looked at me. This seemed like the right time for me to simply shrug.

“We managed to get everything under control in just 2 hours with the help of a mysterious weapon.”

“A weapon? You mean a person.”

Kim Suho corrected her and Seraine gave him a dirty look.

“Sure, with the help of a person.”

Seraine crossed her arms. She reminded me of Yoo Yeonha, except much more sloppy and inexperienced. The thought made me smile.

“Excuse me, what are you laughing at?”

“Huh? Oh, no, it’s nothing.”

“Ssp... anyways...” Seraine pouted and asked.

“How did you do it?”

“That’s...”

How should I explain?

One bullet killed at least 30 monsters. My bullets moved like guided missiles. I could shoot just about anything from a high enough altitude and still had more than 3,000 bullets left.

“Regardless of the amount, I can kill all weak monsters with the pull of a finger.”

I condensed the complicated explanation into a brief sentence.

* * *

[30 Minutes Later]

I officially reunited with Kim Suho in his office. Harin left to speak with Seraine and Boss returned to Shimurin's mansion. We had to keep our relationship hidden from others.

“I got this from a quest.”

[Summary of the Past and Future]

Kim Suho handed me a book. It contained a summary of this world's past and future.

“Can you see what's written inside, Hajin?”

I opened the book, but only saw blank pages.

“No, I can't.”

“Ah, I guess I'm the only one who can read it.”

Kim Suho regretfully muttered and skipped to the last page.

“This book ends with a description about the transnational peace conference, which will be held in a month and a half.”

“The transnational peace conference?”

“Yeah, this is the last sentence of the book. [A grand calamity will descend on the day of the transnational peace conference].”

I stroked my chin in thought.

I should ask the Book of Truth about this conference once stigma recovers.

“It’s clear something will happen at the transnational peace conference.”

Kim Suho said and I nodded in agreement.

“I’ll look into it later.”

I turned to him. “More importantly, did you find the others?”

“Oh, right. We found Yoo Yeonha, Rachel, and Yi Jiyeon.”

“Really?”

I couldn’t help but smile. I’d been wanting to meet them again. Well, maybe not Yi Jiyeon, but definitely Yoo Yeonha and Rachel.

“Yeah, and they’re not far from here.” Kim Suho beamed.

“Yeah? What have they been up to?”

“Business. Yoo Yeonha already has influence over a local metropolis.”

“Pfft. Really?” I burst into laughter.

“As expected of Yeonha, right?”

I nodded.

“Right.”

“Then how about we go meet them now?” Kim Suho suggested while putting on his coat.

I also straightened my clothes and stood up. “Good idea. You know the way, right?”

“Yeah, you can count on me.”

Kim Suho grabbed the doorknob, but paused as if he suddenly recalled something.

“Oh, before we leave...”

He gave me a warm look and pulled my arm.

“It’s good to see you again.”

He hugged me before I could react. His arms felt as big and sturdy as I remembered.

“What? O-Oh...”

“I’m glad.”

“Huh? Um... sure. It’s good to see you too.”

I patted Kim Suho on the back. Tak, tak, tak. Three times to signal him to let me go. He seemed to have mistaken my gesture and squeezed even harder.

“Sniff, sniff...”

I felt quite uncomfortable, but Kim Suho also happened to smell good. This seemed to be a main character trait as well. Anyways, the hug didn’t feel too bad as I waited for him to release me.

Chapter 327

Transnational Peace Conference (2)

[Megacity, Lecor]

Yoo Yeonha fully utilized her skills in the megacity known as Leores' second capital.

[Merchant Group – Lotus Flower]

Her clan owned a merchant group called the Lotus Flower. In a mere month, she turned them into the most famous group in the area. This could've only been possible thanks to the people around her.

First, Rachel contributed a great deal as Yoo Yeonha's servant. This world amplified the power of elementals because more mana existed here. Rachel's elementals could speed up carts, preserve easily decaying items, and automatically collect herbs.

Next, Yi Jiyoona became the daughter of the renowned Prin clan. The caste system had been abolished in the Republic of Leores, but citizens still considered the Prin clan as nobles. Yi Jiyoona invested her clan's money into Yoo Yeonha's merchant group and even allowed her to borrow the clan's name. The Prin clan possessed a spotless reputation, so Yoo Yeonha's merchant group had no trouble earning everyone's trust.

"Wow, our profit margin is even bigger than I thought." Yi Jiyoona muttered in surprise as she stared at the group's financial statement in their office.

"What are you going to do with all this money?"

Yoo Yeonha shrugged at her question. "First, establish a force. We don't know what will happen from now on.”

She didn't forget this world only existed inside the demon realm gate. They should prepare everything, whether it be military force or money.

“Our chief officer sure is amazing.”

Yi Jiyeon snuggled next to Yoo Yeonha and praised her. Tok, tok— Someone knocked on the door.

“Cough.” Yi Jiyeon switched to a stern expression befitting a noble.

“Come in.” Yoo Yeonha called out with a smirk.

The door opened and Rachel appeared with a long object wrapped in a red veil.

“Oh, you're here, Rachel?”

Yoo Yeonha welcomed her as Rachel walked in with a smile before setting down the item.

“Oh, that must be what I ordered.”

Yoo Yeonha unwrapped the item without hesitation and the ornamental sword emanated a clear aura.

“What's this?” Yi Jiyeon asked.

Yoo Yeonha picked up the sword with an entirely blue blade. She bought this treasure for Rachel.

“Here, take it.”

She handed the sword to Rachel, who quietly stood there and widened her eyes.

“...?”

“It’s a sword that increases the power of elementals. Our world doesn’t have treasures like this since elementalists are so rare, but this world has many. It’s a sword named Wisp.”

Yoo Yeonha placed it in Rachel’s hands. Rachel could only bow with a bitter smile at the unexpected gift.

“Thank you.”

Kwang! The office door burst open and a guard drenched in sweat appeared.

“Demonic monsters! Demonic monsters have appeared!”

“...!”

They ran out of the office and looked outside the merchant group’s building. To their surprise, the city looked too peaceful for demonic monsters to have invaded.

“Where are the demonic monsters?”

“I... don’t know.”

“He didn’t seem to be lying.”

Yoo Yeonha, Rachel, and Yi Jiyeon all curiously tilted their heads when a robed man approached them.

“Demonic monsters?”

His voice sounded familiar as he walked up to Yoo Yeonha. She furrowed her brows and stared at him.

“Who are you?”

“They were here, but not anymore.”

“Pardon?”

Yoo Yeonha bent down and peeked under his hood.

“Ah!” She pointed at the man and shouted.

“You!”

“Yo, it’s been a while.” Kim Hajin smiled.

“Huh? Why is Kim Hajin here?”

“Ha, Hajin?”

Yi Jiyeon and Rachel also felt shocked and stared at him in a daze.

“I’m here too.”

A small child appeared from behind him. Of course, Spirit Speech Master Aileen also tagged along.

* * *

[Priton Clan’s Castle]

The Priton clan’s eldest son, Shin Jonghak, sighed in bed.

“That bastard...”

What the prince said lingered on his mind.

“What does he know about grandfather? And how?”

His anxiety and curiosity turned into chaos.

Tok, tok—

Someone knocked on the door as Shin Jonghak rumbled his hair in agony. He didn’t want to see anyone, but that woman only knocked as a formality.

“Hey, Shin Jonghak.”

As expected, Chae Nayun barged into his room.

“Why are you here?”

He sighed and stared at her. Chae Nayun currently wore an antenna on her head. Wouldn't this make communication faster? She came up with the idea a couple of days ago and foolishly curled her hair up every time she wanted to use [Infinite Communication].

“Have you heard of the transnational peace conference?”

“Transitional peace conference?” Shin Jonghak furrowed his brows at the sudden question.

“I've heard of it. It's exactly what it sounds like.”

“When is it?”

“Next month. Why?”

“Ah, Kim Suho says something will happen on that day. He told us to train and prepare.”

Chae Nayun sat on the corner of Shin Jonghak's bed as he stared at her.

“Kim Suho said that?”

“Yeah, should I contact him again?”

Chae Nayun closed her eyes and shook her body. Brrr— Brrr— Brrr— Her strange actions only seemed cute to Shin Jonghak.

“Haha.”

Shin Jonghak liked her for no particular reason. Just looking at her melted away the dark emotions in his heart. How could he not fall for her?

“Chae Nayun.”

“Huh?”

She opened her eyes and stared at him. He decided to ask about what had been bothering him.

“What do you think about regressors?”

“Regressors?”

“Yeah.”

Chae Nayun slightly frowned. “Why are you suddenly asking about that?”

“Well, you’ve heard about my grandfather being a regressor, right?”

Honestly, he never wanted to admit that rumor. In his mind, it would diminish Shin Myungchul’s achievements and sacrifice.

“Mmm...”

Chae Nayun recalled what she heard from Yoo Yeonha, who once said Kim Hajin might be a regressor. Yoo Yeonha only speculated, but Chae Nayun still thought about the topic.

“Mmm... well.”

She casually replied, “I’m jealous. I also want to go back in time.”

“No, not that. Haha.”

Shin Jonghak laughed and shook his head. It’s my fault for asking Chae Nayun.

“What? Aren’t you jealous? I think it’s amazing if regressors exist. Think about it. It’s not like we’re in a novel. You would have to be incredibly lucky and powerful to go back in time.”

“...”

“At least, that’s what I think. Who cares if your grandfather is a regressor? Do people hate him because of that? No, everyone respects him. His name is written in every history book and his biography is a best-seller. Statues of him can be found everywhere. Why would you even worry?”

Shin Jonghak remained silent. He simply stared at Chae Nayun and couldn’t help but smile.

“Pft... haa,” he faintly sighed and muttered.

“This is why I love—”

“Oi.”

Someone appeared outside the window and cut off his confession.

“What?”

Chae Nayun quickly covered herself in qi reinforcement and Shin Jonghak grabbed his spear from the corner. Only after preparing themselves for battle did they confirm the intruder’s identity.

“How are ya?” Jin Sahyuk sat on the windowsill and stared at them.

“You wench... where do you think you are...”

Chae Nayun cursed and formed a sword with her magic power. Then Jin Sahyuk said something completely unexpected.

“Let’s join forces.”

“What?” They both stared dumbfoundedly at Jin Sahyuk.

“We need to stop a crazy bastard named Yi Yeonjun.” Jin Sahyuk continued with a stern face.

“Hmph, as if we’ll believe you!”

Chae Nayun shouted, but another figure leaped into the room and stopped her before she could release her magic power. Chae Nayun stared at the giant with a muscular body strong as steel.

“Uhahaha, it’s been a while, brat.”

The cheerful voice undoubtedly belonged to Cheok Jungyeong.

* * *

[Merchant Group – Lotus Flower’s Office]

We joined up with Yoo Yeonha and discussed the upcoming transnational peace conference.

“I don’t know what will happen exactly.”

Kim Suho said, but he felt certain a disaster would occur during the event.

“Can’t we just stop the conference?” Yi Jiyeon asked.

“No, it’s already too late to cancel. It took 3 years for all the nations to agree on a date. Canceling the conference would be no different from declaring war.”

Kim Suho had a good grasp of this world’s politics as a sword commander. I glanced at Rachel who sat next to me. She also stared at me and we both smiled.

“What are you two doing?” Yoo Yeonha caught us and glared. Chak! She suddenly clapped.

“You can greet each other later. Focus on the meeting. Kim Suho, are Nayun and Jonghak ready?” Yoo Yeonha asked him.

“Let me ask. Hold on. This thing has a slight delay.”

Kim Suho closed his eyes and nodded after about 2 minutes.

“Yeah, they said they’re ready. Hm?”

He received another message and tilted his head.

“...”

Kim Suho’s expression suddenly froze.

“What? What happened?” Aileen urged him and Kim Suho clenched his teeth.

“Jin Sahyuk and Cheok Jungyeong are with Chae Nayun.”

* * *

[Harbor City, Thaines]

I returned to Thaines on a full moon night and returned to Shimurin’s mansion. Boss would be happy we found Cheok Jungyeong since she must be feeling lonely.

However, a surprising sight greeted me when I arrived at Shimurin’s workshop.

“Right, that’s how you use magic power. Your ability is excellent, but your connection with magic power isn’t delicate enough. It’s because you’re instinctively using your gift rather than magic power.”

Boss didn’t look lonely at all. She didn’t even look bored.

“Imagine putting magic power into your shadow. Magic isn’t anything special. You can transform it into any attribute you want. That’s what magic is.”

Shimurin seemed to be tutoring her and Boss' shadow no longer looked black. She had imbued an attribute into her shadow and it turned blue like ice.

"Boss?" I carefully called her. She had been eagerly training and turned around.

"Oh, you're here, Hajin."

"Y-Yes, I'm back," I replied in a daze. Shimurin also looked at me and blinked a few times. Then she rubbed her nose.

"Oh, you're back early. My dimensional magic isn't ready yet."

"Ah, well, I need to talk to you about something."

I slowly approached and stood next to Boss, who stared at me with her usual expressionless face.

"Boss, I—"

"Oh, Hajin." Boss cut me off and smiled.

"I found Jain."

"Jain? Great! I found Cheok Jungyeong."

"That's Jain."

"Huh?"

I tilted my head. The Cheok Jungyeong I found turned out to be Jain?

"Jain is pretending to be Cheok Jungyeong for now. You sent Gyeong to the Tower of Wish's 9th floor, remember?"

"Oh, right."

I finally realized what she meant. Indeed, I had sent Cheok Jungyeong to the 9th floor.

“Then you won’t be lonely once Jain comes.”

Boss frowned at my words. “What? Who said I was lonely?”

“Pft.”

“Don’t laugh.”

Boss scowled at me, but that didn’t scare me at all. I smiled like a kid and placed my hand on her shoulder.

“Hmm. You two...”

Shimurin looked back and forth between us.

“What’s your relationship?”

“Huh?” We tilted our heads at her sudden question.

“What’s your relationship? It doesn’t look like you’re just friends. Especially you.”

Shimurin pointed at Boss and asked again.

Boss didn’t reply and simply stared at me. She probably wanted to hear my answer. I smiled at her and turned to Shimurin.

“As I said, she’s my boss and... I like her a lot.”

I focused stigma’s magic power into my eyes and my vision expanded. I could see Boss blushing from the side.

“Cough.”

She acted all embarrassed, but I only found that cuter.

Chapter 328

Transnational Peace Conference

(3)

I bought ingredients for dinner at a grocery store near Shimurin's workshop. Then I made broiled beef and dumplings using 3 star Michelin recipes. The delicious smell wafted through the mansion and Shimurin, who initially claimed disinterest, also came to the table.

"What's this? What's that?"

She kept asking as she ate every dish. Eventually, she sat and we all ate together.

"Mmm. Gulp. I see."

Boss feared Shimurin would steal the food from her plate, so she hurriedly swallowed the last dumpling and nodded.

"Yes."

I just finished explaining about the transnational peace conference. I also told her about meeting Yoo Yeonha, Rachel, and the others. The last major event, Baal's descent, would take place at the conference.

"Hmm..."

Nom, nom. Boss pondered as she chewed a mouthful of dumplings. Nom, nom. She must be deeply contemplating. Nom, nom. Probably about Bell's true identity and his relationship with Yi Yeonjun and Baal...

Tak—

Shimurin suddenly set down her fork.

“Mmm...”

She turned to us and smiled.

“Your claim from another world seems to be true. You know about this world’s future and your magic power is different from ours.”

We silently stared at her. Neither of us felt surprised because we had already acknowledged Shimurin’s unimaginable intelligence. After all, a grand magician like her would equal someone like Oh Jaejin, a Nine Stars member and 10 star magician. I had used settings intervention to make pills that could cure his side effect, but he ran away with his wife. Of course, I couldn’t devalue everything he had done for humanity. Still, I felt somewhat disappointed about losing someone as knowledgeable as Shimurin.

“So how much time does this world have left? Is this world going to end soon?” Shimurin asked.

I hesitated before nodding. I wouldn’t be able to fool her even if I tried. It would be better to honestly ask for help.

“Yes, probably.”

“Probably? That’s a tricky word.”

Shimurin muttered as she rose from her chair.

“I said probably because it can be stopped,” I earnestly remarked.

Shimurin remained expressionless and coldly glared at me.

“It doesn’t matter to me anyways. Didn’t I tell you? My goal is to migrate to another world?”

“...”

My heart sank, but I couldn't say anything. This world had already fallen long ago and only existed as Baal's reconstruction. Dimensional travel would be impossible since this Shimurin could be considered a mere ghost.

"I see."

I didn't say much in the end.

Shimurin stared at me for a long time before returning to her basement.

* * *

[The Republic of Leores' Capital]

Seraine roamed the capital's streets the next day. She liked to study public sentiment up close as the president's daughter. No one recognized her disguise, so she confidently walked around. Men traveled in and out of tall brick buildings with women who wore antique coats. The city felt busy and vibrant as ever.

"Extra! Extra!"

She heard a boy shouting as he handed out newspapers. Seraine widened her eyes and had heard of this phenomenon before. Newspaper companies would sometimes print extra copies in the evening when a newsflash occurred. She felt amazed at seeing it for the first time.

"Find out the truth about the monster massacre from 3 days ago."

The boy shouted and only then did the passersby show interest. Seraine hesitated before grabbing a copy herself. She glanced at the front page and...

[Monster Massacre From 3 Days Ago – An F Rank Sharpshooter From The Lorenzo Duchy Saved The Day?]

"What the..."

Seraine widened her eyes and clenched her fists. The article spoke about Kim Hajin when she had gone through so much trouble to keep everything confidential. How did they find out about Kim Hajin?

[Three days ago, republic citizens witnessed an unforeseen phenomenon. The fifth largest monster pathway in history appeared in the capital city. However, hardly any damage occurred thanks to a mysterious hero. At around 8:37 P.M., a rush of magic power descended from the roof of Lady Seraine's mansion and wiped out all the monsters. Approximately 30,000 monsters had been annihilated in just 2 hours. President Zucri declared the pathway's complete subjugation at 11:29 P.M. However, he declined to comment about the mysterious hero. According to an anonymous source the next day...]

"Dammit!"

Seraine crumpled the newspaper, but everyone in the streets had already read the article.

— An F rank sharpshooter?

— Seriously? They're joking, right?

— This is interesting. I'm going to show it to my son.

The people murmuring bothered her. At this rate, it wouldn't be long until Arunheim heard about Kim Hajin. He successfully arrived with the Leon clan's daughter and they only had a month left until the transnational peace conference.

Bzzzz—

She felt a vibration in her pocket from her portable crystal for long-distance communication. Seraine quickly took out the crystal and picked up the call.

"Yes, it's me."

— Miss, we just received a message from Lorenzo. It's Airun. She claims to be in charge of the military unit Kim Hajin belongs to and wishes to speak to her subordinate.

Seraine bit her lower lip. Of course, she knew Airun, the most famous knight in Kruni and one of the leading candidates for this era's strongest swordsman.

"Tell her we don't know."

— Pardon?

The transnational peace conference would be just around the corner, but Seraine didn't want to give up Kim Hajin. A man who could single-handedly stop a war. Kim Suho had described him as such.

Seraine felt skeptical at first until she witnessed Kim Hajin's power. Afterwards, she considered Kim Suho's assessment an understatement. He would be the ultimate weapon. A single man who could replace an army. She also learned about Kim Hajin's overwhelming power from Kim Suho. His strength came from his equipment. More specifically, his gun, a weapon Kim Hajin invented on his own. Arunheim wouldn't allow him to use such a weapon since the kingdom strictly regulated illegal weapons.

"Make up a credible excuse. Tell her he suddenly disappeared or he's already left for the kingdom."

How dare they label a man of such talent F rank? Now they wish to have him back? Talent like a jewel buried in mud only belongs to discerning eyes.

— Ah, yes. Okay.

"Please request for the correction of this news article and prepare a new ID."

Seraine said with a smile.

* * *

“Listen carefully.”

I found myself in the middle of an intense lecture in Shimurin’s basement. This lecture could be called, How to Utilize Stigma’s Magic Power (by Grand Magician Shimurin).

“Indeed, your stigma is a mysterious power. It seems to be in touch with the end of the world.”

Shimurin muttered as she stared at stigma. “But you’re using it wrong.”

She flatly remarked and her expression stiffened.

“Pardon?”

Her words surprised me since I thought I’d been using it well until now.

“The way you use magic power is far from efficient. You use it without control like you’re borrowing it from the outside. You’re turning the water on from a faucet like the majority of people,” Shimurin explained.

Then she gathered magic power in her right hand. It clung together and formed a distinct ball that vibrated like an ultimate skill. Next, she gathered magic power in her left hand. However, her magic power appeared dimmer this time with no vibrations whatsoever.

“Observe the difference. Both contain the same magic power, but their shapes are different.”

“Mmm... Let me try.”

I gathered magic power in my hand like Shimurin. The amount should’ve been the same, but mine seemed faint and less distinct.

“Huh?”

This dumbfounded me since I'd been using stigma all this time. How could I be wrong? Wasn't stigma the power to make my wish come true?

"You're not completely wrong. This is just my way of doing it."

Shimurin noticed my confusion and continued with a smirk. "It'll take a while for you to understand. Most magicians and knights exert magic power, but I carefully assemble and place magic power."

Shimurin continued explaining and I decided to use [Settings Intervention] to accelerate my learning. I didn't need to take classes and learn something over time.

▷ Arts (3/3) 1. [Parkour] 2. [Charming Voice] 3. [Spirit Power Technique]

I deleted the second art, [Charming Voice], and added a new one.

▷ Third Art (3/3) [Shimurin's Teachings] [Calculating Rank... High-intermediate]

The amount of SP required shouldn't be as much since Shimurin currently taught me.

[The original cost was 6,500 SP. However, you're currently learning this technique from Shimurin.] [The required cost has been reduced to 3,500 SP. Would you like to save?]

I expected less, but fortunately had 3,546 SP. I'd been earning SP even inside the gate and had just barely enough.

[Saving Arts.] [Your luck has activated!] [Shimurin's Teachings has increased to high rank!]

The knowledge, experience, practice, function, and ideas all flowed into my head and body.

"Do you understand? It will take at least 10 minutes per spell if a typical magician wishes to use magic through the process of assembly.

However, with my efficient assembly skill—”

“I think I get it.” I confidently declared even though Shimurin hadn’t finished.

“What?” She frowned.

“Who do you think you are?”

“Huhu.”

I smiled and assembled stigma in my body and released it outward according to Shimurin’s teachings. Guooo... I used the same amount of magic power as before, but it looked flawless now and violently resonated like an earthquake. Shimurin’s expression stiffened.

“What?”

“How’s that?”

“...”

She became speechless and couldn’t take her eyes off my ball of magic power. It shocked her beyond belief.

“I learned something new. Thanks.”

I sincerely bowed and had never thought of assembling stigma in my body. They called Shimurin the grand magician for a reason.

Tok tok—

Someone knocked and I opened the basement door because Shimurin had frozen like a statue.

“Who... huh?”

The familiar faces greeted me. The Leon clan’s Harin arrived with Seraine, the daughter of the republic’s president.

“Have you been well?”

Harin spoke first and I could tell things had gone well from her relaxed smile.

“I have. Are you done with your verification procedures?”

“Yes, it went well. Harin will be staying here in the republic.”

Seraine answered and showed me an ID card.

[Citizen – Seyeon]

“This is Harin’s new identity.”

“Ah, I see.”

“And this...”

Seraine took out another card.

“Your new identity, Hajin.”

I tilted my head and looked closely at the ID.

[Head of Presidential Security Service – Heiji]

“Heiji?”

“It’s your new name if you want to stay in the republic—”

“No, not that.”

Head of Presidential Security Service? My initial status in this world used to be an F rank sharpshooter.

“The head?”

“Yes, that’s your new position. Don’t you think you should be in a position of power to get things properly done?”

Seraine smiled at my dumbfounded face.

“Please stay in the republic. I promise you 10 times, no, 100 times the treatment you received in Arunheim.”

Her smile looked too much like Yoo Yeonha’s.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-25]

The burning afternoon sun shone down on the Priton mansion’s backyard. Jin Sahyuk poured a bucket of cold water on Shin Jonghak, who had collapsed after their duel.

“Uhohuh!” Shin Jonghak sprang up with a strange scream.

“What the hell is wrong with you? Do you want to die?”

“You’re the one who said losers don’t get to complain.”

Jin Sahyuk simply smiled despite his threat.

“...”

Shin Jonghak lay back on the ground without a word. He had lost to her.

“Have you thought about it?” she glanced at him and asked.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk had proposed a plan a few days ago, but he hadn’t answered yet.

“We don’t have much time. Everything will be over in 3 weeks.”

“Three weeks is a long time.”

Jin Sahyuk frowned at his nonchalant answer. “Loser.”

“Asshole.”

“Why are you acting so childish?” She scowled at him and from the far corner of Priton’s backyard...

“Hey!”

The reason for Shin Jonghak’s childishness appeared.

“Fight me! I got all my equipment back. You’re so dead!”

Chae Nayun appeared with a longsword.

Chapter 329

Transnational Peace Conference (4)

[Transnational Peace Conference D-24]

I visited the president's residence at the heart of the capital. To be exact, I arrived at the president's secret service institute. It looked neat and imposing. The director's office featured a suit hanging in the closet, a teakwood desk, and a luxurious black chair.

"Hmm..."

I ended up becoming the head of the presidential secret service. I sat in the chair and it felt quite comfortable. Then I picked up the nameplate on the desk that read, [Director of the Secret Service – Heiji]. It felt quite heavy.

"Hmm..."

Seraine told me I had to protect the republic's core members, which included the president and other high ranking officials. That shouldn't be too difficult now that I had recovered my stats.

— You're at work?

A voice rang out from the desk and I stared in shock at it. The crystal ball on a miniature pedestal shook.

"Ah, yes. I am."

— Great. Your job as the director is simple. All you have to do is protect me and my father during the upcoming transnational peace conference. Oh, and also the other high ranking officials.

I stood still for a moment without replying. I didn't know if I could annihilate Baal, the strongest devil, if he descended that day.

— Your subordinate will arrive soon. The secret service is something we quickly formed, so it doesn't have many employees.

Tok, tok— Someone knocked on the door.

— Ah, that person must be here. Please take care.

The crystal ball stopped shaking and Seraine's voice disappeared.

Tok, tok—

The knocking continued and I opened the door.

"Hmm?"

An unexpected face appeared.

"Hello."

She had a beautiful smile and her blue eyes shone like jewels.

"My name is Rachel."

The elemental swordswoman, Rachel, became my first subordinate.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-23]

I went out on a business trip with Rachel to inspect the Plaza of Glory where the transnational peace conference would take place.

"The plaza is spacious, but I hear the conference will take place in that small temple."

I nodded at Rachel's explanation.

The Plaza of Glory resided in the republic's capital. It would be difficult to protect a large group in this open space, so the international summit would take place in the small temple at the plaza's corner. Spotting any threats should be easy from the high ground in the plaza's center.

"The problem is we only have one enemy."

We already knew our enemy, the strongest rank 1 devil, Baal.

"I'm sure we can win." Rachel encouraged me with a smile.

"Well, we can only hope."

As I smiled back...

Jiing—

I felt a strange gaze and tracked its source. My thousand-mile eyes easily spotted the person glaring at me.

"What..."

My thoughts briefly froze when I recognized the culprit. Yi Byul hid behind a wall and glared at me. Had she been following me this entire time?

"Hajin? What's wrong?"

"Uh... nothing. Let's go."

I walked through the plaza with Rachel and checked on Boss at the same time. She continued following us while hiding her presence.

"I'm a bit worried. I hope she's doing well."

Rachel mentioned Evandel and I bitterly smiled.

“I’m sure she’s fine. She has Hayang and Ah Hae-In.”

Spartan should be playing with her as well. I trusted all of them.

“Yes, I think she’ll be cheerful as always. After all, she takes after me,” Rachel proudly declared.

“You’re right.”

I stared at Rachel and laughed. Then I recalled something.

“Oh right, what happened to Lancaster?”

“Huh? Ah... I’m not sure.”

“Do you think he followed you all the way here?”

I jokingly asked and Rachel also laughed.

“Haha, what if he really did? Lancaster might...”

Rachel light-heartedly replied, but a chill went down my back the more I thought about it. It wouldn’t be a laughing matter if Lancaster actually followed her here.

“Well, there’s no use worrying about what ifs.”

Honestly, I worried more about Boss who kept following us. Her gaze carried more and more killing intent as time passed.

“Should we head back now?”

“Back?”

“There isn’t much to inspect and I need to do something else.”

Rachel briefly stared at me before smiling like she knew what I meant.

“Ah, I understand. Then let’s do that. See you later.”

Rachel spun back. Ssk— The nearby trees shook as if reacting to her movements and a flower fell on her shoulder.

“See you tomorrow.”

I assembled stigma’s magic power according to Shimurin’s teachings and planned to teleport behind Boss.

Woong—

My feet seemed to float and my surroundings instantly shifted.

“Where did he go?”

Boss peeked out like a meerkat and stared at the spot where I disappeared. I placed my hand on her shoulder.

“...!”

She turned around in shock. “What...”

Her eyes widened when she saw me and I simply grinned.

“What are you doing here?”

“Uh... nothing.”

Boss brushed her hair back and coughed as I stared at her. She wore casual clothes instead of her usual robe. Honestly, she looked even more beautiful today.

“Nothing much... just...”

“Just?” I faintly smiled and grabbed her hand.

“Well, why don’t we go for a walk if you’re not busy?”

I wanted to openly stroll around the beautiful plaza with her.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-16]

“I won!”

Chae Nayun’s voice rang out in the Priton mansion’s backyard. Shin Jonghak and Jin Sahyuk lay on the ground next to her. Shin Jonghak had already fainted and the surrounding area revealed the traces of a fierce battle.

“Whew... I’m exhausted.”

Chae Nayun staggered until she plopped on the ground. Jin Sahyuk turned to the side and stared at her.

“Aren’t you embarrassed?”

Chae Nayun flinched before facing Jin Sahyuk. She certainly won against Jin Sahyuk, but had teamed up with Shin Jonghak. Right, they had fought a 2 vs. 1 battle.

“...”

Chae Nayun dodged her gaze without replying.

“Pft.” Jin Sahyuk smirked and raised her body.

“Eh? You can still stand? I thought you were out!”

Chae Nayun didn’t know that Jin Sahyuk’s authority gave her an insane recovery rate.

“I’m different from you.”

“Ha, there goes your annoying attitude again. Just wait. I’ll be ready in 3 minutes—”

Jin Sahyuk ignored her and left for the mansion.

“Shall I prepare your meal?”

A maid greeted her.

“No, it’s fine.”

She became Shin Jonghak’s guest and walked up the stairs to her room on the 4th floor.

Kiik—

After she opened the door...

“...?”

An unexpected guest wearing a robe stood in her room. He carried a sword on his waist that looked even taller than himself.

“Kim Suho.”

Jin Sahyuk smiled and Kim Suho took off his robe with a stiff expression. The tension broke when she spoke.

“You’re finally here.”

“You knew I’d come?”

“Of course.”

Kim Suho raised his eyebrows at her confidence. “I came to hear your plan.”

“Oh? That’s a surprise. You’re going to trust me?”

“I know you’re not a liar.”

This time, Jin Sahyuk's stiff expression changed and the corner of her mouth twisted up.

"Right, right. I don't lie, but..."

Jin Sahyuk glanced behind him, but that person didn't show up.

"Kim Hajin's not here?"

"Hajin? I didn't think I needed to bring him."

"Tsk, useless."

She clicked her tongue and pushed Kim Suho aside. Then she sat on her bed as he glared at her and spoke imposingly.

"Tell me what you know and what you're planning to—"

"We have 16 days left until Baal's descent."

Jin Sahyuk interrupted him with a serious face.

"Before then, you need to kill Yi Yeonjun."

* * *

Jin Sahyuk lay in bed and stared at the ceiling after Kim Suho left. It had already turned dark outside and a cool breeze entered the room through the window.

"It's almost time."

She murmured as the night made her more emotional.

"The return to my beloved home. The ending I strived for my entire life. Soon, my life's purpose will be fulfilled."

"What do you mean?"

Another voice rang out and she couldn't find its source. She even wondered if the voice came from her heart.

“...?”

That couldn't be the case and she blankly raised her head.

“I'm going to ask again.”

A man suddenly stood next to her bed and Jin Sahyuk smiled when she saw him.

“It's you.”

He wore a black robe inscribed with a lotus flower and a mask that fully covered his face. Still, Jin Sahyuk knew him well.

“You told Kim Suho we had to kill Yi Yeonjun.”

Most knew him as the infamous Black Lotus, but his real name was Kim Hajin.

“Explain to me in detail.”

Jin Sahyuk felt quite happy perhaps because she hadn't seen him in a while. She wanted to keep staring into his eyes.

“Hey.”

“...”

“How long have you been watching me?”

Kim Hajin didn't answer. He secretly followed Kim Suho and watched them the entire time.

“Since a while ago.”

As Kim Hajin spoke...

— HEY!

Kwang!

Someone shouted and Jin Sahyuk's door burst open. Chae Nayun stomped in from the other side.

"Is it true that Kim Suho came and..."

Chae Nayun couldn't finish her sentence after noticing the robed man in Jin Sahyuk's room.

"Uh..."

Her eyes naturally went to the lotus symbol on his robe. A jet-black robe with a lotus symbol.

"...!"

Chae Nayun slightly jumped after her sudden realization.

"Who's..."

Every hero and djinn knew Black Lotus by now. Some worshipped him as an idol and others despised him. Some called him the world's strongest and others criticized him as the world's worst criminal. He became an anti-hero and a villain.

Chae Nayun's eyes widened to their limits after seeing Black Lotus up close.

"..."

On the other hand, Kim Hajin became drenched in cold sweat under his robe. His thoughts temporarily stopped, but he quickly regained his calm. Even Chae Nayun's incredible intuition shouldn't be able to figure out his identity. After all, he specifically designed the [Black

Lotus Uniform] with Young Dwarf's Dexterity to hide his identity.

"Puhaha."

Jin Sahyuk burst into laughter as Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin stood in a daze.

"Looks like even an idiot knows who you are."

"Idiot?"

Chae Nayun scowled and Jin Sahyuk grabbed Kim Hajin by the collar.

"Let me introduce him. He's my friend, Black Lotus."

Chapter 330

Ten Days (1)

“Let me introduce him. He’s my friend, Black Lotus.”

Jin Sahyuk grabbed Black Lotus by the collar and he sharply glared at her. Meanwhile, Chae Nayun looked back and forth between them.

“Black Lotus?”

She muttered as Kim Hajin remained silent. He had deleted the art that allowed him to change his voice, so he feared she might discover something if he spoke. Chae Nayun stared at Black Lotus and asked in a stern voice.

“Oi, why did you invite a thief?”

“Hm?” Jin Sahyuk tilted her head.

“What thief? Isn’t he a legend to you?”

“Legend my ass. Now that I think about it, you must also be with the Chameleon Troupe! Like that Cheok Jungyeong bastard...”

Jin Sahyuk smirked at Chae Nayun’s aggressive tone.

“Think what you want.”

She let go of Black Lotus’ collar and he promptly stepped back.

“Alright, well I have something to discuss with Lotus.”

Jin Sahyuk shooed Chae Nayun away.

“Go ahead.”

Surprisingly, Chae Nayun left without any issues. Kwang! She purposely slammed the door shut, but obviously intended to eavesdrop. After all, a mere wall couldn’t stop her sharp hearing.

“Now then...”

Jin Sahyuk must’ve noticed Chae Nayun’s intentions too, but mischievously smiled and continued.

“Are you going to kill Yi Yeonjun?”

“...”

Kim Hajin didn’t answer and Jin Sahyuk glanced at the door.

“Yi Yeonjun is trying to become Baal’s new incarnation, but it’s obvious what will happen if that crazy bastard returns to Earth. He’s far more evil than Bell.”

She didn’t know a more evil human being than Yi Yeonjun. The very root of his existence consisted of pure evil and she knew about his current infatuation with Baal.

“So Lotus, are you going to kill Yi Yeonjun? Or...”

She paused and her lips twisted up.

“Will you let Kim Hajin kill him?”

“...”

Brrrrr. They both felt someone’s presence outside the room. Jin Sahyuk glanced at the door again and continued.

“You should know what this means. It doesn’t matter who kills Yi Yeonjun, but one of you must do it.”

Jin Sahyuk meant to say, Kill Yi Yeonjun yourself.

“If I were to guess, I’d say Kim Hajin will be the one to kill him.”

Jin Sahyuk snickered and released her magic power. It slowly wrapped around Kim Hajin, but it didn’t carry any hostility so he stayed still. She opened her mouth again.

“If you look at it from a bigger picture, it’s Yi Yeonjun’s fault that Kim Hajin had to kill Chae Jinyoon.”

“What?”

Kim Hajin couldn’t ignore this nonsensical comment and his eyes immediately widened in shock.

“Like I said, if you look at the bigger picture.”

Jin Sahyuk mischievously spoke, but their conversation ended there as Chae Nayun burst into the room again.

Kwang!

She glared at them with a shocked expression.

“Hey! What did you mean by—”

Kim Hajin couldn’t hear the rest of her sentence.

Woong...

Jin Sahyuk activated her Reality Manipulation and a brilliant light shot out. Chwaaaa—

He briefly closed his eyes before opening them again and found himself in the middle of a forest.

“...?”

Jin Sahyuk had teleported him far away from Chae Nayun.

* * *

[Seoul, Korea]

Large-scale calamities continued after the demon realm gate opened.

First, the demon realm transformation accelerated. Previously, it only affected Manchu and the Ural Mountain Range. Now, it had spread to Central Asia, Eastern Europe, and Northern Europe. Over 20% of Earth had become corrupted.

Of course, humanity didn't just sit around and wait. Researchers around the world discovered that mana stones could delay the progress. Next, Essential Dynamics succeeded in creating more mana stones with the power of [Dimensional Entropy]. As a result, the rate of demon realm transformation noticeably diminished.

However, another problem arose due to djinns and demons. Demons took over the land after Pandemonium partially transformed. The djinns that had been chased out caused chaos in human society.

The politically moderate argued that djinns served different devils and some non-hostile djinns served non-hostile devils. They encouraged distinction between evil and non-evil djinns, but their opponents argued that djinns would fundamentally commit evil and belonged in prison.

The political climate became charged with chaos and anger.

[Tower of Heroes, Hero Association Headquarters]

“...”

“...”

Two noble guests, Chae Joochul and Heynckes, stared at each other. Chae Joochul looked expressionless as always while Heynckes shrugged as if he had nothing more to say.

“Are you finished?”

A gentle voice flowed into their ears. They both turned towards the voice that belonged to a woman who had died once, but now returned.

“I can leave then, right?”

The first descender, Medea, didn’t cower at all in front of Earth’s strongest. She treated them like children and laughed at their actions.

“What kind of life do you plan on leading from now on?”

Chae Joochul stopped her and asked. Medea stared at him like a cute puppy and touched her lips with her finger.

“Let me think... Since I’m the first descender...”

Medea liked the title. Athena, Lü Bu, and the others continued looking for ways to descend, but she knew they wouldn’t return any time soon.

“I’m going to live beautifully. I heard Seoul is the richest and most powerful city, so I’m going to build a huge mansion there. I’ll have my workshop in the basement and about a hundred servants.”

“...”

“...”

Chae Joochul and Heynckes exchanged glances again. The lifestyle she wished for seemed too simple for someone called a witch. Heynckes opened his mouth after their brief exchange.

“We can do that much for you, but—”

“By the way, when will the two of you stop speaking to me so casually? I’m thousands of years older, you know?”

Medea frowned and Heynckes nodded with an annoyed expression.

“We can grant you that, but will you help us in return?”

Heynckes didn't argue and politely spoke. A smile immediately bloomed on Medea's face.

“You're saying the same thing as that man.”

Heynckes furrowed his brows. “That man?”

“Ah, you don't need to know. He's far more delicate and valuable than you two.”

“...”

Even Chae Joochul slightly frowned at those words. Neither he nor Heynckes could think of anyone who fitted that description.

“Well, anyways...” Medea smirked.

“Don't worry about that. I don't want the world I'm going to live in to be dirty either.”

She spun around and flapped her ceremonial dress. This heavenly dress crafted by Kim Hajin had reached the peak of perfection.

“My true name is Medea. I shall lend you my strength as an ancient demigod and sorceress.”

The magic power she suppressed immediately rose from her body and swirled inside the room.

“...”

“...”

Chae Joochul and Heynckes stared at each other again.

Looks like things worked out, friend.

Heynckes said with his eyes.

Indeed.

Chae Joochul silently replied in the same manner.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-10]

We only had 10 days left until the transnational peace conference. I looked out the window of the director's office and sighed. Birds flew in the clear, blue sky. Everything seemed so peaceful.

"Haa..."

However, my mind felt far from peaceful. I recovered my strength and reclaimed my equipment, including the god-slashing bullet, yet my worries persisted. What Jin Sahyuk said lingered on my mind.

— If you look at it from a bigger picture, it's Yi Yeonjun's fault that Kim Hajin had to kill Chae Jinyoon.

What did she mean? Did she just try to provoke me or Chae Nayun?
Perhaps she heard something from Bell.

I found out about Yi Yeonjun's relationship with Boss thanks to Yoo Jinhyuk, but I still didn't know much about him.

What could Chae Nayun be thinking right now? What could she have talked about with Jin Sahyuk after I left?

I felt curious, but Chae Nayun had cut off communications with me.

"Is something on your mind?"

Harin suddenly asked. I turned and glanced at her. She joined the secret service 4 days ago under the fake name, Yurin.

“No, it’s nothing. What about you? Are you feeling better?”

“Yes, except that I still can’t get used to my name.”

Harin laughed out loud. I bitterly smiled and nodded.

“The transnational peace conference will be in 10 days, but don’t worry too much.”

She tried to calm me. Honestly, I felt relieved having a real devil hunter on our side. Unlike me, she inherited the lineage of exorcists. She would surely be a valuable asset in fighting Baal.

“I’ll leave it to you, Harin.”

“Mmm, but I still can’t believe you’re my superior now. You used to be the one protecting me.”

“You can talk casually if you want.”

“No, no, it’s fine. I’m not nobility anymore. I’m more comfortable the way things are.”

Harin smiled as if she found peace in her heart.

Tok, tok.

Someone knocked on the door.

“Hm? Is it Rachel?” I tilted my head and opened the door.

“Rachel?”

I didn’t expect the guests on the other side.

“Haha... It’s been a while, Hajin.”

A woman awkwardly scratched her head and laughed.

“It really has been! Wow!”

A muscular man also tried to hug me with a wide grin.

Yun Seung-Ah and Yi Yeonghan came to visit.

“What?”

I blankly stared at them and Yun Seung-Ah explained.

“We ended up in the Krovon Kingdom below the Republic of Leores. We heard from Suho that you were here and came to visit.”

“Ah, I see.”

I nodded in a daze and Yi Yeonghan smacked my arm.

“Oh yeah, someone else came with us.”

“Hm?”

“Hey, get over here!”

Yi Yeonghan shouted and a large man walked out from behind the wall. I couldn't help but smile when I saw him.

“I didn't expect to see you here.”

We had a mild conflict back in Cube. To be exact, I one-sidedly beat him up and left early.

“Cough... H-Hey, it's... been a while.”

I felt somewhat touched after such a long time. He used to be Shin Jonghak's lackey, Kim Horak.

“Yeah, it has.”

I grinned and reached out. He flinched, but smiled in embarrassment and took my hand.

“I’m glad to see you.”

“We haven’t seen each other since Cube, right?”

“Y... Yeah.”

I shook hands with Kim Horak. As expected of a close-quarter fighter, his hand felt full of calluses.

“You have a lot of friends.”

Harin approached us with a bright smile.

“Nice to meet you. My name is Yurin, the third most influential person in the secret service.”

“Pardon? Ah, yes, hello. I’m Yun Seung-Ah.”

“Yun Seung-Ah! What a pretty name. What about you?”

“I’m Yi Yeonghan.”

“Ah, Yi Yeonghan.”

Harin warmly greeted them like a true extrovert.

Chapter 331

Ten Days (2)

I contacted Kim Suho and asked about the sudden arrivals. He decided to send over the people from Earth to me.

The secret service now had 7 members: Harin, Aileen, Rachel, Yi Yeonghan, Kim Horak, Yun Seung-Ah, and me.

“Really.”

Aileen murmured with her legs crossed in my office. She used to be Kim Suho’s maid, but had been promoted to the secret service’s manager. The newly created institution made such things quite convenient.

“Yes, we need to work together to defeat Baal.”

Rachel summarized the plan once more.

“There’s something else too.” I wanted to add one more goal to our mission.

“Something else?”

They all turned towards me and I showed them a portrait.

“This person.”

I made this portrait using the Book of Truth. Aileen and Yun Seung-Ah recognized him and raised their eyebrows. The other five only curiously tilted their heads.

“Who is... this?”

Rachel asked, but Aileen answered instead.

“He should be the Chameleon Troupe’s former boss when the group wasn’t well-known yet. He’s a criminal on the Hero Association’s blacklist. From what I recall, he was the first person on the blacklist as a single entity. It’s a lot different now with Wicked and the other Nine Evils.”

Aileen leaned against her chair.

“Blacklist?” Yi Yeonghan asked somewhat nervously. The association’s blacklist only included the most heinous villains and djinns. Rumors stated that one had to be at least master rank to kill a blacklisted target. Some even said a high rank hero could only receive master rank after killing a blacklisted target.

“Yep, the Chameleon Troupe used to be much more vicious. They abducted and sold people, took on assassinations practically every week... Yaawn.”

Aileen stretched her arms and continued.

“They aren’t that vicious anymore even though they’re still considered thieves. They reject unnecessary murder now and even got themselves off the association’s wanted list after helping with the Orden incident. The Chameleon Troupe changed so much because...”

Aileen paused and held up the portrait.

“This man isn’t their leader anymore. He died a long time ago and the Chameleon Troupe changed under a new leader.”

Yun Seung-Ah nodded as Aileen tapped on the portrait.

“We can’t find him even if we want to since he’s dead.”

“She’s right, Hajin.”

I chuckled. Everyone who knew about the Chameleon Troupe would agree with Aileen and Yun Seung-Ah.

“No, this man is still alive.”

I firmly spoke and had confirmed it with my own eyes. According to Jin Sahyuk, he had been frozen all this time.

“His name is Yi Yeonjun.”

I pointed at the portrait and continued.

“He faked his death and is now in this place. He should be in the Arunheim Kingdom, but he’ll eventually come to the republic.”

“What?” Aileen and Yun Seung-Ah turned serious.

“We have to kill Yi Yeonjun before Baal’s descent.”

“No, wait. I don’t understand. How can he be—”

“You’ll understand later. For now, we have to get ready.”

I left behind the shocked Aileen and turned to Harin. She had no clue about our conversation and took down some notes.

“Yurin?”

“H-Huh? Ah, yes.”

Harin paused and looked at me. I smiled and made a request of her.

“Please teach us how to hunt a devil.”

* * *

[Arunheim Kingdom – Guest Room]

The stars seemed like they would fall from the night sky. Jin Sahyuk came to see Yi Yeonjun on this cold, winter night. She asked to speak and Yi Yeonjun happily obliged.

The two of them sat across each other at a table on the guest room balcony. They exchanged cold glances and neither revealed a hint of weakness.

“Let me ask you one thing.” Jin Sahyuk began the conversation.

“It can be more if you’d like,” Yi Yeonjun replied with a smile.

“Why do you want to be with Baal?”

She asked without the slightest change in her expression.

“Hm? Isn’t that question a little—”

“All Baal can do is destroy Earth. You won’t obtain anything if Earth is destroyed. You also won’t be able to form an equal relationship like Bell since you’re not the true incarnation body. You’ll only end up as Baal’s slave.”

Bell had lived for hundreds of years as Baal’s incarnation. He couldn’t die, so he continued to resist Baal. Perhaps Bell might even return to being human once Baal descended.

That wouldn’t be the case for Yi Yeonjun. He would simply become a slave and rampage until death.

“It doesn’t matter,” Yi Yeonjun nonchalantly replied.

“Why?” Jin Sahyuk asked.

“Mm... Who knows?”

Yi Yeonjun thought about the environment he grew up in and the events that shaped his personality.

A baby who became an orphan. A child that the adults only used. A youth who grew vicious for strength.

The world had always been a target for his anger and resentment.

“It will be destroyed even without me, so I want to destroy it myself.”

“Pft, what a petty answer.”

“Isn’t it? I fully agree.”

Yi Yeonjun honestly replied to Jin Sahyuk’s snarky comment.

Memories flashed in his mind. The violence and abuse he suffered at the orphanage. His friend and lover’s betrayals. When he killed the two individuals who abandoned him with his own hands. The days of his youth when he constantly told himself, It’s this damned world that made me this way.

“You realize how stupid that is, right?”

Yi Yeonjun chuckled at her question.

“Of course, I do. However...”

Yi Yeonjun paused and recalled what used to be his: the Chameleon Troupe, Bell and Rumi, Byul and Jain. The days he spent with them could be considered fond memories, but those days belonged in the past.

“However...”

Yi Yeonjun clenched his teeth. Those memories had lost their light. Byul had inherited the Chameleon Troupe and someone he didn’t know had ruined her.

“I have nothing left.”

He didn’t fear death or being forgotten.

“I have no choice but to destroy it all.”

He couldn’t accept his belongings being stolen.

“You’re insane.”

Jin Sahyuk laughed. Yi Yeonjun only glared at her and continued.

“It doesn’t have anything to do with you. I promised I’d open a dimensional portal to Akatrina. That promise will stand even if I become Baal.”

Yi Yeonjun calmly stared at her and smirked.

“Becoming one with Baal in an endless loop of destruction and death. That seems like a wonderful end to this pitiful life.”

Jin Sahyuk thought Yi Yeonjun resembled herself. To be exact, her past self before she met Kim Hajin.

A bitter taste lingered in her mouth.

“Let’s stop here.”

She sighed and rose from her seat.

* * *

[Arunheim Kingdom, Priton Mansion]

Chae Nayun racked her brains with Shin Jonghak.

“For whatever reason, Kim Hajin and Black Lotus are fighting,” she explained.

Shin Jonghak frowned and tilted his head. “Kim Hajin is fighting Black Lotus?”

“Well, something like that. They’re both competing to kill Yi Yeonjun or something.”

She demanded more details, but Jin Sahyuk remained silent regarding Kim Hajin and Black Lotus’ relationship.

However, Jin Sahyuk did say she would honestly tell her if Chae Nayun managed to win in a one-on-one fight.

Chae Nayun couldn't defeat Jin Sahyuk yet. Most likely, she wouldn't be able to until after the transnational peace conference. As Shin Jonghak said, she had the worst match-up against Jin Sahyuk.

"Yi Yeonjun?" Shin Jonghak asked again.

"Yeah, Kim Hajin is trying to kill Yi Yeonjun. As for why..."

— If you look at it from a bigger picture, it's Yi Yeonjun's fault that Kim Hajin had to kill Chae Jinyoon.

Jin Sahyuk's voice lingered on her mind and Chae Nayun clenched her teeth.

"It might be related to oppa."

Shin Jonghak didn't say anything and simply nodded. He knew how sensitive Chae Nayun felt about Chae Jinyoon.

"Anyways!"

Chak! Chae Nayun suddenly clapped.

"I thought we should brainstorm together."

"Brainstorm what?" He scratched his head.

"You know, let's come up with theories on how Kim Hajin, Black Lotus, and Yi Yeonjun are all related. Why is Black Lotus trying to kill the former leader of his group and why is Kim Hajin trying to kill Yi Yeonjun."

Chae Nayun placed a notebook on the table filled with ideas.

"Let's go. We can solve anything if we rack our brains together."

“If you say so.”

“Great. Let’s begin!”

Chae Nayun and Shin Jonghak contemplated together. Several theories flew around. As a result...

“N-Nayun, the person who planted the devil’s seed into your older brother... What if that was Yi Yeonjun?”

Shin Jonghak arrived at a shocking hypothesis.

“...!”

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened like a frightened rabbit.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-7]

Only a week remained until the transnational peace conference.

The republic brightened up at night with artificial nights. Countless came to the republic to watch or participate.

— Can you see them, director?

I oversaw the security operations for this conference as the secret service director. Currently, I kept an eye out for terrorists from the watchtower in the middle of Leores Plaza.

“Yeah. Kim Horak, I see a suspicious individual wearing a black hat to the northwest of where you’re standing. He has bombs on him too.”

— Understood.

Kim Horak followed my command and quickly subdued the terrorist.

I realized why Shin Jonghak liked to order him around after he perfectly followed my instructions.

— Here, take him away.

Kim Horak handed the man over to the other security forces that arrived.

“Good job. Looks like there’s nothing else to worry about within a 3 kilometer radius. We can rest...”

I suddenly spotted someone while speaking through the crystal ball.

“Wait, attention.”

My thousand-mile eyes easily penetrated the individual’s grey robe. As expected, Yi Yeonjun had arrived.

Found him.

I smiled in satisfaction, but my expression stiffened once again.

— Director? What happened?

— Oi, director?

“...”

I couldn’t tell them that I found Yi Yeonjun because I also spotted Boss with Shimurin a short distance away.

Chapter 332

Ten Days (3)

“I...”

I studied the situation from the watchtower. Boss and Shimurin munched on snacks from a street stall as Yi Yeonjun wandered nearby. Not causing a commotion seemed like the best choice.

“I found Yi Yeonjun.”

— What? Really?!

Aileen’s surprised voice rang out from the crystal ball.

“Yes, but we need to act with restraint. I’ll keep an eye on him for now.”

I would never let Yi Yeonjun meet Boss. At least, not until I killed him.

— The plaza is filled with people right now. Can you keep tracking him, Hajin?

Yun Seung-Ah asked.

“Don’t worry about that.”

I answered and slowly released my spirit power. My ability to wield spirit power returned along with my stats. I should be able to use [Miracle Creation], the ability engraved in my spirit power as the original author.

*[Observer] [Summary – Will summon a small bird to monitor a target]
[Activation Condition – User must directly call the observer.]
[Consumption – 1% of Kim Hajin’s spirit power per 24 hours.] [Effect –*

The observer can conceal itself while watching the target. It can also share its vision with Kim Hajin.]

I created a miracle with my spirit power. I didn't have Spartan, so I needed a replacement.

"Observer."

Spirit power leaked from my body when I called its name and formed a small bird that smiled at me.

— Coo.

The cute fuzzball resembled a Korean crow tit. I strengthened it with [Random Consolidation System] and set its target to Yi Yeonjun.

"Fly."

— Coo.

The observer left my hands and flew into the sky. I closed my eyes and shared its vision. It began tracking Yi Yeonjun.

"It's all under control for now."

— I don't know what that means, but fine. Just to be sure, Yi Yeonjun is really alive?

Aileen's high-pitched voice rang out from the crystal ball.

"Yes, he is. Don't you believe me?"

I replied with a bitter smile.

— Of course, I believe you. It's just that... Sigh, fine, fine. Huh? No, I ordered a chicken kebab. No, not spicy...

Tk. The communication cut off as Aileen busily ate street food.

“Pft.”

I chuckled and returned to observing Yi Yeonjun. However, my face went stiff when I saw what happened next.

—...

Boss stared in a daze with a kebab in her hand. She looked at a spot 500 meters away where Yi Yeonjun stood. Yi Yeonjun had his back towards her and Boss shouldn't be able to recognize him with his grey robe.

I quickly took out the crystal ball and contacted Boss.

“Boss.”

I called her and she briefly flinched before taking out her crystal ball.

“Boss, where are you right now?”

— Me? I'm...

Boss looked around and continued.

— In front of a street vendor.

“Have you spotted anything strange?”

— No, nothing. What about you? Are things going well?

“Yes, of course.”

I dragged out the conversation until Yi Yeonjun grew farther away. Thankfully, he didn't see Boss and left somewhere else. I sighed in relief.

“Boss.”

— Hm?

“I think you should go home for today. Aileen is near you. Also, contact Jain for me.”

I heard Jain became a general for the Arunheim Kingdom.

— Sure, what do you need?

Boss replied, but her complexion remained dark. The grey-robed figure must’ve bothered her.

“Ask her when she’ll arrive in the republic. You should go home for now.”

Boss hesitated and looked around, but Yi Yeonjun had already disappeared. She had no choice but to agree.

— Got it.

* * *

[Sword Commander’s Office]

Meanwhile, Kim Suho met with Yoo Yeonha regarding Baal.

“We’ve recovered our strength for the most part, but Baal’s strength is on another level,” Yoo Yeonha seriously spoke.

“We have no way of confirming the stories about Baal. According to Jin Sahyuk, he destroyed the world he descended upon in just 4 days.”

“Yeah.”

Kim Suho solemnly nodded. An evil god who could destroy the world in 4 days felt shocking, but they couldn’t just sit around and do nothing. Baal would undoubtedly descend on Earth if they didn’t stop him here.

“I started looking into items historically used for exorcisms. I figured we would need these powerful artifacts against such a foe.”

Yoo Yeonha took out a catalog from her desk. It listed ancient artifacts for exorcisms that she found through her merchant group’s connections. Kim Suho glanced at the pictures of a sword, bow, spear, talisman, fan, and others.

“Contact the president’s daughter and ask if she can find any of these.”

“You mean Seraine?”

“Yes, I would buy them myself if I could, but they’re too expensive. We’ll need a nation’s assets to acquire them.”

“Mmm... I’ll try to ask her.”

Yoo Yeonha scowled at his words. “Don’t just try. We need these items with only a week left.”

Yoo Yeonha looked more serious than ever and Kim Suho knew he shouldn’t be indecisive.

“Okay, I’ll ask her even if I have to risk my position.”

“Perfect.”

As the duo discussed their plans...

Tok, Tok— Someone knocked on the door. Speak of the devil, Seraine’s voice rang out from the other side.

— Sword commander, it’s me. Seraine.

“...?”

“...?”

Kim Suho and Yoo Yeonha stared at each other in surprise. Then they both grinned and nodded.

“Come in, Lady Seraine. I’ve been wanting to see you.”

“Aiya! If it isn’t Lady Seraine, the future of our republic.”

“Eh?”

The duo warmly welcomed their guest.

* * *

I returned to Shimurin’s workshop late at night after a long day of work. Boss and Shimurin waited for me at the kitchen table.

“You’re late.”

Boss spoke first and Shimurin slammed her fist on the table.

“Right, you’re too late. We almost died of hunger.”

“Why didn’t you eat?”

“What?” Shimurin’s face viciously distorted.

“This is all your fault. You’re too good at cooking, so everything else tastes horrible.”

“Alright, I’ll make you something.”

I chuckled and walked to the kitchen. Shimurin smiled in satisfaction and Boss’ shoulders danced as well.

Today’s meal would be spicy rice cakes, dumplings, and tempura.

I finished cooking in 15 minutes. Shimurin placed a third of it on her plate and left downstairs. It seemed she wanted to continue her research while eating.

Poke, poke, poke. Boss sat on the kitchen table and ate the spicy rice cakes with her chopsticks. I silently sat next to her and she looked at me strangely. Her chopsticks slowed and her munching turned to nibbles. Eventually, she couldn't hold back and asked.

"Do you have something to say?"

"Something to say?"

"Yeah."

I did have something. I wanted to ask what she would do if Yi Yeonjun, the man she trusted most, turned out to be the one who ruined her life.

"Boss..." I wanted to know what she would think if I killed him.

"It's just an if, but..."

I tried to be indirect.

"What would you do if the person you trusted most disappointed you?"

This question held two meanings. One, if Boss found out the truth about Yi Yeonjun. Two, if she found out that I betrayed her by killing him.

"Disappointed?"

Boss' expression turned cold and she seemed to have lost her appetite. She set down her chopsticks and stared at me.

"Mmm... I don't think you'll ever disappoint me."

"Oh, so I'm your most trusted person?"

"..."

Boss' expression softened and she coughed in embarrassment before changing the subject.

"Did something happen? Why are you asking me that?"

"No reason."

I carefully thought about what to do. She would probably try to kill him herself if she learned the truth. That would cause her too much pain.

"I just felt curious."

This duty belonged to me. I could tell Boss the truth after killing Yi Yeonjun.

"I asked because I like you. That's the sincere truth."

"...!"

Crack! The chopsticks in her hands snapped in half. She stared at me with trembling hands and her eyes widened like a cartoon character.

"W-W-What are you s-saying. I-It's obvious a subordinate should l-like his boss. I'm leaving. Cough! Cough!"

Boss stood up in a fluster and scurried to her room. She left behind her favorite food on the table.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-5]

Five days remained until the transnational peace conference. Harin taught us how to hunt a devil at the magic practice area inside the secret service institute.

"I'm from a clan of exorcists."

Harin released her magic power to demonstrate exorcism. It bloomed with a red hue. This color represented the exorcist's power that could critically wound evil beings.

“A clan is determined by bloodline as I previously explained. We mix our magic power with our blood when we hunt devils. Follow me.”

We took out blood packs that Harin made with the help of Yoo Yeonha. Surprisingly, we discovered this simple method to borrow the power of exorcism. We just had to imbue our magic power into the blood packs and let the two mix. Kim Horak and Yi Yeonghan struggled, but Yun Seung-Ah, Rachel, and Aileen easily accomplished it.

“My magic power will mix with this blood and become an exorcist's magic power.”

Aileen spoke a single sentence and I also commanded stigma's magic power.

[Blood of a devil hunter has partially assimilated with you.] [Your authority, Devil Hunter, has grown stronger!] [Partial Devilization – Devil's Arm has grown stronger!] [An incredible luck has occurred! You have partially received the genetics of an exorcist!] [You have obtained a new gift, True Exorcism! An auspicious event may occur with an astronomically low chance!]

“...?”

A series of alerts popped up and I blinked at them. Aileen spoke to Harin while I stood in a daze.

“By the way, shouldn't we tell Kim Suho about this?”

“Ah, I will teach the sword commander later.”

“Okay.”

“Then, next!”

Chak— Harin clapped and the loud noise brought me back. I turned towards her.

“Let’s start learning exorcism!”

For some reason, I felt like I obtained a huge hint and Harin’s words didn’t register in my head.

Harin’s blood and stigma’s magic power had assimilated. My authority, Devil Hunter, grew stronger as a result.

“Um, Yurin?”

As I called Harin...

Bzzzzz— The crystal ball in my pocket suddenly vibrated.

“Cough, please turn off your crystal ball during lessons.”

Harin glared at me.

“Ah, sorry.”

I took out the crystal ball with a wry smile. I received it from Jin Sahyuk when I went to Arunheim.

“Hold on a minute.”

I left the area and picked up the call.

“What do you want?”

I whispered and Jin Sahyuk said something strange.

— It’s important. We need to settle some things, so come meet me at 1 A.M. tomorrow. Don’t be late and don’t even think about not showing up.

Tk—

“The hell?”

Jin Sahyuk hung up without even waiting for my reply. I furrowed my brows and glared at the crystal ball.

“Hajin, what are you doing?”

“Hajin, you’re the one who said we didn’t have much time.”

Rachel and Yun Seung-Ah voiced their complaints.

“Ah, sorry. I had something to take care of.”

I scratched my head and ran back.

Chapter 333

One Step (1)

“My blood reacts when it’s exposed to demonic energy. I guess you can say it boils.”

I listened to Harin’s explanation in the secret service institute’s training room that Shimurin constructed with Seraine’s funding.

“A new power forms when my blood mixes with magic power. My clan calls it exorcism. It’s incredibly effective against demons, but can’t be used against anything else.”

“Mmm.”

I listened while looking at the new gift that I luckily obtained.

[True Exorcism] — Blood of an Exorcist: Will increase all variable stats by 1-100% when facing demonic beings. The stat increase will be proportional to the demonic being’s power. — Abyss: Will strengthen partial devilization. — Exorcism: Will connect with your authority, Devil Hunter, and greatly ignore demonic energy.

Kwang!

The door burst open as I read the gift’s description. Yun Seung-Ah and Aileen barged in with flaring nostrils. Harin and I stared at them in confusion.

“Argh, how annoying. Seung-Ah, are we allowed to be ignored like this?”

“People just aren’t friendly to new faces.”

Aileen stomped in and Yun Seung-Ah simply sighed.

“Those weak idiots. Arrrgh!”

Aileen raised her hands and almost exploded in frustration.

“Did something happen?” I quietly asked.

“Huh? Ah, you’re still here.”

Aileen cooled down and scratched her head in embarrassment before placing a hand on her hip. She looked ready to vent.

“We went to the higher-ups because we needed something. However, the employees there didn’t answer any of our questions and simply ignored us. They openly shit-talked about how we got in through connections when turned around to leave.”

Aileen paused and grabbed her neck. What happened to them made sense. They could be compared to grade 5 public officials in Korea and we did get in through connections.

“Ah, my blood pressure. I’m too old for this.”

“Pft.”

I couldn’t help but chuckle. It felt strange seeing Aileen say that when she looked like a high school girl.

“Did you just laugh?” She immediately sent me a death glare.

“No, I didn’t...”

Tok, tok— Someone knocked and saved me from a difficult situation. We turned towards the door and Aileen opened it before I could say anything else.

“Hello! Oh, Aileen?”

“Ah! Who are all of you?”

Essence of the Strait's Kim Youngjin, Yohei, Shen Yuan, Yi Jin-Ah, and others who entered the demon realm gate finally showed up.

“Oh, familiar faces!”

The secret service would be gaining new members again. Aileen found new toys to play with and greeted them with a bright smile.

“Welcome, my juniors!”

* * *

The stars illuminated the dense darkness at 1 A.M.

Kim Hajin came out alone to the republic's nameless forest. Jin Sahyuk chose this secluded spot, but it also seemed to be a walking trail with long benches placed here and there.

Kim Hajin sat on a bench and looked at the sky. The full moon coldly shone, but stars surrounded it as if for protection. He couldn't help but admire this beautiful scene.

“...”

He looked at the calm scenery in a daze for about 10 minutes.

“I thought you'd be late.”

A woman's voice rang out. Kim Hajin turned towards Jin Sahyuk trudging out of the dark. She tied her long hair in a ponytail and seemed full of confidence as always.

“Why did you want me to come?” Kim Hajin asked without the slightest change in expression.

Jin Sahyuk stopped in front of him and looked down.

“I need to ask you something one last time.”

“Last?” He raised his eyebrows at the strange word.

“That’s right. This is the last time I’ll be seeing your ugly face.”

Jin Sahyuk nonchalantly retorted and sat on the bench.

“Co, cough.”

She acted imposing, but became speechless after taking a seat. Rather, she didn’t know how to start a conversation. She had always been straightforward as a king and only knew how to talk like that. Nothing had changed even now.

“It’s about Kindspring.”

“Pft.”

Kim Hajin smirked at how quickly she cut to the chase. She glanced at him and continued.

“What’s your relationship with Kind—”

“I don’t know either.”

“What?”

Kim Hajin didn’t want to talk about Kim Chundong. To explain everything, he would need to accept once again that this world had been a novel he wrote. However, this world became more than just a novel now.

He chuckled and turned towards her.

“I don’t know the details. I came here from another world just like you and Kim Chundong... He went to your world and became Kindspring. That’s it.”

Jin Sahyuk received his gaze with a stern expression.

“I already know, so don’t try to hide anything. Bell looked into your memories—”

“I wouldn’t tell you even if I knew.”

“What did you say, you bastard?”

Jin Sahyuk frowned and Kim Hajin simply shrugged.

“I won’t tell you. No matter what.”

“...”

She became dumbfounded. It didn’t look like he would spill anything, especially about Kindspring and synchronization. After all, what idiot would openly reveal his weakness?

“I see.”

Jin Sahyuk sighed with no other choice. She stood up and glared at him. “I called you here for nothing then.”

“That was it?”

“Yeah, you piece of shit.”

She felt disappointed and prepared to leave when she suddenly grew angry and turned back.

“Oi, we won’t meet again after this. Want to fight one last time?”

“Fight?”

Kim Hajin stood up without hesitation and Jin Sahyuk immediately flinched. She didn’t expect him to fall for such an obvious provocation. Did he have pent-up stress?

“W-W-What? You’re down? F-Fine, come at me.”

Jin Sahyuk brandished her arms and legs, but Kim Hajin simply raised his hand and... Tak— Gently placed it on Jin Sahyuk's shoulder.

“Why would we? We're friends now, aren't we?”

She could feel the warmth and sincerity from his smile.

“...?” Her mind went blank and she blinked in a daze. Her vision seemed to blur as if a hammer struck her head.

“I'm leaving. See you again.”

Kim Hajin didn't give her time to recover and walked past like the fleeting wind.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk stood frozen as Kim Hajin's footsteps grew farther away. The word friend shocked her. She had never heard it until now and never even considered the possibility of having a friend. After all, a king didn't have any friends.

Shooooo—

Magic power condensed on the bench that Kim Hajin sat on. It swirled and transformed into a human that Jin Sahyuk already expected.

“You came to like him?”

The figure's voice brought her back to her senses.

“Shut your mouth, you damned—”

“What, didn't you say you would bring him to Akatrina? You just let him go! I told you how to switch Kim Hajin with Kindspring.”

“...”

Bell's words made her speechless. As he said, she planned on bringing Kim Hajin with her even if she had to abduct him until she heard the word friend.

“He...” Jin Sahyuk scratched her head and spat out an excuse.

“He made me recall the past.”

She remembered how her younger self, Prihi, interacted with Kim Hajin in the recorded past.

Prihi and Kim Hajin grew quite close. She learned many things from Kim Hajin, relied on him, and even declared that she would become like him one day. They could clearly be called friends.

If, if I also met someone like Kim Hajin when I was young...

Jin Sahyuk pondered.

“Well, I don’t care either way. I just don’t want you to be lonely without me,” Bell playfully added.

“I don’t need you. Shut the hell up.” Jin Sahyuk glared at him and shot back.

Bell smiled and turned into a wisp of magic power.

“I’ll go on ahead. Don’t be late.”

“I’m not going back today, idiot!”

Shooooo— Bell flew away with the wind. Jin Sahyuk plopped on the bench alone and looked at the night sky. The same sky Kim Hajin admired. The full moon shone in the dark, but it didn’t look so lonely because of all the stars around it.

“I...” Jin Sahyuk slowly muttered as she gazed at the sky.

“I’m used to being alone.”

Her words disappeared into the air without reaching Bell or Kim Hajin.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference D-1]

Everyone from the secret service made their way to Leores Plaza a day before the conference. Citizens from all over the world gathered for the opening ceremony that would soon take place.

We surveyed the area for potential threats.

“I don’t see anyone suspicious, but stay on your toes.”

I looked down at the plaza from the watchtower and communicated with them.

— Got it.

— Okay, tell us if anything happens.

The secret service members replied from all across the plaza. They waited with heightened senses to detect any demonic energy.

Tap, tap— Footsteps rang out from the staircase to the watchtower. I placed the crystal ball away and turned around.

“Hmm...”

A familiar voice rang out. It turned out to be Yoo Yeonha.

“There you are.”

She looked around the watchtower with her arms crossed. I could tell all the dust bothered her quite a bit.

“What are you doing here, Miss CEO? Aren’t you busy running your business?”

Yoo Yeonha furrowed her brows and walked over.

“It’ll be the day of the transnational peace conference in less than 20 minutes. Ah, I’m sure you know, but it’s a 2 week event. The first 10 days are no different than a festival and the real conference will take place on the last 4 days. Unfortunately, we don’t know when Baal will descend.”

“If possible, he’ll descend on the last day,” I confidently replied. From what Jin Sahyuk said, Baal would wait until the end to make his move.

“I see. I trust you.”

Yoo Yeonha nodded without asking any more questions. Her trust in me felt quite baffling. I smiled and tried to look cool.

“Did you finish preparing?” I asked.

“Yes, I gave each secret service member an exorcism weapon. We’ll have to wait and find out if they’re effective. Oh right, this is yours.”

Yoo Yeonha held a long, wooden case in her right hand.

“What’s that?”

“A bow. We couldn’t buy it even with the republic’s treasury, so we stole it.”

“You stole it?” I doubted my ears for a second.

“Open it.”

“...”

I tilted my head and opened the case. Kiik— The wooden bow looked completely ordinary.

“How is it?”

I couldn't answer her.

“Whoa.”

I exclaimed in shock. I never imagined a bow could surpass the Black Lotus Bow that resulted from the synthesis between Temujin's Bow and Horus' Bow.

[Ancient Hero Leoricus' Exorcism Bow] [Pinnacle Grade] [Legendary Artifact] — The bow used by the hero Leoricus to combat devils. — Contains the legacy of Leoricus' exorcist power.

Now I had a legendary pinnacle grade bow. This Leoricus had to be on the same level as Yi Sun-shin in Korea.

“It's amazing.”

I murmured in a daze and Yoo Yeonha faintly smiled.

“You have to safely return and give it back, okay? We replaced it with a fake replica at the museum.”

“Huh? Uh...”

I don't know if I can return this. I can't begin to imagine the results if I fused it with the Black Lotus Bow.

“S-Sure, I'll return it safely.”

I nodded anyways.

— The transnational peace conference will now begin!

Midnight struck and fireworks went off with a loud announcement. Yoo Yeonha and I turned towards the fireworks, but I couldn't focus on the scenery and only stared at messages popping up.

[The final episode, Daybreak, will begin.] [You are now only a step away from the end.] [Remember, you still have the right to ask me a question or make a request.]

I closed my eyes and focused on the sound of exploding fireworks and people cheering. My heart suddenly turned cold and a thought crossed my mind.

“No matter how this episode ends...”

I sent a message to the co-author.

“Let’s butt heads once everything is over.”

Yoo Yeonha thought I meant her and curiously tilted her head.

“Huh? Butt our heads?”

“It’s nothing.”

I laughed and she pouted like a kid. Surprisingly, the co-author messaged me back.

[Understood.] [Whether Baal dies or you die...] [Once this episode is over...] [I will invite you.] [I wish you the best of luck.]

Now I had another reason to absolutely win.

Chapter 334

One Step (2)

Chae Nayun and Shin Jonghak arrived in the republic for the transnational peace conference.

They traveled by carriage to a mansion owned by a well-known billionaire named Larin and would stay there for the next 2 weeks. He formally invited Shin Jonghak, who came from the respectable Priton family.

“Mmm...”

This grand mansion in Leores’ capital city cost a fortune because of the extremely high price of land.

“It’s pretty big. I’d say it’s about the size of my room.”

Chae Nayun assessed the mansion rather brutally. She lived in Chae Joochul’s traditional home all her life, so she naturally regarded this place as mundane.

“Nothing stands out.”

Her gaze roamed across the room until it landed on Shin Jonghak.

“Dude, what’re you doing?”

Shin Jonghak read a small notebook and raised his head.

“I’m looking at the guest list.”

“What’s that?”

“Other people staying in this mansion besides us. Airun, Draven... Apparently, they’re all famous nobles in the kingdom. I figured I should at least memorize their names.”

“Oh, I see.”

Chae Nayun didn’t care about networking and headed towards the balcony. Her entire body ached from being in the carriage all day.

“Hmm...”

She leaned against the balustrade and gazed into the distance. The street below came into view. The scenery looked like a combination between the past and present with a hint of mysteriousness.

“Hmm?”

A woman’s upside-down face suddenly appeared in front of her as she watched the busy street.

“...”

She stared at the face for 1 second, 2 seconds, 3 seconds...

“Fuuuck!”

She shouted in surprise, fell backwards, and rolled into the room.

“Hahahaha.”

Jin Sahyuk appeared like a ghost and walked in while laughing.

“D-Dammit. You asshole, what did you do that for?”

Chae Nayun charged like an angry bull, but Jin Sahyuk’s chains of magic power held her back.

“Argh! These chains again?”

“Shh. I need to tell you something, so listen up. You too, Shin Jonghak.”

Jin Sahyuk sounded somewhat forlorn.

* * *

[The Republic of Leores — First Day of the Transnational Peace Conference]

I fell asleep late at night on the watchtower, but suddenly woke up.

— Are you watching me?

A voice flowed into my ears. At first, I thought Chae Nayun contacted me.

— Answer if you’re watching.

However, this voice belonged to a man and sounded threatening.

“...?”

— You have some nerve to follow me like this.

“What... ah.”

Only then did I realize the situation and connected to my observer’s vision.

— Looks like you can see me now.

Yi Yeonjun appeared in front of me with the observer in his hand. He glared with his dark eyes.

— Answer me.

“How did you find out?”

The observer delivered my question to Yi Yeonjun, who promptly scoffed.

— Did you think such a cheap trick would work on me?

“Mmm... So what?”

— What?

I tried to remain calm as possible.

“This might be better. Why don’t we meet right now? It’s clear we dislike each other.”

I felt confident in defeating him with full access to my gifts and weapons.

— Hahaha...

He only laughed. Was he scared or making fun of my boldness?

— Fine, see you in 4 days.

It seemed to be the latter. He nodded in satisfaction and announced a date.

“And the location?”

— I’ll notify you through this bird when the time comes. I’ll be keeping it until then.

“Go ahead.”

— I will.

The observer’s vision darkened and Yi Yeonjun’s voice disappeared as well.

“Tsk. All this right after I wake up?”

I brushed my hair and sighed. I hadn’t expected him to catch my observer. Thankfully, I managed to play it cool.

“Hajin?”

“Uaaak!” I jumped 5 meters into the air.

“Whoa!”

Rachel also threw her hands out in surprise.

“...”

“...”

We awkwardly stared at each other before I coughed.

“W-When did you get here, R-Rachel?”

“Eh? Ah, it’s nothing important. It’s just that, Hajin...”

She didn’t get the chance to finish.

— Emergency, emergency! This is Yi Yeonghan! Several demons have infiltrated this place! We need help!

The crystal violently shook. Rachel and I jumped through the watchtower’s window. We fell from 130 meters, but had nothing to fear shrouded in magic power.

KOOOONG!

We darted forward after landing and endured the soreness in our calves.

We arrived at Yi Yeonghan's location 5 minutes later. He sent the backup request from the capital's underground sewer system. Kim Horak and Yi Younghan fought dozens of demons in this humid darkness.

"What happened here?"

I asked and Kim Horak quickly replied.

"We're not sure. We followed a trail of demonic energy and found them here."

Kim Horak addressed me politely after our first meeting. I didn't know why. He just felt like it.

"They look fairly strong. Will the four of us be enough?"

Yi Younghan worriedly muttered. He wiped the sweat from his forehead and grabbed his gauntlets.

"Well..."

I scanned the demons to estimate their strength.

[A total of 24 demons have awakened your instincts.] [All your variable stats have increased by 49%.]

Increased by 49%?

"I think we can pull it off."

The situation didn't look as bad as it seemed anymore.

"Uhahaha!"

A hearty laughter resonated throughout the sewer. Tap, tap— A demon who looked like a mummy came forward.

"You make me laugh, human."

He gathered demonic energy in his hand as he spoke. The other demons did the same and also gathered energy in their mouths and chests. Soon, their demonic energy filled the entire sewer.

“You want to defeat us, but it’s no use. You won’t stand a chance against the duke of hell!”

The demon shot his condensed energy at me.

“Return to dust, human...?”

It flew towards me like a boomerang, but I easily grabbed it with my bare hand.

*[Exorcism has been activated. Demonic energy has been reduced by 90%.]
[Your luck has affected the amount of reduction.]*

“I see you have a trick up your sleeve, human.”

“Huh? Oh no, this isn’t—”

“Kill him!”

The demon who seemed to be the leader shouted. All the demons released their demonic energy and their power merged into a single wave that flew straight at me. I held out my hand.

KWAAAAAA!

The explosion shook the surroundings. All the sewer water evaporated, the air grew hot, and poisonous gas filled the air. Their demonic energy wrecked everything and swallowed me whole.

“Kuhahaha...?”

The demon laughed again, but stopped midway because I stood completely intact after being struck by the enormous attack.

“Huhu. This...”

I checked the system window with a smile.

[Exorcism has been activated. Demonic energy has been reduced by 95%.]

“Doesn’t hurt at all.”

An astounding 95%...

“What did you say, human?”

“Well, it seems...” I continued cheerfully.

“You won’t be laying a finger on me.”

Fighting demons suited me more than anyone else.

* * *

[Earth – Tower of Heroes]

— Rank 3 Vassago, Rank 14 Leraje, Rank 29 Astaroth, Rank 62 Valac.
We have identified 4 devils so far.

An emergency meeting took place at the Tower of Heroes in Gwanghwamun, Korea. The demon realm transformation, which they thought had slowed, began to spread again due to the devils who appeared with incarnation bodies.

— Valac and Astaroth are the more aggressive ones.

Yi Gongmyung, who had brilliantly led the Orden annihilation mission not too long ago, led today’s meeting.

“Then...”

The audience consisted of Heynckes, Chae Joochul, Yi Yookho, and Kim Sukho. The latter two served as the association’s chairmen and all four held great influence.

“Does that mean the others aren’t aggressive?”

— Vassago and Leraje aren’t.

Yi Gongmyung answered Heynckes’ question.

— I’m not sure whether they’re building power or simply not interested in fighting. I’ve only heard rumors, but we do know they’re currently not involved in the demon realm transformation.

“Rumors?” Kim Sukho asked with a frown.

“What kind of rumors?”

— These are the rumors regarding the devils.

Yi Gongmyung immediately pulled up a slide as if he had been expecting Kim Sukho’s question.

[Season 5 Gladiator of the Century Official Ranking] 1. [Lijengyi — 393 Official Matches: 391 Wins, 2 Draws] 2. [SpamMachine — 584 Official Matches: 404 Wins, 170 Losses, 10 Draws] 3...

“Gladiator of the Century?” Kim Sukho rubbed his temple in confusion.

— This user who goes by the username Lijengyi is rumored to be Leraje.

“Oi, Yi Gongmyung. Are you trying to be funny?”

Kim Sukho raised his voice, but Yi Gongmyung remained calm.

— That was also my initial reaction, but I contacted the capsule developers and investigated Lijengyi’s account. The result...

Yi Gongmyung changed the screen again. This time, it showed a record of all the games Lijengyi had ever played and the amount of time she spent playing each game.

Not just Gladiator of the Century, but also Grand Theft Auto, Three Kingdoms, Become a Legend, etc. Lijengyi spent a total of 4000 hours playing different games.

— An astounding 4000 hours. This means she's been playing games almost nonstop if we take into consideration when she made her account.

“Ha...” Kim Sukho let out a dumbfounded laugh.

“Are you saying this devil is a game addict?”

— Yes, at least according to the rumors.

Yi Gongmyung slightly nodded and changed the screen.

— While Leraje is busy playing games, the most aggressive Valac is...

The video showed the Sahara partly transformed into the demon realm and monsters marching in an orderly fashion under Valac's command.

— As you can see, Vakac is creating an army.

“So it seems.”

Kim Sukho's expression stiffened. Chae Joochul, who had been quiet all along, finally opened his mouth.

“I heard England has a remarkable summoning magician.”

His comment didn't seem related at all to their meeting and he sounded emotionless as always.

— Yes, that's correct.

Yi Gongmyung replied, unshaken by the sudden change in topic.

— She's Lady Ah Hae-In's disciple.

“Ah Hae-In?” Kim Sukho frowned.

— Yes, I couldn’t find out any details because Lady Ah Hae-In was quite secretive.

“Good, let’s not meddle with Ah Hae-In.”

Kim Sukho coughed and lowered his head. The association could probably handle one 9 star magician, but they feared opposition from other magicians who revered 9 star magicians.

— I understand. This is my last report for the day. A strange phenomenon occurred last week at a beach in Vladivostok.

The long meeting came to an end as Yi Gongmyung showed security footage of Vladivostok from 3 days ago.

— Please take a look.

All four VIPs turned to the screen.

The 5 second footage could only be described as strange.

“What was that? I didn’t get a clear look.”

Even Chae Joochul and Heynckes, who had been sitting comfortably, leaned forward. Yi Gongmyung replayed the footage.

Chwaaaaa...

Monsters appeared on Vladivostok’s shore. Suddenly, a gust of wind blew across the sea and all the monsters died.

“Can’t you play it slower?”

Heynckes seemed perplexed as well. This wind didn’t occur naturally, but he couldn’t identify the source because it moved so fast.

— It has already been slowed to the limit. The Russian government took care of the monsters' remains. They said something sharp slashed apart the bodies.

“Is this also the work of devils?” Heynckes asked.

— Nothing is certain, but I don't believe the devils did this.

Yi Gongmyung replied.

“And what's your reasoning?”

— We looked at the flow of magic power in Vladivostok and found it quite familiar.

“So?” Kim Sukho interrupted Yi Gongmyung and impatiently waved.

“What is it if it's not the devils?”

—...

Yi Gongmyung fell silent for the first time. He looked at Kim Sukho, Chae Joochul, Heynckes, Yi Yukho, and...

— I believe it's...

He uttered a name that didn't belong to any devil and his declaration startled even the Immortal.

— Orden.

Chapter 335

One Step (3)

The republic's anti-demon bureau rose to the top ever since the demons' rampant activities 10 years ago. The members took pride in their mission to purify the demonic and subjugate demons.

Today, a rather troublesome guest visited them. Airun, the famous knight commander from Arunheim, wished to see the anti-demon bureau's director. Seraine agreed to meet after much thought.

"One wrong step and this matter might become an international issue," Airun said as she walked through the bureau's hallway with Seraine.

"Issue? What do you mean?"

Seraine tilted her head and pretended to be oblivious. Airun's brows sharply went up.

"I'm talking about the F rank sharpshooter, Kim Hajin."

"Uh... Kim Hajin?"

"Yes." Seraine blinked her eyes as if trying to recall.

"Kim Hajin... who was that again? Mmm..."

However, she only mumbled in confusion.

"He recently made headlines in the republic's newspapers."

Airun bit her lips.

“Ah!”

Seraine clapped her hands with a straight face. She recalled seeing such a headline, [F Rank Sharpshooter Kim Hajin]. She did her best to suppress the news, but couldn't stop the rumors.

“I see what you mean now.”

“Yes, so where is he? He should return to the army now that he's done with his mission.”

“Who knows? I've seen his name in the news, but that's all I know. Ah, I heard it was a misreport. I mean, how could an F rank sharpshooter decimate all those demonic monsters?”

Seraine innocently scratched her cheek as Airun glared at her.

“So you're saying you don't know?”

“No, but I'm sure he returned to his home country already.”

“No, he didn't come ba... huu.”

Airun felt quite troubled. She knew Kim Hajin had safely escorted Harin to the republic, but couldn't dig into the matter any further. If she did, the kingdom might find out she helped Harin escape. Even Airun feared punishment from Arunheim's tyrannical ruler.

“From what I hear, the republic established a new institute called the secret service.”

Airun changed the subject. She suspected Kim Hajin had something to do with the secret service, but couldn't confirm her suspicions.

“I wouldn't say it's a new institute. We simply reinstated an old agency for the transnational peace conference.”

The subject must've made Seraine nervous as her voice slightly trembled.

“I see. The director’s name was Heiji, correct?”

“Yes, we luckily picked up an excellent talent. We promoted him to director straight away to put a tight leash on him.”

“Picked up, you say?” Airun stopped and Seraine also halted.

“Are you sure he didn’t walk in himself?”

Airun didn’t want Kim Hajin. She simply wanted to meet him and make sure he hadn’t told anyone about his escort mission. After all, Airun’s position might be at stake.

“...”

Seraine didn’t reply and smirked condescendingly. She found it quite funny that Airun, the paragon of knights, feared for her life in her own country.

“Well, maybe he did.”

— Demon invasion! Demon invasion!

An alert rang out from the speaker above as Seraine spoke. They both looked at each other.

— 25 demons have appeared in the capital’s northeast sewage system!

They immediately dashed out of the anti-demon bureau and the other members followed. The group moved with magic power like a soaring hawk and arrived at their destination in just 5 minutes.

An unexpected sight greeted them when the 133 members entered the sewage system.

“Hmm? Oh, you’re finally here.”

The 25 demons had been tied up with ropes with the secret service members sitting on their backs.

“A bit late, but I guess it’s fine.”

Seraine immediately recognized Kim Hajin, Kim Horak, Yi Yeonghan, and Rachel. The anti-demon bureau members stood with dazed expressions as Kim Hajin leisurely smiled and handed off the demons.

“Take them.”

One woman became speechless at Kim Hajin’s words. She recognized him, but couldn’t believe her eyes. After all, who would believe an F rank sharpshooter could defeat 25 demons?

“We’ll be taking our leave then.”

Airun didn’t know what to say. It seemed Kim Hajin hadn’t noticed her and left with a relaxed smile.

* * *

[Transnational Peace Conference, Day 5]

“The republic’s pride... Director Heiji and his subordinates... subjugated 25 demons...”

The secret service received special treatment for its recent achievements. All personnel affiliated with the group accepted the president’s commendation and a hefty reward. Naturally, everyone in the city spoke about the agency.

Subjugating 25 demons could be considered an unbelievable feat. Demons possessed incredible strength and their united force could topple any nation in a few days.

I returned to the director’s office after being congratulated by the citizens.

“Congrats.”

Boss came to visit me. Well, she technically intruded without permission.

“Don’t tease me. By the way, how did you get in? I couldn’t sense you at all.”

“Hehe, good. My ability has been improving recently.”

Boss proudly strutted with her chest out. Then she transformed into a shadow. Her body melted into a dark puddle on the ground and her presence completely disappeared.

“Wow, that’s impressive.”

— Huhu.

Boss laughed in satisfaction and transformed back. The way she shot up from her shadow felt astonishing and creepy at the same time.

“So, what are you going to do next?”

She asked as a funny thought popped up in my head.

“Grab my hand.”

“H-Hand? Why?”

“Just take it.”

Boss grabbed my hand hesitantly.

“Now, close your eyes.”

“...”

Gulp— I could hear her swallowing hard. Boss closed her eyes and I connected our vision to my second observer, which I dispatched not too long ago.

The scenery from the heart of the capital appeared before us. The sun had already set, but the capital bustled with tourists. The observer looked down from the sky and spotted 3 people in the crowd.

— Baal will probably descend on the 13th.

Jin Sahyuk said with a sweet chicken skewer in her hand.

— So we have 8 days left.

Chae Nayun replied. Boss squeezed my hand when she spotted Chae Nayun, Chae Jinyoon's sister and Chae Joochul's granddaughter.

— Prepare yourself until then. Don't just eat like a pig.

— You're the one eating like a pig!

Chae Nayun growled and reached for Jin Sahyuk's skewer, but Jin Sahyuk easily blocked her. Chae Nayun could only sigh with a frown.

— Aren't you on that Bell guy's side? Why don't you just convince him to stop Baal's descent?

— That's impossible.

Jin Sahyuk shook her head resolutely.

— If left alone, Baal will tear apart Bell's body and descend by himself on the 14th. That's why Bell hastened the descent by a day, so he could save himself through death.

Jin Sahyuk chewed on her skewer and I turned to Boss.

“Hear that? Bell will die soon.”

“...”

Boss squeezed my hand without replying. She no longer hated Bell after realizing he never killed Yi Yeonjun. In fact, she felt sorry.

“I see,” she bitterly mumbled.

“Yeah.”

We didn’t have much time left until Arunheim and Leores’ ending, this world’s ending, and my own ending.

What choices would I make on that day? What choices should I make?

“Huuu...”

I disconnected our vision and opened my eyes. I could see Boss’ face with her eyes still closed. She frowned from our vision being cut off.

I couldn’t describe her beauty with words, but one thing always came to mind whenever I saw her cute, clumsy side.

I want to be with her longer.

A voice suddenly flowed into my ears as if to stop this train of thought.

— Come here tomorrow at 3 A.M.

Yi Yeonjun spoke to me through my first observer. He wanted to meet in a secluded alleyway somewhere in the republic.

* * *

[England – Chameleon Troupe’s Sanctuary]

The Chameleon Troupe members returned to their underwater base in the English Channel when Pandemonium showed signs of being swallowed by the demon realm transformation.

The underwater sanctuary remained clean and well-kept thanks to Kim Hajin’s modifications. Each member unpacked their belongings and gathered in the lobby.

“Hah? Orden is alive? Are you positive?” Cheok Jungyeong asked with a scowl while sitting on Kim Hajin’s handcrafted couch.

“Yep, that’s what Droon said. Interesting, right?” Jin Yohan nodded as he took out a can of beer from the fridge.

“Hmm...”

Cheok Jungyeong rubbed his chin and pondered. No one doubted he already thought about fighting Orden in his mind.

Jin Yohan sipped his beer and changed the subject. “So, what happened to the 9th floor?”

“Oh, that? It’s over. I took care of those calamities or whatever.”

Cheok Jungyeong recalled his battles on the 9th floor with a grin. Legendary monsters from myths became stepping stones for his growth. He even sparred with Lancelot and Lü Bu.

“What are we going to do now? Find and kill Orden again? Huhuhu.”

Cheok Jungyeong chuckled as he sunk into the couch.

“Ah, this couch is so comfortable. Is it because Hajin made it?”

“That? Yeah, Kim Hajin made it. Focus, Jungyeong. Shouldn’t we wait until Boss comes back? We need to take care of other things like the matter with Vast Expanse.”

Jin Yohan crushed the beer can in his hand. Last week, Vast Expanse came to visit them and wanted to meet Yi Yuri, the girl with the authority of healing.

“Oh yeah, isn’t Droon going out with that girl now?”

“Yeah, they’re together right now.”

“Haha, well that’s something.”

Cheok Jungyeong laughed like an old man and spread out his arms. He peacefully lay on the couch and thought about all the devils that recently appeared. These transcendental beings supposedly descended on Earth using incarnation bodies. Cheok Jungyeong stared at the ceiling and murmured.

“Oi, these devils... don’t you think we can take care of them?”

“Why, do you want to fight them?”

“Kuhuhu, do you even need to ask?”

Cheok Jungyeong raised his hand and stared at it. The toughest hand in the world. He firmly believed in his strength.

“No matter what devil I encounter...”

He had defeated Lü Bu, crushed Dullahan, and beat Behemoth.

“I can crush all of them.”

He confidently smiled and purple magic power blazed around his hand. He obtained this violet magic power after eating Behemoth’s heart. His strength had reached a transcendent realm now.

“...” Jin Yohan silently looked at him.

“Well...”

He couldn’t help but agree as he had also seen Heynckes and Chae Joochul. The current Cheok Jungyeong didn’t seem any weaker than the Immortal. Jin Yohan couldn’t imagine Cheok Jungyeong losing.

“It looks like you’ve become a monster too.”

Jin Yohan honestly praised him. Cheok Jungyeong faintly smiled and the violet magic power crackled around his arm. His new strength mesmerized him the more he saw it.

— Ignore everything else and just focus on conquering the 9th floor.

Like always, what Kim Hajin told him turned out to be correct.

While Cheok Jungyeong became intoxicated by his strength...

Beeeeep! Beeeeep!

A loud siren went off in the sanctuary. To be exact, the sound came from the members' smartwatches.

“Whoa!”

“Ah, geez! That surprised me.”

Kaita and Setryn woke up from their sleep. Droon also came out of his room with Yi Yuri.

“What happened Jin Yohan, Cheok Jungyeong?”

“...”

Jin Yohan calmly looked at his smartwatch. He raised his head after about a minute and exchanged gazes with Cheok Jungyeong. Soon, a big smile emerged on his face.

“What happened?”

Droon asked again full of anticipation. Jin Yohan projected the emergency alert.

[Emergency report! Rank 62 devil, Valac, is marching north with his army!] [Emergency report! Rank 29 devil, Astaroth, has appeared in Spain!] [Emergency report! Rank 14 devil, Leraje, has announced the creation of a devil's castle. Its location has been confirmed as the former headquarters of the gaming company, Leol!] [Emergency report! Rank 3 devil, Vassago...]

Chapter 336

The Stories of Characters (1)

[Rank 62 Devil Valac]

Valac's army rose from the desert and displayed overwhelming power as they marched through Central Asia to Europe. Europe couldn't repel the devil army after the land and ocean partly transformed into the demon realm.

The association issued worldwide disaster warnings and dispatched heroes to Europe. A war finally broke out between humanity and devils.

[Rank 29 Devil Astaroth]

Astaroth formed a barrier around Madrid, Spain. No one could enter or exit and what happened inside remained a mystery.

Spain suffered a complete lockdown while Valac wreaked havoc in the east. Europe didn't have the time to complain about the two devils.

[Rank 14 Devil Leraje]

Leraje, on the other hand, stirred up trouble far from Europe. She constructed her castle using Leol's gaming headquarters in the United States, California. Leraje's devil castle served as a portal to the demon realm and demons flooded out from it like a tidal wave.

However, Leraje didn't cause any destruction like Valac and Astaroth. In fact, she offered a rather strange mission to humanity. To be exact, she ordered the gaming company Leol.

— Make me the most enjoyable game ever created. It would be nice to choose from multiple classes.

Her order confused Leol's CEO and developers, who became trapped in the devil's castle. However, Leraje added another objective for them before they could even comprehend the situation.

— I won't harm humanity if the game you make satisfies me and someone can beat me in that game.

To their bewilderment, Leol had been handed the fate of America.

— I swear on my name as a devil that I will keep this promise.

Leraje even made an oath that caused all Americans to focus on the Leol gaming company.

The 5,300 employees began their game development with the world's expectations on their shoulders. Leraje gave them a deadline of 20 days. The laughable timeframe would've normally made this mission impossible, but Leol had already been in the middle of developing a game. They felt confident it would be the modern era's greatest game as they sped up its completion.

[Rank 3 Devil Vassago]

Vassago also gave humanity a unique, but less generous mission. He constructed a colosseum in Pandemonium and invited the warriors of Earth.

— Come defeat me.

He sent them a simple message, but not many responded. Vassago grew disgruntled at the lack of challengers and agreed to fight multiple opponents simultaneously. Even that turned out ineffective, so he released an ultimatum that he would wait 10 more days.

Humanity realized the dangers they faced as a determined master rank hero visited the Hero Association.

"I will challenge Vassago."

Jin Seyeon had originally planned on entering the demon realm gate, but changed her mind when she heard the Chameleon Troupe's Cheok Jungyeong appeared on the Tower of Wish's 9th floor. Jin Seyeon wanted to ask the Chameleon Troupe several questions about the events that completely changed her life.

"You?"

The association chairman, Yi Yookho, blinked in confusion. Jin Seyeon's sudden visit caught him off guard.

"Yes."

"..."

She looked determined, but Yi Yookho felt hesitant. She couldn't be wasted on Vassago's colosseum. The association planned on using disposal heroes to challenge that devil and buy some time.

"There's no need for you to—"

"It's fine. That man will be there too."

"That man?"

"Yes."

Jin Seyeon failed to track down Cheok Jungyeong on the 9th floor, but he would certainly challenge the colosseum. Perhaps Black Lotus would be there as well.

"The Chameleon Troupe's Cheok Jungyeong and maybe even Black Lotus..."

Yi Yookho internally sighed at her words. Even at a glance, he could sense her overwhelming determination. He couldn't say much since he knew about the relationship between her and the Chameleon Troupe.

"I understand, but here's what I think."

Yi Yookho took out a secret document from his drawer to dissuade her.

“What’s this?”

“You’ll know when you read it, but I’ll simply explain. There’s a chance Orden is still alive.”

“Orden?”

Jin Seyeon immediately scanned the document as Yi Yookho continued explaining.

“The area around Russia’s Vladivostok has been free of demonic monsters for some time. Its surroundings have all undergone the demon realm transformation, but Vladivostok remains spotless. You’ll hear the residents laughing and living peacefully if you visit.”

The document contained accounts of Vladivostok’s residents. Apparently, a mysterious power annihilated the demons and demonic monsters in the area. No one knew what or who, but Yi Gongmyung deduced the culprit through the magic power’s smell and frequency.

“I want to entrust you with this task. It might be more important than the devils. Heynckes and Chae Joochul also agreed to participate.”

“...”

Jin Seyeon set down the document after thoroughly reading it. Her expression hadn’t changed in the slightest and Yi Yookho couldn’t help but sigh.

“I’ll stop Vassago. I wouldn’t make much of a difference if the two of them are participating.”

“Why?” Yi Yookho finally scowled.

“Why are you so bent on pursuing the Chameleon Troupe? I told you before, the Kwang-Oh Incident is—”

“I’ll take my leave.” Jin Seyeon stood up from her seat and had no intentions of listening to a made-up story about her past.

“You’ll regret it if you leave now.” Yi Yookho’s expression stiffened. He tried to stop her, but failed.

“I hope we meet again.” Jin Seyeon bowed and left without hesitation.

“That stubborn woman... Earth is on the brink of destruction and all she cares about is some bygone past.”

Yi Yookho massaged his temples and turned on his smartwatch to report to Kim Sukho.

* * *

[3 A.M., Republic of Leores]

The moonlit field of grass looked like the perfect place for a young couple to meet. Unfortunately, only Yi Yeonjun waited for me here.

I quickly spotted him from a distance and he also stared at me.

“Hey.”

He began with a simple greeting. I reminded myself to also talk as much as possible.

[Lv.8 Unique Skill – Clockhand of Fate] Fate: You may select up to 8 targets as your fate. Your variable and special stats will increase by 300% for 3 minutes when fighting your fate. (May be used once every 120 hours).

I chose Jin Sahyuk as my first target and talking to her a few times had been enough. However, the requirement for a second target posed a huge problem.

[Condition to Select a Second Target – Must exchange at least 100 lines of dialogue face-to-face.]

“Did you hear me?” Yi Yeonjun spoke again after I remained silent. His monotone voice made me question whether he felt bored.

“Yeah, I heard a lot about you from Boss. My name is Kim Hajin. What’s yours?”

“...”

Yi Yeonjun shut his mouth as if I said something I shouldn’t have.

“Hello?”

He didn’t react at all. Did he hear about my unique skill from Bell?

“Answer me. What’s your name?”

“...”

I considered reversing time and starting over, but time reversal’s side effects would cost me too much. My movements would be severely restricted for at least 10 minutes even with the Orb of Regeneration. Yi Yeonjun didn’t strike me as the type to wait that long.

“Jin Sahyuk told me about your plan.”

He seemed uninterested in talking, so I continued by myself. This time, I took a more direct approach.

“Baal would need a new incarnation body if he descends after Jin Sahyuk kills Bell.”

Yi Yeonjun planned on taking that role.

“You’re trying to become Baal’s new incarnation body.”

“...” Yi Yeonjun remained silent.

“Hello?”

“Shut your mouth.” He released his magic power after those three words. His magic power appeared white contrary to his disposition.

“Quite a foul mouth, aren’t you?”

I raised my gun, which contained bullets tipped with the basilisk’s venom. I also activated all the medicinal effects from my [Medicinal Memory Physique].

KOOOONG!

A huge earthquake that could score at least an 8 on the Richter scale broke out.

Yi Yeonjun kicked off the ground and fully unleashed his magic power.

Chwaaaaa...

His white magic power spread out in every direction. I activated bullet time as the brilliant light swallowed all the shadows.

Kirik— Kirik—

I could see Yi Yeonjun in slow motion. Magic power shot out from his body like tree branches. I heard from Jin Sahyuk that he could freely manipulate the temperature of magic power. His gift sounded simple, but it had to be powerful given his status. I transformed the Desert Eagle into a shotgun and aimed.

—!

I pulled the trigger and the Desert Eagle spat out a venomous buckshot like a dragon’s breath.

* * *

KOOOONG!

The ground rumbled and Jin Sahyuk's eyes shot open. Her intuition told her this was no simple earthquake.

“What, what happened!?”

Chae Nayun also woke up from the couch as Jin Sahyuk jumped out the window. Chae Nayun and Shin Jonghak both quickly followed.

“Wait! Tell us what's happening! Where are you going?”

Jin Sahyuk ignored Chae Nayun and ran straight to the earthquake's epicenter. The streets grew chaotic because of the disaster.

Jin Sahyuk jumped from roof to roof and rushed to Bell's mansion.

Clang!

She broke the window and entered the dark mansion. As she looked around the empty bedroom...

“Haa...”

A low-pitched sigh rang out from the corner. Jin Sahyuk turned and found Bell collapsed with his hands on his stomach.

“BELL!”

She shouted, but paused from embarrassment. Shin Jonghak and Chae Nayun also arrived while she hesitated. Shin Jonghak furrowed his brows at Bell. Meanwhile, Chae Nayun asked as she blinked in confusion.

“What, what happened to you?”

“It's nothing.” Bell stood up drenched in cold sweat.

“It just signaled me that it wants to come out even if it has to tear my body apart.”

“Is it bad?” Jin Sahyuk asked from a distance. Bell bitterly smiled and nodded.

“Yeah, I don’t think I can last more than two days. If possible, I want you to kill me today... Keuk!”

Bell collapsed to his knees.

“Kueek...”

His back bent and his shoulders violently trembled. As he desperately tried to endure...

“—!”

An otherworldly cry burst out. Soon, Bell’s right eye turned crimson and the left side of his body flickered with black demonic energy.

“Kuk... Kuaaaaak!”

However, Bell managed to force Baal back. The devil screamed a few times before disappearing and Bell collapsed to the floor from exhaustion.

Jin Sahyuk knelt in front of him.

“You okay?” she worriedly asked. Bell smiled at her uncharacteristic attitude and shook his head.

“No, I’m not. Can you kill me now?”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk didn’t reply. She hesitated. She knew she could kill Bell with a complete extermination of the soul through Reality Manipulation.

“Huh? Wait.”

Bell discovered Shin Jonghak standing behind Jin Sahyuk. He grinned and gestured at him.

“You’re here, Myungchul’s grandson.”

“...”

Shin Jonghak didn’t reply and felt uncomfortable hearing his grandfather’s name come out of Bell’s mouth.

“Are you ready to hear our story? This might be your last chance... Kuuek.”

Bell scowled from the monstrous pain eating away at his body.

“I don’t see a reason to hear you out.”

Shin Jonghak expressed his discomfort. Bell simply smiled at him. He could feel the demonic energy roiling inside, but endured with all his effort.

“A reason to hear me out, you say...”

Bell wanted to tell Shin Jonghak about Shin Myungchul. No, he had to. Bell hadn’t met Shin Myungchul by coincidence, but by fate. He promised Shin Myungchul.

“You resemble Myungchul the more I look at you.”

Shin Jonghak frowned at his words. “What are you blabbering about?”

“Hm? Oh, nothing much. I’m just saying you two are alike. Both in appearance and character.”

“Ha! Character?”

Shin Jonghak knew himself well enough to know his character didn’t resemble Shin Myungchul at all. Naturally, what Bell said sounded like an insult to his grandfather.

“I dare you to say that again—”

“I’m talking about Shin Myungchul before he went back in time.”

Shin Jonghak became speechless and took the bait. Bell couldn’t help but chuckle at Shin Jonghak’s cute reaction and slowly continued the tale.

“The world Myungchul originally lived in looked a lot different. Science and technology paled in comparison to this one, but could still be considered advancing. Devils had no room to interfere there, but Myungchul felt anxious. I guess that’s why he wanted to go back in time.”

Bell stopped as Shin Jonghak grabbed his Conqueror Spear.

“Shut your mouth,” Shin Jonghak coldly spoke.

“Shin Myungchul asked me.”

“What?” Shin Jonghak’s face distorted. To Bell, this side of him also resembled Shin Myungchul.

“He asked me to tell his grandson the story of his life, so you wouldn’t make the same choice.”

Shin Jonghak clenched his teeth and gripped his spear even tighter. Jin Sahyuk and Chae Nayun prepared to stop him at any moment.

Bell continued, “Myungchul made the first choice.”

He went back in time and allowed Baal to reach Earth.

“Most likely, you’ll be the one to make the second choice.”

Shin Myungchul left his final will in his grandson’s heart.

“Because...”

Rain entered through the broken window and dense demonic energy blew in along with the wind. The screams of civilians tore through the night sky. Demonic monsters had appeared after the earthquake.

“You might not know, but Shin Myungchul left everything to you. He knew his son didn’t have the talent for it.”

Shin Jonghak looked out the window. A pillar of golden light shot up to the sky and the cries of demonic monsters rang out. He could tell this light came from Kim Suho. With that, Shin Jonghak turned back to Bell.

“So, feel like hearing me out now?” Bell asked once again.

Chae Nayun quietly watched them, murmured whatever, and jumped out the window. She wanted Shin Jonghak to decide for himself. Of course, Jin Sahyuk stayed without paying attention to such things.

“Haaa...” Shin Jonghak glared at Jin Sahyuk and sighed in disappointment.

“Go ahead.”

He sat cross-legged on the floor while holding his spear and wouldn’t hesitate to use it if Bell lied.

Bell looked at him and recalled the day he met a man who looked just like Shin Jonghak. The day he met a violent, arrogant man living in discontent.

Chapter 337

The Stories of the Characters (2)

[Tower of Time]

They first met here.

— Are you the fairy of regression?

The man said as I opened my eyes. I couldn't say a word because being called a fairy shocked me. After all, no one with eyes would ever mistake me for a fairy.

— Answer me. Are you the fairy of regression?

However, the man persisted.

“Pft.”

Thanks to him, I didn't even feel the frustration and despair of reincarnating again. Of course, the man frowned at my laughter.

— You think this is funny?

Being suddenly summoned surprised me, but I quickly understood his circumstances. He must've climbed to the top of this tower alone and found the regression stone. He probably thought it would allow him to travel back in time as its name suggested.

— Who the hell are you and why did you pop out of the regression stone? I won't ask a third time. Answer!

The man raised his spear and his killing intent woke me up. I stopped daydreaming and surveyed the area. It looked unfamiliar, but I must've reincarnated inside the seed that Baal planted. The seed had grown into this tower.

— I'll ask a third time. Who are you?

The man kindly gave me another chance. I smiled without replying like before. I didn't mean to smile, but it came out naturally when I saw his otherworldly appearance. I wandered across many worlds and his physical appearance ranked among the best.

— I'll count to three. One, two... two and a half...

I immediately noticed his strangeness.

— Two and a half... and a half... and a half...

I loosened up and raised my body. He flinched and stepped back as I stood up.

"I'll ask first."

— N-No, I'll be the one to ask...

"Where are we?" I asked him.

— The Tower of Time.

He muttered.

"Oh."

I had been summoned once again by a human's selfishness after destroying another world and aimlessly drifting through space. By now, I felt all too familiar with this development.

— It's your turn to answer. Are you the fairy of regression?

The man, Shin Myungchul, asked again. I slightly turned and closely examined him. His eyes shone like gems underwater. Even his long, unkempt hair couldn't conceal his good looks.

“I’m not a fairy, but a devil.”

I honestly replied. He didn’t seem taken aback in the slightest. Such a reaction surprised me.

— Fairies and devils are pretty much the same.

Shin Myungchul always possessed a strong character even before he went back in time. However, he lost himself in guilt and anger at being unable to protect his loved ones when I first met him.

— Devil of regression, can you send me back in time?

Shin Myungchul wished to change the past.

“It’s possible.” I nodded without much thought. He instantly smiled like a kid and approached as if to hold my hands in appreciation.

“But there’s a condition.”

— Condition? That’s fine. No matter what it is, I’ll...

“I will always be beside you once go back in time and I’m quite annoying.”

I took a more backhanded approach then. I didn’t think to stop or persuade him. I gave up before even trying. Perhaps I already resigned myself to this development. I knew a stranger like me wouldn’t be able to convince him.

— You will be beside me?

“That’s right. There’s nothing I can do if you don’t want that.”

Humans who chose to borrow a devil’s power always regretted it in the end as they watched their world crumble. They struck their chests and cried out in sorrow and anger.

— I don’t care.

I concluded that Shin Myungchul would end up the same.

“Great, but I need to warn you about a few things before we travel back in time.”

— Go ahead.

The young Shin Myungchul acted quite proud and arrogant. I had experienced all sorts of people across different worlds, so I ignored his flaws.

“The regression stone serves as a medium for summoning the devil Baal. It will transport him from the transcendental plane to this one. Baal will undoubtedly descend upon your world if you use the regression stone. That is the price to travel back in time. What you experience will not be a miracle, but a calamity that will destroy your world.”

— Pft, that doesn't matter.

As expected, Shin Myungchul acted selfishly like all the other regressors.

“You will regret it.”

However, one thing stood out about him.

— I won't. I'll just beat Baal up if he descends into my world.

Shin Myungchul possessed confidence befitting his strength. He grasped the regression stone without hesitation.

Like that, he became 17 years old again and returned to a world where his lover and family still lived.

Shin Myungchul cried tears of joy. He rapidly grew with his knowledge of the future. In just 2 years, he became a powerful hero capable of protecting his loved ones.

Three years later, Shin Myungchul married his lover. A year after that, he had a child that never existed in his previous life.

However, fate couldn't be changed so easily and his happiness didn't last forever.

Shin Myungchul's wife died from an illness not long after giving birth. He cried until his tears dried. His grief felt even stronger this time because of how long he loved her, but he needed to protect his son now.

Like that, 30 years flew by.

Shin Myungchul finally witnessed his son becoming a father. He named his grandson Shin Jonghak.

I had to prepare for Baal's descent, but watched over him most of the time. I found it quite fascinating and beautiful to see the once self-centered man become a grandfather.

Of course, I had no choice but to fulfill my duty as Baal's host. I met Yi Yeonjun, who caught Baal's attention, and formed the Chameleon Troupe. Then I also met kids like Yi Byul, Jain, and Kaita. I formed a family just like Shin Myungchul. I liked Yi Yeonjun because he reminded me of the person I loved in the past. I also liked Yi Byul simply because she looked cute. Jain's two-faced nature and Kaita's one-dimensional personality also appealed to me.

If possible, I wanted to stay with them as long as possible.

However, Baal didn't let me.

The first seizure came abruptly as Baal rampaged within me. He sensed my attachment to Earth and sought to destroy everything without descending through the demon realm gate.

Once enraged, Baal easily took over my body. However, his rampage ended in just a day after Shin Myungchul stopped him.

He beat up Baal as he once swore, but Baal chose to self-destruct like a true villain. A third of Korea risked total destruction. Meanwhile, I watched Shin Myungchul's decision from within Baal's consciousness.

To my surprise, Shin Myungchul didn't hesitate in the slightest.

— Bell, let me ask you for one last favor if you can hear me. Tell Jonghak my story, so he won't become like me. Help him achieve what I couldn't. Jonghak is always saying he'll become a great hero. I believe him. He'll become the greatest hero of all time. Even greater than me.

Shin Myungchul left his will with me before forming a barrier with all his strength. He traded his life for millions of others. That was how the hero Shin Myungchul met his fate.

“What do you think?”

I finished my story and turned to Shin Jonghak. I had to summarize Shin Myungchul's tale because of my condition. Shin Jonghak should understand everything since I passed him my memories through magic power.

“Shin Myungchul's sacrifice is lauded in textbooks as the epitome of heroism, but he only took responsibility for his past selfishness.”

Shin Jonghak couldn't say anything. He slumped with a stiff expression and stared at the ground. I chuckled and placed my hand on his head.

“Myungchul left his inheritance in your body. You should know what to do.”

I couldn't tell if he was still listening, so I kept the last shocking truth to myself. Even I felt shocked when I found out.

“Sahyuk.”

Jin Sahyuk turned and I could see my reflection in her eyes. Demonic energy swayed around me and my eyes had turned red. I didn't have much time left.

“Are you ready?”

Jin Sahyuk nodded at my request. I endured the piercing pain and bitterly smiled.

“I’m sorry. I would explain more, but I don’t have time.”

The final truth... that this world was nothing more than a novel written by a certain man. That would be buried with me. I only found out after looking through Kim Hajin’s memories.

“It’s fine.” Jin Sahyuk got up with an expressionless face.

“Thanks.”

It had been far too long. It felt frustrating to find out that the four, five hundred years I suffered hadn’t even been mentioned in the damn novel. That didn’t matter anymore. I no longer cared.

“I just want to rest.”

After all, death would relieve me of everything.

* * *

Chwaaaaaa!

Yi Yeonjun swung his tentacles of magic power. They melted the ground and evaporated into the air.

I used every single gift and creation against him: [Extraction], [Complete Understanding of Spirit Power], the [Random Consolidation System], [Desert Eagle], and more. I always preferred quantity over quality.

Even so, I couldn’t penetrate his defense. The Desert Eagle rusted away, my armor broke, and aether shattered. All because the temperature fluctuated between scorching hot and freezing cold.

“You have fascinating abilities.”

Yi Yeonjun nonchalantly muttered amidst the piercing cold. He didn’t mean it as a compliment, but a cynical expression of contempt.

“Yours is even more fascinating.” My breath froze as I exhaled.

“...”

Yi Yeonjun twisted his lips.

“Huu...”

I barely kept my head above the water thanks to the Orb of Regeneration. I couldn’t win and purposely chose methods that couldn’t defeat him.

My chances would’ve been better if I attacked from a distance. I might’ve killed him before he even reacted. I had planned that until 3 hours ago. In the end, I chose to face him head-on.

“I’m curious about something.”

I managed to open my mouth despite my half-frozen lips. Sadly, Yi Yeonjun ignored me and shot his magic power again. The hot beam of magic power pierced my shoulder.

I used my gift, [Constraints and Amplifications], to suppress the pain.

“I looked into your past.”

Yi Yeonjun finally showed a reaction and glared at me full of hostility.

“What you did to bring Yi Byul into the Chameleon Troupe, what you did to her parents to incite their fear, and how you turned her life into a living hell when she could’ve lived happily.”

I listed everything that I witnessed in the past, but not for Yi Yeonjun. I had no intentions of persuading him. This world no longer existed only as a novel. The cliché of persuading a villain didn't appeal to me. After all, humans didn't change so easily.

"The reason Yi Byul's parents wanted to kill her. I saw it all."

I spoke for the person I believed was watching. I couldn't sense her and it would be a real bummer if she didn't come, but I believed in my luck.

"You must've enjoyed it."

Yi Yeonjun smirked at my words and I frowned. "Don't you feel guilty?"

"Of course not, Byul would have lived among trash forever if not for me."

Yi Yeonjun confidently replied and I scoffed in disbelief.

"Why did you do it?"

"I wanted to own her."

His voice sunk and he sounded stiff like a wooden block.

"People become easier to own when they break. That's all."

"..."

He acted like the perfect example of a two-dimensional villain I once read about in a writing guide. A character who couldn't change no matter what. Someone created for the sole purpose of being a villain.

"It's like you're a character in a novel."

I forced a smile at him. He shrugged and spoke.

"Now it's my turn. Why are you with Byul? What do you—"

“I love her,” I sincerely and confidently declared.

“Love?” Yi Yeonjun clenched his teeth.

“Yeah, you know what that is, right? Ah, maybe someone like you can't understand.”

I could hear his teeth grinding and our conversation ended there. Yi Yeonjun's magic power grew much more violent than before.

Chwaaa!

His magic power turned into a bundle of tentacles. I didn't dare to count how many as the grotesque strands rose into the sky and sunk to the ground before flying towards me.

Kwaaaa...

Countless tentacles blocked my view. I couldn't stop them and would probably die. I could still resurrect with my unique skill though.

Then I realized my luck had activated once again.

[Coincidentally, someone has heard and understood your true feelings.]
[Narrow Escape From Death (8/9) – Special stat, Accumulation of Luck, has partly unlocked!]

The flashing alerts informed me.

Chapter 338

The Stories of Characters (3)

Reality Manipulation allowed its user to interfere with the material world. Jin Sahyuk knew she could kill Bell with her authority. She just had to manipulate his body's material. He simply became a container for Baal and already lost his humanity. It wouldn't be too difficult to transform his body in this state.

“...”

However, Jin Sahyuk hesitated as she recalled old memories. She reincarnated into a boring world called Earth after her end in Akatrina. Her biological parents abandoned her before she could even memorize their faces. She went through the painful process of learning to walk and speak again at an orphanage.

Bell came to see her for the first time when she turned three and finally learned Earth's language.

“Oi.”

She called out to him and he slyly smiled like usual despite his tremendous pain.

“What? Got something to say?”

She silently stared at him. They had spent 25 years together. Perhaps 25 years meant nothing to someone like Bell, but that amounted to most of her life.

“I do.”

Bell became her teacher and helped awaken her authority. He acted like a male nanny and watched over her. He endured her temper and selfishness without much complaint. Jin Sahyuk felt the need to say something she had never said before. Even if everything he did turned out to be an act for this moment.

“Thank you.”

“...”

Bell’s expression stiffened, but he soon playfully smiled again. He proudly looked at her.

“No, I’m the one who should be thanking you.”

Bell’s words served as the signal. Jin Sahyuk nodded and gathered her magic power. Now, she would finally grant Bell’s wish.

Guooooo...

Jin Sahyuk’s authority to dismantle reality gathered like a whirlwind. She swung her hand towards Bell like a spear.

Chwaak!

Her hand penetrated Bell’s chest. It pierced through his skin, broke his ribs, and reached his beating heart.

Jin Sahyuk looked into his eyes.

“...”

Bell met her gaze and waited for his end. She closed her eyes and inhaled. One, two, three. She counted in her head and opened her eyes again. Her entire body surged with magic power as she poured everything into one final move. Bell smiled at her for the last time.

“Please.”

Jin Sahyuk nodded. She had already made her decision and released her magic power into Bell without hesitation.

Guooooo...

Her authority enveloped him. The magic power tore apart his veins and dove deeper into his body. Soon, she reached the authority of Bell's magic power physique etched in his heart.

Jin Sahyuk poured all her magic power into Bell's heart to destroy it.

“...”

An unimaginable pain struck Bell, but he didn't scream or squirm. He only placed his hand on Jin Sahyuk's shoulder and remained calm throughout the process. He looked at her like a proud father.

Chwaaaaaa!

The magic power quickened and Bell's human shell fell apart. Patches of his skin turned to dust. His bones, muscles, nerves, and organs all faded as well.

“Goodbye.”

Jin Sahyuk said her last farewell. Bell didn't reply, but he looked like the happiest man ever. She wished for him to rest in peace and only remember the happiest memories.

However...

A tremendous amount of magic power exploded from where Bell disappeared. Kwaaaaaa! It immediately spread out of the mansion and formed a dome-shaped barrier.

The barrier surrounded not only Jin Sahyuk and Shin Jonghak, but the entire Leores plaza. Even so, Jin Sahyuk remained calm since she knew the owner of this magic power.

Baal.

— Haaa...

The strongest of the evil gods and the rank 1 devil. He finally broke free from his container and descended.

— I've waited for far too long.

Baal and Bell looked almost identical except for the horn on his forehead and his crimson eyes.

— So you're the one who granted my friend's wish.

His voice resounded unlike any human voice. Baal smiled at Jin Sahyuk. The evil god's presence felt overwhelming, but Jin Sahyuk stepped forward without being intimidated.

"It's your turn to keep your promise."

— Promise.

"That's right. Did you not hear about the promise?"

— Of course, I did.

Baal shook his head. Then he formed a rock and handed it to Jin Sahyuk.

— Take it. This stone will transport you to another dimension. A dimensional portal will appear once you pour your magic power into it. After all, your power is special."

"..."

Jin Sahyuk looked at the rock suspiciously, but it appeared authentic. According to Bell, Baal always kept his promises.

"By the way, what did you mean by friend? You considered Bell your friend?"

Jin Sahyuk asked as she slid the rock into her pocket.

— Yes, 693 years is a long time even for me. He's been with me all these years. I reckon that qualifies him as my friend.

“Then I assume you're sad?”

Jin Sahyuk sarcastically asked. The word friend bothered her. What kind of person would enslave his friend for 693 years?

— He served his uses as a friend, but that's okay. It's been long enough. He can go now. The one who truly wants to be with me is here.

Baal smiled and looked into the distance. His gaze traveled past the wall that Chae Nayun and Jin Sahyuk destroyed upon entering. She widened her eyes and looked in the same direction.

“...”

Yi Yeonjun slowly appeared from the dark. She noticed one of his arms had been torn off from a recent battle.

“What are you doing here? And where'd you lose your arm?”

Jin Sahyuk mockingly asked and Yi Yeonjun glared at her.

“I've been betrayed.”

“Huh?”

Jin Sahyuk couldn't help but frown at his random answer.

* * *

[England – Evandel's Domain]

— Valac's army is causing an uproar across Europe. Germany has decided to retaliate while Italy has chosen to respond more realistically.

— Next up is Spain. Astaroth's army has appeared outside the barrier.

— We have breaking news. Djinns are currently invading by sea. All citizens near the coast must evacuate.

Valac and the other hostile devils rampaged across the world. Ah Hae-In watched the news on her smartwatch when she heard the sound of a belt tightening around a waist and turned to the side.

"All done. I'm finished."

Evandel announced and clenched her fists.

Ah Hae-In carefully scanned the girl. The hat from Kim Hajin, the robe that improved its wearer's physical and elemental resistances, and her belt with defensive magic against enemy attacks. Everything looked perfect.

"I see you're all dressed up. Are you sure you can do it?" Ah Hae-In carefully asked.

Evandel's talent had fully bloomed, but she would always be a child who needed protection.

"Yeah! I can do it!"

Evandel confidently nodded despite her teacher's worries. She endured a long period of loneliness to build her domain for one reason. Evandel wanted to protect Rachel, Hajin, her friends, as well as all the good people and animals around the world.

"I see."

Ah Hae-In proudly nodded. "Then let's get ready."

"Okay!"

Evandel shouted and they both summoned their spirit beasts. The pair stared at the demonic monsters emerging from the horizon.

Kim Hajin and the others hadn't returned from the demon realm gate yet, so they would have to win without those heroes.

“Go.” Ah Hae-In muttered and the cardinal beast, azure dragon, appeared.

Grrrrr...

The azure dragon revealed his gigantic figure and placed Ah Hae-In on his head. Meanwhile, Evandel sat on a much smaller unicorn.

— Look, over there! It's the azure dragon!

— There's also a unicorn!

— W-Wow!

Reporters, drones, camera crews, heroes, and citizens who had all been waiting near Evandel's domain focused on the pair.

“Let's gooooo!” Evandel shouted at the center of this hopeful audience's attention. Her cute voice sounded full of determination.

Rumble!

Evandel's spirit beasts charged towards the villains on the other side of the ocean. All their footsteps merged into a giant roar that shook the earth.

* * *

[Demon Realm Gate – Republic of Leores After Baal's Descent]

“...!”

I opened my eyes and felt something soft against my back. The ceiling looked unfamiliar.

Gulp—

I swallowed hard and began thinking. I knew with certainty that I hadn't revived. Boss must've saved me and defeated Yi Yeonjun.

"You up?"

"Uaak!"

I turned towards the voice in surprise. My heart almost burst, but I sighed in relief. Jain sat next to the bed in her original appearance that I hadn't seen in a while.

"Yes, I'm awake. Long time no see, Jain."

"Yeah, it's been a while. I missed you. How are you feeling?"

"Fine. More importantly, where's Boss?"

She bitterly smiled and drew the curtain. Then she pointed outside the window. I became speechless because the scene looked like hell.

"What is that?"

A huge barrier surrounded Leores plaza where the transnational peace conference should've taken place. A dark storm raged and gargoyles roamed the sky with other creatures.

"It's a mess. I managed to escape with you, but they're all stuck in there. Kim Suho, Chae Nayun, Yun Seung-Ah, and Boss..."

"Has Baal descended?"

"Yeah." Jain casually nodded.

"It happened much quicker than we all expected. Bell's dead and Baal descended."

"..."

"Oh, and I heard about Yeonjun. I didn't know. Thanks for bringing me to my senses. He almost tricked me too.”

I stared at Jain in a daze before turning back to Baal’s barrier.

“Is Boss in there?”

“Yeah, she’s probably waiting for you.”

Then I looked at the corner of the room where all my equipment lay: aether, the Black Lotus Uniform, Temujin’s Bow, and the pinnacle grade [Ancient Hero Leoricus’ Exorcism Bow].

“I fixed all of them with the regeneration orb or whatever it’s called.”

“Thanks.”

I got up from the bed and tried to walk towards my gear.

“Sure. By the way, you have a quite nice body Hajin.”

Jain said something weird and I finally realized why something felt off. I had no clothes on.

“Ah...”

Thankfully, aether noticed my dilemma and flew towards me. It transformed into a piece of cloth and covered my most important parts.

“Cough. Kmmm.”

I awkwardly coughed and prepared to gear up. First, I wore my Black Lotus Uniform and placed the Desert Eagle into its holster. Finally, I turned to the two bows.

[Temujin’s Bow Blessed by Horus] [Ancient Hero Leoricus’ Exorcism Bow]

I hadn’t synthesized them yet.

“Synthesis.”

Now seemed like a good time.

[You have activated Lv.10 Synthesis.] [Fusing a pinnacle grade item with another pinnacle grade item...] [The success rate is extremely low...]

This would be like combining the two rarest items in a game. Therefore, the extremely low success rate didn't surprise me. My luck always overcame the impossible.

[Your luck has activated!] [A tremendous luck has increased the success rate!] [Young Dwarf's Dexterity has also activated!]

Golden confetti covered the system. As a result...

[Your skill has successfully synthesized the Black Lotus Bow from Temujin's Bow Blessed By Horus and Ancient Hero Leoricus' Exorcism Bow!] [You have created a world-class weapon with Young Dwarf's Dexterity. You have earned SP!]

The pair of bows clung to each other and transformed into an even more powerful artifact. Its name simply became the Black Lotus Bow. This one-of-a-kind artifact could only be made thanks to all my skills and gifts.

“...”

I scrutinized the bow's information.

“Wow. What's that? It looks good.” Jain exclaimed in admiration before I finished reading. I nodded with a faint smile.

“You're right. It is good.”

“Then, are you ready to go?”

I took a deep breath and nodded.

“Yeah.”

This could be the last battle. I no longer had any reason to conserve SP, stigma’s magic power, the god-slaying bullet, or anything else. I vowed to use everything.

“Let’s go and end this.”

Chapter 339

The Stories of Characters (4)

I walked to Baal's barrier with Jain. The surrounding area could only be described as chaos. The transnational peace conference's joyful atmosphere completely disappeared and key buildings like the republic president's residence had been swallowed up as well.

"It's only been a day since this barrier formed, but it consumed almost half the capital. Do you have any plans on how to deal with it?"

I shook my head at Jain's question. I didn't know anything about this setting since I never described Baal or his abilities in my novel.

"Then what are you going to do?"

"I'm not sure."

I checked my amount of SP and DP. I currently had 4030 SP and a tremendous amount of DP.

"Jain, do you know if this world has demon merchants?"

"Hm? Oh, I heard they're living around the outskirts of this continent. They might be on their way here considering what's going on. Why? Do you have extra DP to spend?"

"I do. I have almost a million."

Litrain became a world-renowned knight called the Knight of Brilliance thanks to my sponsorship. She earned me close to a million DP.

"How?" Jain's eyes widened.

“There’s something called a lucky bonus. I get an extra 20 DP every time I earn 100 DP. Anyways, that’s not important right now.”

I looked at the dome-shaped barrier piercing the sky and took out the [Mystic Key].

“First, let’s go inside.”

“Mmm... Are you sure that key will work? After all, Baal made this barrier.”

I couldn’t blame her considering how tiny and insignificant this key looked.

“It should be able to partly break the barrier after I strengthen it.”

Several footsteps rang out from our right. Jain and I slowly turned and saw Arunheim’s knights rushing towards us.

“Who are they?”

Jain shrugged and their leader stepped forward.

“Can you really break through this barrier?”

The voice belonged to a woman and she took off her helmet. I immediately recognized her as Airun, the knight commander who ordered me to escort Harin.

She seemed to be on the verge of crying. No, I could see traces of tears around her eyes. She must’ve felt guilty because she couldn’t protect her lord.

“Yes, it should be possible.”

I took off my robe as I replied. Her eyebrows rose in shock when she saw my face.

“You are...”

“Let’s talk about that after we break through this barrier.”

I cut her off before she could finish. Then I cloaked the [Mystic Key] with aether and it grew slightly bigger.

“Can that really open the barrier?” Airun’s voice anxiously trembled.

“Yes.”

“Then please hurry. Our prince is waiting for us inside.”

Airun earnestly pleaded. I could feel her sincerity in wanting to protect Arunheim’s prince.

“Our prince...”

Her trembling hands touched the barrier. However, it instantly pushed her back.

“Got it.”

I added the [Random Consolidation System] and [Constraints and Amplifications] to the key. Then I shoved it into the barrier.

Tzzzt!

Sparks crackled when the two magic powers clashed. I infused stigma’s magic power into the key.

Kwaaaaa...

The barrier and the ground rumbled. A crack appeared around the key and the knights swallowed their saliva as I poured half of my remaining stigma.

Clang—

A sharp sound rang out and one side of the barrier crumbled.

“I-It opened!” Airun shouted ecstatically. She burst into tears with the other knights and they expressed their gratitude.

Honestly, their overreactions surprised me.

* * *

[United States of America – Leraje’s Devil Castle]

Leraje lounged around in her new home as she waited for her game. Thanks to her patience, America remained far more peaceful than Europe.

However, Leol’s employees felt more pressure than ever. They frequently kept themselves going by taking drugs and potions. Seven of them collapsed from stress, but they continued working without any rest. All for the one customer waiting for their work.

“Lord Leraje, the game is almost complete.”

Leol’s CEO, Varan, bowed before Leraje in a dark room. She looked down at him with bored eyes before skillfully typing on a keyboard.

— That’s good to hear. What type of game is it?

Varan glanced at the reply that Leraje typed.

“It’s a combination of training, battling, strategy, adventure, and travel. This game will surely be the greatest ever created.”

The countless hours his employees put in and the demons’ encouragement led to the final stage of development. Naturally, Varan had mixed feelings about it. He worried that Leraje might not like it, yet felt excited about what he believed would be this century’s greatest game.

— I see, but would a human be able to defeat me?

“How could a mere human accomplish such a feat.”

— I don't like imbalanced games.

The faces of the demons around the room turned sharp.

"I-It won't be." Varan quickly slammed his head on the ground.

"The game will have a raid system."

— Explain.

"No human is capable of defeating Lord Leraje in a one-on-one confrontation. I have personally seen the lord's overwhelming control, which has surpassed human capabilities. In our game, a level 1 expert may defeat a level 50 player depending on their level of control, so—"

— So humans will work together to defeat me. A true test of skill. I like that. I hate games that depend on luck.

"Y-Yes, of course."

The demons' expressions softened and Varan sighed in relief.

— But...

Varan almost fainted when he heard that word.

— You are wrong.

"Ah..."

Varan saw his life flash before his eyes and he became certain of his death. Wrong. He no longer had a way out after Leraje muttered such a word.

"L-Lord, please spare my life—"

— One human has defeated me.

“Pardon?”

Varan’s jaw dropped. Leraje nimbly moved her fingers and opened her record in a game called [Gladiator of the Century]. To Varan’s surprise, Leraje had several consecutive losses.

— I assume you can see this.

Varan’s head turned blank. He couldn’t believe someone could defeat this devil. Leraje became even stronger inside virtual reality because many experts on Earth like Heynckes and Chae Joochul didn’t know how to play games.

— His ID is Extra7.

Leraje pulled up Extra7’s player info.

— Find him for me.

Even the demons seemed shocked at their lord’s defeat.

— I witnessed unimaginable movements and game sense. I felt angry at my consecutive losses at the time, but I have much to learn from him now that I think about it.

The room became silent as Leraje explained. A devil admitted that she could learn from a human? This shocked Varan beyond belief.

— I would like to defeat him with my own hands now that I am more experienced.

Leraje faintly smiled as she typed her final sentence. One would be lucky to see her smile once in a hundred years. The demons in the room all felt their heart shake.

* * *

[Baal’s Barrier – Destroyed Mansion]

Baal left Shin Jonghak and Jin Sahyuk behind. Jin Sahyuk said Baal went to construct his castle and now would be their best chance to stop him, but Shin Jonghak sat in the corner without moving an inch.

He simply froze there without so much as a heartbeat. He seemed to have lost himself after the image of his respected grandfather shattered.

“Yo, idiot. Are you just going to sit there?”

Jin Sahyuk called him again. However, Shin Jonghak didn’t react in the slightest.

“Tsk, I’ve never seen anyone more pathetic,” Jin Sahyuk openly sneered.

“We found Lady Seraine! She’s safe inside the underground bunker!”

An urgent voice rang from outside the window. Shin Jonghak closed his eyes and just wanted to ignore everything.

“Open your eyes, fool.”

“Ak!” Jin Sahyuk stabbed his eyes with her fingers. He shot his eyes open and glared at her.

“You piece of... Haa.”

The usual Shin Jonghak would have cursed and swung his spear, but he only sighed and helplessly stumbled now.

“You don’t understand.”

He muttered as he reminisced. He only wanted to become a hero because of his grandfather. He always felt proud of himself because he descended from that man lauded as the greatest hero of all time.

“You don’t understand what I lived for. What I wished for.”

His faith had been shattered by the cold truth that Shin Myungchul invited Baal to this world.

Kwak!

Jin Sahyuk kicked his shoulder and he fell back without a sound. She clicked her tongue and spoke in frustration.

“He was the most heroic person among the fools who called themselves a hero.”

“...?”

“Your grandfather, I’ve seen him before while traveling with Bell.”

“What?”

Shin Jonghak’s expression stiffened because she had never mentioned it until now. Jin Sahyuk looked out the window and continued.

“Shin Myungchul risked his life to correct his mistake. That means he possesses the quality of a hero.”

Ssss— A faint vibration shook the barrier. Jin Sahyuk’s eyebrows went up when she saw it. She continued as she observed the barrier.

“So get up and fight. Didn’t Bell tell you? Shin Myungchul left something for you and Bell never lies.”

Ssssss. The vibration grew stronger and a small crack appeared in Baal’s barrier. Someone tried to break in and Jin Sahyuk quickly understood who.

“If you just want to sit there...”

She smirked and looked down at him.

“Go ahead and disgrace your grandfather’s name all you want. A man bigger than you has just arrived. Someone like you isn’t needed.”

“What?”

Shin Jonghak’s face distorted as Jin Sahyuk smiled and stared out the window. He slowly stood up after her provocation. Then he witnessed it himself. Crack— A crack appeared on Baal’s barrier.

“...”

His shoulders tensed. They continued observing the crack as Jin Sahyuk muttered.

“Look, he survives like a cockroach and always comes crawling back.”

Boom! An earth-shattering sound rang out and a part of the barrier crumbled. A certain man emerged from the rubble.

“People like that are surprisingly cool.”

Kim Hajin appeared with an army of knights. Even Shin Jonghak had to admit his entrance looked cool.

“Bullshit.”

Shin Jonghak snorted and felt an uncomfortable feeling in his chest. He knew it came from his distaste for Kim Hajin. It burned away all his despair and helplessness.

“He doesn’t look good no matter what he does.”

Shin Jonghak inwardly laughed and recognized his jealousy. Right, he felt jealous. He finally admitted to this feeling after all these years. After all, Bell said Shin Myungchul acted the same. He finally dropped his high and mighty attitude after learning about all his grandfather’s flaws.

“Why?” Jin Sahyuk asked with a mischievous smile.

“Can’t you tell from his average-looking face?” Shin Jonghak sneered. He never admitted to this jealousy that drove him to his current level.

“He doesn’t look as good as me.”

Finally, he picked up his Conqueror Spear again after wholeheartedly acknowledging everything.

Chapter 340

The Stories of Characters (5)

[Republic of Leores – Underground Bunker]

Meanwhile, Kim Suho headed to the capital's underground bunker while evacuating citizens. The bunker, which Yoo Yeonha designed, could accommodate most of them.

“Thank you, thank you...”

The citizens' tearfully expressed their gratitude. He smiled at them and headed to Yoo Yeonha's office. The nameplate on the door read, [Bunker Operations Planning Office]. Yoo Yeonha spoke on a radio inside.

“Did you just say someone breached the barrier's right side?”

This news surprised Kim Suho as well. Even he couldn't break Baal's barrier with his gift.

“Mmm... Got it. Ah, we're protecting Miss Seraine, so don't worry. Keep up the good work.”

Yoo Yeonha glanced at Kim Suho and turned off the radio.

“The barrier was breached?” Kim Suho spoke first.

“Yeah.” Yoo Yeonha had a rough idea of who destroyed it. Naturally, she sighed in relief.

I hadn't heard from him in a while and wondered if something bad happened. I guess he's alive and well.

“Who—”

KOOONG! The door swung open before Kim Suho could finish. They turned to the entrance and saw Aileen. She approached with an excited expression and shouted, "Black Lotus is here!"

Kim Suho and Yoo Yeonha responded quite differently.

"What?"

"..."

Kim Suho's nostrils flared in surprise while Yoo Yeonha carefully examined their reactions. Aileen eagerly nodded and continued.

"Yes! Oh, and also Shin Jonghak."

Yoo Yeonha could no longer feign indifference. She asked while trying to conceal her interest.

"Jonghak is here?"

"Yeah, I just got a call from Yun Seung-Ah. He's with Jin Sahyuk or whatever her name was."

Jin Sahyuk's name made Yoo Yeonha feel uneasy and she silently turned to Kim Suho. Likewise, he became stiff as a dried fish.

"Kim Suho?"

Yoo Yeonha called him and he sighed.

"Uh... What were they doing together? Jin Sahyuk and Shin Jonghak?"

"How should I know? Seung-Ah said they went to the devil's castle."

Baal built a fortress at the center of his barrier. Currently, he gathered his strength inside to descend on Earth.

"Shouldn't we head there as well?"

“Yeah, we only have 2 days left. Let’s hurry.” Kim Suho nodded at Aileen’s question.

“Two days? How do you know?”

“The book said this world would be destroyed 3 days after Baal’s descent.”

However, a day had already passed. They only had 2 days left to somehow stop Baal from destroying this world and Earth.

“Let’s hurry for now.”

Kim Suho took out a potion and gulped it down. It might not be enough to relieve all his fatigue and injuries, but he couldn’t spare any time.

“Okay, let’s find Black Lotus and Jin Sahyuk first.”

Aileen smirked and grabbed Kim Suho’s hand. Then she immediately activated her skill, [Teleport]. Everything seemed to shake and Kim Suho closed his eyes. He opened them a moment later and saw the devil’s castle in the distance.

“Kim Suho?”

A disapproving voice rang out from somewhere. Aileen and Kim Suho turned around only to find the two people they just mentioned.

“Aileen, your teleport is shockingly accurate.”

“Y-Yeah?”

Kim Suho exclaimed in amazement, but Aileen only blinked and scratched her neck. All this took her by surprise as well.

“Did you two follow us?”

Jin Sahyuk and Shin Jonghak scowled at them from about 10 steps away.

“Huh? No, we wouldn’t say we were...”

Kim Suho panicked for no reason. Did those two get closer? He recalled that they didn’t get along.

“Hmm... Whatever, you should get ready too.”

Jin Sahyuk calmly spoke despite Kim Suho’s strange behavior.

“Get ready for what?” Aileen asked.

Jin Sahyuk scoffed at the silly question and pointed to the devil’s castle. It used to be the president’s residence, but had now turned into Baal’s castle. Demonic energy surrounded it and its appearance became grotesque.

“We need to bring that castle down.”

“Huh? You?” Kim Suho’s eyes widened until they almost bulged out. The Jin Sahyuk he knew wouldn’t act like this. Not too long ago, she declared that she would destroy Earth if she couldn’t return to Akatrina.

“No.”

Jin Sahyuk shook her head with a cold smile. Kim Suho thought he made a momentary mistake, but her next remark shocked him even more.

“We’re doing this together.”

* * *

[Eastern Pandemonium]

Vassago built his colosseum in a city once called Harbin. This land shared its border with Russia and boasted a view of Korea to the south.

The colosseum used a design from the demon realm and its magnificent size could be seen from both Korea and Russia. It became a symbol of terror for many. Today, a hero arrived at the colosseum of her own will.

“It’s big.”

Master rank hero, Jin Seyeon the Divine Archer, came to challenge Vassago. She looked around the colosseum in a daze.

“Only those who lack skills care about appearances.”

A heavy voice rang out from behind and she immediately turned around.

“It’s been a while, archer.”

As expected, Cheok Jungyeong also came. He broke into a big grin and Jin Seyeon also felt glad to see him for some reason. She softly smiled in return.

“I didn’t know we were close enough to share such a greeting.”

“Who cares? We can get to know each other from now on.”

Cheok Jungyeong shrugged and Jin Seyeon nodded in agreement. She had no idea what would happen, but felt confident Cheok Jungyeong wouldn’t betray her.

“Oh, right. You must know since you’re a master rank hero. Is it true Orden is still alive?”

Koong— Koong— Koong— Cheok Jungyeong walked barefoot and stood next to her. Their height difference seemed to be at least 40 centimeters. Jin Seyeon had to tilt her head so much her neck hurt.

“Well, that would mean we’re quite close to Orden right now if he’s still alive.”

Jin Seyeon answered without much thought. One could reach Vladivostok after a long walk east of the colosseum. Rumors about Orden originated from there. Cheok Jungyeong raised his eyebrows, somewhat dissatisfied by her answer.

“That’s not what I asked. I want to know if he’s still alive.”

“The residents of Vladivostok seem to think so. They worship Orden.”

“Worship?”

“Yes. According to them, it’s all thanks to Orden that they can live in peace. Vladivostok has long been abandoned, but they don’t have to worry about monster invasions.”

“Huh... So it’s true Orden’s been hunting monsters by himself?”

“I’m not sure. It could be someone else. Maybe a hidden expert like Black Lotus.”

Jin Seyeon shrugged and Cheok Jungyeong couldn’t help but chuckle.

“Pft, alright. Whatever, I didn’t come here to chat.”

“I agree.”

They stood next to each other and stared at the arena. Many others also observed from a distance, including the Chameleon Troupe members who secretly followed Cheok Jungyeong. Vast Expense openly exuded his presence, so Cheok Jungyeong stepped into the ring and took a deep breath. Then he yelled at the top of his lungs.

“Oi, old man!”

His voice shook the surroundings as he enthusiastically called out Vast Expense.

“Aren’t you going to come out!”

His cry echoed through the colosseum, but Vast Expense didn’t respond and only watched from afar.

“Well, it’s pretty obvious what that greedy old man wants.”

Cheok Jungyeong muttered in discontent. Vassago declared that he would reward the victor with any wish. Vast Expense probably wanted to ask for immortality.

“Never mind those cowards. Let’s go first.” Cheok Jungyeong tapped Jin Seyeon’s shoulder. She seemed hesitant and looked around. However, she couldn’t detect Black Lotus’ presence anywhere.

“...”

Did Cheok Jungyeong come alone? Perhaps Black Lotus also entered the demon realm gate? Jin Seyeon concealed her disappointment and began walking.

“I guess you aren’t called the Divine Archer for nothing. Bwahaha. Oh, by the way—”

Cheok Jungyeong beamed in satisfaction because of her boldness and pulled out a card. Jin Seyeon read the words on it, [Invitation Letter to the Love Room].

“What’s this?”

“A card that allows me to summon one of my friends. I know who you’re looking for, so let’s get along.”

“...”

He surprisingly had more tact than she thought. Jin Seyeon felt embarrassed he read her mind, but soon nodded with a smile.

“Good idea.”

As the saying went, the end justifies the means.

“Cool. Now, let’s go.”

“Yes.”

Jin Seyeon and Cheok Jungyeong walked into Vassago’s lair together.

* * *

[Republic of Leores]

Airun and her knights began fighting monsters as soon as they entered the barrier. They wielded their swords to find their prince. On the other hand, Jain and I left since I didn’t have any strength left to fight. I consumed most of stigma just to break the barrier.

— Boss, can you hear me?

I sent her a message, but she didn’t reply for a long time. Did something bad happen? Her voice flowed into my ears as I worried.

— I hear you, Hajin.

She sounded faint and frail as if she had been crying.

— Where are you?

— Sorry, I’d like to be alone for a while.

I never imagined Boss could sound so weak and pitiful. She refused to meet, so I could only sigh.

— Okay, rest well. Just for today because I’ll come by tomorrow.

— Thank you.

Boss whispered.

— Sure.

I ended our mental transmission. Boss seemed to be struggling, but only her safety mattered. We could fix everything and heal as long as she lived. I felt relieved when...

“Oh, you’re here!”

Someone grabbed me and I turned around to see Shimurin. She looked at Jain and me with a big grin.

“I see... You’re with a woman disguised as a man today.”

“Huh? Oh, haha.”

Shimurin immediately saw through Jain’s disguise and Jain stepped back in surprise.

“Why are you here, Shimurin?”

“Why do you think? I also have some questions for him.”

Shimurin pointed at the devil’s castle with a solemn expression.

“I believe he possesses essential knowledge for dimensional migration.”

“Ah...”

Once again, Shimurin’s instinct proved correct. Baal had confidently stated he could send Jin Sahyuk back to her native dimension.

— Hey, are you also inside the barrier?

Chae Nayun’s voice suddenly flowed into my ears through her [Infinite Communication]. Her voice sounded clear, which meant she wasn’t far.

“What...”

I widened my eyes and looked around. Then I finally realized the situation. Yun Seung-Ah, Chae Nayun, Kim Youngjin, Yohei, Kim Horak, Yi Youngjin, Airun, all the knights, and even civilians armed with shabby swords and sickles. Everyone fought against Baal's monsters.

“...”

I looked at Jain and Shimurin, who both mischievously smiled.

“We can spare some time.” Jain whispered to me.

— Okay, listen. We need your help since you're good at these types of battles. Their numbers are endless...

I heard Chae Nayun's nervous voice and stored my bow away.

“Well then.”

I pulled out the Desert Eagle with plenty of ammunition, including the basilisk bullets. Kiik— Kiik— I transformed it into a heavy machine gun with its muzzle pointed towards the sky. It had been a while since I used this form and each bullet would be as powerful as a bomb.

“We'll talk after taking care of this.”

— It's me who's shooting right now.

I messaged Chae Nayun before pulling the trigger.

Then I fired away.

Chapter 341

The Stories of the Characters (6)

[Republic of Leores]

“Whew...”

Chae Nayun heaved a sigh and the children surrounding her cried. They all stood on the remains of a crumbled building. A wooden plaque on the ground read, [Orphanage].

“Um...”

One of the children approached Chae Nayun with shaking legs and tried to speak.

Krrrr!

“Ah!”

However, she fell flat on the ground after a demonic beast growled.

“Don’t worry.”

Chae Nayun reassured them as she turned around. Demonic beasts that resembled a wolf, an octopus, and an 8-handed humanoid stared at her with killing intent.

“I’ll protect all of you.”

Chae Nayun formed a barrier around them with her magic power. She didn’t specialize in barriers, so it consumed even more of her magic power. Still, it would be better than one of them getting hurt.

— Krrrr!

The demonic wolf beast shot forward and Chae Nayun swung her sword at its head. She cleanly severed it in half.

— U-Uwoah!

— Y-You can do it!

The children cheered from inside the barrier when she cut down the beast. Hearing them gave her an energy boost, but more annoying monsters appeared.

— Kieeeeeek!

A loud screech descended from the sky and she looked up.

— Kieeek!

— Kieeek!

Dozens, no, hundreds of flying demonic beasts gathered.

“I’m not good at aerial battles.”

Chae Nayun had to infuse more magic power into her sword to increase its length. She didn’t find that difficult, but worried about the children. She could very well destroy the barrier and even kill them if she accidentally swung her blade in the wrong direction.

— We believe in you!

— Don’t die!

Their heartwarming encouragement seemed to provoke the demonic birds.

— Kieeek!

The birds loudly screeched and shot down.

“—!”

Chae Nayun gathered magic power in Balmung and swung in a huge arc. Balmung's blade spread out like a fan and obliterated everything in its path.

Something suddenly shot to the ground from a distance. It left behind a curved trail without a sound. She could only think of gunfire from a certain man.

Kwaaaaa!

A thunderous clap boomed after a brief silence. The sound of gunfire arrived after the bullets.

Kwaaaaa!

The bullets left behind trails that forked into multiple paths. They traveled faster than sound and the impact only rang out after they already pierced the demonic beasts.

“Whew.”

Chae Nayun stabbed Balmung into the ground and leaned against it. Demonic beasts still surrounded her, but her intuition told her this 24 hour battle would soon end.

Kwaaaaa!

The bullets decimated all the demonic beasts and seemed to have a mind of their own as they freely curved to strike countless targets.

Chae Nayun sighed in relief and knew her ally would never miss. She could finally rest now.

“Come here.”

She dismantled her barrier and gathered the children. They trembled in fear at the indiscriminate shooting, but soon realized that wasn't the case. Chae Nayun lay flat on the ground and collected her breath.

“Let's rest a bit.”

The children hugged each other and closed their eyes. Chae Nayun sat in the center and gently stroked their hair while reassuring them.

30 minutes later...

Whish— The endless barrage of bullets finally stopped. A gust of wind tickled Chae Nayun's shoulders and she gazed at the sky. It still looked dark because of Baal's barrier, but no demonic beast remained.

“It's over.”

Chae Nayun chuckled. She fought all day, but Kim Hajin ended it in just 30 minutes. She couldn't help but praise his gift.

— Is it over?

She messaged him for confirmation.

— Yeah, more or less.

He replied about a minute later.

Chae Nayun closed her eyes and grinned. She could hear the children breathing in her arms and felt a great sense of achievement. Protecting them had been hard, but worth it.

— Hey...

She sent another message as her heart rate slowed from the exhaustion.

— What's up?

— Thanks.

Kim Hajin didn't respond right away. A long silence passed before a few words came back.

— Don't say that.

Chae Nayun laughed at his words. She knew what he meant. Like a fool, he always saw himself as someone to be hated.

So she didn't say anything.

She looked at the children in her arms, recalled the people she saved during the day, and everyone who lost their lives. Chae Nayun felt like she finally understood now.

Chae Jinyoon would've become a devil and killed countless people if Kim Hajin didn't kill him. Her brother would've been forced to commit murder without salvation.

She understood all this, but didn't voice it. Instead, she changed the topic.

— Where are you going now?

— Isn't that obvious?

Chae Nayun nodded. The final villain behind all the devils on Earth, Baal. She clenched her teeth.

— That bastard Baal. He's the one responsible for the rift between us. Let's storm into his castle and beat him up.

“Yeah.”

“Huh? What?”

Chae Nayun's ears suddenly perked up. She heard a voice from far away, not a mental transmission or [Infinite Communication], but a real voice.

She quickly turned to the east and spotted a building in the distance. Her intuition roared that Kim Hajin was there. He wouldn't run away this time if she went. He couldn't.

"Pft." She grinned from ear to ear before turning back to the children.

"I'm going to sleep first before heading there. Go on ahead."

Kim Hajin didn't reply since she spoke aloud. She lay on the ground with a smile and looked at the sky.

"I'm thankful, but I can't thank you. I like you, but I can't like you. It's still like that for me."

Chae Nayun murmured to herself.

* * *

Jin Seyeon and Cheok Jungyeong arrived at the colosseum's waiting room. Vassago's servant personally guided them to a fancy table with luxurious chairs. Both of them took a seat.

"Oh?"

Jin Seyeon exclaimed in surprise. She had never experienced such comfortable chairs that hugged her like this.

"Lord Vassago is a renowned collector. Every item our guests see and use are masterpieces."

Jin Seyeon coughed in embarrassment, but Cheok Jungyeong only laughed disdainfully.

"Way to act high and mighty with such cheap furniture. The stuff we have in our hideout is thousands of times better."

"...!"

Cheok Jungyeong only meant to make a snarky remark, but the servant couldn't overlook it. His expression viciously contorted, his shoulders shook, and his stomach boiled with anger. He felt a strong urge to kill Cheok Jungyeong, but barely held himself back. The lord didn't like his challengers disappearing.

"Please refrain from such lies. This colosseum is under our lord's control, who may be watching at all times."

"I'm not lying, you hunchback weasel. Have you been to our hideout? Have you sat in our chairs or lay in our beds?"

The Chameleon Troupe's hideout only consisted of furniture handcrafted by Kim Hajin. Their furniture felt far better than the ones here.

"..."

The servant became speechless. Jin Seyeon spotted the fury in his cold expression and quickly covered Cheok Jungyeong's mouth.

"Ahem, thank you for guiding us."

Even so, the servant didn't stop glaring at Cheok Jungyeong. Of course, Cheok Jungyeong didn't shy away from battles, much less a staring contest. He proudly smiled at the servant and only thought about relieving his boredom by fighting.

— Let it go.

A voice rang out from the ceiling and startled them. The servant immediately retracted his anger and knelt.

"My apologies, Your Highness."

Cheok Jungyeong looked at the ceiling and the voice rang out again from the same place.

— What you said catches my attention. Every item in my possession is of the finest quality, but you say they're lacking?

Vassago wasn't a perverted collector like Baal, but a devil who specialized in discovering treasures. Cheok Jungyeong's words sounded interesting.

"I'm saying the stuff in our hideout is better."

Cheok Jungyeong confidently declared. The servant jumped in shock while Vassago remained silent. The Chameleon Troupe's furniture originated from dwarves, one of the rarest races with the best craftsmanship. Vassago's journey across many dimensions allowed him to obtain several dwarven items, but he only possessed weapons. Dwarves only crafted weapons, but not Kim Hajin.

"Rather than that, you sound more feminine than I expected."

Cheok Jungyeong changed the subject and grew curious about Vassago's gender. The silvery voice from the ceiling sounded like a woman.

— Devils don't have genders. Rather, it depends on the incarnation body. I am indeed a woman right now.

Vassago acted generously, but sounded discontent.

— I would love to see the furniture in your hideout if you leave this place alive.

"Kuhahaha. Great, I'll personally bring your head to our hideout and show you around."

— Good, I hope that confidence isn't just the natural arrogance of humans.

Vassago's voice cut off and the servant glared at Cheok Jungyeong one last time before leaving.

"Looks like our theory is correct," Jin Seyeon seriously muttered.

"What theory?"

“Devils are naturally more obsessed with things than humans. Think about it. Djinnns are humans influenced by devils to pursue their desires, so devils should be the incarnation of desire.”

“So what?”

Cheok Jungyeong asked with a frown. Jin Seyeon clenched her fists and looked at him. She sent him a mental transmission in case Vassago might be listening.

— It might be possible to defeat devils without fighting them. All types of tricks can be used.

* * *

[Baal's Devil Castle]

Kim Suho entered the first floor of Baal's castle. It only consisted of stairs despite the eerie atmosphere. They didn't encounter any traps or obstacles, so he observed Jin Sahyuk instead of worrying about enemies.

After about 20 minutes...

“Do you have a plan to kill Baal?”

Jin Sahyuk suddenly asked. Kim Suho flinched at the unexpected question before coughing and seriously replying.

“I'll cut him down. That's it for now.”

They only had two days left and not enough time to form a detailed plan. Kim Suho simply believed in himself and his sword, Misteltein.

“What about you? Do you have a plan?” Aileen asked from next to them. She floated in the air with Spirit Speech because she wanted to remain at eye level with them. Jin Sahyuk suddenly stopped, which caught all of their attention.

“You do? Then tell us.”

Aileen urged the silent Jin Sahyuk, who looked back and forth between them.

“I’m going to ask Black Lotus.”

Kim Suho, Aileen, and Shin Jonghak all became shocked. Shin Jonghak looked dissatisfied while Kim Suho and Aileen seemed curious more than anything else.

“You’re going to ask him? How?” Aileen asked.

“He’ll fire an arrow at the devil’s castle when I send the signal. If it’s him, he should be able to destroy the entire castle.”

“W-What? You think that’s possible? Even my teleportation didn’t work here. That’s why we’re running up, remember? Why are we even climbing if that’s possible? We can just wait for Black Lotus to destroy the castle and...”

“Quiet, I know he can. He’ll destroy the castle from the outside, but we have to take care of what’s inside.”

Jin Sahyuk remained serious despite Aileen’s sarcastic comments.

“...”

Kim Suho kept staring at her and couldn’t understand why Jin Sahyuk trusted Black Lotus so much. He couldn’t understand how Jin Sahyuk trusted anyone at all.

“Jin Sahyuk, what’s your relationship with Black Lotus?”

He asked a reasonable question.

“What?”

Surprisingly, Jin Sahyuk grew mad and muttered, “Kim Suho, you bastard. You've grown quite arrogant!"

However, she suddenly smirked.

"Actually, I have a relationship with Kim Hajin rather than Black Lotus."

"Huh?"

Kim Suho immediately became speechless. He wasn't sure what he just heard, but Jin Sahyuk said something even more provocative than before.

"Kim Hajin has complicated feelings for me. So much so that even I find it troubling."

She didn't completely lie since those feelings came from Kim Hajin's synchronization.

"..."

"..."

Her words impacted them more than she expected. Even Shin Jonghak and Aileen became speechless.

"That's all I'm saying. Is that so surprising?"

Jin Sahyuk chuckled to herself and continued climbing the stairs. Her steps felt more poised and elegant now.

Chapter 342

Final Banquet (1)

[Baal's Castle]

Kim Suho continued to climb the endless spiral staircase. He kept mulling over what Jin Sahyuk said 2 hours ago.

Kim Hajin has complicated feelings for me. So much so that even I find it troubling. You would all be shocked if you knew how Kim Hajin felt.

Kim Suho couldn't understand what she meant and called Shin Jonghak.

"Shin Jonghak, do you know anything about it?"

"About what?"

"What Jin Sahyuk said."

Shin Jonghak shook his head.

"No clue. I only followed her here, but I've seen that woman warmly staring at Kim Hajin before."

"What? Really?"

"Don't worry about it, Suho. I'm sure she's lying. Why would Fenrir like that crazy woman?"

Aileen interrupted them. Kim Suho thought the same, but Jin Sahyuk usually never joked. She considered herself royalty and joking didn't suit her dignity.

“Rather than that, I’m curious when we’ll reach the end of this staircase.”

Aileen unhappily crossed her arms. As she said, the group had been climbing for almost 3 hours without an end in sight.

“Oi! Black-haired girl!” Aileen called Jin Sahyuk, who stopped and turned around.

“Are you sure we’re going the right way?”

“Who knows?” Jin Sahyuk shrugged irresponsibly.

“What?” Aileen scowled, but Jin Sahyuk simply smirked.

“What other choice do we have? It’s not like we can just shout for Baal to come out. Let’s keep going. I’ll send a mental transmission to Black Lotus.”

“Mental transmission? To Black Lotus?”

“Yep.”

Jin Sahyuk nodded and sent a mental transmission to Kim Hajin. She sent it in a rather unique manner using Reality Manipulation.

— I’m in Baal’s castle with Kim Suho. You stay outside and don’t enter. Do as I say if you want to save the world.

Kim Hajin replied about 3 minutes later.

— Why?

He bluntly asked. Jin Sahyuk inwardly laughed at his cute reaction while Aileen’s loud voice rang out from behind.

“Come on! How long do we have to keep—”

“Oh, there it is.”

Jin Sahyuk interrupted her and pointed to a spot on the spiral staircase. They all turned to look.

“Huh? You’re right. It really is there, but why didn’t we see anything a moment ago.”

Aileen’s eyes widened at the huge gate that suddenly appeared.

“I’ll enter first.”

Shin Jonghak rushed forward when he saw the gate. He hopped up 3 steps at a time until he reached it. Jin Sahyuk smiled at his eagerness.

Soon, all of them reached the ogre-sized gate. Shin Jonghak stared at Jin Sahyuk. She simply nodded and he grabbed the knob on the right. Kim Suho grabbed the knob on the left and they pushed forward together.

Kiik—

The giant gate opened and a brilliant light shone from the other side. They could hear classical music and blinked at the dazzling light. All their thoughts froze at the unexpected scene before them.

“Where is this?” Aileen muttered as she scanned the place. It looked like a banquet hall with a fancy chandelier and a sumptuous feast. Well-dressed men and women danced to the tune of classical music.

“There he is.”

Jin Sahyuk spotted a certain man among the crowd while the others stood confused. Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak followed her gaze while Aileen became preoccupied with a plate of fancy chocolates.

“That’s Yi Yeonjun, the Chameleon Troupe’s former boss.”

The moment Jin Sahyuk mentioned this...

“What?” Aileen’s eyes shot open and she turned to Yi Yeonjun.

“That bastard... He’s really alive?”

Aileen also had an ill-fated relationship with him. He sat on a chair next to the balcony and looked down at them.

* * *

[Demon Realm Gate – Baal’s Barrier]

I stood in front of Baal’s castle with Jain and Shimurin. I used up most of my bullets to kill all the demonic beasts inside the barrier. Rachel, Yun Seung-Ah, and the others should arrive soon as well.

“Let’s go in.”

As I prepared to enter...

— I’m in Baal’s castle with Kim Suho. You stay outside and don’t enter. Do as I say if you want to save the world.

Jin Sahyuk’s mental transmission flowed into my ears and I paused.

“Hm? What’s up?”

Jain curiously tilted her head.

“Uh... Hold on. I just received a strange message.”

I sent Jin Sahyuk a reply.

— Why?

However, she didn’t answer. I waited for a few minutes and contemplated ignoring her, but the changed Jin Sahyuk wouldn’t lie to me.

“Let’s wait a bit more.”

I spread aether out like a mat and sat on the ground. Jain and Shimurin also sat next to me. Jain yawned while Shimurin took out a scroll.

“Is that the dimension scroll?”

I looked at it with keen interest and Shimurin nodded with a grin.

“This scroll can summon a portal connecting two dimensions. It’s still incomplete and unsafe. The portal isn’t big enough either. I still have a lot to fix. Why? Do you want to give it a go?”

“...”

I stared at the scroll and a brilliant idea flashed across my mind.

“Let me test something.”

I took out two pieces of paper.

“What’s that?” Shimurin tilted her head.

“They’re just pieces of paper for now.”

I activated settings intervention and added [Link], [Recording], and [Durability]. I also named the papers [Messenger].

[You have spent 103 SP to change the settings of objects.] [Your luck has activated.] [Item, Messenger, has increased in rank.] [Item, Messenger, has been strengthened.]

“Now it’s a messenger.”

“A what?” Shimurin raised her eyebrows and Jain also looked over with interest.

“A messenger. Write something on one paper and the same will appear on the other.”

I demonstrated Messenger's function and Shimurin nodded.

"So that's what it is. You want to send this to your world?"

"Exactly."

"Hmm."

Shimurin rubbed her chin in thought and continued after about 30 seconds.

"The paper will likely burn up while crossing over."

"That's fine. This paper is quite durable."

It should withstand being burnt since I added [Durability]. I even received a lucky bonus.

"You're that confident? This scroll might look tiny, but it's expensive enough to be a national treasure."

"Just do it. Who cares about money when the world is at risk?"

"Well, that's true."

Shimurin coughed and tore the scroll in half. The grand magician channeled her magic power and a fist-sized portal appeared in the air.

"Alright, Kim Hajin. It's your turn now."

"Got it."

I sent stigma's magic power into the portal and set the coordinates to Evandel's cabin.

"Done. I'm going to give it a go now."

I wrote a message on the paper, folded it into a paper airplane, and threw it into the portal. The paper airplane practically flew like a real one thanks to my Master Sharpshooter gift.

“Wow, how cool. So we just have to wait now?”

Jain muttered, but Shimurin and I only stared at the remaining piece of paper.

Then...

— We found Yi Yeonjun in a banquet hall that appears to be the first stage. You wait outside and destroy Baal’s castle with an arrow when I give the signal. I know you can do it.

Jin Sahyuk belatedly replied.

“What’s she talking about?”

I complained out loud. Shimurin and Jain curiously looked at me as I sent her a reply.

— Are you crazy? How am I supposed to destroy Baal’s castle?

— You can do it.

— No way.

Even Baal’s barrier could only be partially destroyed with the [Mystic Key].

Wait... the [Mystic Key]?

— You should be able to do it. Immediately shoot and destroy the castle at my signal.

Jin Sahyuk ignored me and firmly commanded.

Evandel returned to her domain with Ah Hae-In.

“TV, TV...”

She happily hummed as she turned on the cabin's TV.

— Valac's army has retreated from Europe.

A timely report of the day's news came out.

— Duchess Ah Hae-In and her disciple led humanity to their first victory.

They successfully stopped Valac's army from advancing. Evandel and her unicorn commanded 5000 spirit beasts as though they shared one mind while Ah Hae-In fully utilized the cardinal guardians to force Valac's retreat.

— The streets of Europe are filled with people cheering for the two magicians.

“Oooh, look Hayang. We did good!”

Evandel watched the news with sparkling eyes. She felt excited and proud about her achievements being broadcasted around the world.

— We captured footage of a black wolf defeating Valac's adjutant. Let's take a look.

“Fenrir, Fenrir! Come over here! They're praising you on TV!”

Evandel excitedly hugged Fenrir. The wolf maintained an indifferent act while sneaking glances at himself on TV. Kwaaaaaaa! A house-sized wolf stormed forward and crushed several demons.

“So cool!”

— Krrr.

Fenrir shrugged at Evandel's cheering.

“Hahaha.”

Ah Hae-In chuckled and left Evandel to enjoy her time with the spirit beasts. She turned on her smartwatch, which she had switched off during the war. Messages from the association stormed her inbox.

[Demon Realm Gate – Kim Suho, Aileen, Yun Seung-Ah, Shin Jonghak, Rachel, Yoo Yeonha, and others...] [Valac – Ah Hae-In] [Leraje – Game to be released next Monday] [Astaroth – Leore, Kim Hwang, Yi Heejoon, and 13 other 8 star magicians] [Vassago's Colosseum – Jin Seyeon, Vast Expanse, and others...]

This report contained the activities of various heroes. Ah Hae-In spotted Rachel's name on the list and looked at Evandel clapping like a seal while watching the news.

“Cute...”

A faint smile emerged on Ah Hae-In's face. She worried when Kim Hajin and Rachel left, but that seemed unnecessary now. Tirring! She received another message as she watched Evandel playing.

[Duchess Ah Hae-In, when will you introduce your disciple to the world? Everyone is curious. Earth needs an icon of hope.]

It came from the association again and they kept pestering about Evandel like usual. A 10 year old genius magician who could wield an army of spirit beasts. Evandel perfectly suited their icon of hope.

“...”

Ah Hae-In ignored them and turned off her smartwatch. Suddenly, a paper airplane flew in from the window.

“What's this?”

Ah Hae-In frowned and grabbed it. Her face immediately stiffened when she touched it because of the trace of magic power on it. She quickly opened the airplane to check its contents.

[Evandel, are you doing well? It's me, Hajin. We can talk by writing on this paper. I miss you.]

“...!”

This message undoubtedly came from Kim Hajin.

Chapter 343

Final Banquet (2)

[Leores – Underground Bunker]

Rachel, Yun Seung-Ah, Chae Nayun, and other members from Earth returned to the underground bunker. The people inside cheered when they arrived. Airun and the republic's knights smiled as they shook hands with the citizens. The group headed to the office to meet the person in charge.

Yoo Yeonha greeted them and looked back and forth between the knights and secret service members.

“There's too many of you for this small place.”

Six secret service members and 26 knights entered the room with hundreds of knights waiting outside.

“...”

Airun sent her subordinates a look. They took the hint and left. Only Rachel, Chae Nayun, Airun, Kim Youngjin, Yi Yeonghan, and Kim Horak remained.

“Huuu...”

Yoo Yeonha didn't feel happy about an outsider like Airun staying, but greeted the important character with a smile anyways.

“Well done, everyone. However, we don't have time to rest. Next, we —”

“Where's Kim Suho?” Chae Nayun interrupted her.

“Did he go to the bathroom?”

She blinked with an innocent look. Yoo Yeonha coughed before immediately replying.

“He went to Baal’s castle with Lady Aileen.”

“What? Already?”

“Yes, Fenrir was going to end the war with the demonic beasts anyways.”

Yoo Yeonha faintly smiled. Kim Hajin objectively performed the best in war. Kim Suho could cut down dozens of enemies with one swing, but Kim Hajin could kill hundreds with a click.

“Sorry, but where’s our prince?”

Airun urgently interrupted as they talked about Fenrir, Baal, and whatnot. Yoo Yeonha stared at her before taking out 17 small bottles from her drawer.

“There’s a large castle in the middle of the barrier. We call it Baal’s castle. The prince is probably there. Here, take this.”

“Miracle herbs?” Rachel muttered when she saw the plants inside the bottles. She could feel the energy of elementals from them.

“That’s right. We looked all over the country and found only 17. Taking it will recover your energy within 2-3 hours.”

She wanted them to get going as soon as possible. They just returned from hours of battle, but the situation demanded it. The 7 of them took the bottles and consumed the herbs. Then they stored the remaining 10 in their pockets.

“Give some to Kim Suho and Aileen when you meet them. They left before I had the chance. You can use the rest during emergencies.”

Yoo Yeonha took out a suitcase and placed it on the desk. She took out several more. Koong. Koong. Koong. Koong. The 7 members curiously stared at Yoo Yeonha and the 7 suitcases.

“These are treasures used for exorcism. I stole them from their original owners, but that’s not important right now. Use them when you reach the castle.”

They all hesitated. Not about the stolen goods, but they felt hungry.

“Hurry, I have to talk to others. This bunker has over 200 people and I’m busy taking care of everything. Your hunger will also disappear when you consume the miracle herb.”

Yoo Yeonha urged the heroes and practically forced them out with the suitcases.

* * *

[Baal’s Castle – Banquet Hall]

“Shoot.”

Tk— Two individuals clashed with their toes. Aileen furrowed her brows, but Kim Suho continued with another step.

“Damn it. Argh.”

Soon, their feet tangled once more as music flowed in the air. Their minds wandered all over the place as they danced.

“Why do we have to do this?” Aileen gritted her teeth and asked.

“Just wait until they’re done talking.”

Kim Suho glanced at the banquet hall’s 2nd floor. There, Yi Yeonjun stared at Jin Sahyuk and Shin Jonghak.

“Agh, when will this end?”

Aileen and Kim Suho had to dance because of the rules in Baal's castle. Jin Sahyuk could manipulate reality and Shin Jonghak remained unaffected for some reason. Everyone else would be kicked out if they didn't follow the rules.

"Shhh... Be quiet, so we can hear."

Kim Suho danced half-heartedly and focused on the 2nd floor where Jin Sahyuk and Yi Yeonjun met face-to-face.

"We meet again."

Her eyes narrowed at him like a fox.

"..."

Yi Yeonjun remained silent and simply looked back and forth between Jin Sahyuk and Shin Jonghak. He seemed confused, but soon spoke.

"Looks like Baal's rules don't apply to you."

"I have my authority, but I don't know about him."

Jin Sahyuk pointed at Shin Jonghak, who remained unaffected.

"Hmm, you're an interesting one," Yi Yeonjun said to Shin Jonghak.

Shin Jonghak immediately swung his Conqueror Spear. He cut through the air and stopped in front of Yi Yeonjun's neck.

"Answer me. Where's Baal?" he demanded.

"Baal is raging," Yi Yeonjun randomly replied. Shin Jonghak frowned and Jin Sahyuk immediately asked.

"We asked where Baal is, not what he's doing."

"He's raging."

“Is your head okay?” Jin Sahyuk paused and stared at him.

“...”

Something seemed off about Yi Yeonjun. His eyes looked murky and his body didn’t move. He sat dazed in his chair like someone who lost something important.

“Baal’s raging?”

Jin Sahyuk asked somewhat seriously. She wanted to grasp the situation, but Yi Yeonjun didn’t give them the chance.

“That’s right. Baal saw the truth from Bell’s memories.”

“Truth? What truth?”

Yi Yeonjun tilted his head and looked at her. However, Jin Sahyuk couldn’t directly look at him. She preferred his old, greedy eyes instead of his current hollow ones.

“Did you know?” Yi Yeonjun asked. Jin Sahyuk looked at Shin Jonghak, who shook his head. Then she looked back at Yi Yeonjun.

“Know what?”

“This world we live in is nothing but a novel.”

“...?”

Jin Sahyuk furrowed her brows and couldn’t make sense of his words. She didn’t react much.

“So you didn’t know either.”

Yi Yeonjun turned serious while murmuring incomprehensible things with a twisted smile.

“Bell knew. He knew this world was a novel written by a single man.

That's right. A novel. A damn novel and a worthless one at that. The world I wanted to obtain wasn't worth a penny to that man. Even the almighty devil is nothing but a creation from a magicless world."

Yi Yeonjun continued as if he lost his mind. Jin Sahyuk tried to pick up any clues, but gave up and sighed.

"Fool, it looks like Baal ate your brain. This is what you get for being too greedy and trying to obtain something beyond you."

"Beyond me... That's right. A mere character like myself dared to take over this world."

"Shut your mouth."

Jin Sahyuk gathered magic power in her hands and prepared to kill Yi Yeonjun. However, Bell's face suddenly popped up in her head. Bell said he discovered two truths, but kept one to himself even as he died. Baal most certainly would've also learned that truth after absorbing his host's memories.

"Oi..."

Jin Sahyuk retracted her magic power and looked into Yi Yeonjun's eyes.

"Tell me slowly and in detail. What did you hear from Baal? He can't possibly fear anything."

"Baal is raging."

"No human is afraid of an ant. Rage is just another form of fear."

Some people might detest ants, but no one felt angry at them. Why would Baal be angry at humans?

Yi Yeonjun closed his eyes and opened them again. Jin Sahyuk's face appeared right in front of him.

“Fine, I’ll tell you if you want to know so much.”

Yi Yeonjun began describing the memories he received from Baal.

* * *

[Outside Baal’s Castle]

— Hajin? It’s really you, Hajin?

Evandel replied and I immediately wrote back.

— Of course, it’s me. Have you been doing well? Duchess Ah Hae-In is taking care of you, right?

— Un! This is really cool. How did you get this to work?

Evandel’s handwriting appeared neat and clean. I held back my tears at how much she grew.

— I made it, but a magician in this world helped me send it over.

The magician in question suddenly spoke. “How interesting. I didn’t think it would work so well.”

Shimurin didn’t show any signs of happiness or pride.

“Aren’t you happy?”

“It’s not like I did much. I only brought a scroll without a destination. You’re the one who completed it in an absurd fashion. I didn’t see you make any calculations. I didn’t even see how you modified the scroll.”

“Mmm...”

I scratched my neck and couldn’t explain. Stigma just worked according to my will. The co-author called it a special authority that only belonged to the creator, though I could barely call myself that.

“Anyways, you helped prove something I wasn’t sure about. Dimensional travel is possible. I can cross dimensions to another world.”

A group approached as Shimurin muttered. I turned towards them.

“Huh?”

Rachel, Yun Seung-Ah, Chae Nayun, and Yi Yeonghan... The familiar faces headed towards us with exorcist weapons. I quickly put on Black Lotus’ hood and mask. Then I took out the Black Lotus Bow.

“Be careful Jain. They’re coming.”

“Hmm, who should I turn into?”

Jain briefly pondered before transforming into Cheok Jungyeong. She flexed her huge muscles at me.

“How is it?” Jain grinned in a cute manner with Cheok Jungyeong’s face. I held back from puking.

“Don’t talk and smile like that with his face.”

“Ah, sure, sure.”

Chae Nayun and the others stopped running when they spotted us.

“What are you guys doing here?” Yun Seung-Ah spoke first. Rachel and Chae Nayun looked at us suspiciously from behind her.

Jain arrogantly smiled like the normal Cheok Jungyeong.

“Nothing much. Are you trying to enter this castle too?”

“Oi, fat boar. Who’s that next to you?” Chae Nayun asked as she glared at me. Jain shrugged as if the answer was obvious.

“It’s Blackie. Can’t you see?”

I grabbed my bow to emphasize my identity, but everyone suddenly raised their weapons.

“W-Why are you raising your bow? Put it down!”

“Do you want to fight?”

Yun Seung-Ah's hostile voice rang out and Rachel's elementals flickered in the air. I felt a strong urge to reveal my identity, but forced it down. I had to be Black Lotus until the end. No, even after the end.

“You can go in. Your friends are inside. We have no desire to hinder you.”

I told them. My mask changed my voice. I also made another [Messenger] with my settings intervention and threw it to Yun Seung-Ah. The paper flew faster than a bullet, but Yun Seung-Ah easily caught it.

“What's this?”

“It will allow you to contact me. Take it. I'll protect you and Kim Suho from here.”

“Protect?” Yun Seung-Ah frowned as I nodded.

“How do you expect us to believe you?”

“You don't have to. You'll know once you enter.”

“...”

Yun Seung-Ah stared at the paper suspiciously. Meanwhile, I glanced at Shimurin. She smirked and immediately cast a spell. As expected of a grand magician, a flash of light erupted and we teleported far away.

“Perfect timing.”

“Perfect timing? I delayed the spell as long as possible since the situation looked fun.”

“You did? Well, it’s fine since we passed them the Messenger.”

I should be able to protect them as long as we stayed in touch. I took out the [Mystic Key] and [Athena’s Arrow]. Now, I had a job to do.

“Let’s see...”

A way to destroy Baal’s castle. I didn’t know if Jin Sahyuk knew, but I did have a way of accomplishing this.

[Would you like to fuse Mystic Key with Athena’s Arrow?] [Warning. The success rate is astronomically low.]

My [Lv.10 Synthesis] and stigma’s magic power should be able to fuse the two. The resulting arrow would dismantle anything in the world.

[Synthesis has failed.] [Mystic Key and Athena’s Arrow have been destroyed.]

“Huh?”

Tk— [Athena’s Arrow] snapped in half and the [Mystic Key] turned to dust.

“...”

I repeatedly blinked and looked at the remains. I could only stare like a carp in a frozen pond.

“The hell?” I muttered in a panic.

“What happened to my items?”

The unexpected result caught me totally off guard. Enough to cause a mental breakdown. It all felt like a dream as I gathered the broken items in a last-ditch effort to correct everything. Then I used synthesis again.

[Synthesis has failed.]

Not even dust remained this time. My legs gave out and I collapsed to the ground.

Chapter 344

Final Banquet (3)

[Synthesis has failed.]

Don't calm down. Wait, that's not right. Calm down.

I took a deep breath. The [Mystic Key] and [Athena's Arrow] might've been destroyed, but a better solution should still exist.

— Oi, you okay?

A voice rang out and I turned around in a daze at Shimurin and Jain.

— Hajin, what's wrong?

I couldn't hear them too well as if I was underwater and suddenly felt sleepy. Perhaps everything would return to normal when I woke up again. Wait, no, that would just be running away from reality.

“What's wrong with him? He seems out of it.”

Shimurin's voice woke me up and I recalled something. Right, I could fix this even if it meant going overboard.

“Time reversal.”

“Huh?”

It would hurt, but I could still reverse time.

“Huu, huu.”

I took several deep breaths. One, two, three...

“What are you doing?”

Shimurin and Jain stared at me. I took one final breath and faced them. Using time reversal to recover my destroyed items... A philosophical thought suddenly struck me. Would the present Jain be the same person as the Jain from 3 minutes ago? I shook the thought away.

“See you in a bit.”

I closed my eyes and activated time reversal. The wind blew backwards and a warping sensation enveloped me. I opened my eyes again and found [Athena’s Moonlight Arrow] and the [Mystic Key] in my hands.

“Haaa...”

I sighed in relief and my legs gave out. Jain and Shimurin looked at me strangely as I slumped to the ground, but that didn’t matter.

I pondered over the key and arrow in my hands. Should I try fusing them again or be content with recovering them?

Then something strange occurred.

A bright orb appeared above the items and bloomed like a budding flower. I widened my eyes at it.

A system window popped up as the orb gave off a golden light.

[Accumulation of luck has activated after being stacked 8 times – Miraculous Retry]

[Your invariable stat, luck, will rise to 9.99 for the next 30 minutes.]

* * *

[Colosseum]

“What happened to the thing I talked about?”

Jin Seyeon asked Cheok Jungyeong in their waiting room as he lounged around on the couch.

“Do I really have to bring it?”

Jin Seyeon had asked him to bring furniture from the Chameleon Troupe’s hideout after learning about Vassago’s interest.

“Yes, I told you. They’ll come in handy during our negotiation.”

“You want to console him with furniture after we beat him up and tell him to go home?”

“Regardless of the plan, having more options is never bad.”

Vassago’s colosseum featured a simple format. Challengers placed their lives on the line to fight like gladiators. They had to clear 10 levels before reaching Vassago because he only accepted the strong.

“It’s not like we can leave this place, right?”

Cheok Jungyeong asked and Jin Seyeon furrowed her brows.

“Doesn’t the Chameleon Troupe have someone named Khalifa? Tell him to come here.”

Challengers couldn’t leave once they entered, but Jin Seyeon and Cheok Jungyeong had earned the right to invite a guest after reaching level 8. Cheok Jungyeong stood up from the couch.

“You know about Khalifa?”

“Pardon? Ah, well, the Chameleon Troupe is quite famous.”

Cheok Jungyeong looked at her suspiciously and she coughed a few times before explaining.

“I did some background investigations.”

“Why?”

“...”

She unhappily raised her brows and Cheok Jungyeong did the same.

“You think I can trust someone who investigated us?”

“Tsk...”

Jin Seyeon scratched her neck and trudged to the bed. Cheok Jungyeong smirked and also returned to the couch. Their huge level 8 waiting room turned silent until a soft voice cut through the air.

“You guys killed my father.” Jin Seyeon finally spoke.

“That’s pretty common.” Cheok Jungyeong murmured from the couch.

“Killing people?”

“It’s common to kill and be killed in this world. You should know that too. Think of all the djinns you’ve killed. Aren’t they humans too?”

“...”

Jin Seyeon turned towards her bow leaning in front of the bed. She had killed hundreds of djinns with it.

“My father was my only family.”

She calmly spoke.

“That’s common too. Some people are also born orphans.”

“Sometimes, I wish I had been an orphan instead.”

“Pft...”

Cheok Jungyeong suddenly chuckled and she glared at him.

“What’s so funny?”

“Nothing, I just remembered something. Someone used to make fun of me by calling me an orphan producer.”

“What?”

“Puhahaha. I think it’s funny. You don’t have to laugh though.”

Cheok Jungyeong rose from the couch and towered over Jin Seyeon. Then he smiled at her.

“I’ll welcome you any time if you want revenge. I don’t know if I’m the one who killed him, but the Chameleon Troupe is one entity. Just know you’ll have to put your life on the line.”

Cheok Jungyeong calmly told her. He didn’t fear death and spent most of his life with one foot in the River Styx. Jin Seyeon’s face viciously contorted.

“No thanks. You weren’t part of the Chameleon Troupe when it happened.”

“Oh yeah?”

“Yes, you were busy running around the steppes of Manchu killing people.”

“Cough, you even know about that? Oi, don’t look at me like I’m some sort of a monster. I’m not the man I used to be.”

“Oh please, some rumors even say you eat human flesh.”

Jin Seyeon pulled the bed sheet over her head.

“Human flesh? I don’t eat things that aren’t tasty. Plus, I’ve indeed changed. That guy changed me before I even realized.”

Cheok Jungyeong sounded as if he was making up an excuse.

“That guy? You mean Black Lotus?”

“Yep.”

“What do you mean?”

Jin Seyeon peeked out from the bed sheet after hearing Black Lotus’ name. She didn’t understand why either. Did she admire, fear, or respect him as a rival? Her intuition as the Divine Archer told her something about him resembled herself.

“Feel free to tell me more.”

Jin Seyeon gently added and Cheok Jungyeong raised his head. She looked at him with anticipation, but he only coldly smirked before lying back down.

“Nah.”

“Just a bit.”

“No, I’ll talk to Khalifa about the furniture though. Not that I think it’ll help.”

“...”

Jin Seyeon scratched her cheek. The information she pried out today felt satisfactory, so she gave it a rest and closed her eyes.

“Good night.”

* * *

[Baal’s Castle – Banquet Hall]

Classical music flowed in the air as Jin Sahyuk stared at Yi Yeonjun. He looked her in the eyes.

“Do you understand what kind of existence you are now? You’re nothing but a puppet.”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk didn’t say anything. She simply thought Yi Yeonjun had gone crazy, but didn’t think he had turned completely crazy.

Shin Jonghak suddenly spoke up.

“That fool must be misunderstanding something, right?”

“What?”

Jin Sahyuk furrowed her brows and Shin Jonghak continued with a smirk.

“I don’t know if he’s just delusional or if it’s a side effect of his gift, but he genuinely believes this world is a novel.”

Shin Jonghak simply thought Yi Yeonjun became delusional. Jin Sahyuk also agreed and didn’t take this information seriously as Baal’s words.

“Shush.”

Regardless, she only needed one thing.

“Where’s Baal?”

She would know the truth once they met again.

“He’s upstairs.”

Yi Yeonjun simply told them.

“So what do we need to do now?”

“You need more people.”

Yi Yeonjun pointed at the banquet hall’s entrance and they looked down. Kiik— The door creaked open and Jin Sahyuk frowned. Meanwhile, Shin Jonghak looked quite happy.

— Huh? Where’s this?

Chae Nayun stepped into the banquet hall and looked around with her greatsword in hand.

— I’m not sure. Looks like some sort of party?

Yun Seung-Ah scanned the hall.

— I see Suho over there.

Rachel pointed at a couple dancing in the middle. Kim Suho and Aileen also spotted them. He couldn’t hear Yi Yeonjun anymore as he focused on dancing. Kim Suho greeted them with a smile.

— Hey, Suho. It’s been a while.

Yun Seung-Ah stared at him from a distance. She felt happy to see him, but didn’t show it.

— Ah, yes. It’s been a while.

Kim Suho straightened up and slightly bowed. Yun Seung-Ah bitterly smiled and told him.

— We met Black Lotus.

— Really?

— Yeah, he said he’s helping you. Is that true?

— Yes, apparently it is according to Jin Sahyuk.

Jin Sahyuk turned back to Yi Yeonjun, who opened his mouth as if waiting for this moment.

“You should be able to proceed now that 11 have gathered. Go ahead. Find Baal and hear the truth. Then you can fall into despair.”

Shin Jonghak hopped down to the first floor to greet Chae Nayun. Only Jin Sahyuk remained and glared at Yi Yeonjun. Soon, she gave him her usual proud smile.

“Yi Yeonjun, it looks like you’re mistaken.”

She gathered her black magic power into her hands. It gathered like a storm and exuded an overwhelming presence. Her authority blazed as if to devour reality.

“I don’t care about the truth and it doesn’t matter if this world is just a novel.”

Guooooo... She reached out with her burning hand and grabbed his head. Then she looked into his empty eyes and shouted.

“I am not a puppet, but a king! The one who decides that isn’t you or this world! It’s me! I am the one who decides who I am! I am a king as long as I live!”

She could feel the several presences below. Chae Nayun, Shin Jonghak, Kim Suho, Yun Seung-Ah, Aileen and Kim Youngjin... Even more still climbed the staircase. She also felt Kim Hajin watching over her from outside and faintly smiled.

“I’m completely different from you!”

KOOONG! An explosion erupted in the middle of the banquet hall. Yi Yeonjun scattered into dust and Jin Sahyuk looked down from the balcony with wide eyes.

— W-What happened!? Who are these people?

Everyone dancing in the hall suddenly turned into death knights.

“What...”

Jin Sahyuk froze while looking at the first floor.

— Everyone, take out your weapons! Aileen!

— Yeah, I know. I'll take care of it.

Hundreds of death knights surrounded the group. Their numbers didn't shock her. Neither did Yi Yeonjun's sudden disappearance.

The death knights didn't wear any helmets, so Jin Sahyuk immediately recognized them. She wouldn't have missed the insignia on their armor and shields. A crown of ice and a wolf. This represented her kingdom, Plerion. These Plerion knights had protected her until her death.

Chapter 345

Meeting (1)

[Baal's Castle – Banquet Hall]

The death knights revived by the devil had no emotions. However, their hands tightly grasped their swords by instinct. They no longer possessed any consciousness or will as they stared at Jin Sahyuk.

These Plerion knights used to serve her and they dreamt of a brighter future together. Jin Sahyuk clenched her teeth and felt more confused than angry.

“—!”

Chae Nayun swung her greatsword with a spirited shout and her magic power shattered the banquet hall's ceiling.

“Sunshine, Earthy, Watery...”

Rachel called her wind, earth, and water elementals. They floated and revealed themselves. Earth focused on defense and formed barriers to protect them. Watery transformed into a cold mist and froze numerous death knights.

Whish—

Bright sword slashes flew across the battlefield like falling cherry blossoms. This came from Yun Seung-Ah's flower sword as she elegantly displayed her swordsmanship. The death knights couldn't defend against her attacks after being slowed by Rachel's elementals. Their heads fell to the floor one by one.

“—!”

Of course, that didn't stop the knights since they had already died. The headless ones charged even more viciously at Yun Seung-Ah. Her flower sword severed their limbs, but one eventually reached her. A fierce wind blew as its sword almost stabbed her.

“A storm will devour you!”

Aileen's Spirit Speech blew the death knights into the air and a flash of golden light from the Sword Saint immediately cut through them.

Kwaaaaa!

Kim Suho instantly defeated dozens as a shower of golden light continued to pour. He looked at Yun Seung-Ah.

“Let's continue.”

Yun Seung-Ah faintly smiled at his encouragement. She woke from her stupor and resumed fighting.

Kwang! Clang! Koong!

Their battle gradually destroyed the banquet hall. The fancy interior turned into a mess as hundreds of death knights fought back.

Jin Sahyuk watched her knights from the balcony as they lost their heads and limbs.

“Fuck, fuck, fuck...”

She cursed out loud. She knew they couldn't be the real Plerion knights. Baal must be playing a trick on her after reading Bell's memories. She tried to calm down and overcome her emotions.

However, she failed.

“Ah...”

Jin Sahyuk let out a short cry. The sight of a small child in the distance broke her heart.

“What...”

A child from Plerion hid by the curtains in the corner of this battlefield. Jin Sahyuk recognized this pitiful boy. She had incarcerated him and left him to die in prison, but now he stared at her. Puharen, the boy who became a devil.

Her chest pounded and she closed her eyes as something welled up from the bottom of her heart. The boy’s face surfaced beneath her eyelids and she fell to her knees.

The magic seal deep inside her finally broke and she heard a faint voice.

Why am I stuck here? It’s cold. I’m hungry. How long do I have to wait? The chains are cold and the pain won’t go away. I want to leave. Let me out... let me out...

Jin Sahyuk covered her ears, but could still hear the voice. She clutched her chest, but the pain wouldn’t go away.

Her breathing grew heavy as she recalled Akatrina. A world full of sadness, loneliness, and regret... Her kingdom... The boy she killed to become king. He had returned to destroy her kingdom as a devil.

She could never forget Puharen and felt nauseous. Her head hurt as the past ate away at her and her limbs felt as if they would rot.

— Jin Sahyuk! Jin Sahyuk! Snap out of it!

A voice suddenly woke her and her eyes snapped open.

“W-What?”

— Finally, you can hear me.

The voice sighed and she quickly recognized it as Kim Hajin.

— Why are you squatting there? Are you okay?

“What? Y-You can see me? Where are you?”

— I’m outside the castle, but I can see what’s happening.
Reinforcements are coming.

Kwang! The banquet hall’s door burst open as he said that.

“Knight commander! We’re here!”

Airun and the devil hunter Harin led dozens of knights. Heroes from Earth like Yohei, Yi Jiyeon, Yi Yongha, and Nicholas from the Temple of Justice also accompanied them. They had all entered Baal’s barrier through the gap Kim Hajin created.

“Looks like the party’s already started.”

Nicholas, the Temple of Justice’s rank 4, raised his dagger and licked it with a smile. Yi Yongha also raised his staff.

“We’re here, chairman. Not too late, right?”

“No, you’re super late. Also, what’s up with that staff?”

Aileen smirked at Yi Yongha.

“It’s a gift from Yeonha that adds the exorcism attribute to my fire.”

Yi Yongha imbued his magic power into the staff and his hellfire shot into the air. However, Jin Sahyuk didn’t pay them any attention.

“How long have you been watching?” she asked Kim Hajin.

— For about 3 minutes, I guess?

“Did you... hear anything?”

— Hear what?

It seemed Kim Hajin didn't know about their conversation with Yi Yeonjun. She briefly paused to think. Yi Yeonjun had said that Kim Hajin created this world as a novel, but she didn't have the time to confirm that right now. Kim Hajin suddenly spoke again.

— Anyways, I think I can do it.

“Do what?”

Jin Sahyuk overcame her trauma by infusing magic power into her heart.

— Destroy the castle.

“Really?”

— Yeah, but I'm going to do it right now.

“Now?” Jin Sahyuk furrowed her brows.

— Yep, so I'll entrust the king with taking care of Baal.

“Tsk, do whatever you want.”

Jin Sahyuk stood up without saying much. Kim Hajin's snarky order annoyed her, but she liked being called a king.

“Hmm...”

She straightened up and looked into the distance at Puharen. Jin Sahyuk didn't avert her gaze this time.

“Hahaha...”

She suddenly chuckled after no longer feeling anything while looking at Puharen. Her authority, [Reality Manipulation], actually specialized in manipulating the interior of things and even people.

“I bet you didn’t know, you piece of shit.”

She eliminated her complicated feelings towards Puharen in this manner. Now, she could even smile at him.

“Just you wait, Baal. I’ll find you soon.”

Jin Sahyuk looked at the ceiling and arrogantly crossed her arms. A terrifying magic power rose from behind her and transformed into dozens of spears.

* * *

[Outside Baal’s Castle – Forest Shrouded by a Barrier]

“Yep, so I’ll trust the king with taking care of Baal.”

I sent Jin Sahyuk a mental transmission as I held the [Black Lotus Bow] and [Mystic Key]. Then I activated my ultimate skill, [Complete Understanding of Spirit Power]. My mental transmission became crystal clear.

— Tsk, do whatever you want.

Jin Sahyuk briefly replied. I checked my luck stat once more with a grin.

[Invariable Stat – Luck 9.9]

My luck now transcended human capability. I didn’t know what I could do in 30 minutes, but I wouldn’t waste it.

I immediately used synthesis.

[Fusing Athena’s Moonlight Arrow with the Mystic Key...] [The success rate is astronomically low...] [You have succeeded! A perfect fusion has increased the item’s rank!]

The key fused with the arrow and became [Athena’s Mystic Arrow].

“Are you ready? You’re going to shoot now?”

“Yep.” I nodded at Jain’s question and nocked the arrow.

Kiik—

The bowstring tensed as I aimed at the devil’s castle. I also used overclock and squeezed out every ounce of stigma’s magic power.

“Argh—”

It felt like my heart would burst from time reversal’s side effects, but I endured it.

[You have used Overclocking... Your life force has been reduced!] [Your luck has activated!] [You have used Overclocking... Your life force has been reduced!] [Your luck has activated!]

Magic power gathered as the above process repeated and the brewing storm shook the heavens and earth. Whish! The air currents surrounding me flowed into the arrow as leaves and grass blew in the air. Tsssst... The magic power burned the soil and rock underneath me.

“I’m shooting now. Get ready.”

I signaled Jin Sahyuk before I fired. Then...

Someone suddenly approached me from behind. That person broke through Jain and Shimurin and reached out, causing my arrow to veer off course.

Kwaaaang!

Large and narrow blades shot up from where I stood. My misfired arrow also sailed past its intended mark.

“What...”

I stared at the devil's castle as the mysterious hand dragged me back. Even I couldn't see the castle's peak because a mysterious barrier blocked my vision. I didn't worry too much and wondered what my devastating 9.9 luck would cause.

* * *

[Devil's Castle – Baal's Room]

Yi Yeonjun returned to Baal's room in anger. He couldn't see Baal, but could sense the demonic energy that filled the room.

“...”

He empathized with Baal, who called himself a world collector. However, Baal's existence turned out to be a small piece in another collection.

“Baal...”

Yi Yeonjun called his name. Koong! The space suddenly pulsed in anger.

Sssss...

Soon, demonic energy gathered and formed a giant face to personify the transcendental being. Baal moved his lips made from magic power.

— Who permitted you to speak my name?

Yi Yeonjun stared at the angry Baal glaring at him.

“What's your plan now?”

Yi Yeonjun's brusque tone caused Baal to narrow his eyes even more. Baal's face slightly twitched as though deep in thought. Then he spat out in a nonhuman voice.

— Let me ask you first, human.

The room rumbled from his fury.

— How do you plan to live now?

“It depends on the truth of the memory you showed me.”

— That was the truth without a single falsehood from Bell’s memories. That was... Truth.

“Are you sure?”

— Don’t get cocky, human. I am an existence that transcends worlds. I can tell that was the truth.

“Then...” Yi Yeonjun closed his eyes.

“I don’t have any confidence left.”

Yi Yeonjun couldn’t overcome his sense of helplessness and emptiness. This world being a novel dealt a huge blow because everything he valued became meaningless. He couldn’t easily ignore it like Jin Sahyuk.

— You are just a human, but I am different.

A human’s anger couldn’t be compared to Baal’s. Yi Yeonjun lost his drive, but Baal still possessed unimaginable power.

— I will become the destroyer.

Baal’s demonic energy surged and his presence enveloped the entire castle. The demon realm gate, the devil’s castle, and the container known as Bell... The conditions for his descent had all been met.

— I will destroy that irresponsible, reckless man and this world he created.

Guoooo... Overwhelming magic power shook the room. Yi Yeonjun closed his eyes as Baal's demonic energy stormed the room.

Then...

Chweeeek!

A small arrow broke through the barrier. Baal and Yi Yeonjun turned to the bed, which had been struck by an arrow.

...

A brief silence filled the room and Yi Yeonjun pondered.

How did this arrow get here?

The arrow released a brilliant light before he could finish thinking.

Chwaaaaaa...

A holy current of silver light swallowed the room.

Chapter 346

Meeting (2)

The full moon still shone in the early morning. A baby wrapped in a quilt sat on the steps of a temple and the faint moonlight lit his face. He didn't cry and only stared at his mother.

Soon, the mother began to cry. She turned around as the baby watched her reluctantly walk away.

A smile emerged on the innocent baby's face. The mother began to run after hearing the baby's laughter and her tears scattered in the wind.

The temple doors opened as the sun rose. An old nun paused in front of the baby and picked him up with a sigh. The baby opened his eyes, which reflected the nun's wrinkled face. She gently smiled and stroked his quilt to congratulate his birth.

The temple took in the baby and named him Eren.

Eren spent much of his childhood in the temple. It became his home, place of worship, playground, and school. The nuns taught him many things.

However, he never liked studying. Instead, he preferred to chop wood. Eren wanted to learn the sword and become a knight rather than take history lessons. The nuns couldn't provide him with such an education because they lived in the rural countryside far from the capital.

One day, a retired knight visited and the nuns introduced him to Eren. The knight wanted a successor, but had no children. Eren seemed to be the perfect match and became his student.

The boy felt elated every time he swung a sword. In those moments, he never felt sad about not having parents or friends.

He trained diligently and even slept with his weapon. The dream of becoming a knight sprouted in him. He trained every day to become like the hero of justice he read about in fairy tales.

The nuns watched him grow with pride and treated him like a real son.

Unfortunately, they didn't have much time left. The demon realm transformation that slowly devoured Akatrina finally reached the temple.

* * *

[Outside Baal's Castle]

The misfired arrow flew to the top of Baal's castle before striking a bed and exploding.

The arrow's power of [Dismantling] shook the entire castle. The rumbling turned into a terrifying storm that destroyed the roof. The demonic energy surrounding the castle scattered and its foundation also broke.

Kwaaaaa!

The shell of Baal's castle completely collapsed. However, I didn't have time to watch as a blade shot towards me from behind.

Clang!

A black barrier instantly formed and blocked the attack. I sighed in relief and turned towards the familiar face. I couldn't help but smile.

"Did you rest well, Boss?"

Boss appeared out of nowhere and protected me. "You should be more careful when you're using your bow."

"Ah, Boss. Are you okay now?" Jain asked and Boss nonchalantly nodded. Shimurin simply shrugged and treated Boss like a disciple.

“Rather than that...”

Boss' shadow stretched out at the speed of light. It grabbed the person responsible for attacking me and dragged him by his feet.

“Kuuk...”

A djinn had attacked me. The shadow coiled around his body and strangled his neck. I frowned at his face and recalled seeing him before. Then I used [Observation and Reading] to check his identity.

“Ah, you're Terror's lackey.”

I finally remembered now. I saw his face before on a wanted poster from Violet Banquet. He served Terror, one of the Nine Evils.

"I almost forgot. I guess the Nine Evils are still alive and well."

I turned to Boss, who promptly nodded. Aileen had killed Destruction, but the other Nine Evils still lived.

"Terror supports Astaroth. Let's interrogate him and find out Terror's location."

Boss retrieved her shadow and grabbed the djinn's neck with her hand. She seemed quite angry.

"Oi, I don't think you should be paying attention to that guy right now."

Shimurin muttered as she watched Baal's crumbling castle.

"Huh?"

"Look."

She grinned and pointed at the castle. Baal appeared above it and looked just like Bell.

He kept glaring at me.

“—!”

Then he suddenly roared and everything inside the barrier shook. He rose higher into the sky and a terrifying amount of demonic energy flowed out.

His demonic energy spread in every direction. It seeped into the barrier and turned it even darker. I had no idea what he planned on doing.

"Oi."

Shimurin seemed to know something and nudged my shoulder. She still wore a grin as I blankly stared at her.

"Wait for me. I'll see you soon."

She covered us in a barrier as she spoke. Immediately, the world exploded.

* * *

[Virtual Reality – Leraje's Game]

Leraje's character, Lijengy, looked up at the game's sky. She felt an explosion of demonic energy somewhere far away.

"Lord!"

Her loyal servant, Corte, shouted for her. His ID in the game read, Leraje's Monster. She nodded and spoke through the chat system.

— Looks like the old man finally descended.

Leraje lightly sighed and looked around. A vast wilderness dyed in darkness spread out before her. They called this place Lekior Field and it served as a famous high level training ground in the game. Most players couldn't enter because of its high spawn rate for powerful monsters. However, Leraje and her servants easily occupied it with her exceptional game control.

— Take all the items.

She ordered her guild members.

— Blacksmith, can you make something with this?

"I should be able to make a [High Rank Obsidian Breastplate] with enough of them."

A week had passed since the game's release. It felt more realistic than one might expect. For example, crafting high rank equipment required a large quantity of crafting materials. However, a moment of carelessness could lead to death despite the high quality of one's equipment. Additionally, this game didn't feature any revival mechanics. Death would be permanent.

Leraje enjoyed the realism and other players did too. The game would've never reached 15 million concurrent players if they didn't enjoy it. The gaming company Leol had finally created the RPG game of the century.

"Will you go meet His Highness, Baal?" Corte asked as he collected the items. He sounded serious, but the way he hunched over to pick up items looked quite funny.

— I should, but I intend on keeping the promise I made with this world. My war will only be within this game.

"We will follow our Lord's wishes."

Corte bowed and Leraje nodded without a word.

— I'll log out first.

"Yes, Lord!"

Leraje logged out. Meanwhile, Corte remained in the game. He wanted to follow, but had been ordered to take care of in-game duties.

Approximately 15 million human players wanted to take down Leraje's guild. Corte refused to let his guard down even for a moment during this 15,000,000 vs 1,000 battle.

"Blood brothers!"

He turned around to his fellow demons and shouted with a serious face.

"Collect the items! We will move to the next dungeon soon!"

Corte and the guild members quickly gathered the necessary items.

— We're ready, sir!

"Good!"

He laughed and pointed at the boss dungeon cave in the distance.

"Let's get moving. Prepare for a boss raid!"

Boss raids could be considered one of the funnest parts of this game. Corte felt somewhat disappointed that Leraje would miss it.

— Yes, sir!

They marched towards the cave while eagerly anticipating the upcoming battle. They initially played for Leraje's sake, but truly enjoyed the game now.

* * *

[Earth – Korea]

— Hajin... Kim Hajin!

I slowly opened my eyes and my body ached all over, but someone kept shaking me.

— Wake up!

Kim Suho slapped my cheeks as he said something. I looked at his moving lips.

— Wake up, Kim Hajin! Wake up!

He kept shaking and slapping me with a worried expression. However, I couldn't move as if all my energy had been drained.

— Hajin, Hajin! Snap out of it!

My consciousness returned after an unknown amount of time and my senses also recovered.

"Kim Hajin! Are you okay?"

"..."

I swallowed the saliva that had gathered in my mouth. Then I looked at the sky and my surroundings. I could see Essential Armory's barrier in the distance and even North Hamgyeong Province. We had undoubtedly returned to Korea. I looked at the horizon in a daze.

"Are you okay?"

Kim Suho asked again. I turned back to him and nodded.

"We're... back on Earth?"

"Yeah."

He helped me up with his hand. First, I checked if aether worked. It protected me from the explosion and transformed into a small bag that stored my Black Lotus equipment.

I took out the Desert Eagle and looked at the clear, blue sky.

"What..."

I furrowed my brows in confusion. Did Jin Sahyuk and Kim Suho kill Baal? I faced Kim Suho again.

"What happened to Baal?"

"I don't know. The castle exploded and this happened."

"..."

I finally noticed everyone around me: Chae Nayun, Shin Jonghak, Yun Seung-Ah, Jin Sahyuk, Yi Yeonghan, Kim Youngjin, and even Jain and Boss. They all sprawled out on the ground.

"Ah."

I stood up towards Boss and Jain, but Jin Yohan, Kaita, and Khalifa appeared to take them away.

Soon, other high ranking heroes also arrived.

— Looks like everyone is back.

Yoo Sihyuk appeared with his 9 white wolves.

— Yeonha, Yeonha!

Yoo Jinwoong ran around looking for his daughter.

— Look for anyone who's injured! It doesn't matter what guild they're from! We have to save everyone!

Vice leader Yi Jin-Ah arrived with Essence of the Strait heroes. Seo

Youngji, Oh Junhyuk, a fully armored Heynckes, and even the apathetic Chae Joochul came.

I sighed in relief at the hundreds of heroes that surrounded us.

"Haaa..."

I felt like I could finally rest. Just as I loosened up...

“—!”

A loud screech rang out and the clear sky turned reddish-black. Once again, Baal appeared in the air and all the heroes quickly prepared for battle.

Sssk—

Kim Suho also took out Misteltein. I chuckled since it would've been too easy if Baal had died.

— Grohack derla croska fedra!

Baal muttered incomprehensible words. His cry tore through the sky and formed a pentagram.

Koooong!

Demonic energy gathered like a storm and the earth violently shook. Kim Suho and I watched in a daze as Baal cast his grand magic.

— Come!

The pentagram flipped upside down and the summoning of an evil god began. First, a giant leg appeared. It looked bigger than anything I had ever seen and stepped onto Korea.

Boom!

The ground shook from a single step. The huge shockwave spread out and razed the nearby trees.

— Uaaak!

— Kuak!

Several medics fainted after being hit by the collapsing trees. Heroes who had been crushed by the foot instantly died.

Kim Suho froze as he watched this devastating scene.

"..."

I looked at his trembling hands. He felt afraid because he must've recognized the owner of that leg.

Rank 21 devil, Morax.

The calamity that ruined Akatrina. This Morax appeared larger and even more destructive than the one in the recorded past.

"Suho."

I grabbed his trembling hand. He flinched and looked at me. I stared into his eyes and smiled.

"Don't worry."

Kim Suho swallowed his saliva. I grabbed his hand even tighter and confidently declared.

"I can kill someone like him with a single bullet."

Technically, I didn't lie. After all, I had done exactly that in the recorded past.

"..."

Kim Suho silently looked at me. He seemed to be searching for the source of my confidence.

Then he smirked after about a minute and muttered.

"It won't be that easy."

Chapter 347

Meeting (3)

The child quickly grew and the master realized he could not foster the child's full potential by himself. The child needed an even greater role model. He had to go to the capital to blossom as a knight. His family at the temple understood and supported him. The nuns gave him all they had, 3 gold coins for travel expenses. The child left for the capital with the knight.

Their journey didn't go as smoothly as they had hoped. They ran into thugs, monsters, and natural barriers. Finally, the master and pupil overcame all the obstacles and arrived at their destination.

Plerion's capital looked magnificent even as the world neared its end. The tall buildings and bustling streets mesmerized the child. His master, who used to serve the kingdom as a knight, brought him to the royal palace. There, the child met a boy who would later become his lord.

His future lord, Puharen, looked like a fragile boy who trembled in fear and uncertainty.

* * *

[Earth – Korea]

Morax descended from the pentagram and caused major destruction. His right leg came down first and crushed the grasslands near the border. His left leg destroyed the barriers the heroes had formed. Like that, the giant devil set foot on Earth.

“...”

Kim Hajin silently stared at the devil. His instincts told him Morax would be extremely dangerous.

“Hmm...”

He could only see up to the devil's knee from the ground. Morax's upper body hid behind the clouds and fog.

Kim Hajin decided to increase the distance between them first. A sharpshooter could only properly aim from the right distance. He needed to be as far away as possible.

“Stay here. I'll cover you from behind.”

He disappeared and left Kim Suho. Aileen appeared immediately afterwards with a huge bump on her head from when she fell out of the demon realm gate.

“Hey Kim Suho, what's that?”

She asked while rubbing her head. Kim Suho tightened his grip around Misteltein.

“It's Morax.”

“Morax?”

“Yes.”

The same calamity that destroyed Akatrina in the past. Kim Suho could still recall that devil and his overwhelming strength. He even recalled Puharen's tears.

“Well, whatever.”

Aileen increased her magic power. She squinted and glowered at Morax while stretching.

“Nothing will matter once I kill him.”

Then...

— We have urgent news! Devils are appearing all over the globe!

— Help! Help! We need assistance!

— Requesting backup!

Desperate voices broke out from the heroes' smartwatches.

“W-What’s going on? Why so suddenly?”

Aileen became perplexed. Kim Suho calmly leaned over to look at a smartwatch from the hero next to him.

— This is Japan! A huge pentagram suddenly appeared and countless djinns began pouring out.

— Russia here! D-Devils have appeared here as well!

These voices shattered Kim Suho’s sense of reality. He grew dizzy, his vision blurred, and his body staggered. The nightmare from his previous world, which he had worked so hard to forget, came to life again. It made him sick.

“What’s the status quo?”

However, a particular voice flowed into his ears. Kim Suho raised his head at Yoo Yeonha. She looked at the current situation with Yoo Jinwoong's smartwatch.

“...”

Her expression stiffened and she sighed.

“Father, I’ll get going now.”

“Yeah, stay safe. Go on, hurry. Hey, Kim Hwagok!”

Yoo Jinwoong quickly ordered an Essence of the Strait hero to accompany Yoo Yeonha.

“My name is Kim Hwagok, a high-intermediate rank hero. Please hold my hand, Chief Officer. I have the teleport skill.”

“Okay.”

Yoo Yeonha glanced at Kim Suho and took Kim Hwagok’s hand. Shoong— Kim Hwagok activated [Teleport] and evacuated her to a safe place.

Soon, Kim Hwagok returned to the battlefield with several smartwatches. He handed one to Kim Suho.

“The Chief Officer ordered me to give this to you.”

“Ah, I see. Thank you.”

The smartwatch immediately connected to Yoo Yeonha.

— Can you hear me?

“Yeah.”

Kim Suho nodded. He shrugged as he looked at the smartwatch.

“By the way, did you learn a new skill? Your voice sounds... soothing.”

Something felt special about Yoo Yeonha’s voice. It seemed to naturally comfort him even at times like this. He managed to remain sane thanks to her.

— Yeah, sort of. I won’t tell you what it is though. Focus on the current situation for now.

“...”

Kim Suho silently grabbed his sword and a familiar scent approached him. As expected, Chae Nayun came over and stared at Morax. She held the greatsword Balmung in her hand.

“He’s freaking huge. How is this size even possible?”

She muttered, and Kim Suho could only faintly smile. Chae Nayun turned to him.

“Don’t worry too much. What’s wrong? You don’t seem like yourself.”

“...”

Kim Suho remained silent and scratched his neck. He felt ashamed that everyone could notice his fear. Chae Nayun slapped his shoulder several times and grinned.

“It’s okay. Everything is going to be fine. Grandpa is here and he’ll take care of it.”

Chae Nayun seemed as confident as Kim Hajin, but something immediately proved her words.

Koong!

The surrounding nature resonated. Grass, trees, the earth... All colors of nature grew clearer and began to spur. They quickly gathered and formed a huge figure. Chae Joochul the Immortal made this avatar with his authority. The avatar straightened herself and stood as tall as Morax.

“Wow, I haven’t seen this technique in a while.”

Chae Nayun exclaimed in admiration. Kim Suho looked at Mother Nature in a daze. The trees and soil intertwined to form her legs while Chae Joochul’s magic power formed her body. Her arms and head inherited the azure sky’s energy. Chae Joochul called her the Four-Colored Immortal.

“Well, let’s just leave him to my grandpa.”

Chae Nayun slapped Kim Suho’s shoulder. Morax began moving towards the Immortal and stretched his arms towards the divine creation. The Immortal did the same and the two great forces crashed.

A devastating shock wave occurred.

Kwaaaaa!

Kim Suho tightened the grip on his sword as the impact struck them.

* * *

[Vassago's Colosseum]

Meanwhile, Cheok Jungyeong and Jin Seyeon became rank 9 gladiators. However, Jin Seyeon couldn't focus anymore after hearing that the demon realm gate opened and devils descended on Earth.

"You need to pee? What are you so nervous about?"

Cheok Jungyeong sneered as she paced around the waiting room. She frowned at him.

"Aren't you worried at all?"

"About what?"

"Devils have descended on Earth! This is the biggest crisis in the history of humanity since the Great Change, yet you're—"

"What do you think we're doing right now? Are we just playing around?"

"What?"

"We're also trying to stop a devil, aren't we?"

"..."

Jin Seyeon couldn't refute him and fell silent. They had come here to defeat a devil. She could only glare before sighing and throwing herself on the couch.

“Still, four devils have appeared at the same time. Four! Morax, Baal, Phenex, Vual—”

“What? Ball?”

“No, not ball, Baal. It sounds similar, but... Wait, stop fooling around!”

Cheok Jungyeong’s awful joke angered her. Then a bird appeared from nowhere and landed on his shoulder.

“What’s this?”

They looked at the bird in a daze. It tilted its head a couple of times and...

— Peep.

A sentence appeared above as the bird chirped.

[My name is Observer No.3.]

It bluntly introduced itself.

“What? Observer?”

Cheok Jungyeong frowned as the bird chirped again.

— Peep.

[I shall help you communicate with my master.]

“Hahaha, you’re pretty feisty for a little guy. Who’s your master...?”

Cheok Jungyeong slightly shuddered as if he suddenly realized something. Jin Seyeon stared at him as he froze.

“Aha...”

Cheok Jungyeong chuckled after organizing his thoughts. He lightly patted the observer on his shoulder and gestured for Jin Seyeon to come closer.

“Oi, come here.”

“What is that?” she eagerly asked.

“It’s a messenger from the seat of black,” Cheok Jungyeong replied.

Jin Seyeon flinched and continued to wander around the room while pretending to be indifferent.

“Seat of black?”

“Yep. Oi, Black. Are you currently outside? I’m with Jin Seyeon right now.”

Cheok Jungyeong whispered to the observer. The bird chirped about 3 minutes later and relayed Black Lotus’ message.

[Yes, I’m outside. Things aren’t looking too good. Where are you right now, Cheok Jungyeong?]

“At Vassago’s colosseum.”

Jin Seyeon focused all her senses on their conversation while feigning indifference.

[How are things on your side? Will you two be able to defeat Vassago?]

“Of course, I can easily kill him. My companion here, on the other hand, wants to appease.”

[Huh? She wants to appease a devil?]

“Yep. Sounds crazy, right?”

“Excuse me, but I—”

“Shhh.”

Cheok Jungyeong silenced her and Jin Seyeon’s face distorted like a bulldog. He smugly continued and paid no mind.

[Does she have a plan?]

“I don’t know. She says Vassago loves treasures or something, so she wants to appease him with the items you made. You know, stuff like furniture. Nonsense, right?”

[Mmm... You’re right. That sounds a little reckless and it’s not much of a plan.]

Black Lotus’ disapproval made Jin Seyeon blush from embarrassment. Then...

— So far, 6 gladiators have achieved rank 9.

Vassago’s voice descended from the ceiling. Cheok Jungyeong quickly hid the observer and Jin Seyeon nervously looked up.

— The last match will begin in 2 days.

Vassago boldly declared that he would fight all six of them at once.

“Here, hand the bird over to me.”

Jin Seyeon stretched out her arm to Cheok Jungyeong after the announcement. However, Vassago suddenly interjected again.

— And you two.

They both flinched, but didn’t worry too much. Vassago allowed them to freely plot and scheme against him, so the observer shouldn’t be a problem.

— Your tribute was well received.

Jin Seyeon sighed in relief and leered at Cheok Jungyeong as if to say, Told you this would work.

— Someone on Earth can make things like this? You're saying a human made such a delicate object?

“Apparently, according to him.”

Jin Seyeon coldly pointed at Cheok Jungyeong with her chin. He simply shrugged and pulled out the observer from behind him.

“Take a look. This is a bird he sculpted with magic power. You can tell how talented he is, no?”

Cheok Jungyeong set the bird free and the observer chirped as it fluttered around. The small bird danced like a butterfly and looked quite cute.

— Hmm...

Vassago silently observed the bird.

“See? It's working,” Jin Seyeon whispered.

“So what? I also thought this was a good idea.”

“Stop lying.”

“Why?”

Cheok Jungyeong added with an unusually serious look.

“I had our members investigate and they told me Vassago's incarnation body used to be super extravagant. It's no surprise Vassago is blinded by riches like his incarnation bo—”

— I can hear you.

Vassago coldly declared. Cheok Jungyeong and Jin Seyeon fell silent.

The devil continued with a chuckle.

— I can't say this incarnation body's inclination hasn't affected me. As you intended, your tribute has greatly satisfied me. I'll visit you soon. It's only natural for a greater being to reward a lower one's good behavior. You shall wait for me.

Jin Seyeon had been waiting for such a response.

Chapter 348

Meeting (4)

Eren began as a squire under Puharen's knight order thanks to his master's oath of guarantee. Of course, nothing came easy. As a squire, his main duties consisted of cleaning and cooking. This left him with only an hour before sleep to practice the sword.

However, Eren didn't give up and viewed everything optimistically. His young, but well-built body allowed him to perform menial tasks without feeling tired. He considered it a great opportunity to watch the powerful knights train. Eren diligently trained every night with what little time he had.

Thankfully, Puharen's knights didn't ignore his efforts. It didn't take long for Eren to be invited to train with the others. Knights lived rough and crude lives, but he grew quickly because of that.

He had never been lucky and it seemed meeting his master used up all his luck. Soon, Eren found out that his master suffered from an incurable illness. He visited Eren's rural village for that very reason and wanted to experience the world more with his remaining time. He just so happened to find the perfect disciple during his travels and returned to the capital.

His master only felt joy, but the news distressed Eren. He had grown stronger than others his age, but remained a child at heart. He couldn't hide his pain at the eternal farewell. Eren visited his master every night and watched him grow weaker on his deathbed.

One day, Eren met a princess named Prihi as he swallowed his tears next to his master.

* * *

I sent observers all over the world to collect information. It didn't take long to realize the situation had become far worse than I imagined.

— Oi, Black. Wait there. Red is about to begin an important battle. I'll contact you later.

Cheok Jungyeong and Jin Seyeon seemed to have a plan at Vassago's colosseum, but Earth gradually crumbled from greater evils that descended.

[A devil has descended in Tokyo. This bird devil calls itself Phenex and has begun to sing a song of death.] [Vual is knocking on the walls of Vladivostok...]

"Spartan?"

Spartan appeared as soon as I called him. He gently landed on my shoulder and seemed slightly bigger than the last time I saw him.

— Prrrrr.

Spartan purred and acted cute. I bitterly smiled and stroked his head. Unfortunately, I didn't have the time to play around.

Guoooooooo...

A huge amount of magic power erupted from Morax's location. It didn't come from the devil's demonic energy, but nature's magic power. This four-colored magic power clashed with Morax. I instantly recognized it as Chae Joochul's power.

— Where are you?

Yoo Yeonha's voice rang out from my smartwatch.

"I'm watching Morax. What about you?"

I replied and took out the [Black Lotus Bow].

— I'm in an underground bunker.

“Did you find out what’s happening?”

— Mostly, looks like Earth is on the brink of destruction.

“Oh yeah?”

I chuckled. Baal had once destroyed a world in 3 days, so her words held some weight. He should've spent the first day summoning subordinates as he did now. He probably took even less time to destroy the world after that.

“Huuu.”

I sighed and checked stigma. As I thought, I didn't have a single ounce left. The side effects from [Time Reversal] slowed its recovery even with the [Orb of Regeneration]. I could forcefully create more with overclocking, but I would have to wait for the right opportunity.

— How are things on your side? I thought you'd know something.

“Ah, well... I don't, really.”

— Then I guess we're doomed because I can't think of anything.

Yoo Yeonha sent me the information she collected.

[Russia, Vladivostok – Vual] [Japan, Tokyo – Phenex] [Spain, Madrid – Astaroth] [Europe – Valac's Army] [Korea – Baal and Morax]

Thankfully, Leraje and Vassago seemed less hostile. Other devils acted like boss monsters, but these two felt more like quests.

“I'm trying to come up with something. I'll let you know once I do.”

— Got it.

Kwaaaaa!

Morax's arm and the Immortal's fist clashed. A huge shockwave spread out in every direction, but aether automatically formed a barrier around me.

A golden flash and a huge magic power blade cut through the air. Kim Suho and Chae Nayun finally joined the battle.

I raised the [Black Lotus Bow] and continued to watch them. [Athena's Mystic Arrow] had been destroyed after toppling Baal's castle, so I nocked a dark ore arrow.

Then...

"Hey." A woman's voice suddenly flowed into my ears. My head instantly cooled and I looked over.

"It's been a while."

Gulp. I swallowed hard and checked before sighing in relief.

"Geez, you surprised me."

"Hahaha."

The woman playfully laughed as she poked my cheeks. I stepped back and glared at her.

"What is it?"

Medea appeared out of the blue and handed me a piece of paper.

"Here, take it."

"What's this? Actually, go help them fight Morax instead. You haven't forgotten our contract, right?"

"It's a message from Crevon."

"Huh?"

I quickly snatched it from her hand and scanned it.

[Have you been well, Kim Hajin? This is the Crevon Empire's duchess, Tomer. That's right. We're no longer a kingdom, but an empire...]

"I read it too. Crevon wants to help, but it seems they're not in a position to do so."

Medea spoke as I read the message.

"W-Why?"

She shrugged.

"They're powerless. To be exact, they don't have the necessary energy to leave the tower and descend on Earth."

"..."

"I spent hundreds of years preparing for my descent. That's how hard it is to leave that place. How annoying. I came here after all that and look at this place."

Medea's explanation quickly devolved into grumbling about her misfortunes. Of course, I ignored most of it. I could only think of one thing right now.

[Dimensional Entropy]

An energy source powerful enough for Crevon's army to descend.

"What a shame. I thought I'd get to enjoy a longer life this time—"

I ignored the complaining Medea and called Yoo Yeonha.

"Yoo Yeonha, are you there?"

A clattering sound rang out before she finally replied.

—... Yes?

“What were you doing? Planting an apple tree?”

— W-What? N-No, do you think I’m an idiot? An apple tree, ha, haha.

“...”

Her strange reaction made me slightly curious, but we didn’t have time.

“Alright, listen to me.”

— Huh? Ah... Okay.

Yoo Yeonha quickly became serious. I paused for a moment and turned to Medea.

“Medea, can you pass along this message to Crevon for me?”

* * *

[Russia – Vladivostok]

Russia’s city, Vladivostok, looked peaceful even yesterday. It seemed fine as Valac’s army invaded Europe and Earth experienced a rapid demon realm transformation.

Vladivostok was quite close to Korea and many Korean guilds used it as a strategic location due to its high number of dungeons. Recently, the people’s assessment of Vladivostok had risen so greatly that it outclassed Russia’s capital, Moscow. Many key government facilities even moved to Vladivostok.

A simple reason existed for all of this. Vladivostok had become a safe haven during the past 6 months when everything grew chaotic. Russian heroes, advanced technology, and the well-known Vladivostok walls didn’t cause this. An unknown force had wiped out all the monsters in the area. The residents called this mysterious force their guardian deity. Dozens of shrines, temples, and churches had been built to worship this unknown god. Vladivostok's residents and the Russian government wished for these miracles to continue and hoped their guardian deity would protect them from all evil.

Russia's most famous hero, Gennadi, thought today would be the last of this mysterious protection.

"Sir Gennadi, we're awaiting your command."

Gennadi looked down from Vladivostok's impenetrable wall. A huge army and a caped devil commanding it lay on the other side.

"So that's Vual..."

Gennadi gritted his teeth. He knew they couldn't do anything against such a powerful force and began imagining the endless army razing Vladivostok.

— Open the gate.

The devil's hoarse voice rang out across the horizon. It carried a hint of demonic energy and shook the walls, causing ordinary soldiers to collapse.

— I will only say it 3 times.

Gennadi deeply contemplated. He didn't believe Vual would spare them even if they opened the gate.

— Open the gate.

The Russian hero despised his own powerlessness.

— Open the...

The devil's voice suddenly cut off. A gust of wind blew and Gennadi raised his head.

“...?”

Chwaaaaa— The wind tore through Vual’s army. Soon, it turned into a storm that threw Vual’s army into disarray.

Boom!

Vual’s soldiers screamed as this violent storm severed their limbs. Even Vual had no choice but to look around for a clue.

“Hmm...”

Something ran around faster than the speed of sound.

“An insect?”

He tried to grab the insect using his demonic energy, but it squirmed away.

“You!”

Vual furrowed his brows. His demonic energy split into multiple branches to chase after the insect. The demonic energy eventually caught the bug. No, that’s what everyone thought.

Plunk!

A thud rang out and his demonic energy rebounded. Neither magic power nor demonic energy had caused this. The insect simply used brute strength to strike back.

“...”

Vual couldn’t understand what he just saw. He stopped attacking and simply observed.

— Krrrr, Krrrr.

He caught a closer glimpse of the praying mantis making a strange

cry. However, Vual ignored the bipedal insect.

“You dare look at me with such eyes.”

Instead, he looked at the existence watching him from behind the mantis. He couldn't stand that existence's condescending look.

“Answer me.”

The devil commanded. However, the existence remained silent and its arrogant eyes didn't change.

The lonely king with only one vassal, Orden, stood behind the mantis.

Chapter 349

Meeting (5)

Prihi asked why Eren kept crying. He wiped away his tears and told her he wasn't. She smiled, but he remained solemn. Then she looked at the sword tied to his waist. He slowly moved it behind him.

"Your name?" she asked.

"I'm Eren. A knight."

"I see. I've heard of you."

The princess nodded as if their meeting had been coincidental. Rumors had been circulating in the royal palace for some time about a young knight named Eren. Even Romero, Prihi's henchman, praised this young knight. He said the kingdom's fate would've been different if this young knight had been born 10 years earlier. Prihi wanted a strong knight who matched her ambitions.

"I heard your master is sick."

She spoke again, but Eren hesitated to answer.

"..."

The young knight couldn't help but hope for a miracle even though he remained silent. He had sworn allegiance to Puharen, who had given up on his master's treatment.

"We're short on finances and time."

Puharen's servant had come in person to tell him that. Eren felt disappointed, but understood. His master already accepted death, so Eren had to do the same.

“Is he sick or not? I haven’t heard your answer,” Prihi asked again.

“He’s sick.”

Eren finally replied and nodded.

She opened the door to the room that he just left and Eren followed her. He looked big for his age and the princess was the opposite, so she appeared much smaller next to him.

“...”

She looked at Eren’s master lying in bed. She knew this knight, who had been reduced to a skeleton. Jinkens, a trivial knight with limited potential. He started at the bottom and remained there for all his life. Still, she considered him useful for bringing a great talent to the royal capital.

“I know him. Jinkens, a loyal servant.”

Prihi kindly gazed at the sick man.

“I heard he served the royal family for nearly 20 years. I’m sure the former king would recognize him as well.”

Prihi’s voice grew softer and Eren’s expectations grew. Maybe Prihi would help.

If so, should I ask? Maybe I should wait for her to make the first move.
Eren wondered to himself.

The princess suddenly turned to him. “Young knight.”

“Yes, Your Highness.”

Eren knelt before her and lowered his head. Prihi could feel his anticipation and excitement. The sly princess hid her smile and spoke with determination.

“I shall help you.”

“...!”

Eren’s heart burst with joy. He easily overlooked the condition that followed.

“But only if you pledge to serve me from now on.”

He looked at her under the pale moonlight. The young princess brilliantly shone in the silver light.

* * *

[Earth – Korea]

I sent Yoo Yeonha the Tower of Wish’s coordinates. She switched to a video call after a brief silence. Her face filled the big screen that suddenly popped up and I quickly reduced the screen size.

— Why there, all of a sudden? That’s the Tower of Wish, isn’t it?

Yoo Yeonha frowned at the coordinates I just sent. She didn’t understand my intentions yet.

“By the way, Medea is with me.”

I adjusted the angle to show Medea, who smiled and waved.

— What the... Why is Medea there?

Yoo Yeonha flinched.

“She brought me an official letter from Crevon. You should read it first.”

I scanned the letter with my smartwatch and sent it to Yoo Yeonha. Her eyes widened after reading it and she quickly understood like always.

— This...

“You understand what’s going on now, right?”

Tomer’s letter stated that Queen Araha had conquered the 9th floor, proclaimed Crevon an empire, and became the Empress. She wanted to help, but no such energy existed in the tower for them to descend. She asked if Earth had that kind of energy. Indeed, we did.

— Are you thinking about using dimensional entropy?

“That’s right.” I snapped my fingers.

“We could temporarily create a passage to the tower with enough energy.”

— Mmm... Give me a moment.

Yoo Yeoha began to think. Obviously, not in a normal way. Her eyes turned blue and her hair stood on end as if it became static. This special skill increased her logical reasoning and around 3 minutes passed.

— I don’t know if it’ll work because we lack sufficient data. I can’t properly calculate it, but I guess it’s our only option. I’ll do it.

Yoo Yeonha nodded resolutely and I glanced at Medea.

“Medea, please head back to Crevon and adjust the timing.”

Our timing had to match with Crevon to carry out such a huge summoning. Crevon would also need some time to prepare their army.

“Will it be alright?”

She doubtfully asked and I nodded.

“Yes, it’ll definitely work. You have to hurry.”

My [Accumulation of Luck] still affected everything around me. Also, I had some luck left for one last use.

“Okay, if you’re so sure.”

Medea quickly recited a spell. Ssssssss— She disappeared after the quick incantation and I almost mistook it for the wind.

“Phew...”

I took a deep breath to calm down and turned to Spartan on my shoulder.

“Spartan.”

— Pururu.

He read my thoughts and nodded before I even spoke. I smiled and spoke out loud anyways.

“Let’s go to Yoo Yeonha.”

* * *

[Vassago’s Colosseum – Arena]

“...”

“...”

Cheok Jungyeong and Jin Seyeon stared at the woman in front of them. They had reached the throne room at the colosseum’s highest point. The last challenger would face Vassago here.

However, they only peacefully looked at each other. Neither side felt threatened or scared. The pair only seemed confused at Vassago’s appearance. Not only did Vassago seem weak, but she also looked beautiful. This quality didn’t necessarily matter to devils.

Her long blue hair danced like ocean waves and her eyes sparkled as if they contained all the world's light.

"Hmph."

No words could properly describe such beauty. Jin Seyeon felt her confidence vanish and glanced at Cheok Jungyeong. He had no regard for manners as he stared at Vassago. Jin Seyeon pinched him, but that didn't do anything against all his muscles.

"I liked it a lot."

Vassago finally spoke.

"What did you like?" Jin Seyeon carefully asked. The devil smirked and tapped twice on her new throne. Black Lotus had made this chair, which Cheok Jungyeong gave to her.

"This chair. I liked it a lot."

Vassago seemed truly satisfied. Jin Seyeon nodded while holding back a sigh of relief.

"I'm glad to hear that."

"Is it true you own a lot of these things?"

"It's true, Lord Vassago. Why don't you negotiate with us? Earth has an artisan who can make items much more valuable than that chair."

Jin Seyeon seriously spoke, but Vassago only shrugged.

"Why should I negotiate when I can just kill all of you and take the artisan for myself?"

Jin Seyeon expected such an objection and immediately countered.

"Then the artisan would refuse to work for you."

“That’s a fair argument, but what if I just threaten to kill him? Isn’t death what you mortal beings fear most?”

“Baal is trying to destroy the world anyways. The artisan knows Baal will kill him even if you don’t.”

“Hahaha...”

Vassago smiled. Devils didn’t exactly have a hierarchical relationship. Baal ranked first and Vassago ranked third, but they possessed almost equal influence.

“Don’t underestimate me. I can freely collect whatever I want regardless of Baal.”

Vassago stood from her throne and Cheok Jungyeong scanned her from head to toe. No human would dare to judge her extraterrestrial beauty.

“Ohhh...”

Cheok Jungyeong admired out loud. This upset Vassago and she sat down again.

“Your strategy was quite good. I am indeed a devil who likes to collect.”

Vassago pulled out an accessory. This ring hadn’t been made by Black Lotus, but by a different craftsman from another dimension. She stared at the ring and its beauty mesmerized her.

“Collecting beautiful things is more important than my life.”

“Than your life?”

Jin Seyeon frowned. The devil revealed her weakness so easily, which puzzled the hero.

“Yes, it’s a high-end hobby among devils. Low ranking devils think murder and destruction are the only forms of entertainment, but nobles like me are different. I don't necessarily enjoy violence unless someone is too arrogant."

Jin Seyeon's face suddenly distorted.

"Then what about Baal? He's—"

"Baal's just like me in a sense. He likes to collect worlds, but I'm different. My hobby is collecting beauty. So..."

Vassago paused and stared at them.

"I am willing to negotiate, but under one condition. You must offer an accessory that I won't grow tired of for at least 100 years. Something that will fill me with joy just by looking at it."

Vassago crossed her legs as she declared. A moment of silence filled the room. Jin Seyeon swallowed her saliva and Cheok Jungyeong yawned.

"What will you do if you like our gift?"

Jin Seyeon broke the silence and asked. Vassago lightly smiled at them.

"This incarnation body will probably last 100 years. I will stay here during that time without causing any harm to Earth."

"Here... you mean the colosseum?"

"Yes, I'll wait for challengers at the colosseum for the next 100 years. I'll even offer them entertainment and rewards. After all, my warehouse is crawling with valuable weapons. Then I'll return to the transcendental realm without any hesitation when this body dies."

The proposal sounded too good to be true. Perhaps the best they could obtain from negotiating. Jin Seyeon and Cheok Jungyeong looked at each other and she slowly nodded.

“We accept.”

“Good, I’ll give you 3 days. I won’t cooperate with Baal in the meantime.”

“Pardon? Three days is too short!”

The pressing deadline appalled Jin Seyeon, but Vassago seemed adamant. Then Cheok Jungyeong came forward.

“By the way, devil...”

“Devil?”

Vassago frowned at his insolent remark and Cheok Jungyeong widely grinned.

“Our duel is still happening, right?”

He didn’t intend on giving up. Magic power sparked around him from his determination to fight.

“Huh...”

Vassago blankly stared at him. However, a gentle smile soon replaced her dumbfounded expression. That meant she also agreed to fight.

* * *

[Russia – Vladivostok]

Vual looked at his army made up of soldiers who served him since the demon realm. His mighty army should’ve been able to wipe out these weaklings without a sweat, yet...

“...”

The devil couldn’t believe the scene unfolding before him. He stared ahead in a daze and couldn’t discern reality from illusion.

Kwaaaaaa!

A magic power beam spewed out from the enemy's palms and swept the battlefield. It burned every demon in its path alive.

Vual's army poured their demonic energy against the enemy. Their huge ball of energy flew towards him and shook the heavens and earth. However, the enemy easily absorbed their energy ball and returned it with even greater strength.

Chwaaaaa!

He fired a ki blast and scattered the soldiers into ashes.

A third of Vual's army had been wiped out in only 5 minutes. The enemy kept releasing an enormous amount of magic power, but didn't seem to grow tired at all. He overpowered the entire army by himself. Still, the devil refused to admit it. How could such a lowly being defeat his army?

"You—!"

Vual shouted and couldn't bear the humiliation any longer. His wrath shook the earth and stopped all movement on the battlefield. Orden turned to Vual.

"Who are you?" Vual asked.

His eyes turned bloodshot and his body shook with rage. The transcendent devil had a worse temper than most humans. Orden pitied him.

"I said who are you!"

The devil's cry tore apart the atmosphere.

"I don't remember allowing you to ask questions," Orden nonchalantly replied.

“W-what? How dare you speak like that. You hybrid—”

Vual couldn't accept this nonsense and no longer endured the enemy's insolence. His extreme rage overtook him.

"Devil, I have a question for you."

Orden continued and ignored Vual's anger.

"You introduced yourself as a devil, so I'm sure you've lived a long time."

A devil lived for hundreds and thousands of years. Had the devil ever seen any other existences like him in all those years?

"Have you ever seen anything like me?"

Orden wondered and asked, but the devil didn't seem willing to answer. Vual could no longer think or reason. They called him the devil of wrath for a reason. His rage had already consumed him.

“Groak, pril, ashack!”

Vual uttered some strange words and released his demonic energy. A massive wave split the earth in half and flew like a dragon towards Orden. The monster king simply countered it with his fist.

Chapter 350

Pieces (1)

Not much changed after Eren pledged allegiance to Prihi. He continued training like usual and Puharen never appeared. Only one change occurred. A small pill would find its way to Eren every night.

Prihi kept her promise and ordered a servant to deliver daily medicine for Eren's master. He felt deeply grateful as he gave this medicine to his teacher. His master gradually recovered every day and Eren rapidly grew.

The boy could now compete against an adult. Of course, his opponents used a wooden sword while he used a real one. Those days felt like the happiest.

Eren came home after his usual training and delivered the medicine to his master. They shared a rather pleasant conversation and he returned to his room.

“Huaaa...”

He sat in a chair and looked outside the window. Suddenly, he felt a sense of fulfillment. Some would describe it as joy and he placed his hand on his chest with a smile.

“Ah, right.”

Eren recalled the nuns who had cared for him now that everything had settled. He took out a piece of paper and a pen to write, so they wouldn't worry.

[To: The Temple of Kterin]

Hello, this is Eren. How are you? Master and I are well. The royal palace is so big and amazing. I get to eat on time and my sword skills are improving too. I feel happy every day, but sometimes it hurts when I think about all of you. I miss you very much... Today, I received a stipend. They don't usually pay the squires, but I think they gave it to me because I worked hard. I'm sending it to the temple because I have no use for it. Please use it well. I'll keep the letters coming. Thank you for everything.

May the Lord's grace always be with you.

Eren sealed the letter in an envelope with 2 gold coins that he received from Prihi as a stipend. The bottom of the envelope felt considerably thicker because of the coins.

“Huhu...”

He looked at it in satisfaction and stayed like that for a while until a scarlet light penetrated his window. The light seemed to be the size of a firefly, but quickly grew as it passed through the window and shone on him.

“...?” He tilted his head and looked out the window.

“What the...”

An army of soldiers stood with torches in their hands in the royal garden. They appeared fully armed and hostile as they trampled on the grass and flowers.

Eren quickly grabbed his sword and stood up.

“Ah?”

However, he paused when he saw the small figure at the center of the army.

Eren and his master's benefactor, Prihi, stood there.

Orden woke up in a cave.

He saw the light from a lamp faintly swaying over the stone ceiling. He couldn't grasp the situation yet, but it felt like when he first gained intelligence. The fact that he still lived confused him.

— Kururu. Kururu.

He heard Kurukuru's voice and slowly turned. Kurukuru knelt beside him.

— Kururu...

The servant apologized and felt guilty for disobeying the king's orders by reviving him. However, the humanoid monster did not regret his decision. Kurukuru prepared to die and even take his own life if the king wished.

“...”

Orden silently stared at Kurukuru and read his servant's memories. All that Kurukuru had done over the years slowly seeped into him.

Kurukuru had traveled all over the world to save him. He did everything he could to obtain the ingredients for spirit medicine such as ginseng, herbs, ores, and seagrass. Sometimes, he even stole from others.

Kurukuru severed the Kraken's leg, broke into the Tower of Heroes, pulled out an ancient dire wolf's tooth, and purchased a basilisk's skin. He crossed mountains, seas, jungles, deserts, and dove into boiling magma. He lost his arms, became blind, and his antennae burned away. None of that mattered though. He only wanted to save his king. The servant would give his life if they could be together again.

“...”

Orden finished absorbing Kurukuru's memories and looked over himself. He still looked bigger than an average human, but slightly smaller than three humans combined now. His horns, which he managed with care, had also disappeared. However, he didn't feel too heavy because of this.

Orden stood up without a word and walked with his stiff legs. The soil beneath his feet felt soft since Kurukuru had taken good care of the cave.

He stepped outside and the dazzling blue sky greeted him. The sun poured down and the clouds and moon struck a beautiful harmony.

He stood absolutely still and felt the nature around him: the salty wind, the rolling waves, the rustling leaves, and the golden sand. His senses captured everything.

“This is strange.”

A chuckle escaped his lips. He had never looked so closely at nature. It never interested him before. He only ever fought and killed as he searched for the meaning of his existence.

Tap, tap.

Quiet footsteps approached.

Tap, tap.

Kurukuru, his only servant, stood beside him. Orden didn't turn to face his servant and Kurukuru remained silent as well. The two monsters only stood and looked at the horizon together. They stayed like that for a while to make up for their time apart.

— Kuaaaa, kuaaaa.

Orden had come back to life for some time now. A strange sound disturbed his recollection as he gazed at Vladivostok's blue sky.

He lowered his head towards this painful groan. Vual, the devil who arrogantly attacked him, now lay on the ground. His arms had been severed, but he still had one leg left. However, it folded at a strange angle. His blood and organs also poured out from his torn stomach.

Vual had completely lost. His army seemed to cover Earth's entire surface at one point, but they had all been annihilated. Orden had destroyed the devil's army by himself.

— You, you insolent fool... How dare you...

Vual still refused to surrender. Orden saw his old self in Vual's bloodshot eyes and angry gestures.

He felt ashamed and wanted to teach this transcendent being what he had learned. Suddenly, he realized they might be quite similar regardless of how long they each lived.

Orden looked down at Vual and spoke.

"I feel sorry for you. You don't have to desire so much. That will put your mind at ease."

— Shut your mouth!

Vual spat at him, but the mixture of blood and saliva never reached its target.

— You, I'll remember you! I'll kill you no matter what! Even if I die here... I'll definitely...

"People live because they're alive. You don't need any deeper meaning."

— Shut up! Shut up! You...

Orden swung his fist. Crack! The devil's head exploded and Orden turned around. He no longer saw himself as a king, so he didn't feel the need to teach someone unwilling to learn.

Orden sighed at the sky. The forest's stillness surrounded him and his gaze traveled to the artificial wall standing tall amidst the green nature. He stared towards the very top.

“G-Guardian...”

“Mighty guardian!”

“He’s the guardian of Vladivostok!”

The humans who saw Orden began shouting. He looked away in embarrassment.

“Guardian God!”

“What an honor! We praise you!”

The fervent cheering continued. Orden felt surprised that this pleased him as he stood next to Kurukuru. Then the monsters returned to their dwelling.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait – Underground Facility]

I wore my [Black Lotus Uniform] and arrived at the underground facility where they stored the [Dimensional Entropy].

“I found a way to reverse the current situation.”

Yoo Yeonha said as I showed up. I decided to hide for the time being and listen to their conversation.

"We need to transmit as much energy as possible to the Tower of Wish. Is there a way?"

"I'm skeptical. [Dimensional Entropy] is quite powerful, but also difficult to control. Even now, we're barely keeping it under control with state-of-the-art stabilizers. It's too risky to release this kind of energy all at once."

Each of the researchers expressed their ideas. The nine of them here might be the brightest people on the planet.

“Can’t you find a way? We should be able to pull it off at least once if we raise the output level to the max.”

“What if the machine breaks? The whole planet could be destroyed.”

I approached in the middle of their heated debate.

“Oi.”

“Uaaaak!”

The researchers screamed at the top of their lungs. I could see their hair standing on end. Even Yoo Yeonha seemed surprised and swallowed her saliva.

“Don’t worry about the stability. I’ll help you out.”

I announced with a smile.

I possessed multiple gifts and abilities that could increase a machine’s output: stigma, the [Random Consolidation System], and [Constraints and Amplifications]. However...

“W-who is this guy? I-identify yourself!”

“How did you get in here?”

The researchers clung to each other and pointed at me. I found the way these middle-aged researchers screamed quite funny.

“C-Chief Officer! Please do something! W-w-who is this man?”

“Haaa...” Yoo Yeonha sighed as she glanced over my outfit.

“It’s okay. He’s on our side.”

“Our side?”

“Yes, I’m sure you’ve all heard of him. This is Black Lotus.”

“...”

They suddenly froze when Yoo Yeonha announced my name. She spoke again after the absolute silence.

“It’s okay. He’s our ally.”

“...”

They still felt skeptical despite her encouragement. I stepped forward with no other choice.

“The plan will proceed as discussed. I’ll take care of the stability issue.”

I approached the machine and reached out towards the heart where they placed the [Dimensional Entropy].

“U-um, be, be careful.”

They worriedly remarked. I smiled at them and activated the [Random Consolidation System].

Wiing—

The machine emitted a loud noise and the number 48 flashed at its center. 48%. Truly a tremendous amplification. I turned to the researchers and their jaws dropped in surprise. These top experts must’ve realized the machine became completely different from before.

“Now, let’s connect Crevon and Earth with this.” I glanced at Yoo Yeonha.

She nodded and came over. “Should I activate it now?”

“Yeah.”

“Okay. Come on, everyone! We don’t have time!”

They came to their senses as Yoo Yeonha clapped. Everyone quickly headed to the control room and began typing on computers for about 2 minutes.

Wooooong...

The machine started to vibrate and energy from the [Dimensional Entropy] concentrated into a single point.

Guooooo...

Its resonance shook my skull.

Koong!

I heard another noise from above and detected hostile footsteps. Black water dripped from the ceiling.

“It’s the enemy.”

I warned Yoo Yeonha.

“Right, monsters must’ve sensed the entropy.”

She guessed and quickly grabbed her whip. I kept my composure and turned to Spartan.

— Pururu.

He understood with just a look and quickly disappeared.

— Kuaaaaa

— Guaaaaa

— Humans are down below! Kill the humans!

— Curse the mortals!

The monsters' howling filled the building along with the machine's rumbling, but we had nothing to worry about.

Jiing—

A blue portal appeared next to me after Spartan left for about 10 seconds.

“Did you call for reinforcements?” Yoo Yeonha noticed the portal and pouted.

“I did.” I smiled at her.

Shadows in different colors rose from the portal and soon took their original forms.

“Let me introduce them.”

They existed as one and many at the same time because you ultimately ended up with black if you combined all their colors.

“We're the Chameleon Troupe.”

Seat of yellow, Jain. Seat of blue, Khalifa. Seat of green, Jin Yohan. Seat of violet, Droon. Seat of Indigo, Yoo Kyunghwan. Seat of silver, Kaita. Seat of turquoise, Setryn. Seat of brown, Hirano Arashi. And the seat of white, Boss.

Every Chameleon Troupe member had arrived except for Cheok Jungyeong.

Chapter 351

Pieces (2)

Prihi incarcerated Puharen overnight and killed her other siblings who murdered her mother. She executed most of their servants and knights or exiled them. Her reformation had been swiftly and cruelly carried out.

Eren found himself alone after all the chaos. The knights who taught him swordsmanship no longer remained because they supported Puharen.

However, Eren had chosen a different path. He swore an oath to serve Prihi and betrayed Puharen. Of course, he made several excuses like wanting to save his master, not knowing the ways of the world, and being young. The knights he read about in fairytales never fought in wars. Most importantly, he never thought a young princess like Prihi could commit such cruelty.

Eren spent that first night tormented by worries and guilt.

However, Prihi visited him the next day.

“This kingdom is now mine, so practice your sword without any worries.”

She reassured him with a tap on the shoulder.

Eren became Prihi’s knight and his troubles began then. Prihi held a swordsmanship tournament after seizing the crown to encourage her knights. Of course, Eren participated and won. Her most loyal servant, Kinspring, praised him and even rewarded him with luxurious armor and a sword.

Eren wanted to tell his master about his achievements. However, something unexpected greeted him when he returned. His master had died with a dagger protruding from his chest. He had clearly been murdered.

The dagger carried Puharen's insignia. They had punished him for his betrayal and he collapsed to his knees. His legs went numb and sorrow filled his heart. Eren embraced his master's dead body and cried until he fell asleep from exhaustion.

Meanwhile, Prihi watched this scene from a distance.

— Heroes all over the world are fighting djinns and devils. They need your support!

“...!”

Jin Sahyuk opened her eyes as an anchorwoman spoke on TV. She felt a severe headache from her returning memories and pressed her temples.

“What a shitty dream.”

She kept seeing Prihi's memories and the story of Akatrina and Kim Suho.

“Huuu...”

Jin Sahyuk shook her head and raised herself. The anchorwoman's voice rang out again.

— We have an update! Chae Joochul and Heynckes are supposedly fighting the rank 1 devil, Baal.

She turned towards the TV and watched.

“What?” Jin Sahyuk finally realized the situation and found herself on asphalt in the middle of an abandoned street.

“Tsk...”

Something big must've happened. She clicked her tongue. Kwang! A thunderous noise rang out from a distance when she stood up.

“...!”

She froze when she saw Morax, the giant devil that destroyed Akatrina.

The devil wore Puharen's face and stomped on the world again with its huge hands and feet.

* * *

[Korean Border]

Baal stared at Kim Suho charging towards him. The youth's eyes remained steady and a golden sword shone in his hand. Baal recognized him as a special existence even in Bell's memories.

The man beloved by the world. The so-called main character.

Baal reached out towards him.

“Uuk!”

Kim Suho came to a stop as Baal's authority constrained his movements. No ordinary human could withstand this pressure.

“Keuk...”

Even the main character couldn't do anything. Kim Suho unleashed his magic power and writhed, but couldn't free himself from the invisible shackles.

Meanwhile, Baal laughed as he watched Kim Suho squirm like a worm.

“Everything will be torn to shreds!”

Aileen's Spirit Speech rang out and Baal turned to the tiny woman.

“Die! Die!”

She shouted at the demons on the ground. Other famous heroes also fought those demons with all their might.

The Wolf of Valhalla Yoo Sihyuk, Immortal Chae Joochul, Steel Spirit Heynckes, Blitzkrieg Yoo Jinwoong, Conqueror Shin Jonghak, Hellfire Yi Yongha, Elementalist Rachel...

Baal recognized all of them thanks to Bell's memories. He knew everything about these characters and found it all quite funny. He condescendingly looked at their futile struggle, but also found them pitiful.

His feelings and their wills had all been made up. Baal felt the anger boiling inside him again and clenched his fists.

Kwaaaaaa!

A huge magic power sword shot up towards the sky and almost reached Baal's feet. The sword didn't hurt him, but succeeded in cutting the hem of his clothes. Baal furrowed his brows and looked down.

“Get down from there, you bastard!”

A girl angrily waved her fist around. He instantly recognized her as Chae Nayun and couldn't help but chuckle.

Baal tried to constrain Chae Nayun as he did with Kim Suho.

Tzzzt—

Two magic powers clashed and sparks crackled in the air. A sword strike slashed across Baal's chest.

“...!”

Baal felt a sharp pain and looked at his bloody chest. Then he turned towards where the sword strike came from. There, he saw Kim Suho aiming at him. He had escaped the shackles without Baal noticing and Misteltein shone a brilliant gold. It seemed Kim Suho had severed Baal's authority with only his sword.

“How?”

Baal grew curious, but soon arrived at an answer. Honestly, he didn't even need to think about it. Kim Suho was the main character and he was just the final villain.

Rage filled him again. He couldn't help but wonder if everything that happened simply followed a script.

“—!”

Baal roared and drew another pentagram in the air.

More demons appeared after the second pentagram and a huge army descended from the demon realm.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait – Underground Bunker]

The Chameleon Troupe instantly gathered. I shrugged somewhat proudly while looking at them. We spent several years together, but I personally called them for the first time today.

“Where are we?”

Kaita and Yoo Kyunghwan curiously looked around.

“Ah, that must be that [Dimensional Entropy].”

“Looks like it.”

Jain and Setryn walked towards the [Dimensional Entropy]. The Chameleon Troupe's only magician, Hirano Arashi, also showed interest.

“...”

I kept my eyes on Boss.

“Are you okay?” I asked as I looked into her eyes hidden under her hood.

Boss silently nodded and glanced at Yoo Yeonha standing next to me. She looked somewhat bothered and Yoo Yeonha must've felt it too.

“Cough, hello. I'm Yoo Yeonha.”

She introduced herself, but Boss only looked back and forth between us. We didn't have time to waste as the black water droplets from the ceiling bubbled up and formed a figure.

— Crayoghoak!

A 5 meter figure appeared with a muscular physique. Its oval face only had eyes and a mouth.

— Craaaaaa!

It opened its mouth and roared.

The Chameleon Troupe curiously looked at the creature. It roared again and showed its shiny black teeth. I smirked and murmured.

“It must be some kind of liquid monster.”

I checked its information with [Observation and Reading].

[Rank 72 Devil – Andromalius]

My smile immediately disappeared. Rank 72. It ranked last, but a devil still showed up.

“I guess so. Don’t you think this guy’s teeth look kind of pretty? Almost like obsidian. I can have them, right? Can you make me a necklace with them?”

Jain grinned and took out her dagger. Setryn also joined her.

“Give me half. I want one too.”

— Drgonak kazhack!

The liquid monster shouted again.

“I’ll make whatever you want. Just make sure to capture it for me.”

“Okay.”

I left it to the Chameleon Troupe and used [Constraints and Amplications] on the [Dimensional Entropy].

Koooong!

The machine shook again after the second amplification.

— Craaaaa!

The liquid monster charged forward, but Boss and Jin Yohan quickly stopped it. Jain and Setryn’s daggers flew out while they tied it down.

We activated the [Dimensional Entropy] amidst this chaos.

* * *

[Korean Border]

“Oi, Chae Joochul.”

Heynckes spoke from behind Chae Joochul, who focused on circulating magic power without looking back. Morax literally stomped from one corner of Korea to another.

“Joochul, that’s enough.”

Heynckes bitterly smiled and looked at the sky that burned a dark red. That’s enough. These two words could be interpreted in two ways. One, they had given it their all. Two, they could no longer stop Morax.

Over 30,000 heroes participated in this battle and the end drew near.

Heynckes and Chae Joochul had lost. They stood a chance when Baal and Morax first descended, but everything changed after Baal’s second summoning. The tides of battle shifted and they couldn’t freely fight in such a location.

— Uaaak!

— Kuaaa!

A massacre broke out around them. The heroes couldn’t withstand Baal’s army because of its sheer numbers.

“I’ll buy as much time as I can.”

Heynckes raised his sword and walked forward. Chae Joochul finally looked at Heynckes, who imbued his steel armor with even more magic power.

“Deal with the army however you can. You have to save your granddaughter at the very least.”

— Kuaaak!

Meanwhile, the screams of heroes continued. Blood dyed the ground red and severed limbs lay everywhere like rocks. Chae Joochul gave Heynckes a solemn look.

“This isn’t a matter that can be resolved by retreating.”

“That doesn’t mean we should all die here. If we retreat, a time will come when we can fight back.”

Click— A metallic ringing resounded as Heynckes equipped his helmet.

“Are you not worried about the side effects?” Chae Joochul muttered.

Heynckes smirked at the Immortal’s rare show of worry and gathered his magic power. Chae Joochul furrowed his brows and could tell Heynckes was using every bit of his remaining lifeforce for this final Steel Spirit.

“I’ll take care of this myself. Retreat with the warriors who are still alive...?”

Something strange and mystifying suddenly occurred.

Jiing!

A beam of light shot up from the ground. Soon, more beams appeared.

Shooooo...

The brilliant light broke through the battlefield and traveled into the sky.

“What’s...”

All the demons and heroes momentarily paused at the curious light.

Everyone simply stared and something else appeared from within the light a few seconds later.

Guoooo...

An engine erupted from the sky and a huge shadow covered the entire wilderness where the battle took place. All the heroes looked up.

— This is Genkelope. We have arrived according to the commander's orders. Now commencing support fire.

The [Genkelope Vessel], a spacecraft beyond Earth's capabilities, appeared in the clouds.

Chapter 352

Pieces (3)

[Paris, France]

Astaroth's barrier around Madrid had been lifted. As many feared, he came out with a powerful army and reached Paris in no time.

Ah Hae-In traveled there to stop him, but Paris had already been reduced to ruins when she arrived. His army trampled the city and slaughtered numerous humans. The victims endlessly screamed and heroes became helpless against the devil.

Ah Hae-In bit her lip at the sight of her former hometown. Anger surged in her heart as she witnessed the brutality. I'm glad I didn't bring Evandel. She thought to herself. However...

Hiiing!

A unicorn suddenly cried out. It had brought Ah Hae-In here at Evandel's command and shuddered at the horrible scene. Evandel had ignored her master's warning and shared the unicorn's vision.

"Evandel!" Ah Hae-In shouted at her.

The unicorn trembled and sank to the ground after Evandel cut off her connection.

"Damn it."

Evandel's spirit beasts felt their master's agitation and lost control. They threw themselves at the devil's army. Everyone turned their attention to Ah Hae-In and she had no choice but to summon her beasts.

The azure dragon and the black turtle, two of her most adored summons, responded to her call.

— I-it's Duchess Ah Hae-In!

— The reinforcements are here!

The azure dragon flew in the sky while the black turtle occupied the ground. The French heroes noticed the cardinal beasts and cheered. The all-out war between the beasts and devil began.

Kwang!

The spirit beasts and demons violently clashed. Explosions occurred everywhere and the cries of spirit beasts mingled with the screams of demons. The situation didn't favor humans as the spirit beasts lost their chain of command and went berserk.

“Evandel!”

Ah Hae-In sent Evandel a mental transmission, but she didn't reply. The cruel war had been too much for the young girl. Some of the spirit beasts that felt Evandel's agitation left the battlefield thinking she might be in danger.

“Evandel! Hang in there, Evandel!” Ah Hae-In shouted.

The air suddenly stretched and every sound slowly faded. Ah Hae-In could feel the particles moving in the atmosphere. It felt quite strange, so she stopped to look around. The world slowed like her senses and the spirit beasts froze with their claws pointed forward. The rays of demonic energy also froze in the air.

“It seems this has become quite the trouble.”

A voice flowed into her ears and she turned around in surprise.

“Ah?”

Ah Hae-In widened her eyes at the old man with thick gray hair and deep eyes.

“You’re...”

She recognized him and felt his magic power before. She would never forget such a pure and marvelous power. Oh Jaejin had arrived, the world’s first and last 10 star magician and a member of the Nine Stars.

“It’s been a while.”

Oh Jaejin faintly smiled. Ah Hae-In became speechless. They first met 20 years ago at a magic tower. Oh Jaejin led the Seoul magic tower back then when she couldn’t even control the simplest magic yet.

One day, he suddenly left. The grand magician had always been known for his peculiar behavior. Everyone thought he would return, but he never did. The first and last grand magician disappeared from the world.

“Grand Magician Oh Jaejin”

Ah Hae-In couldn’t believe her eyes. Oh Jaejin hadn’t publicly appeared in years despite the shocking rumors that he suffered from dementia or had been castrated. However, he now appeared in front of the devil’s army.

“Yes, it’s good to see you too, Ah Hae-In.”

“Pardon? Ah, of course. H-how did you get here? N-no, actually, what have you been d-doing u-u-until now?”

Ah Hae-In couldn’t speak properly. Nevertheless, the grand magician replied with a smile.

“A young man came to see me a few months ago. He told me he needed my help.”

Kim Hajin’s medicine had cured his dementia, but it took a long time to reclaim the magic he lost over the years. He also had a difficult time persuading his wife who always worried too much.

“I was hiding because I needed a little more time, but that’s all in the past now. Move over. I’ll deal with him.”

Oh Jaejin walked past her and she looked at his back. The old man’s back felt as big as a tower.

He held a long tree branch like a cane and lightly shook it. The world stopped. Everything except Ah Hae-In and Oh Jaejin ceased to move. This mesmerized her. She couldn’t help but admire such astonishing skill. Oh Jaejin, the 10 star magician, defied logic and nature to create a miracle. He could control the expressions in time. In other words, every movement in the world.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait – Underground Facility]

I also activated [Buster Call] at the same time as the [Dimensional Entropy]. Stigma hadn’t fully recovered, but I summoned the Genkelope Vessel through overclocking.

“Are you done?”

Jain asked and I nodded.

Andromalius ranked last, but could still be considered a devil. However... Crunch! Crunch! Droon’s Mimyo currently ate it alive.

“Don’t overdo it, Mimyo. You might get a stomachache later.”

Droon patted Mimyo, who wiggled his ears. It felt quite mind-boggling to see. I bitterly smiled and spoke to Horner.

“Horner, are you there?”

— Yes, sir. Everyone is on standby.

His voice never failed to ease my mind. Moreover, the entire ship and even the soldiers had been greatly upgraded when I checked with my thousand-mile eyes.

“How are things down there?”

— Not so good according to the supercomputer. We’ve detected two powerful devils.

I only summoned the ship 10 seconds ago, but the supercomputer already calculated everything.

I tried to conceal my surprise and replied.

“Got it. We’ll be there.”

— I’ll open the portal.

A portal suddenly appeared in front of me. This technology never failed to amaze me.

— Come in. Your guest is waiting.

“My guest? What guest... Ah.”

I had a rough idea. I just activated the [Dimensional Entropy], so the timing fit.

“Okay, I’ll head over. Protect this place with everyone else.”

I told the Chameleon Troupe members who prepared to follow me.

Currently, the [Dimensional Entropy] became more important than anything else in the world. I needed to leave it in the hands of trustworthy people.

“Why should you have all the fun... Sigh, fine.”

Jain pouted at first, but nodded when Boss glared at her.

“I’ll leave it to you. Yoo Yeonha, follow me.”

“Pardon? Ah... Okay.”

I entered the portal with Yoo Yeonha while Boss looked at us.

[Genkelope Vessel]

I saw the Genkelope Vessel’s name engraved on the ship’s ceiling as soon as I entered the portal.

“Long time no see, sir.”

Horner greeted us with a welcoming smile.

“Long time no see. Ah, this is Yoo Yeonha.”

I introduced her and they shook hands.

“Let’s get moving. We don’t have much time.”

“Yes. Please follow me, commander.”

We followed Horner to the control room and saw the battlefield below.

“Many heroes are currently fighting.”

Horner pointed at Baal and Morax’s locations. The situation didn’t look good even at a glance. It looked more like a one-sided slaughter than a war. The number of monsters and demons hadn’t decreased at all while heroes quickly fell.

“They don’t really care about us, do they? Even though this ship is huge,” I curiously asked.

“We’re currently in stealth mode, so the enemy can’t see us,” Horner replied.

“Really?”

“Yes, we’ve been waiting for your order. Should we proceed?”

Horner looked down at the demons with a sour expression. He burned with anger because his hometown in the Tower of Wish had also been captured by demons.

“Yes, let’s go.”

“Thank you. Genkelope’s soldiers, get ready.”

Horner ordered them when I gave permission. Immediately, the ship lifted its stealth mode and opened its hangar.

Shooong...

Kwaaaaaaa!

Hundreds of fighter jets flew out.

“So this is where you were, Kim Hajin.”

Someone called my name and stood beside me. I knew who had arrived without even looking.

“Yeah, it’s been a while.”

“You bet. I mean... Long time no see. My name is Tomer from the empire.”

She seemed much stronger than the last time we met and wore a luxurious armor and cape.

* * *

[Korean Border]

Shin Jonghak looked up in a daze. A pillar of light rose from the ground and a huge warship appeared in the sky. It began bombing the demons. Not just Shin Jonghak, but many of the heroes couldn't understand the situation.

“Oi.”

A woman approached the dazed Shin Jonghak. He flinched and swung his spear towards her, but she easily blocked it.

“Why?”

He glared at her and asked.

“Why what?”

Jin Sahyuk mysteriously smiled and he frowned.

“Why are you here?”

“Hmm? Ah, it's nothing serious.”

Jin Sahyuk awkwardly scratched her cheek. Honestly, she wanted to run away and escape from Morax. She could easily return to Akatrina with the dimensional stone.

Unfortunately, Morax would never give up on her. He would follow her to Akatrina if she didn't take care of him now. Jin Sahyuk went to Shin Jonghak for this reason.

“Well, do you remember what Bell said about Shin Myungchul leaving you something important?”

Shin Myungchul might lead to a clue that could defeat the devils. Shin Jonghak showed some interest.

“Yeah, he did say that. What about it?”

“Ah, nothing. I just remembered something important.”

“...”

Shin Jonghak grabbed the Conqueror Spear. Jin Sahyuk hadn't said a word yet, but he knew she would insult Shin Myungchul. I'll kill her before she does.

However, Jin Sahyuk placed a hand on his shoulder without a word. He frowned at her hand before scowling at her.

“I think I figured out what Shin Myungchul left you.”

She announced after grabbing his attention.

“What?”

She had a dream today about Eren and Prihi. She regretted those memories from Akatrina and Morax physically manifested from that regret. It felt quite traumatizing, but Jin Sahyuk realized Shin Myungchul's legacy thanks to it.

“Are you serious?” Shin Jonghak suspiciously asked.

“I don't lie, so just shut up and follow me.”

Jin Sahyuk muttered and grabbed him by the shoulder. Then she activated her authority without waiting for his reply.

Shin Jonghak felt like being sucked into something. He opened his mouth, but no sound came out. He also grew nauseous, but couldn't vomit. Around 30 seconds passed in that uncomfortable state.

“...!”

He opened his eyes again. “What, haa, haa. What the hell?”

He looked around while panting, but everything looked pitch-black except for Jin Sahyuk.

“Dammit. Oi! Where the hell am I?”

“Where do you think? We’re inside your mind.”

“What? What does that even? What the hell are you talking about?”

Shin Jonghak grew angry instead of confused. Jin Sahyuk left him alone to vent and looked around the darkness.

“If I’m correct, you’ll soon meet that Shin Myungchul you love so much.”

Chapter 353

Pieces (4)

“...”

Shin Jonghak silently stared at Jin Sahyuk. Her words about meeting Shin Myungchul captivated him more than anything else. Of course, he found it hard to believe.

“You said we’re inside my head?”

He asked the most basic question first. Currently, only darkness surrounded them. Jin Sahyuk claimed this space resided in his mind, but he couldn’t just accept that. Despite his doubts, she nodded without hesitation.

“Yes, I’ve recreated your mind to my liking.”

Reality Manipulation had many applications such as this. Jin Sahyuk observed his mind and recreated it to uncover Shin Myungchul’s legacy within his consciousness. He seemed dissatisfied with the whole setup because of the empty view.

“I for one think this space suits you. It’s pitch-black,” she said with a smirk.

“What did you say?”

A vein popped out from his temple and he almost stumbled back. Several objects rose from the darkness beneath his feet.

“W-what are these?”

These objects represented his ego: Kim Hajin’s sculpture of him, the youngest high rank hero certificate, Xiang Yu’s Conqueror Spear, and even a statue of Chae Nayun. However, the door behind everything held the most significance. The iron gate had his grandfather's name inscribed on it: [Shin Myungchul].

“Follow me.”

Shin Jonghak stood in awe as Jin Sahyuk walked towards the gate. He doubted her intentions and closely followed. He also didn't forget to cover Chae Nayun's statue with his coat so Jin Sahyuk wouldn't misunderstand.

“Hmm... Myungchul. Don't you think that's a pretty corny name?”

She banged on the iron gate a few times and looked back at him. He didn't say anything and began pondering his existence. He knew quite well how the public perceived him. They called him the youngest high rank hero, Desolate Moon's vice leader, heir to the Jinsung Corp, and a handsome man who could beat most celebrities in looks. All these descriptions felt good, but Shin Jonghak never forgot his roots. Only he could take pride in being Shin Myunchul's grandson in this vast world.

“Are you saying my grandfather is behind that door?” Shin Jonghak asked. He had several questions as Jin Sahyuk nodded.

“Yes, probably. I think Shin Myungchul sealed a part of his soul in the deepest corner of your consciousness. Just like I did.”

Until recently, Jin Sahyuk's memories of Akatrina had been sealed inside her. She did that on purpose because she didn't think she could face her current life with the burdens from her past life. Thankfully, this experience served as a clue. She suspected Shin Myungchul used a similar method.

“It's not that I trust you, but—”

Shin Jonghak gulped. He doubtfully looked at her and reached out towards the gate. Then he tried to push it open, but it wouldn't budge. His efforts seemed futile even as he groaned.

“Try using your magic power,” Jin Sahyuk interrupted.

He leered at her, but poured his magic power into the gate. It responded and finally moved. Oooong... The iron gate vibrated and smoothly opened like a clam.

Kiik— Koong!

A heavy sound rang out. Shin Jonghak looked at the other side with his feet firmly planted on the ground. He gulped and could feel his heart sink as if something heavy just dropped on top of it.

A man stood on the other side and Shin Jonghak could clearly see him. His shoulders seemed wide as a mountain and he stood straight as a river. His long hair flowed and Shin Jonghak felt a shiver down his spine. The mere sight of that man completely stunned him. Shin Jonghak gulped again and slowly turned to Jin Sahyuk.

“If this is some kind of trick...”

“I told you. It’s not.”

Jin Sahyuk sounded annoyed.

He glared at her one last time before crossing the gate’s threshold. Something strange suddenly happened. The man awkwardly moved like a broken puppet. Then he slowly raised his head and their gazes met. A barely visible smile spread across the man’s face. Shin Jonghak felt as if his body had been set on fire.

Shin Myungchul, the hero who left an everlasting impression on him, stood there.

* * *

[Chancellor of Germany’s Private Bunker]

Valac’s army devastated Eastern Europe and finally reached Germany. Two devils had attacked Europe: Astaroth in the west and Valac in the east. Astaroth destroyed Paris and Germany didn’t stand a chance against Valac. As a result, the devils took complete control of Europe.

“We’re at our limit. Berlin can’t hold out any longer.”

Jenes, the Chancellor of Germany, pitifully announced. His hands trembled as he sent the footage of Berlin’s defense barrier to Yi Gongmyung.

—...

Yi Gongmyung carefully studied the footage. As Supreme Commander, he had to map out a strategy that could lead to victory.

— It’s coming down.

He didn’t have much to say. The demons would soon break through Berlin’s defense. Their army swiftly ravaged Poland to arrive at Berlin. The defense barrier, a product of cutting-edge magic engineering, would soon crumble.

“Can we at least evacuate the people?” Jenes asked.

Yi Gongmyung shook his head. The enemies had seized both the east and west. That meant the citizens couldn’t travel by land and billions of people couldn’t evacuate through portals. They had run into a dead end.

“What do you expect me to do then!” Jenes shouted and began to tear up. The guilt from not being able to save his people weighed heavily on his heart. Yi Gongmyung could only sigh.

— Please hold on for a little longer. There’s not much we can do right now. Baal, Morax, and a third devil have also invaded Korea. I’m afraid the situation here isn’t so good either, but I’m sure we’ll come up with something...

The chancellor clenched his teeth. Despair and disappointment replaced the rage in his heart. He thought about the current situation again. Currently, he resided in an underground bunker in Korea. Germany’s commander-in-chief, along with his cabinet members, had abandoned their people and evacuated to a foreign country. It felt hypocritical to worry about the people he left behind.

“I understand...”

The screen that showed Berlin suddenly turned white as the chancellor spat out words of resignation. Then he widened his eyes.

“W-what’s going on?”

He exclaimed in German. It didn’t take long to understand what just happened. The end had finally arrived and the demons had succeeded in destroying Germany.

“...”

Jenes closed his eyes and clenched his fists. The cabinet ministers inside the bunker reacted similarly. The white screen slowly faded and the blinding light disappeared. Berlin reappeared, but the scene looked different from before. They suddenly heard a strange voice from the speaker.

— The time has come for us to strike.

Jenes’ jaw dropped in awe.

— The time has come to show our bravery and recover our homeland.

The voice resounded and soldiers in uniform appeared beyond the barrier. These soldiers seemed even more unrealistic than the demons occupying Germany.

— We shall advance and slay evil without hesitation.

They couldn’t comprehend the scene unfolding before them.

“Commander?”

Jenes called out to Yi Gongmyung with his gaze still locked on the screen. The supreme commander didn’t respond because he had been observing several countries besides Germany. The soldiers who arrived in Germany only represented a fraction of their numbers. Rays of light descended across the world and reinforcements from another dimension arrived. These soldiers from Crevon possessed unimaginable strength and came to fulfill their promise. Jenes recognized the man at the front.

“C-Commander! Ki Parang, Ki Parang is here!”

Jenes pointed at the man in front of the army. Even Jenes had heard of him because celebrities inside the tower also became celebrities outside. Yi Gongmyung finally replied while looking at the soldiers on the screen.

— Yes, I see him.

“What does this mean?” Jenes urgently asked, but Yi Gongmyung remained silent. The soldiers began to advance and Ki Parang’s sword slashed out waves of magic power. The crowd cheered when they saw his attacks devouring the demons.

— Ki Parang, Kim Yusin, Gwanchang... Most of them are elite knights from Crevon. I’m having trouble grasping the situation myself, but it seems luck is on our side. Chancellor, please assist them as much as you can.

Yi Gongmyung announced and Jenes turned to the battlefield. Their commander seemed to be Kim Yusin, who currently swung his sword. The magic power from his blade formed thousands of human figures. These magic soldiers formed an army of their own and moved according to Kim Yusin’s command. They protected the German heroes and attacked the demons.

“...”

The chancellor clenched his fists as he watched. These reinforcements had turned the tables and overpowered the demons. He ordered his men to assist Crevon’s army as much as possible. A glimmer of hope began to bloom in the hearts of people all over the world.

* * *

[Genkelope Vessel]

I postponed my meeting with Tomer because of the dire situation. We headed to the control room with a huge holographic screen that displayed the heroes from Crevon.

Tomer snapped her fingers and proudly announced.

"China has Lü Bu and Zhang Liao. Japan has Musashi. Kim Yusin and Ki Parang are in Germany and Lancelot has arrived in the U.S. My soldiers and the imperial army amount to approximately 200,000 soldiers."

"That many?"

Their numbers surprised me. I only roughly described these historical figures in the original novel and never thought they would actually appear.

"Yes, a lot of them have been living in hiding in Crevon. They offered to help when I explained the situation."

"Oh..."

I looked at the screen. Musashi Miyamoto, Lü Bu, Lancelot, and Silla's Hwarangs currently fought on the battlefield. All of them used to live on Earth and their souls revived in the tower after death. Now, they slaughtered the devils and demons to protect their former home.

"What do you think? Should we sit back and relax?" Tomer shrugged with a relaxed expression.

"No." I shook my head. This still might not be enough. We needed even more for the final battle against Baal. I decided to finally use my secret weapons.

"You should go help Suho for now."

"Suho? Kim Suho?"

"Yeah."

“And what do you plan to do?”

I smiled and took out a card from my pocket. I could only secure one copy even with my superhuman luck.

“What’s that?” Tomer tilted her head.

“It’s a 9 star card. You know, from the Card Kingdom.”

“9 stars?”

Tomer frowned as if doubting my words. Apparently, cards had become quite famous in Crevon. They even established a direct trade route to the Card Kingdom after taking control of the 9th floor.

“How is that even possible? The most our Empress could get were two 8 star cards.”

I showed her the 9 star card to resolve her doubts and her eyes immediately widened.

[Legend on the Mural] [Individual] [9 star] Effective Good ● A legend will manifest to assist you.

“Woah, is that for real? Hey, come on. Hand it over. Let me take a look.”

“No way.”

Tomer reached out, but I didn’t intend on giving it to her and hid it away.

“Oh, come on! Just give me one peek.”

“Enough.” I held the card with my fingers and injected stigma into it.

“Let’s see what we’ll get.”

The card began to tremble. I let go and it slowly rose into the air.

Paat! It flashed and disappeared.

1 second, 2 seconds, 3 seconds passed, and...

“...?”

“What the hell?”

Tomer and I looked at each other in shock. I blinked in confusion, but she seemed proud to have figured out my trick.

“Aha, I see what’s going on. That card was fake, right?”

“No, it wasn’t.”

Chapter 354

Final Name (1)

Blood soaked the earth under the dark sky. Corpses piled into mountains and intestines scattered on the ground. Baal, the perpetrator, seemed apathetic at the most horrendous massacre in human history. It simply felt like killing ants to him.

KWAAAAA...

Magic power surged and Baal turned to the source. Kim Suho swung his sword, but Baal easily defended with a single hand. Kim Suho persisted even though he couldn't match this transcendent devil.

“—!”

Kim Suho shouted and poured his all into the sword. However, Baal easily parried his blow again. Clang! Demonic energy clashed with the holy sword. Then another sword suddenly slashed between them.

“You bastard!”

Chae Nayun swung her magic sword that became as huge as Morax. She had immensely extended the blade with magic power to reach Baal. The devil stretched his demonic energy into a thin string and simply shattered her sword by destroying its core.

“...”

A smile flickered across Baal's face as Chae Nayun's huge sword disappeared. Now, he could clearly see the ones hidden behind it. Countless heroes, each with unique weapons and powers, charged at Baal. He recognized them: Rachel, Yoo Sihyuk, Yoo Jinwoong, Aileen, Nicholas... Suddenly, he grew tired as he recalled their names and faces.

Baal regretted synchronizing with Bell. These ants wouldn't have bothered him if it weren't for Bell's memories.

He slowed the time around these heroes instead of facing them. Baal carefully observed everyone in this frozen world. They looked determined as if nothing could break their resolve to protect this world. He pondered the concept of a novel as he looked at them.

Would he fall here as fate intended? If so, what did he destroy all those different worlds for? Did he live all these years just for this moment?

“...”

Baal looked at the sky in silence. White specks of dust drifted slowly in the dark. These specks became rays of light that poured towards the earth. Each of these rays represented a portal with reinforcements from another dimension.

Baal bitterly smiled at the scene.

What is this? Has god responded to the humans' prayers? Then where was this god when I destroyed the other worlds?

This kind of contemplation didn't suit a devil. Baal closed his eyes and the world returned to normal.

“Baal...”

Kim Suho called his name and glanced at Morax in the background. Baal blankly stared at Kim Suho and had several questions for the hero.

Do you know where you came from? What if you were just a toy? A doll designed for the sake of entertaining higher beings? Will you still sacrifice your life to kill me?

“...”

Baal didn't ask and Kim Suho never answered. The devil already knew

Kim Suho's answer based on Bell's memories.

— It doesn't matter who I am or what this world is. I'm just protecting the people who are precious to me.

Kim Suho would most certainly say something like that.

“Sir Suho, so this is where you were.”

Crevon's troops lined up behind Kim Suho, who firmly stood with his sword in hand. Most of them consisted of knights, but also some priests and magicians. Kim Suho glanced at them and nodded.

“Very funny.”

Baal scoffed and examined the world before him. Morax still seemed to be in perfect shape and their demonic armies remained. Still, these humans stubbornly resisted. A huge metallic object in the sky bombarded the demons and others who didn't exist in this world descended through rays of light.

— Old man.

Letters suddenly appeared in front of Baal and he recognized the sender as Leraje.

“Where are you?”

— I can't help you.

Baal clenched his teeth.

“Where are you?”

— It wouldn't be a bad idea to withdraw here.

“Don't make me say it again.”

Baal growled and didn't bother hiding his anger.

However, Leraje kept insisting.

— You’ve already lost your castle. Don’t push yourself too hard. Why don’t you just give up this time?

Baal’s castle served as an important medium between the phenomenon realm and the transcendent realm. He no longer possessed infinite demonic energy without his castle and the number of soldiers he could summon decreased as well. His castle had already been destroyed by a certain man.

“Leave.”

Baal cut her off. Vual had already died and Vassago and Leraje had no intentions of cooperating with him. Victory would no longer be guaranteed, but he didn’t intend to stop. Even if he would die here...

“I’ll destroy this world by myself.”

Baal stepped forward with determination. Kim Suho and thousands of others turned to Baal. The devil faced them head-on and transformed into his true form.

Chweeek!

Arrows, spears, and swords pierced the devil’s body. Baal felt more perplexed than pain. These ordinary weapons managed to cut through his demonic energy and wound his flesh. Baal widened his eyes and turned to where the attacks came from. He almost felt astonished by the sight.

“...!”

A magician stood there. Baal knew her name even without relying on Bell’s memory. Shimurin, the grand magician, had somehow appeared.

“How...”

Shimurin didn’t arrive alone. Soldiers from the other world that escaped destruction also came to Earth through Shimurin’s magic.

These soldiers all aimed at Baal with their exorcism weapons.

“Hmm... This world sure is humid.”

Shimurin muttered and stepped forward. Baal remained silent and tried to grasp the present situation. Shimurin had died a long time ago. He had never experienced anything like this in thousands of years.

A voice suddenly flowed into Baal’s ears.

— You brought this on yourself, Baal.

He recognized Vassago’s voice, the rank 2 devil. She continued as if none of this surprised her.

— You regenerated the first world you once destroyed. The only way to overcome the law of causality and descend was to destroy that world again. However, the world you regenerated didn’t end this time. Someone protected that world and now its people are hunting you down.

Baal silently turned to Shimurin and the other humans from the Republic of Leores and the Arunheim Kingdom. He held contradictory feelings towards them. Baal considered them insignificant, but also missed them at the same time. The devil hunter Harin, knight Airun, the magician Shimurin, and the prince once called Krisbell.

A smile spread across Baal’s face as he looked at his old friend.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait’s Underground Bunker – Yoo Yeonha’s Office]

Yoo Yeonha sat in an office full of holographic screens broadcasting live events around the world. Everyone fought the same war under different skies. East Asia, Oceania, America, and Europe... Every continent experienced death and destruction like an infectious disease.

“Focus on saving lives. We have enough food and medicine in the bunker.”

— Roger.

Yoo Yeonha ordered her people while thinking about the war. She continued to perform her duties as Essence of the Strait’s chief officer.

“I think the [Dimensional Entropy] is safe now.”

Yoo Yeonha heard a leisurely voice and slowly raised her head at Jain leaning against the wall.

“We’ve worked pretty hard. Do we get anything?”

Yoo Yeonha frowned. She didn’t mind rewarding them, but Jain’s appearance bothered her. Jain currently looked like Kim Hajin.

“Don’t worry. You’ll receive plenty of rewards.”

“What’s with the sour face?”

“It’s your disguise.”

Yoo Yeonha muttered and Jain smirked. The Chameleon Troupe member slowly approached Yoo Yeonha while disguised as Kim Hajin.

“I said stop. Enough with the jokes.”

Yoo Yeonha blushed as Kim Hajin’s face neared hers.

“What do you think? It’s amazing, right? I mean my disguise. I can even change my voice.”

Jain grinned and caressed Yoo Yeonha’s cheek. Yoo Yeonha gulped at the warm hand that felt like Kim Hajin’s.

— Chief Officer!

A voice suddenly called and Yoo Yeonha pushed Jain away in surprise. Jain clicked her tongue.

“W-w-what?” Yoo Yeonha replied to her worker.

— Please take a look at this.

The informant showed Yoo Yeonha a video of a forest near Vladivostok. Two humans, no two humanoid monsters appeared in it. Her hair stood on end when she recognized them.

“Is this...?”

— Yes.

The informant gravely announced.

— It’s Orden.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha stared at Orden and felt her head painfully throb. Orden pushed through the grass with a clear destination in mind. He headed towards Korea where the battle with Baal currently took place.

“Ah...”

Orden, who used to be humanity’s worst enemy, reappeared at the worst time. He returned to destroy Earth for good. Yoo Yeonha sank to the floor in despair, but Jain simply smirked.

— There’s something strange about them.

Yoo Yeonha couldn’t focus on the words that followed. She thought everything would be over now and barely held on until the news about Orden arrived.

If I’m going to die like this, if everything is going to end... Wouldn’t it be better to say what I want before I’m gone for good?

Yoo Yeonha picked up her smartwatch instead of planting an apple tree.

Chapter 355

The Final Name (2)

Shin Jonghak looked at Shin Myungchul in his consciousness. The time around them seemed to slow. Shin Jonghak controlled this space, so time actually did slow in reality.

Shin Myungchul straightened up and Shin Jonghak stiffened. He missed his grandfather so much. The man who guided his life... His hero stood in front of him, but Shin Jonghak couldn't move or speak. He could only watch Shin Myungchul as if this mirage might disappear at any moment.

— It's been a while.

Shin Myungchul spoke in the same old voice he missed so much. Shin Jonghak stood in a daze like a statue. The grandfather patted his grandson on the shoulder and continued.

— Jonghak, I have a lot to say. First, let me apologize. I'm sorry for being a horrible grandfather.

Shin Jonghak looked him in the eyes. He used to only look up at his grandfather, but now they stood at the same height. Shin Myungchul seemed old, but still graceful and strong at heart. His grandfather continued with a kind smile.

— And... ah, I'm afraid I'm not good with words. What I meant... Jonghak, I've lived inside you for a long time. I've felt and experienced the same things as you.

His voice sounded soft like a grandfather reading bedtime stories. Shin Jonghak felt a torrent of emotions in his heart.

— When I was alive, and even now, your love always distressed me. It's too good for a coward like me.

He didn't dare to tell his grandson the truth. The betrayal Shin Jonghak would feel worried Shin Myungchul more than his own suffering.

— I'm sure you know the truth by now and don't need my explanations. Jonghak, I'm not a hero. Millions have died because of me. I've brought disaster to the world.

Shin Myungchul calmly confessed and Shin Jonghak nodded. I know. Shin Myungchul could hear his grandson's thoughts.

— However, I still harbor a sense of relief in my selfish heart. After all, I would've never met you if I hadn't gone back in time.

Shin Myungchul bitterly smiled.

— That's why I can't truly regret my decision. It would mean denying my love for you.

Shin Jonghak felt tears streaming down his face. Shin Myungchul wiped away his grandson's tears with big and rough hands.

— Jonghak...

Shin Jonghak silently nodded and Shin Myungchul continued.

— Are you happy with who you are?

The two men fell silent and Shin Myungchul kindly smiled. Shin Jonghak nodded after a brief moment, but retracted his answer. It took him a while to admit the truth and shake his head.

— It's good that you've come to terms with it. Always be true to yourself and live without regrets. It's nothing big, but I've left something to help you. Before that, I have a favor to ask.

Shin Myungchul placed a hand on Shin Jonghak's shoulder. His hand weighed heavily on Shin Jonghak, who felt overwhelmed just looking at his grandfather. Shin Jonghak resolved to grant his grandfather's wish no matter what, but didn't expect the words that came next.

— Please, be the one to correct me. Tell the world the truth after everything is over. Tell them it was my selfish greed that almost destroyed the world. You should be the one to do so.

Shin Jonghak began to tremble and widened his eyes. He couldn't believe what he just heard. Shin Myungchul had always been his role model. His grandfather's past didn't matter. He would continue to admire Shin Myungchul because of their memories together. Naturally, Shin Jonghak couldn't imagine a future where Shin Myungchul's name became tarnished.

Shin Myungchul bitterly smiled and placed a hand on Shin Jonghak's head. Then he slowly stroked his grandson's hair like he always did in the past.

— Please, Jonghak. This is my last wish. Of course, you're free to refuse and I'll still give you my legacy. However, I'd really like you to do it.

Those soft words broke Shin Jonghak and tears suddenly welled in his eyes.

“...”

Shin Jonghak clenched his teeth, but tears already ran down his face. His legs trembled and began loudly sobbing. Shin Jonghak lowered his head in embarrassment and sorrow. He wailed miserably like a child and Shin Myungchul stared at his grandson for a long time.

Finally, the boy stopped sobbing and nodded in the empty silence.

* * *

Baal thought back to his youth. It must've been 10,000 or 100,000 years ago. He used to be nothing. A thin film surrounded him and the beating of his existence began inside that film. He could see and feel the world around him. At the time, he hadn't become a devil or Baal yet.

However, he naturally became a devil as time passed. He couldn't recall whether he wanted to be good or evil. It just came to him one day that he existed opposite to good.

He ripped through the film surrounding him with that belief. Immediately, he saw the transcendent realm full of stars. There, he earned the name Baal and learned to think by observing humans in other worlds.

Baal woke from his recollection and sighed. He never wondered about his origins, but had a vague idea of where he came from now.

[Returner Hero] [Views: 3,235,212] [Favorites: 21,325] [Word Count: 1,372,153]

Everything could be traced to a few words and numbers. A crude novel written by a human had caused all his years of solitude.

He recalled the world he saw in Bell's memory. One with no devils where religions could be considered mere beliefs. No magic existed that could affect the laws of physics. Humans dominated every other species. They didn't possess the ability to interfere with abstract concepts. Concepts couldn't exert power beyond the laws of nature. Humans couldn't stop time, which functioned fairly for everyone. This scientific world consisted of thorough calculations and logical rules with no room for magical interventions. Baal considered it quite plain compared to his world. The creator's world full of ordinary beings only had complex laws and principles.

"Hiyaaap!"

A loud shout brought Baal back to his senses. He opened his eyes and looked at the countless humans charging at him. He coldly smiled at their resolute appearances. All of them were nothing but characters in a novel.

Our existences are all in vain.

Baal looked at the distant sky. A huge chunk of metal floated above with Kim Hajin inside, the author who created this world.

He felt a surge of anger. Baal glared at the author and increased his demonic energy. He erupted like a volcano to fully descend. His seething demonic energy covered the entire world, consuming all of nature, and drawing in all the characters into his barrier.

“—!”

Baal roared and vowed to himself once again.

I'll destroy your precious little world. I will no longer remain a mere toy.

His eyes turned crimson as darkness swallowed the world.

* * *

[Genkelope Vessel]

Shimurin appeared exactly 30 seconds later from where the 9 star card disappeared. Did that mean the 9 star card summoned Shimurin? What kind of relationship did she have with the mural? I felt confused and looked at the ground below.

“What the... They're all people from the other world.”

Tomer muttered as she observed the soldiers from Leores and Arunheim. I shrugged and faced her.

“Anyways, you should head down too.”

“You want me to come along?” Tomer raised her eyebrows and doubted whether they needed her help.

“Of course, we need all the help we can get.” I took out the Misteltein bullets from stigma's storage. The four long bullets faintly glowed.

“What are those?” Tomer asked as she glanced at them. I lightly rubbed the bullets before activating [Synthesis].

[Fusing Misteltein bullets...]

The four bullets merged into one when the system message appeared.

I also spent my remaining SP to add the exorcism attribute to this final bullet.

“Whoa, they all became one.”

Like that, I created the ultimate bullet. However, this wouldn't be enough to bring down Baal. Tomer watched the entire process with fervent interest, so I showed her the bullet.

“This should be able to drive Baal into a corner at least once.”

It all came down to timing. When the strength of every hero united, when my luck guided the luck of everyone else, and all the world's power came together... Then I would fire this bullet. The timing would probably be when... KWAAAAANG! A huge explosion occurred and darkness swallowed everything.

“What?” Tomer quickly raised her head, but nothing could be done. The ship's floor immediately sank. No, the ship itself disappeared and the two of us fell from 4000 meters in the air.

“Uaaaaaah...”

Tomer screamed and I quickly summoned Spartan. He appeared like a hero and spread his wings to catch us on his back.

“Oh my god.” Tomer clutched her chest and panted heavily. Even a superhuman like her wouldn't survive a 4000 meter fall.

“...”

I nervously looked around. The Genkelope Vessel, the sky, the trees, and the grass all disappeared. Only endless darkness surrounded us. I discovered some familiar faces when I widened my eyes and looked further. Kim Suho, Chae Nayun, Yun Seung-Ah, Shimurin, Aileen... The sudden change in scenery surprised them too as they tried to comprehend the situation.

“Hey, where are we?” Tomer asked.

I used [Observation and Reading] to find out.

[Baal's Barrier – A space created by Baal for his descent on Earth. It resembles Baal's transcendent realm.]

Well, it seemed Baal had done something crazy.

“We’re inside Baal’s barrier,” I bitterly replied.

“Huh?”

“Looks like Baal brought us here.”

I turned to Tomer, who stared at me and chuckled.

“That means Baal is down there, right?”

“Correct.”

“Okay, well then—” Tomer playfully smiled and rolled up her sleeves. Then she increased her magic power.

“I’ll show you how I earned my nickname, the Ironblood Duchess.”

Her body burned blue. Her eyes, hands, heart, and hair... Azure flames engulfed everything. She looked like the epitome of superhumans only seen in cartoons.

“Okay, then I’ll...”

I nodded and loaded the Mistelin bullet into the Desert Eagle. I felt scared, but pretended to be fine and placed a hand on Tomer’s shoulder.

“Cover you from behind.”

“Cover me?” Tomer seemed dissatisfied for some reason.

“Yeah, I’m a sharpshooter. Remember?”

“Whatever.”

She shook her head and flew away at a speed faster than my bullets.

Chapter 356

Final Name (3)

[Shin Jonghak's Mind]

Jin Sahyuk didn't exactly enjoy watching two grown men cry in each other's arms. Still, she decided not to interfere and didn't want to risk losing Shin Myungchul's legacy.

"Ssp..."

She watched Shin Jonghak wailing like a pig and wondered why he suddenly became such a crybaby. She crossed her arms and waited.

— It's time for me to go.

Shin Myungchul finally announced and Jin Sahyuk sighed in relief. Shin Jonghak shook his head like a baby, but his grandfather seemed resolute.

Shin Myungchul couldn't stay even if he wanted. His soul already began to fade. Shin Jonghak lowered his head and sobbed again when he saw his grandfather's legs becoming dust.

— Jonghak, look at me.

However, Shin Myungchul didn't fear death. He felt more concerned about his grandson than himself and only warmly smiled.

— Think of all the things you'll accomplish as a hero.

Shin Jonghak raised his head and tried to smile, but his face distorted with tears.

"Pfft... Hmph." Jin Sahyuk quickly covered her mouth. She almost burst into laughter because he looked like a squid.

— Jonghak.

Shin Myungchul stroked his grandson's head. Shin Jonghak stared at his grandfather the entire time to remember this moment forever.

— Take care. I'll always believe in you.

Shin Myungchul spoke his last words before scattering into dust. His remains danced in the air and seeped into Shin Jonghak's body.

Shin Jonghak closed his eyes and felt a certain power sinking into him.

"Are you done?" Jin Sahyuk asked.

However, Shin Jonghak didn't reply. He simply stood there and repeatedly breathed in and out to feel Shin Myunchul's legacy. Jin Sahyuk watched him for a while and quietly disabled her authority.

Crack! The sound of something breaking rang out. Shin Jonghak turned to Jin Sahyuk as the space in his mind disappeared.

"Thank you."

"Huh?" She felt genuinely surprised and never expected to hear those words from Shin Jonghak.

"Don't get me wrong. It's not like I did this for you." Jin Sahyuk shrugged.

"Then what's your goal?"

"That's none of your business."

The darkness faded and they returned to the normal world. Then they exchanged glances and stepped forward at the same time. Of course, they headed towards the battle with Baal. Shin Jonghak wanted to correct his grandfather's mistake and Jin Sahyuk wanted to carry out her own plan. Fortunately, they didn't have to travel far.

Guooooo...

Demonic energy swayed in the distance. When Jin Sahyuk noticed it...

Kwaaaaaa!

Baal's energy raged like a storm and drove the entire world into darkness. He swallowed the sky, the earth, and everything in between. They found themselves inside a giant dome filled with an ominous silence.

"Looks like we're inside Baal's barrier."

Shin Jonghak concluded and Jin Sahyuk raised her eyebrows.

"This legacy thing must be something. It's rare for an idiot like you to notice so fast."

"Shut up."

He growled and ran towards the demonic energy's source. Jin Sahyuk dashed after him and they quickly reached the barrier's center. There, Baal finally revealed his true form.

"Whoa... What the hell?" Jin Sahyuk exclaimed in shock and the other heroes reacted similarly.

Baal's body had turned fluid like a sophisticated hologram or a ghost. He didn't look human anymore. Right now, he looked more like a dragon than a devil.

"Huh?"

Jin Sahyuk spotted a familiar face in the crowd and immediately doubted her eyes. He couldn't possibly be there. He couldn't possibly exist anymore. She widened her eyes in astonishment.

“Bell?” she muttered.

The man she had killed, Bell, seemed to be alive. He stood before her very eyes. Jin Sahyuk felt shocked when Bell heard her and turned around. Then he smiled and his lips began to move.

— Hey.

“Hey my ass!”

Jin Sahyuk wanted to run towards him, but...

“—!”

Baal howled in his true evil god form. Demonic energy filled the entire barrier from his single cry.

“Jin Sahyuk, you wait here.”

Shin Jonghak stepped forward and she blankly watched him in a daze. He mistakenly thought she felt overwhelmed by Baal and faintly smiled.

“Don’t worry. This is something I have to do.”

He heroically announced and grabbed the Conqueror Spear.

“It’s also something only I can do.”

Shin Jonghak’s magic power surrounded the spear and his energy felt much denser than before.

“Stay in the back. No, help the others evacuate.”

Jin Sahyuk slowly returned to her senses at his words. She blinked a few times and finally opened her mouth.

“Who do you think you are?”

“What?”

They glared at each other and another hero approached the pair.

“Jin Sahyuk? Shin Jonghak?”

They turned to the voice.

“I didn’t expect to see you two together. So you got caught in this too?”

Kim Suho greeted them and Jin Sahyuk also looked at Chae Nayun standing next to him.

Damn it. She was the last person I wanted to see.

Jin Sahyuk frowned.

Chwaaak!

A woman engulfed in azure flames suddenly burst onto the scene.

“Hmm? Kim Suho? And... Knight Commander Shin Jahyuk too?”

Tomer noticed them and paused.

* * *

I observed Baal far from the battlefield and covered parts of his barrier with stigma.

“Phew...”

Around 30 square meters of the barrier had become mine. This area wouldn’t be affected by Baal’s influence and he shouldn’t be able to detect me even in his transcendent form.

First, I transformed the Desert Eagle into a sniper rifle. Clunk— Kiik—

Kiik— The familiar sound of its mechanical parts rang out. The gun merged with aether and became as tall as a human. Then I settled into an appropriate position and loaded the Misteltein bullet.

— Tap.

Something suddenly touched my shoulder. Even aether failed to detect the mysterious presence. I felt my blood boil and my hair stood on end. However, I didn't panic. Instead, I had to quickly respond to this surprise attack. I surrounded myself with aether and looked back.

"Ugh, you got me there."

Boss appeared from behind and her lips faintly trembled. She clearly enjoyed my reaction. I frowned at her, but she simply shrugged.

"I didn't do anything. You misunderstood on your own."

"Whatever, how did you get here?"

Spartan slowly walked out from behind Boss and brought more people than just her.

"So where exactly are we, Hajin?"

Jain, Jin Yohan, and Hirano Arashi came as well. Jain held a woman who had fainted. I recognized the unconscious person as Yoo Yeonha despite the disheveled hair that covered her face.

"Did every Chameleon Troupe member get caught in this barrier too?"

"Nope. Just me, Boss, Jin Yohan, and Arashi. The others are still outside."

"Mmm... and her?"

"Oh, her?"

I pointed at Yoo Yeonha and Jain lifted her with a playful smirk.

“She passed out. I might’ve gone too far with my prank. Anyways, you should check your smartwatch! This girl sent you quite a long text.”

“Text?”

“Yep, it’s super long.”

I took out my smartwatch as Jain suggested. Indeed, I received a text from Yoo Yeonha. It almost seemed like a novel at first glance. I opened the message and tried to read.

Tap, tap—

Footsteps suddenly rang out and I raised my head. Boss had also been looking at my smartwatch and did the same. We all looked in the same direction and a cold silence immediately descended.

“Byul...”

Yi Yeonjun appeared and softly called Boss’ name.

* * *

[Korea – Gaesung]

Baal had captured the Korean border in his barrier. Right now, Cheok Jungyeong stood far away from the border and observed a city called Gaesung that demons had attacked. This city used to be the heart of Goryeo.

“Tsk.”

Cheok Jungyeong felt a strange sensation as if a hot lump had been thrown into his stomach. He didn’t care about the people of this era, but it felt weird to watch demons ravage his hometown.

Chweeek— Chweeek— Chweeek—

The sound of a bow being tugged rang out from next to him. Cheok

Jungyeong glanced at Jin Seyeon firing dozens of arrows at the demons.

“...”

Cheok Jungyeong crossed his arms and didn't move an inch. He pondered his own feelings when he heard that Baal attacked the northern part of Korea. Fighting Baal sounded funner than anything else, but Cheok Jungyeong came to Gaesung instead. His legs moved on their own and he couldn't understand why.

“How long are you going to just stand there?” Jin Seyeon finally asked. Cheok Jungyeong refused to answer, so she shouted at him.

“Stop watching and help me out!”

Cheok Jungyeong coldly looked at her. Any other person would've averted their gaze, but Jin Seyeon didn't turn away.

“There's about 100,000 of them, no?” Cheok Jungyeong quietly asked.

“100,000? You wish. The official estimation is 500,000.” She glanced at her smartwatch and replied.

“Yeah? Then I guess we can use her.”

“Use who?”

“You'll see. I don't even have to go out there.” Cheok Jungyeong chuckled and began muttering to himself.

“Droon, you see what's going on here?”

— Yeah, but it looks like Boss and the others got dragged into Baal's barrier.

Droon's voice flowed into Cheok Jungyeong's ears.

“Doesn't matter. Boss knows how to take care of herself. Are you ready?”

— Mmm... How many?

“500,000.”

— 500000... We’ll be cutting it pretty close. We could lose a city at worst.

“Just do it.”

Cheok Jungyeong pressed him and ended their conversation.

“Excuse me...”

Jin Seyeon wanted to ask about his plan, but something suddenly descended from above.

KWAAAANG!

A strange creature fell from the sky like a meteorite.

“What is that?” Jin Seyeon asked in bewilderment.

“Even you and I can’t handle 500,000. Don’t expect me to cut off 500,000 heads.”

Cheok Jungyeong turned to Mimyo. It had black skin, shining crimson eyes, and a pair of long ears above its head. It looked like a normal hare from a distance, but its existence could hardly be called simple. Mimyo came from a foreign dimension and didn’t belong in this world.

“That doesn’t answer my question. So, what is that?”

“The Chameleon Troupe’s ultimate weapon. I’m seeing it for the first time in a while too.”

Mimyo opened its mouth and a pair of sharp fangs gleamed.

“Ultimate weapon?”

Mimyo extended its claws, each as long as a baseball bat.

“That’s right. It can’t and shouldn’t be used recklessly.”

A monster that even Cheok Jungyeong couldn’t handle.

Jin Seyeon understood his warning and carefully asked, “May I know why?”

“Because it can’t be stopped until it’s fully satisfied.”

Cheok Jungyeong kept his gaze on Mimyo and Jin Seyeon also turned to the monster.

“Kuaaaaaa!”

Mimyo dashed onto the battlefield.

“What?”

Its speed couldn’t be seen with the naked eye. Mimyo rushed at the demons with its mouth wide open and sucked them all in.

“...”

Jin Seyeon couldn’t process the scene before her. Her jaw dropped and she became speechless.

“500,000 should be enough to satisfy it,” Cheok Jungyeong said with a smirk.

“What happens if it’s not satisfied?” Jin Seyeon gulped in fear and asked.

“Well, it’ll eat everything and everyone until it’s full.”

They couldn't recklessly use Mimyo for this reason. Even Droon couldn't control Mimyo when it went wild. Therefore, the Chameleon Troupe only used it during large-scale fights. Mimyo almost destroyed an entire city the other day.

"Eat? That's—"

"This is how we handle things. Leave if you don't like it our way."

Jin Seyeon tried to protest, but Cheok Jungyeong cut her off. She shut her mouth with a frown. Mimyo seemed to be their best chance at saving Gaesung.

"I'd like to evacuate the heroes and civilians first."

"Do as you wish. We've ordered Mimyo to attack only demons, but there's a good chance humans will get swept too."

Jin Seyeon nodded and ordered the heroes in Gaesung to retreat.

[This is a message from master rank hero Jin Seyeon. Heroes of Gaesung, please stop fighting and evacuate the civilians. This is an order. Save as many people as you can.]

Jin Seyeon placed her bow down and turned to Mimyo.

"KUWAAAAA!"

Mimyo repeated the simple actions of tearing and chewing. It tore the demons apart every time it swung its paws and heads disappeared every time it opened its mouth. The demons' attacks didn't affect Mimyo at all. The creature continued to eat with endless hunger.

"Huh..."

Jin Seyeon almost pitied the demons because of Mimyo's ruthlessness. She watched the massacre in a daze.

Chapter 357

Final Name (4)

[Baal's Barrier]

Yi Yeonjun appeared out of nowhere like a ghost. He stood about 20 steps away from me and Boss.

“It’s been a while,” he said with a bitter smile.

I glanced at Boss. She tried to appear calm, but felt a mix of emotions.

“...”

Boss silently stared at Yi Yeonjun. She already knew the truth that he had ruined her life, but couldn’t bring herself to completely hate him. After all, they spent 20 years together. Of course, she couldn’t instantly deny those two decades.

“Boss.”

I placed my hand on her shoulder and she looked at me. Her expression seemed cold. Perhaps she didn’t even know how she felt right now.

“I’d like to talk to you about something.”

Yi Yeonjun announced and Boss turned to him.

“What if we’re not interested?” Jain asked while studying Boss’ face.

Jain changed her arm into a sickle that looked like Kurukuru’s. She developed this secret technique to increase her physical strength and named it [Monsterification]. It couldn’t be considered an awakening, but an elaborate imitation of a humanoid monster.

“Move, you're not the one I'm interested in,” Yi Yeonjun flatly replied.

“Well that's obvious, but—”

Jain chuckled when he interrupted her.

“And it isn't Byul either.”

“...?”

Jain frowned and glanced at Boss before looking at me. I felt a strange sensation as I watched Yi Yeonjun.

“You...”

He pointed at me and I realized where my discomfort came from. He called for Boss first, but only ever looked at me.

“Kim Hajin, I'd like to speak with you.”

Boss lost her cool at his words and stretched her shadow towards him.

Whish—

A shrill sound pierced the air. Yi Yeonjun didn't dodge and her shadow penetrated his flesh.

“It's important.”

He simply continued.

“You...”

Boss finally ran out of patience and stepped forward.

“Don't you have anything to say to me?” she asked in a trembling voice.

Yi Yeonjun stared at her and shook his head. Boss' expression returned to being cold and apathetic.

“Kim Hajin.”

He called me again.

“I don't feel like chatting with you.” I shook my head. I didn't know what he wanted, but I didn't plan on letting things go his way. However, his next words...

“What if I said it's about your novel?”

My brain suddenly froze and it felt as if my breathing and heart all stopped.

Whish!

A familiar sound rang out and Boss' shadow pierced Yi Yeonjun's clavicle this time.

“Boss.”

I stopped her and stepped forward. I didn't know how Yi Yeonjun knew, but I had to keep his mouth shut.

“Hajin...”

Boss grabbed my wrist and I could see the grief and anger in her eyes. Yi Yeonjun's apathy infuriated her more than his betrayal.

“I know.”

I looked her in the eyes.

“I know what you're trying to say, but just give me a minute.”

I gently untangled Boss' hand from my wrist. Her heavy breathing subsided and she wore a nonchalant mask again.

“Thank you. It won’t take long.”

I walked towards Yi Yeonjun and Jain moved out of the way.

“...”

Yi Yeonjun stared at me with empty eyes. Perhaps those terrifying eyes once sparkled with innocence. Perhaps they never contained anything from the beginning. He spoke again as I neared.

“Don’t you think we need some privacy?”

“What?”

The darkness under my feet suddenly soared and swallowed the both of us. I found myself face-to-face with him. It seemed he had formed a barrier within a barrier.

* * *

[Baal’s Barrier]

“Hmm? Kim Suho? And... Knight Commander Shin Jahyuk too?”

Tomer looked at Kim Suho and Jin Sahyuk. Kim Suho studied Jin Sahyuk’s face while Tomer seemed happy to see the former knight commander. Jin Sahyuk found their attention rather uncomfortable and awkwardly scratched her neck.

“Ah, my apologies. Haha, I meant to say the former knight commander.”

Tomer corrected herself when Jin Sahyuk remained silent. Jin Sahyuk simply coughed and avoided her gaze.

“Hmm? Former knight commander?”

Kim Suho turned to Jin Sahyuk. Jin Sahyuk used to be Crevon’s knight commander? Jin Sahyuk would rather die than work for others.

“Ugh.” Jin Sahyuk sighed and hinted at Kim Suho to not ask.

“Well... anyways.”

They didn’t have time for that right now, especially not for indulging in Jin Sahyuk’s past.

“Let’s catch up later because—”

One more guest arrived. Chwaaaaa! A gust of wind cut off Kim Suho and Rachel appeared with her long, blonde hair.

“Whoa, Rachel’s here too?”

Chae Nayun had been glaring at Jin Sahyuk, but widened her eyes at the unexpected guest.

“Rachel, long time no see!”

Tomer had met her at Cube and they even worked together in Crevon. She welcomed the elementalist with open arms.

“Yes, it’s good to see you again. Windy? Please help them.”

Rachel greeted Tomer with a rather solemn look and cast the spirit’s blessing on them.

“—!”

Baal roared as if he had been waiting for this moment. His roar’s echo could be visibly seen as demonic energy came towards them like a tsunami.

KWAAAAA!

The wave of demonic energy surged from all sides. Kim Suho grabbed Misteltein and drew an arc in the air. He wielded his sword only once at an undetectable speed. That single attack completely erased the demonic energy.

He had severed the fact of Baal releasing demonic energy. This secret technique resulted from his two enlightenments.

His first enlightenment gave him the Sword Saint gift and the second one taught him this technique. He had always been able to cut everything, but never realized it.

He restricted this power in the past by thinking he could only cut physical beings and objects. The problem always lay in his mindset. However, he learned how to think outside the box to cut down even abstract concepts.

Of course, Kim Suho knew this technique wouldn't be enough against Baal. He had to go one more step beyond his limits to reach the ultimate state of swordsmanship. Then he could finally cut down Baal.

"You..."

Jin Sahyuk turned to Kim Suho in surprise. Chae Nayun and the others simply thought he had slashed away the demonic energy, but Jin Sahyuk knew better. She possessed Reality Manipulation and immediately recognized Kim Suho's authority. His power also interfered with the world's laws, an ability suitable for the main character. Naturally, Jin Sahyuk's mind drifted to the novel that Yi Yeonjun mentioned before.

"Don't flatter yourself."

Shin Jonghak interrupted Jin Sahyuk's train of thought. He grabbed the Conqueror Spear and walked past Kim Suho.

Kim Suho gazed at Shin Jonghak's back and could feel an unfamiliar force from his old rival.

"You want to make a bet?"

KOOONG! The Conqueror Spear pounded against the ground and Shin Jonghak stood with his back facing everyone.

"On who'll be the first to kill Baal."

Shin Jonghak seemed serious, but Jin Sahyuk only found him laughable. He still acted like the main character even after all this time. He hadn't changed much after meeting his grandfather and inheriting Shin Myunchul's legacy.

"Sure, let's make a bet," Kim Suho replied with a smile.

"So what's the prize going to be?" Shin Jonghak asked as he glanced at Chae Nayun. Unfortunately, she didn't notice.

Kim Suho opened his mouth after some deliberation. "Mmm... How about the loser calls the winner hyung for a month?"

The suggestion seemed random, but not for Kim Suho. His real age was at least 10 years older than everyone else and he always wanted to hear his friends calling him hyung or oppa.

"..."

Shin Jonghak's face distorted as if to say, I'll never call you hyung.

"It won't matter if you win. Are you scared?"

Kim Suho provoked him and Shin Jonghak shook his head.

"Let's do it."

Shin Jonghak's magic power surrounded the Conqueror Spear and Kim Suho also grabbed Misteltein.

"Alright, let's do this. Stay alive, okay?"

They loosened up the mood with light conversation and resolved themselves. Kim Suho stepped forward when a voice suddenly flowed into his ears.

— Kim Suho, can you hear me?

"Huh? Kim Hajin?"

Kim Suho muttered in surprise and the name caught everyone's attention. Chae Nayun quickly grabbed his wrist.

“What? Did you just say Kim Hajin? Where is he?”

— Hey, come save me.

Kim Hajin called Kim Suho for help.

* * *

[Paris, France]

Whiiish!

Ah Hae-In whistled for her divine beast and the azure dragon in the sky solemnly descended.

— Krrr!

The azure dragon snorted contently at the clear blue sky. It had wiped out all the flying monsters like gargoyles that covered the sky. Ah Hae-In gently patted the dragon's snout and approached the grand magician.

“Grand Magician.”

It felt thrilling to say those words. What she witnessed today indeed matched that title. Ah Hae-In tried to suppress her overflowing emotions.

“It was an honor to fight alongside you.”

“Oh, please.”

Oh Jaejin softly smiled and bent down as if to sit. Remnants of a broken bench swarmed towards him. The bench quickly reconstructed itself and Oh Jaejin slumped down on it. Once again, Ah Hae-In could only admire him.

“Likewise, it was an honor to fight alongside a talented magician such as yourself. It’s amazing you reached 9 stars with only summoning magic.”

“Y-Y-You flatter me.”

Perhaps he only meant to be nice, but Ah Hae-In couldn’t resist swaying in joy.

Oh Jaejin continued with a smile.

“I’m nearing my limit. I can feel my thoughts scattering and it’s getting harder to breathe by the minute. You and the other magicians will need to take over after this. Perhaps my old friends will lend you a hand. If they can afford to, that is.”

Ah Hae-In knew what Oh Jaejin meant by old friends, but only four of the Nine Stars still lived.

— Magician Ah Hae-In, you must come to Seoul immediately!

An urgent voice rang from her smartwatch. Kim Sukho, Korea’s former president and the Hero Association’s current chairman, called her.

“Mr. Chairman, I’m still taking care of the Paris incident.”

— That’s not my problem! Damn it, demons are invading my bunker! Come over at once...

He needed her to save him. Ah Hae-In turned the volume down and looked at Oh Jaejin, who shook his head with a chuckle.

“He hasn’t changed a bit.”

Ah Hae-In smiled and shouted into her smartwatch.

“Oh no! The demons are coming back to life!”

— What? What did you just say? Wait, that doesn’t matter. Just come here right now...

Ah Hae-In took off her smartwatch and threw it on the ground. Then she turned to the devil Astaroth standing at the center of the ruins. Astaroth looked like a knight in armor and stared at Oh Jaejin with a huge sword. Oh Jaejin faced the devil from the bench.

“Well then, shall we proceed?”

The grand magician stood up.

Astaroth acknowledged this human’s strength and planned to confront him with everything.

“Allow me to assist you.”

Ah Hae-In joined Oh Jaejin and felt grateful that he also represented humanity.

Chapter 358

Final Name (5)

[Yi Yeonjun's Barrier]

Yi Yeonjun told me everything inside the barrier and his cold voice seeped into my consciousness. He knew I created this world as a novel.

“Do you believe all that?”

I tried to feign innocence, but it didn't work. Yi Yeonjun glared at me with his vacant eyes and I could feel his murderous intent.

“Baal is transcendent. He can easily distinguish truth from falsehood. He didn't deny your existence after discovering the truth about himself. Baal sought the origin of his existence all his life, but turned out to be nothing more than a character in a novel.”

I couldn't feel any emotions in Yi Yeonjun's voice.

“I want to ask you.”

His eyes darkened with rage. I waited for him to continue in this stifling silence.

“Are you the god of this world? Are you playing with us for amusement?”

What a futile question. He already lost the desire to live and gave up on everything. I understood. Like Yi Yeonjun, I once considered this world nothing more than a novel. However, I thought differently now.

“No.”

This world might've begun as a novel, but it became much more than words on paper. My existence here proved that fact.

"I'm not a god and this world isn't a novel."

Yi Yeonjun raised an eyebrow and narrowed his eyes at me. I could feel his hostility as if his eyes would tear me apart.

"You... deceiving me until the end."

His voice filled with anger and the barrier around us began to change. Space contorted and pounced at me.

KOOONG!

Aether reacted faster and resisted Yi Yeonjun's barrier.

I took out the Desert Eagle, but couldn't fire. He choked me with some sort of psychokinesis and the Desert Eagle stopped working. The trigger became stuck no matter how hard I pulled.

"I already know your toy's weakness."

He certainly did. A gun would only be a useless piece of metal if you couldn't pull the trigger.

— Kim Suho, can you hear me?

I sent a mental transmission to Kim Suho. Meanwhile, my fight with Yi Yeonjun continued. His powerful psychokinesis aimed at my neck and waist. I could only dodge and run away.

— Hey, come save me.

I sent another mental transmission and ordered Spartan to pick up Kim Suho.

"Uuk!"

Yi Yeonjun caught my index finger and crushed it. Fortunately, the bodyguard I requested arrived in time.

Kieeeeek!

Spartan shrieked and Yi Yeonjun looked up. Huge sword qi came flying towards Yi Yeonjun.

BOOOOM!

Smoke rose from where the sword strike exploded.

“Phew, I almost died back there.”

I sighed in relief and turned to the side. There, I saw Kim Suho who had arrived?

“What the...”

I frowned because the silhouette in the smoke didn't match Kim Suho's. It looked too small to be him. The hairstyle and sword size also seemed different.

“Hmm...”

A familiar voice came through the white smoke. My eyes immediately widened and my heart raced. Violent tremors spread throughout my body.

“Long time no see.”

The smoke cleared and revealed the person standing before me.

“Kim Hajin.”

Chae Nayun appeared instead of Kim Suho.

Meanwhile, Kim Suho ran towards Baal after receiving Kim Hajin's SOS.

"Oi, you sure about Chae Nayun?"

Jin Sahyuk asked. She seemed doubtful, but Kim Suho nodded without hesitation.

Chae Nayun insisted on going when Kim Suho told everyone about Kim Hajin's mental transmission. He complied because he trusted her.

"They'll be fine, so long as they don't fight with each other."

Kim Suho thought about those two. Chae Nayun should've arrived at Kim Hajin's location by now. What would they argue about? What kind of conversation would they have? He found it awkward just imagining their reunion, but sincerely hoped they could reconcile.

"Idiot. Hmm? Oi, stop."

Jin Sahyuk muttered before urging the group to stop. Kim Suho also noticed something off. They hadn't grown any closer to the devil in the distance. Baal seemed to be moving farther away as they ran.

"Something's not right."

"What?" Shin Jonghak hissed. He felt pissed off about Kim Suho sending Chae Nayun. However, he knew they shouldn't quarrel right now.

Kim Suho ignored Shin Jonghak and earnestly analyzed the barrier. Then they ran into a large group that consisted of around 100 individuals. Kim Suho and Rachel flinched because this group came out of nowhere.

"What the... Who are you?"

Kim Suho straightened his posture. The devil hunter Harin suddenly popped out from the crowd. She stood in front of Kim Suho with a bright smile.

“Suho!”

“Huh? Harin?”

Kim Suho finally recognized the group. They either belonged to the Republic of Leores or the Arunheim Kingdom. He happily greeted them individually.

“Kim Suho? Are you Kim Suho?”

A magician with long, ginger hair called him. He turned around and nodded at her.

“Yes, that’s me.”

“Hmm. I see. I’ve heard a lot about you from Kim Hajin. My name is Shimurin, the grand magician in charge of dimensions.”

“Ah, is that so?”

Kim Suho widened his eyes when he heard the guest mentioning a familiar name. He knew he could trust Kim Hajin’s friend. Again, he chose to ignore Shin Jonghak’s grumbling.

— Why is everyone so head over heels for Kim Hajin? What’s so great about him?

“Well then, we should hurry. We don’t have much time.” Kim Suho pointed at Baal in the distance.

“We don’t have time?” Shimurin frowned and tilted her head.

“That’s right. We’re in a rush.”

“What are you talking about?”

Shimurin smirked and pointed at Baal in his transcendent form. He looked like a dragon, but still seemed hazy like a silhouette. This form gradually grew clearer over time.

“He descended too quickly and hasn’t regained consciousness. He can’t maintain that form. That’s why he created the labyrinth barrier.”

“Pardon?”

Kim Suho blinked in confusion and Shimurin raised her eyebrows.

“It means we have enough time to strategize. I see you’re as dense as Kim Hajin.”

“Um... No, Hajin is way smarter than me.”

“That’s unfortunate.”

Jin Sahyuk approached a man surrounded by knights while Kim Suho and Shimurin spoke.

Tap— Tap—

Her footsteps rang out until she stood before the man that had accompanied her for the past 20 years.

“Halt!”

The knights escorting the man stopped her. She glanced at them and turned to him. She always hated his smile.

“Enough with that ugly smirk, Bell.”

Knight Commander Airun angrily stepped forward. She grabbed her sword, but Bell stopped her.

“It’s okay, Airun. We have a lot to talk about. You may leave.”

“I can’t, Your Highness. This woman has disrespected you—”

“It’s fine.”

Bell softly, but firmly spoke. Airun glared at Jin Sahyuk and left without withdrawing her hostile gaze. Jin Sahyuk didn't pay any attention to her.

"You'd better explain what the hell is going on."

Jin Sahyuk didn't know whether to feel angry or confused. The fact that Bell returned still shocked her. She placed a hand on his shoulder.

"I won't hesitate to kill you again if you don't explain."

Airun could clearly hear Jin Sahyuk's threat.

"You ruffian, how dare you?"

Airun raised her sword and the other knights did the same. Clang—They unsheathed their swords and sharp metallic sounds rang out. The atmosphere suddenly turned serious and tension filled the air. Kim Suho and Shimurin turned to them in surprise.

"Sure." Bell seemed calm as ever and smiled at Jin Sahyuk.

"I do want to tell you how I survived."

His smile contained pure joy. Bell truly rejoiced at the fact that he finally escaped eternity. Now, he could carry on with his life and see it to the end.

"I believe we can reach a happy ending."

Bell declared as Jin Sahyuk doubtfully glared at him.

* * *

[Baal's Barrier – The Chameleon Troupe's Camp]

"Mmm..."

Yoo Yeonha finally woke up. Her ears worked fine even in her semiconscious state. Koong, koong, koong. She heard thumping sounds.

“Huh?”

She opened her eyes and saw a ceiling made of magic power. Azure magic power swayed like the ocean’s surface.

Yoo Yeonha lowered her gaze and saw Jain watching her. She flinched and rose from the bed with fake coughs.

“Cough cough... Where... am I?”

“You’re at our camp.”

“Camp?”

“Yep, Arashi made it.”

Yoo Yeonha looked around and found herself surrounded by magic power. She could feel it in the air too. This structure resembled a magical fortress.

“It’s a fortress.”

“It sure is.”

Indeed, the magic artificer Hirano Arashi had created this place. Arashi built this fortress after Boss said she wanted to wait for Kim Hajin at the same place.

“What are you... doing here?” Yoo Yeonha asked while rubbing her temples to fend off the headache.

“We’re waiting for Hajin to return,” Jain replied.

“Hajin... Kim Hajin?”

“Yeah, because I have to show him this.”

Jain playfully smirked and pulled out a smartwatch. Yoo Yeonha immediately recognized it and frowned.

“That’s mine.”

“That’s right.”

“...?”

Why does she want to show my smartwatch to Kim Hajin?

Yoo Yeonha wondered while still feeling drowsy.

Fortunately, Jain kindly explained.

“Look, it’s the text you sent to Hajin.”

[Dear, Kim Hajin. Hello, this is Yoo Yeonha...]

Yoo Yeonha’s face turned bright red like a ripe tomato on the verge of bursting when Jain read the first sentence.

“NO!”

She screamed and jumped at Jain.

Chapter 359

Final Name (6)

“I’ll go!”

Chae Nayun instinctively shouted when she heard from Kim Suho that Kim Hajin called for help. She could finally repay Kim Hajin for all the times he saved her and would definitely regret it if this chance slipped by.

Kieeeeek!

A sharp shriek rang out and everyone looked at the barrier’s ceiling. A huge eagle circled above them.

“That’s...”

Kim Suho assumed Kim Hajin had sent the eagle, but felt like he had seen it before.

“Chae Nayun?”

“Gotcha. Oi! It’s me! I’m right here!”

Chae Nayun shouted at the eagle after Kim Suho urged her. The giant bird flapped its wings and descended. Her intuition told her this eagle would take her to Kim Hajin. She placed her worries aside about seeing Kim Hajin and grabbed Spartan’s legs.

The eagle smirked and picked her up. They instantly reached their destination after teleporting.

“Ah...”

Chae Nayun looked down while hanging onto the eagle’s legs and spotted Kim Hajin. He ran around in a black uniform like a rabbit.

“...”

She felt ready to meet him, but her heart stopped when she saw actually him. Unfortunately, she couldn't waste any time. Kwang! Kwang! Kwang! Several explosions rang out and all the attacks flew towards Kim Hajin. Chae Nayun realized he would die if she didn't jump in.

Guoooooooo—

She gathered magic power that violently swirled around Balmung. The legendary greatsword greedily absorbed Chae Nayun's magic power and increased in size. She jumped down and swung her sword as big as a pillar. Balmung crashed into Yi Yeonjun.

Kwaaaaang!

Chae Nayun cracked Yi Yeonjun's head and perfectly landed. Then she turned to Kim Hajin and saw his face despite the smoke.

How long had it been since she last saw him? Complicated emotions rose in her. Chae Nayun's heart raced and her breathing grew heavy. However, she couldn't be distracted by silly feelings right now with the enemy behind her.

“What are you doing on the ground?”

“...”

Kim Hajin remained silent while sitting on his butt. She could see the confusion on his face and bitterly smiled.

“Come on. Stop being so pathetic.”

Kim Hajin only rose after a long silence.

“Cough cough.”

He awkwardly coughed and she recognized his old habit. Kim Hajin checked the Desert Eagle and glanced at Chae Nayun.

“I’m here to save you.”

She said as she tightened her grip around Balmung.

“Really?” he replied in a cracked voice.

“Yeah, I know you asked for Kim Suho, but I wanted to come instead. You and I have unfinished business.”

Chae Nayun did her best to remain calm and Kim Hajin nodded with a faint smile. She felt sad for some reason. What could possibly cause this pain? She stood beside him while suppressing her emotions.

Yi Yeonjun stood up covered in blood from Chae Nayun’s earlier attack. He surrounded himself with a sturdy barrier so they couldn’t launch another surprise attack.

“It feels like forever since we last fought together.”

Chae Nayun smiled at Kim Hajin. Then she activated her flying sword technique. Clang! Her magic power rang out and dozens of magic swords bloomed like a lotus flower. Kim Hajin silently stared at her and nodded with a bitter smile.

“It sure does.”

* * *

[Baal’s Barrier]

Baal continued to reconstruct himself. From a distance, this process looked like lightning intertwining in the air and black fog forming strange shapes. His premature descent led to an imperfect state that emitted demonic energy from time to time. This demonic energy released like a waste product and Kim Suho erased it with Misteltein every time it came out.

“Do you expect me to believe you?”

Jin Sahyuk didn't even care about Baal as she glared at Bell.

“Yes.”

Bell calmly nodded and a small smile spread across his lips.

“You have to believe me. I'm proof of my own story. As you can see, I'm alive and well.”

He explained everything to Jin Sahyuk. How he survived and returned to this world. His miracle resulted from hundreds of coincidences along with a certain man's extravagant luck.

“I came back from the void inside Baal.”

The transcendent devil had to rebuild the first world where he contracted with Bell to fully descend on Earth. He invented this trick to minimize the universe's interference and force of deterrence.

Baal reconstructed the first world and connected it to Earth via the demon realm gate. He successfully weakened the universe's deterrence by forming a pathway between the two worlds. The next steps consisted of destroying the first world, collecting the energy from that process, and completing the descent at his castle.

The plan went awry when Baal's castle collapsed and he lost the means to destroy Earth. He had no other choice but to hastily descend with the first world intact.

However, he overlooked the fact that the first world contained the grand magician Shimurin. The genius Shimurin would acquire the magic of dimensional travel in 30 years if she survived. That time frame rapidly quickened when she gained the luck called Kim Hajin. Shimurin managed to complete her grand dimensional travel in just 3 days. Indeed, Baal's hasty decision came back to bite him.

“Hah, so you're saying all this happened because of luck?”

“No, not all. I’m largely indebted to Kim Hajin, who you like very much.”

Jin Sahyuk scowled at Bell’s sarcasm. He shrugged and continued.

“Anyways, my point is I came back to life because Baal made a rash decision. His chances of winning have become much slimmer now. He’s quite emotionally unstable after discovering his origin of existence.”

“Origin of existence... You mean the novel?”

Jin Sahyuk whispered and Bell solemnly nodded.

“That’s right. Baal is a transcendental being, so he can easily distinguish the truth from lies. That also means he possesses an unbelievably big ego. When he found out about being merely a character in a novel...”

Jin Sahyuk knew what Bell would say next without hearing it. Even she found it hard to believe that this world turned out to be a novel.

“Tsk...”

She sighed in frustration and her thoughts drifted to Kim Hajin again. Should I treat Kim Hajin as a god then? She wondered. Probably not. Kim Hajin acted like any other human. He was an ordinary and imperfect being. A god wouldn’t let something as trivial as [Synchronization] control him. Jin Sahyuk still hadn’t forgotten about [Synchronization].

“Anyways...”

Bell turned to Kim Suho with a mysterious smile. The Sword Saint deeply contemplated while staring at Baal in the distance.

“Baal can’t win against the main character.”

“Main character my ass.” The veins in Jin Sahyuk’s temples swelled.

“Haha, so Sahyuk...”

Bell turned back and pointed to her chest where she hid the dimensional stone from Baal.

“When are you going to use that?”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk didn’t reply. She needed more time before making a final decision. She couldn’t help Akatrina’s citizens and rebuild the country by herself. She needed a reliable servant to help her.

“All done. The analysis is complete.”

A woman’s low-pitched voice rang out. Jin Sahyuk turned and saw Shimurin drenched in sweat. The grand magician smiled in satisfaction after analyzing Baal’s labyrinth barrier.

“Everyone, get ready to march.”

Shimurin declared, and the 117 people moved in perfect order. Jin Sahyuk nonchalantly followed the crowd as Bell whispered into her ear.

— I’ll help you get Kim Hajin if you still want him. You already know the truth, right? How this world can cease to be a novel?

Jin Sahyuk stiffened and a chill swept over her body, but she continued walking without replying. She hadn’t made up her mind yet.

* * *

[Manchurian Plain – Crevon’s Military Base]

Araha, Empress of Crevon, looked at the view below from a hilltop. Iron fences surrounded the campsite with tents lined up in an orderly fashion. The imperial army’s base with Crevon’s finest soldiers seemed impenetrable.

“I believe diplomatic ties and alliances should be supported by mutual benefits.”

Araha spoke to France’s president, China’s president, Japan’s prime minister, and other heads of state in front of her.

“Historically, no partnership can be established without the consideration of interests from both sides.”

She called for a meeting after arriving on Earth and leaders of several countries gathered to discuss a treaty. Imperial magicians far stronger than Earth’s magicians easily summoned these leaders from their underground bunkers.

“Everyone, what do you think?”

Araha asked and the crowd nodded without hesitation. The empress softly smiled.

“Good.”

She didn’t intend on providing free aid to Earth. She wanted to establish a diplomatic relationship and proclaim rules to bind both worlds. She wanted Earth to respect Crevon as a country.

“Did you all sign?”

A pile of written oaths lay before her. Only 30 nations currently participated, but she expected the number to eventually rise to 190. She couldn’t believe this world had 190 countries. Araha felt a sense of superiority and contempt.

“All set. This completes a temporary alliance between Crevon and Earth. We’ll discuss the details at a later date. Oh, and I hope you’ll abide by this treaty at all costs.”

Signing the interim treaty served as the first step towards peaceful diplomatic relations. Of course, she couldn’t bring much from outside into the tower. However, Crevon could eventually exercise external influence on players.

The treaty focused on an article regarding criminal extradition. They had no methods of catching criminals who fled to Earth, but things would change now. Araha felt excited about finally being able to punish players for crimes in Crevon.

“Will Crevon's forces be immediately dispatched to the battlefields?”

Japan's prime minister desperately asked. Araha glanced at him with an elegant smile.

“Haste makes waste.”

She wanted to hold off for now. Araha coughed and stood up.

“Line up, soldiers of Crevon.”

She looked down at the campsite and announced.

The Crevon soldiers immediately gathered. Their spears, swords, and bows reflected the sun's brilliant rays.

“The time has come for us to offer salvation.”

Crevon's imperial army of the 30,000 finest soldiers would've made history had they been born on Earth. They roared for their empress and shook the atmosphere.

“Let's help our poor allies overcome their circumstances as soldiers of a great nation.”

Araha's brief speech moved their hearts. The imperial army crossed the Manchurian Plain with their horses and griffins. The heads of state watched the scene in awe as Araha sat back in her chair with a smile.

“I heard many demons are still on Earth.”

“Pardon? Ah, yes. You’re correct,” France’s president replied.

More than 100 million demons currently rampaged across Earth.
Araha smiled in satisfaction despite the situation.

“Well then, look forward to the future.”

More enemies only meant greater glory.

“We’ll turn things around.”

Araha and her army felt confident in winning.

Chapter 360

Final Name (7)

[Baal's Barrier – Chae Joochul and Heynckes]

Heynckes' armor clattered and Chae Joochul's cane creaked every time they moved. This symphony would be complete with their voices, but they didn't feel the need to open their mouths. They have lived long enough to not be bothered by silence.

"This barrier seems to be a labyrinth."

Heynckes finally spoke. They had walked for quite a while, but hadn't come any closer to Baal. Chae Joochul paused and nodded.

"You knew that and didn't tell me? Aren't you wicked?"

Heynckes playfully smiled, but his comment didn't affect Chae Joochul at all. The Immortal nonchalantly continued to walk. Heynckes shrugged and followed his friend.

"It's no fun being with you."

Baal's barrier swept them away like everyone else and they found themselves together after opening their eyes.

"Hmm... This situation reminds me of the old days. Remember the Leocrad dungeon?"

Heynckes asked with a sigh. Being with Chae Joochul made him recall the past, whether it was good or bad. Chae Joochul used to be even more annoying than now. Dealing with a psychopath-in-progress felt more frustrating than the present Chae Joochul who already lost 90% of his emotions.

“...”

Chae Joochul paused and suddenly thought of a way to escape this labyrinth. He closed his eyes and increased his magic power. However, his gift came from nature and couldn't be activated in its absence.

“Ah, so yours doesn't work here either?”

Heynckes smirked. Chae Joochul released his magic power again without looking at Heynckes and some kind of miracle occurred. Nature transpired from Chae Joochul's magic power.

“Whoa...”

Chae Joochul's magic power transformed into golden soil that covered the earth. The entire scenery turned into a field with a stream after 3 minutes. The green field and river continued to expand along with Chae Joochul's magic power.

Heynckes quickly grasped Chae Joochul's intentions. The stream would split into several branches and analyze the labyrinth. The branches would then serve as guides not only for them, but also for the other heroes.

“You... have the most beautiful power in the world.”

Heynckes muttered in awe, but Chae Joochul remained nonchalant. He continued to walk and expanded nature with every step.

It saddened Heynckes that Chae Joochul lost the most precious thing after acquiring the most beautiful power. The Immortal could no longer love.

“Joochul, wait for me.”

Thankfully, a man who lacked emotion also lacked the need for purpose in life. Chae Joochul couldn't feel the loneliness of not being able to love. Therefore, it would be pointless to pity him.

“Come on. Let’s go together.”

Heynckes followed him and nature continued to sprout wherever Chae Joochul went. The Lord of Steel enjoyed the sight of green grass and trees consuming the barrier. For a moment, he felt as if a gentle breeze brushed his cheek.

* * *

Meanwhile, Kim Suho and others followed Shimurin. They grew closer to Baal with every step thanks to the grand magician’s guidance.

“—!”

Baal roared again and Kim Suho immediately swung his sword. The crescent sword wave from Misteltein erased the demonic energy.

“Uuk...”

Perhaps that last attack placed too much strain on Kim Suho’s body. He suddenly felt dizzy and knelt to rub his temples.

“Are you all right?”

Rachel and the others worriedly approached him.

“I’m fine.”

He replied, but felt nauseous and his shoulders stiffened. Kim Suho instinctively knew he could only do this 3-4 more times. He raised himself and tried to contain his nervousness.

“Are you tired?”

Bell asked and Kim Suho bitterly smiled.

“No, you’re not tired.” Bell shook his head with a big smile.

“Excuse me?”

“Your mind thinks you are, but you aren’t. You can’t grow tired, at least not inside this barrier.”

Kim Suho tilted his head and couldn’t understand. However, Bell didn’t bother to explain and kept walking. Shimurin led them with her eyes closed and proceeded with extreme caution because they would have to start from scratch with one wrong step.

Everyone paused when they reached a certain point. They raised their heads with stiff expressions at the enemy in front.

“Morax.”

The devil suddenly revealed his huge presence. Jin Sahyuk looked at him and felt a sharp pain in her chest.

“It seems he got caught up in this too.”

Shimurin faintly smiled. Morax acted like Baal’s bodyguard within this barrier. He would buy time for Baal’s reconstruction.

Claang—

Everyone drew their weapons and aimed at Morax.

Guooooo...

Morax let out a low, dismal groan. Jin Sahyuk felt as if he was crying for some reason.

“Get ready...”

Jin Sahyuk clenched her teeth. Morax possessed incredible strength, but wouldn’t be able to match Airun, Harin, and everyone else from the first world with the inherent ability to resist evil.

“Everyone—”

“Wait.”

Jin Sahyuk stepped forward before they charged at Morax.

“I’ll take care of him.”

She declared in front of their confused faces.

Everyone turned to her, but she only looked at Kim Suho. Jin Sahyuk knew what Kim Suho wanted to say as they made eye contact.

“You mean alone, Knight Commander Shin Jahyuk?”

“It’ll be a tough fight.”

Rachel and Tomer objected, but Jin Sahyuk remained firm.

“I can only say this is what I have to do. Above all, we’re running out of time. Your first and foremost priority should be stopping Baal. You shouldn’t waste time here.”

Jin Sahyuk shook her head and explained. She had a point and it sounded reasonable enough to convince everyone.

“Jin Sahyuk...” Kim Suho looked at her with complicated emotions and also recalled Plerion’s fall.

“Who said you could call my name?”

She crossed her arms and sharply responded.

Kim Suho couldn’t help but smile at her arrogant comeback. He felt relieved by her unwavering attitude.

“Fine.”

He finally nodded. They had no choice but to comply. Everyone wished her luck and moved on. Surprisingly, Morax didn’t stop them and only focused on Jin Sahyuk. She waited until everyone left before approaching Morax.

“We’re finally alone.”

However, a man approached after she spoke. Jin Sahyuk turned around with a grimace.

“Why the hell are you still here?”

“A little delay won’t affect my victory.”

“What?”

Shin Jonghak wanted to help even though she never asked for anything after he met his grandfather.

“I’m trying to help you, idiot.”

“Just shut up and leave—”

Morax began to move before Jin Sahyuk could dismiss Shin Jonghak.

Guuuuuo...

The giant devil roared like a beast and swung his enormous arms.

KOONG!

* * *

[Yi Yeonjun’s Barrier]

Chae Nayun swung Balmung and her fiery magic power flew straight at Yi Yeonjun. Balmung came from the front and her flying swords attacked from the sides and rear. As such, her attacks couldn’t physically be dodged. However, Yi Yeonjun managed to fend them off with his psychokinesis. Kiiik— Chae Nayun’s magic power collided with an invisible wall and dissipated due to the friction.

“That was pretty cool,” she calmly muttered.

“Let’s see how long you can last.”

She could repeat the previous attacks dozens of times thanks to her [Sea of Magic Power] gift that drastically increased her magic power capacity. Chae Nayun possessed endless stamina and specialized in prolonged battles.

Whoosh—

Yi Yeonjun tried to crush her by shrinking the barrier, but she managed to push the walls away. Kim Hajin fired the Desert Eagle when Yi Yeonjun briefly lost focus.

Kwakwakwa!

Countless basilisk bullets flew towards Yi Yeonjun, but he dodged them and glared at Kim Hajin.

“...”

Yi Yeonjun could feel his anger boiling. This world’s creator stood before him, but he only felt disappointed. He hated the fact that a human like himself created everything. This creator looked neither graceful, elegant, nor radiant.

Kwaaaaa!

What have I lived for? Yi Yeonjun wondered while blocking Chae Nayun’s attacks from all sides.

He desired everything because he came into this world with nothing. He wanted to rule Pandemonium and everything else he could see. Only possessions gave him meaning in the pit of despair called life. Greed and obsession helped him survive. Otherwise, Yi Yeonjun would’ve lost his purpose in life and died a long time ago.

Suddenly, he recalled the face of his most precious treasure. Her jewel eyes and long black hair swayed like waves. However, Yi Byul had been stolen by the man before him. Such a trifling man robbed him of everything. Yi Yeonjun’s rage turned into tears that streamed down his cheeks. He planned to blow up the barrier and kill everyone inside, including himself. His life had only been part of a novel, but Kim Hajin's life held real meaning. Killing Kim Hajin would be his first and last meaningful act.

“—!”

Yi Yeonjun roared and tried to detonate the barrier with his remaining magic power. The barrier began to crumble and everyone inside would soon die. However, he couldn't freely move as he wanted. The barrier stopped shrinking and Yi Yeonjun's vision grew blurry. He collapsed and spurted black blood.

“Ah...”

Yi Yeonjun muttered and couldn't breathe anymore. His limbs became limp. How? Yi Yeonjun wondered. What kind of trick is this? Kim Hajin hadn't moved an inch, so he couldn't understand what happened.

Suddenly, his eyes reflected the treasure that once belonged to him. Yi Byul looked much more beautiful than he recalled. Her cold eyes looked down at him and he stared at her with his half-closed eyes. He tried to take in every bit of her beauty. She... was too good to be the last thing he saw. Yi Yeonjun never blinked as he died.

Chapter 361

Final Name (8)

Psh!

A black blade pierced Yi Yeonjun's stomach and he helplessly collapsed like a puppet with severed strings.

“...”

I lowered the Desert Eagle and looked at Boss standing behind the fallen Yi Yeonjun. Blood dripped from her hand.

“Ah...”

Yi Yeonjun cried out and tried to move his neck. He hardly struggled to survive, but wanted to see Boss as long as possible. Maybe he wanted to know who killed him or wanted to see her one last time. I couldn't figure out his last moments and didn't care.

I wondered how Boss entered the barrier and quickly found out when Spartan popped out from behind her leg. He clearly brought her here even though I didn't ask. Boss might've asked instead or perhaps Spartan made his own decision to save me. I didn't know the exact details, but Spartan looked extremely exhausted after teleporting multiple times.

“What's going on?”

Chae Nayun looked at me and Boss in surprise. She raised Balmung thinking Boss might be another enemy, but Boss didn't give off any hostility. Chae Nayun slowly lowered her sword and looked at me.

“Hey.”

She called me and I answered with a bitter smile.

“It’s been a while.”

“...”

Chae Nayun silently stared at me as she carefully chose her words. She finally spoke, but only to postpone everything.

“Let’s catch up later. We don’t have time right now.”

She muttered with a bitter smile.

Her words saddened me. How much time did I have left in this world? Would I be able to sort everything out with her before the end?

“No, wait.” Chae Nayun frowned and suddenly changed her mind.

“Hey, you!”

She shouted and grabbed me by the collar. I couldn’t help but smile even though she surprised me. I always liked her unpredictable attitude.

“You ass— I mean, stupid... person... who’s always running away.”

Chae Nayun sounded a bit awkward while trying not to swear.

“Do you have any idea what you mean to... And... Ugh, just tell me. Explain everything to me.”

Boss suddenly moved and carried Yi Yeonjun over her shoulder.

“What does she need that dead body for? Wait, more importantly, who is she?”

Chae Nayun flinched and whispered to me.

The barrier immediately dissolved when Boss left with Yi Yeonjun's body.

"Boss! You're b—"

We returned to Baal's barrier and the other Chameleon Troupe members welcomed Boss. Jain ran to her with a smile, but her expression stiffened when she saw Yi Yeonjun's body over Boss' back. Boss silently nodded and placed the corpse on the ground.

"I don't know what to say."

Jain mumbled and examined Yi Yeonjun's body. Boss' shadow reflected in his wide-open eyes and Jain closed them with a sigh.

"Is that Nayun?"

Yoo Yeonha had been resting in the fortress and suddenly shouted. Only then did Jain notice one more person besides me and Boss. Chae Nayun turned to Yoo Yeonha in surprise.

"Yeonha?"

Their eyes met and the two briefly hesitated before rushing into each other's arms. I watched them for a while and turned to Arashi's fortress.

[Arashi's Magic Fortress] — A magic fortress built by Hirano Arashi, the master of fortresses. Will increase attacks from within the fortress by 20%. Will increase defense against attacks from outside the fortress by 20%. A Master's Dignity: Will enhance summoned beasts. External Automatic Artillery...

The fortress provided several benefits, but I would have to look at them later. I had more important tasks right now.

"..."

Boss stood in a daze while looking at Yi Yeonjun's body. No sadness, joy, or resentment could be seen in her eyes as if Yi Yeonjun's emptiness had infected her. I slowly approached, but she avoided my eyes.

“Yi Byul.”

I whispered her name and she flinched. Her lifeless eyes looked at me, still as beautiful as obsidian, but they lost their sparkle. I wanted to hold her in my arms.

[The final arc will now begin.]

A sentence suddenly appeared as if to remind me of what had to be taken care of first.

[The completion of this arc will unlock ???]

The final destination of my long journey. I clenched my fists to properly finish this arc and end everything. Only then could I define my existence. I decided to save my feelings for that final day.

“...”

I held Boss’ cold and trembling hands that seemed to cry for her instead.

“Hey, Boss.”

I softly asked while tightly holding onto her.

“Do you still remember my name?”

* * *

Koong!

Morax slammed his fist onto the ground. Jin Sahyuk recalled the past as she dodged Morax’s attacks. She thought of her half-brother, Prince Puharen, the legitimate heir to Akatrina’s throne who feared becoming king.

“Puharen...”

Jin Sahyuk called his name. The prince didn't want to be king, but the kingdom's tradition couldn't be easily ignored. Puharen's servants wanted him to rise to the throne.

They never gave him a chance to decide and wanted a king they could easily control. They only cared about their power even as demons rampaged the streets and the kingdom fell.

“I'll save you from them.”

She lied to her innocent brother and threw him into a dungeon where he stayed until he died.

“I'm sorry.”

Jin Sahyuk floated in the air and muttered. Puharen, no, Morax gazed at her. What a pitiful being. Her brother, the victim of her greed and ambition, couldn't even properly rest after death.

Morax suddenly appeared before her and she couldn't dodge his fists this time.

Kwaaaaa!

Shin Jonghak thrust his spear and pushed Morax away.

“Haaa...”

Jin Sahyuk deeply exhaled as her heart raced. She turned to Shin Jonghak and reproached herself for being caught up in the past.

“Stay focused. You'd be dead if it wasn't for me,” Shin Jonghak said with a smirk.

“Guess you aren't completely useless.”

Jin Sahyuk replied and collected herself with another deep breath. She had always sacrificed morality for her ambitions and even murdered her brother without hesitation. Nothing would change even if she regretted it now.

“Rest in peace,” she muttered. However, an unexpected pair of guests appeared.

“What the hell?”

Jin Sahyuk spotted the two silhouettes between Morax’s legs. One looked like an insect and the other...

“Orden?”

The monster king Orden finally arrived.

* * *

Kim Suho followed Shimurin. The number of demons increased as they neared Baal. They encountered several difficult battles, but won without casualties thanks to Aileen, Yun Seung-Ah, Yi Youngha, and many other heroes who joined them along the way.

“So you’re a magician from another world?” Aileen asked Shimurin. The grand magician nodded, but didn’t say anything and concentrated on guiding them.

“Well, I don’t like chatting either. Let’s just walk.”

Aileen pouted and walked beside Shimurin. The heroes pushed forward amidst the tension. How long had it been? They finally arrived at the barrier’s center and felt as if demonic energy penetrated their bodies. The pressure seemed to crush their hearts.

“Ah...”

“That’s...”

Many exclaimed in amazement and horror. Baal looked much larger when they finally arrived. The heroes felt overwhelmed by the mere sight of him. Demonic energy flowed from his body and kept them from getting too close. Fallen heroes scattered under the devil's feet.

“...”

Kim Suho stared into Baal's eyes, which looked like two black holes. They contained numerous worlds within them. Everything Baal had ever destroyed could be seen and the fallen worlds screamed in agony. Kim Suho felt enraged and grabbed Misteltein. The god-slaying tree branch had transformed into a holy sword to strike down evil after Kim Suho's enlightenment.

"Glad to see everyone again."

A voice brought Kim Suho back to his senses. Everyone turned and saw master rank heroes Yoo Sihyuk and Yoo Jinwoong. Dozens of other heroes also gathered around Kim Suho and his friends.

"How did they escape from the labyrinth?"

Shimurin muttered in confusion. So many managed to find their way without her help. She soon found out when nature suddenly appeared in the barrier. Soil covered the dark void where everyone stood and the empty sky turned blue. Two men appeared beyond the beautiful landscape. Everyone turned to them as they walked all the way to the center.

"Haha, it seems we have more than enough comrades here."

Heynckes spoke first and Chae Joochul remained calm as always even at the sight of Baal.

"Say, would you all care to listen to this old man? I've fought in many wars and I'd like to make some suggestions based on my experiences."

Heynckes announced and the other heroes, including Kim Suho, nodded without hesitation. They all admired Hyenckes, one of the Nine Stars. However, Airun came from a different world and seemed hesitant. She looked at Heynckes suspiciously and whispered to Bell.

“Would it be wise to trust him? Your Highness, please consider taking refuge in a safe place.”

She hoped to persuade the prince to leave the battlefield, but Bell turned her down with a smile and looked at Kim Suho.

“No worries. We’re going to win this fight.”

Bell sounded extremely confident, almost as if he had seen the future. Airun felt perplexed and cautiously asked, “What do you mean?”

“Look over there.”

Bell pointed to Kim Suho, who held onto Misteltein while listening to Heynckes. Bell felt confident because Kim Suho had been designed to win this fight from the start. Baal chose to descend inside a barrier to avoid the world’s interference, but that had been a mistake. The world could also influence someone else besides Baal.

“After all, he’s the main character of this world.”

Kim Suho also suffered from the world’s influence like Baal and it weakened his power too.

“Main character?”

“I don’t expect you to understand.”

The world’s deterrence limited Kim Suho’s power to a human level, but that constraint no longer existed in this barrier created by Baal. What would happen now without the world’s interference? Kim Suho’s power would no longer be bound by the limits of this world. Baal had unknowingly removed Kim Suho’s shackles by bringing him into this barrier.

“I’m just saying he’s going to win no matter what.”

Baal’s defeat had been predetermined by fate. Yes, fate. Everything came from a novel with a prearranged beginning and end.

"Do you understand?"

Heynckes finished explaining and the heroes lined up for the upcoming battle.

"Good. Now let us pray to God as we prepare for this final battle."

Heynckes solemnly declared and raised his steel sword.

Chapter 362

Final Name (9)

“Do you still remember my name?”

I asked while holding onto Boss’ hand. She stared at me before tilting her head. Then her expressionless face grew flustered. I felt quite happy at her reaction, but pretended to be disappointed.

“You forgot?”

“Hajin...”

Boss murmured with a somewhat dissatisfied look. She didn’t seem to be in a joking mood. However, I asked again and didn’t feel satisfied with just my first name.

“My last name too.”

Boss’ eyebrows briefly perked up before she answered.

“Kim Hajin...”

That felt like more than enough evidence of my existence here. I had an idea of what the final [???] would be.

“Why are you suddenly asking me that?”

“No reason. Anyways, thanks.”

I raised Boss’ hand and she flinched as if she just realized we held hands this entire time. Her cheeks turned red, but she collected her composure and let go.

“Go, I want to be alone right now.”

She shooed me away like a fly and I turned back with a bitter smile. Boss glanced at me several times before forming a shadow coffin. Jin Yohan, Arashi, and Jain approached her. I didn't wait to see what happened next. I stopped at the magic fortress located in the area that I previously purified. My thousand-mile eyes could see through even a master artisan's work.

— By the way, who are those people, Yeonha?

— Ah, you've heard of them, right? They're from the Chameleon Troupe.

— Yeah, I worked with them during the Orden mission.

— Yep, that's them. I hired them.

Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun spoke to each other. Then Chae Nayun glanced outside.

— Is that woman also part of the Chameleon Troupe? She seems... rather close with Kim Hajin.

— Oh, that? Well, you know, Kim Hajin did a lot of work in the shadows. They must be acquaintances.

— They're too touchy for just acquaintances...

— Maybe they're close acquaintances.

Yoo Yeonha effortlessly tricked Chae Nayun and lied without batting an eye.

“Whew...”

I took another deep breath and closed my eyes before entering the fortress. Then I checked my slowly recovering stigma. More than two streaks had returned thanks to the [Orb of Regeneration]. I focused one streak into my eyes and my vision immediately expanded like a satellite. I looked down from a lofty height and quickly spotted Baal.

Kim Suho, Chae Joochul, Rachel, Heynckes, Aileen... Almost every hero had gathered to fight Baal. I even saw Shimurin, Harin, and Bell.

I watched from a distance and found it quite funny since this perfectly suited an extra. For now, I would simply assist them as a sharpshooter. However, Chae Nayun would awaken her true potential against Baal.

I coughed before entering the fortress. Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun stopped chattering.

"What were you doing?"

Chae Nayun stood next to Yoo Yeonha and awkwardly scratched her head. Yoo Yeonha noticed our strange atmosphere and bitterly smiled.

"You don't need to know. It's about time we go back," I answered her.

"Y-Yeah, I was just about to..." Chae Nayun replied while furrowing her brows. She seemed dissatisfied with something.

"I'll be back soon, Yeonha."

Chae Nayun stood up after tapping Yoo Yeonha's lap. Yoo Yeonha also tried to get up, but I stopped her.

"You stay here. You're even weaker than me."

Yoo Yeonha immediately pouted. Her protruding lips looked like a bird beak. "At least let me say goodbye."

She held Chae Nayun's hand and whispered something. Chae Nayun laughed as if she had been told a joke and Yoo Yeonha sat back down.

"Okay, you can take her now."

I left the fortress with Chae Nayun. She tried to leave immediately, but I grabbed her wrist.

"Wha—" Chae Nayun jumped like a cat when I touched her.

"W-What! What is it?"

"I have something to give you."

I faintly smiled. I needed to give it to her before she left.

"G-Give what?"

I silently took out a necklace from my pocket. This carefully crafted diamond hung on a blue string and would replace what she should've had in the original story. I called it the [Magic Power Amplification Diamond Necklace].

"..."

Chae Nayun's jaw dropped at the necklace. It brightly shone even inside the barrier's darkness.

[Magic Power Amplification Diamond Necklace] [Pinnacle Grade] [Masterpiece] A famous dwarf is presumed to have crafted this work enchanted with special effects. — High Rank Magic Power Amplification — High Rank Magic Power Circulation — High Rank Mental Interference Immunity

It should be equal to or even above Homer's Ring thanks to the high quality materials. I also blessed it with stigma's magic power before placing it in Chae Nayun's hand.

"..."

She blankly stared at it as I tapped on her shoulder.

"You can tell how good it is, right? Be sure to give it back later."

"Huh?"

Chae Nayun raised her head before looking at the necklace again. She seemed to be checking the effects rather than its appearance. Soon, she smiled and nodded.

"Right, there's no way something like this would be a gift. Alright, thanks. It should help out."

Chae Nayun wore the necklace for its utility and a change immediately occurred.

Guooo... A blue aura surrounded her and magic power currents blew in every direction. As expected, Chae Nayun suppressed her amplified magic power with a single breath.

"Whew, done. What about you, Kim Hajin?"

I tapped the Desert Eagle in my hand. "I'll support all of you with this."

I would do my best to search for an opening and drill the god-slaying bullet into Baal.

"What a scaredy-cat." Chae Nayun grinned. The truth didn't offend me and I simply nodded.

"You know me. I always run away or shoot from a distance."

"And you're going to do that until the end?"

Chae Nayun stared into my eyes. I could sense her true feelings and honestly replied.

"Yeah, but maybe I'll stop running away after everything ends."

"..."

Chae Nayun silently thought about my words and tilted her head.

"So you're saying you won't run away after this, right?"

"Yeah."

I'm okay with that. Chae Nayun murmured before laughing out loud.

"Then see you later."

She said her final goodbye and spotted Chae Joochul's nature rising in the distance. Chae Nayun took off to that final destination without turning back.

* * *

The heroes assumed a loose formation. Going all out would only result in their deaths, so they took it slow to understand Baal's attack patterns first. Bell thought it sounded like a good plan. Baal hadn't fully descended yet, so his attack patterns would be simple. The heroes could slowly chip away at him without any sacrifices.

Bell called it the toothpick tactic because they hoped Baal would eventually fall after being endlessly pricked.

However, not all toothpicks could be considered the same and some couldn't even be called toothpicks. For example, Kim Suho could cut apart Baal's demonic energy and directly affect the true body.

"Haa... Haa..."

Unfortunately, Kim Suho seemed to be reaching his limits. He became drenched in sweat and barely held on to his sword. Most importantly, he had used up most of his magic power by now.

Bell clicked his tongue as he watched Kim Suho. The Sword Saint suffered from a mental barricade. He wasted too much magic power when he could face Baal alone if he just changed his mindset. Bell couldn't help him with this problem. Kim Suho had to realize it for himself.

"How troublesome. I can't see an end to this," Heynckes muttered.

Unlike Kim Suho, Heynckes and Chae Joochul didn't specialize in attacking non-physical beings. Most heroes couldn't damage Baal's true body. Other than Kim Suho, only Rachel and Aileen could somewhat contribute. Thankfully, those two women also surpassed mere toothpicks.

“...”

A faint tremor shook the barrier. Some heroes didn't feel anything, but Bell certainly felt it. Baal's heartbeat had quickened.

"Hmm..."

Bell wondered if he should escape to preserve the life he finally reclaimed or stay and watch this spectacle. However, his old friend Baal didn't give him the chance to decide.

— Pathetic insects who cannot even touch my true existence.

Baal's murmuring resounded from what seemed to be his mouth. All the heroes widened their eyes and Baal glared at them with his piercing gaze. His eyes contained a vast darkness and transcendent power of destruction. Just staring at his eyes caused a few heroes to collapse.

— Why struggle to continue such pitiful lives?

The transcendent devil that couldn't exist in the material realm successfully descended.

— Death suits all of you much more.

This sentence signaled the war with Baal as he infused the power of destruction into his breath. A storm of demonic energy brewed and this same breath attack had destroyed countless worlds in the past. It swallowed everything in the barrier.

Kim Suho swung his sword with what little power he had left, but he didn't quite make it.

Tadadak—

A campfire crackled and shadows danced on the ground. Kim Suho found himself in a silent cave with his king, the ruler of a ruined kingdom. He couldn't recall if her name was Priha or Praha. He didn't care and didn't even know his own name.

Kim Suho offered the food he cooked to his king. He simply cooked potatoes with herbs in an earthenware pot. Fortunately, he found two potatoes today.

Jin Sahyuk blankly stared at the dish before taking a bite. Then she quickly devoured it. Kim Suho didn't expect any leftovers for himself. It would be more than enough if he could relieve his king's hunger. Right, he thought that should've been enough.

However, Jin Sahyuk confessed what should've never been said.

I killed your master to obtain you. It was all an elaborate plan to cut you off from Puharen and gain your loyalty. I could've saved your master, but I killed him to save more money. I could save a hundred more subordinates with that money.

Kim Suho still didn't understand why Jin Sahyuk told him. Did she feel grateful or did she just want to confess her sins before dying?

Regardless, Kim Suho became furious. Rage surged from the bottom of his heart even though the world already fell apart. No, he raged because the world fell. The concept of a king or knight no longer existed. Everything had fallen, so he could do whatever he wanted. After all, the concept of nobility no longer had any use. Kim Suho thought this as his hands trembled. Finally, he pounced on Jin Sahyuk and cursed for the first time in his life.

Their scuffle continued for a long time. They ran out of the cave and eventually reached a dead end. A frightening cliff stood before them, but the two entangled children didn't notice it.

Like that, they fell from the cliff.

Who killed who? Did Kim Suho kill Jin Sahyuk or did Jin Sahyuk kill Kim Suho? They both reincarnated, so it didn't matter.

However, Kim Suho wondered as he fell to his death. Why did he have to feel such pain? Why did this world only have despair? Why did Jin Sahyuk confess her sins in the end? Wouldn't it have been better if she just kept quiet and peacefully died?

Kim Suho had no way of finding out, but the surprisingly simple truth would make someone chuckle. Today, Kim Suho finally found out. This world had been a novel created by an author.

This information and mysterious narration entered his brain. The insidious voice didn't belong to a fairytale and the frightening emptiness couldn't be a documentary.

"..."

Kim Suho slowly opened his eyes. Tadak, tadak— He heard the sound of something crackling.

"Auuk—"

He got up with a groan and looked around.

"Ah."

A short mutter escaped his mouth. Everything had been destroyed. The ground burned instead of a campfire and a fog carried the scent of death. Chae Joochul's nature had turned into a swamp of demonic energy. Countless heroes collapsed on the ground, either dead or unconscious.

With a single breath, Baal had materialized destruction within the barrier.

— You've woken up.

A voice resounded. Kim Suho looked up and saw Baal's true body gazing down at him. Kim Suho would describe him as a black dragon, often referred to as the harbinger of destruction in legends and myths.

Baal's reptilian mouth moved.

— I've looked through your memories. How painful. You must've received mine as well, no?

Kim Suho fell silent. As Baal said, he saw a few memories that entered him.

— Returner Hero.

Kim Suho's shoulders instinctively flinched now that he knew what those two words referred to.

— What purpose did that title serve?

Baal's form suddenly shrunk. His giant, draconic body became small as a puppy. Baal looked like a cute lizard and walked to Kim Suho.

— I want to ask if you know the answer, main character.

The lizard made a joking expression.

— Are you disappointed? Are you angry? Are you confused?

Kim Suho's mouth remained shut.

— Main character, you should already know the author of this world.

Kim Suho didn't know, but soon found out. Information about Kim Hajin poured into his brain. Kim Hajin had created him and mapped out his personality. Kim Hajin wrote everything about his life. All his misfortunes, joys, and growth had been for the satisfaction of others. The existence named Kim Suho had been created for entertainment.

— Don't tell me you think this is okay? That you can continue to live in a mere novel. Such foolishness will not be tolerated.

Kim Suho recalled how Kim Hajin had always been unreasonably kind to him. He thought about their friendship and finally understood the real reason.

— That won't be the case. Why? Because the author's task will come to an end if I die.

Kim Suho stared at the chattering Baal.

— This is the final arc, Kim Suho. The final arc! This world will come to an end when the curtain closes. Everything will stop for eternity.

Baal spoke with a grin. The final arc. A novel would end when it reached its conclusion. The world within the novel wouldn't continue despite the readers' curiosity.

— Main character, I know how to save this world. A method to let it continue. You should know too.

"..."

Kim Suho didn't reply and Baal pointed at Misteltein.

— The method lies in your sword.

Baal suggested Kim Suho point the god-slaying sword at someone else.

— Entrap the author's soul in this world forever. This world will stop if the author leaves, but if his soul stays... I will split his soul into pieces and scatter them across the world. Then this world full of life will continue.

Baal believed Kim Hajin's soul formed the core of this world.

— Kim Suho, become the sword that slays god for the sake of this world. We will all become complete existences if he dies. I will gladly accept you as my equal and bring eternal riches and fertility to your world. Wouldn't that be the true method of protecting and saving this world?

Baal's long speech finally ended. He stepped back and stared at Kim Suho while floating in the air. Kim Suho remained silent and blankly stared at Baal. Like that, a long time passed.

— And your answer?

Baal wanted to know what Kim Suho thought and couldn't read the main character's mind. Of course, he didn't care if Kim Suho disagreed. This barrier still trapped the so-called creator. Baal felt like he could kill Kim Hajin within this barrier, so he would simply continue if Kim Suho refused. Kim Suho simply served as a sure method to kill the creator.

However, the Sword Saint thought differently from Baal. No, perhaps they might be quite similar. After all, Kim Suho felt an innate desire to cut out Baal's eyes.

"Haaa..."

Kim Suho took a deep breath and shook off this desire. He recalled the past that he experienced as a dream.

— You! Let me go! I am your king! You dare...

— Shut up! You beggar!

— W-What? Beggar? I saved you when you were a beggar, yet you dare say that!

Two children loudly argued. Kim Suho failed to protect Puharen and killed Prihi with his own hands. His final memories tainted his existence.

However, he received a chance to atone for his past sins. He didn't want to fail again at protecting what he cherished.

He could still recall that day 20 years ago when he arrived on Earth as a baby. He didn't have parents in his previous life, but the parents in this life named him Suho. His name meant, to protect. He felt as if fate played a trick on him. Regardless, he didn't want to become a hero.

He couldn't see himself as one after murdering the person he swore to protect.

As time passed, he felt the invisible hand of fate constricting him. That feeling intensified every time he saw, touched, or swung a sword. The existence known as Kim Suho carried the will of the sword.

He realized something as he grew up. Perhaps this fate began from his name.

He heard the answer to his suspicions on TV from a well-respected hero named Shin Myungchul. The great hero stood in front of a group of children and gave a speech Kim Suho would never forget.

— Everyone, do not forget. A gift isn't a special right, but a duty. With great power comes great responsibility.

Kim Suho decided on his path after hearing those words. After all, he probably reincarnated into this world for a reason. He didn't view himself as the chosen one or a savior. He just felt... a duty to protect.

"Baal..."

Kim Suho only became more certain about his beliefs. He had been born to protect everyone.

— How disappointing.

Baal realized Kim Suho's decision and emitted demonic energy powerful enough to instantly vaporize a human soul. However, Kim Suho severed it in half with one swing. No, perhaps he didn't even take out his sword.

—...!

This surprised Baal, who quickly transformed into his dragon form.

To Kim Suho, Baal's transformation seemed like a pufferfish growing bigger out of fear. Honestly, Kim Suho pitied the devil.

"Thanks, I found out because of you."

Kim Suho gently smiled. It didn't matter if Baal spoke the truth and this world turned out to be a novel. He felt grateful for what he had and for being able to live again. Moreover, he trusted that Kim Hajin wouldn't abandon this world.

"I... have to defeat you."

Kim Suho calmly spoke, but boiled with rage inside. Countless corpses and barely breathing heroes scattered around them. Kim Suho's fury surpassed its limit and turned into a deathly calm.

"To protect this world."

He swung his sword to make his previous thought a reality and aimed at Baal's eyes.

— You just made the worst possible deci...

Baal seemed to smile, but couldn't finish his sentence. He waited for Kim Suho to attack and suddenly lost an eye when the Sword Saint swung through the air.

— Ah?

The devil felt doubt rather than pain or rage. Why? How?

"This world isn't something you can destroy even if it's a novel. There are people I need to protect and that's enough for me."

— You insufferable mortal!

Baal shouted in anger and shot his demonic energy forward. Even now, Baal didn't think he could lose. He possessed an infinite amount of demonic energy in this barrier. He would win with time as Kim Suho ran out of magic power. However...

"Too light."

Kim Suho simply erased Baal's demonic energy with the wave of a hand. He didn't even use Misteltein.

—!

Baal roared and increased his demonic energy. A terrifying storm brewed in the air and shot out, but even against a force capable of devouring a world...

"Your attack is too light compared to the weight of your existence."

Kim Suho seemed completely relaxed.

— You!

He's looking down on me! A mere mortal is looking down on me! That cannot be tolerated. That must not be allowed. How can a mere human threaten me?

Baal felt resentment for the first time.

"Let me ask."

Kim Suho slowly approached and Baal backed off.

"Were you created to live so pitifully?"

—...

Baal stopped emitting demonic energy. Kim Suho's arrogance also drove Baal's fury into a certain calm. Baal turned cold and thought about how Kim Suho suddenly reached transcendence.

"Wait, wait."

A cheerful voice suddenly rang out.

"I'm here too, Kim Suho!"

Chae Nayun shouted while shaking Balmung in one hand. Kim Suho stared at her, but the surprises didn't end there.

"Keuuu—"

Someone painfully stretched and stood from the ruined scenery. The hero covered in steel, Nine Stars Heynckes, finally regained consciousness.

"Ah, you're still alive as I thought! Oh, my disciple is here too!"

Heynckes exclaimed as he looked at Kim Suho and Chae Nayun.

"..."

Soon, Chae Joochul also rose without a sound. He straightened his bent back and neck. Then he clasped his hands behind his back. His traditional outfit became tattered, but his skin underneath showed no signs of injury. His body looked even more perfect than Kim Suho's, especially considering his age.

"Aigoo, my head..."

Aileen got up next and furrowed her brows. She massaged her temples and looked like a caterpillar because of the bags underneath her eyes.

"Thanks, Earthy. You saved me."

Rachel also stood up after Earthy's barrier protected her.

"Keeeu... Where has my honor as a leader gone?"

Yun Seung-Ah smiled at Kim Suho, who slowly turned around and stared at them. Many other heroes also got up one by one. The vast majority remained unconscious, but they hadn't lost to Baal yet. Kim Suho had no reason to fight alone.

"Why the hell is he so strong?"

"Ah... Damn it. I'm out of magic power."

"Hey, Kim Suho. Are you alright?"

Kim Suho faintly smiled at their voices and they approached him one by one. Soon, everyone stood together and gazed at Baal. Their will and fighting spirit hadn't been destroyed in the slightest.

—...

Baal chuckled as he stared at them like ants. An unimaginable fury rose in his heart. It had to be greater than the combined rage of everyone in this world. Then Baal narrowed his remaining eye at them.

Kim Suho took out the holy sword that contained his will to protect.

The human and devil began their final fight for their desired endings.

Chapter 363

Ending (1)

[Morax and Jin Sahyuk]

Jiing— A vibration rang out and Jin Sahyuk shook her head. Demonic energy exploded from an unknown location and burned her skin. She quickly purified the demonic energy with Reality Manipulation. The demonic energy turned blue before disappearing into the air.

"Are you okay?"

Jin Sahyuk turned towards the somewhat arrogant voice. Shin Jonghak looked at her with his spear in hand. He seemed to have been unaffected by the demonic energy explosion.

"..."

Jin Sahyuk silently got up and checked on Morax. The devil suffered slash marks all over. Most of his fingers had been severed and black blood covered his giant body. A human would've died by now, but Morax still lived.

"Interesting."

The voice that resounded didn't belong to Shin Jonghak or Jin Sahyuk. Shin Jonghak tightened the grip around his spear while Jin Sahyuk tied her disheveled hair into a ponytail.

"These beings called devils are truly fascinating. Not as much as humans, but quite intriguing nonetheless."

Orden murmured as he looked at Morax. His eyes flickered with curiosity and Jin Sahyuk found it shocking.

"Did he go crazy after coming back to life?"

The bastard appeared out of nowhere and simply stared at Morax. Orden didn't do anything and simply stood there observing. Then the monster king faced Jin Sahyuk.

"Do you need help, human?"

"..."

Jin Sahyuk shrugged him off with a grin. "You can help by screwing off."

Kurukuru stood next to Orden and flapped its wings. The humanoid insect seemed to be threatening Jin Sahyuk. How dare you! It seemed to say, but Orden suppressed Kurukuru.

"It's too interesting to pass by, no?" Orden dryly replied.

"I didn't know you talked so much."

Orden found the situation quite interesting. Likewise, Jin Sahyuk felt interested in Orden's drastic change. He looked smaller and possessed a sense of humor now.

Whoosh—

Shin Jonghak's spear flew through the air. He glared at Jin Sahyuk with a displeased look.

"Orden doesn't seem to be an ally or a foe. Just focus on the devil, Jin Sahyuk."

Morax moved again and oddly screeched before swinging his arm. Shin Jonghak swung his spear and pushed the devil away. Black light flickered from the tip of Shin Jonghak's spear. This power belonged to Shin Myungchul and had now been passed to him.

"Hmm..."

Jin Sahyuk believed their chances of winning had increased. However, she didn't want to kill Morax yet.

Whoosh—

Morax punched again, but Shin Jonghak struck back with his spear. The black light from the spear traveled through Morax's fist and bound his entire body. It burned and purified everything. Shin Myungchul had acquired this power by atoning for his sins and it boasted an undeniable advantage against one type of opponent. Shin Jonghak became the natural enemy of demons with this new power that could purify demonic energy.

"Oi, hold down that guy's body. Don't burn everything."

However, Jin Sahyuk refrained from killing Morax and lightly jumped.

"What? Wait, where are you going, dumbass?" Shin Jonghak shouted, but she didn't answer. Jin Sahyuk slowly flew up and landed on Morax's shoulder. Morax knew his large body held certain advantages and disadvantages. The devil's shoulder became a disgusting mess because he transformed his skin into a scorching swamp of demonic energy.

Jin Sahyuk's shoes instantly melted when they touched Morax's shoulder. However, her feet remained unaffected because of Reality Manipulation. She wouldn't be able to last long, but should be fine for a few minutes.

"Wait for me, Puharen."

Jin Sahyuk muttered as she glared into Morax's giant eyes. Then she took a deep breath like a diver before a jump.

She swam through the demonic energy swamp and jumped into Morax's pupils. Jin Sahyuk entered his consciousness like she did with Shin Jonghak.

— Crevon's army is sweeping through every region of Earth. They set out from the Steppes of Manchu two days ago and stretched out to the east and west, defeating every demon army. That's not all. In Paris, Grand Magician Oh Jaejin, 9 star magician Ah Hae-In, and her disciple Evandel...

Evandel watched the TV in her cabin. Public broadcasts had been cut off after Baal's descent and only restored today. Many broadcasters reported hopeful news around the world. Evandel calmed herself as she listened.

— Astaroth, the devil in the west, has been defeated by Grand Magician Oh Jaejin and Ah Hae-In. Valac in the east has been pushed back by the German government and Crevon's Hwarang.

At first, this war scared Evandel. However, she learned something new after watching all these heroes risk their lives. Their sacrifice and commitment taught her an important lesson.

Many people fought to protect the world, the animals, the land, and the people. They stood up no matter how many times they fell and didn't give up despite being afraid. They did their best to overcome their fears.

Evandel decided to admire them starting today. Not only that, she swore to follow in their footsteps. The weight of the word hero increased in her heart and she set a new goal for her future self.

— The less hostile Leraje and Vassago have shown strange signs of protecting citizens of their land. The world government and Hero Association have chosen not to antagonize them.

Ssk— Ssk— A strange noise rang out. Evandel tilted her head and looked around the cabin.

— Ah, we've just received additional reports. The demon army that invaded Gaeseong has reportedly been annihilated by an unknown creature. Witnesses described the mysterious creature as a black rabbit...

Ssk— Ssk— Evandel strained her ears and carefully listened. It sounded like words being written, but where did it come from? Evandel thought for a moment before realizing something and turning around.

— Humanity seems to be heading towards victory against the demons, but danger remains. The Nine Evils who serve the devils are still alive and well. The rank 1 devil, Baal, is currently at the Korean Border...

Ssk— Ssk— Someone sent a message through the communication letter she treasured. Evandel quickly sprinted to the letter and picked it up.

[Evandel, are you there?]

"Aaah!"

Her eyes widened at those four words. Evandel swallowed hard and tightened her grip.

[It's me, Hajin. Kim Hajin.]

She almost burst into tears when she read them. No, Evandel did burst into tears. Huaaaang— She held the letter in her embrace while crying. Then she looked at it again.

[Are you doing well?]

"Un! Un! Un!"

Evandel shouted before realizing her voice couldn't reach him. She jotted down a reply and the pencil in her cute hands drew adorable characters.

* * *

[Un! I'm doing well! What about you, Hajin? Are you okay? I want to see you!]

I smiled in Arashi's fortress as I read the communication letter. I felt like I could hear Evandel's voice through the text.

[I'm doing fine. Soon...]

I fell into thought as I wrote. Could I safely return to Evandel?

"Haaa..."

I planned to do everything in my power to tie the final knot. I could still revive one more time even if I died. However...

[Everything's almost over, so be a good girl and listen to Master Ah Hae-In, okay?]

I changed my words after hesitating for a while. Evandel immediately replied in her cute, childlike tone.

"Why are you laughing like that?"

Boss peeked up from the bottom of the ladder. I sat on the second floor while she climbed from the first. Boss narrowed her eyes at the letter when she arrived. I covered it with my hand.

"I'm mentally preparing for the war that's about to begin."

It might look like fooling around, but I still kept a close eye on Baal through the thousand-mile eyes. It would be difficult to kill him in one attack. I could only sit here and wait for the right opportunity.

"What about you, Boss? Are you done?"

"Yeah..." Boss sat next to me and muttered somewhat bitterly.

"I plan on burying Yi Yeonjun's corpse in Pandemonium later."

"Got it."

I also nodded with a bitter smile. Yi Yeonjun had committed horrible deeds and destroyed the happy life Boss could've lived. I couldn't fault him for that in good conscience. After all, I created Boss and her past only materialized based on my writing.

"I might've led a normal life if it weren't for him."

Boss muttered as she looked into the distance. I simply remained silent. Boss couldn't have led a normal life because I created her.

"But..."

She glanced at my hand. Then her hand slowly moved towards mine like a caterpillar.

"But... you know..."

I took the initiative and grabbed her hand because she moved so slow. Boss flinched at first, but soon smiled.

"I was able to meet you."

My heart jumped and I wondered if she could hear it. I raised my head and stared at her in a daze. Boss did the same.

"..."

"..."

I felt a strange sensation rising inside me. It could've been sadness, gratitude, or love. Even if my settings created her past, the current reality had long departed from my novel. Maybe it didn't matter anymore. I couldn't write about what would unfold in the future and no longer knew anything. Perhaps I had finally been freed from the restraints of this world being a novel.

"Boss."

I squeezed her hand and set all those thoughts aside. I only wanted to do one thing right now and slowly leaned towards her. Boss didn't avoid me and seemed to be waiting as she slowly closed her eyes.

"We're all down here."

Jain's voice suddenly interrupted us. Boss jumped in a fluster and pushed me away. Then she glanced down.

"Hmm? What are you two doing up the... Aak!"

Boss threw a shadow rock at Jain before approaching me again. Then she quickly set the previous mood.

"Hajin, what should I do from now on?" Boss asked as she played with my hand.

"What do you mean?"

I knew why she asked, but she had to decide for herself.

Boss grew somewhat frustrated and returned to her usual self.

"I lived to fulfill Yi Yeonjun's wish. Reforming the Chameleon Troupe, killing people, and stealing treasures... They were all for him, but now..."

Boss stopped and suddenly closed her eyes. She didn't finish no matter how long I waited. I bitterly smiled and pulled her towards me. We didn't kiss, but our embrace felt even softer.

"It's fine."

I pointed to the Chameleon Troupe members waiting on the first floor. They worked with Yoo Yeonha to prepare what I asked for.

"You have them. Look for it with your comrades if you don't have a goal or purpose. Without killing people this time, so you can all be happy."

The most ideal solution might not have been the best answer, but Boss smiled at my corny line and looked into my eyes.

"..."

Once again, I felt convinced that I wanted her to be happy. My heart raced as I watched her smile. I wanted her to laugh. I... I loved everything about her.

And that's what saddened me more.

* * *

The atmosphere grew tense as the battle against Baal broke out. A rather odd word interrupted this cold silence.

"Grandfather."

Chae Nayun spoke and everyone, including Baal, turned to her. She seemed upset and the apathetic Chae Joochul didn't know how to react. Then the Immortal gently smiled at his granddaughter as he had always done.

"Grandfather..."

However, Chae Nayun didn't smile. Instead, she glared a bit resentfully at him.

"We need to talk when this ends."

Her tone felt sharp as thorns. Chae Joochul didn't know why she seemed angry, but he nodded anyway.

"Baal."

Then Kim Suho stepped forward.

—...

The devil looked down at Kim Suho and thought about the youth's sudden transcendence because of the barrier. However, Kim Suho didn't wait for him to finish thinking.

“—!”

The heroes roared with all their hearts and charged at Baal.

Baal observed them with his narrow eye. Heynckes' Steel Spirit slashed his skin. Chae Joochul's storm struck him in the face. Rachel's elementals and Aileen's Spirit Speech formed a dragon that bit his neck. Chae Nayun's gigantic sword slashed his chest.

However, Baal didn't react. Kim Suho's sword would nullify any of his attempts at countering. He simply focused on calming his heart to avoid wasting any energy.

Baal continued to think even as he bled. Perhaps he felt desperate and toiled like a human to find an answer. It may have been humiliating, but he soon arrived at a reasonable answer.

Baal had caused this situation himself by cutting off the world's deterrent force to fully descend. The space inside this barrier became isolated from the world's interference, which also affected Kim Suho. The Sword Saint could only transcend because of the main character's authority.

—...

Baal remained silent amidst the barrage of attacks and searched for one person, Kim Hajin. The foolish humans refused his offer, but he believed this world would end if Kim Hajin died. Baal would die as well when that happened.

— Where are you...

Baal couldn't find him and probably wouldn't for all of eternity because Kim Hajin hid in the barrier's crack.

— Hah?

The devil let out a short cry. Chwaaaaack— He could hear something slashing his heart. A giant sword had invaded his true body. Baal stared at the sword piercing his skin and the woman holding this sword.

"Uhahaha, how is it? Painful, right?"

A lowly human, a swordswoman named Chae Nayun, smiled at him. Baal reeled from the anger.

— I admit. I cannot defeat all of you.

He muttered with a cold fury. This declaration felt humiliating, but one option remained.

— Did you forget?

He could just destroy the barrier that caused Kim Suho to transcend. Baal would no longer maintain his true body, but Earth still had devils and demons under his control. It felt unpleasant to receive help, but Baal didn't care about his pride anymore. His subordinates would destroy Earth for him.

— I might die, but I am the evil god who can never be annihilated.

Baal glared at Kim Suho's unwavering eyes and prepared to destroy the barrier. An author might have described this as an act of self-destruction. Even Kim Suho's authority shouldn't be able to stop him from detonating the barrier. Baal chose to destroy his true body without hesitation.

No, he tried to.

Chapter 364

Ending (2)

[Puharen's Inner Mind]

Jin Sahyuk slowly opened her eyes, but only saw darkness. Puharen's inner mind felt cold and empty. The negative emotions in the air constricted her.

Jin Sahyuk relied on her senses as she walked to a certain flickering presence.

“...”

She suddenly stopped after endlessly walking. Her intuition told her she had arrived at the correct spot where the wavering soul called for her. Jin Sahyuk opened her palm and a small light floated up. It partly illuminated her younger brother's dark mind and she found him squatting and trembling in the dark.

“Ah...”

Her breath halted and fire surged from the bottom of her heart. It seemed to burn her entire body. Jin Sahyuk endured the pain and looked at Puharen. His thin, frail body looked cold and only a bottomless darkness could be found in his lifeless pupils. He hadn't grown in the slightest and remained a child. Jin Sahyuk committed his appearance to memory so she would never forget.

“Puharen.”

Her voice couldn't reach him and scattered in the air. Puharen had been stuck in this dark place for dozens of years. She already knew meeting him wouldn't change anything.

“Puharen.”

Still, she called his name. Jin Sahyuk bit her lips and pondered as Puharen refused to move.

What were you doing here all alone? Were you resenting me or looking for your mother who already died?

Jin Sahyuk bent down and slowly reached out. Her trembling fingers touched Puharen’s face and the coldness stung her heart as though she touched a corpse.

She called the child’s name once again.

“Puharen.”

Puharen’s inner mind shook, but this small tremor came from an outside impact. He didn’t have much time left if his inner mind had deteriorated to this state.

She could seek forgiveness later. For now, she had to hurry and placed a hand on Puharen’s shoulder.

“I know I have no right to ask for forgiveness.”

Puharen would never forgive her and she would never be able to atone for her sins. So why? Baal’s words popped up in her head for some reason. Everything had been decided beforehand because they lived in a novel. The settings created by that man caused her previous actions and Puharen’s current state.

Jin Sahyuk laughed in a mocking tone.

“But you know...”

No, Baal’s words just sounded like a lame excuse. A way to pass on one’s failures to another in the form of resentment. However, Jin Sahyuk considered herself a king who didn’t make excuses. Funnily enough, Kim Hajin had helped her achieve this realization. He shattered her principles and reforged them as she begged for her life.

“I’ve always wanted to tell you something.”

Magic power surged from her hand on Puharen’s shoulder. He didn’t even turn to look because his dull eyes already lost the ability to see.

“I’m sorry.”

Jin Sahyuk finally apologized.

With that, she released her magic power. The authority of Reality Manipulation seeped into Puharen and his shoulders faintly shook.

“Hurt me all you want inside my heart for eternity.”

Jin Sahyuk closed her eyes and calmly murmured.

Her magic power shot up like flames and spread to every corner of Puharen’s body. He scattered away like dust or a midsummer night’s flower. Almost as if he never existed in the first place.

With this, Jin Sahyuk killed Puharen for the second time. However, it felt different this time.

“Haaa...”

She took a deep breath and sucked in Puharen’s remains. Then her body flashed with a blue light.

She came up with this after seeing Shin Myunchul. Morax had trapped Puharen’s soul and Shin Myungchul lived on in Shin Jonghak’s inner mind. Who said she couldn’t do the same? She felt confident in succeeding.

I am a king above a devil.

As a king, I will embrace Puharen. This place is too desolate. I don’t know if my heart will be any warmer, but I can’t let you be imprisoned here. I should be the one to free you since I made you like this.

You can bother me all you want and let your soul cry out. I won't complain even if you cut apart my heart.

“Let's go. Together.”

Of course, she didn't ask for Puharen's approval and simply abducted him. Jin Sahyuk ended up using a Jin Sahyuk-like approach.

Tzzzt...

Puharen let out a small sound as he seeped into Jin Sahyuk's heart. Immediately, her body became overloaded. Puharen's soul clashed with hers and caused a pain any human would struggle to endure.

However, Jin Sahyuk endured this heart-wrenching pain even as she coughed mouthfuls of blood.

Koong!

A thud rang from outside when Puharen's soul reached Jin Sahyuk's heart. This impact felt far clearer than the last.

She could also smell a familiar scent. That man finally stepped in. Jin Sahyuk closed her eyes and felt relieved.

Chwaaaaa...

Soon, Morax began to crumble and couldn't maintain his form without his host.

Jin Sahyuk felt Puharen's emotions as Morax scattered away into dust. Uncontrollable pain, resentment, and sorrow... She faintly smiled and accepted all of it with her body.

She could only describe her current expression as a king's smile. Her former scribe would've surely called it that.

Jin Sahyuk lost consciousness while thinking of such unimportant things.

The barrier slowly contracted, the sky narrowed, and the ground cracked. The heroes in the area could easily tell Baal's intentions and fought even harder.

Steel Spirit and Spirit Speech, magic swords and elementals, spells and punches... They poured everything towards Baal.

Chae Joochul's nature caused several explosions inside the devil. Heynckes sliced off Baal's thick skin. Chae Nayun raised her magic sword to support the falling sky.

"Don't come down... Damned ceiling! Uaaaaah! Kkuaaaaaa!"

Her action might look funny, but it served an important purpose. Only Chae Nayun could delay the barrier's contraction with her giant magic sword and overwhelming magic power capacity.

"Huup!"

Kim Suho swung Misteltein to cut Baal's will itself. However, that couldn't be easily destroyed even after Kim Suho slashed off the devil's arm, skinned him, and tore off his wings.

Kim Suho thought about destroying the barrier that isolated them from the world's interference. However, his authority couldn't destroy it because it granted him his current transcendent state.

— It's futile.

Baal knew this too and spoke with a tone of ridicule.

Meanwhile, the barrier's destruction continued. Soon, it would completely contract and explode from the compressed density and pressure. Not even Baal would survive.

The heroes inside would die, but Baal would return to Earth one day. His death would only be temporary and not his complete annihilation. Earth wouldn't escape from his destruction.

Baal guaranteed his victory from the beginning.

— It's your loss.

The devil sinisterly smiled and twisted his hand. The sky inside the barrier crumbled even quicker.

Kwagwagwagwa...

Baal could see the despair in the heroes' eyes as the thunderous destruction rang out. He grinned and an ecstasy welled up in his heart.

Then a mysterious voice rang out from the ceiling.

“Futile? Says who?”

This somewhat dry voice immediately drew everyone's attention. The heroes felt confused and Baal's eyes also widened in shock. He turned towards the voice.

“You're wide open right now because of all the attacks you've received. You should be weaker without your outer skin, right?”

Only then did Baal look down at his body. Demonic energy leaked from numerous cuts and cracks on his skin. His demonic energy surged to form a barrier, but Kim Suho instantly nullified it.

— Y-You... until the end!

As Baal raged at Kim Suho...

“Let's see if you can take this. It'll be a bit different.”

BOOM!

A thunderous noise shook the barrier. Kim Suho, Chae Nayun, Rachel, Yun Seung-Ah, Heynckes, Chae Joochul, Baal, and Bell... Everyone stared at the bullet that formed a white rift in space. The bullet emitted a brilliant light before digging into Baal's heart.

Pzzzt!

—...!

Baal's eyes widened as the bullet reached his heart. Then the barrier stopped contracting. The impact had cut off Baal's will from the barrier.

— Kuuuu... KUAAAAAAK!

Baal coughed a mouthful of blood. Reddish-black liquid flowed from the dragon's mouth. The devil refused to believe it even as he writhed in pain. This bullet contained the universe's deterrent force. Such a thing couldn't exist.

“—!”

Baal roared and pinpointed where the bullet came from. He finally found that damned man. That arrogant, lazy man continued aiming at him.

Baal opened his mouth and breathed out demonic energy mixed with blood. His breath filled with killing intent followed the bullet's previous path, but...

“Nice try.”

Kim Suho slashed it into nothingness and smiled at Baal.

Baal also stopped attacking and looked in contempt at Kim Suho.

—...

A heavy silence descended as the hero and devil glared at each other. Did they feel disgust, resentment, or resignation? Unknown feelings flickered in their eyes.

The cold silence didn't last long. Soon, Baal let out a hollow chuckle.

— Real cheeky... Makes me want to destroy everything...

Kim Suho didn't let Baal continue any further. He never let his guard down as an ironclad rule.

“—!”

The Sword Saint swung his sword with a spirited shout. Many heroes did the same after seeing Kim Suho's all-out attack. Baal simply watched them.

“Break!”

Aileen shouted with her Spirit Speech. Chae Nayun's greatsword emanated a terrifying amount of magic power. Yun Seung-Ah's white flower sword bloomed in every direction. Shimurin's grand magic shook the earth. Harin's exorcism spell could penetrate even Baal. Yoo Jinwoong's crimson electricity flowed through the air. Yoo Sihyuk's wolves leaped towards the devil's neck. Heynckes' sharp Steel Spirit, Chae Joochul's emotionless nature, Rachel's fairy sword Galatine and her elementals, Yi Yongha's inextinguishable flames...

Everything bolstered Kim Suho's brilliant sword strike.

Chapter 365

Ending (3)

[Baal's Barrier]

I transformed the Desert Eagle into a sniper rifle. The handgun expanded with its familiar mechanical sounds. The barrel fused with aether extended forward and the muzzle pointed towards the existence in the distance.

I thought about where to snipe Baal: the heart, the head, or the eyes. None of them looked like weak points. After all, not even the god-slaying bullet could easily pierce Baal's defense.

The god-slaying bullet didn't possess enough power to penetrate his outer skin. It couldn't cut through everything like Kim Suho, push forward with brute force like Chae Nayun, or distort reality like Jin Sahyuk. It could deal critical damage to a devil that reached divinity, but would have to find a way through first.

“...”

I mulled over my options, but soon realized I didn't need to.

“—!”

Baal focused on self-destructing by collapsing his barrier. He no longer cared about the heroes' attacks, so his outer skin tore apart as the battle continued. Demonic energy trickled like sand from the cracks. The barrier's destruction quickened because of his sacrifice, but that didn't matter to me.

Click—

I loaded the god-slaying bullet into the chamber. Then I increased stigma's magic power to the limit. I poured every ounce and used overclocking to add even more. For a moment, it felt as if my soul would be sucked out and my mind violently shook.

“Hajin.”

Someone suddenly touched my shoulder.

The voice held onto my consciousness on the verge of scattering and a gentle touch embraced my cheek. I could see Boss warmly staring at me.

“Thanks.”

I snapped out of my daze and slowly took her hand off. Then I tightened my grip around the trigger.

“Boss, I hope you didn't forget. You still remember my unique skill, right?”

I could barely speak with stigma's immense pressure, but eked out some words.

“I do.”

“Even if it looks like I'm dead...”

I increased stigma's magic power again and it blazed around me like wildfire. Overclocking took the magic power from my heart and my extracted lifeforce seeped into the bullet.

“I won't... really die.”

Boss bitterly smiled and nodded. The charging finally completed. Any more would be impossible even if I risked something greater than my life. It would truly be the end if this didn't work.

[Stigma has been overclocked to 1353%.]

A system message notified me that I expended an additional 13.5 streaks of stigma. I felt relieved for some reason after putting my all into this god-slaying bullet.

— It's futile.

Baal arrogantly muttered. I gazed at Boss one last time and grinned towards the battlefield.

— It's your loss.

Baal declared his victory and I finally stepped in.

"Futile? Says who?"

I blurted along with a mouthful of blood as stigma continued to suppress me. Baal immediately turned and looked at me. His eyes looked terrifying, but I didn't feel afraid. My bullet would pierce his heart and annihilate him.

"Let's see if you can take this. It'll be a bit different."

I pulled the trigger as I stared into his eyes. Kwaaaaaa! A huge explosion erupted and a powerful shockwave shook the barrier. I'd never heard such loud gunfire before.

"Uk!"

The immense destructive power came with a critical side-effect. The god-slaying bullet tore the Desert Eagle apart. Some of the shrapnel struck me, but Boss blocked most of it.

Chwaaaaa...

The god-slaying bullet brilliantly flew after destroying the Desert Eagle. I could see the beautiful trail it left behind. Unfortunately, I wouldn't be able to witness the result.

"..."

My body staggered and saliva flew out of my mouth. Perhaps, it might've been blood. My vision spun and I lost control of my limbs.

— Hajin! Hajin!

I told her I wouldn't die, but Boss still worried. Her agitated voice rang out before disappearing from my consciousness. It felt like sinking into a bottomless pit even though Boss held me. Someone kept pulling me down. Someone I didn't know called for me. Blue words appeared in the darkness as my consciousness faded.

[The Final Arc...]

I read the system message as I endlessly sunk. I had a strong hunch about a certain meeting when I woke up. Then I finally lost consciousness in this unpleasant atmosphere.

* * *

[Korean Border]

An ordinary green field replaced Baal's territory and the sun shone across the blue sky. The land lit up in dazzling greens and yellows.

"Wow."

Kim Suho exclaimed at the beautiful sight and wondered if he might be dreaming. The previous battle didn't feel real as he lay on the ground and admired the scene.

"Ah!"

Reality soon struck and Kim Suho tried to get up, but his body wouldn't move. He had used all his energy and couldn't even lift a finger anymore. He barely managed to tilt his head and check his surroundings.

There, he found Baal. Unlike him, Baal didn't lie disgracefully on the ground. The devil had a deep cut across his body, but stood upright and glared at Kim Suho.

“Did we lose?”

Kim Suho chuckled almost subconsciously.

Such a thought briefly lingered on his mind.

“Kim Suho.”

A somewhat familiar voice rang out and only then did he look beyond Baal.

First, he saw Crevon’s army filling the horizon. Lü Bu and Ki Parang, Lancelot and Kim Yusin, even the Empress Araha... They radiated a golden light brighter than the sun.

Next, he saw a giant castle and ship floating in the sky. It seemed to be Medea’s magic castle and the Genkelope Vessel. Others also arrived.

“Over here.”

Kim Suho’s shoulders flinched as he turned over. An incredible number of heroes stood there. Essence of the Strait, Creator’s Sacred Grace, Desolate Moon, Frost Sanctuary... Chae Nayun smiled as she stood alongside the Temple of Justice members and executives from various guilds.

“Don’t you... ever get tired?”

Kim Suho felt surprised at how Chae Nayun could still stand after using so much magic power. She possessed a ridiculous amount of stamina.

“Now isn’t the time to get tired!”

Chae Nayun shook her head and reached out to him. Kim Suho grabbed her hand and stood up. Then the duo backed away as Baal watched them with sunken eyes. Chae Nayun pointed her sword at the devil.

“It’s round two. Wait, or is it round three?”

Baal bitterly smiled at her words and knew his defeat had been decided. Resignation filled his heart.

The devil’s heartbeat gradually slowed after being pierced by the god-slaying bullet. Baal didn’t have much time left and only felt regret now. If his defeat had been decided by fate... If this expedition had been created so he could never win... If his existence would only suffer defeat...

“How regrettable.”

Then he would’ve liked to rampage more and drive the humans to a corner. Maybe he would’ve found a tiny possibility of victory with a more violent approach.

“Baal.”

Someone called his name and he turned to Bell, who looked just like him. Bell’s gaze only contained pity and Baal lamented this situation. Not only did he fail to achieve his desire, but a human also pitied him. No, he refused to give up.

“Lower your head, Bell. My fight hasn’t ended yet.”

Baal snapped at his old friend and released his demonic energy. He still had enough to bring a few humans with him. It would be unfitting of a devil if he gave up without doing anything.

“Baal!”

A roar rang out and aroused his fighting spirit. Baal turned towards the voice and spotted Shin Jonghak on a hill not too far away. The devil recognized Shin Myungchul’s grandson and recalled the human who once made a contract and summoned him to this world. Koong—Baal’s heart faintly pulsed. He could feel Shin Myungchul’s soul in Shin Jonghak’s heart.

“Haaa...”

To meet the human who summoned him at this time. Could this also be fate's mischief?

Baal quite enjoyed this one. He genuinely smiled and gathered demonic energy into his hand.

"I came to collect your head!" Shin Jonghak shouted and aimed the Conqueror Spear at Baal.

Why did he make so much noise? Baal didn't like how Shin Jonghak acted like a fool, but accepted it with a hearty laugh. No matter the case, a sweet and perilous battlefield lay before him. The end of his expedition neared. Defeat would mean death and annihilation. Even so, that would be fine.

"I will come to you this time."

Baal stepped forward to obtain the one thing he never experienced, true death.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait, VIP Hospital]

Kim Suho slowly opened his eyes. Bright sunlight blurred his vision and a gentle breeze tickled his skin. He jumped and touched his stomach after briefly enjoying the calm.

"Whew."

Kim Suho sighed in relief. It seemed he hadn't died and woken up in the afterlife.

"You're up?"

A familiar voice rang out and Kim Suho tilted his head to the side.

"Yoo Yeonha?"

“Good. You recognize me. It wouldn’t have been surprising if you lost your memory after that injury.”

Yoo Yeonha faintly smiled and nodded.

Kim Suho stared at her in a daze before raising his upper body. The area around his solar plexus hurt, but he endured it.

“Don’t worry about me. What happened to Baal?”

Kim Suho asked as he tried to recall what happened. He repeatedly slashed away at Baal’s demonic energy. Then a demonic energy spear pierced his stomach as he grew tired. His memory ended there.

“Who knows?”

Yoo Yeonha mischievously avoided the question and Kim Suho grew slightly frustrated. Yoo Yeonha’s presence likely meant the situation had been taken care of. He couldn’t hold back his curiosity and turned on the news with the TV remote.

— Earth now faces a critical crossroads after Baal’s annihilation.

“Baal... died?” Kim Suho sighed in relief and asked Yoo Yeonha.

“Mmm... He disappeared along with Bell,” Yoo Yeonha vaguely replied.

“He disappeared?” Kim Suho furrowed his brows.

“Yeah, no one knows where he went. It looked like he died, but we have no way of confirming it. Bell suddenly ran away when the battle ended and disappeared with Baal.”

Bell and Baal. Kim Suho didn’t know the relationship between those twins, but Yoo Yeonha seemed to know everything.

“I heard from Grand Magician Shimurin about their relationship,” Yoo Yeonha explained with a grin.

“What? Tell me!”

— Orden has returned to Vladivostok. The citizens there have welcomed their guardian deity with open arms.

“W-What’s that? O-Orden?”

The report on TV surprised Kim Suho. He urged Yoo Yeonha for another explanation, but she simply shrugged.

“Why ask me? Aren’t you the one who let Orden go?”

“...”

Kim Suho flinched and shut his mouth. Indeed, he never confirmed whether or not Orden died. He even lied about it when the Hero Association asked him because Orden and Kurukuru reminded him of Jin Sahyuk and himself. Unlike his past self who tried to kill his master, Kurukuru tried to save Orden. Kim Suho couldn’t bring himself to cut down Orden, but he confirmed that Orden stopped breathing.

“It’s fine. Orden is our ally now.”

Yoo Yeonha suddenly projected someone’s contact information from her smartwatch. The name read, [Orden].

“Huh? What’s that?”

“How is it? I bet I’m the first one to get Orden’s number.”

“Haaa...”

Kim Suho didn’t know how to react to the proud Yoo Yeonha.

“Anyways, do you want to come out? Nayun, Seung-Ah, and everyone else are in the lobby.”

A smile spread across his face when he heard those two names. Then his expression stiffened when he recalled a certain person.

“What about Hajin?”

“Oh, you don’t have to worry about him.”

“He’s here too?”

“No, he’s in a safer place.”

Yoo Yeonha spoke with a bitter smile. Kim Hajin belonged with the Chameleon Troupe, so he should be in a safer place. After all, that Boss person seemed to like Kim Hajin more than anyone else.

“...”

Kim Suho pondered about the memories Baal showed him. How should he treat Kim Hajin from now on if Hajin really created this world as the author?

“Kim Suho?”

He became startled and quickly raised his head.

“What are you thinking about?” Yoo Yeonha suspiciously stared at him.

“Huh? Ah.”

Well, he could worry about that later and talk to Kim Hajin when they met.

“Nothing. Um, let’s go see everyone else.”

Kim Suho got up while clutching his stomach. Yoo Yeonha offered to help, but he refused and stood by himself. He grew curious as to how he survived after receiving such a serious injury.

“Oh, that? You know Yi Yuri, right?”

“Hmm?”

“The girl you saved a long time ago. You know, back at the museum.”

“Ah!”

“She has the authority of healing. You would’ve been dead if not for her.”

The girl he saved with Chae Nayun back in Cube. He heard she was someone important, but never expected that.

“I’ll have to thank her later. Along with gifts, of course.”

Kim Suho opened the door with a grin.

“What?”

The hospital’s fancy hallway with golden marble floors and chandeliers stunned him. Several people gathered around the circular couches and luxurious chairs.

“Oh, Kim Suho! Are you alright?”

Chae Nayun shouted after spotting him first. She laughed before holding up the child under her armpit.

“Look! Isn’t she cute? This is the kid Rachel gave birth to! Her name’s Evandel!”

“Aah, aah, aaaang...”

The child Chae Nayun introduced struggled to escape. Rachel stepped in to retrieve Evandel and embraced her.

“Don’t raise her like that! Also, I didn’t give birth to Evandel. She...”

Rachel stopped as Evandel looked at her with teary eyes. She hadn’t given birth to Evandel, but saying this again would probably hurt the little girl's feelings.

"You didn't? Then what?" Chae Nayun mischievously smiled and asked.

"..."

Rachel couldn't say anything and let Evandel go. Evandel flew over to Yun Seung-Ah, who gently patted her.

"Hahaha, there's our hero!"

Kim Suho recognized the aged voice before even turning around.

"So, how's your body?"

Heynckes raised his left hand and asked. His right hand had already turned to steel and he could no longer restore it.

"I'm fine, but your arm..."

"I'm fine too. It's normal to lose control of one arm at my age. Well, I'll let you go. This old man needs some more rest."

"Yes, sir."

Kim Suho said goodbye to Heynckes and sat next to Yun Seung-Ah. Several heroes remained in the lobby: Yoo Sihyuk, Ah Hae-In, Yoo Jinwoong, Yi Yongha, Aileen, Nicholas, Chae Nayun, Evandel, Yi Yeonghan... All their voices rang out in a cacophony that made it hard to hear.

"Argh, stop provoking me!" Aileen suddenly shouted and pushed someone away.

"Ehem. What's wrong with a master wanting to see her disciple's injuries?"

Ah Hae-In grabbed Aileen's head with a scowl. Aah, aaaaaaaah!

Aileen struggled with her arms and couldn't bring herself to use Spirit Speech.

“Suho?”

A gentle voice called him and he turned to Seung-Ah. The girl named Evandel sat in her embrace. Yun Seung-Ah held up Evandel's hand and waved.

“Say hi. This is Evandel, a future 9 star magician. Evandel, this is Kim Suho. My guild's second-in-command.”

“Ah, yes. Hi, Evandel.”

“Un, he, hello...”

Evandel seemed shy and quickly hid behind Yun Seung-Ah. She looked incredibly adorable like a smaller version of Rachel. Kim Suho smiled and tried to get closer.

“Evandel just gets cuter every time I see her.”

Yoo Yeonha suddenly appeared and pushed Kim Suho aside. She skipped over to Evandel. However, Yun Seung-Ah narrowed her eyes and blocked Yoo Yeonha.

“You only met her today.”

“But I saw her a long time ago.”

Kim Suho watched their power struggle with a chuckle. He could hear the news report from the TV in the corner.

— We will march forward. After enduring Baal's great evil, humanity will...

Kim Suho turned to watch the TV.

— But before that, there's something I need to say. Something I need to correct.

Shin Jonghak stood on a podium and declared on TV.

— As Shin Myungchul's grandson and as this world's hero...

A smile emerged on Kim Suho's face.

...

Something brushed past Kim Suho's temples. He briefly felt a strange, unpleasant feeling and stopped listening.

Shin Jonghak's introduction went on for too long as he spoke about when he was 3 years old.

No, the unpleasant feeling didn't come from that. Kim Suho felt as if something had changed. The feeling just now seemed to have twisted the world somehow.

It bothered him, but he couldn't investigate the fleeting sensation anymore. Kim Suho furrowed his brows and returned to his seat.

However...

It seemed the others also felt the same sensation.

"W-What was that?"

"I, I don't know..."

Chae Nayun and Rachel tilted their heads in the middle of their quarrel. Evandel and Yoo Yeonha did the same. Evandel stopped moving and widened her eyes like a robot with a dead battery. Yoo Yeonha rubbed her cheeks against Evandel's and suddenly furrowed her brows while looking around.

However, they seemed to be the only ones who noticed this sensation. Everyone else in the lobby acted normal even though they all possessed similar perceptions.

Kim Suho faced the ones who felt something.

“Hey, Chae Nayun. What just happened?”

They couldn’t figure out what changed. Perhaps they would never find out. Drrrrk— The hospital door suddenly opened and more people rushed in.

“Ah, you were all here!”

Medea, Crevon’s Empress Araha, and her generals suddenly appeared. They brightly smiled and joined everyone.

“I, Empress Araha, have something to say to everyone.”

Araha waited for the heroes to give her their attention. After all, she greatly aided them as Crevon’s empress.

“Hello? Everyone?”

However, they only briefly looked at her and went back to talking.

Chapter 366

Decision

[Chameleon Troupe's Sanctuary]

Boss gathered every Chameleon Troupe member to the sanctuary. The cave Kim Hajin modified in the past remained in excellent condition. It looked spotless and even better than before thanks to the goblin tablet's servants.

Boss made a simple announcement. As expected, everyone took the grave content quite lightly. The Chameleon Troupe would be disbanded.

“What are you going to do from now on?”

Jain approached Cheok Jungyeong after their short ceremony. Cheok Jungyeong glanced at her from the couch before shrugging.

“I don't know.”

It only made sense to disband considering why they formed the Chameleon Troupe. Boss wanted to avenge Yi Yeonjun, but after they learned the truth... Well, everything become quite a mess.

“Where's Boss? What's she doing?”

Cheok Jungeong asked and Jain grinned while shaking her head.

“Boss? She's not our boss anymore. She's our club leader now.”

Jain projected a hologram with her smartwatch.

[Social Club – Colored Calves] [Club Leader – Yi Byul] [Club Member – 6]

“I’ll send you an invitation too.”

“...”

Cheok Jungyeong looked displeased, but turned on his smartwatch to receive it. Jain continued with a bright grin.

“Yesterday, she buried Yi Yeonjun’s corpse in Pandemonium. Today, she said she’d atone for her sins for the rest of her life.”

“Atone for her sins?”

“Yep. Apparently, she made a promise with Hajin.”

“Atone how?”

“I don’t know, but Boss has enough wealth to feed a country. It’ll be perfect since there are lots of orphans right now.”

“...”

Cheok Jungyeong silently sighed. Atoning for one’s sins. Could they do something like that? The sin of killing a thousand couldn’t be washed away if they saved a million. The people they had to seek forgiveness from already died. The only forgiveness would be to offer their own heads.

“Why? You want to do it too?”

“No.”

Cheok Jungyeong immediately replied and Jain felt slightly surprised by his quick response. Then he stood up. Koong! Koong! His huge body created inhuman rumbles perhaps because he just returned from killing the remnant demons.

“I’d rather have someone kill me out of vengeance than do that. Well, I doubt anyone can kill me.”

“Pft...”

Jain faintly smiled. Honestly, she agreed with Cheok Jungyeong. Boss might be the only one who considered atoning for their sins. Everyone else had killed far too many to turn back now.

“Well then, why don’t we go do some work?”

“Work?”

Jain made a suggestive smile and Cheok Jungyeong narrowed his eyes. She took out a thick envelope.

“What’s this?”

“Mmm... Probably the incident Boss wants to make right.”

Cheok Jungyeong snatched the envelope and opened it. The first page read, [Data Related to Kwang-Oh Incident]. Cheok Jungyeong looked at Jain without even reading the document.

“You know I don’t read. Explain.”

“Mmm... Well, it’s simple. You know there are secretly three association heads, right?”

Cheok Jungyeong nodded. Yi Yukho officially led the Hero Association, but Kim Sukho and Yoo Jangwon also worked in the shadows. Kim Sukho used to be the president of Korea and Yoo Jangwon had retired as a master rank hero.

“We’ll kill them all.”

“All three of them?”

Cheok Jungyeong widened his eyes. Jain clapped her hands and continued as if he shouldn’t have been surprised yet.

“Yep, also Chae Joochul and Yoo Jinwoong.”

“What? Chae Joochul and Yoo Jinwoong?”

“Why? Are you scared?”

Jain licked her lips and provoked him. Cheok Jungyeong stared into her eyes before smiling and bursting into laughter.

“Uhahahaha! Jain, I didn’t know you were so feisty!”

Cheok Jungyeong could practically feel his muscles heating up from excitement. He didn’t care too much about Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho, but Chae Joochul and Yoo Jinwoong? He saw them as perfect opponents for someone of his skills.

“When are we starting? What’s the plan?”

“We don’t need to do anything. Kim Sukho is already looking for us. He’ll come to us eventually.”

“Uhaha, he’s looking for us? Really?”

That felt even more surprising. Who would’ve thought the prey would search for the predator?

“Yep, we used to be his hunting dog a long time ago. He wants to bury that past.”

What a stupid old man. Jain murmured as she shook her head.

“So who’s participating?” Cheok Jungyeong asked with a big grin.

“Droon, Kaita, Jin Yohan, Khalifa, and Setryn. Arashi wants to focus on research and Yoo Kyunghwan said he’ll be retiring to live peacefully with his lover.”

“Then... Cough.”

Cheok Jungyeong glanced at Jain and seemed to have something to say.

“We’re missing... a few people.”

“Right.”

“So would it be okay to bring someone with us.”

“Hmm? Who? I think we have more than enough.”

“Mmm... You see, I know a thing or two about this Kwang-Oh Incident...”

Their conversation suddenly came to a stop. A strange sensation brushed past Cheok Jungyeong and Jain, but they couldn’t figure it out. The dull Cheok Jungyeong paused and felt something had changed.

“Right, this Kwang-Oh Incident...”

He couldn’t remember a name.

“What is it? Just say it.”

“No... Um, what was his name? The seat of black...”

“Hajin?”

“Oh, right, Hajin. Is this related to Hajin?”

Hajin. For a moment, he couldn’t recall that name. He could never forget, so why? Did he hurt his head while fighting?

“Yeah, you’re right. That’s when Boss met Hajin for the first time. She killed everyone in the evacuation shelter except Hajin,” Jain informed him.

“Anyways, I know someone else who’s related to that incident.”

“Really? Who?” Jain pretended to be surprised and perked up her ears.

“I doubt she’ll want to work with trash like us, but... it’s Jin Seyeon.”

“What? Jin Seyeon?” Jain actually felt surprised this time.

“Yeah.”

Jin Seyeon told Cheok Jungyeong all about it during their stay at the colosseum. She tried to evoke his sympathy by revealing her past so she could dig further into the Chameleon Troupe’s involvement with the Kwang-Oh Incident. Of course, that didn’t work because Cheok Jungyeong didn’t know much about it.

“Jin Seyeon has a grudge against them too. She said her father died because of them.”

Jain stared at him before making a strange smile.

“Interesting. I’m fine with it, but there might be no deaths if she gets involved.”

The masterminds behind the Kwang-Oh Incident should be Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho. Then Chae Joochul, Yoo Jangwon, and Yoo Jinwoong would follow in order of responsibility. Jin Seyeon might try to resolve this matter in a moral way if she interfered.

“I know, but it’s nice to have someone like that. Kind of like that guy... uh... the black seat.”

“Hajin?”

“Right, right. It’s more fun with someone like him. You know, different opinions clashing and creating unexpected situations.”

Cheok Jungyeong grinned and Jain also smiled. However, Jain smiled for a slightly different reason. Jin Seyeon would undoubtedly suggest capturing and punishing the perpetrators by law. Cheok Jungyeong’s hopes of fighting until one side died wouldn’t occur. Despite this, he still wanted to invite her. Jain could guess why and that made her smile.

“Fine, let her know. I doubt she’ll readily agree though.”

“She will if I tell her. Anyways, I’ll contact her.”

Cheok Jungyeong turned on his smartwatch.

[Jin Seyeon]

She had given him her number. He felt reluctant at the time and thought he would never call her. Cheok Jungyeong pressed the call button with a relaxed smile.

Tu— Tu—

His heartbeat quickened as the dial rang. He pretended to be oblivious as to what this meant while secretly telling himself it would be a competition. After all, Jin Seyeon was a master rank hero.

* * *

I revived for the second time with my unique skill, [Clockhand of Fate]. It didn’t feel any better than the first time. The fear and pain of death lingered on my mind. This time, I even experienced my life flashing before my eyes. Strangely enough, most of what I saw came from this world. Not my original world, but the one I currently lived in.

Perhaps I had completely changed. The me from Earth and the me from this world would be impossible to compare. The one from Earth could be considered a real extra. No one special in any way and just an author losing his popularity. However, in this world...

“Agh!”

I felt a sharp pain from my heart, almost as if to scold my self-reproach. I clutched my chest and rolled on the ground. Thankfully, the unbearable pain soon disappeared.

“Haa, haa...”

I took several deep breaths and regained my calm. I found it strange that no one came looking for me. After all, I made quite a ruckus just now. Only then did I look around my surroundings.

“Where am I?”

I couldn’t find anyone. Boss, Jain, Kim Suho, Cheok Jungyeong, Chae Nayun, Yoo Yeonha, Rachel, Evandel...

I lay on the white, soft ground like a field of snow. It didn’t feel cold at all as I picked up a handful of snow. Ppk— Ppk— I could mold it, but it felt warm.

The sky had turned dark, but the stars brightened the area. It felt like I could grasp those crystal clear stars if I just reached out.

This beautiful scenery absorbed me and I didn’t think about the system alerts until some time later.

“Oh right, the system.”

I hadn’t read several messages.

[The final arc, Final Name, has been completed.] [All SP has been retrieved.] [▷??? has now been revealed.] [▷Decision] [You may now make a decision as the author...]

Ssk— I heard footsteps on the snowy field and immediately turned. A man I didn’t recognize walked towards me. He looked ordinary in every way. Neither his face nor physique stood out.

“Nice to meet you, Kim Hajin. I’ve come to fulfill my promise since the final arc has ended.”

However, his extraordinary words shook my heart. I looked at him while sitting in a daze on the ground. He nonchalantly smiled and bowed.

“I am the co-author. Thank you for clearing the story I continued.”

All sorts of thoughts came to me, but I didn't voice them. They floated like bubbles and only stayed in my head. He seemed to have read my mind and answered what I wanted to know most.

"Ah, you must be wondering who I am. I'm someone with a similar job. I guess you could call me a scenario writer. The official title is a dimensional author. Ah, it's not a job that exists for the purpose of satisfying someone. As I said before, it's a self-gratifying job. Unlike you, I'm not from a pinnacle ranked dimension, so my job is determined at birth. A so-called vocation, if you will. I'm not a human, but a universal existence."

I couldn't understand because he threw out too much information. He chuckled and waved as I blankly stared at him.

"Haha, of course, we're nothing compared to your kind. A universal existence might sound grand, but we're only beings derived from novels of pinnacle ranked dimensions. Well, we're in a better spot than others since we can create lesser dimensions. I'm sure this isn't enough to answer your questions, so I'll explain as simply as possible."

Cough. The man cleared his throat and poured out another flurry of words.

"I was born a long, long time ago to create a dimension. I wandered around trying to find one to create, but it seemed impossible with my power. I needed an author's permission. Something only a creator from a pinnacle ranked dimension possessed. However, I could only observe a pinnacle-ranked dimension at the time. I worked hard for thousands of years and that pinnacle ranked dimension finally succeeded in reaching the digital world. It was truly a stroke of luck from the heavens."

The man pretended to wipe the sweat from his forehead.

"Really, what a relief. I was just as lucky as you, Hajin."

A lightbulb suddenly lit up in my head.

"T-That homosapiens@neighbor.com?"

“Yes, exactly. That’s me!”

The man clapped and I snapped out of my daze.

“So... you’re some sort of universal existence that can create dimensions. You were looking for novels to materialize and chose me?”

“Yes, correct!”

“W-Why? Why my novel?”

“Ah, it’s not because I wanted to. If I had a choice, I would’ve loved to materialize a masterpiece like The Silmarillion. However, not many authors would allow a published work, especially a serialized one, to be remade. As I said before, we cannot create without the author’s permission. Honestly, I couldn’t recreate a masterpiece like The Silmarillion even if the author gave me permission. I simply lack the ability to do so. I needed a poorly written novel with enough structure and elements to not be embarrassed about. Ah, ignore that last part, cough.”

The man spoke at length again, but one word bothered me.

“Wait, permission?”

“Yes, many dimensional authors exist where I come from. However, not many aim for a pinnacle ranked dimension like me. For the record, one day in a pinnacle ranked dimension is equivalent to one year for us. In other words, the 6 months you ignored my email was 180 years for me. Ah, it’s not like I resent you for that. I can only send an email once every 90 years. That would be about 3 months in a pinnacle ranked dimension.”

“N-No, that’s not what I’m talking about.”

I became dumbfounded. He couldn’t do anything without my permission?

“Permission? What permission? What about all the changes you made? You changed them however you liked!”

“Eh? What do you mean? You gave me permission, remember?”

“What? Permission?”

“Yes! You clearly stated it in the email! You don’t know how happy I felt when you approved with those three sentences!”

My head instantly turned blank. Deng— A bell seemed to ring in my head. All this really happened because of that email? My life changed so much because of three sentences?

“Honestly, it might’ve been a bit unfair because those three insignificant sentences you wrote gave me an entire world.”

Tak! The man snapped his fingers and a string of messages popped up in the air.

[Pinnacle Ranked Dimension – The ultimate and most stable world where Kim Hajin and other authors live.] [High Ranked Dimension – Omitted] [High-intermediate Ranked Dimension – My world] [Intermediate Ranked Dimension – The world of your novel, The Returnee Hero.] [Low-intermediate Ranked Dimension – Omitted] [Low Ranked Dimension – Where your minigame character, Litrain, lives.] [Lowest Ranked Dimension – Omitted]

“This makes sense, right? This is how dimensions are ranked. I observed your pinnacle ranked dimension for about 10,000 years. That would only be 20-30 years in your original dimension.”

The man snapped again and the messages in the air vanished.

“Your pinnacle ranked dimension truly has all kinds of people. Lazy people, grieving people, loving people, murderous people, excited people, content creators... I felt envious of all of them. You once thought you were just an extra no different than a speck of dust, right? However, you’re like a main character who shines brighter than anyone else in the eyes of real extras like me.”

“No, that’s not the problem. Right... so... you’re saying those three sentences changed my life like this?”

An empty chuckle escaped my lips. The co-author smiled and looked at the sky.

“Yes, and that is also unfair. An email you thoughtlessly replied to actually created a world.”

“...”

I shut my mouth and didn't care to hear any more of his explanations. I would only continue to sigh at my fate. We had a more important matter at hand.

“Whatever, so what's going to happen now?”

“It's simple. You must make a decision. You can leave the world of your novel or stay.”

“I see...”

I noticed my shaking voice. I expected something like this, so I already prepared some questions.

“What happens if I leave this world?”

“The novel will stop without the author and this world will crumble as a result.”

“What? All of it?”

I became dumbstruck and my hair stood on ends. The man nodded as if it wasn't a big deal.

“Of course, isn't that obvious? I'm not the one maintaining this world. It's you from the pinnacle ranked dimension, the one with a noble soul. Without you, a mere intermediate ranked dimension will instantly stop and slowly rot until it disappears.”

The man lightly sighed and continued.

“However, you’ll safely return to Earth. Don’t worry about the passage of time. Less than 10 days should’ve passed in the pinnacle ranked dimension. Maybe not even a day. I’m not too sure about the exact metrics of time. Oh right, I can also erase all your memories of this world if you’d like!”

A hollow laugh escaped me and I clutched my head. Meanwhile, the man continued.

“Please remake this world in prose if you return to your world. I’d like to read it too. That single novel will be far greater than all the worlds I’ve created combined—”

“Greater, my ass.”

I gritted my teeth and cut him off.

“Pardon? Ah, you must not have understood—”

“I did, you piece of shit. That’s why I’m angry. This world... the world you created... is far greater than mine.”

A third-rate author who couldn’t even meet his daily release times and eventually went on hiatus. I could never write a novel greater than this world. Plus, I didn’t think I created this world anymore. I only lived in it.

“Hmm... I see.”

A small smile spread across his face and he turned serious.

“Then what is your decision?”

“I’d like to ask something first.”

It might be more important than anything else.

“Can I die in this world? Am I immortal like Baal?”

“No, you can die. This world won’t stop even if you do because your soul will remain and maintain this world. That’s why Baal wanted to kill you.”

“Haaa...”

A sigh escaped my mouth. I didn’t have a choice from the beginning when I arrived in this world and came to love its people. I already made my decision and actually felt relieved with a bittersweet smile.

“Of course, you can choose to remain here. However, I wouldn’t recommend it because you’ll become a dimensional existence of a much lower rank! Plus—!”

The man’s face frighteningly stiffened and he raised a finger.

“You will no longer be an author. That means you’ll lose everything you obtained with the author’s power. This includes personal relationships in addition to your abilities.”

“...”

I became speechless because that sounded truly frightening. My head turned blank as a sheet of paper. The emptiness filled with everything I built. The faces of countless people flashed by.

“Now, choose. You don’t have much time left. Ten minutes in this world equals a day outside.”

The man urged me, but I didn’t respond. My decision would’ve been simple if he visited on the first day when I hadn’t even become Kim Hajin yet. I would’ve immediately returned.

“Ah...”

How could he ask this now? After so goddamn long? I spent too much time here. To forget everything and let it crumble... I... I’ve come to care too much about this world.

“...”

I began to walk and delayed my decision. My footprints pressed into the snow.

“Where are you going?”

The co-author asked and I briefly replied, “I’m going back.”

“To where?” he asked back.

My vision blurred and small droplets fell onto the field.

“Home,” I replied with tears in my eyes.

“And where is home?”

“...”

I couldn’t answer. I could hardly stand and simply continued on the white path. I walked and walked. Only traces of tears and footsteps lingered on the snowy field. The co-author’s voice rang out from behind. It shook my ears like an empty echo.

“Your existence will slowly fade from memory.”

I should eventually reach home on this path. I didn’t know where that home would be, but I would certainly arrive there. I told myself to walk. A little more, a little more... I didn’t want to be miserable. I didn’t want to regret anymore.

Chapter 367

A Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (1)

A woman with a bow walked through a tranquil forest where demons had stopped people from entering. She came here for the first time and constantly checked her smartwatch for directions. However, she didn't look nervous at all.

She finally arrived at her destination after treading the grassy field for some time. A small log cabin stood among the trees and vegetation.

The woman stood in front of the wooden door with no decorations.

"Huuu..."

She grabbed the doorknob after a deep breath, but a person inside opened it first. The woman stepped back in surprise.

"Oh, you're here."

Another woman greeted her with a bright smile as if they used to be old friends. However, the visitor didn't enter and simply stood outside the cabin. She looked beyond the smiling woman's shoulders. The Divine Archer's vision unfolded and Jin Seyeon spotted several familiar faces. Some she had only ever seen through documents.

"Don't just stand there. Come in."

Jain kindly welcomed her. Khalifa, Setryn, Jin Yohan, and Cheok Jungyeong sat in the room. Jin Seyeon opened her mouth after confirming the present Chameleon Troupe members.

"No, not yet. I haven't accepted your offer."

“Really? Then why are you here?”

“I have a condition. I’m willing to cooperate so long as you agree.”

“Oh? And what’s that?” Jain asked with a giggle.

Koong— The cabin shook and Cheok Jungyeong rose from his seat in the dark. His head almost touched the ceiling and Jin Seyeon swallowed hard. However, she spoke without wavering.

“There will be no killing. They’ll be punished according to the law.”

The five inside the cabin gazed at her. Jin Seyeon felt her muscles tense as she waited for Jain’s response.

“Mmm... We expected as much.”

Thankfully, Jain didn’t seem to be against it. She seemed to be saying, Try it if you can.

The rumors seemed to be true. The Chameleon Troupe supposedly had an ironclad rule to resolve any disagreements through fighting. The victor always had the final say.

Jin Seyeon believed in her abilities, but Cheok Jungyeong would be a tough opponent. Of course, that didn’t mean she had zero chances of winning. She brought [Huang Zhong’s Bow] precisely because of this rule.

“Huhu.”

Jain pondered while rubbing her chin and suddenly smiled. Jin Seyeon sharpened her senses and grabbed her bow.

“Sure, let’s do that,” Jain agreed.

“In that case... Eh?”

Jin Seyeon took out her bow when she registered Jain’s words and became dazed. What did I just hear? She blankly stared at Jain and tilted her head.

Jain repeated it once again.

“We’ll do that. No killing. Only justice. Everyone is okay with that, right?”

The other members acted even weirder. Jin Seyeon thought Cheok Jungyeong would disagree, but even he nodded.

“Then you’ll be working with us, right?” Jain grinned.

“Huh? Ah, wait!”

Jain grabbed Jin Seyeon’s hand and pulled her into the cabin.

* * *

[Essence of the Strait, Chief Officer’s Office]

Five days had passed since the victory against Baal. Yoo Yeonha sat in her chair and stared out the window. The reddish-black sky returned to its original color. Just looking at the endless blue sky warmed her. The birds chirping, the fluffy clouds, and the blazing sun all seemed so beautiful.

“Huuu...”

Yoo Yeonha shook off these feelings and turned back to her desk with a mountain of documents. She had to take care of all these post-war matters.

Yoo Yeonha clenched her fists and encouraged herself despite being overloaded with work. Essence of the Strait would rise above Korea and become ruler of the world once they took care of everything.

Yesterday’s newspaper caught her eye as she focused on the documents.

[Shin Jonghak's Confession – Shin Myungchul's regression brought upon this disaster!]

“...”

Her heart grew heavy as she looked at it. Shin Jonghak's confession caused a huge stir around the world after Baal's annihilation. As a result, Shin Myungchul's previous position as a saint greatly changed.

However, Shin Jonghak greatly contributed against Baal and decided to donate most of his family's wealth towards rebuilding and dealing with the existing demons. Most importantly, Yoo Yeonha's terrifying media manipulation helped Shin Myungchul avoid becoming trash that should burn in hell (as Jin Sahyuk put it).

“Sigh...”

Yoo Yeonha moved the newspaper to the corner of her desk. She suddenly recalled her father, who promised to make a certain announcement soon.

Jiing—

Her smartwatch vibrated. It came from her secretary, Jin Sechan, who had been living in the Republic of Leores. He only just returned thanks to Shimurin's power and also worked as a secretary there.

— This is Jin Sechan.

“Yes, go ahead.”

— The demons have launched a surprise attack in Seoul. Their commander is one of the New Evils and their goal seems to be the demonic energy gem under the association's management.

“Is that so?”

Yoo Yeonha rested her chin on her palm. The threat of Baal had disappeared, but demons remained. They chose to stay and live here despite Baal's defeat. Some even joined the djinns to make Pandemonium their home.

A new term called the New Evils had been coined. The Nine Evils had collapsed during the war, but the few members who survived formed a new organization.

“We don’t have to worry if it’s Seoul. Kim Suho happens to be there. Ah, but send some people over just for show.”

— Yes, understood. About what you said before regarding the Chameleon Troupe Foundation...

“The Chameleon Toupe has disbanded.”

— My apologies. The Yi Byul Foundation is proceeding smoothly.

The Chameleon Troupe disbanded, but Yi Byul remained as Yoo Yeonha’s partner. Yoo Yeonha fervently recruited her and thought Yi Byul could act as an Essence of the Strait hero after a little background tweak. After all, Yi Byul seemed interested in the job.

“What about it?”

— Well, it’s about the scale of her wealth... I’ll send you the details.

“Got it.”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t think too much about it, but doubted her eyes when she saw what Jin Sechan sent.

“She amassed quite a fortune.”

Yi Byul’s wealth surprised even Yoo Yeonha. The former Chameleon Troupe leader owned more than 10 private islands. Her wealth amounted to hundreds of trillions of won if one included all her treasures, artifacts, stocks, and World of Wish items. The value of these assets would only increase as time passed.

“Oh? She’s also a majority shareholder in our companies? She should be able to single-handedly feed all the war orphans with this much.”

Yi Byul’s assets included stocks of Essence of the Strait’s subsidiaries. She invested on a business scale rather than an individual one. That woman sure seemed greedy.

— We’re managing her assets as efficiently as we can, but the sheer scale makes it slightly difficult.

“Be as honest as possible and donate most of the profits. Make sure you watch the employees so they don’t do anything stupid out of greed.”

Yi Byul used to lead the Chameleon Troupe. Doing something underhanded could get them all killed.

— Yes, understood. Then we’ll focus on rescuing children.

“Great.”

— I’m hanging up.

Yoo Yeonha stretched after the video call and picked up her smartwatch. Rachel had messaged her.

[Rachel – Photo]

“Ah, this.”

Yoo Yeonha quickly tapped the message. As expected, a picture of Evandel popped up. The little girl must’ve just eaten cake and had whipped cream all over her mouth.

“She... She’s too cute.”

Yoo Yeonha stared in a daze and typed a reply with trembling shoulders.

[Hiding something so cute... God, why is she so cute? Oh yeah, didn’t you say Evandel liked dolls? Next time we meet—]

“Mmm?”

Yoo Yeonha suddenly felt as if she forgot something and blushed from embarrassment. She only wrote out a message, so why did she feel so embarrassed? She couldn't figure it out no matter how hard she thought. Then she erased the message she already wrote and got to the point.

[You don't have to use Evandel to convince me. The conference will happen. I'll take a portal over at 6 P.M. in two days. I'll be generous with England, but don't go overboard with your requests.]

Yoo Yeonha didn't wait long for Rachel's reply.

[Of course, Evandel and I are eagerly waiting. ^-^]

The message came with two more pictures of Evandel. The cute girl jumped after a butterfly in the first and took a nap with Hayang in the second.

“Wow... Ah.”

Yoo Yeonha briefly melted from the cuteness, but quickly coughed and went back to work.

* * *

[Seoul – Road to Gwanghwamun]

A limousine and a regular car couldn't be compared. A regular car went clunk clunk and a limousine went shooong like a snake. Obviously, people would choose the latter because of their natural instinct to survive. After all, shooong went faster and felt safer than clunk clunk.

“Ah... mmm, ah. Mmm. Ah, mmm...”

However, a mutant who defied nature existed. Kim Suho sat in the back of the limousine and twisted in discomfort. He squirmed for a long time like a child holding in his pee before finally speaking out.

“I think it’ll be faster for me to get off and go on foot.”

“No, this is an official business matter at an official setting.”

Kim Suho’s secretary firmly refused. As expected of the witch who formerly served the demon king, she thoroughly took care of her master. Kim Suho awkwardly scratched his neck.

He just returned from Manchuria’s battlefield and headed towards the Hero Association. Only 5 days had passed since Baal’s annihilation and demons remained in Pandemonium.

The association was hosting a banquet today. Kim Suho didn’t want to go, but the former president, Kim Sukho, insisted. Yun Seung-Ah also wanted Kim Suho there and he felt slightly indebted to Kim Sukho for the scholarship that helped his family.

“Cough.”

Kim Suho didn’t resist and unfastened his two suit buttons. He looked out the window at the clear blue sky and the Han River. Kim Suho thoughtlessly turned after watching the surface that glistened like jewels.

“...!”

He faced a woman who suddenly appeared and naturally sat next to him. How should he describe it? It felt rather terrifying like a horror movie. Kim Suho’s heart jumped, but he tried to remain calm.

“Where are you going?”

The ghost... no, Jin Sahyuk asked. Kim Suho glanced at his secretary, who stole glances at them from the rear-view mirror. It didn’t look like she would kick Jin Sahyuk out.

“The association.”

Kim Suho leisurely replied and Jin Sahyuk’s eyebrows perked up.

“You? Why are you diving into politics?”

“It’s not politics. It’s not like it’s a meaningless conference either.”

“Honestly, I don’t care about you. What about that guy?”

Jin Sahyuk asked and Kim Suho fell into thought. That guy? Did she mean Shin Jonghak?

“Jonghak should be in Africa right now.”

“No, not him idiot.”

Jin Sahyuk furrowed her brows and Kim Suho tilted his head.

“Then who?”

“That guy. You know, that guy.”

“Stop being cryptic. Who’s...”

Kim Suho suddenly paused and felt an unpleasant sensation in his head. Something hovered on the tip of his tongue, but he couldn’t figure it out no matter how hard he thought. He couldn’t recall someone he forgot.

“Don’t worry. You don’t have to hide him. I won’t bring him to my world.”

Jin Sahyuk said with a shrug. Kim Suho only grew more confused when Jin Sahyuk acted like this.

“...?”

She continued in frustration at Kim Suho's dazed expression.

"I'm leaving alone, okay? I don't want to involve an unrelated person."

Only then did Kim Suho think of something to say.

"You're leaving? To Akatrina?"

"That's right. Unlike you, I have a strong attachment to my homeworld."

Jin Sahyuk's voice carried a rueful pride. She wanted to return as soon as possible and only remained on Earth to make preparations like gathering food.

Kim Suho stared into her eyes, which no longer looked bloodthirsty. Instead, they looked deep and full of life now. Her eyes shone with a righteous will.

Kim Suho bitterly smiled and shook his head. "I miss our homeworld too."

"Yeah, because your homeworld is Earth. Stop playing with words and tell me—"

"No."

Kim Suho cut her off and she scowled at him.

"I miss Akatrina too. That's my homeworld. I'm still using the swordsmanship I learned there and living by the principles I set there. I can't erase Akatrina from my heart no matter how much I deny it."

"..."

"So I've decided to accept it. My life in Akatrina... wasn't the happiest. Honestly, it felt quite miserable. However, I don't resent the world because of that. After all, I'm here today because of Akatrina."

Kim Suho's short life in Akatrina mostly consisted of betrayal, sorrow, despair, and frustration. Some happiness and love existed as well. He finally felt like he could accept all these memories, but Jin Sahyuk angrily punched the back seat.

"Shut up. I don't care about that. I need to know where that guy is—"

Kiiik— The limousine suddenly stopped. All the cars in front stopped as well or hit the guardrail. Then an explosion rang out and shook the surroundings.

Kim Suho quickly opened the door and went out to assess the situation. He spotted demons flying over the Han River.

"Jin Sahyuk?"

"What."

Kim Suho held up his scabbard as she approached.

"You'll help, right?"

"What?"

"Why are you so surprised? Didn't you help us when we fought Baal?"

"Are you mad? Why should I? I have my hands full with Akatrina."

Jin Sahyuk narrowed her eyes and Kim Suho chuckled before sincerely pleading.

"Your former servant humbly requests of you."

Jin Sahyuk paused as she prepared to leave. Kim Suho formally spoke to her for the first time and she scrutinized him with emotionless eyes. Soon, a big grin emerged on her face.

"A request from a servant who killed his king..."

Kim Suho also smiled at her words. A servant who killed his king and a king who killed her servant. Jin Sahyuk didn't apologize and Kim Suho didn't expect an apology.

“This benevolent lord shall grant your request.”

Jin Sahyuk would always act like Jin Sahyuk. No king in the world would apologize to their servant.

“Thank you very much. Also... I'm sorry about the past... Pft.”

Kim Suho chuckled and took out Misteltein. The sword's brilliant light illuminated the Han River.

“You sure have a nice sword. Of course, that just means you're weak without your weapon.”

Jin Sahyuk also chuckled and released black magic power that transformed into her armor. Countless spears and swords also appeared in the air. Meanwhile, the demon army charged from the sky.

Kwaaaaa—

Jin Sahyuk fired her weapons and tore their bodies apart. Kim Suho also sent his sword strikes towards the fearless demons who didn't recognize their opponents. He couldn't recall anything as he swung his sword and looked at Misteltein slicing his enemies in half.

What was it? Wasn't there something important about this sword? Memories with a precious person... So why? Why can't I remember?

Kim Suho forgot, but wanted to remember. He desperately wanted to recall, but—

“Kuhahahaha! So you're Kim Suho!”

A roar interrupted his thoughts. A powerful enemy appeared and blocked Kim Suho's path.

“It’s good to see you!”

He seemed to know Kim Suho and Kim Suho also recognized him.

A demon wrapped in black metal. It looked like he wore a ridiculous spandex suit. His 3 meter height, monstrous muscles, and intimidating face made him the most famous New Evil. They called him the Iron Evil Lord. He had attacked 28 high rank heroes and 20 of them lost their lives. This opponent couldn’t be taken lightly.

“I shall be the one to kill you!”

Kim Suho stopped thinking as iron nails flew towards him.

* * *

I found myself at the Seoul station when I opened my eyes. Boss probably didn’t abandon me here, so it must be the co-author’s doing. I felt grateful since the co-author said my existence would slowly fade from memory. That meant Boss would forget me even as I stood in front of her. Being here like this felt better than seeing her forget me.

I checked today’s date on the newspaper covering me. Around 6 days had passed since Baal’s annihilation. Next, I checked what I still had. As expected, everything disappeared. My gifts, authorities, arts, physiques, skills, SP, the system, DP, items... Everything I obtained through the author’s power no longer existed.

I felt lost and didn’t know what to do. The reality I tried to deny flooded in like a tidal wave and I slightly teared up.

However, I didn’t plan on sitting here and crying. I already experienced death twice. I lost everything, but I still had my memories and the tough mindset I built. Still, it took me a day to leave the Seoul station.

Thankfully, this world had one place where I could stay. The apartment I first woke up in that belonged to Chundong. I headed there thinking what if. The 90 square meter home greeted me like it did when I first opened my eyes in this world. I had returned to where everything began.

“Sigh...”

I slouched on the couch and watched TV.

— The threat of Baal has disappeared, but a troublesome force called the New Evils has risen. The world’s greatest hero academy, Cube, has officially announced its revival.

The news reported all the current events.

— Hero Shin Jonghak has decided to concentrate on subjugating the New Evils. Shin Myungchul’s actions led Baal to this world, but the public is still rooting for Shin Jonghak. One can easily tell how pure-hearted he is by revealing his grandfather’s sins and trying to atone under the sun.

Yoo Yeonha’s media manipulation clearly played a part in controlling public backlash.

— Hero Chae Nayun! Are you expecting to become a master rank hero? Everyone from the association is expecting that.

— Huh? N-No! Now’s not the time to think of such things. We have a lot of reconstruction ahead. People to protect and rescue. Lots of enemies to defeat. I want everyone to focus on that. Ranking heroes for fun can come later. Anyways, I’m going back to work.

Chae Nayun finished her interview with the necklace I gifted her around her neck.

— A nameless angel is supporting children who lost their families during the war. The donation amounts to a trillion won even by rough estimates.

That must be Boss. I lay on the couch and kept my eyes on the rectangular TV. I looked at the people who would lead brilliant lives in a world that no longer remained a novel. Then I wrapped my hands around my face in happiness and sorrow.

— Iron Evil Lord has been defeated after attacking the Han River.

Creator's Sacred Grace will continue to fight the demons with courage and determination!

Kim Suho stood on a podium while discussing the recent attack on Seoul.

"Well..." I murmured as I looked at Kim Suho.

"I'm sure I can survive somehow."

This wasn't my first rodeo as an extra. I always meant to live like someone who didn't exist. I made my decision, so I shouldn't regret or cry about it. I just had to start over from scratch.

"Ah, should I try applying as a background actor or something?"

I think I'd be a pretty good actor.

I turned off the TV and got up. Then I ordered some delivery after drinking a water bottle from the fridge. The spicy braised chicken cost 23,000 won. Thankfully, I could survive a month without starving with Kim Chundong's money. After that, I'd probably have to look for a part-time job.

A stifling silence filled the room after I ordered the food and made it feel quite lonely.

"..."

I picked up a chopstick from the kitchen's utensil holder. Suddenly, I recalled my [Master Sharpshooter] gift and lightly threw the chopstick. It didn't fly at a terrifying speed and simply fell on the ground.

"Haha, obviously."

I tried the same thing a thousand times already. I should just accept it by now. Kim Hajin as a character had disappeared.

Ding—

The bell suddenly rang.

“Huh? The delivery’s here already?”

Since when did spicy braised chicken take 3 minutes to arrive? I tilted my head and opened the front door.

“Hello?”

I couldn’t see anyone, but my foot bumped into something.

“What’s this?”

I furrowed my brows at a huge package about the size of two fruit boxes. I kneeled and spotted a small letter attached to the side.

[This is my final gift.]

“Eh?”

Dokun— My heart skipped a beat. I carefully looked around the hallway before taking the box. I couldn’t lift it and had to drag it inside.

“Haa, haa...”

Even something so simple made me gasp for air. I brought it to the living room and considered ripping the tape apart with my bare hands before grabbing a pair of scissors.

“Huuu...”

I took a deep breath and cut the tape. Then I opened it.

“...”

I became speechless and complicated emotions welled up in my heart.

The package contained a black suit engraved with a lotus symbol and a beautiful silver gun. The equipment I used had returned.

“...”

I blankly stared at them before hitting the box with my head.

I didn't cry. I refuse to believe I did. I just felt grateful. Grateful he would leave me with at least this. Maybe he would send me more gifts if I expressed my gratitude.

“Ah... hurgh... Uk...”

Strange sounds that represented my true feelings came out of my mouth.

Chapter 368

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (2)

[Kim Hajin's Apartment]

I carefully placed the Black Lotus Uniform and Desert Eagle on the couch. I longingly stared at them for a while and looked inside the box again for anything else. A small, black box sat on the bottom. A box inside a box? I tilted my head and unwrapped it.

“Mmm?”

It contained a smartwatch and a small envelope. First, I took out the smartwatch. The strap and case had been luxuriously decorated with obsidian. Yoo Yeonha had it custom-made for me.

I turned it on. It seemed to function properly and still recognized me as the owner. I could see my ID as Kim Hajin along with my bank accounts, stocks, and other personal assets in the [User Wallet]. Then I checked how much money I had.

“Eh?”

I couldn't help but gasp since my accounts had more than I thought. My bank account alone held 30 million won. I also possessed 10 shares of Essential Pharmacy, 10 shares of Essential Dynamics, and 10 shares of Essence of the Strait totaling 60 million won. It couldn't be compared to what I had before, but I felt extremely grateful.

“...”

I suddenly recalled something as I looked at my stocks. I would always sell them to Boss whenever she sulked. Essence of the Strait's unlisted stocks couldn't be acquired even with money. These trustworthy stocks always cheered up Boss. The corners of her mouth would twitch and her face would redden even though she said she didn't need them. She looked so cute without even trying.

“Tsk...”

I set down the smartwatch as my old memories caused ripples that formed into a tidal wave. I felt like I might faint and leaned against the couch. Then I sank deeper and began to miss everyone too much. Evandel and Rachel, Chae Nayun and Kim Suho, Yoo Yeonha and Boss... Even the friends and family from my homeworld.

Well, I never had any close friends. Still, I wanted to see my parents again. I couldn't imagine how they would feel after finding out I disappeared.

Stop worrying. I decided for myself. This world's time flows differently. Less than 100 days would have passed there even if I die of old age.

I justified my choice again.

“Eubebebebebe...”

I slapped my cheeks and already decided not to regret it. I couldn't just stay here so pathetically.

I forced myself up and wore the Black Lotus Uniform. I had grown a little shorter and the uniform touched the ground. The moment I thought this— Whish! The uniform automatically shrunk to fit my body. It seemed the functions remained.

“Hmm.”

I looked at myself in the mirror before placing the extremely light Desert Eagle in the holster. Then I sat on the couch and thought about what to do from now on. I couldn't come up with anything and surfed the internet on my smartwatch.

“She said it had internet connection, right?”

Yoo Yeonha kept bragging that this smartwatch featured higher tech than most computers on the market.

I placed the smartwatch on the table and switched to its desktop mode. A hologram keyboard and monitor projected in the air. A certain website caught my attention as I browsed the web portals.

A smile emerged on my face when I saw a webnovel site.

“Should I write a novel?”

If I wrote the past ten or so years I experienced as a novel... No, it probably wouldn't be that fun. I had no plans to write a novel ever again.

I threw the thought away and searched for other websites. I mainly focused on job boards for some work. I wanted to feel alive again at the very least.

[Welcome to Korea's biggest mercenary website – Desert Soul.] [Open Recruitment for Mercenaries] [Mission Requests] [Check/Cancel Missions]

“Mercenary?”

It felt quite tempting. I had the Desert Eagle for offense and the Black Lotus Uniform for defense. It would be difficult for most attacks to penetrate the uniform's defense. However, I no longer possessed my sharpshooting. I also didn't want to jump back into battle when I barely escaped that life.

“Oh right, there was something else.”

I went back to the black box and recalled the small envelope that came with the smartwatch. It felt quite thick.

“Let's see...”

I felt a bit lonely and muttered to myself as I tore open the envelope.

“Huh?”

A small droplet fell from it and clung to my body. I felt surprised at first, but immediately became grateful. I recognized the formless weapon and first unique item I ever obtained in this world. It looked smaller now, but aether had undoubtedly returned.

“It’s nice to see you again.”

I stopped myself from tearing up and accepted aether’s familiar sensation. Aether stuck to me like glue, but the envelope still felt thick. I wondered what else it contained and peeked inside.

“This is...”

I reached in and pulled out a sheet of paper. The surface of this coupon-like paper with strange handwriting read:

[Physique Acquisition Coupon – Medicinal Memory Physique]

“Pft...”

I couldn’t help but laugh. This seemed to be the last gift from the co-author.

I didn’t know why he chose the [Medicinal Memory Physique] when I also had [Master Sharpshooter], the [Magic Dysfunction Physique], [Random Consolidation System], and [Parkour]. Well, I couldn’t complain. The co-author only left me with this, so I had to plan my future with it in mind.

I returned to the hologram monitor and searched for a keyword on the [Help Wanted Cafe].

[Search] – [Essential Pharmacy] [15,321 posts with “Essential Pharmacy”]

— The open recruitment notice for Essential Pharmacy is out. Looks like they’re hiring a large number this time. Is anyone looking to apply?

— Essential Pharmacy’s test is too hard and unpredictable. Last time, I heard they asked about how to kill a dragon or something.

— I heard the salary for researchers is quite high. And because of the war against the New Evils...

“That’s right.”

I nodded after reading the posts for about 3 minutes. I could best utilize the [Medicinal Memory Physique] with this. I killed too many people in this world. At first, I justified it by saying I only killed characters in a novel. Then I told myself it had been necessary after recognizing this world as real.

Perhaps the co-author left me this physique to save others. Rather than kill...

What Kim Suho once told me resounded in my ears.

Everyone in this world is a main character.

He was right. I could lead my own life even if everyone forgot about me. Perhaps I might be able to live more faithfully than before. At the very least, the current me wouldn’t treat this world as a novel.

With a grin, I gripped the [Medicinal Memory Physique] coupon. Chweeek— I ripped it in half and a blue current flowed into my body.

“Whew...”

The medicinal effects I memorized before had disappeared, but that didn’t matter. I could just start over again.

“Let’s see...”

Chak, chack! I energetically clapped and accessed the website.

Around 5 minutes later...

Essential Pharmacy's open recruitment required an educational background.

That made sense. What pharmaceutical company would accept someone who didn't attend medical school? They didn't even list such an obvious requirement on the employment site.

"Sigh... Well, I don't want to give up. Guess I'll apply to the sales department or something."

* * *

[England – Buckingham Palace]

Rachel stayed in a private office with Evandel, who busily talked to her friends over a video call.

"Un, see you later! I have lots of time now!"

— Evandel, you're famous! Are you sure?

"Mm! Don't worry. I have time! Heehee."

— Yay! Then we'll be waiting for you!

Evandel brightly smiled at her friends and Rachel had a rather random thought. Did young kids always use exclamation marks? No, she thought about something else. Rachel furrowed her brows and forgot.

"Un, see you!"

Evandel hung up and blurted out again.

"I miss you."

I miss you. Rachel didn't know what that meant. Recently, Evandel kept sleep-talking and saying those words out of habit. She would say it in the middle of eating, showering, and even running around.

“I miss you.”

Evandel would only tilt her head when Rachel asked who she missed.

Tok, tok—

Someone knocked on the door and the royal court’s secretary spoke.

— She is almost here.

Yoo Yeonha would soon arrive and Rachel walked out with Evandel. The prime minister, his cabinet, and other parliament members also gathered in the garden.

“Don’t be nervous, Princess. The negotiation looks favorable.”

The prime minister kept trembling despite saying this.

“Don’t be too nervous either, Prime Minister.”

“Hahaha, nervous? Never. I’m never nervous. Hahaha.”

Yoo Yeonha’s limousine appeared 5 minutes later with an incredible entourage. After getting off, Yoo Yeonha entered the meeting room and received a warm welcome from them. She replied to the prime minister’s joke extremely coldly.

“Now, let’s begin the negotiation. Before that, why is there a kid here?”

Yoo Yeonha slightly lost her calm when she spotted Evandel sitting inside the room full of suited politicians.

“Princess Rachel?”

Yoo Yeonha’s sharp gaze turned to Rachel.

“Yes?”

Rachel repeatedly blinked and pretended to be oblivious. Evandel also blinked at Yoo Yeonha while sitting on a chair that looked too big. The little girl couldn't quite place her arms on the table and Yoo Yeonha found this incredibly cute. However, the Queen of Seoul refused to mix business with pleasure.

"This is an important negotiation meeting. Please leave Evandel out of it."

"No, Evandel is here because she wants to be a part of it."

Rachel spoke and looked at Evandel.

"What?" Yoo Yeonha frowned. This princess wanted to use a kid for negotiation?

"Evandel wants to become a hero in the future and the English Royal Court plans to support her as much as possible. After all, she possesses great talent. We hoped, through this meeting, that Evandel could become a member of a Korean guild and an English guild."

Yoo Yeonha's shoulders turned stiff at Rachel's words. She racked her brain before clearing her throat and nodding.

"I see. Well, I've heard of our little hero's accomplishments. You did great, future hero Evandel."

"Eh? Ah, hehehe... Th... thank you..."

Evandel tried her best to not laugh at the praise. Yoo Yeonha also lightly smiled and spread out the documents she brought.

"Then let's begin the negotiations and also discuss future hero Evandel's guild status."

* * *

[Korea, Seoul – Chae Joochul's Mansion]

“We’re here, Grand Hero.”

The driver’s voice woke Chae Nayun. She finally returned after completing a mission and narrowly opened her eyes. Drool dripped from her mouth and tears flowed down her cheeks. She wondered why she cried.

“Ah, thanks. Yaawn.” Chae Nayun wiped away the tears and drool.

“What time is it?”

“1:30 A.M.”

“Wow, really? I fought for 18 hours? No wonder I feel so tired.”

“Why don’t you form a team too? It’ll significantly reduce your exhaustion.”

“Hm? Ah, no. I like being alone.”

Chae Nayun’s official position became Grand Hero. It equaled a team leader position and she held one of the highest ranks in Essence of the Strait. She could form a team, but almost always completed her missions alone. Chae Nayun didn’t know why either. She simply thought she had to.

“You can go back. I’ll leave on my own tomorrow, so rest up.”

“Yes, thank you.”

Chae Nayun got off and walked past the front door as usual. However, a certain presence caught her attention. Not an assassin, but someone who always stood out. Chae Nayun stopped and turned in his direction.

“Oi, crazy woman. It’s been a while.”

A huge figure with terrifying muscles and protruding veins appeared from the dark. A human monster that seemed impossible to kill with a blade. Chae Nayun reached back to grab Balmung.

“Ah, don’t be so wary. My business isn’t with you.” Cheok Jungyeong waved and proudly walked to the front door.

“What business do you have with me?” Chae Nayun didn’t relax and spat out.

“I told you. My business isn’t with you. I’m here for your grandfather.”

“Grandfather?”

“Yep, I came to make your grandfather atone for his past sins.”

“What?”

“Don’t pretend like you don’t know about the Kwang-Oh Incident.”

Chae Nayun flinched. She knew about it. Killing innocent people to silence a political opponent. Hiding all records of it and manipulating the media. They committed a truly heinous massacre. And... And... Mmm... What was it? Wasn’t there something important?

“So tell me. Where is your grand—”

An arrow suddenly struck the back of Cheok Jungyeong’s head. It must’ve been quite strong since his head bent forward at a 90 degree angle. Cheok Jungyeong remained in that position for a while before gritting his teeth and glaring back.

“That stupid woman... Does she think she’s the leader now?”

“Don’t be so violent.”

A voice rang out from the sky. The startled Chae Nayun quickly turned in that direction. A hooded archer sat on top of a pine tree near the mansion.

“Sorry for visiting so suddenly, Chae Nayun.”

The archer spoke and lifted her hood.

“This is something that must be done. We wanted to get your opinion too, so excuse our rudeness.”

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened in shock when she saw the archer’s face.

“Senior Jin Seyeon?”

“Yes.” Jin Seyeon faintly smiled.

“Nice to meet you again, junior Chae Nayun.”

“W-Why are you here? Rather, what relationship do you have with this crazy muscle-pig?”

“Muscle-pig? Are you out of your—”

Tak— Jin Seyeon lightly landed and walked to Chae Nayun. Then she spoke with a stiff expression.

“I know this might be sudden, but I wanted to ask for your opinion.”

“Opinion? Mine?”

Chae Nayun replied in a daze and Jin Seyeon seriously continued.

“I’ll get to the point. We plan to rob Essential Pharmacy and return Chae Joochul’s emotions.”

“Huh?”

Jin Seyeon skipped a few explanations and Chae Nayun’s already empty head turned even blanker.

Chapter 369

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (3)

Three people sat across each other in a dark forest. They each took one of the chair-sized rocks conveniently placed there.

Jin Seyeon explained her plan to the confused Chae Nayun, who asked several questions before finally understanding.

Jin Seyeon wanted to oust the association's corrupt political figures. Returning Chae Joochul's emotions would only be the start.

“The association's executives have even cooperated with djinns for their safety and wealth. They even used children as a means of delaying their aging and for mass destruction despite knowing the dangerous side effects of gifts. They've also threatened countless countries and caused several wars to monopolize dungeons and artifacts.”

“...”

“Nayun, they're no longer an association of heroes. Now is the time to correct everything. The world is still troubled by Baal and the New Evils, but that only makes this the perfect chance. The association might collude with the New Evils if we let them be. After all, a clear enemy is needed for them to maintain their strength.”

Chae Nayun dropped her head and remained silent. Cheok Jungyeong furrowed his brows and stepped up.

“Wait, so we're not going to fight Chae Joochul?”

“Yes, we'll join hands with him instead.”

It would be impossible to pass justice on the association with just the Chameleon Troupe's power. The Chameleon Troupe members possessed incredible strength, but nonexistent political power. Jain's gift would greatly help in that regard, but it wouldn't be enough.

"Join hands with my grandfather?" Chae Nayun asked with a depressed voice.

"Yes, Chae Joochul doesn't have any emotions. He must've had a reason for helping Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho back then. You can see from the records that Daehyun rose even higher after that incident. Their relationship won't last forever because Chae Joochul has no emotions."

Jin Seyeon planned on taking advantage of this. Until now, Chae Joochul maintained a mutually beneficial relationship with the association's executives. However, he would undoubtedly push them away if they became useless and clear evidence supported this.

Chae Nayun hesitated.

"Grandfather won't regret his past actions even if that happens."

Chae Joochul played a huge role in the Kwang-Oh Incident, but he never felt any sadness or guilt.

Jin Seyeon shook her head. "You're wrong, Nayun. Essential Pharmacy is developing medicine to counter the side effects of gifts."

"W-What? A medicine to counter side effects?"

"Yes."

Jain obtained this information after infiltrating Essential Pharmacy. Jin Seyeon continued in a serious tone.

"Nine Stars Heynckes and Oh Jaejin have already used this medication. Heynckes possessed a few samples that cured their side effects and donated the rest to Essential Pharmacy, who are currently conducting more research on this subject."

Chae Nayun widened her eyes. “T-Then when the medicine is done...”

“Yes, Chae Joochul will regain his emotions.”

“Haaa...”

Chae Nayun’s jaw dropped, but she suddenly closed it. She began to worry because she didn’t know the original Chae Joochul.

What if her grandfather had always been a merciless villain? What would she do then? What if his emotionless state made him less of a threat to society? If he killed humans as he pleased and treated love, sympathy, and compassion as nothing...

The possibility crossed her mind. However, Chae Nayun steeled her heart and clenched her fists. She decided to believe in the kindness Chae Joochul showed as her grandfather. She had to repay that person.

“Okay, I’ll help.”

“Thank you.” Jin Seyeon gratefully bowed from the bottom of her heart.

“Sorry for making such an unreasonable demand even though you aren’t related to this incident.”

“Huh? No, I’m also...?” Chae Nayun couldn’t finish. The Kwang-Oh Incident. The evil deed committed by her grandfather. A tragedy that had to be brought to justice. There had been something more to it...

“Uk!”

A sharp pain suddenly struck Chae Nayun. She clutched her head and kneeled.

“Nayun?” Jin Seyeon became startled and grabbed her.

This brain-splitting pain wouldn’t disappear as Chae Nayun continued to think. She had forgotten something important. She didn't know what, but her heart naturally ached for him...

"Are you okay? Nayun? Nayun!"

"..."

The hammering pain finally disappeared and Chae Nayun blankly stared at the worried Jin Seyeon.

"Are you okay?"

"Yes? Ah, yes. I'm fine..." Chae Nayun fiddled with her necklace and a question popped up in her head.

This necklace... Didn't someone give it to me? It wasn't a present, so I have to return it. Who was it? Who am I supposed to return it to?

Chae Nayun slowly closed her eyes. She didn't faint this time, but meditated to recall something.

* * *

Kim Suho stood in front of the guild leader's office for a meeting.

[Creator's Sacred Grace, Leader – Yun Seung-Ah]

Her nameplate shone with a green light.

Tok, tok—

Kim Suho knocked on the door. Yun Seung-Ah opened it and greeted him with a smile.

"Come in."

He formally bowed and walked in. He thought this every time, but the guild leader's office looked like a domed stadium. The walls formed a circle and the round ceiling also protruded up.

“Did you have a meeting?” Kim Suho asked as he looked around the messy office. Their guild’s performance and ranking appeared on the board.

“Yep, look at that. We’re doing quite well, right?”

Yun Seung-Ah sat at the head of the table and joyfully laughed. Kim Suho sat next to her and glanced at the rankings too.

[Rank 1 – Essence of the Strait] [Rank 2 – Desolate Moon] [Rank 3 – Creator’s Sacred Grace] [Rank 4 – Frost Sanctuary]

“Essence of the Strait is impossible to overtake now, but we managed to obtain the rank 3 spot after the recent assault on Oedo Island Cave.”

She sounded proud and bitter at the same time. Creator’s Sacred Grace managed to reclaim some of its former glory, but the gap between them and Essence of the Strait could no longer be closed.

“We can’t catch up even if they stop working for the next 10 years. Don’t you think that’s unfair?”

Yun Seung-Ah grumbled as she brewed two cups of tea. Kim Suho spoke with a faint smile.

“It’s something to be happy about if we consider them our ally. Anyways, why did you call me?”

“Ah, you see... The association made a request. It’s an assassination order.”

“Pardon? Assassination?”

Kim Suho furrowed his brows. He never expected to hear about an assassination from the association.

“Yep, the association head personally requested this. You’ve heard of the Chameleon Troupe, right?”

“Yes.”

“They want us to eliminate that group.”

“Huh?”

Kim Suho became dumbstruck. The Chameleon Troupe committed several crimes, but also helped humanity during the war against Orden and Baal. They had already been pardoned because of that. He would agree to arrest them, but assassination?

“Did you agree?” he sharply asked.

“No, not yet. However, it would greatly benefit us. Enough to obtain the rank 2 spot...”

Yun Seung-Ah stole a glance at him as she sipped her tea. Kim Suho felt something from her eyes and nodded.

“Rank 2, how?”

“Remember all the dungeons that recently appeared? The association head said he would give us the right to monopolize the top 10 dungeons.”

Indeed, that offer sounded tempting. Kim Suho rubbed his chin and pretended to think about it. Then he brushed his hair back and stood.

“That doesn’t sound bad. No, it’s quite tempting. I have something else to do right now, but I’ll listen to the details later.”

“Yeah, okay. I’ll think about it positively if that’s your opinion. You seem busy, so you can go.”

“Yes, understood.” Kim Suho left the guild leader’s office.

“Huuu...”

He took deep breaths as he leaned against the door. A loud voice rang out and he glanced to the side at Yi Yeonghan guiding a group of Cube cadets.

“Look, it’s the future vice leader! Say hello, kids! He’s the hero who saved the world, Kim Suho!”

“Ah, hello everyone.” Kim Suho bitterly smiled.

“W-Wow! Kim, Kim Suho!”

“S-Sword Saint Kim Suho! I’m your biggest fan!”

“Woowooow!”

The teenagers in their first years at Cube hollered and ran up to him. Kim Suho wryly smiled and took hundreds of pictures with them.

* * *

Tik— Tok— Only a clock could be heard in this silent apartment room. I continued to drink the 500,000 won red ginseng extract.

“So bitter.”

It didn’t have any special medicinal effects either. The cheaper ones sold in stores must be even less effective. I recorded the effects in a notebook.

[Low Rank Red Ginseng — Will faintly recover vitality. Has no effect on increasing physical abilities.]

My ability to view the system and my stats disappeared, so I developed a habit of writing what I felt. Currently, I noted 14 different medicines in my notebook. Most of them turned out to be like the red ginseng extract.

“As I thought, this isn’t enough.”

I threw the extract away and lay on the couch.

“Sigh...”

A week passed since I regained the [Medicinal Memory Physique]. I'd been living with a great sense of helplessness. I would feel motivated and suddenly unmotivated several times throughout the day. An emptiness would always replace my motivation. I could memorize medicinal effects, but couldn't acquire any useful ones. The resume I submitted to Essential Pharmacy's sales department had also been rejected.

“Geez, I'm going to commit suicide at this rate.”

I even had a horrible case of insomnia. I would dream about the past and constantly wake up to the point that I feared sleeping.

“Tsk.”

I clicked my tongue and turned on the TV.

— The portals connecting different countries have just been restored. Portals to America and Europe are now fully functional...

News regarding the portals came out.

“Should I leave this place?”

Recently, I'd been thinking about leaving this apartment. I felt like I had to leave like when I first entered Cube. After all, this place only served as a starting point.

Honestly, I thought about it after obtaining the [Medicinal Memory Physique]. This physique required me to consume rare herbs rather than products on the market.

However, I waited in case someone might come looking for me and secretly hoped someone would regain their memories. Of course, I knew such an empty wish wouldn't come true. Almost 10 days had passed and I had to admit it now. I had disappeared from this world.

“Huuu...”

I raised my upper body and turned on my smartwatch. The portal to Europe had been restored and I checked my bank account. I had enough to travel the mountains of multiple countries. I also possessed the Desert Eagle, Black Lotus Uniform, and aether in case of any dangers.

“Right.”

I nodded resolutely while looking at my smartwatch. I couldn’t enter Essential Pharmacy, so it would be better to consume different herbs while traveling and make my own medicine. Applying for a job after gaining some experience would be more helpful.

“Let’s go. Right now.”

I murmured and stood up. I made up my mind and didn’t hesitate. The time to leave the starting point had come.

“See you, Chundong. Heh, what am I saying? I should pack.”

I almost forgot. I didn’t have stigma anymore, so I had to pack from now on. Ssk— Ssk— I picked up a luggage bag and threw in everything useful: clothes, food, my ID, smartwatch, the Desert Eagle, etc.

Chapter 370

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (4)

Rustle— Rustle— I walked through a messy path. The abundant weeds tickled my knees and the rocks everywhere stuck to my feet like magnets. Countless leaves fell every time the wind blew and the sun blazed down on everything.

No one would ever hike this steep Yaksi Mountain in North Hamgyeong Province. It truly embodied nature's ruggedness and stood an astounding 2650 meters due to the Great Change in the past. Many herbs famously grew here because of the high magic power density.

I thought about heading to the Alps, but didn't have a passport. I decided to come here until I received a new one. Well, as long as this mountain's owner didn't discover me.

Yaksi Mountain belonged to Chae Joochul. Naturally, I infiltrated this place. Perhaps a part of me also hoped to be discovered.

However, today marked the seventh day since I lived on this mountain. No one discovered me yet. Not even patrols, which private properties often had. I wondered why and looked it up on my smartwatch. The biggest reason turned out to be the war against the devils. Apparently, Chae Joochul had mostly abandoned this mountain.

I happily roamed around and looked for all sorts of herbs. I climbed a steep precipice to harvest a lion leaf on a cliff's edge. I crossed a habitat full of wild beasts to search for a creon. I also fought monsters to protect a memory apricot I managed to obtain with great difficulty. It all felt physically exhausting, but my mental health seemed better now. I fell asleep without any dreams.

“Oh?”

I spotted a shiny herb while roaming around like always. I darted towards the light and came across a beautiful flower. It emitted a blue light with a bud surrounded by white petals.

I didn't even know this flower's name or if it could be an herb. However, my smartwatch knew. I took a picture and searched for it on the [Herb Encyclopedia].

[Cloud Seeker] — An ordinary flower. One might mistake it for an herb because of its appearance, but no detailed effect has been recorded. It induces a stomach ache upon consumption.

I had to try it to be sure despite the information. I transformed aether into a trowel and dug up the cloud seeker. Then I ate it without hesitation.

“Argh, my stomach.”

Immediately, I felt a slight pain. I could somewhat feel the hidden effects when I closed my eyes and savored it. I opened my notebook filled with information about herbs I found on this mountain.

[Macorong — Memorization Progress: 100%. This herb has no effects by itself, but can cure various illnesses when mixed with other herbs.]

[Creon — Memorization Progress: 60%. An addictive herb that can sharpen the 5 senses. Helpful for battles.]

[Sorrowful Sunlight — Memorization Progress: 100%. Can easily cure external injuries.]

[Lion Leaf — Memorization Progress: 50%. Will increase testosterone levels for 2 hours. I felt like I became a lion as the name suggested.]

[Magic Power Forget-Me-Not — Memorization Progress: 100%. Has excellent effects for stopping bleeding and healing wounds.]

[Memory Apricot — Memorization Progress: 95%. Effective at recovering memories and brain cells. Has a high chance of being used to treat dementia.]

I added [Cloud Seeker] to the list.

[Cloud Seeker — Memorization Progress: 30%. Has an effect related to purification. I will have to eat about 3 more to be sure.]

Rustle, rustle—

I sensed a presence and took out my Desert Eagle. Soon, two men and a woman appeared from the bushes underneath the slope. They looked like kids in their late teens or early 20s. They screamed and raised their hands when they saw my gun.

“Who are all of you?”

“D-Don’t shoot! We’re from a village nearby. Um, we’re here to harvest herbs.”

“Herbs?”

I furrowed my brows and examined them. They only had a shovel and scythe hanging from their waist belts. Their clothes looked ragged and shabby as well. We stood at the foot of Yaksi Mountain, but they didn’t seem prepared to climb this mountain.

“With those weapons?”

“We, we, uh, we don’t have any weapon like yours.”

The trio trembled in front of the gun and I continued to investigate them without letting my guard down.

“What do you need herbs for?”

“Um, our mother is sick. We’re siblings. Our mother got poisoned by demonic energy. The doctor said there was no way to treat her and heroes don’t care about small villages like ours. So, we, uh... we wanted to...”

Ebebebe— The oldest one got tongue-tied and stopped talking. I couldn’t blame them. After all, my gun looked quite intimidating.

“Tsk...”

I clicked my tongue and lowered the gun. The trio immediately plopped on their butts. I didn’t even fire it, but they acted terrified.

“Your mother got demonic energy poisoning?”

“Yes? Ah... yes.”

The girl spoke this time and I deeply contemplated. The [Cloud Seeker] did possess a purification effect of all the medicinal herbs I memorized so far.

“Hmm... I found a flower that could purify demonic energy poisoning.”

“Ah! Really?”

Their eyes widened, but I felt a bit guilty.

“However, I ate it.”

“Ah... ah...”

The disappointment on their faces couldn’t be described. I chuckled before fixing my posture and staring at them.

“I have some medicine that might help. Do you want to try it?”

“Medicine? Y-You’re a doctor?”

“Well, I guess you could call me a pharmacist.”

“...”

The trio fell silent and exchanged glances. They seemingly mulled over what to do. The decision should be pretty easy though.

I began to assemble the medicinal effect in my body as I kept an eye on them. I separated and extracted the medicinal effect to create a medicine that only consisted of demonic energy purification.

Next, I released it outward. I concentrated the medicinal effect onto my palm and manifested it. A stem sprouted from my hand and formed a fruit-like pill.

This process used quite a bit of stamina. Just making 2 pills made me sleepy and making 4 would cause me to faint. My body became a natural pharmacy after I developed this method using my physique. I thought a lot about my only special ability and came up with different ways to use it.

“Take it.”

I threw the pill at the trio. They jumped in surprise, but caught it before it touched the ground.

“It’s only a prototype, so it’s not perfect. Still, it’ll be better than going up this mountain and getting eaten by wild beasts. At least, your mother won’t be left alone to die.”

“Ah, yes. Thank you. We understand.”

“Good. By the way, do you use social media?” I suddenly asked. The trio stood in a daze before quickly nodding.

“Ah, yes. We have smartwatches, so uh... we use social media.”

“What’s your ID?”

“Excuse me?”

“What’s your ID?”

“Ah, yes, yes.”

I took down the oldest brother’s Stargram ID. He seemed to only know how to say yes.

“Good, I’ll remember this ID. Post something once your mother is cured. I need to know whether the prototype worked.”

I suddenly recalled the past. Back then, social media provided an excellent source for SP.

“Oh, a post?”

“Yep, write this.”

I continued with a grin. “That a handsome, mysterious pharmacist helped you.”

* * *

Preparations for the revolution currently took place. Chae Nayun focused on her hero work while receiving evidence from Jin Seyeon regarding the association’s corruption, hired assassinations, and other illegal activities.

Chae Nayun safely stored the evidence to bring it to Chae Joochul. However, someone eventually found out. Not a stranger, but Chae Nayun’s close friend and guild superior, Yoo Yeonha. Chae Nayun didn’t know how Yoo Yeonha discovered her though.

“That’s why I’m here with Yeonha.”

Chae Nayun finished explaining why she brought Yoo Yeonha to the Chameleon Troupe’s cabin. Of course, her explanation only consisted of, I don’t know how she knew.

Jain and Jin Seyeon stared at Yoo Yeonha with dumbfounded expressions. Yoo Yeonha spoke while sipping on her coffee.

“You don’t have to rob Essential Pharmacy. After all, I’m in a similar situation as you. However, there’s just one problem. Copying the cure to side effects is too difficult. Unfortunately, we lost many researchers during the last war.”

The recent great war caused 1.5 million casualties in Korea. A huge wave of sorrow swept the peninsula.

“So you can’t make the cure?” Jin Seyeon asked.

“We’re not sure. We’re looking for talented individuals, but it’ll take a while. Making Chae Joochul regret his crimes will take a while, so I suggest taking down Kim Sukho first. He already knows our plan to attack him.”

Yoo Yeonha already saw herself as part of the Chameleon Troupe. This made Jain tilt her head.

“Our plan?”

“Yes, Kim Sukho is also trying to bring me down with you. Something about Essence of the Strait getting over its head. It’s a good thing we secretly recorded him. Anyways, he’ll attack us soon.”

Yoo Yeonha smirked as if she found Kim Sukho’s attempt laughable.

“Attack, you say. When?” Cheok Jungyeong asked.

“I can’t be sure, but it’ll be soon. Kim Sukho will put out irresistible rewards to attract guilds and even the New Evils.”

Splooosh— Something swayed like water and Yoo Yeonha turned around in surprise. The man named Cheok Jungyeong made a sinister smile and his huge muscles twitched. Yoo Yeonha couldn’t imagine a more perverted scene. She fell into a momentary daze, but soon realized his excitement stemmed from a competitive spirit.

“Remember this, you can’t kill the heroes. The New Evils are fine, but don't do anything that might paint you as the villain. Only then can we bring down Kim Sukho."

"Ha, really. Why is everyone telling me not to kill? Don't you know the real fun of a fight is—"

Jin Seyeon covered Cheok Jungyeong's mouth and he barely held back from biting her hand. Meanwhile, Jin Seyeon politely bowed.

"We think the same. There's no reason to kill heroes oblivious to the truth."

Cheok Jungyeong looked dissatisfied, but nodded in satisfaction when Jin Seyeon told him he could fight the New Evils to his heart's content.

* * *

[Seoul, Korea]

Home of the world's most famous guilds and state-of-the-art magic engineering. The ultimate destination for the richest and most powerful on Earth, but this city currently focused on reconstruction.

— We're finished with repairs here.

— How are things developing?

— The restoration is going smoothly, but the architecture is lacking. We need time to rebuild the magical structure's functions.

The devils and demons destroyed Seoul's skyscrapers, but the restoration proceeded quickly thanks to magicians and agents with gifts related to construction.

"Where is that guy?"

Jin Sahyuk floated in the sky and looked down at the city. She didn't watch the restoration, but scoured the streets for someone.

Of course, she searched for that man. She hadn't seen him recently as if he vanished into thin air. She couldn't find a single hair even when she followed the people close to him. Worse, they all acted like they didn't know him. Almost as if he didn't exist in the first place.

Jin Sahyuk tried using private investigators and the Violet Banquet, but all records related to him had been mysteriously purged. Nothing. Not a single trace as if someone wiped his record clean. She caused a scene for them to find him, but they refused her requests.

She didn't know anything other than his name. She never tried to find out about his life, where he lived, or his background.

Jin Sahyuk didn't know how to politely ask for help or draw a portrait for investigators. One person with psychometry could look into her head, but she refused to let someone like that into her brain.

"Son of a bitch. You hid because you thought I would kidnap you and bring you back? What a coward."

"Who are you searching for so much?"

A red-haired magician floated next to her. Shimurin, the master of dimensional magic, didn't return to her homeworld and remained.

According to Shimurin, she traveled around simply out of curiosity. Jin Sahyuk hired her thinking she perfectly suited the task. Shimurin's dimensional magic would also be of great help to Akatrina.

"There's this guy."

Jin Sahyuk glanced at Shimurin.

"Do you have to meet him?"

"I don't have to, but I want to before I leave. You see, he taught me a valuable lesson I could never forget."

He humiliated her with a thorough defeat and broke a wall in her heart. Jin Sahyuk would've never learned the most valuable life lesson without him.

As such, she wanted to say something before she left. A conversation without any ulterior motives might not be the right way to put it. Honestly, she wanted to hear everything about Kindspring. She wanted to take Kindspring with her and live the rest of her life with him if he existed within Kim Hajin's inner mind like Puharen lived inside Morax.

"A man who taught a valuable lesson to a tyrant... I'm curious too. So you'll wait until you find him?"

"No, I won't delay the plan just because of him."

The time to return to her homeworld steadily approached. Puharen continually scratched her heart and the dimension stone from Baal neared its expiration date. Once the time came, Jin Sahyuk would return to Akatrina with all the food and weapons she amassed. She wouldn't hesitate or look back.

"Hmm... Shimurin, didn't you know him too? Don't you want to talk to him?"

Jin Sahyuk suddenly recalled hearing about Shimurin's relationship with that guy. To be precise, she heard Kim Hajin played a vital role in completing the dimensional magic.

"Hmm?"

However, Shimurin seemed to want to claim the achievement for herself and didn't mention anything about him.

"Who are you talking about?"

The grand magician only fiddled with her hair and pretended not to know.

"About Kim Hajin."

Jin Sahyuk muttered his name, but Shimurin looked confused.

“Kim Hajin? Did I meet someone by that name?”

“What are you talking about? Kim Hajin is the one who completed your dimensional magic...”

Jin Sahyuk suddenly stopped talking. A bolt of lightning seemed to strike her. She stared at Shimurin and looked down at Seoul. Then she became convinced. What had been a faint thought became a hard brick.

Kim Hajin hadn't hidden from her. His friends didn't pretend to not know him either. This entire world had forgotten his existence.

Jin Sahyuk naturally realized why this didn't affect her. Only she knew both Kindspring and Kim Hajin and the secret about synchronization.

Chapter 371

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (5)

Three months had passed since the Great Devil War ended. This war forever changed faiths, cultures, values, and ways of living for everyone around the world. Its impact matched the Great Change, if not greater. Nations cooperated beyond borders because they still shared common enemies like the New Evils and the devils, Leraje and Vassago.

Multiple apartment buildings lined up a complex in Korea's North Gyeongsang Province as if to reflect this peaceful international atmosphere. This healing city under the [Colored Paper Charity Foundation] had been created by Yi Byul.

Tens of thousands of war victims lived in these apartments. Hospitals, schools, convenience stores, playgrounds, and other amenities surrounded them. This 10 square kilometer plot used to be a forest inhabited by monsters. Now, it has transformed into a welfare city inhabited by 100,000 children and 30,000 adults. Yi Byul's terrifying wealth funded an entire city.

"Ahaha, then... would it be possible to see the foundation head?"

However, hyenas naturally flocked to money. Countless businessmen gathered to meet the person who single-handedly possessed trillions of won. They added the words, potential investor, to the foundation head because of her wealth.

"No."

Of course, Yi Byul refused most meetings. Only 2-3 lucky businessmen succeeded in meeting her by coincidence. She had no interest in investing, but rumors regarding her appearance spiraled out of control.

“We didn’t come here to ask for investments. In fact, we wanted to donate too—”

“Then give it now.”

“Uh...”

Droon treated the chaebol quite coldly. Sim Hawon wore a luxury business suit and would’ve received the best treatment in most places as Bingjung Corporation’s successor. However, they treated him like an ordinary person here.

Droon didn’t greet these guests alone. Yi Yuri, his fiancée, stood next to him.

“Well, I expected as much. Director Kim?”

Director Kim handed a check to Sim Hawon, who showed the astronomical amount with nine 0s to Droon. The foundation head possessed more than enough wealth to buy this man’s business, so Droon didn’t bat an eye.

“How is it? I heard the Colored Paper Foundation has been full of life lately, so we prepared this. I thought—”

“Thank you.”

Yi Yuri, who remained silent until now, suddenly stepped up. She brightly smiled and snatched the check out of Sim Hawon’s hand.

“What?”

Sim Hawon blinked and stared at Yi Yuri. Meanwhile, Droon praised her with his eyes. She spoke as she placed the check into her pocket.

“We’ll put it to good use towards more medicine.”

For the record, Droon and Yi Yuri served as heads of security, teachers, and doctors here. They grew into fine adults who could support others while relying on each other.

“Uh... Well, cough.”

Sim Hawon fought the strong urge to spit out, You arrogant little brat!

“Then can I see her? The foundation head, I mean.”

Droon laughed at his question.

“We’ll think about it.”

His voice contained a hint of playfulness. After all, the check had nine 0s.

* * *

Droon climbed a small hill behind the housing area after they left Sim Hawon. The blue sky looked like a painting and green grass swayed in the gentle breeze. He spotted a woman with long, flowing hair amidst this beautiful scene.

She kneeled in front of a tombstone and stared at it. Her dark hair fluttered like clouds. She had thick, beautiful eyelashes and eyes that shone with a dark light. It looked like she came straight out of a painting.

“Why do you stare at this tombstone every day?” Droon walked up and sat next to her.

She slightly tilted her head as if thinking and shook her head. “It’s not every day.”

“It’s practically every day.”

A gentle breeze blew.

“Who knows.”

She spoke while straightening her hair.

“This person is already dead. He was evil too.”

Droon couldn't understand her attachment to this tombstone that read, [Yi Yeonjun]. He couldn't understand no matter how much he thought. Would he know when he grew older?

The woman faintly smiled and shook her head again.

“It's not this person. I'm looking for someone else.”

“And who's that?”

“I don't know.”

Droon furrowed his brows and glared at her. However, she gently spoke with conviction.

“I'll find out soon. After all, looking for people is my specialty.”

“What?”

“Yes, I'll remember soon. I believe I will without a doubt.”

Droon became speechless as he stared at Yi Byul. She had changed too much from her past self. She didn't react no matter how rude he acted. Her face briefly stiffened when he flicked her forehead, but she still smiled like a fool. Of course, this punishment only came from a game they played. Droon didn't hate this new Boss. It would be a lie if he said he didn't miss the past, but he knew they couldn't go back.

“Then... let me try too.”

Droon playfully smiled and glared at the tombstone. Boss smiled and offered him a seat.

“Ahaha, here you were. I finally found you.”

A voice resounded from behind them. Droon pretended to be surprised and looked back. Sim Hawon, Bingjung Corporation’s successor, walked up the hill.

“Droon, did you bring him here?” Yi Byul asked.

“Eh? No, no, no. I would never. He must’ve come here on his own, but how? Does he have good intuition?”

Droon shot up and planned to chase the man away.

However, the man already saw Yi Byul and his entire body went stiff. He stared at her in a daze and murmured in a fleeting voice.

“So the rumors were true. My god. How can there be such a beautiful ___”

However, Yi Byul didn’t give him the chance to finish. Her shadow extended like a tentacle and dragged him away by the waist.

“Uaaaaah—”

“Oh, looks like noona hasn’t lost her touch...”

“This place is off-limits to non-administrators. He must not have read the sign. I sent him there so he could read it.”

Yi Byul turned back to the tombstone. Someone more important than [Yi Yeonjun]. She thought again to remember and search for him.

* * *

Yoo Yeonha built a personal mansion in Seoul’s Dongjak District. It looked fairly big and fancy, but she considered it rather plain considering her wealth. In the mansion’s main room, Yoo Yeonha listened to a tape Hassan-i Sabbah recorded last night.

— Essence of the Strait has grown too big. We should've suppressed them when we had the chance, but that doesn't matter. They'll fall from grace soon enough.

Kim Sukho's voice rang out.

— How can you be so sure?

Yi Yukho asked.

— How? Their heroes suddenly killing civilians, djinns amidst their ranks, corruption with Essential Pharmacy's new medicine, and so on...

— Hmm? They have djinns among their heroes?

— Hahaha, friend, when did you grow so naive? We'll just have to make some if there aren't. The new hunting dogs I found made contact with the New Evils. We should be able to strike a deal with them easily like last time.

Kim Sukho spoke when another voice interrupted him.

— Essence of the Strait won't be so easy. Especially that young woman, Yoo Yeonha.

This voice belonged to the power behind the curtains, Yoo Jangwon. Kim Sukho dismissed his concerns.

— What are you worried about? Yoo Yeonha is too young. Plus, Yoo Jinwoong has deep relations with us. Chae Joochul doesn't seem to favor them either. Yoo Yeonha will lose everything before she realizes it. It's time to snap the baby hen's neck who doesn't know her place.

The recording ended there. Yoo Yeonha felt thankful she knew Hassan-i Sabbah. Who else could record a secret conversation on the Tower of Heroes' highest floor?

“Baby hen, he says.”

Kim Sukho sure knew how to infuriate someone. Yoo Yeonha clenched her teeth and understood where his confidence came from. He ruled over Korea for dozens of years and didn't place anyone in his eyes. However, his arrogance would be his demise. After all, twisting a rooster's neck wouldn't stop the sun from rising. No, they wouldn't even be able to accomplish that.

"Sechan?" Yoo Yeonha called her secretary.

— Yes.

"How is the preparation for the party?" she asked with a smile.

— It's going smoothly.

Jin Sechan replied with a faint chuckle.

"Great."

Yoo Yeonha had scripted an elaborate scenario. She slowly turned and spoke to the women staring at her from the couch.

"Next Saturday, I'll host a party at the Yoo family's mansion. It'll be called the Post-War Societal Leaders' Ball or something like that. I'd like to go with a name that doesn't sound too snobby."

Yoo Yeonha wanted to take care of this matter in one fell swoop. The coup d'etat would successfully round up all the corrupted executives and become a revolution. Not only the chairman, but they would arrest every corrupt individual. This party would serve as the stage for their punishment.

Yoo Yeonha pictured the revolution in her head.

Yoo Jinwoong's whistleblowing during the party would reveal the association's corruption to the world. Then they would immediately catch those executives.

The Chameleon Troupe played a vital role in this. As Chae Joochul and the association's former hunting dog, they would expose the evil deeds committed by Kim Sukho and the corrupt executives.

Kim Sukho might call the New Evils or use his new hunting dogs to escape. Regardless, the heroes of this generation consisting of Aileen, Kim Suho, Yun Seung-Ah, and many others would suppress them.

Her plan seemed flawless as long as she didn't let her guard down.

She only worried about her father, Yoo Jinwoong. They already spoke about his grave sins. He acted as Chae Joochul's hunting dog on more than one occasion besides the Kwang-Oh Incident. As such, it would be impossible to pardon him with her power.

However, her father gladly accepted his punishment. He already resigned as guild leader and even gave up his coveted master rank position with the excuse that he felt his limits during the Great Devil War.

She couldn't fail now. She had to succeed and make amends.

Yoo Yeonha spoke with determination, "Distribute the invitation letters only to the 300 people on the list. About 900 will participate since they can each bring 2 guests."

— Understood.

"Place our heroes around the mansion. Confirm everyone's invitation before letting them in and don't let them leave once they enter."

— Yes, of course.

"Don't forget to make sure the electronic manipulation is working. Jamming them won't do. We need to make sure they see a different internet. For that, you'll have to set up a broadcasting station and a base station. Don't worry about the costs and feel free to use however much you want."

— Understood, as you command.

Yoo Yeonha ended her communication line. Then she turned to the two women on the couch.

“I’ll be hosting a grand party.”

“Hehehe, great! I’m a big fan of parties!” Jain enthusiastically replied. Jin Seyeon sat next to her and seemed deep in thought.

“Is Yun Seung-Ah coming too?”

“Probably?”

“Hnng... I’m not good with her.”

“Won’t you be disguised anyways?”

“I don’t know how, but she can see through my disguise.”

Kkeeung. Jain stretched and murmured in a tired voice, “This is interesting. It’s perfect as the Chameleon Troupe’s last mission.”

A bittersweet smile emerged on her face.

* * *

The plan smoothly progressed.

The VIP party Yoo Yeonha hosted became a noteworthy event. They personally invited the elites among elites like Chae Nayun. Ordinary elites had to beg those with invitations. Only 300 had been invited with each bringing 2 guests.

[Jonghak said he won’t be coming.]

Chae Nayun received Yoo Yeonha’s message at home. She worried even though Shin Jonghak said that. Knowing his personality, he might wait until the most crucial moment and steal the spotlight.

“Huuu...”

She had to focus on herself. Chae Nayun turned off her smartwatch and took a deep breath. She stood in front of a wooden sliding door. Her grandfather, who had committed too many sins, resided beyond that door.

Chae Nayun had something to tell him. She wrote it down and practiced dozens of times, but could no longer remember anything. No, she didn't need to. She decided to convey her feelings as his granddaughter. Everything would come from the bottom of her heart.

Her grandfather no longer possessed emotions, but that might make convincing him easier. Previously, he said he only felt 1% of his emotions. It seemed meaningless, but wouldn't that 1% mean more when it came to his family? Chae Nayun betted on the possibility of this advantage.

Knock, knock.

She knocked and could hear a brush being set down after about 3 seconds. Did her grandfather practice calligraphy?

— It must be Nayun.

“Yes.”

— What are you doing here?

His voice sounded warm, but carried something else. Chae Nayun clenched her fists and spoke after a deep breath.

“Grandfather, I need to say something.”

— Hoho, is that so?

Chae Joochul spoke like a normal grandfather proud of his granddaughter for visiting him.

— Then come in.

Chapter 372

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (6)

Chae Nayun sat facing Chae Joochul, who gently smiled at his granddaughter. She clenched her fists on her lap. Chae Joochul remained still and waited for her to speak. The atmosphere didn't feel heavy at all. In fact, it seemed warm and gentle. Even so, Chae Nayun felt more nervous than ever.

Eventually, she opened her mouth.

"Grandfather, I want to ask something."

He nodded and her expression stiffened. Chae Joochul hid his expression too. She looked into his eyes as deep and dark as the abyss.

"Do you remember... the Kwang-Oh Incident?"

Chae Joochul didn't show the slightest hint of emotions and Chae Nayun suddenly grew afraid. However, she didn't stop.

"Do you remember the countless people you've killed, Grandfather?"

She mustered the courage to speak and said everything she knew. The relationship between the association's chairman and Chae Joochul, the countless people they killed, colluding with djinns, all the schemes to maintain their authority, etc. The thoughts she suppressed erupted one by one.

"Senior Jin Seyeon's father, Jin Younghwan, must've known the association colluded with djinns."

The light in Chae Joochul's eyes grew deeper as she continued.

However, Chae Nayun didn't back down.

"I found it strange when I thought about it. Cube had so many djinns. Sven, Yoon Hyun... I don't know why I didn't think of it before. Djinns shouldn't be created so easily from a military academy for future heroes."

The djinns at Cube naturally aroused the public's interest and reminded them that only heroes could stop djinns. Djinns based their activities around Pandemonium and heroes assembled around the association. More people relied on heroes as these djinns went wild. Naturally, the Hero Association grew more powerful than any other government body.

"Grandfather, answer me."

Chae Joochul remained silent and Chae Nayun waited for the reply she hoped to hear.

Silence filled the air until Chae Joochul finally spoke.

"I remember. I know about it."

His voice still lacked emotion. However, Chae Nayun felt a small ray of hope.

"The association used djinns to solidify their political power and I lent them a hand."

"Why? Why did you—"

"Because that seemed like the right choice at the time." Chae Joochul's voice carried a hint of warmth.

"Right choice? You said the right choice?" Chae Nayun clenched her teeth and felt like she couldn't continue. Her stomach squirmed and she grew nauseous. Tak! Chae Nayun put down all the evidence she brought.

"Here's a list of all the corruption the association has committed. It includes all the evidence and the Kwang-Oh Incident.”

“ ... ”

“They used djinns, deceived heroes, and killed countless civilians. You’re saying this is right?”

Chae Joochul stared at her before nodding and Chae Nayun flinched.

“G-Grandfather, you...”

She brushed her hair back with her trembling hands. The words, “You’re trash,” came out of her mouth. However, Chae Joochu remained silent and only stared at the evidence. He slowly reached forward and picked it up. Then he softly murmured.

“That might not be the case anymore.”

“Wha—?”

Chae Nayun became tongue-tied and scowled at her grandfather. Chae Joochul continued while facing her funny look.

“Nayun, the era determines what is right and wrong. No one enforced righteousness at the time. The Nine Stars possessed the power to keep the association in check, but grew tired from the never-ending fights against monsters and feared their own side effects. Shin Myungchul maintained a good balance while he lived, but no one went against the association after he died.”

Being emotionless made Chae Joochul calculating. He based his decisions on the era. Reaching the top as part of the system or resisting with a low chance of success. The scale obviously favored the former. He spoke while staring at Chae Nayun.

“However, it seems like the era is changing once again.”

His voice didn’t sound high or low. He spoke in a monotonous tone.

“Both you and your father will be negatively affected if the era changes. You might lose what you’ve always had. Is that okay?”

Gulp— Chae Nayun swallowed hard and already expected this. Chae Joochul seemed much calmer than she anticipated. He didn’t refute her accusations or criticized her.

“What about you, Grandfather? Are you okay with it?” she calmly asked.

He didn’t smile and simply nodded. He clearly gave his permission.

“Really?”

Convincing him went unexpectedly easy. Chae Joochul took out a small notebook from his desk drawer while Chae Nayun sat in a daze.

“Nayun, you know I don’t have any emotions left.”

He handed the notebook to his granddaughter.

“It’s hard to notice. You lose yourself before you realize what’s happening.”

Chae Nayun took the notebook.

“I set a standard to never lose myself when I finally noticed the changes.”

She opened the notebook with only one page and a single sentence. Chae Nayun stared at it in a daze.

— The most important thing to me, Chae Joochul, is family.

Her thoughts froze and she couldn’t take in the sentence. Her head creaked and she looked at Chae Joochul, who appeared as emotionless as ever.

“This sentence is quite alien to me. I can’t even recall what thoughts I had when I wrote it.”

Why did he write it then?

“Your grandfather isn’t someone who uses the word family often. That, I remember.”

Chae Nayun could feel the warmth from the wrinkles on her grandfather’s emotionless face.

* * *

[March 28th – Essence of the Strait, Chief Officer’s Office]

Yoo Yeonha sat at her desk and inspected the plan once again. She had too many variables to consider. Kim Sukho didn’t suspect anything according to Hassan-i Sabbah, but she couldn’t relax. She couldn’t sleep after sending out those invitation letters and used all sorts of fatigue medicine and Tower of Wish skills. She would rather ruin her body while alive than regret in the grave.

— Chief Officer, a rumor might catch your interest.

Essential Pharmacy’s HR department called her. Her sharpened senses relaxed and she picked up the call.

“Rumor?”

— Yes, take a look at this.

HR sent over a social media post and Yoo Yeonha narrowed her eyes.

[crwekdl] [♥] [There’s a pharmacist living in a cabin deep in the Swiss Alps. His miraculous powers can cure any illness. He helped cure my daughter’s incurable disease...]

“A pharmacist living in a cabin deep in the Swiss Alps... What's this? Some sort of urban legend?”

— That’s also what we thought at first, but too many people have claimed to meet this pharmacist. We plan to go there ourselves. This person might be the talent we’ve been searching for.

“Mmm... Well, I won’t stop you. Go ahead.”

Yoo Yeonha hung up without thinking too much. Then she looked at the calendar again. The party would be held on April 15th. They had 3 weeks left. What should she do until then? Yoo Yeonha took a deep breath and turned on her smartwatch. Rachel sent a few pictures of Evandel with an eagle.

— What’s with the eagle?

Yoo Yeonha asked and couldn’t hold back her curiosity. Rachel immediately replied.

— Ah, this eagle came to see us. We worried at first because of its size, but it’s actually kind and gentle. Evandel easily tamed it and they’re practically best friends now.

— Interesting, what’s its name?

Yoo Yeonha yawned while chatting and slumped over her desk. Not sleeping for a week seemed like too much.

— Evandel named him Spartan.

“Spartan?”

What kind of name is that? Yoo Yeonha smirked and slowly closed her eyes. Her chin rested on the desk and drowsiness flooded in.

“Spartan... Pft.”

She mumbled and began dreaming.

[April 2nd – Creator’s Sacred Grace, Vice Leader’s Office]

“Hmm...”

Kim Suho rubbed his chin while looking at the invitation letter from Yoo Yeonha. This [VIP Invitation Letter] had been all the rage recently. Rumors stated that those who participated would walk a royal road in the future.

Kim Suho didn’t care too much. He had other things to take care of like civilians suffering from the war. He thought they shouldn’t celebrate so early.

“I guess I should still go.”

Both Yoo Yeonha and Yun Seung-Ah strongly advised him to attend. Yoo Yeonha even said she would never talk to him again if he didn’t show up.

“Sigh...”

Kim Suho looked at his computer monitor with a long list of missions.

[Demons have appeared in Gangwon-do...] [A colosseum for demons has been built in Pandemonium...] [The New Evils’ subordinate group, Iron Armor Eccentrics, has appeared in Gaesung’s sky...]

Heroes had to take care of several tasks after Baal’s annihilation. However, the missions the association assigned him felt strange. They seemed like important missions, but didn’t solve any of the core problems. It felt like they wanted him to ignore Pandemonium and the New Evils.

Kim Suho brushed his hair back and thought about the association. The international organization that created the hero occupation and ranked them. What did they plan on doing?

— Hey, Kim Suho!

A loud voice rang out and Kim Suho sat up in surprise.

— Uhahaha, look at you all surprised.

A big screen popped up and Aileen's face appeared uncomfortably close.

"Aileen?"

— Yo, it's been a while.

She acted as youthful as always.

"I thought you were busy playing Leraje's game. Is it fun?"

Kim Suho said with a grin.

— What? Fun? I'm doing work. The Temple of Justice has to grow faster than Leraje's guild and crush them.

Leraje's game took the world by storm. Some people even gave up on real life to spend all their time in virtual reality.

"Really? Well, why did you call me?"

— Ah, it's nothing much. I just wondered if you were participating in that party.

She meant Yoo Yeonha's VIP party.

"Yeah, I'm participating," Kim Suho simply replied.

— Un, I see.

— Suho, it's been a while.

Yi Yongha peeked in from the side. Kim Suho also caught a glimpse of Nicholas. It seemed all the Temple of Justice members just logged out of Leraje's game.

“Are you all coming to the party?”

— Yes, of course.

“Then I’ll see you there.”

— You should try this game too. It’s incredibly fun.

— Ah, move!

Aileen shoved Yi Yongha’s face out of frame.

— Anyways, we were planning a reunion. Chae Nayun, Heynckes, Rachel, and everyone else who fought against Baal. What? An attack? Those fuckers! Ah, we’re hanging up! Guys, we’re logging in!

Something must’ve happened in the game and Aileen angrily hung up.

“They must be pretty busy.”

Kim Suho looked at the black screen and shrugged. As he returned to work...

Whish—

The wind blew from behind him and the chilly air grazed his neck.

Didn’t I close the window? Kim Suho tilted his head and turned around.

“What?”

His eyes widened at the unexpected guest standing there.

“Oi, Kim Suho.”

Jin Sahyuk stared at him and wagged her finger. She wore a strange smile that made him listless. He hadn’t seen her in a while, so he thought she already returned to Akatrina.

“That party sounds like fun. Why don’t you bring me too?” Jin Sahyuk smirked.

“Of course, you can’t say no.”

She added before he could say anything.

Chapter 373

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (7)

[April 4th – Portal Station]

Rachel and Evandel arrived in Korea through the international portal. Rachel wore an ordinary business suit and Evandel wore her magician's hat and cane. Her fashion clearly screamed, I'm a magician!

Everyone looked at them as they left the VIP pathway. Civilians who recognized Rachel began taking pictures with their smartwatches. However, Essence of the Strait's guards showed up before anyone could take more than one or two photos. They quickly guided Rachel and Evandel to a limousine.

"We hope you have a safe trip."

"Thank you."

Rachel got in the limousine first after the guards' warm welcome. Surprisingly, someone waited inside. Rachel flinched when she met this person's eyes. If anything, she expected Yoo Yeonha to meet her. However, Chae Nayun came instead.

"Yo."

Chae Nayun grinned at her. Rachel nodded without saying much, but Evandel trembled at the sight of Chae Nayun. The little girl practically had a seizure.

"Fufu, Evandel looks so cute today too."

Chae Nayun's smirk terrified Evandel.

“Anyways, hurry on in. I have something important to tell you.”

Rachel glanced at the hesitating Evandel and Chae Nayun reached forward to grab Evandel’s small wrist.

“Don’t worry. I won’t do anything bad.”

“Huaaang!”

Evandel couldn’t resist Chae Nayun’s superhuman strength.

“You got the invitation letter to the party, right?”

Chae Nayun asked Rachel, who nodded.

“Don’t bring Evandel.”

“...?”

Rachel tilted her head. She didn’t bring Evandel just to visit Essence of the Strait, but also to attract international investors. After all, Evandel needed astronomical resources to advance her incredible spirit beast magic.

“We already decided to invest in Evandel’s stronghold and research costs, so don’t worry about that.”

Chae Nayun spoke as if she read Rachel’s mind and suddenly pointed at Rachel’s feet.

“Wait, what’s up with that bird? Where did it come from?”

Rachel followed Chae Nayun’s gaze towards the bird sleeping like a coiled snake.

He followed me all the way here? Rachel faintly smiled.

“This is Spartan.”

“Oh, this is Spartan?”

“Mm.”

“Where did you find him? He looks like an eagle.”

“I’m not sure, but I’m also curious. So is Evandel.”

“...?”

Rachel stared at Spartan with a gentle gaze. She felt a mysterious warmth in her heart when she looked at him, but she didn’t know why. This feeling made her cozy and comfortable like finding a precious lost item.

“What are you talking about?”

Chae Nayun furrowed her brows at Spartan and Rachel. However, Rachel didn’t say anything. Evandel picked up Spartan and held him in her embrace.

“Spartan, be careful of this unni...”

“What did you say? He has nothing to worry about. You want me to hug you more?”

“Ah, n-no!”

* * *

I settled down in the Swiss Alps. The scenery I’d only seen in movies looked even more beautiful than I imagined. I could barely take my eyes off it. The blue sky, green fields, and snowy mountains looked more vibrant than anywhere else. I called this place home for the past 3 weeks.

I built a little cabin comfortable enough for one person with aether’s help. Then I wandered around the Alps while using this cabin at the end of a cliff as my base. I found more herbs to record and manifested a medicinal pill every day to store in a bottle.

The number of visitors who came to my cabin increased as I spent my time like this. Most seemed to be tourists, hikers, martial artists, and explorers.

At first, they only looked at my cabin from afar. After about a month, one courageous group finally knocked on the door.

I warmly welcomed them. It seemed they had been injured while climbing. One had been bitten by a poisonous snake and his leg suffered from necrosis. Another suffered from a crushed shoulder. I introduced myself as a pharmacist and gave them my pills when they asked for help. They left the next day fully recovered.

After that, rumors of a Cliff's End Pharmacist spread. Not many visitors came because of the dangers and some probably gave up in the middle of the journey.

"You'll get better with this."

However, a small child came to visit me today. This child dreamed of becoming a hero and told me about his sick younger sister. I asked about her symptoms and he told me she suffered from osteosarcoma, a cancer that produced immature bones. I gave him a pill called Cloud's Touch. When consumed, the magic power within this pill would race through one's veins and eliminate all the cancer cells.

"Thank you so much!"

The child thanked me in crude Korean and left. He also gave me a dagger as payment. Apparently, this treasure had been passed down in his family. I stored it away without checking its authenticity.

For the record, I earned about a billion won from the pills I made so far. I never asked for compensation, but a strange rumor spread that the Cliff's End Pharmacist took a patient's most precious object as payment.

The occasional patients who visited seemed quite wealthy. Naturally, they gave me incredibly expensive objects.

“Huuu...”

I became alone again and looked out the window with a sigh. The Alps scenery seemed beautiful as always. However, I slowly grew used to this beauty. Eventually, a year would go by, then two, and three... What would I be doing then? What should I seek in life?

I suddenly felt frustrated and turned on my smartwatch. Then I accessed Violet Banquet after checking the ordinary community forums. Surfing the internet became a blissful routine with so much time on my hand.

[Do you think someone can infiltrate the VIP party?]

[It would be easier to just buy a slot...]

Posts regarding Yoo Yeonha's VIP party flooded Violet Banquet. People tried to make fake invitation letters, attempts to purchase invitations, estimates on how much it would cost, etc.

“Sigh...”

I felt even more frustrated looking at this. If I could attend this party... if they saw my face... would they remember me?

A false hope still remained. I wouldn't be able to say anything in front of them. They wouldn't remember me either. I had to forget just like them.

Tok, tok—

“Hmm?”

I shot up after someone knocked. More than one visitor a day felt unusual. I opened the door and saw 5 men wearing suits under the dark sky. Immediately, I became alert until I recognized one of them and became dazed. He no longer knew me, but I knew him.

“Hello.”

“...”

He respectfully bowed as I stood in a daze.

“My name is Jin Sechan. We’re from Essential Pharmacy. Would you happen to be the Cliff’s End Pharmacist?”

* * *

[April 15th – Yoo Family’s Mansion]

“Haaa...”

Yoo Yeonha took a deep breath in front of the main room. Her heart pounded.

Her father should be behind this door. What could he be thinking? Did he feel afraid too or had he accepted his fate without resenting his daughter?

Yoo Yeonha clenched her teeth and slowly opened the door after a knock.

“...”

She saw Yoo Jinwoong’s back from the slowly widening gap. He seemed to be organizing documents. Yoo Jinwoong turned around and bitterly smiled.

“Ah, you’re here.”

He treated her like usual. However, Yoo Yeonha couldn’t smile. How could she? After all, they would soon say farewell.

“...”

“It’s fine, Yeonha.”

Yoo Jinwoong spoke first when his daughter kept staring at him. He mischievously smiled like a teenager.

“You’ll still have your mother even when I’m incarcerated. She’s more proud of you than ever. I’m sure you won’t notice a troublemaker like me disappearing.”

Yoo Yeonha hadn’t told her mother about the plan yet. The fewer people knew, the better.

“Are you okay, Dad?” Yoo Yeonha carefully asked. Yoo Jinwoong lightly smiled and nodded as if she shouldn’t have even asked.

“Of course, I’m happy I can do this.”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t reply. As Yoo Jinwoong’s daughter, she knew he dreamed of becoming a master rank hero respected by everyone. He wanted to be an idol for children who looked up to heroes. After today, his dreams would be thoroughly crushed and his name would be disgraced for eternity.

“Yeonha...”

Yoo Jinwoong turned serious since Yoo Yeonha’s complexion didn’t get any better. Then he calmly spoke.

“I’ve been living with regrets my entire life. About the Kwang-Oh Incident and everything else I’ve done. However, there was one time when I did what my conscience told me.”

Yoo Jinwoong slowly closed his eyes and recalled the distant past.

“I saved a child because of you. Right, the one who saved him wasn’t me. It was you, so I’ll listen to you this time too. The conscience that holds me true to myself... is you, Yeonha.”

Yoo Yeonha shut her mouth as her tears welled up. She had to hold them back. It would be disastrous if she cried. She couldn’t mix personal feelings with business.

As such, she began thinking about something else. The child Yoo Jinwoong mentioned. Who was this child?

Yoo Yeonha asked with a tearful voice, “That child. Do you think he’s still alive?”

“Probably, he’s the same age as you. I’m sure he’s living a wonderful life.”

Yoo Jinwoong walked towards her with a suitcase and she watched him in a daze.

“Yeonha, don’t give up and don’t be sad.”

He placed a hand on Yoo Yeonha’s head. She felt his big, warm hand and dropped her head. She didn’t want him to see her tears. Perhaps Yoo Jinwoong thought the same and patted his daughter a few times.

“Thank you.”

He left with those words and Yoo Yeonha stood frozen for a while. All sorts of thoughts swirled in her head. However, she didn’t have time to leisurely ponder them.

“Oi, the party’s starting soon.”

Jain’s voice woke her up. Yoo Yeonha wiped away her tears and turned around. Jain, disguised as Yoo Jinwoong, stared at her.

“I have to greet people like this and leave later, right?”

Yoo Yeonha nodded before heading to the hallway and looking out the window. Limousines carrying the world’s elites arrived one by one.

“Yes.”

“Ok, huhum. Kuhuhum. Huhum... Yeonha, do I sound okay?”

Jain changed her voice after a few coughs. She sounded just like Yoo Jinwoong. Yoo Yeonha had to resist the goosebumps rising on her back.

“You sound just like him.”

She checked her outfit one last time. Her dress, ring, hair, makeup... She looked perfect as the party's host.

“I'm ready. What about you guys?”

“We're ready too. Khalifa will come back after dropping your father off.”

“Perfect.”

Yoo Yeonha deeply sighed. Finally, they would put an end to this. Humanity won the Great Devil War and they would change forever by settling the past era's corruption.

— Master, Yi Yukho and Kim Sukho are coming. It seems they'll participate in the party. However, Yoo Jangwon remains in his mansion.

Hassan-i Sabbah's mental transmission rang out. Yoo Yeonha already expected Yoo Jangwon wouldn't come.

“That's fine.”

Jin Seyeon said she would make sure everyone received lawful punishment for their sins. Of course, that included Yoo Jangwon. However, Yoo Jangwon hadn't committed any wrongdoings on the surface. Something metaphysical like justice couldn't apply to him. As such, they prepared a different method.

“The Chameleon Troupe will be paying him a visit.”

They would use a thoroughly physical concept, violence.

He would meet one of the most horrific members in about 3 hours, Cheok Jungyeong. Dozens of high rank heroes guarded his home, but none of them would pose a problem.

“Now then.”

Yoo Yeonha clapped and the Chameleon Troupe appeared one by one. She smiled at them.

“Let’s start the party.”

Chapter 374

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (8)

Kim Suho wore a swallow-tailed coat to the party. Most distinguished guests busily spoke to each other and he couldn't join any conversations after arriving 40 minutes late.

Kim Suho walked through the grand hall and spotted Yoo Sihyuk, Yoo Jinwoong, Nicholas, and other famous heroes. The heroes he saw on TV at a young age all gathered here.

“Ah, if it isn't our superstar hero!”

Someone approached Kim Suho while pretending to be friendly. He slightly flinched and turned to see the former Korean president, Kim Sukho.

“Hello, Professor Kim Sukho.”

He heard from Yun Seung-Ah that Kim Sukho enjoyed being addressed as professor. Kim Suho followed her advice and a smile bloomed on the former president's face.

“Hahaha, nice to meet you. I heard you came late because of a mission.”

“Yes, my apologies.”

“No need. I arrived slightly late myself.”

Kim Sukho heartily laughed and other distinguished guests gathered around him. Kim Suho recognized them from the list that Yun Seung-Ah sent. They all belonged to Kim Sukho's faction.

“Where are my manners? Suho, let me introduce you. This is the chief of the association’s evaluation department, Kim On.”

“Nice to meet you. I’m Kim On. I’ve heard a lot about you, high rank hero Kim Suho.”

Kim On reached out with a strange smile. As the name suggested, the evaluation department ranked and evaluated heroes. They held quite a powerful authority since a hero’s fame and salary depended on their rank.

“Nice to meet you. I’m Kim Suho.”

Kim Suho awkwardly shook his hand. Next, he met the chiefs of the administrative department, state affairs department, international aid department, etc. Kim Sukho joyously laughed after Kim Suho shook hands with everyone.

“Hahaha. Oh right, Chief Kim. Aren’t there a few empty slots for the master rank hero position?”

“Yes, a few died during the war. We also expelled a few others for not answering summons during the war.”

“Tsk, draft dodgers... Such shameless heroes. Too many of them are blinded by money and fame. Back in my day, people became heroes to save one another. No one cared about the money and fame.”

Kim Sukho unhappily muttered before smiling at Kim Suho.

“We need more heroes like Suho.”

“Thank you for the compliment.”

Kim Suho wryly nodded. The lights suddenly turned off with a click. Was it an event or an attack? A small spotlight shone on the party hall’s south side while everyone warily stood.

“What?”

Kim Sukho and the other distinguished guests turned in that direction. The curtains lifted over the empty stage and revealed the party's host, Yoo Yeonha. She acted with befitting decorum and greeted the guests.

"Nice to meet you. My name is Yoo Yeonha. I'd like to thank all the distinguished guests here. Of course, I will be visiting each of you personally."

Then she cut straight to the chase. Yoo Yeonha didn't want to diverge from her scripted scenario.

"First, Temple of Justice's chairman, Aileen. Your courage served as a powerful beacon for humanity during the war against Baal. We admire you from the bottom of our hearts."

Yoo Yeonha spoke with a gentle voice. The spotlight suddenly shone on Aileen, who flinched in the middle of eating chocolates and quickly wiped her mouth.

Clap, clap, clap—

Yoo Yeonha clapped first and the entire room filled with applause. The flushed Aileen didn't know what to do and repeatedly bowed.

"Next is Rachel, whose elementals saved countless with their powers. You must've saved hundreds of thousands."

Clap, clap, clap—

It seemed to be the time for pleasantries. Kim Suho clapped as he watched Yoo Yeonha's speech.

"Thank you."

Rachel bashfully smiled and several men blushed at the sight of her.

Yoo Yeonha continued to praise the distinguished guests with a silver tongue. Yun Seung-Ah, Yoo Sihyuk, Chae Nayun, Yi Yongha, Kim Suho, and even Shin Jonghak who didn't attend. Kim Suho felt his heart growing warmer as he listened.

“What bullshit.”

However, Jin Sahyuk seemed to think otherwise. Her sudden appearance surprised Kim Suho, but he calmed down and whispered into her ear.

“Be quiet.”

“Who are you to tell me what to do?”

“What?”

“You shut up.”

“Geez...”

The corner of Kim Suho’s mouth twisted up. Meanwhile, the wholesome praises came to an end.

“There are two people left.”

Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho knew it would be them. They quietly laughed and drowned themselves in the moment. For a second, they even thought it might be okay to leave Essence of the Strait alone.

“Professor Kim Sukho.”

A grand spotlight shone on Kim Sukho. He waved and shook his head when everyone turned.

“And the current chairman, Yi Yukho.”

A second spotlight shone on Yi Yukho, one of the association’s founding members and its current chairman. Yi Yukho reacted the same as Kim Sukho.

The guests thought this would be the end and waited for Yoo Yeonha to conclude.

However...

“And finally...”

Yoo Yeonha announced one more person. She gestured at the main door while everyone stood flustered. A spotlight shone on the door and everyone turned towards it.

Kiik—

Soon, the door opened and Chae Joochul the Immortal appeared. No, not just Chae Joochul. Dozens of heroes followed him and surrounded the party hall. The waltz playing in the background died and the sound of footsteps replaced it.

“Let me introduce you all.”

Yoo Yeonha continued while ignoring the atmosphere that suddenly turned cold.

“This is the Four-Colored Immortal, Sir Chae Joochul.”

Chae Joochul slowly walked up the stage.

“Thank you.”

He received the microphone from Yoo Yeonha and looked at Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho. Then he gazed at everyone around them. The executives from each association department including evaluation, administrative, peacekeeping, state affairs, and general affairs... All of them participated in the corruption.

Chae Joochul read the document he brought without the slightest change in expression.

“Kim Sukho, Yi Yukho, Kim On, Yi Wanho, Jin Jaesoon, Jee Yonggu, Gospel, Meizarn...”

He read the 27 association executives' names. Yoo Yeonha came up with this list after tireless hours of investigation.

“The above 27 gathered here today.”

Chae Joochul finished calling them out. He briefly paused and looked at the party hall. The light in his eyes seemed to pierce one’s mind. Chae Joochul spat out a sentence that instantly shattered the frozen atmosphere.

“You are under arrest for attempted assassinations, conspiracy to commit murder, massacring of civilians, collusion with djinns, and other crimes.”

“What?”

“You will be relieved of your duties as of this moment. You have the right to remain silent and...”

Chae Joochul read their Miranda rights in the silent atmosphere. The distinguished guests listened to his dry voice as if entranced.

“W-What the hell does that mean?”

Kim Sukho shouted first and glared at Chae Joochul with bloodshot eyes.

“Chae Joochul, what authority do you have to—”

“It is one of the authorities you gave to the Nine Stars.”

A deep voice cut off Kim Sukho’s frantic shouting. Soon, another person walked up to the stage. The old man’s left arm and right leg had turned into steel and he couldn’t even walk without a cane.

“The authority of the Nine Stars. I’m sure you’ve heard of it.”

Heynckes grinned at Yi Yukho and Kim Sukho.

“Each member of the Nine Stars has authority equivalent to an international investigation agency. Isn't that the clause you wrote? Joochul here is an investigator I hired."

Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho immediately roared.

"Chae, Chae Joochul! Do you think you can get away with this?"

Kim Sukho desperately shouted. Heynckes might be difficult, but he planned to bring Chae Joochul down with him. He had a lot to reveal given their history together.

However, Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho had no choice but to shut their mouths.

Tap, tap—

Another man followed Chae Joochul up the stage and stopped their shouting.

"This is proof."

He served as one of the association's authority holders. Yoo Jangwon handed Chae Joochul an envelope with the evidence.

"Everything is inside here."

"You, you!"

Kim Sukho quickly realized the situation as a seasoned politician. Yoo Jangwon and Chae Joochul had betrayed him. Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho shook with rage. However, Yoo Jangwon ignored them like dogs on the street and continued.

"The Kwang-Oh Incident, Leork Incident, Augsburg Collapse Incident, and other big and small incidents caused by djinns... These two masterminded all these incidents to maintain their authority. The evidence is already being broadcasted all over the world."

Yoo Jangwon clapped and a huge holographic screen appeared onstage.

— I am here today, not as hero Yoo Jinwoong, but as a fellow human being. I am here to confess the evil deeds I have committed.

Yoo Jinwoong stood in front of the media: YTV, MBN, KSB... He confessed in front of the entire world and Kim Sukho's jaw dropped.

When did Yoo Jinwoong get there? Wasn't he just here a moment ago?

Kim Sukho turned to Yi Yukho after watching the screen. They exchanged an obvious message and would struggle until the end now that they found themselves in a corner.

"Don't move!"

Kwaaaaa! A greatsword formed with magic power separated them. An intense heat rose from the crack in the ground and prevented them from joining hands. Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho gulped at Chae Nayun's power that far surpassed the rumors.

"This is Essence of the Strait's Chae Nayun. The government has given me the authority to arrest the association's lawbreakers and to punish and judge them in the process. Resisting will not be tolerated."

"I'm sorry to tell you, but I haven't been convicted yet. I'm no lawbreaker."

Chae Nayun didn't even pretend to hear Kim Sukho. She seemed ready to behead him if he made one wrong move.

As expected of Chae Joochul's granddaughter, she's crazy. Kim Sukho shrugged and kneeled on the ground.

"Then excuse me."

Yoo Jangwon descended from the stage during this chaos.

"Wait! Stop him! Stop him too! We didn't commit any crimes! He controlled us and now he's controlling you!"

Kim Sukho shouted and pointed at Yoo Jangwon. However, Yoo Jangwon quickly escaped and prepared to switch disguises again.

Ssk—

Cold steel touched her neck.

"Oops..."

Jain raised her hand and a woman appeared from behind a pillar.

"It's been a while, Jain. Do you have time today? I'd like to have a little chat."

Yun Seung-Ah slowly moved her sword and nicked Jain's neck.

"Uh... Well... can we chat later? I'm a bit busy right now. I have to make them quickly give up..."

"I can't do that. I need to hear something too."

"Hear? Hear what?"

"Oh? You're pretending you don't know? I want to cut you up the more you do this, bitch."

Blood flowed down Yun Seung-Ah's sword and a sharp pain spread throughout Jain's body. Jain gritted her teeth and pondered, Should I push her sword away or hear this woman out?

Unfortunately, she didn't have the time to weigh her options.

KWAANG!

The mansion's roof suddenly collapsed. Countless flying monsters and New Evil members appeared. Kieeek! Kieeek! Their ferocious cries rang out as demonic energy spread. The sudden attack surprised everyone. Jain glanced at Yun Seung-Ah.

“Why don’t we chat after everything ends? I’ll keep my promise this time. This is my retirement mission, you see.”

Yun Seung-Ah didn’t reply. Then something broke and a huge sonic boom occurred from magic power clashing with demonic energy.

“Huuu...”

Yun Seung-Ah released Jain.

“I won’t give you a chance next time if you don’t keep this promise.”

“Okay, okay. I already know your phone number. Just wait.”

“Shut up and call me when you’re done.”

Yun Seung-Ah ran towards the party hall and Jain changed into that person to finish the job.

The person Kim Sukho feared and wanted to kill. The reason he caused the Kwang-Oh Incident. Jain disguised herself as Jin Seyeon’s father, Jin Younghwan.

* * *

[Underground Bunker – Mansion]

Yoo Yeonha evacuated to the underground bunker. She would be useless in battle and the New Evils would definitely target her. Chae Joochul and Heynckes would take care of the rest.

“Haaa...”

She sighed and turned on the TV as her father’s press conference came to an end.

— I will spend the rest of my life atoning for my sins.

He proudly reached out and the police restrained him with handcuffs that suppressed his magic power. Her company, Essential Dynamics, had invented that equipment.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha couldn't watch her father being taken into custody. She turned off the TV and bitterness welled up inside her. She felt like vomiting and her heart ached from an emptiness.

Did they have to do this? Was it worth abandoning her father? Fish couldn't live in water too pure. Perhaps it might've been okay to compromise.

“Sigh...”

Yoo Yeonha helplessly picked up her smartwatch. Then she checked her past conversations with her father.

[What are you up to, Yeonha?] [I had a little to drink.] [I want to see you.]

Her father sent numerous messages, but she didn't respond to most of them. She began to hate herself for not replying.

“Stupid, stupid, stupid...?”

She smacked her head and blamed herself when she suddenly found a long message without any recipient. She had undoubtedly sent it, but couldn't recall. Yoo Yeonha curiously tilted her head and clicked it.

Soon, her face grew redder than an apple and she exploded from embarrassment.

[Hello, Kim Hajin. This is Yoo Yeonha. Today has been a difficult day. Well, maybe not for you, but it sure has for me. Maybe that's why. The days I spent with you as my trusty ally are popping up in my head. I feel embarrassed, tired, and a little annoyed. However, they're quite precious memories now that I think about them. Right, I'm thinking about you right now...]

“W-W-What the hell is this?”

Yoo Yeonha clutched her head. I'm thinking about you right now? What kind of third-grader confession is this? The unimaginable embarrassment caused her brain to melt.

In her utter embarrassment, she faintly recalled what she forgot and why she felt so empty.

“Ah...”

The reason she cast light on the Kwang-Oh Incident and went so far as to abandon her father.

“Ah...?”

Yoo Yeonha pressed her temples.

“Ah, ah, ah.”

Someone's face faintly surfaced in her mind. Someone she shouldn't forget. Someone she couldn't forget.

That someone's face overlapped with the most embarrassing string of text she ever read and filled her empty head.

Chapter 375

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (9)

Kim Suho calmly reacted to the New Evils' ambush because no demon could withstand the Sword Saint's authority. He simply swung his sword and cut them apart.

Dozens of enemies met their end every time Misteltein flashed.

"Oi, Kim Sukho, did you call them too?"

"No, it's not me!"

Heynckes and Kim Sukho's voices rang out from the battlefield. Kim Suho glanced at them as he swung his sword.

"Then who called them if it wasn't you?"

"You idiot! The invitation stated both the party's time and place. I'm sure they figured it out by themselves!"

Kim Sukho roared, but Heynckes looked doubtful.

"Mmm... Well, it doesn't matter. You'll end up taking the blame anyways."

"W-Wh, what did you say?"

Kim Suho took his eyes off this poetic scene of justice and focused in front again. Several enemies remained. A demon with multiple arms and legs charged at him. It released thin, sharp strings of magic power like a spider, but Kim Suho unleashed his magic power and incinerated the strings. Then he pierced the demon's heart with his sword.

“Oi.”

Jin Sahyuk called Kim Suho as the demon’s black blood splashed on his forehead. She looked completely at ease.

“What?”

Kim Suho shouted back as he sent sword strikes flying. Jin Sahyuk chased his lightning Misteltein with her eyes. He brandished his sword to the right and calmly reacted to a New Evil member’s sudden attack from the left. Jin Sahyuk didn’t pay attention to his swordsmanship, but to his sword itself.

“That sword, who gave it to you?”

“What do you mean... Huup!”

Kim Suho grunted and a fierce gale shot from his sword. His attack instantly blew away the demons encircling him. Then he charged towards the closest demon and took care of them one by one.

“You didn’t receive it from someone? Then did you obtain it alone?” Jin Sahyuk asked.

“Why are you asking me that?” Kim Suho shouted as he swung his sword.

“Because I just don’t think this is right.”

Jin Sahyuk rubbed her chin while staring at the back of Kim Suho’s head. She seemed to be thinking, Just what the hell is inside his brain?

“What?”

“No, never mind. It looks like you won’t remember for the rest of your life.”

I should try just in case... Jin Sahyuk murmured and transformed into a cluster of energy to invade Kim Suho. She had been making good use of this inner body infiltration technique ever since developing it.

“Wait, you...”

Kim Suho didn’t have time to resist. Jin Sahyuk’s technique caught him off guard and he suddenly stopped. He felt something sharp going through his head.

“Jin Sahyuk, what are you doing—!”

He wanted to scream at her to get out, but the fight hadn’t ended yet.

“Auwk!”

A demon appeared out of nowhere and grabbed Kim Suho’s head.

KWANG!

The demon smashed him into the ground. A powerful shock struck his brain, which allowed Jin Sahyuk to explore his brain easier.

* * *

“Ee, eek!”

Kim Sukho screamed as Heynckes took him into custody. The former disgraced president released his worn-out magic power and pushed Heynckes away. Kim Sukho took this opportunity to escape.

“Kua, kuaaa.”

He ran as if his life depended on it and seemed to think his safety would be guaranteed if he escaped the party hall.

“Tsk.”

Heynckes simply watched and didn’t even bother chasing. Rather, he pitied the frantic Kim Sukho.

“Hua, hua, hua...”

Kim Sukho left the party hall without any hindrance and ran through the hallway.

“Uek!”

Suddenly, he tripped on something. Kim Sukho flew into the air before falling disgracefully. He subconsciously turned to see what had tripped him.

“...?”

Then his expression stiffened.

“Uh... uh... you...”

Strange sounds escaped his mouth as if his tongue became paralyzed. His head hurt and his thoughts froze. Someone who shouldn't be here, no, someone who couldn't be here stood in front of him.

“It's been a while, President.”

The calm voice echoed out. Memories Kim Sukho forgot surfaced from the deepest corner of his mind. Jin Younghwan hadn't aged a bit and looked as he did in the past.

“You, you...”

Kim Sukho violently shook as he pointed at Jin Younghwan, who spoke with a grin.

“It's nice to see you again. You thought I died, right? Ah, I might have. Who knows... maybe I'm just an illusion from your guilty conscience. Then again, I doubt you'd have any guilt. That must mean I'm real.”

Kim Sukho froze in shock as cold sweat dripped from his disheveled hair. He simply stared at Jin Younghwan in a daze.

“Now then, why don’t the two of us have a little talk?”

Jin Younghwan wanted to continue, but Kim Sukho already lost it.

“Eeeek...”

He strangely screeched before collapsing with his eyes rolled back. Foam even came out of his mouth. Jin Younghwan raised his eyebrows at this scene.

“What a coward.”

How could someone who killed so many be such a coward? Did he kill people without fearing they would ever come back to bite him?

Jain kicked the unconscious Kim Sukho in the stomach before turning around. She slightly jumped in surprise.

“Oh, you were watching?”

Jin Seyeon stood there and bitterly stared at her father. Sorrow and nostalgia filled her heart even though she knew it was Jain.

“Please cancel that disguise now.”

“Hm? Oh, okay.” Jain undid her disguise and Jin Seyeon continued with a deep breath.

“Yun Seung-Ah is looking for you.”

“Oh, yeah. I’m sure she is.”

“Are you not going to see her?”

“Nope, of course not.” Jain brightly smiled and Jin Seyeon dumbfoundedly glared at her.

“She probably knew I wasn’t going to come back when she let me go. Mmm, I guess you can call our relationship a MacGuffin. Besides, I still have important things to do.”

Jain slicked her hair back.

Jin Seyeon wanted to criticize her with, That’s just an excuse—

Dudududu—

However, helicopters resounded from above. Wiing— Wiing— Sirens also rang out.

“Mm, hear that? It’s time for us to run.”

Jain smiled and Jin Seyeon sighed without a choice.

Outside reinforcements finally arrived 10 minutes after the New Evils attacked.

* * *

— This is an unprecedented exposé of corruption. The fact that the Hero Association’s chairman and Korea’s former president colluded with djinns is taking the world by storm. Yoo Jinwoong and Chae Joochul’s confession and whistleblowing have confirmed the association executives’ dealings with djinns. Naturally, the Hero Association has collapsed into chaos. A retired hero, Yoo Jangwon, also stood out in this incident as a whistleblower...

Pantheon, a Temple of Justice subsidiary, normally served as a resting place for the Temple of Justice heroes. However, it now became the headquarters of an investigative agency.

World governments realized the need for a thorough investigation due to this scandal’s sheer scale and designated the Temple of Justice. The public didn’t oppose even though the Temple of Justice belonged to the association because they trusted Aileen.

“Hmm...”

Chae Nayun sat on a couch in the Temple of Justice's lobby while fiddling with her necklace. The New Evils had been suppressed and the corrupt association members had been arrested. All this took only half a day.

"Finish this without dragging it on. They'll launch a counterattack if we don't end things within 24 hours."

Yoo Yeonha had said and they succeeded.

However, Chae Nayun didn't feel refreshed for some reason. She felt stuffy instead, but not because of the Chae family's involvement in the corruption. She already steeled herself to this fate when she discovered the truth regarding Chae Jinyoon.

She had forgotten something important and always subconsciously fiddled with her necklace. This sense of disharmony only grew stronger as she touched the necklace. Someone had given it to her. She had to return it, but couldn't remember who. An unpleasant forgetfulness swept her mind every time she would almost recall.

— Kieeeeeek!

"Ah, geez!"

A shriek rang out and the startled Chae Nayun raised her head.

Rachel sat in the same room to testify and became shocked too. Spartan had been sleeping on her lap and suddenly shrieked.

— Kieeeeeek! Kieeeeeek!

"S-Spartan? W-What's wrong?"

— Kieeeeeek! Kieeeeeek!

It looked like he had a seizure.

"H-Hey! Do something about him!"

The other heroes present as testifiers furrowed their brows. Yoo Sihyuk, a close friend of Yoo Jinwoong, scowled especially hard.

“Spartan, Spartan...”

— Kiee...

The bird finally stopped when Rachel grabbed his wings and whispered in his ear. Then he began pecking Rachel’s smartwatch. What started as, tk— tk— tk—, quickly transformed into tudududududu! Spartan became a woodpecker that evolved into a power drill.

“W-What now?”

Rachel turned on her smartwatch and wondered if she missed something, but couldn’t find anything unusual. She only saw a message from a VIP friend. Right, the message came from Yoo Yeonha.

“What is it?” Chae Nayun curiously asked.

“I don’t know.”

“Looks like that woodpecker wants you to check your smartwatch. Did you get something?”

“I received a message from Yeonha, but that’s it...” [1]

“Yo, can you choose between polite or casual speech instead of mixing the two?”

Rachel repeatedly blinked at Chae Nayun and lowered her gaze to Yoo Yeonha’s message without replying. Her face immediately stiffened and her entire body froze like a rock as she fell into deep thought.

“What? What is it? Did something happen?” Chae Nayun’s eyebrows perked up.

“...”

Rachel didn't reply.

“Hello? Can you hear me?”

She continued to ignore Chae Nayun.

The slightly offended Chae Nayun furrowed her brows and turned on her smartwatch. She received countless new messages, but Yoo Yeonha's stood out. Chae Nayun clicked it without much thought.

Immediately, she made the same shocked expression as Rachel. Her mind and body also froze. Only her eyes slowly moved up and down while reading.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha's text message contained a certain ordinary, yet unordinary name.

Chae Nayun couldn't recall this name, but it felt familiar. She subconsciously clutched her necklace and slowly raised her head. Rachel also received the same message and stared at her.

“This Kim Hajin... who is he?” Rachel asked when their eyes met.

Chae Nayun couldn't answer. They both needed time to deeply reflect.

* * *

— A month has passed and the trial continues. Kim Sukho and Yi Yukho claim to be innocent as the public criticizes them. Yoo Jinwoong has admitted his wrongs and has been convicted of multiple charges. Chae Joochul stands in a slightly unique position. Taking into account how he acted as one of the whistleblowers, his contributions during the war against Orden, and his worsening physical health due to his age and participation in the Great Devil War...

“Things sure are changing.”

I remained at my cabin by the Alps’ cliffside and watched TV while eating some cereal. The month-long [Hero Association Corruption Gate] had yet to die down in the news.

“Huuu...”

It didn’t feel so bad looking at a world progressing towards a story that shouldn’t have existed. I felt quite happy. Not only did this world defeat Baal, but now they eliminated the tumor known as the Hero Association. This setting with the association executives colluding with djinns... No, I should stop referring to such things as settings. I shouldn’t even use that word anymore. After all, it only made me sad.

Tok, tok—

Someone knocked on my door. A guest? I turned off my smartwatch and stood up. I still lived a life of leisure as the world rapidly changed.

Tok, tok—

Today’s first guest seemed quite impatient. I almost opened the door, but paused with my hand on the knob. I let out a faint breath and couldn’t help but think, Could it be? I laughed and shook my head.

For the past month, I kept anticipating something in the corner of my mind. An empty hope that they would remember and come find me. I knew it would be impossible.

So I opened the door without expecting much.

Kiik—

The wooden door creaked open and revealed two people. The blonde, blue-eyed women turned out to be strangers as expected. The woman on the right gulped before opening her mouth.

“Ah... um... Are you... the Cliff’s End Pharmacist?”

“Yeah, that’s right.”

I spoke casually on purpose. It didn’t seem realistic or charismatic for a mysterious pharmacist living on a cliff to speak politely.

“Ah, I see! Wow, really, we finally...”

The two women cried while hugging each other.

“I’ll chase you out if you keep crying.”

“N-No! We’ll stop crying!”

I led them inside once they stopped crying and asked about the patient’s symptoms. They said poison from the venomous Albahara snake caused it.

The Albahara snake’s venom led to unavoidable death even in this world with scientific and magical knowledge. Death wouldn’t be instantaneous and the victim would suffer 3-14 days before dying. No known antidote existed.

“Do you have that snake’s venom or its tooth?”

“Ah, yes. Just in case.”

The duo came well-prepared. They took out the snake’s venom, multiple teeth, and even its scales from their bag.

“We canceled our qi reinforcement after killing its mother and the baby hiding nearby ambushed us. We let our guard down.”

“I see.”

“Yes, the Albahara snake has weak teeth. So long as you maintain your qi reinforcement at all times—”

“Yeah, yeah. Alright, you can leave.”

“Pardon?”

I retrieved the materials and sent them outside.

“I don’t like showing people my manufacturing process.”

“Ah, yes. Understood!”

I swallowed the Albahara snake’s venom as soon as they left.

Detoxification happened automatically when I analyzed poison. I considered it the simplest function of my [Medicinal Memory Physique].

“Auu, it hurts.”

The [Medicinal Memory Physique] stored the Albahara poison’s antidote after about 3 minutes. I immediately materialized the antidote as a pill and shouted.

“Oi! Come in.”

The two women quickly returned and I handed them the antidote. They didn’t doubt my pill in the slightest. They simply cried and handed me an expensive jewel, a blue diamond.

“Thank you!”

Both of them left after bowing 90 degrees.

“Yeah, take care.”

I sat in my chair again after sending them off and turned on my smartwatch.

— Essence of the Strait’s Chief Officer Yoo Yeonha announced her retirement, but the guild’s fierce dissuasion made her retract her statement. Many are sending Yoo Yeonha and Yoo Jinwoong’s family words of encouragement and sympathy...

My smartwatch projected a TV screen, but the news didn't seem that interesting. I stared at Yoo Yeonha holding a press conference and changed the channel.

— The Kwang-Oh Incident is a key subject in this matter...

“Ah.”

I immediately turned off the smartwatch. Honestly, I hoped the Kwang-Oh Incident would help. Memories of me had been wiped from everyone's minds, but I hoped someone would remember once they heard about the Kwang-Oh Incident. Unfortunately, that didn't happen.

A month passed, but no one came to find me.

That goes without saying. The false relationships I built through the author's power should disappear. After all, this world couldn't be considered a novel anymore. I couldn't be called the novelist Kim Hajin, but just an insignificant Kim Hajin.

“Sigh...”

Tok, tok—

Another knock rang out. It seemed to be the second visitor of the day.

“Lots of visitors today, huh.”

I stood up again and walked to the door. The visitor this time seemed even more impatient. Perhaps they urgently needed help.

“Alright, alright...”

I opened the door without hesitation.

Whish—

Black hair fluttered in the Alps' cold wind. A dazzling sunset dyed the sky orange as she looked at me. The scenery looked truly beautiful. So unbelievably beautiful I couldn't think of anything.

1. Rachel mixes polite and casual speech here. 📖

Chapter 376

The Story That Shouldn't Have Existed (10)

I looked at her standing outside the door. The world fell silent and the space around us seemed to contract and expand on its own. My body refused to move and I wondered if I was dreaming. This couldn't be real. I closed my eyes hoping she wouldn't disappear and prayed that I wouldn't wake up in bed. Then I opened my eyes again.

“...”

She stood in the same spot. I really couldn't think. The huge shock fried all my brain cells, so I remained frozen and just stared at her.

Suddenly, I got cold feet. What if she just came for my pills like the other visitors? She should've forgotten about me, so did I have to treat her like a stranger?

However...

“I told you before, didn't I?”

Her voice flowed into my ears.

“I would never forget.”

Her eyes shone like jewels as she cried. I had never seen her cry before.

“I told you I wouldn't forget.”

She sobbed and I didn't know what to do. Tears also flowed down my cheeks. Seeing her cry shocked me just as much as her arrival.

Should I comfort her first or silently embrace her? What should I say?
How should I approach her?

She walked into my arms as I hesitated like a fool.

“Ah...”

A short mutter escaped my lips. Her scent tickled my nose as our bodies touched. I felt like fainting and desperately wrapped my arms around her.

“Kim Hajin.”

She said my name. Yi Byul said my name. She looked at me like a kitten with her hands on my chest.

“I remember you.”

“...”

I smiled and a great sense of relief overcame me.

This person remembered me. Yi Byul came to find me.

“Thank you. Really.”

We tightly embraced each other.

However...

My smile froze. What if the co-author suddenly appeared? What if he said an error occurred and took away her memories again?

I looked at Yi Byul rubbing her face on my chest. I didn't know if she tried to wipe her tears or simply felt too happy. Well, probably the former since the Boss I knew would die from embarrassment. Ah, she just blew her nose too.

I just wanted to live in this moment without any worries, thoughts, or concerns. Just the two of us reunited forever.

My prayers seemed useless. I felt another presence approaching the cabin. No, it sounded like fierce shouting.

Kieeeeeek!

An eagle's cry echoed out.

I looked at the cabin ceiling while holding Boss. An old habit from when I could still see through objects with my Master Sharpshooter gift. I couldn't see beyond the ceiling anymore, but could guess who also arrived.

"Huhum..."

Yi Byul left my arms and stood next to me. She prepared to greet the others and stood with dignity like the usual Boss after crying just a moment ago. Then she turned and looked at me. I could still see the traces of tears around her eyes.

"Hajin."

I tilted my head and she coughed a few times before proudly declaring.

"I'm the first one who found you. Remember that. Yep, I'm the first. The first... ufufu."

Her playful smile looked so pure.

I also smiled and kissed her.

* * *

"Sigh..."

Jin Sahyuk furrowed her brows at those two people hugging. She hated tears and touching reunions like this. Of course, she had enough sense to not bother them. No matter how unsightly she found it, they had triumphed over the world.

“I didn’t even need to help,” Jin Sahyuk muttered.

Kim Hajin’s existence had undoubtedly been erased from this world. No one remembered him and no records remained. He had been banished and isolated.

Jin Sahyuk could only make an uncertain conjecture. She guessed that Kim Hajin had been erased, but Kindspring remained inside him. As such, people involved with Kim Chundong possessed the potential to remember Kim Hajin.

Jin Sahyuk came to tell Kim Hajin about this potential and received information about Kindspring.

However, it seemed she didn’t need to do anything. Kim Chundong obviously had a deep relationship with the Kwang-Oh Incident. Those who knew about the incident would recall Kim Hajin due to Kim Chundong’s past.

Of course, denser people like Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak would never recall Kim Hajin because they didn’t have any connections with Kim Chundong. They might notice something off and slightly recall with their sharp senses, but they would never remember everything about Kim Hajin.

“What an unstable world.”

Jin Sahyuk sighed with a hint of self-deprecation. How could a world be so full of loopholes? How pitiful that she existed in such a world?

— What are you going to do from now on?

A voice rose from Jin Sahyuk’s heart. It sounded cold and resentful.

“Mm, that’s what I wanted to ask him. What happened to Kindspring and what will happen to my world?”

Jin Sahyuk closed her eyes and looked into her inner mind. The frozen Puharen stared at her in a carefully decorated room.

“After all, he’s the one who created this world.”

— Then why aren’t you asking him?

Puharen learned how to talk, but hadn’t completely healed. He certainly hadn’t forgiven Jin Sahyuk yet either. If anything, he could now directly attack her.

“I thought this world abandoned him, but there’s someone in an even worse situation.”

Jin Sahyuk smirked. The world may have abandoned Kim Hajin, but its people remembered him. Kim Hajin should be able to live a peaceful life.

That didn’t apply to Kindspring, who lived a life of solitude without parents before being transported to Akatrina. The deep darkness inside him partially disappeared when he served Prihi, but even Prihi abandoned him in the end. Two different worlds had abandoned Kindspring and no one remembered him.

Jin Sahyuk couldn’t accept that. She planned to erect a statue of him after reconstructing her kingdom so his name would be remembered forever as her most loyal servant. She would inscribe his name along with hers onto the first page of Akatrina’s history book.

Before that, Jin Sahyuk believed Kindspring still lived. She believed they would have a miraculous reunion once she returned to Akatrina.

“Alright, let’s go back home.”

— Are you really going back there?

Puharen asked.

— You’ll die if you do. You know what’s in that place.

“I won’t die.”

Jin Sahyuk lightly retorted and opened her eyes.

— I’ll kill you.

Puharen coldly replied.

“That doesn’t matter. I wouldn’t have made it here in the first place if I was going to die by your hands.”

— And that’s okay with you? Don’t you have lingering regrets in this world?

Jin Sahyuk flinched. Puharen may have been correct.

“Lingering regrets, you say...”

Jin Sahyuk didn’t want to admit it, but she couldn’t trick Puharen. It must be there if Puharen said so. After all, he could search her inner mind at will.

“I’ll deal with it. No regret is bigger than Plerion in my heart.”

Jin Sahyuk grinned and grasped the dimension stone.

— Then what is Bell doing? Is he in Akatrina?

Puharen spoke again.

“No, Bell... is doing something to return to his world.”

Bell. Jin Sahyuk became speechless every time she thought about him. He used Baal to revive his destroyed world. Jin Sahyuk didn’t know if he planned that or if things just turned out that way. She believed he intended so given his scheming cleverness.

“Puharen, you already found out about Bell?”

— Yep, I'll soon reach the deepest part of your mind.

“That might be a bit dangerous.”

— Dangerous? I told you. I'll kill you.

Woong—

A wavering portal formed next to Jin Sahyuk and a red-haired woman appeared. Shimurin had promised to support her.

Woong— Woong— Shimurin waved a staff purchased from the market.

“Are you ready?”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk nodded before handing her the dimension stone.

The dimension stone from Baal was extremely unstable. It could only transport one person to Akatrina, so she required Shimurin's help.

“Alright... Jin Sahyuk.”

Shimurin asked once again before using the dimension stone to form a [Dimensional Portal].

“Are you sure you won't regret it? If you leave, you won't be able to return.”

“No need to ask again.”

Jin Sahyuk imposingly raised her eyebrows.

“I am a king. No one can stop a king from returning.”

“Sure...”

Shimurin shrugged and activated her grand dimensional magic. The mystical stone fused with her magic power and glowed purple. Then it violently shook before scattering to dust. The tiny specks rose into the air with Shimurin's magic power.

Jiing!

It formed an oval wavering with purple light.

"Now then, King. Move your baggage through first."

Shimurin grinned.

"Getting a bit cheeky there with your tone."

"Didn't I tell you? A grand magician holds the same rank as a king."

"Tsk..."

Would it kill you to treat me with more respect?

Jin Sahyuk clicked her tongue and threw in 8 magic bags filled with food, robots, weapons, armor, and other daily necessities.

"Should we go now?"

Shimurin spoke as she looked into the portal. It still had enough energy after moving so much baggage. Enough to carry two people over. The grand magician smiled in satisfaction at her perfect calculation.

"Yeah. Let's go, Shimurin. To Akatrina."

As Jin Sahyuk prepared to step into the portal...

"What?" Jin Sahyuk paused after sensing a presence that appeared out of nowhere. She and Shimurin stared towards the cabin.

Kieeeeeek!

An eagle circled the sky above Kim Hajin's cabin as if it knew his location. Several others walked up the Alps' mountain path.

Jin Sahyuk's shoulders trembled. She didn't like them, but they had been through thick and thin together. To put it grandly, those heroes had fought against the world and triumphed.

"Haha..."

Jin Sahyuk chuckled as she stared at them, yet she didn't leave any words behind.

A single gust of wind shook the Alps' grassy field.

Whish—

The northern wind swept away what was previously there. Silence instantly descended. The wavering purple portal and the woman delicately smiling disappeared. Only their footsteps on the grassy field served as evidence that they existed.

However, the grassy field was far from lonely.

"Hua..."

Soon, more footsteps arrived with deep breaths. They belonged to those who remembered that person and came searching for him.

"Let's go. There's no need to make a big deal out of this."

A voice filled with pleasant nervousness rang out.

The wind seemed to carry a blue hue and a beautiful sunset cast over the sky.

They would soon reunite with him. The group looked forward to calling his name and slowly walked towards the cabin at the cliff's end.

Chapter 377

Epilogue (1), My Story

“Get up. Get up. Get up.”

A cute voice tickled my ears. It sounded like a bird chirping because of my drowsiness.

“Get up. Get uuuuup!”

My shoulders decently shook from those small hands. My drowsiness quickly faded, but I stayed still on purpose. I had to carefully stop my mouth from wriggling with joy.

“I said get up...”

Evandel shook me for a long time and crossed her arms. She glared at me with her perky eyes. Only then did I open mine and smiled at her pouting face.

“Ah, you’re up!”

“Yep, I’m up.”

I hugged Evandel while still drunk on sleep. She dug into my chest like a puppy and giggled adorably. I stroked her hair and faced the window. A green hill entered my view and the cozy sun illuminated the residential district.

The Colored-Paper Charity Foundation had constructed his healing city. I came down from the Alps 3 months ago and became an official pharmacist here.

“Hajin, I’m hungry. I want to eat breakfast.”

Evandel's squishy voice rose from my chest.

"Oh, you do?"

"Un, let's go!"

She grew big enough to use casual speech now. I got up from bed with a smile.

Rachel and Yi Byul sat staring at each other when we arrived at the cafeteria. Their expressions looked stiff as if they just finished a serious conversation. However, their faces instantly changed when they spotted us.

"You're awake? Good job, Evandel."

Rachel greeted us first.

"Un."

Evandel scurried up and sat between Rachel and Yi Byul. I sat on the opposite side facing them. Then I asked Yi Byul and Rachel.

"What were you two talking about?"

They exchanged glances before shrugging.

"We were talking about Evandel."

"After all, it's been 3 months since we all started staying here."

"Ah..."

Rachel and Yi Byul exchanged glances before faintly coughing. A strange air flowed between them, but I didn't dig further and reached for a loaf of bread on the table.

I nibbled on the bread and looked around at the people that made every day feel like a dream. They stayed by my side for the past 3 months without losing their memories of me. Right, 3 months had already passed since our reunion.

Many things happened during this time. Unsurprisingly, Yoo Yeonha masterminded most of it. She misunderstood like always after hearing I had been deleted from this world.

What did she say again? So that's your sacrifice? She blurted something incomprehensible and researched how to bring back my existence.

I found it cute at first as she gathered everyone who remembered me. This included nine others: Chae Nayun, Rachel, Evandel, Cheok Jungyeong, Jain, Droon, Jin Seyeon, and Yi Byul. Unfortunately, Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak didn't know about the Kwang-Oh Incident. They also lacked a vital key like Evandel and couldn't remember me.

After that, Yoo Yeonha began to experiment. She spent tens of billions of won before I could stop her. As expected, no solution could be found. Yoo Yeonha ended up offering me Essential Pharmacy's CEO position. However, I didn't think that position suited me and settled for being a researcher. I simply wanted to help as many as possible.

"How is it? Good?" Yi Byul suddenly asked. She must've baked this bread judging from her eyes full of expectation. I nodded with a smile.

"Yeah, it's good."

"I'm glad..."

Yi Byul sighed in relief. I found her quite cute and grabbed her hand under the table.

"Ah."

An embarrassed sound escaped her lips.

"Cough."

Rachel cleared her throat. Yi Byul flinched and quickly let go. I awkwardly scratched my head.

“How have things been, Rachel?”

“I’m still working on what I’ve always been doing: the revival of England and the English Royal Court Guild. That’s why I went to Cube all those years ago.”

Rachel sweetly smiled. She lived her life for her nation and guild. Now should be the perfect time after she greatly contributed in the Great Devil War. Talks of restoration gained traction in England.

“Of course, several hurdles exist. Lancaster is still alive too.”

“He is?”

I became dumbstruck. That guy is still alive?

“Yes.”

Rachel continued with a light smile.

“We have many problems to resolve. I felt afraid in the past, but I’m okay now. I’ve grown stronger thanks to Hajin and Evandel.”

“...”

That caught me off guard. I slightly flinched and Yi Byul’s eyes turned sharper. She glanced at Rachel before looking at me with puffed cheeks.

“Thank you.”

Rachel added. She only said two words, but I felt the meaning behind them. Her emotions seemed as transparent as her ocean eyes.

“I don’t think I’ve thanked you enough, Hajin.” Rachel leisurely shrugged.

“Uh... No, you don’t need to. I should be the one thanking you.” I nodded in embarrassment and ate my bread. Meanwhile, Yi Byul spoke to Rachel.

“There will be a small meeting tonight.”

I looked up again and Yi Byul seemed nervous as she glared at Rachel. A faint chuckle escaped my lips.

“Rachel, you’re coming too, right?”

Yi Byul made it sound like a challenge, but her intentions were pure. Rachel knew this too and accepted the invitation with a smile.

I briefly stared at them before opening my mouth. “I’ll buy the groceries.”

“Un? Then me too. I want to go too.”

Evandel brightly smiled and raised both of her hands. Rachel’s eyes slightly widened.

“Hm? I don’t mind Evandel, but weren’t you going to Disneyland today with your friends?”

“Aaah! You’re right!”

Evandel recalled the promise with her friends.

“I guess we can buy groceries next time.”

She declared like a true adult.

* * *

The sun began to set at 5:30 P.M. I went out to buy groceries at a supermarket located in the city’s center. Young boys and girls filled the streets. I walked while listening to their cheerful laughter.

Then I suddenly felt a gaze on me. It came from the forest of zelkova trees on the city’s right. I grew nervous since I couldn’t even defeat ordinary djinns now.

Soon, the mysterious person revealed herself and my worries disappeared. Chae Nayun stood at the border between the city road and the sky. She looked at me for a long time and confidently grinned.

“Have you been well?”

She greeted me like usual. I smiled and nodded. “Yeah, it’s been a while.”

We hadn’t met since our reunion at the cabin when she vanished with a few words, I’m leaving.

“Yeah, it has.” She crossed her arms.

“Wait, didn’t you say you would conquer the Tower of Miracle?”

This tower left many wounds on the world. It became a forbidden topic after Creator’s Sacred Grace failed their expedition. However, Essence of the Strait recently announced their plans to officially conquer it. The Tower of Miracle became the spotlight of attention once again.

“Yep, I’ll obliterate that tower.”

Chae Nayun raised her arm and flexed. I could practically see her oozing confidence.

“Pft. Yeah, I’m sure it’s possible for you. Oh right, I’m about to buy some groceries. Want to come along?”

I pointed at the supermarket in the distance. However, Chae Nayun shook her head.

“No, that’s not what I came for.”

“Then why are you here?”

“Well... the campaign is in 2 days. I might die, so I thought I’d tell you before I go.”

She brought up a frightening topic. Chae Nayun lowered her head and I furrowed my brows. The setting sun glowed behind her. She remained silent for a long time before muttering.

“Thank you for everything.”

“Huh?”

“Thanks to you, I didn’t have to see oppa becoming a devil. I picked up the sword because of you. You’re also the reason I became this strong.”

She spoke as if reciting lines she practiced countless times. I could tell she felt embarrassed because of her flushed face.

“Thanks to you, I also regained my real grandfather.”

“It’ll take him 20 years to fully recover with that medicine.”

A pill that reduced the side effects of gifts. I created the original using my settings intervention, so reproducing it had been extremely difficult. Essential Pharmacy finally succeeded in creating a tiny amount. They gave it to Heynckes and Chae Joochul, who regained a bit of his true emotions. I didn’t think Chae Nayun would mention it.

“Just accept my gratitude, bastard. You’re the reason I’m alive and standing here right now.”

“...”

I bitterly smiled. Looking back, I came to love this world because of Chae Nayun. She showed me it was more than a novel.

“It’s the same with me. The reason I’m here... might be because of you.”

“Is it? That’s good to hear.”

Chae Nayun walked up and stopped a nose-distance away. She looked straight into my eyes and scratched her cheeks before dropping her head.

“Then...”

She took a few steps back while looking at my feet and raised her head as though she finally came to a decision. Chae Nayun reached out and I instinctively flinched. Her action felt slightly intimidating.

“W-What?”

“Here.”

She opened her fist and a shiny object dangled down.

“Ah.”

I couldn’t help but exclaim. I gifted her this necklace a long time ago. She stared at it with a bittersweet expression.

“You lent it to me, remember? I should return it since the war is over.”

“It’s fine.”

I pushed her hand back. After all, I made this necklace for her.

“What? No, take it.”

“I said it’s fine. Just think of it as a gift from a friend.”

Chae Nayun paused and clenched her fists. Her face froze and her shoulders stiffened. She roughly brushed her hair back.

“You... you think we can still be friends?”

Her trembling voice trailed off as though she felt angry... no, sad. She hatefully glared at me.

“You should know. We can’t be friends.”

I remained silent. I couldn’t say anything right now. I could only wait for Chae Nayun’s choice one day.

“Do you know what kind of person you are to me?”

I shook my head and she stared with a sad smile.

“Most likely... I’ll continue to hate and love you until I die.”

Her voice sounded cold as ice and deep as the ocean. It carried an incomprehensible darkness.

“So, here!”

She reached out without giving me a chance to think.

“Take this, you bastard!”

“If you say so...”

“Huh?”

A shadow suddenly fell over her face when I agreed. I put on a bright smile and she playfully tapped my chest with the hand holding the necklace.

“Okay, take it.”

“I will, but not now. I’ll take it back after you return from the campaign.”

“What?”

“You heard me. I’m talking about the Tower of Miracle. You’ll need that necklace to succeed or at least increase your chance of success.”

Chae Nayun became dumbfounded and I laughed.

Honestly, the Tower of Miracle served as a MacGuffin in my story. I didn’t even write a rough outline about it. I only briefly thought, What would happen if this was the reward? It would be extremely unlikely.

However...

Would Chae Nayun be happy again if she possessed that miracle?

“Got it? Give it back after you conquer the Tower of Miracle. Don’t refuse just for the sake of it.”

I pushed her hand back and she furrowed her brows before reluctantly placing it in her pocket.

“So fussy... Fine, it’s true this necklace will be a big help.”

Chae Nayun grumbled and turned around. The sun had set before I noticed and the navy world dyed us in darkness. Tap, tap. Chae Nayun failed her objective and spoke with her back facing me.

“I’m going. See you again.”

“Yeah, live a happy life.”

I replied as I placed her leaving figure in my memories. I didn’t say, see you again, on purpose.

* * *

— How was Disneyland? Fun?

— Un! Super fun!

A rowdy noise woke me while I enjoyed a catnap on the balcony.

— I saw a flying pumpkin carriage!

I massaged my stiff neck and looked through the window at the living room. Evandel wore a fairy uniform with a fairy headband.

— The haunted house was too scary though...

I grinned at her cute appearance and finally noticed the person sitting next to me. I turned and faced Yi Byul, who stared at me from the balcony rail.

“Oh, you were watching me? You could’ve woken me up.”

I rubbed my heavy eyelids.

“Sorry...”

She suddenly apologized and her expression darkened too. I felt confused, but realized why my eyes felt so heavy. I had been crying and quickly wiped away the tears.

“Oh, this? It’s nothing. I must’ve had a bad dream.”

“...”

“Really, you don’t have to be sorry about anything.”

Yi Byul tightly grabbed my hand. Her cold hand shook and I knew what she must’ve thought. After all, I told only her the truth about me.

“You can leave whenever you want. I understand.”

“No, I’m not going anywhere.”

I flatly refused while looking into her eyes. She teared up from the guilt. I couldn’t say, I can’t go. For us, a big difference existed between not going and being unable to go.

“I’m staying here because you said you wouldn’t forget me. You found me first.”

“I—”

The balcony door suddenly shot open as Yi Byul prepared to say something. Evandel came running in.

“Hajin, Hajin! I’m back!”

She finished boasting to Rachel and came to me next. I exchanged glances with Yi Byul before heading to the living room. Several others gathered there: Rachel, Yoo Yeonha, Droon, Yi Yuri, and even eight of Evandel’s friends.

“Hey.”

Yoo Yeonha waved.

“Yo.”

I also half-heartedly waved. Yoo Yeonha became the most influential person on the planet, but visited at least once a week despite her busy schedule.

“Wait, Evandel?”

“Un?”

“Go play with your friends on the 2nd floor. The adults have something to talk about.”

“Okay! Can we all play games?”

“Only for 2 hours.”

“Yay!”

Evandel and her friends rushed to the 2nd floor. I sighed and sat at the long table in the living room. A plate of steak steamed in front of me. Yoo Yeonha asked as Yi Byul and I took a seat.

“Nayun came and already left?”

“...” I silently nodded.

“Ms. Nayun came?” Rachel widened her eyes from next to Yoo Yeonha.

“You should ask him. He knows better than me.” Yoo Yeonha pointed at me.

“Yeah, Chae Nayun came and left. She mentioned the upcoming tower campaign and didn’t say much else.”

“Ah, right. The Tower of Miracle campaign is coming up. Ms. Nayun must be busy then.”

Rachel seemed a bit regretful.

For the record, Aileen became the Hero Association’s new chairman. Chae Nayun also became the youngest master rank hero in history. Many high rank heroes had been promoted to master rank. The honorable title went to Chae Nayun, who was 4 days younger than Kim Suho.

Rachel began addressing Chae Nayun respectfully because of this. The princess remained at high rank, grade 1 (world rank 79) and took formalities rather seriously.

“There you go again with Ms. Nayun... Just address her casually.”

Yoo Yeonha shook her head before facing me.

“Here, take this.” She took out a piece of paper.

“What’s this?”

“You rested a lot already. It’s time to start working.”

Yoo Yeonha mischievously smiled. That expression always made me anxious. What did she do this time? I swallowed hard and checked the contents.

[Press Conference Request Form]

“What? A press conference?”

“Yep, the patent for your cure to baldness has passed. There’s a reason you’re called the Miracle Pharmacist right now. Everyone is talking about you. You’re practically the savior of all men between the ages of 20 and 90.”

“What’s the press conference for?”

“Well, who knows? Maybe your existence in this world might return with this press conference.”

A chuckle immediately escaped me. For a mere baldness cure?

However, Yoo Yeonha sharply raised her eyebrows.

“No, I’m being serious. Your cure for baldness is a huge deal. It’s something that even magic failed to solve. Tens of thousands will swarm to it if you hold a press conference. Do you know how many in the world suffer from complete or partial baldness? In the west, over half—”

“Ah, geez. Stop. A mere baldness cure won’t—”

“Mere?”

“Oh, right. Didn’t you say you suffered from partial balding because of all the stress?”

“What? No, I didn’t! When did I say that?”

“Then take this back.”

I returned the document to Yoo Yeonha. She pouted and put away the request form.

“You didn’t come with Cheok Jungyeong?” Yi Byul suddenly asked. She seemed wistful for familiar faces.

“Mmm, no. They’ll become wanted targets again.”

“Wanted targets?” Yi Byul furrowed her brows.

“Yes.”

Yoo Yeonha looked out the window and stared at the distant sky. “Right about now... they should be in the underground prison trying to win over Yoo Jinwoong.”

“What?”

“Huh?”

My eyes widened. Yi Byul and Rachel also had similar reactions. Yoo Yeonha waved it off as though it wasn’t a big deal.

“It’s fine. This matter will be taken care of with utmost secrecy. We have already finished discussing it with the association’s chairman. Yoo Jinwoong received 15 years behind bars, but Chae Joochul got away scot-free. Maybe she felt bad about that and agreed to our offer.”

Yoo Yeonha shrugged before continuing.

“Honestly, Jin Seyeon came up with it. She’s completely a Chameleon Troupe member now. Something about protecting justice from the shadows. Well, she’ll become a thief and destroyer like the rest of them, but only against evil. Anyways, I’m happy. I don’t want my father rotting behind bars for 15 years.”

Sk, sk. Yoo Yeonha sliced her steak with her knife and fork.

“I’m sure he’ll agree. Traveling the world was his second dream.”

We stared at Yoo Yeonha as she placed a chunk of steak into her mouth. Nom, nom. She wiped her mouth with a napkin after gracefully chewing and swallowing. Then she set the knife and fork down.

“Now then.”

Yoo Yeonha rested her chin on her interlocked fingers. She made an evil, mischievous smile.

“That’s my current situation. Rachel is probably going to say something about her guild or whatever, so...”

Yoo Yeonha looked back and forth between me and Yi Byul.

“Why don’t I hear the story of you two?”

The room briefly turned silent. Even Rachel, Droon, and Yi Yuri looked curious. I grabbed Yi Byul’s cold and stiff hand. She seemed nervous.

“Well...”

I thought about the people I abandoned. My friends and family meant everything to me before I came to this world.

I might not see them again, but I didn’t regret my decision. I missed them every day and felt sad when I thought about my parents losing me forever. However, I wouldn’t have made this decision if I wasn’t sure.

“Our story...”

I thought about Chae Nayun, who wasn’t here. I thought about Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak, who couldn’t remember me. I thought about what I could do for this world. Then I looked at the precious person next to me.

“We’ll have to write it from now on until it reaches a happy ending.”

I spoke like usual and smiled. Yi Byul and everyone else also smiled. That would be enough.

I became a different person in another world. I lost everything from my previous world, but the current me... No, we could all confidently say we felt happy with our loved ones.

Chapter 378

Epilogue (2), Their Story (Part 1)

“Huuu...”

Kim Suho took a deep breath in front of the temple’s gateway. The scene before him looked rather imposing. A surrounding wall prevented outsiders from entering and the marble columns endlessly stretched beyond the gateway.

The tall temple at the end of the stone road made him nervous. It resembled a temple from ancient mythology, but didn’t lack any modern functions. This oval structure built with ice glass shone a splendid blue. People called it the Temple of Nine Heroes. The Hero Association built it for the Nine Stars, who greatly contributed during the Great Change and the Great Devil War.

Today, Kim Suho had been invited to this incredible place that only the Nine Stars and their successors could enter. This invitation signified a passing of the torch.

“How does it feel to be a successor?”

The person accompanying him suddenly asked. Kim Suho turned to the side with a slightly nervous expression. There, Yun Seung-Ah smiled with her arms crossed.

“Well...”

Her smile made him relax. He softly smiled back and shook his head.

“I’m not sure. I feel like I still have lots to do.”

Kim Suho looked at the Temple of Nine Heroes and thought about Jin Sahyuk, who returned to Akatrina without a word. The ill-fated relationship to his previous world had disappeared along with her. However, that didn't mean Kim Suho could forget her. He couldn't forget about Akatrina either.

He had yet to finish his task. His name, Suho, meant to protect and he would continue to fulfill this destiny.

"I see..."

Yun Seung-Ah bitterly nodded without knowing his thoughts.

Kim Suho would no longer be a guild member after joining the Nine Stars. However, she accepted this. It would take Kim Suho at least 10 years to grow into the position. She knew he couldn't be fenced inside a guild.

"Mmm? Suho, over there. Three more are coming over."

Yun Seung-Ah pointed at the path and laughed. Kim Suho turned around.

The three walking towards them all possessed a below-average height: a magician wearing a cape engraved with nine stars, the association chairman nicely dressed in a black suit, and Evandel with her magician's wand and hat.

"Yeah, I see them."

Kim Suho smiled.

Only Heynckes and Oh Jaejin still served as the Nine Stars. Four members, including Shin Myungchul, had already passed away. The remaining three lived in hiding after completely losing their powers. They would be reinstated once Essential Pharmacy fully developed the treatment for side effects. As such, the Nine Stars had four empty seats.

Their honorary positions of authority would've faded into legend if all nine heroes died. However, the Hero Association changed the Nine Stars into an official institution. Its empty seats now had to be filled.

[The Nine Stars check the association, the association remains conscious of the Nine Stars, and the Temple of Justice supervises the association.]

The Temple of Justice and Aileen decentralized the association's power to prevent corruption from happening ever again.

"You're already here."

The nine star magician, Ah Hae-In, approached Kim Suho.

"Hello, I hope you've been well."

"We heard the news. Congratulations."

Kim Suho and Yun Seung-Ah courteously greeted Ah Hae-In.

Oh Jaejin had nominated Ah Hae-In to be one of the Nine Stars since she recaptured all of Europe. The official announcement would be made next week.

"Yes, I'm sure you two know Aileen. This is Evandel."

Ah Hae-In glanced at Evandel. Kim Suho kneeled to eye level with Evandel, who tightly held Ah Hae-In's hand.

"Hey, Evandel. We've seen each other before. Do you remember me?"

Kim Suho greeted her first. However, the wary Evandel hid behind Ah Hae-In.

Honestly, Evandel slightly hated Kim Suho for forgetting Kim Hajin. (Ah Hae-In avoided being hated by pretending to remember Kim Hajin.)

"Evandel?" Kim Suho asked, slightly confused.

"Who are you?"

"It's me, Kim Suho."

"I don't remember you."

"Hmm? We met before, remember?"

"I don't know. Hmph."

Evandel snorted and turned away, but Kim Suho found her adorable.

"Haha. Welcome, Evandel." Yun Seung-Ah spoke up this time.

"Who, who are you?"

"Hmm?"

Yun Seung-Ah seemed to be in the same position.

"You, you don't know me? Aren't you still friends with Haeyeon? You don't remember Haeyeon either?"

"I, I know Haeyeon... We're really close..."

Evandel hesitated between her loyalty to Kim Hajin and her sisterly love for Haeyeon.

"Seung-Ah, why are you here?"

Aileen hopped to them and asked. She looked back and forth between Yun Seung-Ah and Kim Suho. Her eyebrows moved up and down as if to tease them.

"What do you mean? I'm just accompanying him."

"Oh? Just that? I don't think so."

"Well, you're wrong," Yun Seung-Ah spat back.

"Well, you can leave now. Only the chosen can enter from here." Aileen placed her hand on the temple's wall.

"It's me, Aileen. I brought the kids, so let them in."

Beeeeep—

An out-of-place sound rang out and the gate opened. A blue road leading to the temple appeared underneath the marble roof and pillars.

"You two, follow me. The rest can wait outside or go back."

Ah Hae-In led the other Nine Stars candidates inside.

"We'll be back soon."

Kim Suho and Evandel said goodbye to Aileen and Yun Seung-Ah.

"Mn, see you later."

"Good luck with your evaluation."

Yun Seung-Ah and Aileen waved and sent them off.

Tap, tap... The gate closed after they stepped in. Yun Seung-Ah stared at the shut entrance with a tinge of regret.

"Oh right, wasn't there another candidate?" Yun Seung-Ah suddenly asked Aileen.

"Yep, but she's out on a campaign."

"Ah, right. Nayun said she'll be on the Tower of Miracle campaign."

"Mmm. Chae Nayun put in a lot of effort while a certain someone busily chased after a younger guy. She's doing fantastic thanks to that."

Unsurprisingly, Chae Nayun had been chosen as the fourth Nine Stars candidate.

Yun Seung-Ah thought about Chae Nayun, who should be fighting in the Tower of Miracle. She felt a mixture of bitterness, jealousy, and pride. After all, Creator's Sacred Grace had obtained the right to conquer the Tower of Miracle first.

"Unni, I'm surprised you're still working as the chairman. I thought you'd quit after a few days."

Yun Seung-Ah changed the subject.

"What? I knew I would do great from the beginning." Aileen furrowed her brows.

"Hey, come on. I thought you'd complain nonstop. Well, I guess you're doing well. Good luck."

Eudeuk— Aileen gritted her teeth. The loser would be the first to get angry.

"Good luck too, Seung-Ah. You'll be 2nd place for the next 1000 years. Ah, maybe that won't last long either. I heard the English Royal Court Guild is going up," Aileen snickered.

Yun Seung-Ah smiled, but smacked Aileen's shoulder.

"Ow, what did you do that for?"

"Hahaha, because it's funny. Such a good joke. Two thumbs up for you."

"..."

Aileen briefly stood silent before also laughing and pushing Yun Seung-Ah.

Pang!

"Hehehehe."

“Hahahaha, hahahaha. How funny.”

Yun Seung-Ah didn't stop laughing and pressed on Aileen's head. Aileen's smile instantly disappeared.

“Hey, you're going too far. I'm you're unni—”

“Hahaha, what do you mean? It's funny, isn't it?”

Aileen turned serious and tried to hit Yun Seung-Ah's hand away, but missed.

“Hey, you! Let go!”

“Hahahahaha.”

“Arggggh! Y-You!”

Aileen finally released her magic power after struggling in vain. Yun Seung-Ah defended with qi reinforcement.

“Unni, why are you suddenly using magic power?”

“You asked for it!”

“What? You're the one who provoked me first!”

Their childish bickering broke out in front of the solemn temple.

* * *

Meanwhile, Yoo Yeonha engrossed herself in research. Of course, it had to do with Kim Hajin. This research only took place in her head and could be considered a daydream.

She thought for a long time and finally opened her eyes.

“Baal's last resort... was to erase Kim Hajin's existence.”

She repeated these thoughts for several months and arrived at the same conclusion each time.

Chae Nayun reported that Kim Hajin's final attack dealt irrecoverable damage to Baal. It made sense that Baal would target Kim Hajin.

"Haaa..."

Yoo Yeonha couldn't help but sigh. Was it because she felt close to Kim Hajin or did another reason exist? For some reason, Yoo Yeonha couldn't get him off her mind.

A foolish man who always sacrificed himself until he lost everything. That was how she saw Kim Hajin. Her heart ached to see him laugh after all everything.

"..."

She felt frustrated and walked out to the balcony. She enjoyed standing here with a full view of Seoul below. A sense of admiration and awe filled her as she gazed at the city. Not from the landscape, but from all her accomplishments.

Some people said obtaining everything would leave one empty, but Yoo Yeonha disagreed. Only those who couldn't accomplish their goals said that.

Yoo Yeonha walked the straight road of ambition and arrived at the summit. However, she still felt full of spirits. She hoped to achieve even greater things in the future and far more difficult challenges awaited her.

"I'm going to overcome them all."

Yoo Yeonha muttered, but who did she say that to? Her father or Shin Jonghak, whom she used to like and gave up on? Maybe that person?

A voice suddenly resounded from her wrist.

— Vice leader, the regular report is here.

Jin Sechan contacted her with the scheduled report. Yoo Yeonha opened the file while leaning against the balcony's guardrail. The first matter was related to Shin Jonghak.

“Jonghak... is still in Africa.”

— Yes, he's planning a redevelopment mission with Orden.

Orden and Shin Jonghak. Yoo Yeonha didn't know how these two came to work together, but Orden left for Africa after forming a pact with the association. Shin Jonghak also traveled to Africa as part of his volunteer work.

“I'm sure Jonghak will be fine. We'll have to ask him about Orden's abilities later.”

— The next matter is regarding commerce with Crevon.

“Ah, this one is important.”

Yoo Yeonha established a trading post with Crevon that opened every month using the [Dimensional Entropy]. This huge event marked the next era for Essence of the Strait and Earth.

She discussed the matter with Jin Sechan until Seoul's scenery darkened.

“We'll discuss the rest during the next formal meeting.”

— Yes, understood.

Even so, they couldn't come to a conclusion. Yoo Yeonha hung up and the night sky surprised her.

“Time... flies.”

She suddenly got emotional.

The more time passed, the less she would have with others. Of course, she would never forget her precious people.

“Oh, right.”

Yoo Yeonha suddenly recalled and looked at her smartwatch. It still contained the long message she wrote to Kim Hajin. This message shocked her enough to awaken her memories every time. She became dumbfounded as to how she ever wrote it.

Yoo Yeonha shook her head and went back to staring at Seoul’s scenery.

After looking at the city and the Han River for some time, she realized she didn’t miss anyone in Seoul.

“Hmm... Sechan?”

Yoo Yeonha turned on her smartwatch again and messaged her secretary.

“Empty my schedule next week, same time.”

— Got it. For that place, correct?”

“Yes.”

She didn’t know why, but seeing those people melted her fatigue and recharged her. Not just him, but the others also motivated her to work more. They acted like a fatigue recovery potion.

“Huaa...”

Yoo Yeonha breathed out in satisfaction and sank into a rocking chair on the balcony.

Whish—

A refreshing breeze blew and brushed past the smile on her face.

Yoo Yeonha lightly fell asleep in this cool night air.

* * *

Africa's sun rose to the middle of the sky. Shin Jonghak and the other pioneers clothed themselves with magic items against the strong light. They could comfortably work thanks to these air-conditioned turbans and capes.

However, even the best equipment had its limits. A desert monster's extreme heat attack caused their redevelopment plans to temporarily pause. The pioneers returned to their oasis camp before the sun reached its apex.

"Are you tired?"

Orden approached Shin Jonghak, who led the pioneers.

"It's hot."

Shin Jonghak soaked his head in the oasis.

"For humans, yes."

Orden had left Russia and found a place for himself here. He already formed a secret pact with the association. They showed great interest and wariness towards him.

Shin Jonghak led the pioneers and founded a city in Africa. They drove away all the monsters in this oasis and recovered the monster city Orden founded in the past. It couldn't quite be called a city after being destroyed by African monsters.

"Things will get better soon. It'll still be hot, but this absurd heat should disappear once we recover the capital."

"You already think this land belongs to you?"

Shin Jonghak asked as he glanced at Orden, who shrugged like a real human being.

“I can’t help it. Many beastmen live in this place. Without me, Africa will be uninhabitable for the human race.”

Beastmen. The association renamed humanoid monsters into beastmen. Interestingly, the beastmen who survived originated from animals like cats, pigs, dogs, and cows.

Shin Jonghak buried his face in the water one last time before standing.

“You think humans can live in Africa?”

“That’s right. I plan on creating a country where humans and beastmen can live in harmony.”

“That’s a nice dream. Unfortunately, we live in a democratic world. Monarchy won’t be accepted in this day and age.”

“Recently, the people of England have been wanting to give the prime minister’s authority to the English Royal Family.”

Orden held great interest in world news. Shin Jonghak scratched his head since he didn’t know anything.

“A monarchy will not pose any problems if one can protect the citizens and make them happy. I want to make everyone happy, not just beastmen. I’ll stop any monsters who attempt to advance to Western Europe and the Middle East every year. That was part of my agreement with the association.”

“...”

Shin Jonghak didn’t have a clue about current affairs and politics, so he remained silent.

“I have one question. Where did that woman go?” Orden suddenly asked and had been curious about this.

“Woman? Ah, you mean Jin Sahyuk?”

“Yes, that was her name.”

The only woman Orden knew.

“Kim Suho said she returned to her home country,” Shin Jonghak smirked.

“I see.”

“Why do you ask? Do you have a crush on her?”

“I do not understand such feelings yet.” Orden faintly smiled and shook his head.

“I’m simply curious about what someone who believes herself to be a king is doing.”

“I see...”

Shin Jonghak also grew curious. From what Kim Suho said, Jin Sahyuk surprisingly came from another world and reincarnated on Earth. Apparently, she returned to her homeworld. No one knew whether she grew tired of Earth or just wanted to be a king again.

“I’m sure she’s doing fine as a king. She’s stro—”

Whoosh—

A beam of light shot up in the distant sky and cut off Shin Jonghak. He turned towards the Atlantic sky. The strange beams of light undulated like an aurora.

“Looks like they succeeded.” Orden voiced Shin Jonghak’s thoughts.

“The Tower of Miracle...” Shin Jonghak stood in a daze and muttered. He dusted off his cape.

“Where are you going?” Orden asked.

“Hyenas will flock to that place soon.”

Djinns always attacked after a successful tower campaign. They wanted to steal the reward in the best-case scenario. Even if they couldn't, they could kill some exhausted heroes. It shouldn't be any different this time.

“I'll protect them just in case.”

Shin Jonghak picked up his spear. They had set up a teleportation portal nearby and he should get there in 2 hours.

“W-Wait! Let me go too!”

A high-pitched voice rang out. Shin Jonghak turned around and saw their sole supporter, Yi Jiyeon.

“Let, let me go too! Take me with you!”

“You?” Shin Jonghak narrowed his eyes at her. Yi Jiyeon brightly smiled and nodded.

“Yes! A supporter has to follow the boss! It's been a while since I've been to Seoul... I want to go with you... Boss.”

Yi Jiyeon's face reddened as she muttered that last word. Shin Jonghak simply stared at her.

“I-If I can't, that's fine too...”

She couldn't meet his gaze and dropped her head. Shin Jonghak wasn't an idiot and knew the emotions behind her words.

“Do what you want.”

“Ah, really? Thank you!”

He coldly turned around and Yi Jiyeon chased after him as if he was the coolest person in the world.

“Hmm...”

Orden stared at them with interest and muttered with a smirk.

“What a complex emotion.”

He slowly followed Shin Jonghak and Yi Jiyeon. The pioneers had some free time, so going there shouldn't pose a problem.

“I'll go too.”

A conquered tower and interesting human emotions. Orden grew too curious to miss out.

“Do what you want.”

Shin Jonghak replied and Orden smiled at his apathetic tone.

— Krrrr.

Kurukuru slowly walked to Orden.

The loyal servant who followed any order appeared as Orden showed signs of leaving.

— Krrrr.

“Yes, Kurukuru.”

Orden, who once called himself the monster king, came to a realization.

Origin didn't mean anything when it came to life. The journey was more important than the destination, and the direction was more important than the origin.

“Follow me. We’re going on a short journey.”

Orden focused on one question, What kind of life should I lead? He no longer cared how he came to be. This caused a trivial, yet huge change in Orden’s heart.

Chapter 379

Epilogue (2), Their Story (Part 2)

Psss— Crumbled rocks fell on Chae Nayun's head like water droplets. They only tickled her cheeks and naturally woke her up.

“Uuu...”

She twisted from side to side before groaning.

“Uk... uueek!”

Chae Nayun felt sore all over. Even her internal organs ached. Thankfully, none of her injuries seemed lethal.

“Augh. Kuhuk.”

She coughed and held her side where the pain flared. Blood came out of her mouth along with some tiny debris.

“Fuuu...”

She relaxed her exhausted body and looked around. The expedition team had conquered most of the tower. There should've been only one stage left.

However, the floor suddenly collapsed as they passed through the final hurdle. Chae Nayun managed to push the others away, but...

“Sp.”

She failed to avoid it herself. Chae Nayun wiped the blood from her mouth and fixed her posture. Then she checked her smartwatch with countless messages from her comrades.

[Miss, are you okay?]

[We won the final battle, so please wait. We'll come rescue you right away.]

Chae Nayun almost responded, but put down her smartwatch.

“Haaa...”

She suddenly felt too tired. The tower, rewards, life, everything... She lost her motivation.

Chae Nayun felt eager and full of passion when she first entered the Tower of Miracle. She thought she could forget about complicated matters like Kim Hajin, Chae Joochul, and Chae Jinyoon.

However, she didn't feel a thing anymore. They would soon conquer the tower, but she didn't feel happy. She only felt empty, almost as if it would be better to just die.

Her shoulders slouched and she felt cold. Chae Nayun rummaged through her pockets, but couldn't find anything to chew or smoke. Her body began to heal on its own. She couldn't even die easily.

“Tsk...?”

She caught sight of something in the rubble as she clicked her tongue. It looked like a faint sparkle at first. Something bright within the mountain of rocks on the ground. It provoked a mild curiosity in her.

“What's that?”

Chae Nayun staggered up and slowly approached the light. The silver cluster grew clearer as she neared. It almost seemed to be calling for her.

Soon, she arrived at the source and looked inside the rubble with narrow eyes.

“What?”

A small rock buried within other grey rocks brightly shone. Chae Nayun reached in and picked it up without much thought. Then strange characters popped up in front of her.

[Miracle Stone] [Pinnacle Grade Miracle] ▷ One of the last rewards from the Tower of Miracle. — When used, the user will experience the pinnacle grade miracle known as regression. — The world before regressing and the world after regressing will remain separate and will not affect each other in any way.

“...!”

Chae Nayun stepped back in shock. Her trembling hands dropped the stone to the floor. Koong— It strangely reverberated, but the window in front of her didn’t disappear.

— When used, the user will experience the pinnacle grade miracle known as regression.

Regression. Chae Nayun blankly stared at this sentence and repeatedly rubbed her eyes. She thought something so absurd would disappear.

— When used, the user will experience the pinnacle grade miracle known as regression.

However, the message remained in the air. It shone even brighter and enticed her.

Gulp...

Chae Nayun swallowed hard, but shook her head. Even if this wasn’t a dream and the Tower of Miracle actually rewarded this, the tale of Shin Myungchul and the regression stone practically became a bedtime story by now. A miracle on the level of going back in time had side effects that couldn’t be undone so easily.

However...

Her body didn't listen to her brain. It would be problematic if this stone falls into someone else's hands... Chae Nayun justified it to herself and held the [Miracle Stone]. Its mystical power circulated on her palm and created a small gust of wind.

— When used, the user will experience the pinnacle grade miracle known as regression.

She tightened her grip around the stone and recalled a certain someone. Perhaps the [Miracle Stone] led her thoughts in that direction. She thought about her relationship with Kim Hajin, which became twisted from the very beginning. She hated him, yet loved him at the same time. Her love and hatred could never be undone.

However, a miracle to overturn her problem appeared.

Chae Nayun stared at the [Miracle Stone] in a daze.

“...”

She pondered if she had the right to choose a better ending. If she did, would that really be a better ending? Would she simply be running from reality?

“Pft...”

Chae Nayun didn't think for long. The answer seemed clear and she shook her head.

“After all you've been through...”

Honestly, this item was hard to pass up. However, it would bring disaster elsewhere without a doubt. As Chae Nayun stored the [Miracle Stone] away...

— Baal has already been annihilated and will not exist after the regression.

Chae Nayun froze and looked at the new message. Its bright light flowed into her eyes and whispered into her ears. This new message seemed to settle all her worries.

The problem between Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin hadn't been Chae Jinyoon's death. It hadn't been their meeting either. The devil known as Baal had caused everything. Without Baal, Chae Jinyoon wouldn't have died. Then Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin would have no reason to fight.

Wiiing—

The smartwatch she dropped vibrated.

“Euu!”

Startled, Chae Nayun looked back and forth between the [Miracle Stone] and the smartwatch. She felt her teammates close by. Koong— The tower's shell collapsed and transformed into magic power that shot into the sky. This signified a successful tower campaign.

Chae Nayun didn't have much time to make a decision. She looked at the [Miracle Stone] in her hands.

— Live a happy life.

Kim Hajin's voice suddenly echoed in her ears. Was it yesterday or the day before? He said those words with sincerity.

“...”

Chae Nayun stared at Kim Hajin's reflection in the [Miracle Stone]. She thought about the happiness this stone could bring her. A bright voice and a bright face appeared in her heart.

The [Miracle Stone]. Regression.

Perhaps this might be her only chance at a happy ending. It could also be seen as escaping.

This item brought out a dangerous temptation and she looked at it for a long time.

* * *

Bell opened his eyes when Chae Nayun discovered the [Miracle Stone]. He could sense the miracle assigned by Baal had been discovered.

“Looks like the regression stone has been found.”

Bell spoke to the existence inside him. However, no answer came as he waited. Only after a long time did something undulate within him and eke out a voice.

— I know.

Baal spoke and Bell faintly smiled. Currently, Baal had been reduced to an ordinary human’s soul. His true self had been annihilated and Bell simply absorbed a fragment of Baal’s consciousness.

Baal’s soul couldn’t be extinguished so easily. It could easily destroy a world like a bomb if it exploded. As such, Bell voluntarily took on the role of keeping Baal’s soul. To Baal, this served as the greatest punishment.

“Do you think that child will go back in time?”

A smile spread across Bell’s face. He asked out of pure curiosity. Baal seemed interested in the human known as Chae Nayun too.

— That would depend on her feelings towards that guy.

Baal simply replied.

It sounded as though he knew everything that would occur, yet seemed to be looking forward to the future.

“Mmm... Want to make a bet? I’ll bet 5 years that she won’t use it.”

Bell smiled and wagered.

— Then I'll bet that she does.

They used their lifespan as betting chips. Baal lost his body and authority, but could easily make one person immortal. He wanted to curse Bell, who dared to use him. Of course, Bell didn't want this and they began betting with 100 years at stake.

"Eii, there's no way she'll do it. Think about it. Shin Myungchul went back in time and allowed you to come to Earth. Chae Nayun is a good kid. She won't do it because of the dangers."

—...

Baal fell silent.

Soon, Bell felt a portion of demonic energy disappear from his chest and his face stiffened.

"Wait, that's cheating. What did you do?"

— Nothing.

"Nothing, my ass! Aha, you sent her a message, didn't you?"

A message that crossed dimensions. Baal created the regression stone, so he could easily message whoever possessed it.

"You did, didn't you?"

Baal calmly smiled as Bell shouted at him. The devil had employed a dubious method, but Bell hadn't seen him smile in a long time. He couldn't get angry and only furrowed his brows.

"Geez..."

— The bet still stands.

"Sure, my bet remains. Five years that she won't use it."

— I'll bet 10 that she does.

“Did you forget? Five years is the maximum.”

Bell smirked and leaned against the carriage.

“Your Highness, please prepare for the coronation.”

His servant's voice rang out from outside the carriage.

“Yes.”

Bell replied rather imposingly before looking at the mirror in the corner.

A face identical to his reflected in the mirror.

“What's your plan now?”

Bell looked at the mirror and asked Baal.

— If possible, I want to kill the bastard who became the new god. However, that's a distant dream in my current state.

“Can't you tell your friends? Leraje and Vassago are still fighting on Earth.”

— Those two have already been corrupted by Earth. They'll enjoy living as mortals to their hearts' content before returning to the transcendent realm.

“Strange devils, aren't they?”

— Strange? Most devils used to be angels at birth. They interacted and played with humans if they wanted.

Baal grumbled.

“Then why are you like this?”

— I was created to be defiant. Shouldn’t you know this too?

Kim Hajin made him like this. In a way, it seemed like a cruel fate.

“Touché...”

Bell shrugged.

“King Terhun’s coronation will now begin!”

A loud shout rang out when Bell felt slightly awkward.

Sssk—

The carriage opened from both sides. A royal road of the highest quality carpet spread out before him beyond the carriage’s red curtain. This path led to his throne. Hundreds of servants lined the sides and thousands of citizens looked up at him from below.

Bell slowly raised his head at his throne, which sat close to the sun above all others.

“Arunheim’s glorious ruler, King Terhun!”

A fierce shout resounded and Bell stepped out of the carriage. He walked up the stairs one by one.

“Oh, King!”

“Your Majesty Terhun!”

“Lord Savior who has overcome calamity and returned!”

Hundreds of thousands celebrated his coronation and their voices pierced the sky. As king, Bell kept their voices in mind. He wouldn’t betray them and make the same mistake again.

— Terhun, is that a new name? It's much better than Bell.

Baal muttered from inside his heart. Bell fixed his gaze on the throne and calmly murmured.

“Look forward to it. A mortal life is far more beautiful and fulfilling than you think.”

* * *

Everything had been destroyed in this world.

Jin Sahyuk stood on the barren black land and looked around. No signs of life could be seen. Grass became ash and scattered away. Demonic energy devoured the barely breathing earth. A reddish-brown hue dyed the trees and the sky had been stained purple.

“Tsk...”

Jin Sahyuk stared at this desolate landscape without a word. Three months had passed since she arrived. The home she knew had disappeared and not a fragment remained.

She recalled Earth as she stood on her broken home world. Lying on the grass and looking at the blue sky... Hovering in the clouds and looking at the ground... She denied it at the time, but the landscape she used to enjoy flashed before her eyes.

Kim Hajin or Kindspring. The man who carried all the mysteries of this world.

Jin Sahyuk closed her eyes and sighed.

Should I have seen him before I left? Should I have asked him for advice?

“Huuu...”

She shook her head and already resolved to live a lonely life. A king must not show weakness. A king must live and die with her country. If this world died, then she would happily die with it.

“It’s a lot worse than I thought.”

Shimurin’s voice rang out. Jin Sahyuk slightly raised her head and looked at Shimurin, who drove the surrounding demonic energy away with the flick of a hand.

“You can go back if it’s too hard. You’ve already been here for 3 months.”

Jin Sahyuk told her.

“Hmm?” Shimurin glanced at Jin Sahyuk as if she hadn’t expected to hear this. Then she grinned and shook her head.

“It’s fine. A difficult problem only makes me more stubborn.”

“Don’t regret it later.”

Jin Sahyuk clutched her cape, the [Cape of Alexander the Great] she received from Kim Hajin.

“So, what’s your plan? Aren’t we in Plerion’s territory like you wanted?” Shimurin asked.

“It’s simple.”

Akatrina had fully undergone the demon realm transformation. Obviously, Jin Sahyuk had to find people. The demon realm transformation only occurred on the surface from what she observed on Earth. If anyone survived, they should be living deep underground.

“I will find my citizens underground.”

Jin Sahyuk carried everything she brought from Earth and moved. She didn’t have a clear destination despite her confident declaration.

The intuition she always believed in also went quiet today. Could it be that even her intuition didn't trust her? Perhaps no one had survived?

"Haa... haa..."

Jin Sahyuk walked until demonic energy burned her lungs. She didn't use qi reinforcement or try to purify the demonic energy. Shimurin also possessed limited magic power.

She collapsed to her knees after 6 hours of walking.

Rustle— Rustle—

Something rubbed against the inside of her cape. Jin Sahyuk purified the demonic energy within her with qi circulation and dug inside her pocket.

However, she didn't feel anything.

She thought it might be the back pocket and rummaged through that one too. As expected, she found nothing again.

"Hmm?"

No, she felt something. It seemed to be a folded piece of paper.

Jin Sahyuk placed the paper on her palm.

What is this? Why is it here? She didn't know at first, but soon remembered.

She used this [Infinite Communication Letter] to communicate with Kim Hajin when they worked together. With this, she could message him.

"Hah."

Jin Sahyuk smiled at the letter. An unknown emotion welled up in her, but she resolved herself again.

[Can you see this?]

She wrote four words with her magic power.

“Ah, why am I doing something so useless...”

She immediately regretted it, but didn’t get the chance to lament.

“—!”

A screech rang out and the ground shook. Jin Sahyuk and Shimurin turned and saw a dinosaur-like monster. Its huge legs boasted terrifying muscles and it seemed as big as a castle. She had never seen such a huge monster on Earth. Jin Sahyuk set her bags down and released her magic power.

“What a tough world,” Shimurin muttered from beside her.

“That’s what makes it more exciting,” Jin Sahyuk replied as she stretched. The monster spotted them and prepared to charge.

“Let’s go.”

Jin Sahyuk formed hundreds of weapons with her magic power. Meanwhile, tiny words appeared on the [Infinite Communication Letter]. Jin Sahyuk couldn’t look because of the monster rushing towards them.

[I see it. Jin Sahyuk, right? What are you up to right...]

However, Jin Sahyuk could hear the soft sounds of words being scribbled. This proved that a connection to Earth remained.

“—!”

The monster charged while swinging its head. Jin Sahyuk had no fears. All her worries and troubles had been resolved. She even smiled in front of this monster splitting the earth.

She felt like she would find her people. She would find traces of fire or footsteps they left behind. Then she would rebuild Plerion with them.

Her hopes had been rekindled by the letter connected to Kim Hajin.

“—!”

Her magic power clashed with the monster. She temporarily expelled the surrounding demonic energy with Reality Manipulation and turned the sky blue. Jin Sahyuk shouted while standing arrogantly under the sky that regained its true color.

“I’VE RETURNED!”

Her voice sounded clearer and brighter than ever before.

PDF by: traitor/1ZEN

The Novel's Extra

WUXIA
WORLD

KW

The Novel's Extra

- 소설 속 엑스트라 -

- VOLUME 5 -

-AUTHOR-
Ji-gab-song

[Wuxiaworld]

Side Stories 1

Dream in a Dream (1)

The... enemy... do... can... no... think... that... wait... see... if... I...

An unintelligible mixture of sounds rang out. It resembled nails scratching a blackboard or a broken TV buzzing in the background.

Whatever the noise, it sounded quite disturbing and annoying. She didn't want to hear it any longer and squirmed with all her might, but it wouldn't stop ringing in her ears.

She had to open her eyes and wake up. It wasn't easy, but she managed to move her eyelids after focusing all her strength. Her eyelids twitched and she slowly opened her eyes. Silence finally descended like a miracle and a ray of sunlight shone on her. Rachel realized she had fallen asleep in a chair.

Now awake, she spotted a man sitting at the center of the vast empty room.

"I'll do it!"

He enthusiastically shouted while staring at her with his clear eyes.

Rachel looked at a document on the table in front of her and glanced sideways at the English Royal Court interviewers sitting in a row.

Dake, the guild's HR manager, spoke up.

"Alright, there's also a practical test if you pass the interview. Are you prepared for the practical test?"

Practical test? Rachel tilted her head and tried to recall. Practical test... What was that again? No, what am I doing here in the first place? I know an interview is going on, but... Oh, right! The recruitment for the English Royal Court guild. We were worried since we didn't have enough talents.

“Yes, I have honed a particular skill to become the English Royal Court's shield. Please allow me to demonstrate!” the man shouted enthusiastically.

Rachel read through the document that contained his information and background.

[James Finley]

Physique: 179 cm, 75 kg

Age: 22, Male

Nationality: British Commonwealth

Abilities: Defensive Wall, Mana Rampage

Role: Warrior

Curriculum Vitae: Graduated 27th in Batch 2029 of La Guild Lumière, 6 months of probation, 6 months of training at Penzberg, Germany.

Remarks: Guaranteed hero appointment once accepted.

He graduated 27th from the best French guild, La Guild Lumière. Rank 27 at Cube would've guaranteed a hero position anywhere. However, he had to volunteer for a year to improve his resume. Fortunately, he only had to spend a year because he placed 27th at La Guild Lumière. He would've had to become a mercenary instead if he placed lower than 50th in other guilds.

“Yes, thank you for your enthusiasm.”

James Finley became the English Royal Court's top candidate despite a lackluster resume. Others would surely ask why they hired a graduate from the Lumière guild, but that was the English Royal Court's current reality.

“Yes!”

Finley replied with a big smile before leaving the interview hall.

The hall became empty after the interviewees left. This majestic hall decorated with renaissance art felt like a shell of its past glory.

“Right, thanks for the hard work everyone. Vice Leader?”

Dake glanced at Rachel. She nodded and stood up. Only then did the other nine interviewers rise.

Rachel returned to her office to finish more tasks. The other interviewers walked down the corridor discussing the talents today.

— Quite a lot of heroes came to our recruitment.

— That seemed to be the case.

— Isn't this all thanks to Vice Leader Rachel?

“...”

Rachel booted up her computer as soon as she arrived at her office. Most guilds busily recruited at this time and dungeons also appeared all over England. The most important task had to do with the royal palace.

She felt lethargic like sinking into mud the more she worked. Around 103 individuals applied for the January recruitment, but barely 10 seemed immediately useful.

Most applicants simply wanted to become a hero. The English Royal Court could nurture them to become the future, but these applicants only considered the guild as a stepping stone to progress in their careers.

“Haaa...” Rachel sighed from her pent-up frustrations.

She poured her entire life and passion into this guild with no results to show for it. All her hard work felt futile. Were her goals unattainable from the start?

Rachel barely managed to stay afloat and not drown in this abyss.

She focused on some documents to distract herself from the pitiful reality. These documents all painted a grim future for the English Royal Court. However, these pieces of paper couldn't be compared to the shame they experienced in real life.

Rachel immersed herself in reviewing and approving the stack of documents. She finally took a break at four in the morning and checked online.

[HERO COMMUNITY]

Only academy graduates could access this secret information exchange site. It existed separate from the dark web and Violet Banquet. She spent at least 20-30 minutes every day browsing through posts for helpful tips and information.

Scroll... Scroll...

One post caught her eye as she scrolled down. She couldn't help but read through it.

[Forum: Different International Guilds]

[Is the English Royal Court guild still hopeless?]

— Radish Kimchi | 2030.12.30 | 22:49:36

[Has the English Royal Court guild made any developments? I think it's been 3 years since Rachel, Cube's rank 3 graduate, joined them. Are they still stuck in the gutter? I heard her rivals, Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun, are rising through the ranks at Essence of the Straits.]

[Comments]

[Yep! England is a mess right now and the guild is crashing along with it. It's only been 3 years since Rachel graduated, so she should still be a prospect. However, she's already become the vice leader. They must be short on staff to give her that position right away. Look at Essence of the Straits. Yoo Yeonha might be Yoo Jinwoong's daughter, but she started from the bottom and barely managed to become a team leader.]

[England, France, and Germany no longer stand shoulder-to-shoulder. France and Germany dominate England now. England is around the same level as Spain and Italy?]

[I think Switzerland is on the rise these days. They have quite the golden lineup with Sehit, Varga, Vals, Tilma, and Maritz. Also, I heard they have 3 potential prospects enrolled in Cube this year.]

[Oh, I completely forgot about Switzerland lol. They seem to have a bright future with those patriotic five. Anyway, England is a no-go.]

[I suggest joining them if you desperately need to become a hero. It won't be that difficult to jump ships later using the royal family's name lol.]

Tak!

Rachel roughly moved the mouse and closed the site. It didn't anger her since they dissed everyone in the Hero Community, including the site creator himself.

“...Suggest joining them if you desperately need to become a hero?”

Bam!

Rachel lightly slammed her fists on the desk. Those words annoyed her the more she thought about it. To be treated like a stepping stone felt too harsh since her other members could read this too.

“Radish Kimchi... Radish Kimchi...”

Rachel muttered as she accessed the community forum to search for previous posts by Radish Kimchi. She suspected another guild hired this part-timer to slander them.

However, Radish Kimchi turned out to be just another academy graduate diligently asking around for a guild to join.

“...”

Rachel silently closed the site.

Then she suddenly recalled her schedule tomorrow.

[Afternoon – Lesson With Master Shin Yeohwa]

“Ah...”

Rachel weakly gasped as she thought about her elemental class with Shin Yeohwa. Of course, Shin Yeohwa was the best elementalist in the world. Rachel endured the harsh teaching and considered it a tremendous opportunity.

However, a single lesson cost over 1.5 million pounds. It originally cost 500,000 pounds, but the figure ballooned over three times in two years.

[Thirty-six million pounds of taxpayer money is being used every year for Vice Leader Rachel’s private lessons.]

Rachel recalled reading such an article. The country spent thirty-six million pounds, or fifty billion won, for her as an elementalist. She pondered what that actually meant.

Of course, the prime minister told me my strength is England’s pride and urged me to continue. However, that’s not going to solve any of the guild’s problems if only I grow stronger. I also don’t want to suspect master’s qualifications, but it feels like there’s more chatting and punishing than the actual lesson these days...

The completely exhausted Rachel looked at her Cube graduation photo on her desk.

“I wonder what he’s doing.”

She often thought of someone from time to time despite her busy schedule. He made quite an impact, but disappeared like a mirage. He could only be found in the first year photo and not in their second or third year ones because he suddenly dropped out. His decision perplexed everyone since he quickly rose through the rankings and caught the attention of several guilds.

Kim Hajin...

The things she went through with him seemed like a fleeting dream.

Rachel stared at the framed photos while reminiscing about her Cube days. The three years she spent there consisted of fierce competition and burdening responsibilities. That precious time allowed her to fully devote herself to growing. She thought she had already grown up, but was still just a kid back then. Only now did she truly become an adult.

Then could she be experiencing growing pains right now?

Rachel sighed as she leaned in her chair. Moonlight shone through the window and a cold chill enveloped her body.

Three years had passed since she graduated from Cube. She still had many desires, but suppressed them. She couldn’t even manage her current tasks and her failures caused an avalanche of additional work.

Rachel felt exhausted. Her will to not give up, her unfortunate patriotism, and her responsibility as the princess tied her down. The young vice leader slowly shut her eyes as darkness covered her face. Her straight back and rigid neck began to relax. Only the sound of gentle breathing filled the office.

The English Royal Court’s youngest vice leader fell asleep in her office like usual.

Side Stories 2

Dream in a Dream (2)

An emergency occurred around two in the morning the next day.

A flock of Yupis appeared in Essex's airspace and golems charged from the mountains towards Dagenham. Eleven other provinces suffered from a monster invasion. Fortunately, the heroes stationed there could handle it.

Rachel ran out with Galatine as soon as the mobilization order arrived. She summoned her wind spirit, Windy, when she received the coordinates on her smartwatch.

Windy created an updraft and Rachel soared on it like an eagle. It took less than 3 minutes to arrive at Dagenham, London. However, the huge golems had already wreaked havoc and destroyed the houses and roads.

Dudududu!

The soldiers stationed at Dagenham fired their rifles with mana bullets, but the golems' innate recovery speed posed a problem. They couldn't inflict any damage unless they destroyed the golems' cores.

Rachel pulled out Galatine and infused the royal family's treasured sword with her spirits.

"Gra!"

The golems instantly turned to her after sensing mana. She kicked off the ground and charged at them. They swung their long arms, but she dodged all their attacks and easily overpowered them thanks to her agility.

Shwaaa!

Rachel stabbed the golem's heart with Galatine covered in a silver flame.

"Geu..."

The golem growled before crumbling into dust with its core destroyed. Rachel used the crumbling golem as a stepping stone to jump even higher.

She confirmed eight golems when she arrived. Seven more remained.

* * *

The golems' remains scattered all over the place. Piles of mud, sand, cement, and metal littered the ground. Rachel brushed off the dirt while standing on a battlefield that resembled a landfill.

"I greet the English Royal Court's vice leader!"

A soldier stationed in Dagenham saluted her.

Rachel nodded and asked, "What's the damage?"

The English Royal Court's guild members appeared after she spoke. She glanced at the heroes and told the soldier. "Report the specifics to them."

"Yes, ma'am!"

The soldier replied with another salute.

Rachel immediately left for Essex. It would take at least 10 minutes even if she ran with all her might. She expected it would take more than 30 minutes to subdue the flock of Yupis, so she hurried.

A strange report popped up on her smartwatch when she prepared to summon Wendy.

[Essex, the flock of Yupis has been neutralized.]

“...?”

Rachel tilted her head and called the officer in charge of Essex. She thought the report had been an error and continued running while waiting for the officer to respond.

“Is it true the flock of Yupis has been neutralized?” Rachel asked when the officer picked up.

— Ah, yes. We’ve neutralized all of them. There’s no need for you to come, Vice Leader.

Sievert spoke from the other end. He belonged to the Rayton guild that ruled over England’s southeastern region and his arrogant tone struck a nerve.

“How is it possible that you’ve neutralized a flock of Yupis in less than 10 minutes?” Rachel asked with obvious skepticism.

— Haha! You don’t have to worry about that.

Yupis could be considered at least medium-low rank, grade 3 flying monsters. These distant relatives of harpies resembled eagles larger than adult humans. They would be difficult to deal with because of their vicious temperament and the fact that they usually appeared in flocks of more than twelve. The Rayton guild lacked the competence to neutralize an entire flock in less than 10 minutes.

“Can I trust your words?”

— Ah, of course. We have fully neutralized them, Princess. You should trust us from time to time.

Rachel bit her lower lip in anger before retorting, “I’m quite certain I’ve asked you to address me more carefully.”

— Ah, right, right. I apologize. I got carried away. It’s been a long time since we took care of a situation before you. I’ll make sure to properly address you next time, vice leader of the English Royal Court!

“Just hurry up and send your reports...”

— Yes, yes. I’ll send it right away, Vice Leader!

Sievert sent her a video file. It showed a mountain of Yupis corpses piled on the ground. However, something seemed strange. Holes riddled their bodies and some sort of steam rose from the pile.

“...?”

Rachel squinted for a closer look, but couldn’t make sense of it.

Did someone compress their mana into bullets and rain it down on the Yupis? No, the Rayton guild doesn’t have anyone that talented. No one would waste their mana with such an inefficient method. Aiming for the Yupis’ hearts would’ve sufficed rather than drilling holes all over them.

Rachel subconsciously grumbled while inspecting the video.

“I wonder how much all of these will be...”

Yupis talons and feathers fetched a hefty price. A single Yupis corpse would easily net a whopping 300-400 million won. A well-preserved corpse, or one that possessed a horn and led the flock, would easily go for a jaw-dropping 1.5 billion won.

Most Yupis in the video had been so badly riddled with holes their hides would only serve as rags, but she continued inspecting until she finally found it. A large horn stuck out from a Yupis that seemed larger than the rest.

“...”

Rachel silently tapped the image.

Tap... Tap... Tap... Tap...

The horn's image enlarged and shrunk whenever she tapped it. Twelve corpses worth at least 200 million won surrounded the horn worth at least 1 billion won.

Sievert snickered in the video and gave two thumbs up while standing next to the mountain of corpses.

Rachel couldn't help but envy him since the golems she destroyed had no worth.

* * *

"I told you. That's not how you do it!"

Shin Yeohwa's high-pitched voice rang out and a sharp gust of wind grazed Rachel's hand.

Rachel flinched at the sudden pain, but endured without a sound.

"Why are you so stubborn? Will you continue to ignore what I taught you?"

Shin Yeohwa screamed while waving her hand all over the place. Her anger didn't quell as she berated Rachel.

"Are you looking down on me now that you're all grown up and sitting in a big chair? Ha! Are you?"

Rachel's movements hadn't been exactly what Shin Yeohwa taught her. She simply extended her hand and feet by a bit, but Shin Yeohwa raged like a beast at this slight adjustment.

"I'm sorry..." Rachel apologized as the back of her hand burned from Shin Yeohwa's spirit.

Shin Yeohwa gritted her teeth as if she still hadn't been satisfied with physically punishing her student.

“I accepted a nobody like you as my disciple, but you think you’re somebody now with your face plastered all over the media?”

“...”

Rachel dropped her head and didn’t utter a word. She knew well from experience that Shin Yeohwa would take whatever she said as an excuse.

“Tsk... Know your place. Hey, don’t you know? I’m so embarrassed to tell others you’re my disciple.”

Shin Yeohwa condescendingly spat while poking Rachel’s forehead.

Rachel immediately returned whenever Shin Yeohwa pushed her forehead. Shin Yeohwa would shove her head again whenever it bounced back.

“Come on. Why don’t you use your brain? You think I can go around telling people my disciple is the vice leader of a broke guild from a broke country? Why don’t you tell me?”

Rachel hung her head and bit her lower lips. Those words stabbed at her heart. A poor country and a poor guild. Shin Yeohwa knowingly struck at Rachel’s inferiority complex.

“Hey, I’m so embarrassed to meet my master. I can’t show my face because of my shitty disciple. Master Changwoon used to rub shoulders with the South Korean president. I’m also of the same prestige, but... Sigh... Why did the spirits have to choose you of all people? Ah... right... I hope you’re still not doing that shitty thing these days. Are you?”

Shin Yeohwa meant Rachel’s spirit sword. Rachel believed a spirit could harmoniously combine with swordsmanship. However, Shin Yeohwa stressed the purity of spirits and abhorred the idea of tainting it with swordsmanship. She made it clear to Rachel that such a blasphemous deed should never be committed. She never even allowed Rachel to try.

“Yes...” Rachel muttered.

“Tsk... I knew you still did that useless shit. I just can’t monitor you every second. Anyways, I dare you to try again. I’m going to expel you immediately. I’m sure you’re aware you won’t be able to set foot in Korea if I expel you, right?”

“...” Rachel continued to silently hang her head.

Shin Yeohwa glared for a while before sighing.

“Sigh... You’re quite the frustrating one. This is the end of our lesson for today. I don’t feel like teaching because of your attitude. Just make sure to do your assignment. No, it’s up to you whether you want to do it or not. I don’t care.”

Their lesson ended just like that as Shin Yeohwa turned around and left.

Rachel stood there without raising her head. She remained in the same spot for some time even after her teacher left. Her insides hurt and she felt something boiling deep in her guts. Rachel wiped her tears.

Pat... Pat... Pat...

Blood dripped from the wound on the back of her hand.

“Let me tend to your wound.”

An old butler appeared out of nowhere. He didn’t show any particular emotions as he applied a potion to the bandage and wrapped it around her right hand. She felt a stinging sensation as the potion seeped into her wound and healed it.

“There’s an emergency!” a staff rushed in and shouted.

“What’s the matter?” the old butler asked.

The staff handed a flyer to Rachel.

[The royal family of England. I still remember what happened 15 years ago. I hope you haven't forgotten my name...]

Lancaster sent them a message.

Side Stories 3

Dream in a Dream (3)

Lancaster's warning letter to England's royal family had been instantly leaked. Rachel had already informed everyone that whoever leaked the news would be severely punished. However, the guild members paid no heed to her words as they shared the news with outsiders.

Why did Lancaster obsess over the royal family? He used to place his country even higher than his family. Why did he do this now of all times? The general assembly would soon take place in Central Asia.

Whoosh! Whoosh!

Rachel swung her sword with all her might at the guild's training ground. Galatine vertically slashed through the air before suddenly twisting diagonally. Her movements looked refined and elegant. Her sweat sparkled under the light whenever she moved and nothing about her precise movements could be criticized.

Rachel trained while feeling distressed about Lancaster's warning. He openly threatened the royal family for the first time.

The guild executives suggested requesting help from the association, but Rachel refused. The royal family had to take care of their own business. They would end up as an international laughing stock if she sent a request asking, Please subdue the criminal targeting the Princess!

Rachel felt someone staring at her. She turned towards the training ground's entrance and spotted the old butler quietly watching her. She wiped the sweat off her forehead.

"It's only 3 weeks away, Princess."

The old butler warmly smiled.

He would turn 80 this year and only he could casually address her as Princess. He had served princesses even before Rachel and continued to serve the royal family.

“I am aware...” Rachel curtly replied.

Her emotions got the better of her because of her inferiority complex and the anxiety from everything going on.

The general assembly of guilds would occur at Central Asia's great hall. It would test their qualifications to enter the giant field there. They usually held these high-profile meetings in South Korea for safety measures. However, the entire agenda this time would discuss rights over the ownerless giant field. They chose to host it at the hall located at the giant field's entrance.

“Will you be fine with your security?” the old butler asked out of concern.

No portals connected England to Central Asia. Rachel would have to take a car or ride a horse from the closest countries, either India or China, to reach Central Asia. Traveling on land would be risky because of Lancaster.

“Yes, I have chosen trustworthy companions,” Rachel replied.

Most executives at the general assembly brought their own subordinates or hired mercenaries for protection. After all, heroes rarely worked as bodyguards. A hero's title couldn't be wasted on protecting a single figure. Most of them refused such work.

Mercenaries usually possessed the potential to become a hero, but slightly lacked the qualifications to become one. They could easily work as government agents and be deployed on battlefields. However, most of them preferred working as mercenaries to earn more than civil servants. They became the perfect candidates for guild executives to hire.

“Still, I can't help but worry since they're not experts at escorting. Protecting someone requires more than just force. Preventing an ambush is a hundred times better than winning a battle, but the inexperienced would struggle to do that.”

Of course, Rachel asked around for mercenaries. However, the royal family didn't have sufficient funds to hire them. The price of skilled mercenary groups increased by several times because of the conflict between the 199 guilds.

“It's alright. I believe in our guild members, so don't worry.”

Rachel tried to ease the old butler's worries.

A part of her said those words to quell her own anxiety.

* * *

The guild's HR manager, Dake, thought about hiring mercenaries to accompany Rachel. She declined to hire outsiders, but he believed she needed at least one mercenary as a pathfinder. Central Asia's terrain underwent drastic changes because of a mana explosion. It would be extremely difficult to navigate without a pathfinder, who could reduce the risk of ambushes by half.

[What do you think of this person?]

A message arrived while Dake thought about who to hire. It came from Fermin, one of the guild members tasked with accompanying the princess.

[The link is over here. Please have a look.]

Dake tapped on the link to a mercenary group's website.

[Xtra]

— Specializes in security, assassination, sniping, and pathfinding.

— We are not geographically limited when tasked with security or pathfinding.

— Our response may be delayed depending on the season.

He had never heard of this mercenary group before.

The fact that they only operated through Violet Banquet would be more than enough to incur Rachel's wrath. Not because of her beliefs or honor as a hero since she already compromised those a long time ago, but because a high probability existed that djinns lurked in expensive mercenary groups on Violet Banquet.

What if he hired a mercenary group with a djinn? To make matters worse, what if Rachel found out? The Vice Leader would severely punish him according to the knight's oath he swore to uphold when he joined the English Royal Court.

Dake immediately called Fermin.

— Yes, Team Leader.

“Hey, why the hell did you use Violet Banquet? Don't you know how the Vice Leader would react?”

— Huh? Ah, that's because there's no one left. Every skilled pathfinder has already been swept while we were hesitating.

“Still... Violet Banquet is not what we need. What if they turn out to be djinns?”

— Ah, hahaha! No, you don't have to worry about that. If you look closely, there's a clause under assassination and sniping that's limited to djinns and monsters. They don't kill people, only djinns and monsters.

“Hmm...”

Dake understood now after taking a closer look.

— So, why don't we give them a chance? This Xtra is quite cheap and they have a good rating even though they seem a bit lazy.

“Lazy?”

— Yes, they established their group in 2026, but have only carried out 20 requests so far.

“Wouldn’t they have already shut down if that’s the case?”

A medium-sized mercenary group usually carried out 300 requests a year, but this one only completed 20 in 5 years. These numbers suggested their business would soon die or already died.

— No way. They replied when I sent them a message.

“Hey, forget about their reply or whatnot. Why are you insisting on this mercenary group in the first place?”

— I told you already. Their ratings are quite good.

“Then tell me how good their ratings are...”

Dake grumbled in disbelief.

How could a mercenary group that only carried out an average of 4 requests per year have a good rating?

— Team Leader, this mercenary group completed 16 of their 20 requests in their first year. However... take a look at this. I’ll send you the link to their reviews. I think they’re quite amazing!

Fermin’s link redirected to the most common information dealer on Violet Banquet, [Al-Kharakah]. The message read, [Information Dr. Fmin purchased and forwarded to Rocallist. This message may be forwarded two more times for free.]

A total of 9 reviews came attached.

[ID – Reca]*

[Rating – ★★★★★]

The best when it comes to escort protection in dangerous areas. I was able to safely pass through Pandemonium thanks to them. They identified all dangers beforehand and instantly neutralized any threats that appeared. Hmm... I can't really describe it in words, but... I felt like being in the safest place ever while traveling through the most dangerous area in the world.

Also, this mercenary constantly watched over us from a distance without appearing even once.

I will never forget this experience. You are truly a guardian angel.

[ID – Witch]*

[Rating – ★★★★★]

This mercenary is quite peculiar. They never appeared and aren't interested in the employer's appearance either. One might think they're rude or arrogant since you're paying them, but I dare say anyone who hires them will be very satisfied. There's only one mercenary running this business, but they have gained the right to be called a mercenary group after doing the work of an army. Truly a one-person army!

[ID – Watermelon]*

[Rating – ★★★★★]

There aren't any other reviews or comments, but I'm certain they'll become famous soon.

Additional Review: Is this place no longer accepting requests? I wanted to hire them again since they did an awesome job last time, but they haven't replied. It's been 3 months...

The reviews seemed as amazing as Fermin said. Dake knew reviews from [Al-Kharakah] couldn't be faked since every written word cost money. [Al-Kharakah] employed a simple system that required people to pay points to read reviews and seriously vetted all reviews before putting them up. Not to mention, they immediately banned anyone from accessing their network if someone lied or stated false information.

“What the hell...”

Dake grumbled at his new dilemma since Al-Kharakah gave credibility to the reviews. This ended up confusing him even more.

“Don’t you think someone tampered with these?”

He still found it too good to be true.

— No way. What kind of madman would tamper with Al-Kharakah? They would’ve been banned immediately after getting caught.

“Rather than that, it says there’s only one mercenary?”

— Yes, I heard this mercenary carries out all the requests alone! Isn’t that amazing?

The mercenary in question sounded even more absurd. No, why did this mercenary even bother to register as a group if they worked alone? They could’ve just registered as a standalone mercenary.

“What about the costs?”

— It’ll cost us 300 million won to hire this mercenary as a pathfinder. It’s quite worrying with Lancaster, so I asked how much for 3 months of escorting and security!

“And?”

— They gave us a discount since we’re from the English Royal Court guild. It’ll be 100 million won per month until the general assembly ends! Also, they asked for a 100 million won bonus if the request is successfully completed! The grand total will be 700 million won!

Fermin’s baseless confidence and enthusiasm struck a nerve in Dake.

“Forget about that. You better be prepared to write an apology and reflect on your actions, punk.”

— Huh? No, no, no, Team Leader! Wait a seco—

Dake hung up the call and furrowed his brows. However, his expression slowly changed as he deeply pondered in his chair.

Impossible... This mercenary could be one of Lancaster's ploys... Hmm... no... if Lancaster did prepare this over the last 5 years then there's no way he's going to offer a discount since that'll be a dead giveaway... Actually... he would've used that time and effort to plant a spy in our guild rather than go through this. Not to mention, that Fermin is quite dependable when it comes to things like this.

This mercenary became more trustworthy as he thought about it. Dake used Violet Banquet for over a decade, but had never seen all positive reviews for a mercenary group. Of course, they only had 9 reviews, which still made him skeptical.

“They don’t show their face...”

Dake muttered that sentence repeatedly in his head. Rachel wouldn’t find out if the mercenary never appeared. The English Royal Court could also use the discount since they couldn’t afford 700 million won for their Vice Leader’s protection.

Dake sighed and called Fermin.

— Yes, Team Leader? I was waiting for you to call back.

“Shut up... Make sure no one else hears about this. Keep the request the same.”

— The same? Do you mean the escort and security?

“Yeah, ask him to be a pathfinder as well as a bodyguard. Lancaster already sent us a warning, so there’s no reason to sit around and wait. I’ll pay the advance out of my own pocket. Make sure the Vice Leader doesn’t hear anything about this.”

— No, it’s fine! I can pay half of it too!

“No, you need to save up if you want to get married. Who’s going to marry you if you’re broke on top of your personality? I’ll just claim it from the guild after the request is finished, so don’t worry.”

Side Stories 4

Dream in a Dream (4)

I, Kim Hajin, did not procrastinate or neglect my training. I had earned enough to last a lifetime, so I had a lot of free time now. I decided to train since I couldn't die of sickness and only djinns or monsters could kill me.

I continued to survive. Sometimes, I told myself to quit playing the hero if I had to go through this all over again.

“Seup... Hooo...”

I kept thinking while working out. I could no longer return to my world. It happened quite suddenly. I wouldn't be in such despair if I did something wrong or if someone interfered and caused me to remain here. However, I just woke up one day and found multiple notifications.

[The Tower of Miracle has manifested!]

[The Tower of Wish has been resolved!]

[Baal has disappeared and the world is now safe.]

[All episodes have been completed.]

[You can now stay in this world forever.]

[Congratulations!]

Congratulations my ass... I felt like the sky had fallen.

What did I do to make Baal disappear? I wanted to ask the system, but it no longer replied after that day. Fortunately, my gifts and status intervention remained. Nonetheless, I still felt devastated. I only kept my sanity all this time because of the hope to return home.

Ding!

A notification rang from my smartwatch.

[Rocalist has sent a request to Xtra]

[Distanced Escort to the General Assembly Hall]

— Client: Vice Leader of the English Royal Court, Rachel.

— Reward: 300 Million Won for Pathfinding (100 Million Won Advance Payment), 300 Million Won for Escort and Protection (100 Million Won per month), and a 100 Million Won Bonus Upon Successful Completion.

— Warning: The Vice Leader should not be aware of your presence.

[Please confirm the specifics with Rocalist.]

I received a request through Violet Banquet from none other than the English Royal Court guild.

“Hmm...”

It seemed one of their guild members wanted to hire me behind Rachel’s back. A Dr. Fmin contacted me last week through Violet Banquet and asked if I could escort their vice leader. However, I already lost interest in mercenary work 4 years ago. They did catch my interest when I heard Rachel’s name.

I’d been greatly indebted to her and she would always be a key figure in my story.

“Should I do it or not?”

I would have to protect Rachel from any threats and safely escort her to the general assembly hall. Then I would have to continue protecting her until the event ended. My reward for all this would be a measly 700 million won.

“Seven hundred million...”

I subconsciously scoffed while looking at the ground. Rows of state-of-the-art equipment with manatech that featured holograms and gravity control aided in my workout sessions. I called this place Kim Hajin’s Training Room and it looked even better than most gyms owned by guilds.

It took me around 3 billion won to set all this up. The 700 million won the English Royal Court offered seemed like chump change. The dumbbell with manatech I just used cost more than 600 million won.

The training room doors flung open and someone cheerfully called.

“Hajin!”

I turned off my smartwatch and turned around.

Evandel entered with her friends. I counted 13 of them. They all looked cheerful and innocently giggled together.

“Hey, look at this. We just met Terrain unni just now.”

Evandel excitedly ran over and showed me a picture of her standing between a man and a woman. Evandel’s face flushed red and she nervously squirmed.

“It looks like you had a lot of fun.” I smiled at her.

“Yeah! It was really fun!”

A VIP screening of Magic Girl Terrain, Evandel and her friends’ favorite movie series, just premiered on the 47th floor of this building. Evandel attended this private screening today with all her friends. The two main protagonists immediately agreed to come when I offered them a hefty sum for a meet-and-greet.

I spent a normal life with Evandel after dropping out of Cube.

“It’s not bedtime yet. Is there anything else you want to do?”

“Hmm... Whatever my friends want to do!”

“Oh, you’re such a good kid. Evandel’s friends, what do you all want to do? Do you want to go to the waterpark?”

“YESSS!” they enthusiastically replied.

I felt like working at a kindergarten.

“Alright then, Manager?”

“Yes, I understand.”

The man standing behind the kids like a shadow replied with a bright smile before leading them downstairs.

“Have fun!”

“Okay!”

I stood in the middle of the training room after sending them off with a smile.

Our building in the center of Seocho^[1] had 107 floors and stood out the most among all the skyscrapers in the area. The walls featured floor-to-ceiling glass with a 360 view of Seoul and the Han River.

All of this belonged to me, Kim Hajin.

“I certainly earned a lot of money...”

I solely dedicated myself to making money for the past 5 years and tried to fill my empty heart when I couldn’t return home anymore. I devoted myself like a madman to at least live comfortably in this world.

I made money quite easily since I already knew the future. Honestly, I only needed the single fact that Essence of the Strait would skyrocket. Couple that with something called leveraging and I began minting money with no end.

Of course, simply knowing the future might not have sufficed. Yoo Yeonha made the first move and sought me out. She didn't personally visit, but contacted me through my Truth Agency.

Most high-profile people knew about the Truth Agency these days.

[We Know Everything...]

This simple, yet powerful motto boosted us to the top of the industry. People requesting our services reached the billions. Even famous guild masters and conglomerate chairmen did their best to be humble and respectful when dealing with the Truth Agency.

— Hajin-chan.

A familiar voice rang out from my smartwatch. It came from the Truth Agency's co-founder, Kim Hoseop, the chubby guy who stood next to me during our military agent graduation.

"Ah, you called at just the right time. I have something to tell you," I immediately replied.

— Hmm? What is it nyang?

"I received a request from the English Royal Court."

— Oh, is that so nyang?

"It's related to their vice leader, Rachel. I plan to accept it, so investigate the surroundings and let me know if anything comes up."

— Alright!

I ended the call and headed to the basement where Evandel and her friends went when something reflected the moonlight and briefly blinded me. I blinked a few times and looked out the window to find a flock of gargoyles in midair.

“This is why I can never grow fond of this world,” I grumbled and sighed.

They hovered in front of the full moon and their skin shone like metal. They seemed to be looking for an opportunity to crash into the skyscraper.

Heroes would probably be deployed soon, but I wouldn’t wait since all the land and buildings around here belonged to me.

I took out the Desert Eagle and reinforced it with aether. Then I transformed it into a vicious sniper rifle. I opened the window and aimed at the gargoyles.

Click... Clack...

I immediately pulled the trigger. Six streaks of light shot out and flew in different directions before striking the gargoyles. They all died in midair after my bullets crushed their hearts.

I watched as their corpses fell and called the custodian.

“There are some gargoyle corpses outside. Please retrieve them.”

* * *

— The general assembly in Central Asia will finally begin in two weeks...

Rachel watched the news while waiting for the selection process to begin.

— La Guild Lumière from France, Panzerburg from Germany, Reisläufer from Switzerland, and Legiones from Italy have been selected to represent their respective countries...

The entire world focused on the general assembly these days. Lancaster chose to send his warning because of this. He knew better than anyone else that England didn't have a future if they failed to join the general assembly.

However, Rachel remained steadfast and didn't fear his threat. She would sacrifice herself if it meant resolving the animosity between Lancaster and England.

"Vice Leader, we will be starting soon."

Rachel turned off her smartwatch and looked up. They had renovated the training ground as a stage for the selection process.

"We'll keep the spectators back."

"Yes, go ahead."

The commoners began to enter. These people had purchased tickets to watch the English Royal Court's selection process. They sat in the spectator row away from the dirt ground protected by an invisible barrier.

The VIPs consisting of conglomerate chairmen, celebrities, and even the prime minister sat on a higher level as if watching an opera. Their fancy attires indeed made it seem like an opera.

The English Royal Court had an old tradition of opening the selection process to the public, so those applying could show their worth and garner support.

The host's voice rang out from the speakers on the roof.

— The English Royal Court's long-awaited selection test will begin in 15 minutes.

The first test allowed participants to freely demonstrate their abilities. Each of the 12 participants had 5 minutes to showcase their abilities.

— Please be aware that a variety of summoned creatures will appear during the test.

Rachel closed her eyes to communicate with her spirits. They confirmed that no threats lurked in the area.

Even Lancaster wouldn't be stupid enough to attack this place at the center of their territory.

Tak... Tak... Tak...

The lights suddenly turned off and darkness descended in the hall.

The crowd noisily murmured, but died down when a spotlight shone on center stage.

A man wearing a formal suit stood there and signaled the start of the selection test.

— LADIES AND GENTLEMEN...

He shouted at the top of his lungs.

— You may find the list of knights participating on the pamphlet distributed earlier.

Rachel took a look at the pamphlet as well.

“Finley will be up first. Maybe we should've changed the order a bit.”

Dake whispered since Finley seemed better suited as the finale. Rachel didn't seem to care.

“Vice Leader, please don't worry. After all, we're in our territory right now. Our guild members are working hard alongside security to prevent anything from happening. We have fully vetted everyone here. Not to mention, I also prepared... Ehem... Ehem... Ah, look. Finley is coming out.”

Dake faked a cough when he almost exposed everything. Thankfully,

Rachel didn't seem interested in what he said.

— Now, the first participant you've all been waiting for! The knight who calls himself the royal family's shield, the brave lionheart, James Finley!

The doors opened and James Finley from Lumière walked out. His handsome looks sent the crowd into a frenzy.

Finley saluted the judges before taking a few steps back and infusing mana into his hands. The large concentration of mana turned into a gigantic shield.

“Ohhhh!”

The crowd seemed very impressed.

Clack!

A large steel cage opened from the other end and 12 giant wolves appeared from the summoning device. Finley stood firm and waited for them to make the first move.

— Grrr! Grr!

The wolves kicked off the ground and attacked. Finley faced them head-on. A pack of wolves against one human, but the flow of battle showed who had the upper hand.

The giant wolves couldn't break through Finley's shield. The ones he bashed with his shield whimpered in pain and retreated. Finley didn't give them any time to regroup and slammed his shield on their heads. The crowd roared at his wild and brave display.

Boom... Boom...

The ground shook after he subdued all the giant wolves.

Boom... Boom...

The crowd held their breaths.

Boom... Boom!

Finley looked up in an exaggerated manner like the protagonist of a movie.

A rank 3 giant tiger had been summoned this time and caused the ground to shake. It prowled around while observing Finley.

“Seup...”

Finley gritted his teeth and lowered his stance.

The crowd noisily murmured and thought he had given up. However, Finley proved them wrong by releasing all his mana.

“Keuh!”

He groaned as the amount of mana continued to increase. It enveloped his entire body and turned into an aura. Even Rachel, who busily looked around for potential threats, noticed his powerful aura and acknowledged his potential.

“Oh, so he can do something like that.”

“I was a bit worried when he asked for a giant tiger. Who knew he had such a skill under his sleeves?”

Finley shot forward like a bullet while everyone admired him. Then a ray of light suddenly flashed and disappeared. Everyone saw it, but no one could identify it.

However, the mystery would soon be resolved.

“Huh?”

An old man in the crowd broke the silence first. His vision had deteriorated because of old age and he didn't notice the ray of light.

Only he had kept his eyes on Finley the entire time and fully witnessed Finley's lifeless body twisting in the air like a ragdoll.

Shhheu...

A faint black smoke rose from Finley's forehead. His body remained motionless on the ground and his eyes lost focus.

Everyone finally realized what happened. An assassination. The rowdy crowd just a minute ago turned dead silent.

The eerie silence continued before people began screaming when they saw blood flowing from James Finley's forehead.

— Kyaaaah!

— What? What's going on? What is that?

— Dead! He died! He died!

— A djinn! It's a djinn!

Chaos ensued as those running for the exit shoved others blankly standing around. People trying to escape pushed the staff trying to restore order. A stampede broke out and some got trampled over. Screams and crying filled the area.

Rachel froze in her seat as the surroundings descended into utter chaos. She couldn't hear anything in her daze.

Reality seemed to slip through her fingers and grew further away. Only the lifeless body on the stage entered her vision. That enthusiastic and talented young man had been so eager to become a hero.

"Princess! Hurry up and evacuate the Princess!" Dake shouted.

However, Rachel shoved him back and ferociously ran forward with Windy flying behind her.

Kwawooooosh!

The spirit released a fierce wind that seemed to reflect Rachel's anger.

1. Seocho is one of the posh areas within Gangnam. 📍

Side Stories 5

Dream in a Dream (5)

Three hours ago...

[Mission Acceptance – Xtra has accepted Rocalist's request.]

I went to the basement before setting off on my mission. Only I could access the basement's lowest level filled with rows of ammunition boxes larger than refrigerators.

The warm, blue luster of mana escaped as I opened one of the boxes.

I called this bullet the 308-X. I modeled it after the 308 Winchester to be more destructive and easier to carry. I acquired a factory just to manufacture these. They contained a much higher concentration of mana than the ones on the market.

I closed the ammunition box and pressed a button. The gigantic box creaked like a machine before compressing into the size of a briefcase.

This function, which defied the laws of physics, could only be possible thanks to [Settings Intervention].

I carried the ammunition briefcase to the basement's middle floor with rows of SUVs and motorbikes lined up in a wide hall.

“Hmm...”

I briefly pondered which vehicle to choose.

A motorbike, SUV, helicopter, or horse?

I ended up choosing an SUV sturdier than an armored vehicle. Its wheels had been enchanted with numerous magic like silent magic and it could be considered a mobile weapon more than a vehicle. I infused mana into the SUV and it creaked before compressing just like the ammunition box.

I finished preparing with the two briefcases in hand and suddenly received a message.

— Hajin-chan.

It came from Kim Hoseop.

“What?”

— You asked me to check for any potential threats against the English Royal Court, right?

“Yeah, especially the ones targeting Rachel.”

— Ah, then I’m all done.

He always finished his work quite quickly. I designed his character without much thought, but he turned out to be a key figure in information gathering and helped me a ton.

“Okay, thanks. Send me the file and get some rest.”

— Okay, nyang.

Kim Hoseop sent the files to my server. I couldn’t help but exclaim in awe when I glanced over them. Its accuracy was one thing, but he organized it perfectly and made it easy for readers to find what they needed.

“Lancaster?”

As expected, that name caught my eye first. Rumors had it that Lancaster sent a warning to the English Royal Court. He seemed to be the only visible threat. So many others lurked under the surface and couldn’t be counted. Other factors that threatened the English Royal Court included their dire financial situation, dwindling coffers, mountains of debts, hostile relations with Korean guilds, pressure from Germany and France, etc.

“Hmm... Tsk...”

I couldn't help but click my tongue after going through the files.

Rachel should've awakened after receiving help from Kim Suho. Then she should've revived the English Royal Court to its former glory and progressed it even further. However, everything became a mess now.

Did I cause this or did this damn world change things by itself? Regardless, I had to set things right.

I focused on everything related to Lancaster and quickly finished thanks to Kim Hoseop's wonderful highlights.

“The English Royal Court's selection exam?”

— Yes! I feel like something will happen there, nyang.

I closely examined every piece of information related to the selection exam: its location, attendees, judges, and even the number of spectators. Only one name stuck out in the end.

[James Finley]

This person seemed like the biggest threat at the moment.

James Finley made contact with a person presumed to be Lancaster. He also purchased a mana bomb last week from the black market. These bastards weaved a complicated web that would've been impossible to spot if not for Kim Hoseop's gift.

“When will the second selection take place?”

— It's today, nyang. It'll start in 2 hours.

“What? Why are you only telling me this now?”

I immediately got up and prepared to leave.

— I only found out after finally hacking their system! It was quite difficult to hack, nyang!

“Really? Alright then, I’ll get moving now.”

I accepted the request from Rocalist last night, but didn’t expect to work so soon.

— What’s the plan?

“Kill.”

I would’ve came up with various plans if I had the time. However, the best method now would simply be an assassination.

“Can you put me at the front of the portal queue?”

— Alright, leave it to me. Have a safe trip, nyang.

* * *

James Finley had been killed.

They immediately halted the selection exam and searched for the perpetrator. However, the English Royal Court and the other investigators couldn’t find the assassin. It seemed as if the assassin disappeared into thin air. Not even a trace could be found.

Rachel returned to where the selection took place and analyzed the situation from the beginning. A flash of light appeared before silently piercing Finley’s forehead. That single attack had been extremely accurate and fatal.

“It couldn’t have come from far. There’s a high chance it came from inside since the alarms would’ve gone off if someone’s mana entered from outside. I think there's a high chance the assassin disguised themselves as security."

Rachel seriously muttered as she analyzed the situation.

"They could've easily hidden among the panicked crowd and escaped. Also... Haaa..."

She had a hard time breathing and her body felt hot. It burned from the rage boiling inside her.

Someone had been assassinated right in front of her under her watch. She felt certain Lancaster had done this to send another warning. To think he would sacrifice an innocent young man just to threaten her.

Rachel found it difficult to calm her beating heart. She tried, but couldn't suppress her rage.

Dake berated the heroes as Rachel deeply contemplated.

"Hey, you bastards! What happened? Did you even do your jobs?"

"I checked everything to the point that I thought I was being paranoid. Nothing seemed out of the ordinary."

"I swear on my life to the Queen that I sustained the barrier. I'm certain I would've felt something if anybody used their mana within a 1 km radius, but I didn't feel an ounce of mana anywhere."

"Ye... Yes... that's correct. There's no way we slacked off when all of us are aware of Lancaster's warning."

"Ugh... You useless morons!"

Dake scratched his head in frustration.

He felt like his head would split open right now. Did it make sense that one of the participant's brains splattered all over the ground in the presence of 30 high rank guild members and Vice Leader Rachel?

— Can you hear me?

A voice spoke directly into his ears.

Dake flinched and immediately checked his smartwatch. The voice belonged to the mercenary he recently hired, Xtra.

“What the? Ah...”

Dake briefly muttered before thinking of a brilliant idea.

The protection request immediately activated when they both signed the request. This mercenary could’ve seen the entire thing. No, even if he didn’t, Dake thought this could be an excuse to haggle the price.

“Are you around here somewhere?”

— Yes, I can see you right now.

“Ah, that’s a relief. Then you must’ve seen what just happened...”

— I killed him.

“What?”

Dake couldn’t even doubt his ears as his mind went blank. He could only tilt his head like a confused child.

Was it because they spoke in Korean? He found it difficult to understand the mercenary’s words just now.

Dake tried to remain calm and translated, I killed him, into English word for word.

— James Finley. I killed him.

“...”

A chill went down Dake's spine before his entire body shivered. He gulped and glanced sideways at Rachel, who busily investigated with the other officials.

Dake whispered to Xtra.

"You... What did you just say? What do you mean you killed him?"

— James Finley had been brainwashed by Lancaster. I discovered that Lancaster planted him into your selection exam. I'll send you the files, so please have a look.

"What? Hey!"

Dake shouted a bit too loud and Rachel turned towards him.

"Now that I think about it, Vice Leader's theory is quite convincing."

One of the investigators spoke, "Ah, is that so? Then..."

Rachel shifted her attention back to the investigator.

— I sent you the file.

"What?"

A bunch of files had been sent to Dake's smartwatch while he still felt dumbfounded about everything.

Dake glanced at Rachel before opening the files.

[Secret discussion between James Finley and Lancaster – Hacked Version (Confidential)]

[James Finley's Whereabouts.]

[James Finley's Activities.]

[Mysterious man and James Finley caught on surveillance camera...]

These files contained all of James Finley's activities for the past 6 months.

Dake stared at the files before clicking on the surveillance camera footage. James Finley appeared at a secluded place in London. The video seemed to have been taken 3 weeks ago. He spoke with someone and the other person passed him something before leaving. The next clip showed a hooded figure walking past the surveillance camera.

— James Finley is suspected to have received a mana bomb.

“...”

Dake tapped on the file titled, [Secret discussion between James Finley and Lancaster – Hacked Version (Confidential)].

It could only be viewed and not downloaded.

[I'm ready to follow that person's will...]

[I'll offer up my life and turn that entire place into a sea of fire.]

[Yes, it's a great honor to be selected for this mission.]

[Thank you, my lord. I shall punish the corrupt royal family.]

The other party's messages seemed to have been erased or omitted, but Finley's messages alone served as enough proof.

“What the...”

Dake couldn't help but wonder how this mercenary collected so much information in less than a day. Also, how did he hack into Lancaster's secret communication channel? Was that even possible?

“Hey, listen... Couldn't all this just be fabricated?”

Obviously, Dake would ask this.

— You're free to believe what you want.

“What did you just say?”

— I don't care whether you believe me or not. I'll continue my duties with my own methods.

Dake couldn't utter a word, but felt strangely convinced.

Xtra overpowered every hero and mercenary here and assassinated James Finley in the most unimaginable way. He could've assassinated Rachel if he worked for Lancaster.

— It's up to you how you make use of this information.

Dake looked around before relocating to the corner of the hall and whispering.

“This is all too sudden. You should've given us a heads up before firing...”

— The portal to England had a slight problem. I was in a rush since I arrived late.

“No, I mean a heads up. You know, like a hint? Like what you're doing right now. You could've called while waiting for the portal...”

— Then would you have allowed me to assassinate Finley? This entire place would've been blown up if I was 3 seconds late.

Dake looked at the ceiling before nodding. He knew Xtra would be correct if James Finley indeed possessed a mana bomb.

— Anyways, take a look at the file I labeled as confidential.

[Secret discussion between James Finley and Lancaster – Hacked Version (Confidential)]

“Yes, I’m looking at it.”

— Don’t show that to anyone else for the time being.

“Huh? This file is the only way we can prove Finley worked for Lancaster...”

— The communication channel we’re using right now can’t be hacked, but everything will be leaked to Lancaster once you send that file to anyone else. They’ll find out that someone hacked their communication lines. Then they’ll abandon this one and set up a new channel, which will make my effort of hacking them meaningless.

“Ah, yes... I understand.”

It seemed like Xtra didn’t want to show his cards until he could end everything once and for all.

— Please keep my identity a secret as well. I don’t like drawing attention.

“Of course, I’ll do my best to keep your identity hidden.”

Dake glanced sideways at James Finley’s corpse. The investigator and Rachel spoke far away to avoid tampering with the crime scene.

— First, go and check Finley’s body. There should be a mana bomb somewhere on him.

“Ehem... ehem... Where is it?”

Dake loitered around as if trying to find something on the ground while gradually approaching the corpse.

— Be careful. The other minions that helped him will certainly be around.

Dake’s heart began to beat faster.

“...!”

As Xtra said, an unidentified object had been attached to James Finley's plate armor.

Dake tried to take off the plate armor.

“Excuse me! We're here to collect the corpse!”

Dake looked at the MI6 agents that suddenly appeared.

“Give me a minute. There's something I want to check...?”

The object attached to Finley's plate armor suddenly disappeared when Dake looked back.

“What the hell?”

“Please move.”

One of the MI6 agents said as he pushed Dake.

Rachel, still speaking to the investigator, looked towards Dake.

“Is there something wrong over there?”

“Huh? Ah, Vice Leader... No... that's...”

“Huh?”

“...”

Dake looked at the heroes around him, the MI6 agents collecting the corpse, and Rachel slowly approaching them.

Side Stories 6

Dream in a Dream (6)

James Finley's assassination spread like wildfire and made the headlines at every news agency across the globe within 3 minutes. Dake wanted nothing more than to prove that Lancaster masterminded this incident.

However, things took a strange turn the following morning. The mainstream media began spouting conspiracy theories because of all the unanswered questions surrounding James Finley's death. To make matters worse, a bombshell report dropped before the English Royal Court could release an official statement.

[A strange twist of events and a bodyguard gone rogue. Did the English Royal Court hire the mercenary who killed James Finley?]

[The newbie mercenary hired by the English Royal Court has only completed 20 missions in 5 years.]

The fact that Dake hired a mercenary from Violet Banquet already leaked. It didn't end there as the press even discovered the mercenary's identity as Xtra. Dake suspected Fermin had leaked it, but Fermin adamantly pleaded innocent.

A scary thought surfaced in Dake's head. What if Lancaster kept an eye on all the English Royal Court's offices and recorded their conversations? That might explain how the information got leaked to the press.

* * *

[English Royal Court – Vice Leader's Office]

“Why didn't you report this to me!” Rachel angrily screamed.

They hardly witnessed the vice leader's wrath once a year.

"I'm sorry. I was just worried before the general assembly," Dake replied while lowering his gaze. He had no choice but to confess everything since everyone already knew about Xtra assassinating James Finley.

"I don't need your excuses. Hand it over now."

Rachel demanded while extending her hand.

"That's..." Dake hesitated.

"Now!"

She commanded again while flapping her hand. Rachel motioned for him to hurry and Dake had no choice but to give her his smartwatch.

"Is Xtra in here?" she asked.

"Yes... in the personal contacts..." Dake muttered.

She pressed a few buttons and made the call. The line rang a few times before it connected. Then she placed the smartwatch next to her ear and asked.

"Are you Xtra?"

However, no response came back and Rachel grimaced.

"Answer me. I am the vice leader of the English Royal Court guild."

Still, no response came from the other end.

She squinted and glared at the smartwatch as if lasers would shoot out of her eyes.

"It's no use even if you stay silent."

She looked at Dake and briefly hesitated before continuing.

“Don’t test my patience.”

Her tone grew stern, but the person on the other end didn’t react. That person even dared to scoff.

A hint of anger flashed on her face.

“Tell me.”

“...”

“Who are you?”

“Uhm...” Dake tried to interject, but Rachel ignored him.

“Speak.”

“Vice Leader...” Dake interrupted her again.

“Will you continue to...”

Rachel turned to Dake in the middle of her words. “What is it?”

She acted quite cold, so Dake carefully replied to avoid worsening her mood.

“I suggest you put on the watch first or switch to speaker mode so you can hear the other person...”

“...”

Only then did Rachel realize her mistake.

She cleared her throat and muttered in slight embarrassment.

“I’m not used to these kinds of things. Can you hear me now?”

— I heard you since a while ago. You were the one who couldn't hear me.

She finally received a response. The voice sounded deep and husky as she expected.

“Tell me the truth. Did you...”

Rachel spoke when the person on the other end interrupted her.

— I don't talk to anyone other than the person who hired me.

“Really... What?”

The sudden interjection surprised her.

— I'm hanging up.

“Huh?”

Beep!

The call ended just like that.

Rachel stood there flabbergasted and blinked a few times at Dake. The entire conversation had been so ridiculous she couldn't even get mad.

“That's... Vice Leader, I suggest you look at the files first. That mercenary sent me some files that proved James Finley worked for Lancaster,” Dake informed her.

“File...” Rachel muttered and finally snapped out of it.

Dake showed her the files he received from Xtra. However, he didn't include the key evidence labeled, [Secret discussion between James Finley and Lancaster – Hacked Version (Confidential)].

That specific file remained under Xtra's authority and couldn't be viewed without his permission since Lancaster would abandon the communication channel at any signs of hacking.

Dake trusted Rachel, but he didn't trust their location right now. Lancaster's eyes and ears could be anywhere.

"Is this all the evidence?" Rachel asked after going through the files. It seemed she regained her usual composure.

"Yes."

"Does the mercenary consider this as evidence?"

No, she hadn't regained her composure and sounded cold as ever.

Dake understood since James Finley's suspicious behavior couldn't prove or disprove his crimes.

"Back alley, black market, brothel, unregistered dungeon, and... club?"

Rachel spoke in an emotionless voice and sighed.

"James Finley could've hired a prostitute or done drugs in back alleys. He could've smuggled things and illegally hunted at unregistered dungeons. He could've danced and drank at a club..."

A hero didn't have to live an honorable life. They could live however they wanted.

"These acts might not suit a hero, but they don't disqualify him from becoming one. Nobody has the right to take his life over this..."

James Finley should've been criticized for his actions if this turned out to be true. He should've been punished if he committed a crime. However, he shouldn't have been killed no matter the circumstances.

"You are 100% correct. No, 1000%... but Vice Leader... This evidence might only be circumstantial and nowhere near enough, but James Finley had something suspicious on him. I saw it with my own two eyes.”

Dake told her, but Rachel’s expression remained cold as ever. She shook her head and sadly looked at him.

“Let’s cancel our agreement with that mercenary.”

* * *

[James Finley was a terrorist?]

[James Finley’s suspicious activities have come to light...]

[The Speaker of the House, Ranger Blair: “Evidence that James Finley was a terrorist is only circumstantial and does not hold weight. The English Royal Court should stop stirring trouble and just come clean and apologize for what their mercenary did. They should admit the mercenary used excessive force and took an innocent hero’s life.”]

[Who is the mercenary Xtra that killed James Finley?]

[Xtra, the mercenary that only operates on Violet Banquet.]

[England’s government has given the order to find Xtra.]

I lay on the couch in my penthouse while comparing the headlines. Opinions on the news shifted every hour and a heated discussion followed every time.

It started with, [Lancaster Assassinated James Finley]. Next was, [The English Royal Court’s Hired Mercenary Has Killed An Innocent Hero]. Then it became, [James Finley Was A Terrorist Recruited By Lancaster]. The third story circled a few times before changing into, [Insufficient Evidence That James Finley Was A Terrorist. The Mercenary Xtra And His Employer, The English Royal Court, Should Issue...].

“I guess it’s all the same no matter which world. As long as people exist...” I muttered with a sigh.

The English media's opinion heavily leaned towards the theory that the English Royal Court mistakenly caused James Finley's death. Xtra took most of the heat because of that. Additional reports found nothing on James Finley's body after his death. Obviously, Lancaster manipulated this from behind the scenes.

It seemed Lancaster set his roots quite deeply in England when I stopped paying attention.

[Mercenary agreement has been terminated.]

I received a message 30 minutes later informing me that Rachel terminated our contract. Then I received another one 10 minutes later from Dake. He wrote as politely and respectfully as possible.

[I tried to convince her, but failed. I apologize. Our Vice Leader is quite stubborn, so I couldn't do anything. Still, I would like you to continue our request. As you said last time, I'm your employer and not our Vice Leader. Please continue with the request. I'm willing to double what we agreed on.]

Things seemed quite hectic in England right now.

"Should I just tell Rachel that I killed him?"

— I don't advise that, nyang!

Kim Hoseop immediately replied.

"Why?"

— Ton of spies and spyware are planted all over Rachel! You'll instantly be found out if you appear in front of her! Hajin-chan, will you be able to stop Lancaster alone? I heard some rumors that he's as strong as the Nine Evils now.

"It's difficult but... What? Nine Evils?"

I couldn't understand what I just heard. I sat and stood a few times before asking again.

“How is Lancaster on par with the Nine Evils?”

I never designed him to be on par with them. I designed him as a parasite that leeches off the Nine Evils and couldn't do anything without their help.

— I looked into it and he's been amassing his forces in Pandemonium for the past 3 years. That's how he planted a ridiculous number of spies in different countries, nyang. I also heard he's brainwashed a shocking amount of people. I think James Finley was one of them, nyang!

“What nonsense is that...”

Honestly, Lancaster didn't even deserve to be on the same level. The only remaining threats would be the Nine Evils since Baal's existence had been completely erased from this world. I also didn't know monster king Orden's current whereabouts.

I couldn't believe Lancaster became a threat.

“What the hell is going on?”

[The Tower of Miracle's fragment has begun to resonate!]

[You have attained a realization!]

[Tower of Wish's Bonus – You have received a special inheritance!]

[You have inherited one item stored in the player's storage!]

Inherited Item ► [Black Lotus Bow]

[You have inherited one trait stored in the player's storage!]

Inherited Trait ► [Young Dwarf's Dexterity]

[You have inherited one skill stored in the player's storage!]

I received several system alerts for the first time in 4 years, but I didn't have the chance to look them over.

"Euuuk!"

Something the size of my torso fell from above and crushed me. It turned out to be a large, black bow with a lotus symbol engraved on it.

"What the hell is this?" I muttered while touching the bow in a daze.

A question soon popped up in my head. I didn't question what I just inherited, but rather...

"Why now of all times?"

Why did this damn system that went silent for 4 years suddenly decide to work again?

I couldn't make sense of it, but I must've done something to trigger the storyline again. I thought about what I could've done to cause this and only one word popped up after I racked my brains.

"Lancaster..."

It seemed obvious now that I thought about it. The only major thing I recently did was assassinate James Finley. I must've accidentally intruded on Lancaster and Rachel's storyline.

Wiiing!

The living room doors slid open.

"Eugh!"

I immediately rolled up and hid behind the sofa. Then I peeked out to assess the situation.

“Yawn...”

Evandel came in while rubbing her eyes. Her bodyguard, Hayang, haughtily walked behind her.

Evandel glanced at me hiding behind the sofa. She didn't react in any particular way and went to the refrigerator for a glass of water before returning to her room.

“Cough... Cough...”

I stared at Evandel's back for quite a while.

Damn it...

This felt so embarrassing.

Side Stories 7

Dream in a Dream (7)

I went to the basement workshop to check the inheritance that suddenly fell into my lap.

▶ [Young Dwarf's Dexterity]

▶ [Random Dice]

▶ [Black Lotus Bow]

My [Dexterity] had been upgraded and I also acquired a strange weapon and skill. I didn't recognize the weapon, but I had designed the skill for the Tower of Wish.

"What the heck is this Black Lotus...?"

I pushed aside the unknown and focused on the skill, [Random Dice].

I took out the dice that reacted to its user's wishes and rolled it while simply thinking, Please be something good. It rolled a few times on the ground before transforming into a rock with a blue glow. This compressed form of mana and carbon turned out to be a blue diamond.

"Oh..."

This blue diamond would fetch around 500 million won judging from its size. Not a bad haul at all. I placed it in my pocket.

▷ [Young Dwarf's Dexterity] [High Rank] [Illusion Attribute] [Evolving] [Grade 3 – Proficiency EXP: 63%]

Next, I checked [Young Dwarf's Dexterity]. I had no idea why a young dwarf of all things, but inheriting an adult dwarf's dexterity might've been too much.

I inspected my open hands. Nothing seemed out of the ordinary.

“I should try and make something.”

I pondered what to make. Should I make a new bed for Evandel?

Kim Hoseop suddenly called as I waved my hands around and muttered to myself.

— Hajin-chan! Have you seen the news, nyang?

“What news?”

— I'll send it to you. Take a look!

A few headlines had been broadcasted 30 seconds ago from English media outlets.

[Crucial Evidence Found Against the Assassin, Xtra!]

[Xtra's whereabouts are still unknown. England's government is considering asking the Heroes Association for help...]

I had sniped James Finley from 4 km away. I also infused that bullet with my gift to increase its destructive power and kill him in one hit. The bullet disintegrated afterward and didn't leave a trace.

However, they claimed to have found evidence at the crime scene. Of course, Lancaster must've planned this.

— Those bastards are trying to drag us out. Look at this.

Kim Hoseop sent me a discussion from Lancaster's hacked communication channel.

[I don't think we can get any other details regarding Xtra. That person's whereabouts are unknown and not a single thing is known about him.]

[I'll try to move the parliament heads to get the Hero Association involved. It's just a lone mercenary. I'm certain there will be some reaction if the association acts.]

[Go and check where the details regarding James Finley could've leaked.]

Kim Hoseop already hacked deep into Lancaster's communication lines.

"Hmm... They're coming out stronger than I anticipated. Maybe I shouldn't have killed Finley?"

— Not at all, nyang! That was the best course of action since we were pressed for time, nyang. The English Royal Court would've suffered a bigger blow if you didn't kill him. They purchased quite a powerful mana bomb, nyang!

I couldn't help but worry despite Kim Hoseop's reassurance. The English Royal Court guild certainly took a turn for the worse. No, the situation would surely nosedive even further.

[The fall of England, the first guild in history to assassinate their own applicant!]

[English Stock Exchange hit by Finley Incident... stocks down 13% as trading opened!]

[The English Royal Court's stock fell by 43% in a single day on January 8th. England's 2nd top guild, Arthur Knight has overtaken the English Royal Court for the first time!]

"I think they'll get pummeled even more if we reveal the secret communication channel considering how things are going. They'll probably accuse the English Royal Court of fabricating evidence, right?"

— Correct, nyang! They have quite a skilled hacker on their side as well! Staying still and not doing anything is the best course of action, nyang!

Kim Hoseop offered his opinion, but I couldn't afford to remain still if Lancaster really grew on par with the Nine Evils.

"Hoseop."

— Yes?

"Shall we make some more money?"

— Money? Haven't you already made enough to last a few lifetimes?

I earned enough to be one of the top 30 richest in the world thanks to the items I crafted with [Dexterity], which sold for astronomical prices. I also earned quite a sum from operating the [Truth Agency]. Not to mention, I bought as many Essence of the Strait shares as I could and struck the jackpot when their stocks reached an all-time high. I could probably be considered the richest in terms of cash on hand since the Truth Agency only dealt in cash.

"There's no harm in earning more, right? The English Royal Court's stock price is taking a massive beating, so I want you to purchase all their shares when they hit rock bottom. I want you to buy everything if possible."

This world ran on capitalism. The biggest threat a guild faced wasn't external, but their own stock price. Their burden would significantly reduce as long as their stock prices held out.

— The English Royal Court's share structure is 51:49. The royal family owns 51% and private entities own the remaining 49%. We can only buy 49% of their stock, nyang.

"Buy all of it."

— All 49%?

"Yes, as much as you can."

— It's going to cost a significant sum, nyang?

I couldn't help but laugh.

"I told you before, right? I wanted to run a guild on a whim. I guess I'll have some fun as the English Royal Court's new chairman. My bank account won't dry up no matter how much we use."

It didn't matter if Lancaster could match the Nine Evils. He couldn't be richer than me.

* * *

[January 10, 2031]

The peak of winter arrived and a chilling fog descended.

The English Royal Court faced the worst crisis in its history, but things suddenly took a drastic turn. Their falling stock price made an upward rally.

"Please brief me on the current situation."

Rachel sat in her office while glaring at the monitor with bloodshot eyes. She hadn't slept a wink for the past 120 hours since the incident.

— There's nothing much to report other than the fact that an unknown entity suddenly bought all our guild shares. We're trying to find out more, but we can't seem to make sense of what's going on.

[English Royal Court Guild (ERG) +17.5%]

Their stock price took a -20% hit yesterday and a -43% the day before. The infamous title of assassinating their own applicant proved fatal. The public protested not only for Rachel, but the entire board of directors to resign.

— The buying trend is so strong that retail investors have begun to jump on the bandwagon.

The chart continued upward as they spoke.

Even expert analysts at Yeouido^[1] agreed the English Royal Court had no hopes of bouncing back. However, the current upward trend proved them completely wrong.

“Then that means... Ah! It’s going up!”

Rachel exclaimed and clasped her hands together. She continued to observe their skyrocketing stock price.

“Eugh... Eung!”

She let out a cry like a baby whenever the stock price moved. Her body bounced up and down on her chair as if she rode on a rollercoaster.

“Haaa...”

Then their stock price took a dive after maintaining an upward rally for 30 minutes.

Kim Hoseop strategically planned this dive as a trap to shake off retail investors, but Rachel didn’t know that.

The hope and excitement on her face instantly disappeared and she sank into her chair again after witnessing the drop.

Rachel suddenly felt sick and pitied herself. She didn’t have time to get so worked up over their stock prices. The general assembly would soon begin and they hadn’t resolved James Finley’s death yet.

She had to regain the public’s trust whether through a public apology or investigating the link between James Finley and Lancaster.

Knock... Knock!

Someone knocked on her door. Rachel immediately fixed her shirt and straightened her posture.

“Come in.”

The door opened and Dake entered.

He slowly approached her desk with a sullen look and placed down an envelope.

“This is my letter of resignation.”

“...”

Rachel silently stared at him.

Dake couldn't look her in the face and bit his lips. He once vowed to stay beside the Princess and become her strength until the day he died, but it seemed he became nothing more than a burden. He decided that leaving would be best for her sake.

“However, I don't wish to resign from my position. Please fire me instead.”

Dake always placed his country and the guild above his life. He hoped the Vice Leader would agree. Forcing the young Vice Leader to make such a difficult decision pained him, but he knew Rachel would be their future hope. She would regain England's former glory for them.

He hoped she could ride through this storm at least.

“I'll resign and things will quiet down if you announce that you fired me instead. I'll hold a press conference and say the same. This will hold back the media until the general assembly concludes.”

Rachel's lips trembled.

Dake had always been beside her ever since she graduated from Cube. She could confidently say she fully trusted him among the guild members. He served as a hero in their guild ever since she could remember.

Someone she trusted would leave their guild again. Rachel mustered the courage and shook her head.

“Still, firing you is too—”

“I apologize for this. I’ll be waiting for good news from the upcoming general assembly and I’ll be rooting for you from a distance, Vice Leader.”

Dake interrupted her. It seemed he already made up his mind, which caused Rachel excruciating pain as if her heart had been wrenched out.

However, she did her best to not show any pain.

“Alright, please be on your way...”

Rachel managed to dismiss him without wavering. Dake turned around and left.

The door silently closed and only she remained in this suffocating space. She quietly sat and didn’t know what to think anymore. How should she be feeling?

Rachel broke down on her desk and silently cried. She gritted her teeth and only the sound of her breathing escaped.

She refused to admit that she cried. This fleeting sorrow would soon pass after she calmed herself. Yes, she only had to endure until it disappeared as if nothing happened. She sighed to let bygones be bygones.

Like that, Rachel convinced herself to endure the pain.

* * *

Some of the most prime real estates in the world could be found on the outskirts of Seoul at the foot of Bukhansan Mountain^[2].

The mountain energy and flowing river met here and rows of luxurious hanoks^[3] lined the area. Not even the most seasoned real estate agents would dare put a price tag on these properties.

These rows of hanoks had been designed with interiors that breathed in the fresh mountain air. The mountain stood behind and the river stood in front.

This luxurious property that blended into nature belonged to Chae Joochul's family.

"Ah, geez... I can't understand this at all!"

One of the owners of this place, Essence of the Strait's Chae Nayun, rolled on the floor while looking at a crystal that glowed golden.

[Miracle Stone] [The reward for successfully completing the Tower of Wish. When used, this crystal will allow the user to experience the pinnacle grade miracle known as regression.]

"Anyways... this means it's my fault, right?"

Chae Nayun slightly messed up at the last second. She got too worked up after obtaining the miracle stone and reading its description, which caused her to act rashly.

Anyways... something happened and...

Chae Nayun had to delay her real regression because of this mistake.

"Sigh..."

Sukeok... Sukeok...

She grabbed a pen and wrote in the diary she purchased yesterday.

[Chae Nayun's Diary]

[Today is January 13, 2031]

[I experienced a fake regression on January 10, 2031. Around 3 days have passed since then.]

[I found out that the Tower of Wish and the Tower of Miracle don't exist in this world. Neither does Baal nor my brother.]

Nor my brother.

She underlined those words twice.

[That's why I'm still having a hard time understanding what I must accomplish in this dream.]

[I roughly deduced that I have to find the miracle stone's fragment somewhere in this dream and help the people trapped in this fake world, especially Rachel.]

[Ah... but why the hell is the reward for clearing the tower so fragile? It broke just because I dropped it once? This is getting ridiculous the more I think about it... Fuck...]

[Anyways... The end.]

“That should do it.”

She muttered and nodded in satisfaction after finishing her diary entry for the day.

“I used my head today so...”

She closed her diary and stood. Now, she had to cool her head after racking her brains for a jaw-dropping 15 minutes.

Chae Nayun scurried toward the edge of her room and hopped into the VR capsule.

“Connect!”

The VR capsule closed and a completely different world appeared.

[Welcome, Nayunjajangman.]

[Please select your game.]

“Online game, Middle Age^[4].”

She chose Middle Age, which became the most popular game in capsule rooms^[5]. This game didn’t exist in Chae Nayun’s original world, so she enjoyed it a lot.

[Welcome, Nayunjajangman.]

[Nayunjajangman]

[199 cm, 115 kg]

[Level 93]

[Class – Warrior of Ethoric Tribe (Hidden)]

[Title – Legendary Barbarian]

An entirely different scene appeared after she logged in. She stood in the city marketplace where she logged out last night.

“Customers, look at this! Come and buy one before you go!”

“Aigoo! You look quite fit! Hyung, why don’t you buy a potion? Come, buy a potion!”

A swarm of merchant players rushed Chae Nayun and tried to sell their goods.

“Forget it. I’m not buying. Go away.”

She shooed them and walked off.

A character suddenly blocked her path when she prepared to warm up and go hunting.

“Hey, Chae Nayun. What are you doing here?” the player asked.

“...?”

Chae Nayun stared at the strange character with a low level, but extravagant clothes.

Why the hell is this player wearing such a flashy dress in broad daylight at the marketplace?

“Who are you?”

“Who else? It’s me, Yoo Yeonha.”

“Huh? Ah... sure... why?”

Upon closer inspection, the character moved exactly like Yoo Yeonha. The posture and gestures only nobles from medieval times would make like putting their left arm around their waist and resting their right arm above it.

Yoo Yeonhwa furrowed her brows. “You... The general assembly is coming up soon. What are you doing?”

“What’s the problem? You’re also playing this game right now, right?”

“Playing the game? I’m only here because you blocked me! I had to make a character just to chase you!”

“Huh? But why are you wearing something so extravagant?”

“I can’t go around poorly dressed even if it’s a game. I spent some cash on clothes and accessories. Oh right, I also established a merchant company with my name. I did all that in less than 15 minutes after logging in.”

Yoo Yeonha covered her mouth and laughed. She seemed like the epitome of rich before snapping out of it.

“Enough of that. Just hurry and come out. I already told you we have a joint training session today, didn’t I?”

“Sure. You’re blocked.”

“What? N-No! Don’t do that!”

Chae Nayun blocked Yoo Yeonha and the extravagant character suddenly turned into a pitch-black silhouette.

“!@$#!@#%#@!@#!@#”

Chae Nayun ignored the lump of coal that chased her and used a [Teleportation Scroll]. She headed to a place called the [Black Rose Baron’s Castle], where only high-leveled players gathered.

Her body disappeared with a whoosh!

[Black Rose Baron’s Castle]

— Entry Requirement: Level 80 and above

A lot of named players waited for quests in the Black Rose Baron’s Castle, which also served as a checkpoint.

Chae Nayun glanced over the nicknames before smirking at one that caught her eye.

[Extra7]

She knew who that ID belonged to, but the other person probably didn’t know her identity.

“Why is he always online?” she grumbled.

Honestly, she only downloaded this game to watch him since he only played this game. She didn’t have the courage to approach him yet and felt satisfied watching from afar.

Extra7 suddenly turned around. He spent a ton of money and wore only the best equipment. Even his character's face looked more handsome than his real face.

Chae Nayun suddenly recalled the man playing that character.

“...?”

Extra7 scanned his surroundings as if he felt someone's gaze.

However, Chae Nayun hid in the corner of a dark alley and stole glances at him while grinning.

I'm not ready to meet him just yet.

1. Yeouido is South Korea's financial district, much like Wall Street in New York. 📖

2. For more information: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bukhansan> 📖

3. Hanok is a traditional Korean house. <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hanok> 📖

4. The correct translation is Medieval Ages or Medieval Times, but the author provided the English version itself so it's written as provided. 📖

5. Capsule room is basically a play on PC room, which is what internet cafés are called in Korea. 📖

Side Stories 8

Dream in a Dream (8)

The world's top guilds began preparing for the general assembly march. The English Royal Court prepared to join as well and squeezed every cent from their impoverished pockets.

The total cost of food while traversing the Central Asian wilderness, the magitech tents and cooking utensils for camping, various communication crystals, artifacts, bribes to pay the local officials, costs to use the portal gateways, etc. amounted to more than tens of billions of won.

Yes, tens of billions of won evaporated from their pockets just like that.

They decided on horses for transportation and took 11 from the royal stables. Each hero departing for the general assembly received one. England was a country of knights, so the royal stables undoubtedly featured high-quality horses.

Rachel also announced Dake's termination, which quelled the public's sentiment towards the English Royal Court to a certain extent.

We haven't forgiven you, but James Finley wasn't exactly a model citizen. There's nobody else to represent us at the general assembly. Let's continue after that... or something along those lines.

"Xining, China is willing to open a portal for us," Fermin said as she entered Rachel's office.

Fermin looked strong for a woman with a toned body, sun-kissed skin, and long hair tied in a ponytail. She succeeded Dake after his termination.

"Most of the Korean guilds will probably depart from New Delhi, right?” Rachel asked.

New Delhi was the closest city to the general assembly, but the English Royal Court gave up on using their portal since the local government there suddenly increased their fees to an absurd amount. Did it make sense that each person had to cough up a whopping 1 billion won per use?

“Yes, but going there will do us no good right now since that place is crawling with helicopters and drones. It’s basically media hell. Ah... More importantly, please take a look at this. This is the magitech tent we recently purchased.”

Fermin took out a rubber ball.

Rachel curiously looked at it before asking. “What is it?”

“Now, look at this. It’s smaller than a football, but when you roll it like this!”

Fermin exclaimed before she rolled the ball. It traveled across the office before hitting the wall.

Then... nothing happened.

They blinked a few times at the rubber ball.

“What? What’s wrong with this thing? Is it because we bought it pre-owned? Please wait a moment.”

Fermin tilted her head and approached when it suddenly went, Shwaaak! The rubber ball transformed into a tent.

“Ack!”

“...!”

She jumped in surprise. Rachel also flinched, but tried her best to hide it.

“It doesn’t look bad, but it got stuck on the wall,” Rachel told her.

“You’re right. I apologize,” Fermin mumbled in response.

Did the tent open when it struck the wall? A part of it penetrated the room. A single tent cost nearly 10 million won, but ended up unusable.

The office doors swung open and a man rushed in.

“Vice Leader, please take a look at this!”

Marcus, one of their high rank members tasked with accompanying Rachel, rudely entered without knocking. Something seemed off about his behavior.

“Hurry! Hurry!”

He exclaimed and dragged them out to the guild building’s front yard where a crowd gathered. Everyone immediately saluted Rachel and made way for her.

Rachel and Fermin wore the same shocked expression when they saw what caused the commotion.

“This... What’s all this?” Rachel asked in a daze.

A mountain of equipment and resources lay in front of her. The English Royal Court wanted to procure these exact items, but couldn’t due to their financial situation.

Marcus couldn’t hide the excitement in his voice.

“Someone donated all of this! Look! This is a top-of-the-line magitech tent! It’s designed to withstand the mana storms in Central Asia for a week! There are 24 right here!”

The natural disaster known as a mana storm occurred quite frequently in Central Asia. It would be difficult for the English Royal Court to withstand if they didn't use these special tents.

"Who donated all of this?" Rachel asked with a hint of skepticism.

They desperately needed the magitech tents, but she couldn't welcome this with open arms. Her instincts told her to suspect everything.

"We don't know who sent them, but they included a card."

Marcus took out a card that looked quite small compared to the mountain of donations. It had a Christmas-themed background with a few words scribbled on it.

[To Rachel,

From, Fellow Cube Alumni]

Kim Hajin didn't plan on writing a card, but thought Rachel might refuse the donations. However, this didn't dispel an ounce of her suspicion since so many Cube alumni existed.

"Huh? Vice Leader, there's something else written on the back," Fermin said as she glanced at the card.

Rachel immediately flipped it over and read it.

[I'm still using the coat you gave me last time. Please think of this as my token of gratitude for the debt I still owe.]

"Ah!" Rachel gasped after reading those words.

Fermin glanced at the card again and asked, "Still owe? Is it someone you know, Vice Leader?"

Rachel smiled at the pleasant surprise and thought to herself, I guess you succeeded in life. Well, how can someone so smart not succeed?

She nodded at Fermin's question and replied with a smile.

“Yes, I think I know who it is. However, I’m the one indebted to him.”

“Oh, is that so? It’s someone Vice Leader knew after all. What a surprise. Did you date a daddy longlegs at Cube?” Fermin playfully teased her.

“No, that person isn’t that tall,” Rachel innocently replied.

“Ah... Sure...” Fermin muttered in disappointment.

Rachel now felt certain about where the gifts came from since Lancaster wouldn’t know those memories. She held the card dearly before turning towards Marcus, who busily took inventory of the donated items.

“Was there an address of where it came from?” she asked him.

“No, there wasn’t any. More importantly, is it alright to receive these now?”

Marcus asked and she briefly pondered before nodding.

Rachel couldn’t refuse a gift from an old friend. She wanted to thank him right away, but sadly didn’t know how to contact him. Regardless, she believed he left out his address for a reason and decided to leave it at that.

“Yes, it’s from someone we can trust.”

She spoke full of confidence.

* * *

— The guilds participating in the general assembly have arrived.

I observed the march from China’s gloomy, winter sky. I could see everything on the ground as if it happened in front of me thanks to my thousand-mile eyes.

— The English Royal Court guild from England, the Reislauffer guild from Switzerland, and the Twilight guild from Japan have chosen our city.

The Chinese reporter covering the guilds spoke in front of the camera.

A total of 35 heroes gathered in the city: 12 from Japan, 12 from Switzerland, and 11 from England. Each guild could bring 12 members, but England suddenly lost Duke.

— Let's move.

Rachel proudly mounted her horse and the other guild members trailed behind her. The coverage team from the English broadcasting station, BBC, closely followed them.

— The weather is quite cold today.

Fermin spoke up.

The winds blowing across China felt like sharp icicles compared to England.

— Please be careful of the climate here.

Rachel warned her fellow guild members.

I observed them shaking in the cold and shifted my gaze towards the desolate plains.

“When will they reach that place?” I wondered.

Civilization would disappear from view in 300 km and 13 different paths would appear in front of them. The 13 paths would further split into 8, which would further split into 6... Every single path featured rugged terrain and it would take them more than 10 days to reach the general assembly's location, which formerly belonged to Afghanistan.

— For the crown's glory and our nation's restoration!

The English Royal Court members enthusiastically cried out as they marched.

I slowly drove my helicopter and followed them. The helicopter silently flew and would be impossible to spot from the ground.

[EH-64 Elioch] [High Rank] [Mount]

[A helicopter manufactured by Essential Dynamics. A masterpiece with greater efficiency and abilities. It has been enchanted with numerous spells.]

Enchantments: 1. [High Rank Silence] 2. [High Rank Camouflage] 3. [High Rank Durability] 4. [High-Intermediate Rank Magic Resistance]

I enchanted this helicopter myself. Then I discovered I could create an even stronger synergy with [Young Dwarf's Dexterity]. I didn't need to explain how well [High Rank Silence] and [High Rank Camouflage] worked together. I could've never attempted [High-Intermediate Magic Resistance] with only [Dexterity]. This allowed me to pass through the mana storm without any problems. [Random Consolidation] also made it impossible for most flying monsters to spot this helicopter.

I leisurely flew and watched over the English Royal Court guild.

* * *

Two hours passed since the march started.

The guild traveled far beyond the city into abandoned territory. Rows of concrete and traces of civilization appeared like milestones. These landmarks degraded over the years and blended in with nature now.

"This is where the real march starts," Fermin said as she stopped on her mount.

Rachel tightened her grip around the reins and stopped as well. The guild members trailing behind did the same.

"How many... paths are there?" Marcus muttered in disbelief at the sight before them.

The desolate land split into 13 paths across the horizon. The mana storms carved out these steep and narrow paths like ravines. Some paths would suddenly descend or slope upwards.

This unreal sight would overwhelm anyone who only ever lived in a modern city.

“Earthy, which path do you think is correct?” Rachel asked her spirit.

The young spirit looked around, but couldn’t give Rachel an answer. Instead, it alerted her of another approaching group.

“Another guild is approaching.” Rachel told her guild members, who looked into the distance as the sound of hooves reverberated.

The Reislauer guild from Switzerland soon arrived.

The English Royal Court members looked at them with envy because the Reislauer guild brought a group known as the Golden Generation of Switzerland. This party consisted of Sehit, Varga, Vars, Tilma, and Maritz. The entire world knew their names.

Sehit led the group and approached the English Royal Court with a leisurely smile.

“Greetings, friends from Europe.”

Rachel nodded at him.

She had heard of Sehit and his exploits. He enrolled at Cube two years before her and graduated with honors, placing 10th in his batch.

“It’s a pleasure to meet the English Royal Court, which we grew up admiring. Vice Leader Rachel, this must be fate. What do you think about traveling together?”

Sehit asked as if doing them a favor. The English Royal Court members didn't like his tone.

On the other hand, the Reislauer members grimaced when they heard Sehit's offer since it obviously only benefitted the other side.

Surprisingly, Rachel refused the offer.

"Thank you for the kind offer, but we politely refuse. We'll just be a burden."

She knew Lancaster might ambush her and didn't want to drag any innocent people into her problems.

Sehit slightly raised his brows. "You don't have to refuse. We have a mercenary and pathfinder familiar with the terrain here. It'll be much easier if you come with us."

"Ah, w-we also hired a pathfinder!" Fermin exclaimed as her hand shot up.

The Reislauer members looked at her and she slowly lowered her hand.

"Ah, is that so? I heard you didn't hire one. You know... because of that incident..." Sehit spoke in a roundabout manner.

"It's a local. We... we hired a local and he knows this place quite well too!" Fermin quickly replied.

"Ah, I see. You had your own plans all along." Sehit and the rest of Reislauer smiled.

However, their smiles didn't look friendly at all. It looked more like sneers as they laughed.

Fermin awkwardly scratched her head and lowered her gaze to the ground.

"Fine then. We'll be on our way. May honor and luck be with you."

Sehit didn't offer a second time and their party headed towards the diverging paths.

The Reislaufer guild chose the 6th pathway as the other English Royal Court members glared at Fermin.

Marcus openly displayed his contempt and approached her.

"Why did you do that?"

"What?"

"I said, why did you do that?"

"I really hired a local."

"From where?"

"I already said a local, right? I made some arrangements before we came here."

"Is that person really a local?" Marcus continued to interrogate her.

Fermin stuttered back. "Y-Yeah... A local... a half-Korean local..."

"A half-Korean that lives in China?"

"Yeah... something like that? Hey, it's not impossible, right? Anyways, just wait a bit."

Then Fermin took out a crystal. They absolutely required these communication crystals in Central Asia since the mana storms disrupted all electronic equipment.

"Yes, it's me, Fermin. Yes... yes... yes..."

She spoke with the crystal to her ear and nodded a few times.

Marcus and the rest watched her with skepticism. Fermin seemed oblivious to their gazes and brightly smiled. Then she pointed to the 3rd path.

“The 3rd one! Vice Leader, we should take the 3rd path!” she enthusiastically exclaimed.

The guild members continued to glare at her with obvious discontent, but Fermin seemed quite confident and dead set. They had no choice but to listen. Besides, it wouldn’t make much of a difference. They would’ve tossed a coin to decide if they didn’t have a pathfinder.

“Alright, time to march!” Fermin gleefully shouted.

The third path turned out to be a narrow ravine with a grueling slope. Even the horses struggled to climb it. They continued for about an hour before more paths appeared. The road further split into 8 paths this time.

Fermin led the way and stopped. She pressed the crystal to her ear again.

“Yes, there are 8 paths. Yes, yes, yes... ah... yes... Everyone, follow me. We’re going through this path.”

She confidently informed everyone again.

“Damn it. Hey, where is this local person watching us from? Did they mention their current location or something?”

“Just shut up and follow me. You can lead the way if you’re dissatisfied.”

“No, it’s not that I’m dissatisfied... Sigh...”

Marcus and the others didn’t seem satisfied. However, they had to follow Rachel, who silently followed Fermin.

Fermin continued to guide them with unconvincing words like: Over here, this is the path we have to go through, we’re almost there, just a bit further!

The sun went down and the horses became exhausted when they arrived at a flat plain.

Marcus dismounted from his horse.

“Hey Fermin, these guys will die if we go any further. Let’s set up camp and rest. I wonder where we should camp?”

“Wait a minute. I told you, right? This local person really knows the way around here.”

“Not even 12 hours have passed, you know? I’ll acknowledge his skills after he properly guides us for a week.”

Marcus grumbled, but he and others slowly trusted the pathfinder Fermin hired. They couldn’t help but acknowledge the pathfinder’s skills since they hadn’t run into a single monster or enemy.

Fermin discussed something with the pathfinder before suddenly nodding again.

“He says quite a deep cave will appear in a bit. We’ll be a target out here, so let’s camp over there.”

“A cave?”

“Yeah, he says there’s a cave. Let’s go, go, go! Let’s get moving, Vice Leader.”

Could someone find such a cave here? The guild members didn’t know whether to trust Fermin, but the mysterious pathfinder proved them wrong again after a cave appeared.

“Wow, what the hell... That pathfinder actually told the truth?”

“Holy...”

The guild members slowly stopped doubting the pathfinder. Rachel also seemed to fully trust the pathfinder now.

“I told you, right? This person is amazing! Anyways, let’s hurry inside!” Fermin triumphantly smiled and ushered them into the cave.

The guild members led their horses by the reins and entered one by one.

“Ah, Vice Leader is coming too, right?” Fermin asked her.

However, Rachel didn’t budge and simply stared at Fermin.

Fermin seemed confused when Rachel suddenly reached out.

“Give that to me.” Rachel ordered her.

“Huh? Give you what?” Fermin seemed to be at a loss.

“The communication crystal.”

“...”

Fermin’s expression stiffened and she nervously gulped. She anticipated this, but still felt nervous when it finally happened. Honestly, she felt a bit scared. It happened sooner than expected. Fermin thought it would take at least 4 more days before Rachel demanded to speak to the pathfinder.

“Ah, come on. This is my responsibility. I’ll hold onto it for now.”

“Hand it over.”

“Ah... that’s... I can’t... This is one of the terms on the contract so... only I can speak to that person.”

“Hand it over, right now.”

“No... that’s... because... the contract is like this you see... this half-

Korean pathfinder is in love with me. You know, something like love at first sight? That's why he refuses to speak to anyone other than me, so Vice Leader can't..."

"Dake must've told you, I know."

"..."

Fermin flinched at Dake's name and could no longer do anything. A part of her felt relieved she wouldn't get punished since Rachel knew Dake ordered her.

Fermin bit her lips and sighed. "T-That's... Haaa..."

She hesitated one last time and handed over the communication crystal for contacting Xtra.

Side Stories 9

Dream in a Dream (9)

Rachel grabbed the active communication crystal that glowed blue and Fermin whimpered like an injured dog.

Rachel glanced at her before speaking into the communication crystal.

“It’s you, right?”

She felt certain the person on the other end was Xtra.

— Yeah.

However, she didn’t expect him to admit it so easily. He must’ve anticipated this.

“You’re quite brazen, aren’t you? I’m pretty sure I told you last time —”

— Yeah, I know. Can you stop being so hardheaded?

She didn’t expect him to come out so strong and briefly stood in a daze before a vein popped out on her forehead. Rachel pretended to not be affected.

“Hardheaded? That’s the first I’ve heard of that.”

She wasn’t joking. No one had ever called her that before, which made her angry the more she thought about it.

I’m hardheaded? Me? How can he say that? Does he even know me?

— Heh... Sure, sure.

The mercenary sneered and struck a nerve again. Rachel bit her dry lips.

— Anyways, this is something Dake requested. He was willing to pay double out of his own pocket.

“...”

The English Royal Court had already fired Dake. This meant he no longer received any support for hiring this mercenary. However, that didn't deter him from hiring Xtra despite carrying all the burden.

Rachel didn't understand why Dake trusted this mercenary so much. What made this mercenary so special?

— He made the right choice in hindsight since all of you would be going around in circles without me.

Of course, she knew that as well. The mercenary only worked with them for 12 hours, but he already proved his worth when it came to pathfinding.

Despite her reluctance, Rachel acknowledged that she needed Xtra's help right now.

— Oh right, why did you refuse an offer that benefited you? You ran into Reislaufer, right? It would've been more comfortable if you went with them. Why did you refuse? Was it a matter of pride?

The march toward the general assembly didn't concern only her. It concerned the entire English Royal Court and England's future. Her guild members risked their lives on this march. She would never put herself first and risk them harm.

“I understand. Then, I hope you can continue to guide us. However, I'll be in charge of communicating with you from now on.”

They desperately needed a pathfinder and she wanted to prove she wasn't hardheaded. Rachel decided to compromise.

— Suit yourself if you want to hear my voice that badly.

“No... that’s not... Haa...”

Rachel tried to retort, but ended up shutting her mouth since a curse word would come out.

She hated every word that came out of this mercenary’s mouth. She hated his tone even more.

“I’ll hang up now.”

Rachel ended their call and placed the communication crystal in her leather armor’s pocket. She turned around and looked Fermin in the eye.

Fermin flinched and expected to be reprimanded, but Rachel merely spoke like usual.

“Let’s go in.”

“Huh? G-Go in where?”

“To rest.”

“Ah... Yes... Let’s go, Vice Leader.”

The two entered the cave with a slightly awkward atmosphere between them.

The cave turned into a cozy camp with 11 tents and ample space remaining. They even set up a makeshift stable at the end of the cave.

The guild members sat around the campfire and prepared their food.

Fermin stole a glance at Rachel before enthusiastically speaking.

“Hey, hey, hey. What are you all doing? What’s with the sudden campfire?”

She hurried towards the campfire to get away from Rachel.

“Didn’t we bring a stove and heater with us?” she asked them.

“We did, but we’re using it to warm up the cave. Ah, Vice Leader, please take a seat. It’s warmer here.”

Marcus gestured to Rachel, who approached them and took a seat.

She sat on the only chair they had while the rest sat on the floor. Everyone couldn’t help but smile at their Vice Leader who stood out.

They chatted about a variety of topics in the cozy atmosphere. Their great benefactor’s identity intrigued all of them. It made the news a few times already.

“I asked the other guilds. It turns out none of them are better equipped than us.”

“I heard the same too! This tent is quite expensive. The price tag shocked me when I saw it!”

“I heard we aren’t renting, right? They say we can use it next time when we’re hunting in dungeons!”

Tents, stoves, compasses, heaters, saddles, etc. All the donations would greatly help even after the general assembly because of their dire financial situation.

“Speaking of that...”

Marcus grumbled and seemed discontent as he looked at Rachel. He obviously had something to say.

“Vice Leader...”

Rachel tilted her head and didn’t do well with these conversations.

Marcus smirked and pointed at the tents. “Those tents, have you been inside them?”

“Yes, I have. Why? Is it not to your liking?”

Rachel already checked the tent’s interior. It only had enough room to fit one bed comfortably. The fact that a magitech tent came with a bed already seemed luxurious enough.

“No, I like it. I would be insane to have a problem with this. It’s just... who donated all of this?”

Marcus furrowed his brows. It seemed he secretly had a drink judging from the redness in his eyes.

“That’s...” Rachel muttered when Fermin suddenly cut her off.

“It’s one of her classmates from Cube.”

“Oh, a classmate from Cube? Then I must’ve run into them as well?”

“That’s...”

“You think so? We were probably working our asses off to graduate. Ah, we barely managed to graduate from Cube now that I think about it.”

“...”

Most of the guild members here were all older than Rachel. Only Fermin and Marcus also graduated from Cube. The rest graduated from Britton Academy.

“I guess you’re right, but I ran into Vice Leader a few times on campus. I also heard a lot of rumors about her. Oh right, there was that one gunner. A hot rumor went around that a strange freshman had a huge crush on our vice leader. Do you remember that, Vice Leader?”

Rachel flinched when Marcus mentioned that person.

“Huh? Ah, that person is...”

“Come on. I also heard about that gunner. There’s no way he’s rich. Plus, he dropped out of Cube,” Fermin chimed in.

“...”

Rachel couldn’t utter a word because of Fermin and glared at her with fiery eyes, but Fermin didn’t seem to notice.

“Dropped out? How do you know about that?” Marcus asked.

“I paid special attention to him since I heard some guy was infatuated with our vice leader. He turned out to be below average,” Fermin nonchalantly replied.

Rachel simply brushed off whatever they said about Kim Hajin. She recalled his strange way of thinking and plenty of other memories like when he defeated Lancaster’s minion during their test. He also shared his rations with her during their exam. Then they met by pure coincidence at Clancy Islet and stayed together, etc.

She smiled while reminiscing about the past.

“Ah! It’s a man!” Fermin exclaimed after seeing Rachel’s smile.

“W-What are you talking about!” Rachel flinched and slightly overreacted.

“Oh, it seems like I’m right. Hehe.”

“Well, I would’ve donated too if I was rich. Our Vice Leader is really... Um... beautiful.”

“Qui... Quiet down. It’s nothing like that!” Rachel waved her arms in a panic.

“Do you even know how much one of these tents cost? Who in their right mind would spend tens of billions of won for someone’s affection?” Fermin pondered out loud.

“Come on, our vice leader is definitely worth more than that. Rather, what kind of person is he? He must be a hero if he was your classmate, right?”

Marcus grew even more curious.

“No, I told you it’s not... It’s nothing like that.”

Rachel muttered, but her words fell on deaf ears and the guild members continued speculating.

“None of her classmates should have this much money. Heok! Don’t tell me... Shin Jonghak from Desolate Moon?”

“No way!”

“Wow! I think that’s correct! Amazing! Well, 30 billion won is chump change to Shin Jonghak.”

“That’s right! Sounds like it’s Shin Jonghak!”

“Silence! Silence! I said it’s not!” Rachel screamed. She tried to sound as stern as possible, but her flushed cheeks looked like ketchup would come out if someone squeezed them.

“Then? Who is it?”

“That’s... That’s not the case...”

Rachel muttered with tears welling in her eyes.

“Now, now, calm down everyone. Come eat. Stop fooling around or you’ll regret it later.”

Their meal finished just in time and Rachel was spared.

The heroes required huge amounts of calories and consumed a lot of meat. The hungry guild members ate as much as they could as if in a trance.

“I’ll eat inside...”

Rachel ran away to her tent with her food, but not because she felt awkward about what just happened. She learned from the internet that nothing good came out of higher ranked people eating with their subordinates.

Ziiip!

She closed her tent and ate her food alone.

* * *

...inside... memories... trauma...

Forming... at that place... still...

...then... we will... watch over...

An eerie static voice whispered in her ears. She initially thought it came from her guild members loudly chatting outside, but the voice sounded quite soothing and she slowly fell asleep from it.

...Then... how... should...

Within... the tower... situation is—

The voice distorted before suddenly stopping and a migraine struck her. It felt like a beast gnawing on her head with its fangs.

“Euk!”

Rachel quickly got up and grabbed her head. She calmed her breathing until the pain receded and checked the clock. It read 2:30 A.M. They had 2 hours left before marching again.

Rachel left the cave for some fresh air and a stroll. She sat by the entrance and gazed at the sky.

The world perfectly divided into two. The sky made up half and the land made up the other. Nothing else remained on the horizon. This perfectly balanced nature untouched by mankind felt foreign and mysterious.

“Hoo... Haa...”

Rachel inhaled and exhaled the air from this desolate land. She could see her white breath and looked at the sky again. A meteor shower left numerous trails. This beautiful sight truly mesmerized her until she heard some strange noises.

Clack... Clack... Clack...

She could hear a foreign sound mixed with screams.

“...!”

Rachel finally understood the situation and took out the communication crystal.

“Is this sound coming from you?”

— Hmm? Ah, yes. I was cleaning up some monsters. It seems you have quite a lot of enemies.

Rachel stood up.

“I’ll keep watch from now on. Please get some sleep.”

— You really are hardheaded.

“Huh? Hardheaded? What? Why?”

Anger suddenly rose in her when she heard the mercenary calling her hardheaded again. She barely managed to suppress it when Xtra dealt another blow.

— You should know that passion without the ability to perform will only be a burden to others. Just go and get some sleep.

“W-What did you say?”

Rachel lost her cool and clenched her fists. Then she pointed at the invisible mercenary.

“I said I would help, but you...”

— You don’t have to. I’m far more experienced when it comes to this place and I can see across the entire horizon. I can even see what you’re doing right now. Oh, you’re pouting like a duck.

“...”

Rachel slowly sucked her lips.

— Just leave it to me and don’t be a burden. The situation is all under control.

The mercenary didn’t say anything wrong. It would defeat the purpose of hiring a mercenary if she stood watch instead of him, but she hoped he could speak more politely.

Rachel managed to compose herself.

“I looked you up on the internet. No, I investigated you.”

— Is that so?

“I don’t think you’re an ordinary mercenary.”

— Yeah, I think so too.

Xtra sounded quite nonchalant.

“This isn’t a matter you can treat so lightly. The association will come after you once the general assembly ends.”

— Wish them good luck chasing after me. Finley would’ve committed a suicide bombing if I didn’t kill him.

“Even an evil person is a person. You can’t kill someone just because they’re evil.”

—...

Silence ensued and the mercenary didn’t respond for a while.

— Doesn’t matter. I’m not a hero, so I can do things my way. I’ll do whatever it takes to accomplish my objective.

Rachel grimaced at his words. Her wariness and hostility towards Xtra surged once again. They couldn’t cooperate because of their differences in ideologies.

Rachel wanted to keep her beliefs and honor as a hero. This didn’t stem from her royal bloodline, but to avoid sacrificing others for her own goals. People like Lancaster became her country’s archnemesis because of such sacrifices and choices. She didn’t want to repeat those past mistakes.

“Why did you accept this request?”

They had a common goal for now despite their different ideologies. Xtra came to help, so she should reduce as much friction between them as possible. She already accepted the fact that she needed his help.

“I don’t think 700 hundred million won is a big deal for you.”

No one in the world would accept her ideology and convictions. As Xtra said a while ago, passion without the ability to perform would only be a burden like a barking dog pretending to be a roaring lion.

— Who knows...

A chilly breeze blew. She thought she had grown accustomed to this coldness, but caressed her arm again.

— Maybe I'm a fan?

Xtra gave her a hint, but Rachel didn't catch on. She couldn't possibly connect the kind Kim Hajin she owed to the annoying Xtra she wanted to smack in the head.

“What?”

— I applied to your fan café. You have quite a lot of fans.

“Hmph!”

Rachel scoffed in response.

However, she slowly realized his words might be credible. At least, he didn't seem to be joking. Such a skilled mercenary agreed to help for a meager 700 hundred million won. Yes, it made more sense to look at this from an emotional angle rather than a logical one.

Shwiiiiik!

A stick flew out of nowhere and tapped her shoulder.

“Hmm?” Rachel looked up.

Where did that come from?

She looked around when another stick flew towards her.

“What the?”

She stood and walked around until another stick struck her shoulder.

“Ouch...”

She squinted into the distance and saw someone observing her.

“Is that you?”

— Who else is there?

“Why did you throw those at me?” Rachel retorted in a stern voice.

— I felt bored. I wanted to see you dodge them.

“I don’t have time to play with you.”

— You’re playing with me right now?

The mercenary threw another stick, but her instincts kicked in and she caught it.

— Wow!

“Please stop.”

— Pweash sthawp...

“...”

Her eyes trembled in anger before she crushed the stick. “You sure are childish.”

— Forget about that. I’m throwing it faster this time.

“Do you think I won’t be able to... Guek!”

Rachel gasped in pain when a stick struck her abdomen. She felt surprised a stick could fly so fast and hurt so much. More than that, she had no idea where it came from.

Shwiiiik! Tak!

Another stick flew and smacked her thigh.

“Euk!”

It hurt quite a lot and she grew annoyed. The anger she tried to suppress in her chest surged again.

Rachel gritted her teeth and fixed her stance.

— Oh, do you want to keep going?

“Don’t test my patience.”

Rachel growled in a threatening manner and pulled out Galatine.

He picked a fight with me first, so it’s alright if I go this far. I’m just paying him back for what he did.

— Then I’ll turn it up a notch too, okay?

“Sure, keep them coming.”

— Hmm... No, it’s boring if we do it like this. Why don’t we make a bet?

“A bet?” Rachel replied while focusing on the incoming sticks. She had no idea when and where they would appear.

— Yes, you win if you manage to block even once. Starting from now until we reach the general assembly hall. I’ll grant you one wish if you win. I can even refund the full amount paid to me if you want. Don’t you think it’s like killing two birds with one stone since you’ll also get to train your spirits?

Honestly, Rachel couldn’t believe it.

How can someone be so arrogant? This mercenary seems to have forgotten who I am. I might be like this, but I’m still Rachel of England. A hero renowned across the world.

“There’s no need for all of that since I’ll personally find you.”

— So your wish is to see my face?

“Just hurry up and throw those sticks.”

Rachel planned on reading the sticks’ trajectories to locate the mercenary’s hiding spot. Then she would charge at him. She wanted nothing more than to surprise him and take a look at his arrogant face. She also wanted to smack him real good.

“Hoo...”

Rachel exhaled and fixed her stance. The royal family’s swordsmanship didn’t leave a single opening for the enemy.

“You brought this on your—”

Tak!

A stick suddenly struck her between the eyes before she could even finish.

“...?”

Rachel reacted a bit late and briefly stood in a daze. She slowly raised her hand to touch her forehead where a bump slowly grew.

She couldn’t even ask herself what happened when another stick flew towards her. Not just one, but around ten flew towards her this time.

“Ah... Wait... Wait!”

Rachel instinctively cried out for a break without realizing it.

Side Stories 10

Dream in a Dream (10)

I nocked a stick onto the bowstring and pulled as far as I could until the bow creaked. Rachel's scream soon followed after the stick pierced through the air.

"This is amazing..."

I couldn't help but mutter in awe.

Indeed, the [Black Lotus Bow] seemed like the perfect weapon.

[Black Lotus Bow] [Legendary] [Spirit Attribute] — A masterfully crafted bow engraved with a black lotus. — Lotus: Arrows shot from this bow will strike their targets. (Limited to visible targets.) — Black Sun and Moon: The user's vision will be enhanced and the user may move without a sound. — Spirit Eradication: Possesses the power to eradicate the dead.

This bow's creator only left behind five letters, dwarf. However, it featured unbelievable abilities like a guaranteed bull's eye as long as the target remained in my vision. This simple ability seemed almost otherworldly. I took full advantage of it to make fun of Rachel right now.

"One more time."

I shot another stick and she failed to dodge again as it struck her pinky toe. I couldn't take any pride in this one-sided beating.

I recalled her words from before.

Even an evil person is a person. You can't kill someone just because they're evil.

She was right by a hundred, no, a thousand times. I still treated this world as a novel and felt like an outsider without a way to leave.

“One... more... time...” Rachel muttered.

I set aside my troubling thoughts and shot at Rachel again. I only did this for her sake.

I somewhat understood why the kings of olden days hated to be admonished. Just kidding. I closely watched Rachel and felt something was off.

A heavy burden seemed to be hindering her. A burden from her convictions and past mistakes on top of limitations she placed on herself.

However, the Rachel I designed in my novel had been completely different. I wanted her to become that Rachel again by standing on her own two feet.

I wanted to repay her for Evandel at the very least.

“I’ll keep going then.”

I chose to use her anger.

Anger and sadness always turned out to be the most cliché methods for someone to awaken.

“Eu... Ugh!”

Rachel lost her cool after another barrage of sticks struck her and she wildly swung her sword in every direction. However, she didn’t swing purely out of desperation. Her sword grew sharper the more she swung and formed a sword screen.

I shot another stick that ignored Rachel’s sword screen thanks to my bow’s ability.

“Argh!”

She retreated by a step after getting hit on the forehead. Her body trembled before she sat on the ground.

“It... It hurts...”

“You don’t plan on using your spirits?” I sighed and lowered my bow.

I could tell she held back. Rachel’s abilities shined most when she used her sword and spirits together. She knew that, but consciously limited herself.

“Did your teacher tell you not to use them together?”

“...” Rachel bit her lips and didn’t respond.

I couldn’t tell if she was being kind or stupid. Anyways, her silence frustrated me.

“Why do you even bother listening to a teacher like that?”

“Don’t badmouth my master!” Rachel fiercely retorted.

However, she looked quite awkward because she never made a scary face before. She resembled a cat meowing while thinking she was a lion roaring.

Her awkward expression only looked cute.

“Sure, then continue your futile attempts as long as you want. Let’s see if you can catch me.”

“I plan to do that without you telling me!”

I raised my bow again.

Rachel seemed quite offended when I badmouthed her teacher. She got worked up and continued getting hit by my sticks until five in the morning.

* * *

The march continued early in the morning. The guild members seemed in good spirits. Perhaps last night refreshed them, but they even had the luxury to yawn and chat while walking.

“Oh! It’s quite vast!”

A plain appeared and seemed so wide that they could run to their hearts' content. The guild members' eyes sparkled while looking towards the horizon.

“Will this place be alright?”

Rachel asked Xtra and he reassured them. She nodded at the others and they tightly grabbed their reins.

Rachel summoned Windy and created a stream of wind for the horses to run with.

“Ahhhh, I can feel my stress flying away.”

“I think we just passed 200 km/hr.”

“That’s the end of it. Look, it’s uphill from here.”

Around an hour passed since they rode their horses to their heart’s content. The ground slowly inclined and grew narrower. Unfortunately, another series of steep hills interrupted their joy.

“Hmm? Vice Leader, you have a scar there.”

Clop... Clop... Clop... Clop...

Fermin spotted a small bruise on Rachel’s forehead and her words attracted everyone’s attention.

“I think a mosquito bit me. It’s nothing serious.”

Rachel nonchalantly passed it off and covered it with her hair.

“Huh? No way, that doesn’t look like a mosquito bite.”

“I’m fine.”

“Still, we should—“

“I said I’m fine!”

“Yes ma’am.”

Fermin shut her mouth after Rachel’s somewhat scary response.

Rachel had just experienced humiliation like never before. That mercenary one-sidedly beat her and continuously taunted her. She burned with the desire for redemption after what happened last night. Of course, she knew Xtra was miles ahead of her. However, it wouldn’t be impossible to surpass him.

“Oh, the road forks up ahead. What should we do, Vice Leader?”
Fermin asked while pointing ahead.

— To the right.

Xtra suddenly told them.

“To the right.”

Rachel relayed his words to the guild members, who moved without a question.

Xtra couldn’t help but smirk after watching her.

— You sound like a parrot. Heh.

“...”

Rachel bit her lips and tried her best to feign ignorance while looking at the scenery around them.

Three paths appeared after they walked for a while.

— Take the path on the left.

“The first path from the left.”

They took the leftmost path and marched for around 20 minutes. Then the path split into four this time.

— Continue straight.

“The middle. We’re going straight.”

Rachel began to slightly alter his words. The mercenary couldn’t help but laugh at her extreme pride.

“Hmph! What’s so funny?”

Rachel scoffed in response.

— Nothing, I just found your attitude cute.

“Ahh! You!”

She almost blurted a curse word when her temper flared. Rachel tightly gripped the communication crystal while shaking.

“What’s wrong with her?”

“I have no idea.”

The guild members tilted their heads while watching Rachel’s bizarre actions. Fermin took things a bit more seriously than the rest.

Actually, something had been bothering Fermin since last night. She couldn't understand why a skilled mercenary like Xtra would give them a discount and work for them. She continued watching from the sidelines and planned to immediately bring up anything suspicious.

"I guess you can't have it all."

Fermin grumbled and sighed as she looked at the Vice Leader.

* * *

The march reached its fourth day.

The English Royal Court progressed quite far into Central Asia without any skirmishes or casualties. Of course, the real journey had only just begun. However, the guild members didn't worry at all because of their dependable pathfinder.

"Haa... Haa..."

The English Royal Court followed a simple routine. They marched from sunrise to sunset. Then they set up camp at a suitable location to rest at night.

Meanwhile, Rachel picked up another task in her daily schedule.

"Not yet..." she muttered.

Her bet to catch a stick continued. It sounded like a kid's game, but she was currently lying on the ground drenched in sweat.

— What do you mean by not yet?

Rachel used every method she could think of for the past four days, but none of them worked.

— You won't be able to without your spirits.

She lay defeated on the ground when Xtra threw a stick that perfectly struck her forehead. He also threw sand, mud, pebbles, dried leaves, and all sorts of other stuff that piled on her head.

Rachel clawed at the ground and her nails dug into the mud.

Could she really not win without her spirits? She thought about how to use her spirits out of desperation, but Shin Yeohwa's face popped up whenever she did. Her duties as a disciple held her back.

— You're quite pitiful.

"Haa..."

Rachel sighed because the mercenary's pity angered her. She felt something snap in her head.

Rachel slowly stood with her eyes closed. Her flaring anger burnt away and she instinctively called out a spirit that enveloped Galatine.

— So it's the wind spirit.

Rachel raised her spirit sword and focused all her senses on it. She swung it down and a blast of wind shot out.

Then she closed her eyes and silently waited for Xtra's attack. She judged that her eyes would only hinder her since she couldn't see the sticks anyways.

Tak—

Something struck her forehead again as she waited.

"What was that?"

Did something pass by just now?

Rachel blankly stared at her sword with the wind spirit still enveloping it.

I still couldn't achieve anything after disobeying my master's command? No way, there must be more. I must be mistaken.

She thought to herself in denial.

Rachel refused to accept it and almost burst into tears. She wanted to forget about everything and just throw a tantrum like a child. She wanted to ask that damn mercenary to go easy just once, to reduce the stick's speed by just a little.

— Don't get discouraged.

Hiccup!

Rachel hiccupped without realizing it, but Xtra didn't laugh like he usually did. He spoke in a serious tone this time.

— There's no way you can do it on the first try. It'll take some time since you haven't used it in a while. That's how spirits work.

“...?”

Rachel tilted her head at Xtra's words.

It sounded as if he knew everything about spirits. He could be bluffing, but she thought otherwise.

“What do you know about— Bleugh!”

A pile of sand shot into Rachel's mouth as she spoke.

— We're starting again. Don't lose the wind surrounding your sword.

Another stick flew and their training continued as Rachel spat out sand from her mouth.

She swung her sword infused with the wind spirit, but Shin Yeohwa's face kept popping up. However, she decided not to think about that for now.

Rachel felt an odd sense of relief after making her decision.

* * *

“That looks quite vicious.”

The guild members finally came face to face with the stark reality in Central Asia the following day. The blue sky turned red as they marched and the ground also turned black. Their lungs felt hot as if breathing in fire.

They wore their masks and mantles, which were all top-of-the-line products from the anonymous donor.

“Vice Leader, don’t you feel nervous about this?” Marcus carefully asked.

Rachel’s expression hardened and anxiety crept up on her.

— You’ll have to pick up the pace from now on. Continue forward.

An encouraging message came from the communication crystal.

“Alright.”

Whiiiiiiish!

They saw an infamous mana storm in front of them and the wind blew right into their faces.

Rachel stood at the front and passed a magitech rope to the back.

“Everyone! Stop for a second and wrap the rope around your waist!”

“Yes, ma’am!”

“Do a roll call while you’re tying yourself to the rope!”

The roll call started with Rachel, Fermin, Marcus, Caron, Dale... They confirmed that no one went missing and formed a line all tied to the rope. The storm completely blinded them with dust everywhere.

However, Rachel navigated through thanks to Xtra's guidance. Then they came to a dead-end for the first time.

“The path is...”

— Stand back. I'll open a path for you.

Something flew out before Rachel could think. A small projectile dug itself into the rock wall and exploded. Surprisingly, the projectile triggered a chain of huge explosions.

It drilled a round path through the rock wall. This sight truly surprised everyone, but they didn't have the luxury to stand around and admire it.

— Hurry up. You have hostiles from behind and vipers in the sky.

Kieeeeeee!

They could hear monsters shrieking in the distance. It would be best if they could avoid the high-intermediate rank poisonous flying monsters known as vipers.

— I'll cover you, so run in a line. Now!

“Everyone! Run!” Rachel quickly shouted and the guild members ushered their mounts forward.

They could feel an unstable mana behind them followed by consecutive explosions.

Side Stories 11

Dream in a Dream (11)

The guild members' horses ran as fast as possible. Only the sound of hooves filled the artificial tunnel dug by the pathfinder. The horses gradually reached their limits as the cavalry continued forward.

Boooooom!

An explosion shook the ground.

Rachel looked back and saw a reddish-black lump of mana extending like a tongue towards them. It tried to slurp up the guild members.

“Vice Leader!”

The lump of mana licked up and down while melting the ground and ceiling. The ground melted away like a stream and the guild members could feel the powerful surge of mana heating their skin.

“Our rear is in danger!” Marcus desperately shouted.

“Get down!”

Rachel pulled out Galatine and swung with all her might.

The wind spirit, combined with her sword, shot towards the lump of mana and pushed it back with a gust of wind. Then the spirit returned to Rachel and created a stream of wind that further propelled the horses.

They managed to exit the narrow path thanks to the wind spirit's support, but the lump of mana continued chasing them and covered the sky. It turned into a huge tidal wave and refused to give up.

“Follow me!”

Rachel thought for a split second before pulling her reins. She decided it would be impossible to avoid the mana chasing them, so she gave up the vast plains for refuge between the cliffs.

“We’re going down!”

Her body suddenly leaned forward when the horse she rode spun and threw her into the air. Rachel looked down and saw complete darkness. The bottomless cliff descended into depths that nobody had probably ever seen.

“Windy!”

Rachel summoned her wind spirit, who shot a jet stream that slowed the guild members’ fall. This supernatural phenomenon defied the laws of physics.

However, their predicament didn’t end there.

Kwaaaaa!

The wave of mana stubbornly chased them like a hungry predator and poured down the cliff from all sides. It looked like a tsunami falling from the heavens.

“—!”

The reddish-black storm could only be described as overwhelming, but Rachel didn’t give up. She squeezed every ounce of her strength to form a barrier made from wind and earth. She had never successfully combined two elements like this before.

Shin Yeohwa warned her once that forcing different elements together could cause them to clash and the elementalists could suffer from qi deviation. However, Rachel didn’t shy away from the risks. She had too many things to protect and too much to lose right now.

She gritted her teeth and fused her wind and earth spirits into Galatine.

Shwaaaa!

A powerful gust cut through the air as the two spirits successfully merged.

“Ah...”

Rachel muttered in surprise when the spirits reacted according to her desire. The wind and earth spirits formed a barrier as gentle as a breeze, yet sturdy as earth to block the incoming mana wave.

The mana wave came crashing down on the barrier, but the barrier remained steadfast without any signs of cracking.

An extremely bright light flashed after the mana wave clashed with the elemental barrier. The blinding light engulfed their entire surroundings. Everything briefly turned white and they couldn't see. The elemental barrier continued protecting them as the tidal wave and the bright light subsided.

Rachel felt like her entire body would crumble into dust. Her consciousness slowly drifted away as she sunk into nothingness.

A hand suddenly appeared and gently grasped her in this nothingness. She could feel this hand pulling her into a warm embrace.

Rachel found herself simply accepting this embrace.

“Good job.”

The gentle voice said before she slowly lost consciousness.

* * *

Nothing had foreshadowed the ambush. More than twenty enemies had suddenly appeared out of nowhere.

However, the situation remained favorable since only I could see the entire area covered by the mana storm.

— Sweep everything up. We just have to melt everything and they'll be caught up in it.

The enemies gathered their mana and channeled it into the tunnel I created for Rachel and the guild members. They didn't even bother to form a magic circle and simply shot their mana into the tunnel like a bulldozer. This primitive method worked quite well.

“Where did these crazy bastards come from?”

I immediately turned on my helicopter's firearms. This helicopter was originally a combat model used by the military, so it featured all sorts of weapons like machine guns and missile systems with mana bullets and shells.

Wiing! Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam!

A barrage of mana bullets and shells rained down. The huge explosions formed craters on the ground and kicked up a dust storm.

The enemies only spotted me after I had reduced their numbers by half.

— Is that the mercenary they hired?

They properly cast black fireballs at me, unlike the mana wave they recklessly shot towards the English Royal Court members.

The fireballs came at me like footballs.

Bam! Bam! Bam!

I immediately maneuvered the helicopter and hid inside the mana storm, which swept away the fireballs. I continued using the mana storm for cover and took out my Desert Eagle. The barrel grew longer and transformed into a sniper rifle.

I aimed at the enemies on the ground and pulled the trigger.

Clack—

A bullet infused with stigma pierced their barrier and went through an enemy's heart.

Only nine remained.

Clack—

Then eight, seven, and six remained. The rest retreated after their comrades died one by one every time I pulled the trigger.

— Retreat for now!

They left almost immediately and disappeared as fast as they appeared.

I grew curious about what kind of trick they used. It seemed like they either turned into dust and scattered away or turned into the wind itself and disappeared. I didn't have the luxury to ponder such things right now.

Kieeeeeek!

The viper lurking in the sky spotted me and flew through the mana storm towards my helicopter.

I immediately grabbed the helicopter's control stick and made a steep dive. However, the monster continued chasing me even as I almost crashed into the ground.

Rumble!

The ground trembled when we came within a hair's distance of each other.

Kyaruruk!

“Ah, this fucking snakehead...”

The viper kicked up some dust as it flapped its wings and smacked the helicopter.

I activated bullet time as the helicopter spun.

Dudududu! Dudu! Du... Du... Du—

The helicopter’s propeller slowed along with everything else.

I grabbed my Desert Eagle and transformed the sniper rifle into a shotgun. Then I opened the cockpit door and the viper’s wide-opened mouth appeared right in front of me. The bastard seemed to be spewing venom, but I attacked first by shoving a grenade down its throat followed by a blast from my shotgun.

Booom!

The viper flew back when the grenade exploded inside it. I infused stigma into my bullet and aimed as it grew further away.

This would be my last streak of stigma.

Clack— Tang!

The monster screeched in agony as its body exploded.

“Hooo...”

I deactivated bullet time and brought the helicopter to a higher altitude. Then I dusted my clothes off and flew towards the cliff where Rachel and her guild members fell.

The cliff appeared steeper than I thought. I began to worry, but soon spotted them. None of them had been severely wounded.

“Hmm... This is quite a surprise.”

Eleven individuals and their horses floated in the air. All of them seemed fast asleep as if stuck in a spider web.

I pressed a switch and the helicopter entered its hovering mode before I jumped out to their location.

“The wind is quite strong.”

It felt as if I landed on solid ground when I stepped on the wind that suspended the entire group. An impossible sight unfolded before me, but I already knew mystical beings like spirits could perform such miracles.

I slowly approached Rachel before flinching and quickly putting on the gas mask I usually wore around her in case she suddenly woke up.

“Looks like she overexerted herself this time.”

Rachel’s blood vessels protruded throughout her entire body. She suffered from mana exhaustion after pushing herself to the limits.

I carefully placed her in the helicopter.

“Good job,” I muttered.

She suddenly opened her eyes when those words escaped my lips.

“...”

Her slightly out-of-focus eyes glanced at me.

I went stiff and my heart wildly beat from her gaze, but that only briefly lasted.

It began raining all of a sudden.

I calmed my heart and took a few deep breaths. Then I checked my SP and system log to distract myself.

[You have shown remarkable piloting skills with Young Dwarf's Dexterity!]

[Young Dwarf's Dexterity has been affected by Master Sharpshooter!]

[A new synergy has occurred...]

[SP: 3305]

I gained quite a lot of SP and wondered if I should learn how to handle spirits like Rachel while staring at the other ten guild members sound asleep.

My beating heart calmed and turned cold again.

Someone among these ten had betrayed Rachel.

* * *

A child brightly smiled in my hazy memories. The child with chubby cheeks and long golden hair didn't know the responsibility she carried.

All sorts of famous instructors visited London and news of a prodigy in England spread throughout Europe. Every person in England watched with anticipation at how the child prodigy would grow.

However, they all became naggers for the child. These mean adults forced her to do homework she didn't want to do. They never let her play with friends or go out to ride a swing or seesaw.

Only one adult served as her refuge and sanctuary. Not the old butler assigned to her nor the nanny that raised her, but one of the knights tasked with protecting Buckingham Palace.

"I see that you're hiding again," the man said with a gentle smile.

The child in the bushes flinched and trembled before slowly coming out. She crossed her arms to make herself look as haughty and confident as possible.

“Yeah, I ran away because I didn’t want to study.”

The man shook his head at her brazen words, but smiled nonetheless.

“Is that true?” he asked her.

“Yes, I don’t lie. I ran away,” the little girl confidently replied.

“You’re quite honest, Your Highness. Alright, why don’t you continue on your way? Shall we see where you want to go?”

The child beamed with a smile before shuffling her small feet. The man quietly followed.

Pat... Pat... Pat... Pat...

The little girl bravely ventured into the woods and used what she learned from her training and magic lessons.

A small hill appeared once they exited the forest.

She plopped down on the hill while the man stood behind her.

“Isn’t it pretty? I really like this place.”

She looked over the horizon with a huge smile.

The man looked at the same horizon filled with flowers. Small flowers peeked out from the shrubs with bees and butterflies busily hovering about.

The man felt somewhat peaceful while looking at this scenery.

“Indeed, it is.”

“Right? I want to live in a place like this when I grow up! A place with lots of flowers and trees! I want to grow them myself and... Ah! I also want to raise a kitten!” she excitedly exclaimed.

“That doesn’t sound bad at all,” he briefly replied with a smile.

“Ah! Look! Look at that!”

The little girl pointed somewhere else.

How much pride would this lovely little princess bring to our nation in the future? How much responsibility and burden would she have to bear alone?

“Look over there! There’s a squirrel! Look, look! A squirrel!”

She squealed with joy while pointing at a squirrel running around.

The knight, Alex Edmund Lancaster, warmly looked at the adorable princess.

May God save the princess.

* * *

Rachel opened her eyes. She could see the half-covered sky above and a crescent moon peeking from behind the clouds. It seemed she hadn’t died yet.

She slowly raised her body and checked her surroundings. The ten guild members accompanying her all seemed sound asleep.

She looked at them for a while before sighing.

“Was this your doing?”

No response came, but Rachel already knew the answer. She recalled the mercenary’s faint silhouette before passing out.

“You don’t have to tell me if you do not want to.”

Rachel grumbled before looking down at her sword and saw the spirits still residing within Galatine.

She couldn't recall what she did when they fell down the cliff.

Did I save my comrades with this? But how? What did I do?

— An ordinary wind and a spirit's wind are completely different. A spirit can control the elements much stronger than nature itself. Their wind can become hard as the ground when fused with an earth spirit. A wind formed from such harmony can block anything.

A voice came from the communication crystal and gave her a hint.

Rachel didn't respond with, What do you know about spirits? She felt certain that Xtra knew about spirits quite well and might even possess such skills. He could be another elementalist that the public didn't know about.

— You'll reach the general assembly in roughly two days. How do you feel right now?

Rachel checked herself and couldn't feel her mana as if it froze at the source. Her body didn't have an ounce of strength left. She didn't suffer from anything critical, but had been completely exhausted.

"I'll recover in time."

— I'll get you some medicinal herbs.

Rachel blinked a few times. She wasn't used to receiving help, but didn't refuse.

She sat on the ground as if she just committed a serious offense. A thought suddenly flashed across her mind.

"Ah, what happened to the attackers? Who were they?"

— Half of them died and the rest ran away. I think you already know who they are without me telling you.

"Yes..." she muttered with a nod.

“Thank you.”

— No need to thank me. I just did it since... never mind.

He deeply contemplated who the traitor might be and planned on getting rid of them immediately regardless of Rachel's feelings.

— Get some rest.

The way Xtra spoke had changed and he sounded like an old master or something.

Rachel found it awkward, but it somewhat put her at ease.

“You too.”

She replied before lying down again.

Her body became a mess, but her heart felt light. She felt more proud of herself than ever. The fact that she protected her guild members with her own strength brought her great joy.

“Hehe...”

Rachel looked at each of her guild members as the moonlight shone on them. Everyone looked so peaceful while sleeping.

“What a relief.”

She smiled after saving every single one of them.

Side Stories 12

Dream in a Dream (12)

“We apologize for lacking so much.” Fermin said in a dejected tone with her head down.

The other guild members also felt ashamed they couldn’t help their vice leader and only burdened her.

“No, it’s fine.” Rachel shook her head. She appeared calm and peaceful as always. They couldn’t have controlled that mana wave in the first place. Their best option had been to run and hopefully survive.

“Vice Leader...”

Fermin sounded like she would burst into tears as she held Rachel’s hand. She closed her eyes and scanned Rachel’s body with her mana.

Rachel felt the aches all over her body slowly disappear thanks to Fermin’s simple, yet rare gift called Healing and Rejuvenation.

“Thank you.” Rachel smiled at her.

“Don’t mention it! It’s our duty to assist you.”

“Vice Leader!”

Marcus, Karen, and Dale returned from scouting the area. Xtra left a while ago to collect medicinal herbs for Rachel, so they went on the lookout for any potential threats.

“There seem to be no threats nearby. Also, we caught this on the way.”

They returned carrying a boar known as ricorit. This low rank monster had excellent taste and nutritional value.

“Let’s roast it for tonight. You have to eat properly to replenish your strength.”

“Yes, that sounds good. Let’s eat together.”

Rachel seemed friendlier today after gaining an important enlightenment as an elementalist. It felt as if a heavy burden had been lifted off her shoulders. She planned to rigorously train in combining her elements as soon as she recovered.

“Yes, we’ll prepare it immediately.”

The guild members went to cook their meals. They lit up the campfire and roasted the ricorit on top.

This slowly cooked meat would cost at least tens of millions of won, but all the guild members seemed downcast. The ambush last night instilled a crushing sense of defeat in them.

“It must’ve been Lancaster, right?” Marcus asked, and the others shifted their gaze towards Rachel.

She nodded. “Most likely.”

They all fell silent and only the crackling campfire and roasting meat could be heard.

“Please, come and eat.”

Rachel portioned the meat for them, but no one had an appetite.

Everyone felt depressed when Marcus tapped Fermin on the shoulder.

“Hey, what happened to that local person?”

“W-What?” Fermin suddenly flinched.

“That local pathfinder you hired. I tried not to pay too much attention, but does it make sense that he guided us through a mana storm?”

The other members wondered the same. They got around safely thanks to the pathfinder, but grew suspicious after Lancaster’s ambush.

“Ah... that’s...” Fermin muttered and stole a glance at Rachel.

Rachel wore a calm expression that seemed to say everyone could know the truth now.

“Xtra... you’ve heard of him, right?” Fermin asked them.

“So it was him.”

The guild members didn’t overreact and already seemed to know, which surprised Fermin.

They weren’t surprised at all after hearing his name?

Fermin waved and blurted something even more shocking.

“No, no, no, there’s something else too. I thought about it and...”

“What is it?”

“I mean... I think this mercenary has a crush on Vice Leader...”

“A crush? You mean he likes her?”

“Yeah, it’s just my speculation though.”

The guild members glared at Fermin, but Rachel briefly flinched and pretended to be nonchalant about it.

“Hey, listen to me. Ah, you should listen too, Vice Leader. It’s...”

Fermin tried to spell out the things she noticed until now.

Why did a skilled mercenary like Xtra accept this request for a meager 700 million won? Definitely not for the fame since the English Royal Court lacked prestige. It only made sense if Xtra liked Rachel, so he decided to help.

“Isn’t it convincing?”

The guild members all turned to Rachel again when Fermin finished explaining.

Rachel flinched and placed down the meat she prepared to eat.

“No, rather than that...”

Ring! Ring! Ring!

An alarm from their smartwatches interrupted Rachel.

“What’s this?”

“Isn’t this our watch alarm?”

“Why would our watches ring?”

Electronic devices didn’t work in Central Asia, so they only used their smartwatches to tell time. However, they suddenly received a message just now.

[This is a message from the General Assembly.]

[Congratulations, the English Royal Court guild has passed the first trial.]

[Please click the link below to check your general assembly license.]

“Trial... then is this something the association prepared?”

One of the guild members asked, but none of them knew.

* * *

Meanwhile, I worked on turning the viper's hide into leather armor in my helicopter. The viper's hide possessed great durability and high magic resistance, so it would make for useful equipment.

"This should do the trick."

I completed the [Viper Leather Armor] that covered my shoulder down to my waist.

Stigma took care of the tedious tasks like tanning, stitching, and soldering. The results undoubtedly turned out spectacular. Its Roman mythology design also pleased the eye thanks to Young Dwarf's Dexterity.

"How do I give this to...?"

I wanted to gift it to Rachel, but had no justifications to do so. Also, she probably wouldn't accept it for free judging from her personality. I couldn't use it anymore since I made it to fit a smaller woman.

"Ah, why the hell did I have such a dream?"

I had a strange dream last night. I saw a younger Rachel that looked exactly like Evandel. She was with Lancaster, who hadn't been corrupted yet. She seemed much more cheerful than now and Lancaster also held great affection towards her and his country. The dream felt so vivid, which made it all the more unfortunate. It made me pity Rachel.

Diring! Diring!

"Ah, that surprised me!"

My smartwatch suddenly rang.

Huh? What's this? Did communications work in Central Asia?

I composed myself and checked the message.

[This is a message from the General Assembly.]

[Congratulations, the English Royal Court guild has passed the first trial.]

[Please click the link below to check your general assembly license.]

“General assembly license?”

I clicked the link.

[You are affiliated with the English Royal Court.]

[Your name has been set as Xtra.]

[Please click here to check your license.]

“What the hell is this?”

— Can you hear me?

Rachel suddenly contacted me.

“Yeah, I can hear you.”

— Yes, what I wanted to say is...

“The general assembly license?”

— Yes, it's about that. We just received the message, but I have no idea what it means. You're also included.

Rachel said while sounding troubled.

I clicked on the [General Assembly License].

[General Assembly License]

[Name: Xtra] [Contribution Rank: A +] [Affiliation: English Royal Court] [Type: Assassin, Observer] [Relationship: N/A]

This license is required to enter the general assembly. *The holder of this license may use the facilities under their affiliation. You are affiliated with the English Royal Court.

“Haha...”

I could only laugh in disbelief.

Aside from the general assembly, I had discarded this license from my story a long time ago.

* * *

“See, I told you.”

Aileen stared at the holographic screen in a mysterious hall with a large dome above. The extravagant walls featured blue crystals that made the entire place sparkle.

“Essence of the Strait will take the top spot.”

[1. Essence of the Strait]

As expected, Essence of the Strait led by Chae Nayun received the [General Assembly License] first and Creator’s Sacred Grace led by Yun Seung-ah and Kim Suho came in second.

Everything went according to Aileen’s prediction.

“They say the English Royal Court came in 17th. Have you looked into it?” Jin Seyeon asked Aileen.

As one of the association’s top heroes, Jin Seyeon had also been requested to be one of the general assembly’s overseer.

Aileen shook her head. “No, why even bother? They only have Rachel, right?”

“Still, I suggest looking into it. The mercenary they hired seems quite peculiar.”

“Why? Is there something about that mercenary?”

“Hmm... Take a look for yourself.”

Jin Seyeon pulled up a screen in mid-air.

The holographic screen displayed [1. Chae Nayun] followed by [2. Kim Suho]. This chart listed the ranking each participant individually obtained during the march.

This ranking had been made by the general assembly and not the association, so everything would be fair.

[8. Xtra]

► Killed High-Intermediate Rank Monster, Viper.

► Unknown Ambush, Killed: 13

► Contribution Rank: A +

“Huh? A mercenary killed a viper alone? What’s with the unknown ambush? He fought against djinns?”

A fully-grown adult viper could be considered a high-intermediate, rank 1 monster. A mercenary couldn’t possibly handle it alone. However, this mercenary did and also killed numerous other enemies.

“That’s not an ordinary mercenary.”

“You’re right. He’s the only mercenary who got a license. Seems like he got it through his affiliation with the English Royal Court.”

“Oh, really? Then did the general assembly make a mistake?”

“I have no idea. However, the English Royal Court only had 11 members participating since one of them dropped out. I think they added that mercenary to fill the vacancy.”

“Hmm...”

Aileen crossed her arms and pondered. She chose to let it be since the General Assembly decided everything that happened here.

“Let’s just observe for now. After all, no one has any idea what this General Assembly really is.”

The general assembly that established a huge field in Central Asia turned out to be a being, which no one could have predicted.

Correct, the General Assembly could think and communicate like a human. It reached out and contacted the association first.

[Hello, I am a large field created in Central Asia. My name is the General Assembly...]

The email began like that. The contents felt like such a ridiculous joke that they marked it as spam and deleted it repeatedly.

Could it be some sort of living computer or an advanced artificial intelligence? If not, then could a field suddenly possess intellect?

Aileen had no idea. All the mysteries surrounding the General Assembly would only be resolved once the event officially began.

“They’ll be here any time now.”

Aileen spoke when...

Creaaaak—

The two heroes turned towards the opening doors as twelve more heroes entered: Chae Nayun, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Jinah, Yi Jiyeon, etc. These renowned heroes all belonged to Korea's top guild, Essence of the Strait.

"Hello! It's been a while, hasn't it?"

Aileen smiled at them.

* * *

"Is this... the second trial?"

The English Royal Court faced an overwhelming obstacle during their march.

This gigantic maze seemed like it had been built by giants or ogres due to its sheer size. It had 5 meter thick walls that rose 20 meters in height.

"This is... who knows?"

— Don't enter and wait for me.

The communication crystal flashed as Xtra spoke. All eyes immediately darted to Rachel. She suddenly felt nervous for no reason because of all the attention.

— It'll be best if you rest for today.

"Rest? Rest here?"

— Yeah, you haven't fully recovered from your mana exhaustion, right? Take a break. I also have something to give you.

"Something to give? To me?"

— Yeah.

Rachel tried to say something, but couldn't find the words as her guild members curiously stared at her with sleazy eyes. They seemed excited about something.

“W-Why?”

Rachel asked and couldn't think of anything else to say.

— I collected some herbs to help you recover. There's a lake nearby. You should go there and...

Xtra continued speaking, but Rachel cut off their communication. She felt somewhat uncomfortable with the current situation.

“Hehehe. Yeah, I guess we should listen to him and rest for now.”

Marcus said with a sleazy grin. He acted quite sly today for some odd reason.

“Please don't smile like that.”

Rachel muttered before turning around and leading the group towards the lake according to Xtra's instructions.

Side Stories 13

Dream in a Dream (13)

A rugged mountain range surrounded the lake that Xtra mentioned. The scenery perfectly suited Central Asia where the environment constantly changed.

The English Royal Court set up camp near the lake. They used the towering trees above as a canopy and the soft grass underneath as a cushion. Their camp turned out quite comfortable.

“Isn’t this something like being in bed with your enemy? We have to catch Xtra after the general assembly, right?”

“It’s still murder no matter how bad the person is. A mercenary doesn’t have the right to enforce the law.”

Marcus and the other guild members whispered. Their conversation caught Rachel’s attention, but she pretended not to hear.

She didn’t have the luxury to think about anything else when every second counted. Currently, she practiced communicating with her spirits while sitting in a lotus position behind the trees. However, she decided to abandon her attempts after their conversation from a distance away broke her concentration.

“Haaa...”

It would be difficult unless she recovered from her mana exhaustion. She felt frustrated since she couldn’t even perform the most basic step of circulating her mana. The flow had been blocked for some reason.

Rachel sulked while sitting on the ground. She opened and closed her fist a few times.

“Vice Leader?”

Fermin called out while looking at the license details on her smartwatch.

“What do you think this license is for?”

She asked Rachel.

[General Assembly License] [▶ Name: Fermin Kirby] [▶ Contribution Rank: D +] [▶ Affiliation: English Royal Court] [▶ Type: Healer] [▶ Relationship: N/A]

*[*This license is required to enter the general assembly. The holder of this license may use the facilities under their affiliation. You are affiliated with the English Royal Court.]

She knew they required it to enter the general assembly, but couldn’t make heads or tails of the other details.

Seems like it has some other uses since it allows us to access some sort of facilities.

“Who knows... For now—”

“Ack!”

“Kyak!”

Fermin screamed and Rachel jumped in surprise.

“Look... Look at this, Vice Leader!” Fermin exclaimed while holding a card.

Rachel tilted her head at the card that suddenly appeared.

“It came out of my smartwatch!” Fermin exclaimed while getting all worked up.

“What? How did you do that?”

“Here, it says [Convert to real object]. Try pressing it.”

“Oh...”

A stick flew out of nowhere and struck Rachel’s waist.

“What! Is it an ambush?”

Fermin instantly jumped and prepared her mana.

However, Rachel stopped her since she knew who shot this stick.

Xtra’s voice came through the communication crystal.

— I made it from various herbs. It’s stronger than a potion since I haven’t filtered it, but there’s nothing better than that to help you recover.

A vial had been tied to the end of the stick.

The guild members gathered around after hearing the commotion. They all looked at the vial with a green liquid.

“Thank you.”

Rachel replied before cutting off their communication.

The guild members stared at her with faces that seemed to say: Is this what they call pouring out one’s heart? Where the hell did he find these medicinal herbs? Our Vice Leader sure has the moves.

Rachel had no idea what they would say, so she decided to remain silent.

“I’ll head back first. I hope all of you rest well.”

She ran away to her tent with the vial.

Rachel immediately zipped up her tent after entering and inspected the vial. It only contained a few drops that gave off a sinister glow.

“Hoo...”

She couldn't be picky about whether it tasted bitter or sweet. Rachel took a few deep breaths before drinking the entire bottle all at once.

“...!”

It tasted unimaginably horrible and felt like a rotten insect slithered down her throat.

“Ah... Bleu... Bleurgh!”

Rachel squirmed at the horrid taste. She suppressed the desire to throw up and withstood it for five whole minutes until her mind began working again.

— I already told you it would taste bad.

Xtra transmitted another message while Rachel coughed in disgust and downed a glass of water.

— Do you feel better now?

She coughed a few more times before checking her body's condition. The liquid had cleared up her clogged vessels and her mana began circulating like normal again.

Rachel nodded in satisfaction.

“Yes, I feel better now thanks to you.”

— Then take out your license.

“My license?”

— Yeah, I'll tell you how to use it.

Rachel took out her license and pressed [Convert to real life object] on her smartwatch like Fermin.

“You mean the [Convert to real life object] part?”

— I see you figured it out already.

“Yes, I just found out.”

— Aside from that, the rank and form of your license will change depending on how much contribution you rack up. You can get whatever you want with that card. It doesn't matter as long as you've made enough contributions. On top of that, you'll be able to use the guild's vault to...

Rachel paid special attention and made a mental note of every word Xtra said.

* * *

[A miraculous field that will grant you any wish and desire!]

[Welcome to the General Assembly!]

[The general assembly meeting will soon begin! Please look forward to entering the field!]

The General Assembly sent a message that sounded like spam mail to their smartwatches. Their smartwatches became the General Assembly's plaything where no electronic devices were supposed to work.

“It must be referring to...” Chae Nayun muttered while looking at her smartwatch.

The words, miraculous field, seemed a bit strange. She felt certain the Miracle Stone's fragment had to be around here.

“Nayun, snap out of it and come over here? Take a look at this.”

Yoo Yeonha called her.

Essence of the Strait entered the general assembly and unpacked their luggage in their assigned rooms. The two of them became roommates again after a long time.

“What is it?”

“Look at this.”

Yoo Yeonha said while touching the [General Assembly License]. Then a pack of ramen suddenly fell out from the card.

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened in surprise. “What was that? How did you do that?”

“It said a reward I wanted would be given based on my contribution. I thought of this and it appeared out of nowhere.”

“Okay, but why did you suddenly think of ramen?”

“Huh?”

Yoo Yeonha flinched and began stuttering with a fake laugh.

“I know right? I wonder why. Haha... Ha... I don’t know. Anyways, I’m looking forward to what will happen during this general assembly.”

“Really?”

“Yeah, and this ramen is... It’s really nothing, you know? Maybe I should just throw it away.”

“No, just give it to me. I feel like having one after a long time.”

“Huh? Ah... Come on. Why would you eat ramen? Do you want to get indigestion? It's alright. I'll throw it away."

"No, I already told you. Don't throw it away. Besides, I'm not as sensitive as I used to be when it comes to food."

"I said it's fine."

Yoo Yeonha hid the ramen in her backpack and wiped her drool before smiling again.

"I should go and prepare for the meeting."

Yoo Yeonha sounded quite awkward.

Chae Nayun couldn't help but respect her.

Yoo Yeonha became a successful businesswoman and also reached greater heights as a hero. She seemed to be around high-intermediate rank now.

"Do you want to come with me, Nayun?"

"Huh? No, you know I'm not good with those things."

"I guess..."

Yoo Yeonha took out a communication crystal and relayed her orders to Seoul in the middle of the night while everyone slept. She racked her brains and made all sorts of calculations to guide them during the day, but never once showed any exhaustion. Of course, this wasn't the real Yoo Yeonha. However, she could be considered the same person since it formed from her consciousness.

"Hey, aren't you tired? You haven't slept the entire week," Nayun asked out of concern.

"I'm fine since I brought my bed with me," Yoo Yeonha replied with a satisfied smile.

“Bed? Ah, that bed you went crazy for and spent a fortune on?”

“Hey, what do you mean I went crazy and spent a fortune?”

Rumors had it that Yoo Yeonha spent billions of won on a bed, but she always furrowed her brows and dismissed that rumor.

“Don’t you know what Jinzel is? It’s the most premium furniture on Earth. They released a new bed and I barely managed to buy it through an auction. I didn’t want my lack of sleep to get in the way, so I decided to bring it with me. It’ll be a disaster if something happens to it.”

Yoo Yeonha proudly displayed the bed she kept in her spatial backpack.

Kim Hajin crafted this small bed with [Young Dwarf’s Dexterity] and sold it after using it for four days.

“Ah, I shouldn’t have taken it out. Now I feel like lying down on it.”

Yoo Yeonha grumbled and proceeded to sniff the bed sheets. Then she lay on it with a blissful look.

Chae Nayun tilted her head.

“Why did you sniff it just now?”

“What do you mean?”

“You sniffed it just now.”

“What are you talking about?”

It seemed Yoo Yeonha subconsciously did it out of habit without realizing it.

Chae Nayun bitterly smiled, but Yoo Yeonha ignored her and went under a blanket.

“I’m going to take a nap since I’m already here.”

“Sure, goodnight.”

“Yeah, then...”

Snore...

Yoo Yeonha fell fast asleep after lying down and displayed a truly enviable sleeping ability.

Chae Nayun observed her for a moment and took out the Miracle Stone.

“Phew~”

She recalled bits of the past when she looked at this small crystal glowing golden. These memories made up who she was right now. However, she would have to say goodbye to this world after completing the crystal. She would leave for another world that she didn’t know yet.

Will I be able to do good then? Will I not end up regretting things and finally become happy?

Chae Nayun sat by the window and looked at the sky. Stars littered the night sky here where civilization ceased to exist.

“I wonder how many of them there are?”

She began counting the stars and remembered a precious person whenever she counted one. Someone she wanted to see again, someone she would never see again, someone she loved, someone she hated, someone she felt grateful to, someone she despised...

Surprisingly, she could only think of one person while counting the stars.

The English Royal Court stood in front of the maze two days later. It looked as if numerous skyscrapers towered above and they felt overwhelmed just looking up. However, they didn't feel anxious or scared because they simply had to find the right path.

“Let's enter.”

Rachel led her guild members inside. She almost fully recovered from her mana exhaustion after resting for two days. Her body felt fine again thanks to the ricorit they ate.

“Yes, ma'am!”

“Let's go.”

The English Royal Court marched through the maze.

“Well, it looks big, but I guess there's nothing special.”

Fermin inspected the walls up and down.

Nothing seemed out of the ordinary after they entered. Just walls on both sides and dirt beneath their feet.

— Turn right from there.

“We're turning right at the fork ahead.”

Rachel led them according to Xtra's instructions.

— Turn left for now.

“We're turning left. No, we're taking the right path.”

She said before pausing.

“It's the left and not the right?”

— Relax, I won't tease you anymore.

“...”

They proceeded through the maze without much difficulty.

Some guild members who seemed slightly nervous at first already loosened up and chatted among themselves. They mostly talked about the delicious ricorit they ate and the attribute combination their vice leader awakened.

Rachel feigned disinterest while eavesdropping. She picked out her achievements from their conversation.

Then the environment suddenly changed. The dirt ground with debris became red bricks. It didn't concern them at first, but they also came across familiar objects like a fallen statue, a rotten pond, marble tiles, etc.

“What is all of this?” Marcus asked.

“Ah, it must be that. A civilization used to be here, right? Maybe these are its remnants?” Fermin replied.

The two of them agreed, but Rachel could feel the hostility in the air. She took out the communication crystal and sent Xtra a message.

“Where are we supposed...?”

The crystal had turned black, which indicated they had lost contact. Xtra had gone silent for a while now, but she thought that meant they simply had to head straight.

“Vice Leader, is something wrong?”

Fermin asked when she saw Rachel's face turning pale.

Rachel knew everyone would only grow nervous if they found out.

“Nothing.”

She replied and hid the communication crystal. Then she summoned her spirit and sent Windy to scout ahead for any dangers. They would march on if it was safe.

“This place is giving me the creeps.”

“We should stay alert. Right, Karen and Dale?”

“Okay, I’m ready to buff anytime.”

Rachel heightened her senses with every step.

The surroundings felt familiar the more she walked, which should be impossible in Central Asia. This strange sense of familiarity made her even more on edge.

“...”

She suddenly stopped in front of a crushed signpost and made out some English words on it.

[Henry VIII...]

Henry the Eighth.

Rachel froze and felt as if the ground underneath her would collapse. Her eyes lost focus and her heart turned cold.

This place remained a trauma in her heart. A nightmare where thousands of innocent civilians died, but she alone survived. Hampton Palace.

“This place feels somewhat familiar?”

The guild members caught on as well. Any England citizen would remember that incident.

The situation suddenly turned for the worst. A lump of red mana gathered in the distance and everyone immediately pulled out their weapons without a word.

Rachel absent-mindedly stared at the ground and slowly raised her head.

Dozens of assailants in black robes appeared on top of the ruined old palace. All of them emitted a strong killing intent and looked like the ones who ambushed them before.

One of the assailants glanced over before making a sleazy smile.

“That annoying bastard seems to be gone. Good job.”

They must be referring to Xtra.

Rachel thought as she forced herself to keep standing.

“Vice Leader, are you alright?” Fermin worriedly asked.

Rachel reassured her, but grew nauseous at this traumatic scenery from hell.

“Vice Leader?”

“I’m fine.”

Rachel steeled her resolve. Nothing would change if she ran away. She had to protect her guild members as their vice leader.

“Princess, do you remember me?” a voice suddenly asked.

Rachel didn’t respond. No, she couldn’t.

The voice didn’t belong to Lancaster, but someone else Rachel knew. She had memorized the names of all the mothers, fathers, and children massacred in that incident. She had resolved to carry that burden for the rest of her life.

Correct, the assailants in front of her were none other than them.

Side Stories 14

Dream in a Dream (14)

The nightmare that Rachel painstakingly tried to bury resurfaced. She felt the prickly sensation of being stabbed all over her skin. This pain from her imagination spread like wildfire throughout her body.

She could only tighten her grip around Galatine.

“It seems you’ve forgotten about us as you enjoy your life,” the robed man said.

That couldn’t be further from the truth. Rachel never forgot what happened for even a second. She lived while suppressing those memories all this time. She had no intention of forgetting, but her body always became a mess whenever she recalled that event. The trauma from that day became etched on her heart and mind like any other mental illness.

“You are disgusting... really... disgusting...”

The man said while emitting obvious killing intent towards her.

The guild members readied their weapons, but Rachel couldn’t bring herself to cut down those people.

“We... because of you...”

The man couldn’t say any more than that.

These people didn’t have the luxury to chat and reminisce. They simply gathered their mana with their mouths shut. Then hundreds of flames and blades gathered in the air.

Some assailants cast their spells while others didn’t require such casting. They completed various magic circles and chants before flinging their spells at the targets.

Rachel swung Galatine and erected a sword barrier. She called her spirits to protect her guild members.

Boom!

The spells and sword collided with a blast. Remnants of mana scattered through the air and a ferocious shockwave shook the ground. Beautiful red and blue sparks danced in mid-air and captivated some of the guild members.

No one would win this neck-and-neck fight. Rachel wanted to ask if their anger would be alleviated if she offered her head. Would they let her guild members go and forgive England's innocent citizens? She would gladly offer her life if it could appease their anger.

No, she just wanted to give up at this point. She wanted to finally be free from the overwhelming sadness and fatigue every day. Such weak thoughts penetrated her heart.

Guoooh...

A lump of mana gathered. The same lump without any intricate chants or magic circles that ambushed them a while back. It had no form or order and simply destroyed everything in its path.

"Everyone, stand back."

Rachel calmly ordered her guild members. She knew that lump of mana would only chase after her.

"We can't do that... Eugh!"

"Ack!"

The guild members refused to obey, but she already summoned Windy and pushed them far away.

Gwuoooooh!

The mana coming after her turned everything in its path to dust.

Rachel looked straight at the incoming mana and didn't run from those who sought vengeance. She gathered her mana and spirits into Galatine.

However, someone suddenly intruded.

Dududududu!

A large object fell from the sky and slanted down in front of Rachel as if to protect her from the incoming attack.

“...?”

Rachel stared at the object that seemed made out of steel and initially thought the mana wave would instantly disintegrate it.

Shwaaaaa!

However, the object endured the attack. Not only that, it even deflected the mana away.

“What in the world is that?” Rachel muttered in disbelief.

The lump of mana shrank after the steel object blocked it. Soon, a person came down from the sky and landed on top of the steel object.

Rachel looked at the person's face, but couldn't make anything out because he wore a gas mask that covered his entire face. However, everyone else knew.

“Go, I'll take care of this.”

The mercenary they hired, Xtra, finally appeared.

Rachel didn't want to run away though and Xtra grumbled in frustration after seeing her hesitate.

“You know very well you can’t fight against them. Those guys will keep targeting England even if you offer your head today. What do you expect from those harboring grudges against you who never questioned their own methods? Do you really think they’ll stop just because you’re dead? You’ll only make it easier for them to destroy England without its protector.”

Rachel thought Xtra’s voice sounded familiar. He sounded different from when he spoke through the communication crystal. However, she didn’t have the luxury to recall where she heard this voice before as her guild members rushed over.

Xtra looked at Rachel.

“Steel your resolve. It’s not your fault that you survived, so...”

A blade suddenly flew towards him. Xtra twisted his body and avoided it, but the blade partly caught his gas mask.

Rachel could see his eyes through the small broken portion of his mask.

“Don’t get in my way and get lost.”

Xtra took out a small object that resembled a dog and extended it to them.

“Take it with you. It’ll lead the way.”

Fermin took the dog-like machine from him. The mercenary also took out a smoke grenade from his pocket.

Boom!

The smoke grenade exploded and formed a smokescreen. This thick smokescreen made out of black smoke instead of gray made it difficult to see anything.

The guild members grabbed Rachel while the smokescreen covered them.

“Vice Leader, you better be ready to deal with the mutiny if you do something like that again.”

“Wait, let me go—”

Rachel resisted.

“I am suppressing my urge to smack you right now.”

“What did you just say? Ack!”

One of the guild members flicked her forehead.

“You’re just a kid eight years younger than me, so don’t make me angry ma’am. Vice Leader was probably only eleven years old when I graduated from the academy, right?”

“Darren finally said something correct after a long time.”

The guild members Rachel betrayed just a while ago sternly warned her before dragging her away and chasing after Xtra’s mechanical dog.

* * *

I quickly realized the English Royal Court fell into a trap. This barrier separated space and the enemies created an entrance and an exit to trap Rachel. I couldn’t enter from above on my helicopter.

I immediately lowered my flying altitude and rushed towards the barrier’s entrance.

The situation already reached a boiling point when I infiltrated the barrier. The mana wave charged at Rachel and she planned on taking it head-on.

I didn’t have time to think and immediately threw my helicopter towards her. It came crashing down in front of her and blocked the mana wave.

“Who are you to meddle in our business?”

I managed to help them escape, but the enemies surrounded me now.

“Do you think you can handle us by yourself?” one of the assailants who looked like their leader asked.

I snickered in response. “Why? Are you upset an extra suddenly barged in and ruined your plans?”

I went ahead without thinking, but I wondered how I would fight against all of them too. Of course, I didn’t come here without any plans. I had at least one trick up my sleeve.

The system gave me a gift when Rachel finally awakened her attribute combination.

[Tower of Wish’s Bonus – You have received a trait inheritance!]

[You have inherited one item stored in the player’s storage!]

Inherited Item ► [Dark Ore Arrow]

[Dark Ore Arrow]

— A mysterious arrow crafted by a dwarf from the highest grade dark ore.

— List of effects:

1. [High Destructiveness]

2. [High Penetration]

3. [High Shadow Trajectory]

4. [High-Intermediate Magic Destruction]

5. [Intermediate Controlled Homing]

This arrow possessed an effect I never heard of called controlled homing.

I still struggled with the amazing [Black Lotus Bow] because I didn't have a decent arrow for it, but now things had changed.

"You dare intrude upon us when you aren't even related to this!" the man angrily shouted.

I found this quite amusing. The foreigner spoke in Korean and the fact that he said I wasn't related to this amused me even more since I created this world. This world only existed thanks to me, so what did he mean that I wasn't related?

"Is it affection? Did you fall for that princess in distress? Are you protecting her because of shallow emotions such as love?"

I didn't bother replying since an extra didn't have any lines in the first place.

"Your affection won't be reciprocated. That woman can't love anybody. She has to endure the guilt of a thousand vengeful spirits. Her heart is tainted with their wails and grudges. The only thing that awaits her is betrayal and ruin."

I silently nocked the arrow.

His words held some truth. It only slightly surprised me. After all, I created the setting for Rachel's cruel destiny.

"The princess will betray you in the end. That's her destiny."

"What kind of bullshit have you been spouting, retarded bastard?" I grumbled under my breath and immediately shot the arrow.

The arrow disappeared into the black fog without a sound. It pierced someone's forehead before another person's heart. Then it continued traveling until it snapped someone else's spine and returned to me.

Three seemed to be my limit for now since I hadn't grown accustomed to this arrow yet.

"Kill him!" the man shouted.

They managed to gather their mana and finished casting their spells while the man spoke.

Hundreds of spells flew towards me.

"Argh!"

A blade managed to pierce my shoulder and I felt an excruciating pain.

"Kuhahahahaha!"

The bastard laughed after hearing me groan. His laughter sounded quite unpleasant.

"Ah, you pushed me too far..."

Finally, I would use all the SP I saved up until now.

* * *

The English Royal Court silently followed the mechanical dog until they left the maze.

They could somewhat make out the huge palace in the distance. It had four huge spires guarding the north, east, south, and west. It also had a huge dome for a ceiling. The general assembly would take place there.

Rachel didn't utter a word and looked back at the maze.

“Vice Leader, we have to go...” Fermin told her.

Rachel nodded and began walking again.

The English Royal Court finally reached the gates after walking for two hours. They didn’t have to travel too far, but monsters like rekols, tigers, and wolves hampered them along the way.

“I’ll open it now,” Rachel said.

“Yes, Vice Leader.”

Rachel placed her hand on the huge door.

Creak...

It automatically opened when she touched it.

“What...”

“Wow...”

The guild members became speechless with wide-opened mouths. They looked around the place filled with jewels. Enchanting crystals covered the floor tiles to the ceiling.

Two people stood at the hall’s center waiting for them and their presence filled the vast hall. Anyone in the world would recognize Aileen and Jin Seyeon.

“Oh? Nice to meet you,” Aileen nonchalantly said.

The eleven guild members stared at Aileen. They had never seen her before in person. She looked so small and cute. They doubted if this was really the infamous Little Devil Aileen from the Temple of Justice.

“I guess all of you somehow managed to succeed despite your skills. Well, you can go over there.”

Aileen pointed at the northern corridor.

Rachel nodded and prepared to lead her guild members away when Aileen raised a brow and asked.

“Come to think of it, where’s that mercenary you hired?”

All the guild members couldn’t hide their surprise as they looked at Aileen.

How did Aileen know about Xtra? Was everything a test from the association? Was Lancaster a part of their test too?

Aileen shook her head.

“No, it’s nothing like that. There’s no test or anything. Look at your smartwatches. I think the general assembly should’ve sent you a message by now.”

The guild members all looked at their smartwatches.

[A miraculous field that will grant you any wish and desire!]

[Welcome to the General Assembly!]

[The general assembly will begin tomorrow now that twenty teams have gathered! Please look forward to entering the field!]

“What does this mean?” Rachel asked.

“What else? It’s the general assembly. The one that called you and the one that recruited me was none other than the General Assembly. This place is ruled by the General Assembly, which possesses intelligence equal to or surpassing that of a human.”

Aileen nonchalantly explained to them.

However, Rachel couldn’t understand.

“Then that means...” Rachel continued to mutter.

“Ah, shut up. Look for your own answers and don’t annoy me,” Aileen retorted quite rudely.

Actually, Aileen hated any woman ten centimeters taller than her. Also, Aileen self-reported her own height to be 157.1 cm.

“Ah... haha... Welcome, everyone from the English Royal Court.”

Jin Seyeon welcomed them in a completely different manner than Aileen.

“Thank you...”

However, the English Royal Court’s atmosphere seemed gloomy.

Aileen and Jin Seyeon might be famous celebrities, but the guild members didn’t have the energy to be starstruck or excited about meeting them.

“Ehem... I guess you had a tough time. Haha... Why don’t you follow me?”

Jin Seyeon awkwardly scratched her neck and politely guided them to their accommodations.

Their living place looked clean and favorable. It featured a spacious living room with six bedrooms. Most importantly, it had three bathrooms as well. The guild members snapped out of their sorrows after seeing the toilet and shower, which they didn’t have for an entire week.

“You may rest until you receive another message. We don’t know when it’ll arrive, so please keep your smartwatch alarms on. I’ll excuse myself for now and come back later once you’ve rested.”

Jin Seyeon left them at their lodging.

First, the guild members unpacked. Of course, silence ensued the entire time.

“...”

Rachel went to her room alone. She sat on the bed with the communication crystal in her hand, but it remained disconnected.

“Hoo...”

She let out a depressed sigh.

Rachel had caught a glimpse of Xtra through the crack on his gas mask. His eyes looked familiar. Not only that, his voice sounded familiar too.

Rachel believed in her ability to remember people she once met. She rarely made a mistake when it came to recognizing people. However, she couldn't place her finger on where she met this person before. Not to mention, he didn't seem related to her at all.

— I'm one of your fans.

She suddenly recalled him saying that and faintly remembered where she heard this before. However, she must be mistaken. That person wouldn't continue watching over her from so far away. Also, a lot of people looked like that person since he had a fairly average face. Yes, she must've made a mistake. Besides, that person used a gun instead of a bow.

Rachel gripped the communication crystal with both hands while gritting her teeth and blaming herself. No matter what the situation might've been, she dragged someone innocent to their demise once again.

Creak...

Someone carefully opened the door and entered as Rachel blamed herself. Fermin slowly walked over and sat next to Rachel.

Rachel glanced at her, but didn't say anything. Neither said a word for some time as they sat in silence.

"You're aware of it, right?"

Fermin broke the silence first and spoke in a gentle tone. She fiddled with her thumbs before continuing.

"My mother passed away at that place too..."

"..."

Rachel raised her head and looked at Fermin. Of course, she had known.

Fermin bitterly smiled.

"I resented Vice Leader at the time. No, I despised the entire country and cried a lot because of it."

Her smile disappeared as she shook her head. She honestly spoke like always.

"However, that's no longer the case. It wasn't your fault, Vice Leader. The nation was responsible, but... isn't all that in the past?"

Fermin looked at Rachel, who quietly sat like a criminal atoning for her sin.

'I'm surrounded by people who are too nice to me... '

Rachel thought to herself.

"This is what I think. I understand resenting someone, but it's wrong to seek vengeance against that person. Vengeance begets vengeance. It'll never end well. It's impossible for one person to end such a cycle. Both parties must put an end to it."

Fermin placed her hand on Rachel's and Rachel could feel her warmth.

“Vice Leader remembered me and my mother. You didn’t forget my mother and I don’t resent you anymore.”

Rachel looked at Fermin with tearful eyes and Fermin continued in a trembling voice.

“So it’s time for Vice Leader to stop resenting yourself. Nothing will change just because you resent and blame yourself.”

“...”

“Do you understand?”

They stared at each other when Fermin suddenly squealed.

“Ughkyak!”

“Kyak! W-What is it?”

“The crystal! Look at the communication crystal!”

Fermin exclaimed while pointing at the crystal in Rachel’s hand.

It glowed bright blue again.

Side Stories 15

Dream in a Dream (15)

I didn't even have the chance to catch my breath during the intense battle. The number of blades coming at me felt infinite. I shot them down with my Desert Eagle, but they kept coming with no end. It felt like playing a shooting game.

“Argh...”

I didn't have the luxury to think about what gift to create because of the barrage of blades. Of course, I thought of a few like Kim Suho's Sword Saint, Aileen's Spirit Speech, Yoo Jinwoong's Berserker, Kwang Won's Splitting Earth, etc.

However, those powerful gifts required an insane amount of SP. I had nowhere near enough.

[SP: 3,975]

I needed a gift that could help with my current predicament. Something that cost slightly less than four thousand SP. I could think of only one.

[Spirit Stone Master]

The power of a spirit wasn't a bad gift. Only a handful could use this unique power in the world. It also synchronized well with a gun and bow.

I calmed my breathing and activated bullet time. Then I immediately activated [Settings Intervention] while defending myself as time slowed.

[Spirit Stone Master] [Unique]

► Spirit Stone

— A stone filled with a spirit's power. The user may summon a spirit as long as they possess this stone.

► Master of the Stone

— The user will gain proficiency in handling the Spirit Stone as its master.

I added the restriction, as long as they possess this stone, to maximize its power. I also added the effect, gain proficiency in handling, so I could use it right away.

[All of your SP has been consumed to create the gift, Spirit Stone Master.]

[Your luck has accumulated for five years and has finally activated!]

[The gift has been greatly improved!]

[The Spirit Stone has grown bigger and its effect has been amplified!]

Thud!

A large rock the size of a meteorite fell from the sky.

“Ah, what the fuck is this?”

I cursed without even realizing it. That huge rock would be impossible to carry, so how the hell could this be considered lucky?

However, I didn't have the luxury to feel wronged as I placed one hand on the Spirit Stone and held the Desert Eagle in the other. I naturally realized how to use the Spirit Stone thanks to the second phrase, The user will gain proficiency in handling the Spirit Stone as its master.

I loaded my magazine with the wind spirit and immediately pulled the trigger.

Kaboom!

The bullet infused with the wind spirit penetrated the enemy spells. A blast of air followed the bullet from above and below. This threw off their spells and scattered them throughout the area.

I used this opening to pull my bowstring.

“Keuk!”

“Argh!”

The [Dark Ore Arrow] took down two of them and the bullet’s wind pressure blocked their counterattacks.

The shooting game’s difficulty drastically decreased thanks to the Spirit Stone and this ranged battle slowly tilted in my favor.

“That damned bastard!”

The assailants raged as they gathered their mana to cast another mana wave.

However, I had already prepared a countermeasure for that. I stuck close to the Spirit Stone and transformed my Desert Eagle into a machine gun. Then I pulled the trigger.

Dududududu!

The bullets fanned out and suddenly stopped in mid-air. The ones I shot first paused as more bullets lined up from behind. Then they all zoomed through the air like an inescapable net.

I called it, Land of the Wind. It functioned like the skill Rachel used last time, but I used a gun instead of a sword.

Shwaaaaa...

The wind encircled the mana wave. The Spirit Stone released a hot burst of light as its energy dwindled, but managed to sustain itself through sheer size.

“Keu... Keuk!”

“Ack!”

I shot the arrow again as the mana wave grew weaker. The assailants couldn't even cast a barrier before I shot them down.

One, two, three, and four... Their numbers rapidly dwindled. Soon, only one of them remained. I used the wind spirit to pull back his hood.

The old man had white hair and wrinkles that roughly told his age and how much he suffered throughout those years.

“...”

I aimed my gun at him before taking out the communication crystal to speak with Rachel, but the old man began spouting nonsense.

“You won't get anything out of me. Just kill me.”

“Is that so?”

I placed the communication crystal back into my pocket and stared at him.

Did Lancaster brainwash this old man or did he willingly become subservient? Regardless, I had to extract information from him.

“Why do you wish to kill Rachel?”

“Is that even a question? Are you in love with the princess without knowing what happened?”

“No, Rachel is already suffering so much because of it. Can't you see? She probably remembers your face, who you are, and who you lost in that tragedy.”

The old man seemed to expect such words and lashed back.

“Ha! Suffering? What did you say? Remember? I don’t give a damn what she does! I don’t care if she’s going through hell! Can she be in more pain than those that didn’t even have the chance to suffer?”

This man depended on Lancaster’s promise. He probably would’ve swallowed his anger and given up or taken his own life in my original world. However, this world had incredible power. One could always appease their anger or resentment if they offered their souls to a devil. Resentment and revenge abounded in this world for such a reason. Lancaster took advantage of their hatred and became a formidable enemy.

“Still, Rachel has been atoning and suffering for the past twenty years. She’s already pitiful enough. Don’t you think it’s time to at least forgive her?”

“No, only death can be her forgiveness. The princess has to die just like my daughter. No, she has to suffer even more than my daughter when I imagine how... how scared she must’ve been at that place!”

The old man couldn’t finish and began to uncontrollably weep. He looked completely different from a while ago when he continually shot mana at me.

“Is that so?”

I walked towards the weeping old man.

“That’s too bad,” I said.

Everyone in this world lived as if this wasn’t a novel. They thought as if this wasn’t a novel and died as if this wasn’t a novel. Only I looked at this world as just another novel.

“You see, I wish for the princess to be happy for a long time.”

Despite everything, I wished for my story to have a happy ending like those old fairytales.

“So I can’t let any of you go.”

I pulled the trigger.

Bang!

The gunshot echoed out and signaled the battle’s end.

Fog descended on the area.

“...”

I sighed before taking out the communication crystal, but it broke after being exposed to the huge amount of mana. I threw it away and its fragments scattered all over.

Then I looked at the sky. Countless stars stared down as if they had something to tell me, but I couldn’t hear what they wanted to say.

My hometown was probably further than those stars.

* * *

Bang!

“...!”

A loud gunshot echoed in the dead of night. Rachel woke up and jumped in fright.

“What the... ha...”

Her body trembled, but she still felt groggy. It seemed she managed to fall asleep after tossing and turning last night.

She sat on her bed and recalled the conversation she overheard through the communication crystal yesterday.

— Is that even a question? Are you in love with the princess without knowing what happened?

— No, Rachel is already suffering so much because of it. Can't you see? She probably remembers your face, who you are, and who you lost in that tragedy.

— You see, I wish for the princess to be happy for a long time. So I can't let any of you go.

Perhaps the communication crystal malfunctioned, but it relayed their voices for around three minutes before it broke.

Fermin had explained it to her.

“Well-made communication crystals tend to continue relaying messages for a few minutes before they're destroyed so the user can send an emergency message.”

Xtra's words seemed quite strange. It sounded as if he wanted to protect her.

“...”

Rachel's cheeks blushed after she recalled the event from last night. She immediately got up from bed and almost tripped on something. Fermin had been sleeping on the floor.

Rachel moved her to a bed and covered her with a blanket before leaving the room. The crystals brightly lit up the corridors even in the early morning.

She turned on the general assembly's map that they received on their smartwatches last night.

“Shop?”

Rachel spotted a shop not too far away. She had no idea what kind of shop, but wanted to take a look and distract herself.

[General Assembly Shop]

It had a signboard out front.

Creak...

An amazing sight greeted her when she opened the door. Countless shelves lined the walls and a hologram cashier managed the counter at the vast room's center.

— You may purchase magic items and books on swordsmanship.

The male merchant hologram said to the customer in front of him.

Rachel tiptoed and tried to steal a glance at the customer, but couldn't see their face because the counter obstructed her view.

"Then what's the most expensive thing here?" the customer asked.

Rachel's eyes widened when she heard the customer speak. It sounded too familiar and she heard this voice countless times at Cube.

— Beats me. I don't know what the most expensive item is because the General Assembly sells more than just my wares.

"Then what's the most expensive thing that you sell?"

— It's the Swordsmanship of Mythology.

"What? I don't need that. Don't you have anything else? You know, something like a stone fragment or something?"

— I apologize, but I don't have anything like a stone fragment. I suggest you try outside and pick it up from the streets.

"What did you just say, you bastard! Are you picking a fight with me?"

What do you mean you don't have it? I'll beat the living daylights out of you if I find it!"

The woman picking a fight with the hologram was none other than Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun pushed her hand through the hologram a few times before clicking her tongue in frustration. Then she turned around while grumbling and came face to face with Rachel.

"Huh?"

The two awkwardly reunited like that. Both of them became speechless after seeing each other. It had been a long time since they were rivals at Cube.

No, more like they didn't have anything to say to each other. However, Chae Nayun broke the silence first.

"It's been a long time."

"Yes, indeed it has."

"What? Hey, are you still speaking with honorifics? Why can't you just speak normally? You're getting on my nerves again."

Chae Nayun grumbled before looking behind Rachel.

Of course, Rachel came by herself.

Chae Nayun furrowed her brows and asked, "Hey, where's your mercenary?"

"Our mercenary is... How do you know about that?" Rachel asked with a hint of suspicion.

Chae Nayun briefly flinched with an expression that seemed to say, Darn it! She tried her best to explain in a sketchy manner.

“Isn’t it obvious? It’s Xtra, right? Rumors have already spread far and wide, you know?”

Rachel squinted at her. “Is that so? Well, he hasn’t caught up with us yet.”

“Oh, really?”

“Truth be told, he already accomplished his mission since we only hired him as a pathfinder.”

Rachel moved away from Chae Nayun and looked at the items on the shelves.

— Are you looking for anything specific? What do you think about these flowers since you look so beautiful?

“No thanks,” Rachel replied.

The store had many items that enticed her, but Rachel didn’t stay long because Chae Nayun kept pestering her.

Chae Nayun left as well while nonchalantly whistling from behind.

[Restaurant]

Rachel entered the restaurant next door after suddenly feeling hungry. The restaurant looked quite empty early in the morning, but...

Tadak!

Something busily moved. Rachel glanced at where the sound came from and saw someone covering their face while sitting in front of a ramyeon with rice in it.

“There’s only one person. Why did you come here? Are you hungry?” Chae Nayun asked from behind.

Rachel glanced at the person eating alone before replying when the restaurant door opened again.

“Huh?”

Rachel recognized them too. Their eyes widened when they saw her as well.

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan from Creator’s Sacred Grace, Reisläufer from Switzerland, Shen Wuiyan from China, etc.

Quite a lot of heroes entered the restaurant. Rachel greeted them before turning towards the lone diner eating a while ago.

“Huh?”

The man eating a ramyeon had disappeared without a trace.

What was that? A ghost? But why would a ghost eat ramyeon?

“Hey, what are you doing? Why are you here so early?”

Chae Nayun asked Kim Suho, who snickered in response.

“I received a message that the general assembly would begin soon. Rather than that, long time no see, Rachel.”

She hadn’t heard that voice in a long time. Kim Suho looked at her and she smiled before checking her smartwatch. As he said, they had all received a message.

[The general assembly will begin in two hours. I hope all of you will fill your bellies before coming to the meeting room at the center of the general assembly hall.]

* * *

Rachel and her guild members went to the [Meeting Room] when the sun rose. They discussed various strategies while heading there and agreed to request at least one beneficial thing for placing in the top twenty.

“Wow... What is this?”

“Is this place really...?”

They steeled their resolve and entered the meeting room only to be flabbergasted. They couldn't even close their mouths from the surprise.

The meeting room looked so unbelievable no one would dare to replicate it. The elegant and luxurious general assembly hall couldn't compare.

“Where should we sit?”

A large round table sat at the center of the meeting room that resembled a crystal cave. It had numerous seats for others to sit. Also, white crystals floated above the chairs for lighting.

Ding!

A message arrived on their smartwatches while they dumbfoundedly stared.

[Two representatives from each guild will sit at the round table while the others sit on the stands behind.]

[The first representative will be the guild's spokesperson while the other will be the one with the highest contribution rank.]

[The English Royal Court's representatives will be Rachel and Xtra.]

Rachel looked troubled when she read the message because she lost contact with Xtra last night.

“Vice Leader, we can go sit at the stands, right?”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“Yes, ma’am!”

The other guilds entered one by one.

Korea, China, America, Japan, Europe, etc.

The prestigious guilds from each country captivated the English Royal Court members.

“Ah, Yeonha! Long time no see. It’s an honor to meet you here. Is your father doing well?”

“Of course, he’s doing too good for his own sake.”

“Haha! I heard Essence of the Strait achieved a remarkable feat this time. I truly admire you. It was a surprise when I heard the news!”

“Ah, is that so? Was there really a need to be surprised though? We already expected such an outcome.”

Yoo Yeonha discussed business with those surrounding her. Every guild master or vice leader fought to meet her.

“My! Isn’t this Chae Nayun?”

“Ah, yes.”

“I saw the remarkable achievements you made during your last dungeon raid! You’re truly amazing!”

“Ah, yes. Indeed, I am a bit strong. No, I’m very strong.”

“They say a tiger begets a tiger.”

People also surrounded Chae Nayun, but she acted the total opposite of Yoo Yeonha.

Meanwhile, Rachel couldn’t help but feel jealous of them. She sat alone at the table and clawed at it with her nails. Nobody approached her in the end. Kim Suho spared her a glance, but couldn't approach as Yun Seung-Ah dragged him around.

A text appeared in mid-air when Rachel finally mustered the courage to stand up and socialize with everyone.

[Please be seated.]

[The general assembly will soon begin.]

The bustling room instantly settled and everyone returned to their seats.

Thirty-nine people sat at the round table while two hundred sat at the stands for a total of 239 attendees.

[All of you will go through a test at this general assembly hall and the field within it.]

[The field placement and treatment towards your guild will change according to each guild's test scores.]

[The grand winner will gain the privilege of owning me, the General Assembly.]

[However, I see we have one absentee. I guess that person got hurt or you fought amongst yourselves.]

All eyes instantly darted towards Rachel. The only empty seat was next to her.

“Hahaha!”

“Well, England is quite the troublemaker these days. It's commendable they made it here in the first place.”

Some of the guilds, especially from China, spat out arrogant remarks.

Rachel tried her best to remain calm and nonchalantly ignore them, but couldn't stop her face from turning red.

[However, it's fine for a seat to remain empty.]

[Then, I will show you the contents of the first test.]

A small text appeared at the center of the round table.

[First General Assembly – Theory Class]

Nobody in this room expected such words.

Side Stories 16

Dream in a Dream (16)

“What should I do with this?”

The Spirit Stone’s huge size caused quite a dilemma. I didn’t lie when I said it looked like a meteorite and it weighed like one too. I couldn’t just simply leave it here.

“What’s wrong with my luck?”

It was supposed to only give me an absolute advantage with no strings attached. Yes, my luck greatly amplified the Spirit Stone’s power, but I couldn’t bring it anywhere like this.

My [Accumulation of Luck] should’ve triggered as well.

Squirm... Squirm...

I heard a strange noise from somewhere.

Squirm... Squirm... Squirm...

“Ah, that sounds quite annoying.”

I grumbled and turned around.

Several individuals squirmed on the ground like caterpillars with their hands and feet tied and their eyes and mouth covered. Around eight of these fortunate ones had survived their encounter with me.

“Ufff! Ummhp! Hmmp!”

I didn’t feel like shooting these defenseless folks. Honestly, I slightly pitied them when I saw the old man shed tears. I planned on just tying them up and letting the association or heroes take care of them with a trial or something.

“Stay still if you don’t want to die.”

I threatened them.

They obediently shut their mouths and stopped squirming. Even the old man who shouted, I won’t tell you anything about our lord even if you kill me, held his breath in fear that I would really kill him. As expected, every human feared death.

I turned my attention towards the Spirit Stone again.

[Spirit Stone] [Legendary] [Unique] — A stone infused with the power of spirits. The energy used will recover over 24 hours.

[Energy Capacity: 10,000/10,000]

“Hmm...”

An idea suddenly popped up in my head after staring at the item’s description for a while. I looked down at my hands that possessed the [Young Dwarf’s Dexterity]. Maybe I could carve this Spirit Stone with [Young Dwarf’s Dexterity]. Perhaps my luck made the Spirit Stone so massive for a reason.

“Will it work?”

However, reducing its mass for more portability would surely affect its efficiency. That would essentially make it meaningless.

“Shall we test it a little?”

I formed a sculpting knife with stigma and carved off a tiny portion of the Spirit Stone. Then I checked its description again.

[Detached Spirit Stone] [Artifact] [Unique] — A stone infused with the power of spirits. The energy used will recover over 36 hours.

[Energy Capacity: 50/50]

Fifty didn't seem like a bad figure, so I began sculpting the Spirit Stone.

Sukeok... Sukeok... Sukeok...

I started at the edges and slowly worked my way in. Pieces that fell off littered the ground and a beautiful peak stood in the middle of the mess.

I sculpted the huge Spirit Stone into a rose with a bluish hue.

[Spirit Stone Flower] [Legendary] [Unique] — A stone infused with the power of spirits. It has been meticulously sculpted by a dwarf and a much more powerful strength now resides within it. The energy used will recover over 18 hours.

[Energy Capacity: 100/100] [Low Rank Harmonization]

My hard work resulted in a jackpot.

* * *

[First General Assembly – Theory Class]

My insides turned when that text appeared. The first test would be difficult.

All of us came here with our own abilities and powers, but what the hell did a theory class have to do with anything?

“What? What the hell is this? A class? What bullshit is this?!”

Yoo Yeonha ignored Chae Nayun's tirade and calmly analyzed the situation.

“Ah... fuck. Just wait a minute. Are you asking us to study after we came all the way here?”

The General Assembly didn't give any additional details, but the words test and class made it obvious enough.

“Is this some kind of a joke? What the hell is this? Have you gone insane? Ha!”

Yoo Yeonha didn't worry since Essence of the Straits had two of the most intelligent people who always fought for first and second place at Cube when it came to theory. Of course, she hadn't expected this and only brought them to assist with planning strategies. However, her decision turned out for the best.

“Sigh... I guess we can't do anything about it.”

Chae Nayun grumbled before calming down and thinking.

Her sudden composure and pondering slightly surprised Yoo Yeonha. Chae Nayun should've grumbled a few hundred times and even screamed in frustration, but she suddenly began taking notes with her smartwatch?

“First... General... Assembly... Theory... Class...”

Chae Nayun recited each word as she typed them down with her hologram keyboard.

Yoo Yeonha stared at her in astonishment. This might be the most shocking thing she witnessed in the last three years.

“It's worth a shot if it's theory.”

On the other hand, Rachel felt confident after seeing what the first test would be. She had been top of her class at Cube when it came to theory and Fermin might look a bit dumb, but actually placed in the top percentile of her class for theory too.

The General Assembly finally gave them additional details.

[I will now give out questions for you to conduct your own research about the general assembly.]

[You must solve these questions as the pursuit of truth is also a hero's calling.]

[Each guild will be provided its own research facility. The size and the equipment inside will depend on your guild's contribution points. You may use your contribution points to further upgrade your research facility.]

[You are also free to cooperate with others. However, you will have to form a party through your smartwatches.]

Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!

Their smartwatches rang throughout the meeting room.

[Welcome, Rachel.]

[English Royal Court Guild]

[Contribution Ranking – 19th]

[Party – X]

[Accommodation Rating – 9]

[Research Facility Rating – 9]

What's this? Rachel wanted to check the new message, but the General Assembly suddenly gave them their first question.

[First Question]

[Q.1]

— There is the British Dungeon in London, the Hongok Dungeon in Seoul, and Parrishmare in the United States. A dungeon closely related to those three resides within the general assembly area. Find out its interior composition, mana density, and the monsters inside.

[You will find out if the dungeon randomly appears or if it can be anticipated by solving this problem.]

Rachel's expression suddenly stiffened. It would be impossible to solve such a complex problem with four dungeons mixed together.

[I hope you will enjoy solving this problem. The next meeting will begin in 96 hours.]

The General Assembly's text disappeared and the attendants stood up to discuss among themselves.

Essence of the Strait and Creator's Sacred Grace attracted quite a crowd. France's La Guild Lumiere and China's Chinese Empire seemed to get along. This bothered Rachel since England and France didn't have a good relationship to begin with.

“...”

Rachel remained all alone like a castaway. Nobody bothered to strike up a conversation with her. No one even spared her a glance even though she graduated top of her class in theory at Cube. Her first-place title seemed meaningless here.

She mustered the courage to approach the other guilds first, but everyone only greeted her out of courtesy and avoided her or flat-out ignored her.

The English Royal Court members swallowed their anger and tears as they watched Rachel go from guild to guild.

“Vice Leader Rachel?”

Someone suddenly approached and greeted her as if they had been waiting. It turned out to be Reinslauder's Sehat.

“Hello, it's good to see you again.”

“Haha, same to you. By the way, Vice Leader... do you have any clues regarding the problem? Nothing comes to my mind no matter how much I rack my brains.”

“I have a feeling it’s the same as the similar dungeon theory that’s been making the rounds these days in academia. A dungeon pops up every year that’s somehow similar to another existing dungeon. There have been many attempts to find any common links between them.”

“Oh, you’re truly amazing as expected.”

“Not at all, I don’t have a clue regarding the problem either. I never thought the Hongok Dungeon and the British Dungeon were related...”

A man suddenly interrupted them as Rachel and Sehat busily discussed the problem. He belonged to the Golden Afterglow guild and anyone could tell they came from China because of their uniforms.

“Hi, Vice Leader Rachel.”

The man who looked like a rat greeted Rachel and scanned her from head to toe with a sleazy smile.

“Hello, how may I help you?” Rachel courteously asked despite his scummy look.

“Hehe, that’s... our Golden Afterglow is also...”

“Vice Leader, let’s go.”

Fermin and the other guild members came over and dragged Rachel away. Then Fermin spoke to Sehat.

“Let’s head to the research facility provided by the General Assembly and continue our discussion there.”

The English Royal Court entered their research facility along with Sehat and the Reinslauder guild members.

“Umm... Shall we take... our seats first?” Rachel awkwardly welcomed their guests.

She felt embarrassed because of their pitiful research facility. The wooden floor tiles creaked, the chairs looked worn out, dust covered the desks, and cobwebs scattered all over the place.

They couldn’t have received a better research facility because they ranked the lowest for contribution points. Xtra’s points had been excluded from the tally.

“I apologize for our shabby facility. We didn’t expect our research facility to be in this state...”

“No, we’re fine. Please don’t mind us.”

Sehat nonchalantly replied as he took a seat. However, the other Reinslauder guild members seemed quite disappointed by the shabby facility.

Fermin quickly interjected and changed the topic.

“Here’s the information regarding the British Dungeon, the Hongok Dungeon, and Parrishmare.”

Thud! Thud! Thud!

She set down a few stacks of documents that totaled nine hundred pages. Rachel flinched whenever a stack fell on the table. The Reinslauder and English Royal Court members also flinched and murmured among themselves. The mountains of documents overwhelmed them.

“How are we supposed to present this?”

“What? We have to do a presentation too?”

“But... isn’t this too much? We didn’t even do this much at Cube...”

“No, why do we even have to do this?”

However, the prerequisites for being a hero also included this. Of course, scholars carried out most dungeon analyzes these days, but sometimes their analysis didn’t match the dungeon’s interior. Heroes had to conduct their own analysis in such situations.

“Then, does Sir Sehat have any plans to cooperate and form a party with us?” Rachel carefully asked.

“Of course, Vice Leader was a well-known genius at Cube. We should be the ones asking to cooperate with you.”

Sehat seemed to be the only one who thought this. His other guild members looked displeased, but Rachel still extended her hand to shake his. Sehat smiled and shook her hand.

[The English Royal Court and the Reinslaufer guild have formed a party.]

Rachel and Sehat successfully formed their alliance. The English Royal Court members rejoiced while the Reinslaufer members glared at their leader.

“Then, I’ll go and check if there’s any other information available.” Fermin bowed before leaving the research facility.

“Still, it’s a relief we managed to team up with a guild like Reinslaufer. I thought we would be left all alone.”

Fermin muttered while skipping through the corridor. She would reach the shop soon and thought about purchasing more information there. Then she suddenly recalled what happened last night.

— No, Rachel is already suffering so much because of it. Can’t you see? She probably remembers your face, who you are, and who you lost in that tragedy.

— Still, Rachel has been atoning and suffering for the past twenty years. She's already pitiful enough. Don't you think it's time to at least forgive her?

— You see, I wish for the princess to be happy for a long time. So I can't let any of you go.

Was Xtra someone deeply related to the princess? Or was he just a hardcore fan who managed to find information about her online?

Rachel had been trying to forget what she heard that day, but couldn't at all.

“He must be a stalker or a die-hard fan, right?”

Fermin muttered before her expression stiffened and her feet stopped. The faint trace of mana in the air made her freeze. This sinister and eerie mana oozed with a longing for vengeance.

Gulp.

Fermin nervously gulped before turning around and looking down the corridor. She didn't see anyone behind her, but once felt that mana in the air before with her own body.

Lancaster had been here.

* * *

[Spirit Stone Necklace] — A necklace infused with the power of a spirit. Its power has been amplified by a dwarf's exquisite craftsmanship and stigma's mana flows within it. Its color will change depending on the element.

The energy used will recover over 12 hours.

[Energy Capacity: 1,000/1,000] [High-Intermediate Amplification] [High-Intermediate Protection]

[Spirit Stone Armband] — An armband infused with the power of a spirit.

Its power has been amplified by a dwarf's exquisite craftsmanship and stigma's mana flows within it. Its color will change depending on the element.

The energy used will recover over 12 hours.

[Energy Capacity: 1,200/1,200] [High-Intermediate Attribute Combination] [Intermediate Spirit Projection]

"Hooo..."

I used up stigma to create an accessory and equipment, but 80% of the Spirit Stone remained.

"Ah... this is killing me..."

I wouldn't be able to use up all of the Spirit Stone even if I created an entire set of equipment to clad myself. I might be able to make full use of it if I spent an entire week crafting.

"Ughh..."

I massaged my forehead since the thought of spending an entire week gave me a migraine.

Ring... Ring... Ring! Ring Ring Ring! Ring...

My smartwatch rang as if relaying something through Morse code.

[Marcus: What is this theory? Ah... I feel like my head is going to split open. I can't even get through the third page...]

[Kayle: How can you call yourself a Cube alumnus when you can't even understand this?]

[Marcus: Hey, don't you know I specialize in combat? I'll just go out and gather some contribution points, Vice Leader.]

[Rachel: Yes, that also sounds like a great idea.]

[Marcus: Yes, ma'am! Did you guys hear that? All of you who can't use your heads to save your lives, follow me!]

It seemed like someone invited me to the guild chat.

“What’s this?”

The General Assembly sent me a bunch of messages as well. I didn’t notice my smartwatch ringing while crafting the Spirit Stone.

[First Question]

[Q.1]

— There is the British Dungeon in London, the Hongok Dungeon in Seoul, and Parrishmare in the United States. A dungeon closely related to those three resides within the general assembly area. Find out its interior composition, mana density, and the monsters inside.

“Theory class?”

I didn’t go to the general assembly, so I had no idea what happened. However, I felt confident if the topic had to do with theory.

“Hmm...”

I searched for information related to the British Dungeon, Hongok Dungeon, and Parrishmare using the Book of Truth and [Observation and Reading].

“Is this even a difficult question?”

They had to calculate the interior composition, mana density, and list the monsters inside this unknown dungeon using the common factors among the three provided dungeons.

I used my cheat abilities to start calculating and find out...

I hadn’t used my creator’s authority in a while, so it felt like having my mind blown.

It took me three minutes to solve the problem. I hadn't taken this long to solve a single problem in five years!

Side Stories 17

Dream in a Dream (17)

I entered the final stages of crafting the Spirit Stone after two days.

I also engraved the spirits onto my [Desert Eagle] and the [Black Lotus Bow]. Then I infused the elasticity provided by the Spirit Stone into my clothing. I now possessed an armband, outer clothing, shoes, necklace, ring, etc. all crafted from the Spirit Stone. These accessories completely covered me and I worried that I might develop an allergy to the Spirit Stone. Anyways, I didn't even use up all of the Spirit Stone. However, its size had reduced to a football.

“The rest will be...”

As expected, it would be best to give the rest to Rachel. I placed the Spirit Stone in my backpack and stood up. I should test everything out after spending so much time and effort making them.

I equipped all the items and warmed up. I did the usual stretches kids would do in the morning before school started. Then I stored the Desert Eagle inside stigma and stretched out my hand.

Fwaaaaah...

A powerful current appeared where I aimed. The current twisted and turned before compressing into a cube.

I infused the fire attribute into the wind cube and flames appeared in mid-air without any catalyst. This flame purely burned by itself.

I spread the flame out of the cube in every direction and it devoured everything in its path. The wind cube turned into a huge ring surrounding the area.

Next, I infused the earth attribute and the ring turned into a sturdy wall that encircled the area.

“Not bad.”

Any passerby who saw this strange phenomenon might’ve thought the initial flame looked like a will-o-wisp^[1] having some fun.

The Spirit Stone had endless combinations and possibilities. Unfortunately, I couldn’t materialize the spirits like Rachel because she operated on completely different fundamentals that I couldn’t replicate. I could only borrow the spirits’ powers while she communicated and built a relationship with them. In short, Rachel was a true elementalist while I became something more like a sorcerer.

Actually, it would be more efficient for Rachel to use the Spirit Stone instead of me.

“Sigh...”

However, I could only sigh in resignation when I realized the time I wasted here.

I missed Evandel, but didn’t worry since she already grew up a bit. She must be having the time of her life with no one to nag her. I still missed her nonetheless.

I knew very well where my mood swing came from because I knew why this general assembly took place, what awaited at the end, and what I expected.

“Well... there’s no way, right?” I muttered and laughed in disbelief.

The system already made its decision and I could no longer return to my world. That wouldn’t and couldn’t change.

I clicked on my smartwatch gallery to look at Evandel’s pictures, but various pictures of Rachel caught my eye instead.

“There are 173 photos...”

I took a picture of her whenever I thought her pose looked nice and I also saved some from her fan sites. I had no idea why I collected these pictures. Perhaps out of pity if I had to describe it?

Rachel always made me feel remorse and sympathy. The Rachel in my story and the Rachel in this world seemed too pitiful. Her mannerisms, her convictions, and her past were all too much for her to bear.

However, pity wasn't a positive emotion. It was nothing more than a parasite that leeches off one's emotions. Emotions like pity or sympathy couldn't be considered true remorse. One would only mistake this sympathy for remorse.

I always felt nervous when I saw Rachel because only she could make me feel an emotion I would never feel for anyone else in this world.

“Damn it...”

I cursed under my breath before plopping down on the ground. However, I found myself smiling when I recalled the stick game I played with Rachel.

Had six days already passed? My luck triggered during my bet with her and she screamed, kyah, as she missed her footing. Then she fell and bumped her head on the ground.

“Pfft! Heh... Ah... Puwahahaha!”

That funny sight made me burst into laughter in the middle of nowhere like a moron.

* * *

The General Assembly made the heroes nostalgic as they recalled their academy days. Currently, they sat in front of computers with pens in their hands and fervently studied. However, they couldn't find any answers despite their best efforts. Most guilds already gave up and the rest headed to the store to access the computers with the General Assembly Net. They read through the numerous papers stored there.

[Hongok Dungeon] — A large dungeon that appeared in Hongcheon-Gun, Gangwon-Do, South Korea. The interior is covered in bright red brimstone and magma flows through the ground. The dungeon is inhabited by monsters below intermediate rank, grade 5 such as sulfur fish, fire manta ray, firenha, etc.

— The mana density at the entrance is around 2% and the mana depth has peaked at 4.6%. Being exposed to a high concentration of mana for a long period may cause not only breathing complications, but also mana rampage. Therefore, the dungeon has been closed off until...

Rachel purchased the above information with her contribution points, but still couldn't find any leads despite scrutinizing every detail.

Hongok Dungeon, British Dungeon, and Parrishmare...

She couldn't find anything in common between these three dungeons. Not only Rachel, but even the other guilds struggled. Almost half the guilds already gave up after forty hours.

"Haaa..."

Rachel sighed and looked at the clock.

[3:45 A.M.]

Only she remained at the research facility and she couldn't leave empty-handed. She had nothing else to contribute to the alliance with Reislauder except her brains. Her only value had been placing top of her class at Cube when it came to theory, so she had to show some results as soon as possible.

She spent an hour alone racking her brains before turning on her smartwatch out of frustration. She accessed the General Assembly Community Board to distract herself when the name [Xtra] under the [English Royal Court Guild] caught her attention.

She received a call from him at that exact moment.

[Xtra: Are you guys doing a theory class or something?]

Rachel flinched in surprise. She wondered if their thoughts aligned or something.

[Me: Pardon?]

[Me: Ah, yes. We're currently doing a theory class.]

[Me: That aside, I'm glad you're safe as expected. 🐼🐼]

[Xtra: Use this for your theory.]

[Me: ◯ ∧ ◯ ?]

It took her more than thirty seconds to type the emoticon, but Xtra completely ignored it and went straight to the point by sending a file. The file size looked huge.

What's this? She wanted to take a look, but Xtra sent another message.

[Xtra: Also, I captured nine of the assailants that ambushed you. All of them are alive.]

“Ah...”

Rachel subconsciously sighed in relief. Then she thought she was being too soft. To think she would feel relief that the ones who ambushed them still lived. She hardened her expression and replied.

[Me: Thank you for your hard work.]

[Xtra: I'm just wondering... Do you know the names of these nine people?]

Xtra sent a picture of the nine assailants all tied up.

Rachel flinched again, but composed herself and wrote down their names for Xtra.

[Xtra: Alright, get some rest.]

Their conversation ended just like that, but Rachel still had one more thing to say.

[Me: But... You're aware our bet isn't over yet, right? (ಠ_ಠ)]

It was her only opportunity to meet Xtra face-to-face, but he didn't reply. She stared at her smartwatch for a response before faking a cough in embarrassment.

"Ehem..."

She should probably check the file first since she could live without the bet. Getting one-sidedly beat up hadn't been fun anyways.

She opened the file without any expectations. It didn't contain anything surprising and the first few pages explained theories that everyone else knew. However, she slowly grew amazed as she read more and processed the words.

The research facility doors suddenly burst open and Marcus barged in. Rachel jumped in surprise and turned off her smartwatch.

"Vice Leader! They asked us to gather in the meeting room!"

"Pardon?"

"Hurry up and come out! They say it's an interim inspection!"

"Why all of a sudden—"

Rachel couldn't finish as Marcus dragged her out. The sun already brightly shone outside as Marcus led her to the General Assembly Meeting Room.

A few guilds had already gathered such as The General and Lake Ford from the United States, the Chinese Empire and Golden Afterglow from China, etc.

Rachel entered the meeting room and sat at the round table.

“Hey, how long will the English Royal Court keep attending alone? That seat is getting cold.”

Someone sneered at her. Rachel glanced at Chiffon, vice leader of La Guild Lumiere from France. However, she didn’t react at all and didn’t let those words upset her.

“Those that are poor or lack brains are all the same. How can a mere mercenary have more contribution points than them?”

The Chinese Empire guild allied with La Guild Lumiere chimed in.

Rachel continued to completely ignore them.

“Hahaha! That sounds about right!”

“Hohoho!”

She didn’t even bother responding and quietly turned on her smartwatch.

[The Interim Inspection will now begin.]

[Please come up to the podium if any guilds have completely solved the problem or have made some progress.]

[Please keep in mind that this interim inspection will be broadcasted throughout the entire world via the internet.]

A crystal podium appeared in front of the round table. Rachel briefly pondered while staring at the dazzling podium, but couldn’t muster the courage to go up there.

She hesitated because she didn’t even understand the first few bits of that shocking theory from Xtra.

[It seems the English Royal Court guild is still alone.]

The General Assembly suddenly said.

“Pfft! Pwahaha! Keheum!”

The sound of sneering rang out across the room and Rachel blushed in embarrassment.

[I advise that you two make up already.]

The General Assembly seemed to be teasing her. What a prankster...

[Hmm... Anyways.]

[It seems that no one is prepared. You may send me whatever files you have prepared if you wish to have your theory checked. I will see if it is correct or not.]

The General Assembly made quite an offer. They could have their files checked without risking embarrassment.

Rachel looked at her smartwatch and General Assembly’s text.

[Is there nobody?]

The General Assembly asked again.

Rachel tightly shut her eyes and hesitated.

[I am disappointed. Then we shall conclude the interim inspection today—]

She raised her hand just as the interim inspection came to an end.

* * *

Meanwhile, Rayton didn’t doubt his lord. He believed his lord would appear at the right moment and punish this bastard. Putting all that aside, the bastard tied him up so tightly he couldn’t even move a muscle.

Rayton wanted to at least see, so he squirmed as hard as he could and rubbed his blindfold on the ground. The ground kept grinding against his face, but that didn't matter.

Rub... Rub... Rub...

Rayton finally undid his blindfold after rubbing his face on the ground more than a thousand times. The pitch-black view suddenly brightened and blinded him. He squinted and looked around.

He could see Xtra standing still, but that stubborn bastard always wore a gas mask. Rayton activated his prosthetic eye to film that bastard and send it to his lord, which would be a huge achievement.

However, why did that bastard keep standing still?

Rayton wondered when that bastard suddenly extended his hand and a fierce wind blew out.

It didn't end there. The real surprise had just begun.

Fwaaaaa!

Flames raged upward like a reverse waterfall along with the wind. It gathered in the sky like a cloud before crashing down to the ground like a torrent.

The grand sight of flames melting the ground sent chills down Rayton's spine.

What's going on right now? What power is this? How can a mere mercenary...?

Rayton watched the entire spectacle and made sure to record every second.

“...!”

The bastard suddenly turned around and Rayton shut his eyes.

Step... Step...

He could hear footsteps approaching him and his heart raced.

Drrr!

Something shot up from the ground and covered the entire place. Only then did Xtra stop walking.

Rayton opened his eyes. The entire place had been surrounded by an unknown wall of earth.

“Lancaster won’t be coming.”

A deep chilling voice spoke out.

Rayton flinched when he saw Xtra staring down at him with that gas mask.

“How do I know? These are the messages between the executives of your lord.”

Xtra showed him the communication channel log that Kim Hoseop hacked from Lancaster. It took some time for the file to reach him through his private satellite, but he still received it even in Central Asia.

[What should we do about Rayton and the rest?]

[Leave them be. They’re just disposable rats anyways.]

[They might’ve spilled the beans about us.]

[Then kill them with your own hands if they come back alive.]

“Ha! You expect me to believe your fabricated lies?!”

Rayton screamed out when Xtra removed the rag stuffing his mouth. He vehemently accused Xtra with his saliva splattering all over the smartwatch.

However, Xtra simply shook his head.

“You don’t have to believe me since the only reason you’re still alive is thanks to Rachel.”

“What?”

“Your boss not only abandoned you, but also tasked someone with killing you. All of you desperately tried to kill Rachel, but she’s ironically the one who wants you alive.”

“This crazy bastard! How dare you spout such lies!”

Rayton wouldn’t even listen to Xtra’s words. Too much time had passed since he believed only what he wanted.

Xtra smirked and nodded.

“Sure, keep waiting here. Perhaps a week? Yeah, around a week. You’ll be safe for that amount of time within these walls. Those monsters won’t be able to get you.”

Rayton finally noticed that Xtra didn’t speak to just him. The old man looked left and right and saw his comrades intently listening to Xtra.

“These ropes binding you will loosen by themselves and Lancaster will probably think you’re all dead.”

Xtra briefly paused and recited all their names.

Jenny’s father, Rayton. Barbie’s mother, Daisy. Elise’s parents, Rian and Stan. Lucy’s husband, Zeron. Lily’s husband, Rio. Toby’s wife, Sonya. Ellie and Ryan’s son, Caleb. Dexter’s brother, Oscar...

“Rachel knows every one of you by name. She engraved your names to her heart and carried it with her every second she lived.”

“D-Don’t be fooled! Don’t be fooled, you bastards! Don’t listen to him! Shut your ears!”

Rayton urgently shouted. He could feel a sense of doubt rising within him despite shouting at the top of his lungs for his comrades to not believe those words.

Xtra didn’t bother to hush the old man and continued.

“You can pretend to die and cut all ties with Lancaster or return to him and repay this grace with your death. Or... you can go to Rachel and let bygones be bygones.”

Xtra turned around with his back facing them and formed a door through the earth wall.

“The choice is yours and yours alone.”

He left with those last words.

Silence filled the dark interior of the earth walls. Only a single person left, but it felt like the entire place had emptied.

The assailants couldn’t say anything to each other. They needed time to think about who deceived them. How had they been deceived? Had they even been deceived in the first place? Or are they still being deceived?

No one knew.

1. The exact word used by the author is Dokkaebi Fire (Goblin Fire). The Dokkaebi, or Goblin, is a different creature from the green-skinned goblins portrayed in mainstream culture. The Korean Dokkaebi is more of a magical creature that can use magic and likes to pull pranks. More info here: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dokkaebi>

Side Stories 18

Dream in a Dream (18)

All eyes focused on Rachel when she raised her hand. Even the English Royal Court members looked at her with surprise. No one had expected this.

[Representative of the English Royal Court guild, Rachel.]

[Do you have something worth submitting?]

The General Assembly asked.

Rachel lowered her hand and took a deep breath before replying.

“Yes.”

All sorts of murmuring filled the meeting room when she confidently nodded.

The hostile guilds sneered at her, but also became visibly shaken at the tiniest possibility that she actually had something as someone who ranked first at Cube. After all, only the best gathered there.

“I have it saved as a file.”

[Please send it to me.]

The General Assembly replied.

Rachel forwarded the file that Xtra sent.

“It’s the answer prepared by the mercenary, Xtra.”

She didn't want to steal his achievement. She couldn't fool anyone in the first place when she didn't even understand it herself.

“Mercenary?”

Everyone in the room became doubtful. Even Fermin seemed slightly surprised by Rachel's words. Fermin acknowledged Xtra as a skilled mercenary, but did it make sense that he could also help them in theory?

“Hey, aren't you relying too much on that mercenary?”

Chiffon grumbled in disgust, but Rachel didn't react to his accusation. Rather, she knew he stated the blatant truth.

Rachel felt embarrassed for always being on the receiving end, but swallowed her pride and accepted the help because of England's dire situation.

[Understood.]

[I will now check the theory proposed by Xtra.]

The General Assembly became silent and everyone held their breath. The silence felt nerve-wracking as everyone waited for the result, which would obviously be the wrong answer. However, the sliver of doubt that a mere mercenary could be correct made the entire situation even tenser.

Essence of the Straits had spent two days and nights working on the problem, but failed to make any progress. They felt like they would make some progress with a little more, so they couldn't afford to lose here.

The General Assembly finally responded with something that betrayed everyone's expectations.

[It is perfect.]

[I did not expect to see such a perfect answer during the interim investigation.]

“What?!”

“What the hell?”

“Hey! What? No way, hey General Assembly!”

Some guilds screamed while others remained silent. A few seemed relieved rather than surprised. Truth be told, only ten guilds had attempted to solve the problem. The English Royal Court had been expected to finish last, but actually solved the unsolvable question.

[Was this solved alone by Xtra without anyone's help?]

Rachel nodded.

[Then, all the contribution points shall be attributed to Xtra. In addition, the English Royal Court shall have the first right to choose and work on the second problem.]

[Also, the same right may be given to Switzerland's Reislaufer guild if the English Royal Court wishes.]

The General Assembly basically gave them the right to call first dibs on the next problem.

Some of the others, especially Chiffon, protested after realizing how big of an advantage the English Royal Court just received. However, they zipped their mouths when Rachel asked a question.

“Then, is it also possible to switch the turns for other guilds?”

[Of course.]

[In return, you may not provide any benefits to your allied guild, Reislaufer.]

“...”

The French and Chinese guilds immediately avoided Rachel's gaze. She motioned with her mouth at them, Do you have anything you want to say? They finally looked at her with a smile this time.

The Chinese Empire's representative, Ryu Wei, spoke first.

"Well, I just want to say... Vice Leader Chiffon incited us first. We, the Chinese Empire guild, have always respected the English Royal Court."

"W-What did you say?! You said that they were a sight for sore eyes first!"

"When did I say that?! Do you have proof? Ha?! You spread all sorts of rumors about Vice Leader Rachel when I told you that I was a fan of hers!"

"What? You're a disgrace of a hero..."

The General Assembly interrupted the two bickering guilds.

[This concludes today's meeting.]

[The English Royal Court's accommodation has been upgraded for completing the first problem.]

[Also, Xtra's answer will be published as a thesis all over the world through the internet. Of course, all rights shall belong to Xtra.]

[Now, all of the guilds besides the English Royal Court will receive the second problem after 144 hours.]

[I hope you enjoy your free time until then.]

* * *

Rachel obtained the first right to access the second problem, but didn't earn a single contribution point because Xtra received all the credit. Unfortunately, the English Royal Court would remain at 19th place unless Xtra joined the general assembly.

“What kind of monster is he to solve this problem so easily?” Fermin muttered in surprise.

Xtra’s answer had been a perfect thesis with no errors.

Rachel nodded in agreement while reading the thesis. “I’m curious too.”

She wore round spectacles called the [Glasses of Calculation and Reasoning], which she obtained, no, extorted from Chiffon and Ryu Wei.

The spectacles automatically calculated anything she came across while reading and even provided supporting texts to make certain parts easier to understand.

“Do you think he had outside help? Xtra rode on a helicopter of some sort, right? Oh, I think that helicopter thing is part of Xtra’s gift.”

“...”

Rachel quickly looked around.

To be frank, she also suspected that Xtra received help in solving the problem. He didn’t have to go all the way to Korea for experts in theory because plenty existed in Pandemonium right next to Central Asia. These mad scientists obsessed over certain theories and ended up as djinns.

“Hmm...”

Rachel almost said something when she recalled Kim Hajin, who always crushed her when it came to theory. Her memory of Kim Hajin suddenly aligned with Xtra’s eyes when she saw him through the cracked gas mask. A very slim possibility existed. Things kept coincidentally falling into place one by one or perhaps by fate. The possibility would flare up like a spark before immediately dying.

“Wow, this thesis becomes even more convincing as you read it.”

Fermin exclaimed as she flicked through the pages. Tak!

Xtra proposed three core reasonings that sounded rock solid. First, he found the common factor between the three dungeons. Next, he found the condition that needed to be fulfilled for those common factors to align. Then, he even provided the direction required to apply it in real life.

“This... will be published through the internet, right? I think it might’ve caused a huge commotion by now.”

Rachel nodded before taking off her glasses.

Xtra’s answer had been remarkable, but they had to focus on the second problem now.

“Rather than that, I think it’s time for us to get moving.”

“Yes...”

Fermin nervously nodded. She had been hiding the fact that she sensed Lancaster earlier, but the problem wouldn’t be solved even if she told Rachel. She stole a glance at Rachel before carefully speaking.

“Vice Leader, so... about the alliance... what do you plan to do with it?”

“What do you mean?”

“Pardon? Ah, yes, well, I just think they probably want something from us.”

“They agreed to enter four days later than us.”

Rachel decided to maintain the alliance with Reislauer for the second problem. However, she placed a condition for them to enter four days after the English Royal Court since they didn’t contribute anything to solving the first problem.

Fermin sighed in relief since everything would be fine if Reinslaufer entered after them.

“I wanted to get Xtra’s opinion, but... he’s not here so...”

“Yes, you’re right.”

The clock informed them that the countdown would soon end. Now, they had to enter the second test. Rachel and Fermin nervously looked at the clock before leaving their room.

“Welcome!”

“We’ve been waiting for you.”

The other guild members stood on standby. Some scouts from other guilds also watched them.

“Shall we?”

“Yes, but it seems we have some rats on our tail. Whatever, just let them have a look.”

The English Royal Court became the center of attention as they confidently walked through the corridor after passing the first test.

They walked quite far for nearly twenty minutes under the General Assembly’s guidance to reach the second test.

[Test Hall]

The test hall looked shabby with only a small door and a door plate on it. The guild members felt surprised by the hall’s shabbiness when the General Assembly spoke through their smartwatches.

— Congratulations. The English Royal Court has obtained the first rights to the second test. Please enter the test hall and choose the stage you wish.

The General Assembly's mechanical voice sounded a bit eerie.

“Ah, that surprised me.”

“I thought it was a ghost, damn it.”

Rachel and the guild members entered the door.

A peculiar space appeared beyond. It looked pure white with no walls or boundaries in sight. The space extended left and right towards the horizon with only a row of large doors lined up without any walls.

— The second test is called the Chain of Memories. This place has a total of forty doors. You may choose which door to enter and must satisfy all the conditions in that stage to clear it.

— 75% of the stages have been removed as a reward for completing the first test.

Thud! Thud! Thud!

Thirty of the forty doors suddenly disappeared. It seemed the remaining ten doors fell into the top 25%.

“Everyone, which door should we choose?” Rachel asked her fellow members.

“Of course, we'll follow whichever one Vice Leader chooses,” her guild members replied.

Rachel pondered while reading the door plates on the ten doors.

[Forgotten Memory], [Fragment of Life], [Hidden Desires]... One door plate stood out among the rest.

[Hometown of Dreams]

Rachel felt this specific door calling out to her. She approached as if in a trance.

“Hometown of Dreams?” Fermin asked, and Rachel nodded.

— You have chosen the [Hometown of Dreams].

— Please enter through the door one by one.

The door to the Hometown of Dreams opened.

Rachel glanced back at her guild members and proceeded. A strange sense of hostility crawled over her skin with every step towards the door. She felt a chill down her spine as she neared it. Her pupils dilated when a bright light from the door enveloped her. It felt as if the light gently caressed her and squeezed her to death at the same time.

Rachel tightly closed her eyes and opened them a few seconds later.

“...”

A completely different world appeared and she stood on a street bustling with people.

She couldn’t tell where exactly. Shops lined up to her left and right with street peddlers selling food to passersby.

“Where am I?” Rachel muttered as she looked at the clothing store, restaurants, and cosmetic shops. She looked behind her, but the door had disappeared and she couldn’t find her guild members anywhere.

A chill ran across her body.

“Hoo... Let’s get a grip.”

Rachel regained her composure and thought the test purposely made things problematic. Thankfully, everyone here spoke Korean.

A strange pillar caught her eye as she explored the foreign environment.

[Line 4 424]

[Myeongdong]

[Exit 8]

“Myeongdong?”

This was Myeongdong? No way. She knew Myeongdong quite well and this couldn't be it.

Myeongdong served as the center where people sold all sorts of magical ingredients and artifacts. A billion won could be instantly spent on this street.

“What in the world is going on...” Rachel muttered while aimlessly walking and couldn't grasp her surroundings. The people around kept stealing glances at her and some even asked why she dressed so strangely. Rachel ignored them and continued wandering.

Growl...

Her stomach growled and she grew hungry after walking for around thirty minutes. The smell from the nearby hotdog and squid stands enticed her.

Sizzle... Sizzle...

Rachel stared at the vendor grilling hotteok^[1].

She rummaged through her pockets despite not having any money.

“I'm hungry...”

She had no idea what to do in this place. The General Assembly cruelly dropped her here without any guidelines. Well, the General Assembly did mention clear conditions they had to complete. This must be part of the test as well.

Rachel stood still and observed the passersby.

“What could it be?”

All of them walked with a rectangular device in their hands. She intently observed the device, but didn’t recognize it at first. They kept tapping the screen on it. Judging from what she saw, she deduced that...

It’s a smartphone!

Why did all these adults use smartphones? Only little kids who struggled with smartwatches used them.

Growl...

Her stomach growled again and she felt the pain from hunger this time.

“Ugh...”

Rachel groaned and sat on the ground. She noticed something strange too. She just ate two hours ago and shouldn’t have felt this hungry yet. Not only that, she couldn’t feel a trace of mana in the air.

She clearly sensed no mana when she closed her eyes and focused on breathing. She tried short breaths, long breaths, complicated breathing, and even normal breathing. However, she still couldn’t sense an ounce in the air. No, it might be more accurate to say no mana flowed inside her as well.

Only then did she realize the gravity of the situation. Having zero mana in the air could only mean...

Rachel, who came from the present, found herself in a disastrous situation.

Meanwhile, I hid in the bushes and observed the entrance to the general assembly hall. I already steeled my resolve to enter, but still felt nervous.

Many more resided behind those doors other than Rachel. I ran away from the novel's main characters like Kim Suho, Yoo Yeonha, Chae Nayun, Yi Yeonghan, and Shin Jonghak.

Ring!

A message appeared on my smartwatch.

[The English Royal Court has started the second test.]

[You may also join the second test at any time as a member of the English Royal Court.]

[The members' statuses will be displayed. The percentage beside their names will decrease the more severe their situation.]

[Rachel: 47%]

[Fermin: 49%]

[Marcus: 67%]

[Dale: 53%]

The message notified me of the second test.

“Ah... Damn it...”

I had no idea what kind of test, but Kim Hoseop said Lancaster had arrived here somewhere. That meant I couldn't afford to leave Rachel alone.

I carefully approached the general assembly's entrance. I looked around to make sure the coast was clear before carefully opening the door.

Creaaaaak...

“Ah!”

However, a bright voice immediately greeted me when I stepped inside. I tried to run away, but a tiny finger pointed at me. I had been caught already.

“Hey, there he is!”

“Wait, just give me a minute... I’m not done tying your hair Aileen—”

A small woman skipped or flew towards me. She was in her mid-thirties and hadn’t finished tying her hair. It was none other than Aileen. Jin Seyeon stood behind her with a hairband.

I sighed since it would’ve been impossible to sneak in with these two as the gatekeepers.

Aileen merrily skipped until she stood in front of me.

“It’s you, right? Extra!”

“...”

I looked at Aileen and Jin Seyeon before nodding. Jin Seyeon’s eyes glimmered as if she found me interesting.

“Yes, I’m the extra.”

I willingly admitted, so they wouldn’t do anything to me.

Aileen brightly smiled.

“Then, why don’t you take off that gas mask first?”

She used her Spirit Speech and my hands automatically moved towards my gas mask.

Honestly, this surprised me. I didn't expect her to use Spirit Speech as soon as we met. No, I should've expected it since...

I had designed Aileen.

1. Hotteok is a type of Korean pancake usually filled with sweet fillings. More info here: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hotteok> 📖

Side Stories 19

Dream in a Dream (19)

“Then, why don’t you take off that gas mask first?” Aileen ordered me with her Spirit Speech.

My hands moved towards my gas mask and grabbed it. However, I simply stood there without taking it off.

“What the? Why aren’t you taking it off?”

Aileen grimaced and seemed taken aback by the sudden turn of events.

I felt surprised too. Her Spirit Speech couldn’t force me, but merely suggested that I take off my gas mask.

“You...”

Aileen muttered while still in shock. She placed both hands on her waist and gathered her mana into an aura for a more powerful Spirit Speech.

“Aileen, please cut it out.”

Thankfully, Jin Seyeon stepped in and stopped her. Aileen glared at me with shame, but angrily stomped away.

A system message suddenly popped up.

[Realization – You have become susceptible to Spirit Speech, but some of the power to resist it has remained with you.]

[Tower of Wish’s Bonus – You have received a special inheritance!]

[You have inherited two items stored in the player's storage!]

Inherited Item ► [Dark Ore Arrow]

Inherited Item ► [Orb of Regeneration]

An arrow and a green orb fell from the ceiling. I immediately snatched them before they struck the floor and shoved them into my pocket. Thankfully, Aileen didn't see and Jin Seyeon busily consoled her.

“Hey!”

Aileen suddenly called when I tried to make a run for it.

I nonchalantly turned around to find her glaring at me.

“Who are you? Also, take off that ugly gas mask while I'm being nice.”

“Pfft!”

I snickered without realizing it. Aileen seemed as stubborn as I designed her to be.

“What are you laughing at?” Aileen raised a brow and asked.

I contemplated whether I should make a run for it, but realized I had no reason to hide my face from her.

“You won't know me even if you saw my face.”

“That's something we'll decide. Also, we won't tell anyone who you are. I don't have that many friends, you see.”

Aileen reassured me.

I could trust them as heroes. Actually, I should be the one begging for some sort of relationship with them if I had the chance. I had nothing to lose by introducing myself.

“If you say so.”

I promptly took off my gas mask.

Aileen and Jin Seyeon nervously gulped as they watched me.

“Oh... uhmm...”

“Hmm...”

As expected, both of them seemed clueless even after seeing my face.

“I think I saw him on the street once?” Aileen muttered with a serious look.

I put on my gas mask again and laughed. “I told you. I’m just an ordinary mercenary.”

Aileen stared at me for a while before nodding.

“You’re right. I have no idea who you are...”

“Did you descend from Baekdu Mountain by any chance? I heard there are a lot of hidden experts there...”

Jin Seyeon pressed her right fist and left palm together like some sort of greeting from a Shaolin movie.

Oh?! Aileen’s eyes widened as if what Jin Seyeon said made perfect sense.

“No...” I muttered with a bitter smile while looking at them.

* * *

Four days passed.

Rachel aimlessly wandered around South Korea without any results.

She felt certain she had arrived in a parallel universe, but couldn't figure anything else out. Most importantly, she had no clue how to clear this test.

“That will be nine thousand won.”

A staffer at Kimcheon Food Country^[1] informed Rachel.

She extended a card to the staffer. The General Assembly had provided this license in a card form to them.

“Do you need a receipt?”

“Yes.”

“Please have a seat over here.”

Rachel sat at a table with the receipt in her hand.

[Grilled Cheese Cutlet – 9,000 won]

“...”

All eyes in the restaurant naturally stared at her dining alone. Her flowing golden hair, deep blue eyes that resembled the ocean, beautiful facial features, and tired yet elegant demeanor made it difficult for ordinary people to approach.

“Phew...”

Rachel sighed while pouring water into her cup. This world didn't have any mana or monsters. She felt confused at first, but slowly adapted since humans still lived here.

— Breaking News. An unidentified body was found at a back alley in Myeongdong at two in the morning today.

The news on the TV attracted Rachel's attention.

— The body looked like it had been ravaged by a wild animal...

Tak.

The staffer set the plate of sizzling cheese cutlet on the table.

Sss... Sss...

Rachel salivated at the delicious smell.

“Are you a model from overseas?”

The staffer asked, and Rachel shook her head no.

“Wow, I thought you were a Greek goddess when I first saw you.”

“Thank you...”

“Omo! Your Korean is really good! How is your pronunciation so good?”

“Ah... haha...”

Rachel could only awkwardly laugh. Everyone in the restaurant kept staring and she tried her best to ignore them while eating her food in discomfort.

She finished her grilled cheese cutlet in less than three minutes, but one plate didn't satisfy her. This world had no mana, so her main source of sustenance had disappeared. Her required caloric intake became four to five times that of a male adult.

“No...”

Nevertheless, Rachel suppressed her hunger. Using her contribution points to order food had been painful enough. She couldn't afford to spend hundreds of thousands of won on just food.

“Thank you for the meal.”

“Omo, you finished already?”

Rachel left Kimcheon Food Country and came out to the streets. She headed towards the crime scene just on the news.

— An unidentified body was found at a back alley in Myeongdong at two in the morning today.

She went searching for the back alley, but the street vendors with food kept attracting her. She tried to ignore them, but found herself staring at one of the stalls that sold fishcakes and hotdogs. The potato hotdog^[2], which had a hotdog on a stick riddled with potatoes, looked especially appetizing. Rachel found herself walking towards the stall as if bewitched.

* * *

“Hehe...”

She giggled while sitting on a bench at a nearby park.

Rachel finally felt full, which lifted her mood. It felt like being on cloud nine and all her worries disappeared. She truly felt at peace now.

“Ah!”

However, she soon snapped out of it and came back to her senses when she received an alert on her smartwatch.

[You are running low on contribution points.]

She acknowledged the fact that she overspent on food, but did she really spend that much?

[Contribution Points: D-]

[Converted to Won: 300,000 Won]

Rachel seriously pondered over her contribution points when a cat suddenly jumped from a tree and sat beside her. She gasped in surprise at the white furry creature with cute watery eyes.

“Nyang.”

The cat lay on the bench as if asking Rachel to rub its back. She mustered the courage and slowly extended her hand.

Growl...

A faint growl came from somewhere. Rachel almost lost consciousness, but managed to hold on. She focused all her senses on stroking the cat's back to stay conscious. However, she didn't have the luxury to compose herself.

A sinister mana that reeked of stench flowed from somewhere nearby like cigarette smoke. This mana openly taunted her.

Rachel grabbed Galatine and glared at her surroundings, but didn't spot anything.

Did it finally start?

“Whitey, get going.”

She placed the cat on the ground. It looked at her before scurrying away.

Rachel stood from the bench and began looking for a suitable place to fight because the park would only involve innocent people. The ones tailing her noticed her intentions and quietly followed.

Rachel entered a secluded alley when the sun almost set. She walked deep inside before stopping in the middle.

“You can come out...”

Whiiiiiss—

A sinister red and black wind blew and gathered into a person. This swordsman wore a robe that seemed to be made from the sinister wind.

The swordsman looked at Rachel.

“Princess... Do you know... who I am?”

Rachel felt shocked, but did her best not to show it. She clearly remembered this swordsman.

“Lifeat...”

She muttered his name.

“Ah... Kuhahahaha!”

Lifeat burst into laughter along with a hideous smile. He laughed hysterically like a clown for a while before glaring at her.

“What are...” Rachel muttered as she took a few steps back.

Ughh... Kekekeke!

Lifeat let out a gruesome scream as his body uncontrollably contorted. It went on for some time before he calmed down.

“Hmm...”

He calmly muttered. However, Lifeat no longer controlled his own body. Another person’s soul had entered like a possession.

The man stared at Rachel with only the white of his eyes showing and he spoke in a sullen voice.

“Hello, princess. It’s been a while.”

Rachel would never forget this voice. Her heart sank and she couldn’t utter a sound. She coughed and cleared her throat before continuing in a shaky voice.

“You’re... hiding behind others as usual.”

They had an ill-fated relationship. She respected him at one point, but he became her country’s enemy.

Rachel pulled out Galatine and pointed it at Lancaster, who simply grinned.

“This place isn’t suitable for our reunion. I will appear at the most appropriate place in front of you when the time comes, princess.”

“What do you mean by that?”

“I’m talking about Hampton, princess. Have you already forgotten?”

Rachel’s shoulders trembled before she retorted, “Forget about forgetting. That place no longer exists.”

Lancaster tilted his head and responded in a downcast voice, “Princess, do you not wish to return there?”

“Get a grip! We... we can no longer go back to that place!”

Rachel screamed with every ounce of her voice. Nothing could change the past and no one could revisit it. She resolved to do her best so the past would never repeat itself.

The corners of Lancaster’s mouth curled up.

“As expected, it seems like you haven’t realized the truth behind this world.”

“...”

“Princess, you remember the ones who died in your place that day, right? However, remembering them won’t bring them back. I already told you, didn’t I?”

“I’m not trying to remember them. It’s that I can’t forget them.”

Rachel snapped back as she focused and tightly gripped her sword.

Lancaster stared at her with deep eyes devoid of any emotions.

“Princess, you know nothing. Everything can be traced back to that place.”

He kept trying to convince her of something.

“That’s why I’m trying to rewrite the events of that tragic day.”

However, Rachel couldn’t understand him.

“I hope you will reach me soon, princess. I will wait for you at that place with this hope. That place... with less darkness and more sunlight. Less cold and more warmth than this world we live in...”

Lancaster finished his last words and left Lifeat’s body.

The atmosphere changed the moment Lancaster disappeared. The swordsman’s body shook like a puppet let loose from its strings and charged at Rachel with his sword.

“Die!”

His scream was filled with hatred.

Rachel swung Galatine and parried the attack.

Clang!

The two swords clashed and sparks flew across the air.

Her enemy’s sword carried the heavy weight of his conviction. It felt as if he would do whatever it took to stab her heart, but Rachel tried her best not to take his life. She only parried his attacks in this life-and-death battle. She hoped he would eventually tire out as she displayed a graceful and merciful swordsmanship.

“...?”

The moonlight suddenly flickered and she spotted another assailant aiming at her when she looked up. No, countless shadows scattered on top of the alley.

They formed pairs and charged at her, but Rachel resisted and pushed them back.

Thud! Thud! Thud!

Half of them crashed into the wall, but Rachel sustained eleven wounds in the process. One on her shoulder, another on her calf, another on her waist...

Numerous enemies remained.

Rachel closed her eyes and summoned her spirit, but only a tiny one appeared. This world didn't have enough mana and spirits.

She could only depend on her sword and tightly gripped it with all her focus.

“Euff!”

However, her strength left her body. Her arms and legs gave out and her hand around Galatine uncontrollably trembled. It felt as if something had sucked the strength out of her body like roots sucking water out of the ground.

“Eugh...”

She lost her balance and fell to one knee. Her vision grew blurry.

Rachel felt a burning sensation on her wounds and realized the assailants had coated their swords with poison. She could've easily neutralized this poison with her mana, but mana didn't exist in this world.

Rachel used Galatine like a cane to stand up. She looked up and saw the group of assailants charging at her with their swords. They unmistakably aimed for her heart.

Bang!

A gunshot echoed out and a bullet pierced one of the assailant's shoulders. The impact flung the assailant back and he crashed into a wall.

Step... Step...

The sound of someone's footsteps followed.

The assailants held their breath as they looked towards the footsteps. Rachel looked as well.

A man's silhouette appeared. He held a pistol in one hand and a book (the Book of Truth) in the other as he approached them.

"What are you looking at?"

He asked before suddenly pulling the trigger.

One, two, three, four—

Four gunshots echoed in the air.

The assailants jumped and widened their distance from him. None of them attacked and they only continued to observe.

Meanwhile, he approached Rachel and knelt on one knee before extending his hand. Then he looked at her.

"Get up. It'll be hard for me to fight them all alone."

1. There is a restaurant chain in Korea called Kimbap Heaven, “Kim Bap Cheon Guk”. The author played on this by naming it “Kim Cheon Bap Guk,” which translates to Kimcheon Food Country 📍

2. Potato hotdog is a famous street food in South Korea. You can google potato hotdog for more information. 📍

Side Stories 20

Dream in a Dream (20)

“Get up. It’ll be hard for me to fight them all alone.”

I extended my hand towards Rachel after finding her thanks to the [Book of Truth].

However, she had been poisoned to the point where she found breathing difficult. Her blood vessels turned green underneath her milky white skin.

I placed the Orb of Regeneration in her hand.

“Hold onto this tightly.”

Shwiiiish!

The assailants threw numerous daggers at us like bullets, but I shot them all down with real bullets. As expected, it would be hard to find a weapon more powerful than a gun in this world without mana.

“You... are...”

Rachel weakly muttered as she propped herself up with Galatine and leaned against my shoulder.

I aimed at the assailants, but...

“What the hell?”

They stared at us from on top of the alley like a bunch of statues. I hesitated to pull the trigger because I had no idea what they were planning.

“Haa... Haa...”

Rachel slightly recovered, but her body was burning up.

Then a cold breeze blew and the assailants instantly made their move. They rode the wind and displayed a completely different speed from before.

I activated bullet time as I shot my handgun with one hand and swung a dagger in the other.

“Huh?”

I had anticipated their trajectories, but the wind surrounding them veered my bullets off course. Not only that, the wind allowed them to defy the laws of physics. They could instantly soar in the air or suddenly appear behind me as they charged.

I couldn't understand as I fought these bastards that freely moved everywhere. Why did they simply watch before when they possessed such speed? They could've already killed Rachel when I hadn't arrived yet. Did they just want to toy with her?

Clang!

A dagger flew towards my head, but I threw one of my own to deflect it. However, I couldn't block the assailant that flew towards me faster than the dagger. I simply couldn't handle all of them moving so fast.

“Keuk!”

I took a few steps back after being punched in the guts. A few cracks appeared on my Spirit Stone armor.

The assailants suddenly stopped and jumped on top of the alley again. They stared at us like a group of owls.

What were they doing? Were they just laughing and toying with us? Or did they have a reason for doing that?

I composed myself and reloaded my gun while thinking. A single word popped up in my head.

“Wind...”

These bastards only made a move when the wind blew. Come to think of it, a mana storm had occurred when they first ambushed Rachel. Did that mean their powers somehow came from the wind itself? I would’ve written Lancaster’s settings in detail if I knew this would happen.

Whoosh!

A powerful gust blew this time. As expected, they threw their daggers along with the wind and proved my theory. Countering them became much easier now. I just had to get rid of the wind, right?

“...!”

I allowed two of their daggers to hit my waist. My Spirit Stone armor and aether immediately prevented any serious damage, but I pretended to crouch with my arms around my waist.

“Ah!”

Even Rachel fell for my acting as she exclaimed in surprise.

The assailants took the bait thanks to her. All nine of them rode the wind and charged at me.

I immediately activated the Spirit Stone’s power.

Krrrwaah!

The ground shot up and sealed the entire area to cut off the wind. The entire place grew dark as well.

“This can’t be...”

The assailants found themselves in trouble now that the wind disappeared. On the other hand, I couldn't be more comfortable. A sharpshooter like me who could see everything considered the darkness my most dependable ally.

Click... Clack!

Aether fused with my handgun and transformed it into a shotgun. My defense would significantly drop, but my destructive power increased by several times. Every bullet would blow up their bodies with excruciating pain.

Shwiiiiish!

The assailants threw hundreds of daggers in every direction, but Rachel stepped up and blocked all of them.

“A-Are you alright?!”

She desperately asked after being fooled by my acting.

“I'm fine, so you can continue resting.”

Rachel didn't seem to be in a good state. She probably felt dizzy and tired as the poison and Orb of Regeneration clashed within her body.

“No...”

She stubbornly refused.

Bang!

Rachel immediately covered her eyes and hunkered down when I fired a shot. I slowly walked forward and pulled the trigger again.

The assailants completely lost their mobility after I sealed the area and everything became dark. I shot my shotgun at their chests.

Thud! Thud! Thud!

The sound of something crashing into walls could be heard. My shotgun shells sent them flying. After all, a mere human could never stand up against technology.

Kwachik!

A dagger flew out from nowhere and struck my shoulder, but I didn't care as I shot another shell into the bastard's mouth.

Bang!

Splatter...

I blew his head off and splattered his brain all over the place.

"Ugh..."

I groaned in disgust and suppressed the urge to vomit. A metallic taste lingered on my tongue and the scent of blood filled the area.

However, I didn't stop and continued pulling the trigger. I destroyed everything in my path. The assailants didn't give up and charged at me with their lives on the line.

A dozen gunshots rang out within the sealed area.

"Hoo..."

The once human bodies became a pile of unrecognizable mush. I swallowed back my puke while standing in the middle of this. This was why I hated fighting in close combat and chose to be a sharpshooter.

I released the earth walls sealing the area and moonlight shone down on our surroundings. The scene of massacre looked like hell on Earth.

Rachel stared at me, but I couldn't tell how she felt.

"Are you alright?" I asked as I approached her.

She didn't respond. Instead, she slowly raised her hands and held my gas mask. Then, she drew her face inches away from mine and stared at me with trembling eyes.

I hardly ever saw her so shaken up. No, it felt like déjà vu from the past.

"Blood..."

She muttered while wiping the blood off my gas mask.

I smiled and shook my head. "It's not my blood."

Rachel stared at me intently.

The gas mask probably wouldn't be any use this close. We looked into each other's eyes without a word.

Why did I wear this tacky gas mask anyways? What a shame... I should've worn something much cooler. Tons of cool masks existed, right?

"...!"

Rachel suddenly wrapped her arms around my neck. The dagger flying towards my neck stabbed her arm instead.

I quickly turned around and saw an arm from one of the bodies I blew up. It seemed to have thrown the dagger by itself even after being separated from its body.

I immediately shot it with my handgun.

Whiiiiing...

A siren blared when I thought everything had ended. The gunshots must've attracted the police.

I looked at the sky and turned back to Rachel. She gazed at me in exhaustion as her eyes slowly closed. She looked quite peaceful as she fell asleep.

* * *

Rachel slowly opened her eyes to a flickering light bulb on the ceiling.

Zzzt... Zzzt... Zzzt...

The light bulb dazed her and made her feel as if she might still be dreaming. Her entire body felt like peacefully floating.

“Are you awake?”

A voice dragged her consciousness back.

Rachel turned and saw a man sitting on a chair. They met a long time ago, but he seemed so familiar as if they just met yesterday. It was Kim Hajin.

As expected, this wasn't a dream. Rachel touched her face and clothes before getting up, but suddenly felt dizzy and staggered when she stood.

“Are you alright?” he asked in his usual kind voice.

She felt awkward and couldn't get used to it after such a long time.

“Yes...” she awkwardly replied.

“Then, look at this.”

“...”

She had a lot of things to ask, but decided to do as he said for now. Kim Hajin typed on a keyboard and clicked the mouse a few times. She looked at the file he opened.

[A ravaged body has been found...]

[A massacre took place...]

[Is it a zombie drug?]

She had seen some of this news while eating at Kimcheon Food Country. It seemed Kim Hajin already knew where the first incident took place.

“Don’t you think the clear condition is related to this place?”

“...”

Rachel thoroughly went over the file before nodding.

She kept stealing glances at him while pouting as if to show she had a lot of questions to ask. For her, the clear condition became secondary to what really happened. Had he really been Xtra? Why did he help her as Xtra? Also, what was the truth behind James Finley?

“If you’re curious how Lancaster’s minions came here... I can only guess his organization already infiltrated the general assembly. Hmm... Or they might’ve gathered enough contribution points to intervene with the general assembly...”

Kim Hajin didn’t give Rachel a chance to ask and continued talking about important matters even though she expressed her discontent by pouting. He continued with formal talk as if indirectly telling her he didn’t plan on explaining or she didn’t have the right to know.

“We should probably round up your guild members before getting involved any further, right?”

Kim Hajin asked, but seemed to have already decided as if he was the guild leader.

Rachel tried to retort as the English Royal Court’s vice leader, but couldn’t utter a word. She tried to say something, but her vocal cords wouldn’t work. Instead, an excruciating pain spread all over her body.

She tried to suppress the pain and strange sensation, but...

Growl...

A growling sound rang out across the room.

“Ack!”

Rachel flinched in surprise and covered her stomach with a pillow. Not that it would do anything to stop the sound.

Groooooowl...

Her stomach growled even stronger this time.

She felt shame and embarrassment that she had never felt before in her life.

“This... No... This is... What I mean is...”

She stuttered incomprehensibly.

“...”

Kim Hajin silently stared at her and Rachel didn't want to decipher the meaning behind that look. She bit her lips and closed her eyes to concentrate on controlling her stomach.

“Are you hungry?”

“...”

Rachel slightly opened her eyes at his words and replied in a shaky voice.

“I keep trying... but I can't help it...”

To be frank, it was a natural phenomenon. Her mana-enhanced body drew most of its energy from the mana she breathed in around her. However, this world had no mana and she had to supplement all her energy with food alone. She couldn't escape from her destiny of becoming a glutton.

She would probably struggle with this new lifestyle. Her appetite had increased by several times. If compared to an animal... it wouldn't be an exaggeration to say her appetite now matched an elephant's.

“No, I completely understand.”

Kim Hajin thought about feeding Rachel before anything else.

“Ah... this is really... ah... why am I like this... why...”

She felt like she would cry without anything to eat. Twelve hours had passed since the fierce battle last night.

“Just wait a bit.”

Kim Hajin got up and headed to the kitchen. He thought about cooking the same food that Evandel liked, except he would make four or five times the portion.

First, he opened the refrigerator and pretended to take out ingredients while rolling the random dice. The random dice filled the refrigerator with top-class ingredients.

Growl... Groooooowl...

Rachel's stomach continued growling.

She panicked as her royal image diminished from her noisy stomach. Kim Hajin played some music to cover up the sound.

Her stomach could no longer be heard thanks to his thoughtful gesture. He had to crank up the volume a bit though to drown it out.

Side Stories 21

Dream in a Dream (21)

I placed a bundle of pasta into the pot and some beef into the frying pan. I cooked up a steak and carbonara sauce after roughly looking up the recipe online. Then I drizzled the steak with sauce and garnished it with vegetables. I also plated the carbonara with garnishes.

It would be lackluster to only have western cuisine, so I cooked a pot of rice and kimchi stew with pork neck.

All in all, the entire meal could feed more than ten people. I set all the food in front of Rachel.

“Thank you.”

She didn’t decline the feast.

Rachel initially tried to mind her table manners, but slowly became a pig. Her eyes widened like Evandel whenever she took a bite. I couldn’t help but find it adorable.

I looked out the window and thought about a few things as Rachel stuffed herself. This stage took place in South Korea during the year 2018. I used to rent this two bedroom unit with a twenty million won deposit and six hundred thousand won a month in rent as a novel writer. Of course, I knew the door’s passcode since I used to live here. The code had been my birthday.

I always missed this world where neither mana nor monsters existed. However, I wondered how the General Assembly recreated this world. How did it know about my existence? And why did Rachel choose this stage out of the numerous options available?

“Fwah...”

Rachel's satisfied sigh woke me from my thoughts. Only empty plates remained on the table. I looked at the clock and seven minutes had passed since she began eating.

"Are you alright now?"

Rachel came back to her senses at my question and put on a serious, yet relaxed expression.

"Yes..."

"How was it? Good?"

"It was..."

Her eyes sparkled and she subconsciously licked her lips. Sseup! Then she continued in a trembling voice.

"This is my first time... How can something... so delicious exist?"

I ended up laughing.

Her reaction might be normal since Young Dwarf's Dexterity played a role, but the saying also went that the most delicious ingredient was one's hunger.

"That's a relief."

"Did you learn how to cook? It seems like you've been cooking for decades!"

"Not at all. Anyways, I'll keep cooking for you at least until this stage ends."

"...!"

Rachel looked at me full of emotions. Then she glanced back and forth between me and the empty dishes on the table. It seemed she felt quite overwhelmed. However, she soon composed herself.

“Hajin...”

She sounded serious, so I silently waited for the conversation that would finally happen. Rachel stared at me for a while and pondered what to ask first.

“I have a lot of things I want to know.”

She said before sighing.

Why did you kill James Finley? Why did you suddenly appear out of nowhere and help me? Why did you treat me so harshly?

She decided not to ask these questions and would wait until I mentioned them first. Rachel decided to ask about something else.

“Where do you think this world is?”

However, I hoped that she wouldn’t ask this one question and bitterly smiled.

* * *

We walked through the streets early in the afternoon towards the recent zombie murder scene to find out more about this stage and its clear condition.

“Seems like we won’t be able to enter,” I grumbled.

The crime scene hadn’t been far from my house, but the police had sealed it off with yellow tape like in the movies. Numerous forensic experts and police patrolled the premises.

“Ah, wait a minute. There are some traces over there.”

Rachel closed her eyes and extended a finger. A small spirit that looked like a water droplet appeared from her index finger.

“Hooo...”

She blew on the spirit and it set off. The spirit flew towards the crime scene like a dandelion seed. It stayed on the ground for a while before returning to Rachel.

“What did you do?”

“I communicated with the earth spirit there.”

“Ah...”

The ability seemed similar to psychometry.

“...”

Rachel placed the spirit on her finger and closed her eyes.

I quietly stood until she finished receiving the spirit’s memories, but someone seemed to be observing us. I initially thought it might be an enemy, but the gaze didn’t feel hostile. It seemed quite favorable.

“Ah...”

It didn’t take long for me to figure it out. The beauty standing beside me stood out more than anyone else on this entire street. Rachel attracted everyone’s attention by simply breathing. Even the police guarding the perimeters stole glances at her as if mesmerized by her beauty.

“I found out what happened.” Rachel opened her eyes with a determined look.

“There’s a spell related to the undead that... Huh?”

“Wait a minute.” I interrupted her and took off my cap to put it on her.

Rachel tilted her head at me.

“I think it’ll be better if you wear this instead of me. After all, there are only Asians...”

The cap immediately slid down without a push. It looked cute on her small head.

“Hmm... Let’s make it look more hip-hop.”

I slightly turned the cap to make it look more hip.

“It looks good on you even though it’s a bit big...”

I complimented her without much thought and Rachel smiled underneath the oversized cap. Her beautiful eyes formed an elegant arc that also looked cute. My heart skipped a beat, but I pretended to act normal.

“Ehem... Let’s go somewhere else to discuss.”

I faked a cough.

* * *

Rachel’s spirit told her what happened in detail.

A sorcerer who worshiped the undead had been behind the zombie murder incident.

“So to summarize... stopping that guy is the clear condition for this stage?”

“I think so too, but...” Rachel paused and nervously looked at me.

“Can you speak to me comfortably... like you used to?”

I thought about what she meant. She was probably referring to how I spoke to her as Xtra.

“Huh? No, at that time... well... I forced myself to act like that so my identity wouldn’t be discovered. I actually had a hard time talking down to you.”

“You sounded quite comfortable and you seemed to be having fun.”

Rachel retorted while pouting.

I awkwardly scratched my neck. However, looking at her pouting made me want to talk comfortably again. Honestly, her pouting face reminded me of Evandel.

“Sure, then I’ll be talking comfortably with you.”

“Pardon?”

“I said I’ll speak comfortably.”

Did she perhaps not expect this? Rachel seemed surprised and spaced out before finally nodding.

“O-Okay, but you can keep talking formally if you find it uncomfortable—”

“It’s fine. Anyways, we should probably look for those guys, right?”

“Y-Yes, that’s correct.”

“Any ideas?”

“I do have one, but...” Rachel summoned her spirit that looked like a water droplet again.

“This spirit can guide us.”

“Alright.”

I took out a mask that I prepared. The gas mask made me look cheap, so I crafted a different one while Rachel ate.

She looked at me.

“That’s...?”

“It’s a mask.”

“I know.”

Rachel squinted as if to say, Do you think I’m that stupid? Then she reached out to touch the mask.

I suddenly froze. She had been doing quite a lot of things that weren’t good for my heart.

“What symbol is this?”

“A lotus.”

The Tower of Wish kept giving me items related to a lotus, so I purposely drew one on my new mask as well.

“Ah, lotus... a lotus?” Rachel muttered with a strange look as if trying to recall something.

“Why?”

“Nothing, it just feels like I’ve seen it somewhere. Maybe I’m mistaken...”

Rachel sighed and gave up on trying to remember. She put on the cap and gas mask that I used before.

“Oh, take this.”

I took out a smartphone and explained, “Our smartwatches don’t work here, so we’ll have to keep in touch with these.”

“Ah, yes...”

Rachel fiddled with the Apple iPhone.

“Will you use a smartphone too?”

“Ah, I’ll be using my smartwatch since I already synchronized it.”

“Synchronize?”

“Yeah, you can do it through your license. I have a lot of contribution points, you see.”

“...”

Rachel didn’t say anything and extended out her hand. She seemed to be asking for my smartphone.

I smiled and gave it to her.

“It’s different from mine.”

“Yeah, this model is called a Galaxy.”

“Ah...”

Tap Tap—

Rachel pressed on the screen with two fingers. She fiddled without knowing how to use it and pressed on every pretty icon.

I became distracted for a second when Rachel suddenly flinched.

“Huh?”

She stared at my smartphone in serious shock.

What happened all of a sudden? I slowly grew nervous and took my phone from her when I saw that she had opened my gallery. The phone had been synced to the gallery on my smartwatch. My heart sank when I thought she saw Evandel's pictures.

"W-Why... why is my picture..."

"Hmm?"

Fortunately, she didn't know how to scroll through and only saw one of hers. I inwardly sighed in relief. Then I realized there was nothing to be relieved about.

"Wait a second. Please give that back."

She reached for the phone again, but I turned away and shielded it from her.

"Hajin."

She extended her hand out with a serious look. Her cheeks became a bit flushed, but I didn't know if she felt ashamed or embarrassed.

"Huh?"

"G-Give that to me."

"Give what?"

"I saw my picture just now."

"Ah, that one? I can explain. No, I'll explain."

I found myself speaking formally to her.

Rachel tried all sorts of things to take my phone. I raised it above my head, but she tried to jump for it. Our height difference wasn't huge, so she almost succeeded.

"Wait! Wait! I can explain!"

“I don’t need your explanation. I’ll see for myself because I think I saw it wrong.”

“No, you can’t! This is my phone!”

“But I’m certain I saw my picture just now?”

“I said I’ll explain what happened—”

“Give that to me!”

“Waiiiit!”

* * *

Two hours later...

The spirit guided us to Bukhan Mountain. The air between us contained a hint of awkwardness because of the ruckus over my phone.

“...”

“...”

The night turned cold and dark. Rachel continued guiding without a word and I quietly followed.

“It should be around here somewhere. Hmm...”

She seemed conscious of me and I also felt awkward as hell. However, I tried my best not to show it.

“Is it...” I awkwardly replied.

Rachel’s spirit roughly found the location where they secretly gathered, but couldn’t pinpoint their exact hiding spot on this vast mountain.

We aimlessly wandered as owls hooted and the full moon barely shone through the trees.

“Uhhh...” Rachel awkwardly kicked the dead leaves on the ground as she walked.

“Yes?” I replied while scratching my neck.

She glanced at me and sighed before looking at the night sky.

“I’m just saying this in case...”

I listened to her without a word. She would probably mention the picture again. I wondered if I should sincerely apologize or deny being a stalker. Of course, I chose to sincerely apologize since that seemed like the best course of action.

“I... I’m not able to receive someone’s love or love someone... I’m not in the position to do that...”

“What?”

“I’ll be like that for a long time. No, probably for the rest of my life. I won’t be able to receive or love anyone.”

She began spouting strange nonsense. I looked at her in disbelief and made sure my expression clearly expressed how I felt about all of this. However, she kept avoiding my gaze.

“So just in case you’re—”

Fortunately (or unfortunately), Rachel couldn’t continue.

“Who are you?!”

Someone suddenly shouted and...

Grrwuoooook!

A huge amount of dirt covered the sky like a landslide crashing down on us.

Side Stories 22

Dream in a Dream (22)

I immediately activated the Spirit Stone's power before the dirt crashed on us. A wind barrier appeared just in time when the assailants charged at us like flies.

“Euk!”

Their faces looked hideous after crashing into the barrier, but Rachel and I had grown accustomed to such sights.

Rachel looked at the barrier before looking back at me.

“Hajin... this is... by any chance...?”

It seemed she felt the Spirit Stone's power when I activated it. I did use it once before, but it had been so hectic she probably didn't notice back then. I didn't particularly try to hide it either and honestly replied.

“I can use the spirits to an extent.”

Rachel's eyes widened like an owl's and I sheepishly smiled. The two people clinging to the wind barrier looked at us and shouted.

“Huh?!”

“Vice Leader!”

I recognized them too as Fermin and Kayle, but I had no idea why they showed up here. I promptly canceled the wind barrier.

“Kyah!”

Both of them fell to the ground and jumped like springs towards Rachel.

“I missed you!”

They exclaimed and gave Rachel a big hug. She patted their backs.

“It’s fine now. You don’t have to cry. What about the others?”

“We haven’t met them yet...”

“Then, what brings the both of you here?”

“Ah!”

Fermin separated herself from Rachel.

“We found some clues regarding the clear condition. These voodoo dolls, nails, and some other stuff are required to cast a curse...”

Fermin rummaged through her backpack and took out a few items that served as catalysts for curses or rituals to summon the dead. She briefly paused to glance at me and I immediately checked if my mask properly covered my face. Thankfully, it still did its job.

“That person is...?”

“Our mercenary, Xtra.”

Rachel informed them.

“What?!” Fermin’s eyes shot open and she scanned me from head to toe.

“He’s shorter than I imagined!”

“...”

“I thought he would be at least 190 cm.”

I wanted to retort that my height could be considered average in South Korea, but I suppressed the urge to fight for my dignity. I despised the fact that I couldn't alter my height with settings intervention.

“Fermin?”

Rachel rebuked her gently, yet sternly. Fermin immediately apologized with a bow.

“Ah, yes... I apologize...”

I simply shrugged it off.

Rachel sighed and looked at Fermin and Kayle's dirty faces.

“That aside, where have the two of you been staying? Did you manage to find a place?”

“Ah, us? Well... we...”

* * *

Fermin led them to a cavern.

The entrance seemed quite shabby, but the interior had the basic necessities for humans to live. They had cooking utensils, gas stoves, gas lamps, and furniture like beds and dining tables. It seemed cozy like a mountain lodge.

“We stayed here and hunted wild animals on the mountain for food. Whatever we lacked, we went down to the nearby town and borrowed,” Fermin explained to them.

“Borrow?” Rachel asked with skepticism.

“Yes, there were a lot of butcheries nearby.”

“Ah... Are these furniture from there?”

“Yes, we borrowed them for now. I’ll have to pay them back once I make some money.”

Rachel felt slightly surprised as she sat on the bed named RikuRiku.

Fermin briefly hesitated before asking, “But Vice Leader, were you... together with Xtra the entire time?”

Rachel nodded and her heart sank as if heavy lead dragged it down. She found out about something she shouldn’t have. A part of her regretted finding out. She should’ve stayed still, so she wouldn’t experience such a dilemma right now.

“Umm... Did something happen?”

“Nothing happened. I safely got by thanks to him.”

Rachel replied with a smile. She felt certain he collected pictures of her... because he liked her. He probably held on to these feelings for a long time now. It probably dated back to their days at Cube.

Rachel found his precious feelings burdensome, so she told him that she couldn’t give or receive any love.

“Anyways, you mentioned something around here?” Rachel changed the subject.

Fermin noticed her bitter smile, but feigned ignorance and went along with the flow.

“Yes, there’s a secret gathering place about a twenty minute climb from here.”

It certainly had something to do with the stage’s clear condition.

“Thank you. Then, we shouldn’t waste any time.”

Rachel steeled her resolve to investigate this secret gathering place, but ended up sighing.

She couldn't help but feel bothered by what she saw. The picture on Hajin's smartphone popped up in her mind as if to tease her. Did people usually collect pictures of the person they loved? Is that why he had pictures of her?

However, she had never fallen for anyone and had no idea how to deal with the situation. Should she coldly push him away because she couldn't reciprocate his feelings? Or should she apologize and ask him to back off?

Rachel clenched her fists as various thoughts crossed her mind and weighed her heart.

"Vice Leader?"

"You don't look so good, Vice Leader."

Fermin and Kayle expressed their worries.

Rachel shook her head and stood up. "I'm fine. Let's get moving."

"Yes, ma'am!"

The three of them left the cavern.

Kim Hajin volunteered to stand watch outside and looked at the night sky.

Fermin nudged Rachel's arm and teased her.

"Look at him sitting all alone up there. Something happened, right?"

"N-No, nothing happened. What could possibly have happened?" Rachel retorted while breaking into a cold sweat.

Kim Hajin looked down at them from the tree.

“We’re heading out now!” Fermin shouted to him.

He came down from the tree without a word.

Fermin looked at Rachel and Kim Hajin a few times before grinning and turning around to lead the way.

Rustle... Rustle...

They walked through the mountain path covered with dead leaves. Rachel couldn’t help but be conscious of Kim Hajin walking in front of her. She tried her best not to be bothered. Fortunately, the walk wasn’t far.

“It’s over here.”

Fermin stopped in front of a suspicious bush.

The bush and tree branches covering the cave entrance emitted a sinister aura.

“I wanted to go in the moment I found it, but there seems to be an alarm.”

“...”

Kim Hajin suddenly stepped forward and used the Spirit Stone’s power to surround them with a mysterious wind. This made their bodies light enough to not trigger the alarm and they could even phase through objects.

“Wow?”

“What is this? What kind of buff is this? Did Vice Leader cast it?”

Fermin and Kayle’s eyes widened in surprise, but Rachel seemed even more shocked.

To think that he could use this much power from the spirits in a world without mana... No, now that she thought about it, it was Kim Hajin who helped awaken her ability to control spirits. Maybe, just maybe, he awakened this potential even earlier than her and helped her because he felt frustrated watching her.

Rachel followed Kim Hajin while lost in her own imagination.

The cave separated into multiple paths like an ant nest, but Kim Hajin continued without an ounce of hesitation.

“...”

Around ten minutes passed before he suddenly raised his hand and signaled them to stop. Then he sent a message through his smartwatch.

[There's a group of people over there.]

Kim Hajin spotted a few hundred people ahead. All of them seemed possessed or bewitched while doing something.

“I think we'll have to stop them...”

“Yeah.”

Kim Hajin took out the [Black Lotus Bow] when their surroundings began to collapse.

Drrrrrr!

A message popped up on their smartwatches.

[Your right to enter first has expired. You may reconnect after twelve hours.]

“What?”

They didn't even have time to process the message as the space around them distorted and a ceiling covered in blue crystals appeared.

“What the hell?!” Kim Hajin exclaimed and immediately stood up. He looked around and found himself in the general assembly’s lounge.

However, Chae Nayun appeared in front of him.

“...”

They looked at each other without a word and neither of them expected such a meeting.

Chae Nayun’s mouth opened wide and her drink fell to the floor. She stood from her seat and ran out as fast as possible.

One other person sat beside her and had been left behind.

“Kim Hajin?”

Kim Hajin hurriedly put on his mask, but Yoo Yeonha snickered and crossed her arms over her chest. Then the door to the lounge opened and a group walked in.

“Ah, the first team returned.”

Kim Suho pointed at the English Royal Court members stacked on top of each other like a hamburger.

Yun Seung-Ah, Yi Yeonghan, and other guild representatives left sucking their thumbs this entire time entered the room.

“Why do all of you look like that?”

Aileen tilted her head at the English Royal Court members.

Rachel rubbed her aching head and checked her members first. All of them, including herself, managed to safely return. A few of them looked extremely haggard, but didn’t suffer from anything serious.

Aileen’s voice reverberated throughout the room.

“Now! Listen up and focus! The second and third tests will simultaneously take place in twelve hours!”

* * *

The English Royal Court members had forcibly returned to the general assembly hall after their right to first entry expired. They didn't mind since they could simply re-enter after twelve hours. They also obtained a solid lead towards the test's clear condition.

However, a lot of uncomfortable facts popped up during the test.

Rachel stood outside her balcony to calm her troubled heart. The view surrounded by nature looked calm and peaceful. Looking out the window slowly cleared her mind.

— I hope you will reach me soon, princess. I will wait for you at that place with this hope. That place... with less darkness and more sunlight. Less cold and more warmth than this world we live in...

She recalled meeting Lancaster in that stage. Lancaster had mentioned that place, but how could she possibly go there? What had Lancaster witnessed at this general assembly? Could they really change the course of what happened that day?

“No way, how is that even possible?” Rachel muttered to herself before sighing.

“I see that there's someone above me.”

Someone suddenly spoke from below her. Rachel immediately recognized the voice as Sehat.

“Is that you? Sir Sehat?”

“Oh, how did you know?”

“I'm good at remembering people. Whether it's their face or voice...”

“That’s quite amazing.”

Sehat spoke while clapping.

Rachel bitterly smiled and asked, “What did you do at your stage, Sir Sehat?”

“Well, there was nothing much other than struggling with hunger... I guess?”

“Ah...”

Rachel smiled and felt relieved she hadn’t been the only one.

“That’s alright. We managed to find some leads on the clear condition, so rest up and we’ll enter together next time.”

“I apologize. We’re always on the receiving end.”

“Please, don’t mention it. After all, we’re allies.”

“Umm... That person is Xtra, right?”

Sehat suddenly asked something strange.

“Pardon me?”

“There, that person wearing a mask.” Sehat pointed somewhere.

Rachel spotted Kim Hajin wearing his lotus-engraved mask and talking to Yoo Yeonha.

Yoo Yeonha said something first and Kim Hajin replied, but Rachel couldn’t hear anything from this distance. More importantly, how had they been acquainted here? Rachel couldn’t help but furrow her brows at them.

“It seems he knows Team Leader Yoo Yeonha as well. He’s quite the mysterious one. I hope to see the face under that mask one day.”

“Is that so? Anyways, I’ll excuse myself now,” Rachel curtly replied and went inside her room. She slammed her balcony door shut. Bam! Then she paced around her room for a while before making her way to their accommodation hall.

The English Royal Court had its own accommodation hall now. Their lodging underwent a drastic transformation after Xtra entered the general assembly with his massive amount of contribution points.

They now had an office, three floors with twenty-four rooms, and ten servants. They could invite others without feeling ashamed and could even rent out the remaining rooms for a fee.

“So, there was no mana over there?”

“How would we beat those undead without any mana?”

“Beats me. No, rather than that, how can they summon the undead when there’s no mana?”

The guild members gathered in the living room and exchanged information regarding the test. Rachel observed them for a while before making her way to the office.

“Amazing,” she uttered in astonishment.

This grand office looked like it belonged to a feudal lord from the medieval times. She looked around for anyone else before taking out a notebook with a lock in the middle.

[Diary]

She had been advised that keeping a diary would help her mental health, so she forced herself to write every day for the past six months.

Rachel picked up the quill on the desk and began writing what happened yesterday and today along with all her emotions. She continued writing until she regained her composure.

“Hoo...”

Rachel finally sighed in relief and looked at the clock. Thirty minutes had passed and her diary now contained nine pages of entries. She closed her diary and checked the thesis on her smartwatch. Kim Hajin submitted this thesis for the first test.

She focused on reading as hard as she could before sprawling on the desk.

Huff... Huff...

Her small and gentle breathing filled the room.

Did everything that happened tired her out that much?

Rachel dreamt a slightly strange dream.

Side Stories 23

Dream in a Dream (23)

“I think I’m going to die...”

“Phew...”

“Aigoo... My joints are killing me!”

Twenty-four guild members sat around an empty lot and sighed. All their smartwatches rang as they received the General Assembly’s message.

[Clear Condition Completed – Defeat the brotherhood singing the Song of Destruction.]

[The Reislaufer and English Royal Court alliance has completed the second test – Hometown of Dream.]

[The contribution points will be distributed according to each member’s contributions during the test.]

Contribution Ranking:

1. Rachel

2. Setien

3. Xtra...

Undead corpses filled the dark forest. Their rotten black blood tainted the ground and gave off a disgusting stench. Various mutilated body parts littered the ground.

The guild members didn't move a single step in this horrifying scene. They all felt so exhausted that they couldn't even grumble a complaint.

The second test had been that difficult. They expected the sorcerers to summon a legion of undead, but none of them expected a death knight. A near-infinite number of mobs like ghouls and zombies supported the boss, which further increased the raid's difficulty.

"As expected of Rachel who graduated second from Cube."

Tilma from Reislaufer praised the English Royal Court's vice leader.

Tilma was a world-renowned hero also famous for her beautiful smile and charming looks.

Rachel laughed and shook her head.

"No, not at all."

She wanted to be humble, but no one could deny that Rachel played a key role in today's victory. She noticed first that the undead could move without mana because they relied on human blood for fuel. She also found the blood well and evaporated it using her spirits.

No one could deny her top spot in the rankings for this test. They probably would've lost the battle of attrition against the unending waves if not for Rachel.

"Also..."

Tilma turned around to look for someone.

However, she couldn't find that man anywhere. Xtra displayed an impressive prowess far greater than most heroes.

"Where did he go?"

She wondered under her breath as she recalled his arrows that disappeared and suddenly reappeared.

Xtra had saved her whenever an enemy she failed to notice almost ripped her neck off. His arrows only struck the enemies even though her neck had been inches away. She felt even more surprised when he did this numerous times and never missed.

“Where did that mercenary go?”

She didn’t dislike the feeling of being protected and finally understood why guilds favored a skilled sharpshooter over warriors that stood in the front.

“Mercenary? Do you mean our mercenary?”

Fermin treated the wounded and stood.

“Yeah, I was curious what kind of person he is. Rumors say he descended from Baekdu Mountain. Is that true?” Tilma asked with a smirk.

They spoke to each other for the first time since the alliance, but both of them actually had a junior and senior relationship at Cube.

“Hehe, we have no idea about that either,” Fermin replied with a sheepish smile.

“Oh really?”

Tilma turned to Rachel and wanted to ask. However, the rumors regarding Rachel and Xtra had been so scandalous that Tilma decided not to. She faked a cough without saying anything.

“Here, please take this.”

Setien handed something to Rachel.

“What is it?”

“It was on the death knight’s corpse. It says it’s some kind of entry ticket.”

“Entry ticket?”

“Yes, it says whoever uses it will be able to re-enter this stage.”

Who would want to come back here? Rachel wondered to herself.

Shwiiiiik!

A wire flew from somewhere and snatched the entry ticket away. Rachel jumped in surprise and immediately looked at the tree where the wire came from. She spotted Xtra on top.

“I’ll be taking this.”

He inspected the entry ticket.

Everyone stared at him, but he disappeared almost immediately into the dark before anyone could say anything.

“What the hell? Is he Batman or something?” Tilma grumbled in disbelief.

“He’s always like that. I think the chuuni syndrome hit him hard or something.”

Fermin snickered as she tapped Tilma’s shoulder.

Marcus appeared just in time after sweeping up the loot from their surroundings.

“Listen up, everyone! This is what you’ve all been waiting for! Time for loot distribution!”

Their loot included the sorcerers’ robes, wands, the death knight’s skull, bone, armor, sword, and the dullahan’s armor, sword, bone, etc.

They felt a slight aversion towards the undead body parts, but these could be crafted into excellent equipment as long as they properly purified it.

Meanwhile, Rachel scanned the pile of loot for anything that might catch her eye.

* * *

Rachel woke up the next morning.

“...?”

She looked up and saw a chandelier. Her back felt comfortable. She found herself in her room and on her bed.

I'm sure I fell asleep on the office desk last night, but why am I here? Did Fermin move me? Or maybe... don't tell me... Was it him?

She discarded such thoughts and quickly got up. Rachel smacked her face that blushed from her delusions and stepped out of the room.

The English Royal Court servants were busy at work.

“Oh, Vice Leader! Do you want to play a game with us?”

Marcus waved from a table through the wide-opened door that led to the lounge.

Rachel tilted her head and looked inside. The English Royal Court members, including Fermin and Marcus, were playing poker with Reislauer members like Tilma and Maurice.

“I'll pass.”

Rachel told them.

“Come on. Join us.”

Marcus tried to convince her, but she refused and walked to the entrance. Rachel opened the door to leave.

Creak...

She didn't think about anything in particular as she left with a yawn.

"Haaa..."

Rachel immediately noticed that something felt off beyond the luxurious door.

Strange stones had been embedded in the ground like stepping stones. She observed them for a while before looking up.

"...?"

The scenery outside looked like a completely different world from the general assembly she recalled. Yes, a completely different world perfectly described the drastic change.

Small huts and brick houses lined up below the hill. People and carriages went about their business. This couldn't be considered modern in any way.

Rachel stood dumbfounded and wondered if she was still dreaming when a voice suddenly spoke from above.

"This is the third test."

Rachel flinched and looked up. There, she saw Kim Hajin sitting on top of a Zelkova tree^[1] in the middle of the garden.

"You didn't check your watch again?"

He smirked while tapping his smartwatch and Rachel quickly checked hers.

[The third test will now begin for those who have cleared the second stage.]

[Third Test – Mixed Up Stories]

[First Objective – Accumulate your fame and renown to earn an invitation to the king's castle!]

[Tip – The king loves the arts and martial arts.]

[Current Renown – 1%]

“Interesting, right? This is basically the medieval period. Or is it the renaissance period? Anyways, it looks like something out of the Lord of the Rings.”

The city beneath the hill had artists, magicians, sorcerers, swordsmen, and merchants. Not everything about the city looked like fantasy.

“It also has a modern twist.”

Kim Hajin pointed something out to Rachel.

“Modern twist?”

She asked and he lightly nodded.

“Yeah, there's a bridge over there that connects to another continent. That continent is similar to the modern world. No, it looks like a complete replica.”

Rachel continued listening when a thought suddenly struck her and she desperately asked.

“Are there buildings resembling England there too?!”

She looked quite serious, so Kim Hajin furrowed his brows and stared into the distance before nodding.

“It's a bit far, but I think I see something. Big Ben... Yeah, it looks like the Big Ben.”

Rachel felt her heart drop. She finally understood Lancaster's words and what he wanted from this place. It all began to make sense now.

"I can see the Hampton Palace too. It's definitely England," Kim Hajin added.

Rachel bit her lips. Kim Hajin observed her for a while before speaking in a low voice.

"I don't think you should mind the Hampton that much..."

"No."

Rachel fiercely cut him off.

"Huh?"

"Please stop... Don't bring that up. I don't want to hear it."

Everyone knew the events that transpired that day, but Rachel didn't want to hear about it from someone else. She hoped that no one would ever talk to her or ask about it. No, she loathed the idea of those who didn't have the right babbling and gossiping about that day.

However, Kim Hajin only grimaced.

"I don't want to."

"Pardon?"

"Why should I?"

"W-What did you just say?"

She never expected such a reaction and became dumbfounded rather than angry.

"How frustrating..."

Kim Hajin found her frustrating. The trauma from that day continued to tie her down. Of course, he had written that as her setting, which made him all the more frustrated. He made that setting so she could overcome her trauma, but she never thought about overcoming it at all.

“Why do you keep thinking everything was your fault and that only you have to carry that burden?”

“...”

“Is it because you want to be the main character of a tragic movie? Do you want to be the only one holding that title? What? Are you an actress? Is the entire world just a movie to you?”

Rachel couldn't retort a single word. She remained silent and didn't want to argue.

Kim Hajin could read her thoughts and descended from the tree. He stared at Rachel, who didn't even look at him, and spoke in a low voice.

“The Rachel I've been observing until now is too... pathetic. No, you're worse than pathetic. You're hopeless. You're so hopeless that I'm considering quitting your fan club.”

Grit—

Rachel gritted her teeth and clenched her fists.

Kim Hajin left her standing there and leisurely walked away.

“...”

Her entire body trembled as she kept looking at the ground. A drop of blood dripped to the ground. She bit her lips so hard that they bled.

I walked the streets alone. The shops on this medieval street sold all sorts of magic items, monster parts, butchered meat, etc. Also, one could earn fame and renown at various places like the underground arena or academy.

I walked for a while and spotted Aileen. She seemed busy running around sightseeing. On the other hand, Rachel walked a distance away with a sullen look.

“Haaa...”

I couldn't help but sigh. I felt pissed off today and ended up striking a nerve in Rachel too. I probably snapped at her to vent, but her actions had frustrated me this entire time. Still, I shouldn't have blatantly attacked her like that.

[Entry Ticket – Hometown of Dreams]

This entry ticket had caused it. It would allow me to stay at the second stage. I didn't think much of it, but it began bothering me since last night.

What if... my mother and father lived somewhere in that stage? What if my friends lived there? What if my identity still remained there? That place might be a fake world recreated for the test, but what if I treated it like the real world?

“Alright! Alright! Come and sign up! Hey, you there! You look strong!”

A shout from somewhere cut off my train of thoughts and my gaze naturally went to the source.

A large wooden placard stood on top of a stage at the bustling marketplace.

[Commencement of the 13th National Competition]

[Anyone interested may sign up!]

Competition List:

1. Martial Arts Competition

2. Archery Competition

3. Hunting Competition...

“I wish to sign up.”

I heard a familiar voice, which turned out to be Rachel. She purposely ignored me even though I stood a few feet away. Mentioning Hampton had been a bad move on my end.

I might’ve been the one who created her setting, but I had no relation to Hampton. I’m sure Rachel found it ridiculous that I mentioned it in the first place.

I decided to step back for now.

“Sigh...”

Which competition should I join? Do I even have to join one? I pondered for a while when I saw a nameless artist drawing on the riverbanks. The colors he drew on the canvas looked beautiful.

“Hmm...”

I looked at my hands that possessed the valuable gift known as Young Dwarf’s Dexterity. Wait a minute. The message said the king had an interest in the arts.

[Art Supply Store]

It didn’t take long to find the art supply store. I wanted to go inside when someone suddenly called out.

“Excuse me.”

“Huh? What the...?”

Yoo Yeonha appeared out of nowhere.

What? Did they already clear the second test?

“Can you come here for a second?”

Yoo Yeonha pointed to an alley with her chin.

I followed her without hesitation. I noticed a sharp gaze on my back, but it soon disappeared.

I decided to ignore it and stood in front of Yoo Yeonha.

“What?”

“Please show me your watch.”

I extended my wrist and Yoo Yeonha bumped our smartwatches together to transmit information between them.

“What’s this?”

“Information I obtained from outside. It’s a picture taken by satellite.”

I looked through the eighteen pictures taken of the general assembly from outside, but wondered why she showed me. Huh?

“There are traces of humans and mana.”

“Yes, it looks like someone entered this place before we did. Don’t you find it strange? Where do you think they disappeared to?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha pointed to the ground as I remained silent.

“I think there’s a high chance they’re here. I investigated this stage and found four continents. They might be called continents, but they’re only the size of Gyeonggi-do at most. Anyways, every continent has its own king. I suspect these kings are those people.”

It sounded like a plausible theory. I crossed my arms and looked at her.

“If what you’re saying is true... I think I know one of the kings.”

“Huh? Who is it?”

“Lancaster.”

Yoo Yeonha rubbed her chin in thought.

“It sounds possible if it’s Lancaster, but what’s your basis?”

“England has been recreated, including the Hampton Palace.”

“That sounds quite concrete. Alright, you can head over before us. Have you found a way to increase your fame?”

“Somewhat.”

“What is it?” Yoo Yeonha stared at me full of curiosity and I awkwardly scratched my neck.

“Painting?”

I had no idea why I felt so embarrassed.

“Painting? You mean... like drawings and portraits?”

I made an okay sign with my fingers and Yoo Yeonha grimaced.

“Hehehe... It’s that bastard.”

Someone in a dark alley compared a man’s face to a bounty poster and sheepishly laughed.

He had no doubt about it. The man’s mask, silhouette, and description... Everything matched the bounty poster.

[Bounty – 500,000,000 won]

The reward would be a whopping five hundred million won, dead or alive.

The bounty hunter excitedly trembled and swallowed his saliva. The edge of his dagger shone as he followed his prey from a distance.

He patiently waited for the right moment to cut off his prey’s head. His prey wouldn’t even notice its death.

Sseeup...

The bounty hunter licked his lips as he slithered in the shadows like a snake waiting to strike.

1. For those wondering, this is an ornamental tree native to Eastern Asia. More info here: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Zelkova_serrata

Side Stories 24

Dream in a Dream (24)

I entered the art supply store with Yoo Yeonha. Various easels and canvases that exuded luxury lined the neatly organized store.

“Do you really plan on painting?”

Yoo Yeonha asked as I busily looked over the products. I didn’t bother responding as I picked a brush, palette, easel, canvas, oil paint, etc.

“How much will these be?”

I asked at the counter. The store owner wearing a beret and sleeve protectors looked at me skeptically.

“Do you know how to paint?”

I smirked at his question. Honestly, I had no idea. I figured I would naturally pick it up once I started.

“Of course, I’m buying these because I know how to paint.”

“Why are you wearing a mask? Do you have leprosy?”

“It’s none of your business, so please just tell me how much.”

The store owner grimaced and shook his head.

“We can’t sell our goods to any chap on the street. That’s the law.”

“I said I know how to paint. I might not be just another chap, you know?”

“...”

The store owner crossed his thick arms in disbelief and glared. It seemed like he would call the police if I stubbornly persisted.

I smirked again and nodded.

“Then, let’s do it like this. Sell me those first and I’ll go paint. You can gauge my skills and call the police if you’re not satisfied with my painting.”

“Hmm... You sound confident, don’t you?”

“Of course.”

“Okay, deal.”

I extended my card to the store owner and he snatched it out of my hand.

“How much—”

I asked, but the store owner interrupted me.

“Three million won. It’s actually three hundred thousand won, but I’m charging more just in case you run off. I’ll refund the full amount if you bring back your painting and I acknowledge your skills.”

I almost punched the store owner when he said three million won, but I composed myself after hearing him out.

I looked at Yoo Yeonha after paying for the items. She tilted her head and shrugged as if to ask why I looked at her.

“I need a model.”

“What?”

“I need a face to put on this canvas, right?”

I tapped on the easel and canvas.

Yoo Yeonha furrowed her brows and looked at me in disbelief. No, it might be more accurate to say she looked at me in disgust.

Five minutes later...

We came to a nearby park with excellent scenery. I asked her to sit on the grass while I prepared the easel. I placed the canvas on top and took out the palette and brush.

Yoo Yeonha began grumbling as I mixed the colors on my palette.

"I dare you to screw up. Be prepared to never see me again if you mess up a single stroke. Ah, don't even think about giving excuses like you were drawing an abstract painting of me. It has to be the real me or else—"

"Ah, quit whining will you? Why are you talking so much?"

I began painting after cutting her off.

Whik! Whik!

My brush strokes came out perfectly without a hint of hesitation.

"How did you all clear the second test?" I asked her while painting.

"Nayun did everything, what else?"

"Chae Nayun?"

"Yes, I think Nayun has reached an entirely different level now. It's safe to assume she's reached the pinnacle."

Yoo Yeonha proudly smiled as she recalled Chae Nayun's martial prowess.

"Is that so?"

I had no idea how strong Chae Nayun became, but she did switch to the sword a long time ago.

Yoo Yeonha sullenly looked at me.

“Can you be a bit more interested? You were the one who discovered her talent for the sword.”

“I did?”

“Yes, you turned Nayun into a swordsman.”

“Ah...”

I smiled after recalling the distant past, but didn’t say anything and focused on painting.

Yoo Yeonha sighed as if she gave up talking and focused on posing as well.

The brush moved according to my will as I transferred the beautiful woman surrounded by lush greenery onto the canvas.

* * *

Chae Nayun roamed around the third test’s stage.

She checked every main structure in the area including the king’s castle, the magic tower, the academy where they trained the next generation, and even the artist hall where they trained talented artists.

“Registration will close soon! Hurry and register!”

She saw a shirtless man causing a scene on her way to their lodgings. He kept telling people to sign up for the martial tournament, which Yoo Yeonha asked her to participate in.

“Ah, I should join that.”

Chae Nayun had completely forgotten. She went over to register when someone sulking on a nearby bench caught her attention.

This dumb blonde perfectly fitted the description of beauty.

“Why the hell is she over there looking all depressed?”

Chae Nayun thought about just ignoring her, but that dumb blonde was the protagonist of this world. She should at least go over and ask why it looked like Rachel stepped on shit.

Chae Nayun approached and sat beside her, but Rachel kept her head down and didn’t even notice.

“Ehem!”

Chae Nayun faked a cough, and only then did Rachel finally look up.

“What are you doing here?” Chae Nayun curtly asked her.

“...”

Rachel looked away and didn’t even have the strength to talk. Chae Nayun hated that face the most.

“What is it?”

“...”

“Chicken got your tongue? Why aren’t you talking all of a sudden?”

Rachel looked at her and weakly replied, “It’s not a chicken, it’s a cat...”

“Oh...”

Chae Nayun’s face became slightly flushed.

“T-That’s the same thing. Hey, I did that on purpose to make you laugh. You dare make fun of me? Haa, did you really think I didn’t know it was a cat?”

Her excuses sounded too obvious. Rachel didn’t even bother to entertain her. Chae Nayun acted dumb a few more times, but Rachel didn’t react at all.

“Sigh...”

Chae Nayun racked her brains. The only thing that could put Rachel in this state... She had no idea because they weren’t close, but if she had to guess...

“Hey, did you fight with Kim Hajin by any chance?”

Rachel flinched at her words. How did Chae Nayun know that Kim Hajin was Xtra? That question popped up in Rachel’s head first.

“I guess I’m right. What did you two fight over?” Chae Nayun asked, but Rachel didn’t want to talk about it.

However, Chae Nayun already did her research and had an idea. She faked two coughs before carefully speaking.

“Hampton?”

Rachel shook and turned towards Chae Nayun.

“Looks like it, but why did you two fight over something from so long ago?”

Rachel remained silent, but a part of her wanted to ask someone about it. She wanted to know who was in the wrong between them.

“I...”

Rachel hesitated, but Chae Nayun encouraged her.

“Yes, go on. Feel free to speak.”

Rachel sat properly on the bench and faced Chae Nayun with a sigh.

“I believe that I’m responsible for the massacre that occurred at the Hampton Palace. I should carry the burden—”

“Huh? Why do you have to carry that burden? That wasn’t even your fault.”

Chae Nayun bluntly responded and Rachel flinched. Chae Nayun said the same thing as Kim Hajin, but she even scoffed as if she found Rachel’s words to be funny.

“You’re a funny one, aren’t you? Hey, you... uhm... Do you know how my mom died? Answer me honestly. Everyone knows about that incident.”

Rachel felt surprised and didn’t expect Chae Nayun to openly talk about that event. Did she already recover from it?

Chae Nayun grimaced and continued, “If we went by your logic, then my mom’s death would be my fault, right? Are you trying to drag my family into this? Ha? Is the English Royal Court’s vice leader really going to stoop so low? Ha?!?”

“No, that’s not what I meant...”

“Then what is it? What did you mean?”

Rachel broke out into a cold sweat at Chae Nayun’s pressure. She chewed her lips and nervously gulped.

“Pfft—”

Chae Nayun held back her laughter and tapped Rachel’s shoulder.

“So what I’m trying to say is, it’s not your fault. Don’t force yourself to carry the burden of everything, alright? Ah, it seems like Kim Hajin said the same thing.”

“...”

“Well, I understand how you feel. People tend to think their misfortune is the worst. I used to be no different.”

Chae Nayun spoke while looking at the sky. The sun began to set and the sunset’s orange hue dyed the ground. She suddenly thought about Kim Hajin. I still don’t know what kind of person he is, what burden he’s carrying, or how lonely his life is...

However, only Kim Hajin could save Rachel in this world.

Chae Nayun slowly lowered her gaze from the sky and looked at Rachel.

“He’s going through tough times just like you, so he probably felt frustrated seeing you blame yourself for everything.”

Chae Nayun wanted to change the topic before Rachel could ask anything else.

“Ah, you signed up for the martial tournament too, right?”

Rachel nodded.

“I plan to sign up too. I suggest you surrender if you meet me. I’m not someone the likes of you can handle.”

Chae Nayun confidently laughed and patted Rachel on the back.

Tak Tak Tak

Rachel grimaced at the sharp pain that spread all over her body.

“Ah, stop that.”

“Do you understand, little baby?”

“Stop that. Let go.”

Rachel shrugged Chae Nayun’s hand away before standing from the bench. Chae Nayun also stood and they walked side by side for a while before someone caught their eye.

“Huh? What the hell are they doing?”

Chae Nayun frowned while looking somewhere. A situation they couldn’t understand currently took place in front of them.

Kim Hajin, who wore a mask, seemed to be at the park with Yoo Yeonha. Yoo Yeonha sat on the ground like a model as Kim Hajin painted a portrait of her along with the scenery.

“Hey, what the hell are those two... Fuck, have they gone crazy?”

Chae Nayun grumbled and looked at the person next to her. Then she jumped in surprise.

Rachel’s expression had turned cold and emotionless. No, it looked emotionless, but also contained anger.

“Hey, hey.”

Chae Nayun nudged her. Only then did Rachel’s strange and scary expression disappear. She was still brooding though.

“I’m going.”

Rachel left with those words.

Chae Nayun sighed as Rachel walked away with a scary aura.

“At least she managed to be comfortable around me. I guess I only have to get a bit closer to her.”

Chae Nayun accomplished one of her objectives to grow closer to Rachel.

“But what the hell are those two doing? Damn it...”

Anger surged from within her as she glared at Yoo Yeonha and Kim Hajin.

That posing girl and the bastard painting her... What the hell are those two doing right now?

A voice suddenly shouted from somewhere nearby.

“The tournament registration will now close!”

“Huh? Eh? Ah! Fuck! Wait a minute! I have to join!”

Chae Nayun screamed as she ran towards the shirtless muscular guy.

* * *

“All done.”

I finished the portrait after about an hour. It took longer than expected even with Young Dwarf’s Dexterity because I never painted before. It would’ve taken even longer for the oil to dry, but I skipped that part thanks to stigma’s mana.

“Hey, get up.”

“Huh? Ah, yes...”

Yoo Yeonha woke up and nonchalantly replied as if she never dozed off in the first place.

She stood with a sigh and walked over with half-opened eyes that still seemed drowsy.

“Yawn... Then, I’ll get going now. I wasted too much time because of you.”

Yoo Yeonha tried to leave without even checking the painting. I grabbed her shoulder.

“Hey, aren’t you going to take a look?”

“Why should I? I’m busy.”

Yoo Yeonha retorted while tapping on her smartwatch with an annoyed expression.

Still, I had to let her see it and give my work a score. I took the canvas from the easel and handed it to her.

“I said I’m not interested. Why do you keep insisting...”

Yoo Yeonha suddenly stopped and blankly stared at the canvas. Her face grew bright red at the portrait of a black-haired woman surrounded by lush greenery.

I had no idea what to call this portrait, but I could tell that I did a great job.

“Umm...” Yoo Yeonha dryly gulped.

“What?”

She slowly hugged the painting and asked.

“Are you looking to work with a curator by any chance?”

* * *

A week passed. Most guilds had finished the second test and entered the third. All of them focused on increasing their fame and renown.

Some guilds chose to do social work while others opened businesses or subjugated dungeon monsters.

Meanwhile, all sorts of tournaments began. A few guilds focused on these tournaments. Creator’s Sacred Grace, Essence of the Strait, Rakeford, Chinese Empire, Golden Afterglow, Panzerburg, La Guild Lumiere, etc. The intense competition between the top guilds finally began.

“First, I’m looking for a sponsor.”

Yoo Yeonha said after I finished the archery tournament. She held onto two oil paintings as if her life depended on them.

“Sponsor?”

“Yes, having a sponsor will increase your renown. I heard the king loves art and nobles actively sponsor artists because of that.”

“Well, that’s good for me. Aren’t you busy though? You’re the most important person in your guild, right?”

Essence of the Straits had quite a lot to do right now. The preliminary rounds of all the tournaments finally began. They also had to build relations with the local nobles and an information network in this world.

“I am busy, but I also have a reason to invest in this.”

“Huh? What’s the reason?”

Yoo Yeonha furrowed her brows and bit her lips as if she felt annoyed.

“Chae Nayun... She failed to register for the tournament. Ah... I can’t believe she forgot...”

She made Chae Nayun seem like the dumbest buffoon in the world, which starkly contrasted with the praise from a while back. Nayun has reached an entirely different level now. It’s safe to assume she’s reached the pinnacle.

“Damn, I’m so annoyed I can kill her. Anyways, follow me.”

“Huh? Why me?”

“The nobles here love it when an artist personally meets them, so you’ll have to attend the meeting.”

I nodded and got up.

“Ah, before that.”

Yoo Yeonha tapped on her smartwatch.

[Essence of the Straits Yoo Yeonha has proposed a personal alliance with Xtra from the English Royal Court.]

[Will you accept?]

I received a message on my smartwatch and looked at her. She stared at me with big sparkling eyes that seemed to say, Accept it.

I almost tapped yes, but suddenly stopped.

“Hmm... I’ll see how you do first before accepting this.”

“Huh? What did you just say?”

“What? Isn’t that logical? You’re the one who needs me, right? Go on. Lead the way.”

“No... that’s...”

“You don’t want to?”

“Wow...”

Yoo Yeonha looked flabbergasted and suddenly exclaimed, “First it was Chae Nayun and now it’s you! Damn it!!! Come, follow me!”

She had no choice but to grit her teeth and stomp away. No, she led the way.

Side Stories 25

Dream in a Dream (25)

I stood in front of the castle gates of a noble whose name I didn't know. The castle looked huge even by my standards, but Yoo Yeonha didn't seem fazed.

She approached the guards standing watch.

"My name is Yoo Yeonha. I have an appointment today."

"..."

The two guards grimaced at her.

"Yoo Yeonha?" one of the guards asked.

"Yes."

"Hmm..."

They whispered between themselves before the other guard took out a communication crystal. He spoke through the crystal before nodding and opening the door.

"A guest has arrived!"

The guard shouted for the servants, who suddenly appeared as if they expected us. They immediately walked up to Yoo Yeonha and took the two portraits from her.

"Welcome."

The head butler greeted us at the gates and looked at me.

“You must be the artist our lord mentioned.”

“Yes, I am the artist and this child here is my manager.”

I immediately drew the line between Yoo Yeonha and I since no artist should be treated the same as their manager.

“Ha...” Yoo Yeonha scoffed in disbelief.

The butler nodded without a change in expression.

“I see, but may you please remove that mask?”

“...”

“Hmph...”

Yoo Yeonha scoffed again, but for a different reason this time. The first scoff carried a sense of disbelief and annoyance while this one carried a sense of triumph.

“May I remove it when I meet the head of this household? I will be troubled if my identity is exposed, you see...”

I roamed around without my mask a few times during the second test, but only because I already disposed of Lancaster’s minions. However, Lancaster and numerous guilds had their eyes and ears everywhere in this third test.

“I understand,” the butler replied before opening the castle’s front doors.

One couldn’t possibly see everything at a glance in this vast castle foyer. The chandelier illuminated the entire interior and its light reflected off the marble walls. Yoo Yeonha managed to reel in a capable and wealthy noble.

“Our lord is waiting in the meeting room. I will guide you there.”

The butler respectfully led us to the meeting room. We climbed a flight of stairs and stood outside the room as he knocked twice on the door.

Knock... Knock...

“The guests have arrived.”

— Let them in.

A response came from the other side.

The butler opened the door and we saw the noble sitting at the head of the table.

He exuded a strong sense of masculinity with sideburns that came all the way down to his chin. He glanced up from his book and looked at us.

“Are you... the artist that Rohan mentioned?” he asked.

His voice sounded rough and deep, which made him seem even more suited for martial arts than arts and crafts.

“Yes.”

Yoo Yeonha gratefully replied for me.

“Hmm... Alright, my name is Ritten de Kayden. You may call me Count Kayden. I don’t need to hear your names, so why don’t you just show me your works?”

“I understand.”

Yoo Yeonha replied with a bow before unwrapping the paintings and passing it to the noble.

“Hooo...”

He exclaimed under his breath.

One painting depicted the general assembly hall and the other showed a beautiful woman bathing in the sunset's orange hue while surrounded by lush greenery. Yoo Yeonha decided to keep her own portrait, so this portrait featured a different woman.

"It looks flawless."

Count Kayden rubbed his beard in satisfaction at my works.

"But you still have to pass the most important test," he added.

The count clapped twice and a man appeared from another room. He wore clean white gloves and a headband. Obviously, he worked as an appraiser.

"I will start the appraisal," the man said.

I found it all a bit strange. An appraiser usually analyzed works to distinguish counterfeits from originals, but there wouldn't be any fakes of my paintings since I was a nameless artist.

"Are you gauging the mana within it?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

The count burst into laughter.

"Hahaha! Exactly. Who would buy a painting for just its looks? A good painting should also have mana. That mana will spread in the air and fill the room. Isn't that what's really important?"

Only then did I understand the situation.

A master or expert naturally infused mana into their art. Only those with a great deal of experience could achieve this.

"H-How can this be?"

Meanwhile, the appraiser became shocked at my paintings. Yoo

Yeonha raised an eyebrow and Count Kayden looked as if curiosity would kill him too.

“You... are you really a nameless artist?” the appraiser asked me in awe.

I smirked and nodded. Then he bit his lips as if he wanted to say something, but remained silent.

“What’s wrong? Is there a problem?” Count Kayden asked.

The appraiser nervously gulped before forcing his trembling lips to speak.

“This piece is one of the three best works I’ve seen in the past twenty years...”

Count Kayden ended up buying each painting for one billion won. That was an astronomical amount for this stage. I gained a lot of renown thanks to that and I entered an alliance with Yoo Yeonha as promised.

“Here, two hundred million as your fees and one hundred million for your efforts.”

“Thank you.”

I handed Yoo Yeonha a check for three hundred million won and she pocketed it with a smile. I stared at her for a while before asking.

“Did you notice the mana from the start?”

“Huh? No, not at all. You can only do something like that if you receive special education from an early age.”

“So you just liked the painting?”

Yoo Yeonha placed a finger on her lips and briefly pondered before shaking her head.

“Who knows? I guess I just trusted you? Or should I say I had a good feeling about it? Even I had no idea how special your painting was.”

“Really?”

“Yes, what in the world happened? How did you move that appraiser so much?”

“That’s... it’s a trade secret.”

“Pfft!”

Yoo Yeonha snickered and turned around to look at me.

“Anyways, thank you for your hard work today. When do you plan to paint another one?”

“Who knows?”

“Please take your sweet time. You should let your name spread first before limiting the number of customers to one hundred. Then, you can start releasing one or two paintings at a time to attract the king’s attention.”

Indeed, that sounded like a strategy she would think of.

I laughed and simply nodded.

“I’ll excuse myself now.”

Yoo Yeonha said her farewells and cheerfully walked away with the check in her hand. She even patted it a few times like a pet.

I watched her leave before turning around and heading off.

* * *

I dreamt of a palace built with red bricks that seemed to belong to the 14th century style. A very sad memory took place here. The palace had a lot of people. A child, an elder, and a young couple stood out among the crowd and cheerfully chatted in the garden.

I noticed the child with a hat shying away from this cozy atmosphere. The child looked around with tearful eyes and had always wanted to visit this place. The child's mother had given birth and passed away here. However, everyone at the palace dissuaded the child from coming here and the child couldn't understand why.

Why can't I come when my mother passed away here? Is it because I might feel something where she passed away? But I've never even seen my mother's face.

The child impulsively ran away from home...

The child's emotions came crashing down on me. I felt dizzy and I had no idea why I felt such emotions.

"Ahjussi, are you alright? Are you not feeling well?"

The child grabbed onto my clothes as I staggered and a question suddenly crossed my mind.

This shouldn't be possible. This child only existed in my dream, so how could this child touch me right now?

"I'm alright."

"I don't think you are. You should go to the hospital if you're not feeling well."

"Sure..."

"Hehe."

The child smiled and turned around.

A thought that felt closer to an instinct flashed in my mind. I approached the child as if bewitched by something.

Whoosh!

I lifted and placed the child on my shoulders.

“Kyak!”

The child screamed and protested.

“Let me go!”

The child kept resisting, but I ran as fast as I could out of the palace. The child screamed and caught everyone’s attention. The guards swarmed towards me.

“You shouldn’t be here,” I said in my dreams.

“Everyone is in danger, including you. Come, follow me. You shouldn’t be here...”

The space surrounding us began to fall apart. The palace crumbled and the child that kept resisting now blankly stared at the surroundings too.

Both of us watched as the world around us collapsed...

“Ugh!”

Rachel groaned and immediately woke up.

Her eyes shook and sweat drenched her entire body. She calmed her breathing to lessen the sharp pain hammering her head.

“Haa... Haa... Haa...”

She had dreamt the same nightmare about that day at the Hampton Palace. Rachel suppressed the urge to vomit as she looked for her medicine, but suddenly felt that something had changed. She didn’t feel as bad as usual.

“It wasn’t... that nightmare...”

The nightmare today didn’t play out until the end as everything crumbled. A man suddenly appeared and ran away with her younger self. A different twist had taken place in her recurring nightmare, but she couldn’t recall the man’s appearance.

“I wonder what that was...”

What else could it be, but a horrible dream?

Rachel kicked away her blanket and got up from bed. She went to her bathroom in her pajamas and washed her face. The tournament would take place today, so she had to prepare and do her best. She couldn’t drop her guard even at the 128th round.

Fuuh... Fuuh...

Rachel washed her face with the cold tap water when a message briefly popped up on her smartwatch, which she had set on the bedside table.

[The General Assembly is closely watching you.]

* * *

Fermin greeted Rachel when they met at the hall in the early morning.

“Vice Leader! I expected you to be up by now.”

“Yes, how are you today, Fermin? I’m sure you’re busy tending to the sick.”

Fermin increased her renown by tending to people with incurable illnesses. The guild members regarded her as their ace for that.

“Yes, I’m fine! Rather than that, have you seen this? This Xtra guy is insane!”

Renown Ranking:

1. Xtra: 2,000
2. Kim Suho: 1,250
3. Yun Seung-Ah: 95
4. Chae Nayun: 800
5. Yoo Yeonha: 800

“He gathered two thousand points all alone to take the top spot!”

Fermin exclaimed and Rachel’s eyes widened in surprise.

“Is this... is this even possible?”

She had no idea how Xtra raised his renown by so much.

Knock... Knock... Knock... Knock... Knock...

Someone suddenly knocked on the door that led to the general assembly hall, which meant visitors from another guild had come. Rachel made her way across the room and opened the door.

“Yes, this is the English Royal Court.”

Quite a crowd stood outside. She counted at least thirty of them. Yun Seung-Ah, Kim Suho, and Raygun from the General guild stood out among them. The English Royal Court would never even dream of speaking to these big shots. However, things had changed.

“Ah... Hello, Vice Leader Rachel. It’s nothing important, but is the mercenary Xtra there by any chance?”

“Hello, Vice Leader Rachel! Sorry for intruding so early. Haha! Actually... we’re looking for Xtra...”

“I have something to say to Xtra.”

“Can you arrange a meeting with Xtra?”

Yun Seung-Ah, Raygun, Kim Suho, and the rest all wanted to see Xtra. Rachel blankly stared at them for a while before bitterly smiling.

“I see... but Xtra is currently not here. He went to the archery tournament—”

“Ah, is that so?”

“I see.”

“Well, I guess I have no business here then.”

“Sigh... I wasted my time. Oh, but your accommodation looks quite nice. Anyways, have a nice day.”

“Ciao!”

The crowd disappeared almost immediately and the bustling corridor became empty again with only Rachel at the door.

“Haaa...” she subconsciously sighed.

They technically came to the English Royal Court, but only wanted to meet Xtra. Hey, I'm the vice leader of this guild. Aren't they crossing the line?

Rachel grumbled inwardly while also feeling confused. Still, she managed to compose herself and closed the door.

The swordsmanship tournament's 128th round would take place today, so she didn't have the luxury to be distracted by such small matters.

* * *

Rachel ran to the archery tournament stadium as soon as her 128th round finished.

The entire stadium had been filled. She looked around and saw big shots like Yun Seung-Ah, Raygun, Kim Suho, Yi Yeonghan, Yoo Yeonha, Refren, Ryu Wei, etc. As expected, they all came to watch Xtra.

“I think contribution points and renown is all that matters on this stage. Some guilds are actually having internal conflicts about this.”

Sehat suddenly appeared beside Rachel and continued.

“Also, I heard it’s possible to recruit normal people into your guild. I mean the people who originally live in this world. Chae Nayun from Essence of the Straits already recruited a high-ranking knight from the Black Tiger Knight Order.”

Rachel only found out about this shocking news thanks to Sehat. She never expected Chae Nayun to make a smart move like that.

“Ah... I see. Thank you for the information.”

Rachel nodded while focusing on the tournament.

Sehat briefly observed her before asking.

“But Ms. Rachel... Did you come here to try and keep Xtra? I heard it’s possible to leave one’s guild as long as they pay the right amount of contribution points.”

“Leave the guild? No, not at all... not at all... I... I’m just here to scout the other guilds’ capabilities.”

Rachel lied without batting an eye.

“Also, there’s no way Xtra would leave our guild.”

She said that, but couldn’t help feeling nervous since the English Royal Court technically did nothing for Xtra. Rachel tried her best to hide her anxiety as she bit her lips and waited for the tournament to begin.

— Ladies and gentlemen! The archery tournament will now commence!

Xtra went first in the round of 128. The man wearing a lotus mask came up to the stage along with fifteen other contestants.

“Oh right, here. Drink this coffee.”

Sehat offered her a cup of coffee. Rachel quickly drank it as she felt a bit peckish.

— Targets spread!

“Oh?”

The archery tournament couldn't be compared to the boring swordsmanship tournament. First, a total of sixteen contestants competed in each round and something suddenly shot up from the ground.

Pat! Pat! Pat!

Everyone in the stadium looked up at the sky and the things that shot up from the ground exploded. Bang! A bunch of paper birds appeared and spread all over the place.

The paper birds flew in a relaxed manner before speeding up faster than a wasp as they zoomed through the air.

— The one who shoots down the most paper birds will win!

“Wow...” Rachel muttered in amazement without even realizing it.

The archery tournament looked fun compared to the swordsmanship tournament she attended.

“It looks fun.”

She said as her gaze landed on Xtra. However, she couldn't help but flinch when they made eye contact.

Side Stories 26

Dream in a Dream (26)

“Why didn’t you participate?”

Aileen asked Jin Seyeon while holding chicken skewers in both hands and licking the dripping sauce.

Jin Seyeon smiled at her.

“What good will it be if I joined? I’m just a supervisor here.”

“Hmm... Is that so?”

Aileen gobbled up the chicken skewers and threw the sticks on the floor. Then a nameless hero sitting from behind extended a plate of food to her.

“Excuse me, Madam Aileen. Would you like to eat this as well?”

“What is that?”

“It’s a special street food only sold here. It’s a rice cake called jisupan.”

“Is that so?”

It looked like an egg and a piece of bread at the same time. Aileen took a bite before taking the entire plate.

The nameless hero clenched his fist as if he had won something. After all, he wanted to score some points with Aileen.

Meanwhile, the archery tournament began and all sixteen contestants came up to the stage.

“Huh? What’s that? Why is he wearing a mask? Is he an attention seeker?”

A man wearing a lotus mask stood out from the rest.

Pat! Pat! Pat! Pat! Pat!

Something shot up from the ground and paper birds suddenly filled the stadium.

— Targets spread! The one who shoots down the most paper birds will win!

Aileen and Jin Seyeon watched with interest.

The other contestants immediately drew their bows and began shooting the paper birds, but the man wearing the lotus mask simply stood there. He looked up as if trying to act cool.

“I guess he’s just an attention seeker,” Aileen grumbled.

Yun Seung-Ah suddenly sat next to her and chimed in.

“I know right.”

She stole one of Aileen’s rice cakes. Aileen immediately pulled back the plate to protect her remaining rice cakes.

“Hey, what the hell do you think you’re doing?”

“It’s quite good. What is this, unni?”

“Whatever, don’t eat it. It’s mine.”

“You’re such a glutton. Anyways, let me introduce someone to you. This is one of my guild members, Kim Suho.”

“Hello.”

Kim Suho bowed and greeted Aileen. Yi Yeonghan, Chae Nayun, Yoo Yeonha, and others also stood next to Kim Suho. They all greeted Aileen with a bow.

“Yeah, yeah, alright.”

Aileen nonchalantly replied and shrugged them off.

The archery tournament just began, so Aileen waved them away. However, Yun Seung-Ah kept talking.

“All of them are my lovely juniors. Please take care of them.”

“Ah, shut up. You’re too noisy. Can’t you see I’m trying to watch the match? Shut your mouth, will you?”

“...”

Aileen closed Yun Seung-Ah’s mouth with Spirit Speech and continued watching the match.

Whiiiiish!

The contestants busily shot their arrows, but one man stood still without doing anything as if he had taken root there. Then he slowly raised his bow.

Creak...

The man finally nocked a black arrow onto his bow.

“Hmm...”

Aileen felt like she might know his identity. She could already sense that his bow belonged to an entirely different league compared to the rest.

Shwaaa!

The man shot his first arrow and it flew ferociously through the air before turning. It moved like a snake and devoured all the paper birds in its way. A single arrow decimated hundreds of paper birds like a living being.

Jin Seyeon observed the spectacle with a serious expression.

“Hey, is he stronger than you?” Aileen asked.

“Pardon me? Ah, why would you ask something like that?”

Jin Seyeon seemed flabbergasted before smiling.

“Pfft,” Aileen smirked in response.

The man’s arrow devoured most of the paper birds, which shocked the host before he declared that Xtra had won. The first match of round 128 concluded.

Xtra returned to the waiting area as the spectators shuffled around.

* * *

Rachel immediately ran over to the waiting area, but Xtra had already left. She hung her head and returned to their accommodation. Her shoulders felt heavy today for some reason.

“Vice Leader is back. Everyone, say hello to our vice leader.”

Their accommodation bustled with people that the guild members met in this world. Knights, mercenaries, artists, etc. all visited their hall.

Rachel greeted them and headed to her room when Marcus suddenly shouted.

“Oh, right! Vice Leader, we have a training area in the basement now!”

“Huh?”

“Our mercenary made it for us.”

The guild members began respectfully addressing Xtra as their mercenary a while ago.

“You should visit it sometime. The facilities are amazing and the mana density is quite high down there.”

“Ahh... Sure...”

Rachel made her way to the basement. A new training area appeared as Marcus had said. She nodded in delight and looked around the state-of-the-art artificial environment. Dirt and sand covered the ground, trees grew all over, and the basement now had lush green scenery. It seemed like the best place in this world to train her spirits.

“We’re already done here, so Vice Leader can use it comfortably. I hope you have a good time.”

“Salute!”

Dale and Kayle saluted her before leaving.

Rachel closed her eyes all alone in the training area and sat on the ground. She wanted to feel the nature and let go of her troubling thoughts.

“Hoo... Hoo...”

She calmed her breathing, but suddenly felt someone’s presence behind her. Rachel opened her eyes and turned around to see a black silhouette against the wall. Kim Hajin stood there wearing his lotus mask.

“How do you like the training area? I invested around three hundred million won to build it.”

Kim Hajin took the initiative and spoke first.

Rachel faked a cough to break the awkward tension and nodded.

“It’s good...”

She suddenly felt much better as if all her burdens had been lifted. It felt as if her world had brightened again after his few words. Rachel brushed her hair behind her ear without realizing it.

“I’m glad you like it.”

Kim Hajin slowly approached and sat beside her. A cool gentle breeze blew.

He broke the long silence again, but his voice didn’t carry the same confidence this time.

“Rachel... By any chance, did you have a dream recently?”

She looked at him and he shifted his gaze to a swaying tree branch.

What did they witness in their dreams? Did their dreams relate to each other? Rachel tried to recall whatever she could.

“Yes...” she replied.

“What kind of dream was it?”

“I...”

She had never dreamt of such a strange dream before where she stood still and time itself seemed to have paused.

“There was a computer and a monitor... and some words on the screen... also, a cup of coffee and cigarettes on the table. I dreamt of something like that...”

Kim Hajin’s expression suddenly hardened. He hesitated before speaking in a heavy voice.

“It seems we’re sharing things...”

He had a good idea of what Rachel saw. She probably dreamt of his past like he dreamt of hers. However, how could that be possible?

He felt a migraine coming just thinking of the possibilities. Finally, he sighed and handed her something.

“Here, take this.”

“...?”

Rachel reached out for the paper.

“I sold a painting recently. As you know, this third test is no different from society. Money is the most important thing here.”

She looked at the paper. Ones, tens, hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions, tens of millions... hundreds of millions?

Rachel’s mouth opened wide in shock.

“This... this is...”

“It’s the money I earned, but you should be handling it since you’re in charge of the guild.”

“...”

“It’ll be easier to raise contribution points and renown if you have the money. I’ll be entrusting everything to you, Vice Leader.”

Kim Hajin smiled at her.

Rachel became flabbergasted and looked at him full of emotions. Kim Hajin simply laughed at her honesty. As expected, money could solve everything.

* * *

Four weeks had passed since the third test began.

None of the guilds failed yet, but some guilds would definitely be left behind. Such guilds didn't possess enough renown or contribution points, had internal conflicts, or suffered irreversible damage.

Compared to them, the English Royal Court guild stood strong and the guild members remained close as ever. Honestly, all the credit belonged to me. Any organization doing well would surely have stronger bonds and more loyalty.

I released six paintings in this world and the nobles entered a fierce bidding war for them. Then I invested all my earnings into the English Royal Court. This greatly improved their accommodation and the guild members' welfare. Rachel even had the luxury to formally inaugurate the [English Royal Court Guild – General Assembly Branch].

“Oh, it's the two of you today?”

Rachel joined my meeting with Yoo Yeonha at a café that nobles frequented.

“Please think of me as Hajin's manager,” Rachel said.

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled at those words.

“Well, let's get straight to business. Xtra's value is skyrocketing as we speak.”

Xtra's name already became a brand and influential nobles all wanted my works, which meant the royal family would soon notice me.

“We just have to push a bit more. Soon, we'll meet the king and get permission to cross the bridge.”

Rachel's expression suddenly turned serious. She would be one step closer to Lancaster after crossing that bridge.

Yoo Yeonha sipped her coffee and asked.

"Come to think of it, how many have you painted recently?"

"Ah, that? Painting is more difficult than I thought since I can't just mass produce it."

"Yes, I understand what you mean."

Art remained difficult even with Young Dwarf's Dexterity. I needed a model, inspiration, the will to paint, and the courage to not be embarrassed about the painting.

"Around two?"

"Hmm... Sounds good. I'm thinking of opening a personal exhibit."

Yoo Yeonha presented a pamphlet to me.

[Xtra's Personal Exhibit]

— The personal exhibit of the genius artist Xtra, who appeared like a savior to the stagnant art world...

It seemed she had already finished planning and printing the pamphlets. Yoo Yeonha's work efficiency awed Rachel.

"We can provide lodging for the staff once the exhibit begins."

Rachel proposed as she read the pamphlet.

"I'll be grateful for that. After all, the English Royal Court's accommodation is quite famous these days."

Rachel squirmed as if she found Yoo Yeonha's compliment slightly embarrassing. She wouldn't even dare to look at someone like Yoo

Yeonha outside the general assembly.

“Your two Roof Hasrin coffees are here.”

The waiter brought them two cups of coffee.

I reached out for mine, but Rachel suddenly stopped me.

“Please be careful with your hands. You shouldn’t carelessly touch hot objects.”

She seemed to be muttering something under her breath. Those are precious hands... Do you know how much you earned with those hands? Do you know how much more you’ll earn with those hands?

“Please let it cool first before drinking,” Rachel adamantly insisted.

“Ha... Give me a break...”

Yoo Yeonha scoffed in disbelief while staring at Rachel. Then she shook her head and continued.

“Anyways, we need to decide. Where will you go once we get the permit to cross? I hope our paths don’t overlap.”

She sounded serious again. We had already decided on the answer to that question.

“We’re going to where Lancaster is.”

“Hmm...”

Yoo Yeonha nodded as if she expected that.

“Then, we’re going in the opposite direction.”

“Okay, go ahead,” I told her.

“I believe we have an agreement?”

“Yes.”

I smiled and extended my hand. Yoo Yeonha also smiled and we shook hands.

Rachel blankly stared with wide eyes before composing herself and also shaking hands with Yoo Yeonha.

Yoo Yeonha sent a message as we enjoyed this productive atmosphere.

[Essence of the Straits' representative, Yoo Yeonha, has proposed an alliance with the English Royal Court's representative, Rachel.]

[Do you wish to accept?]

Rachel almost tapped yes, but suddenly stopped.

Yoo Yeonha's face crumpled after seeing that and she grumbled.

“Hey... you two... why do you keep acting like amateurs? We already agreed, right?”

Side Stories 27

Dream in a Dream (27)

Her hazy consciousness drifted away as a thick white fog clouded her mind. Rachel slowly opened her eyes and found herself in an unfamiliar room. The smell of coffee and cigarettes overwhelmed her. She dreamt the same dream again.

“Ah...”

She tried to stay still like always, but a desire to move compelled her. She stood, swept the floor, cleaned the cigarette ash and coffee on the table, threw everything in the trash, and went to the front door.

Rachel turned around and looked at the dirty house that became clean again.

“Where is this place?”

She finally made out the house’s layout after cleaning all the mess. This small house only had a living room, kitchen, and bedroom.

Bedroom...

Rachel looked around before grabbing the bedroom doorknob.

“Hoo...”

She had no idea why she felt so nervous just opening a door. She tightly gripped the doorknob before letting go and grabbing it again. She let go in the end and couldn’t muster the courage to open it.

Rachel turned around and spotted a picture frame on the desk. She slowly approached and looked at the three people in the picture. Kim Hajin stood between a middle-aged couple. Anyone would recognize this as a family picture.

“...?”

She couldn't help but question something strange.

Did Kim Hajin even have a family to begin with?

“!”

Rachel's eyes shot open and a dark ceiling lay in front of her. She had returned to reality in her room.

“Hoo...”

Rachel wiped her face and sat up in bed. She didn't know why, but the dream felt more vivid this time. She went to the bathroom and washed her face. Then she left her room. The corridors looked empty as usual at this hour.

Rachel went down to the training area in the basement to clear her mind.

“Huh?”

However, she found someone else there already. It seemed he fell asleep while training. Kim Hajin slept on the ground without moving in the slightest.

Did that person have the same dream by any chance?

Rachel sat beside him and looked at his sleeping face. She poked his eyes, nose, and lips simply because she felt like being mischievous.

“Umf... Ebebe...”

Kim Hajin moaned as his eyes peeked open. He grumbled when he saw Rachel.

“What the heck? Did you come to train?”

“Yes.”

She replied with a smile.

“Sigh... I’ll help you then. Ughh...”

He groaned like a grandfather when he stood, which made Rachel giggle. His half-asleep eyes looked cute to her for some reason.

“Now, try sending your spirits to me. Ah, wait a second. I’m so thirsty. Let me drink some water first...”

* * *

Xtra’s exhibit attracted massive interest from the nobles. It only displayed seven paintings, but various counts and viscounts came to praise Kim Hajin.

“It’s a relief everything went smoothly.”

The exhibit went on for around seven hours and ended in huge success.

“I think this will be more than enough. Please leave the auction tomorrow to our guild members and get some well-deserved rest.”

Yoo Yeonha looked satisfied and went over the auction schedule with Rachel in the lounge.

I stretched my arms and asked, “Will we even be able to meet the king by doing this?”

“It’s strange that there hasn’t been any reaction so far, but I’m certain something will happen as long as we keep—”

Bam!

The lounge's backdoor swung open and knights poured in.

Rachel instantly stood on guard.

"Halt! Stop moving at once!" one of the knights shouted.

I simply sat there and blinked a few times.

The dozens of knights that barged in surrounded the room. Then a person with their face covered by a silk veil waltzed into the room. They wore simple clothing that exuded luxury.

"How dare you? Try and see what happens if you pull that out!"

The knight shouted in a threatening manner when Rachel moved her hand towards Galatine.

Rachel looked angry and wanted to retort, but the veiled person spoke first.

"Enough, you may leave."

The woman had a strong and commanding voice.

I slightly tilted my head because I had heard that voice before.

"B-But Your Majesty!"

"Leave, Ruten. I have something very personal to discuss with these people."

"Yes, Your Majesty... We will be guarding the perimeter outside."

The knight wore a sullen expression and led his subordinates out.

"..."

I couldn't comprehend this situation and the other two next to me couldn't as well. We simply sat and stared at the person referred to as Your Majesty.

Her Majesty turned towards me. I couldn't see her face, but I could tell she was smiling for some reason.

Yoo Yeonha carefully knelt on one knee and offered a greeting.

"It is an honor to meet Your Majesty—"

"Nice to meet you too."

Her Majesty cut off Yoo Yeonha and completely disregarded her. Instead, she directly approached me.

Yoo Yeonha bit her lips in disappointment.

"It's been a while..."

Her Majesty's tone sounded as if she spoke to a servant.

Only then did I finally smirk. I knew this voice from a distant past and figured out her identity without even seeing her face. Rachel seemed more certain than me judging from her expression.

I carefully said her name.

"Tomer?"

"Ah, it's been a while since I heard that name."

Tomer took off her veil and looked the same as I recalled with her Latina features, sun-kissed skin, and proud look. She stared at me with nostalgia.

"Good to see you again, Kim Hajin."

"I guess you can say that. It's so good to see you that I'm speechless."

Rachel stepped forward with a face that said, Please notice me too.

“Ah, and Rachel too.”

“Geez...”

Yoo Yeonha got up with an upset look after being left out. She raised a brow at Tomer, who somehow became the king here.

“What is this situation? Can you kindly explain what’s going on?”

* * *

“You didn’t have to do something so bothersome like an exhibit.”

Tomer guided us to the palace’s banquet hall, which lived up to its name with an extremely long table filled with all sorts of scrumptious food.

Rachel’s eyes sparkled at the sight.

“Your paintings weren’t bad,” Tomer nonchalantly said.

“Is that so?” I replied.

Tomer somehow went against my story settings and appeared here, which made me relieved and confused.

“Why are you staring at me like that?” she asked with a smirk.

Rachel, who engrossed herself in eating, suddenly turned towards me.

“Anyways, we want to cross the bridge. Please?”

I tried to sound respectful at the end just in case.

Tomer smacked her knee and laughed. “Kekeke! Hey, no need for the formalities. Just be comfortable. It’s only us here.”

“Ah, alright... sure... then... there are four continents in this third test, right?”

“Yeah, there are four.”

“Is there a kingdom where Lancaster is king?”

Rachel dropped her lobster and focused on our conversation.

“Yes, that’s correct. Lancaster is also here and he recreated England on the largest continent.”

As expected, I guessed right on the money. I continued asking with a hint of anxiety.

“Do you know what that bastard is planning?”

“Hmm... No idea...”

Yoo Yeonha couldn’t stand the current atmosphere. No, did she not like the food? She kept poking at a lobster with her fork and mumbled to herself. I wonder if this will taste good with ramyeon?

“Do you know what the people here are?” Tomer asked me with a smile.

“Beats me. Aren’t they created by the General Assembly?”

“It’s similar, but different. They’re the souls of people who used to live in Central Asia. The dead were granted new life within the General Assembly. Those people can’t survive outside this place.”

Tak! Tomer stabbed her lobster.

“Also, Lancaster is trying to recreate the former England here.”

“...”

Rachel seemed mortified at those words and Tomer bitterly smiled.

“That bastard is... he’s trying to resurrect the people who died that day at the Hampton Palace. However, it’s impossible to resurrect the dead even if this is the general assembly.”

Tomer transferred her lobster to another plate and continued.

“The spirits of the dead can be briefly resurrected, but their memories and habits can’t be perfectly recreated. That bastard refuses to accept that fact and is stubbornly trying to recreate England.”

“What is he doing over there right now?” Rachel calmly asked.

“I can say with certainty that he’s recreating the past. He’s trying to make his England overlap with the real England and he claims that everyone can return or regress to the past once he succeeds.”

It couldn’t be understood with common logic. Yoo Yeonha quietly listened the entire time and asked.

“Is that even possible?”

“It might be with a miracle or sacrifice.”

Tomer looked at Rachel again and continued.

“I mean, it’s possible with the General Assembly’s miracle and if millions of English people are sacrificed.”

“...”

Rachel clenched her fists and I gently held her trembling hands.

“Also, you won’t be able to cross the bridge since Lancaster destroyed it.”

“Then—”

“However, there’s still a way with an underground path.”

“Underground path?”

“This place was a vast area when I first came. I think it was around three years ago? The four continents were actually one and the underground path is a remnant from those days.”

Tomer opened her hand and an image of the underground path appeared in the air.

“Only a maximum of three people can use it at the same time. Lancaster will immediately notice if more than that uses it. You’ll be able to reach his fake England if you walk for two to four days, but there could be monsters lurking underground. It’s been neglected for quite a while.”

“That’s fine,” Rachel shook her head.

“What about the other continents?” Yoo Yeonha carefully asked.

“The other continents? Ah, the other continents should be fine. They aren’t as greedy and ambitious as Lancaster. Anyways, one is a Lego world and the other’s setting is the Joseon^[1] Dynasty.”

Diririring!

An emergency siren suddenly cried out from our smartwatches.

Tomer stopped talking and Rachel looked at me.

[Kayle: Hey, where did all of our money in the safe go? I mean, our cash and all the other stuff.]

[Fermin: ??? What are you talking about? It’s all in the safe.]

[Kayle: No, it was in the safe until I checked just now and everything is gone. Did Vice Leader take it? The contribution points we converted into checks all disappeared as well.]

[Fermin: No way. Hey, wait a minute. I’m on my way. Who was standing watch over our safe today?]

[The English Royal Court's guild member, Marcus, has left the guild.]

[Fermin: Huh? Ah, fuck... wait a minute... That bastard Marcus...]

“Ah...” Rachel gasped in horror.

I bit my lips and sighed.

“What happened? Is it something big? Let me look,” Tomer asked.

Rachel showed her the messages on her smartwatch.

“Oh... This guy must've been one of Lancaster's minions.”

Tomer nonchalantly stated and shrugged.

“But where else would he run to? Wouldn't it obviously be England? You want to use the underground path right now?”

I looked at Rachel and she stepped forward with a cold look.

“Yes, I would like to.”

“Alright then. Follow me.”

Tomer stood from her seat and guided us out of the banquet hall. Two of her servants each carried over a huge sack.

“I packed some rations and other stuff you'll need in there. Feel free to use it.”

“Thank you, Your Majesty.”

We took the sacks and followed Tomer. I spoke formally since several others watched us outside the banquet hall. The royal palace had something similar to an elevator and we took it to the basement.

“Wait a minute,” Tomer said.

She stepped forward into the pitch-black basement and lit a torch. Our faces turned orange from the flame’s glow.

“Continue climbing down. Be careful,” Tomer warned.

We descended the stairs spiraling into darkness and continued for fifteen minutes.

Tomer finally stopped walking.

“This is it.”

She illuminated the wooden door with her torch as we stood in front of it. Tomer took out a smartwatch from her pocket and smiled.

“Here, send me a message if things get too dangerous. I’ll immediately summon you.”

[The Great Emperor, Yutor, has proposed an alliance with Xtra of the English Royal Court.]

“How is it? Does it work? My smartwatch is a bit old.”

“Yeah, it’s working great.”

I immediately entered an alliance with Tomer.

“Have a safe trip, I guess? You don’t have anything else to prepare, right? After all, your entire safe just got robbed.”

She was absolutely correct. Most of our cash and equipment had been stored there.

“Thank you,” I said.

“Thank me for what? I should be thanking you.”

Tomer returned my gratitude and opened the door.

A cold, damp breeze blew from the passage. I held Rachel's hand as we stepped inside together. We walked for a while when I suddenly noticed someone else. A black silhouette seemed to be glaring at me, so I instantly turned around. Chills went down my spine.

Yoo Yeonha had followed us.

"Ack! Hey! You surprised me! Why the hell are you here?" I shouted after jumping in fright.

"What do you mean? I was here the whole time?" Yoo Yeonha retorted with a scowl.

"What I mean is, why would you follow us?"

"We're allies, right? Then I have the right to follow, no? Also, I was with you from the start. Why are you so surprised?"

I felt flabbergasted and glanced at Rachel. She nodded as if to say Yoo Yeonha could tag along. Rachel always cared about connections and networking, so of course she would use this opportunity to build some rapport with Yoo Yeonha.

"Alright, I give you permission to tag along..."

"Hey, what are you talking about? I said I was here from the start. What do you mean by permission?"

1. Joseon is the ancient kingdom of Korea. Most Korean historical movies are set in the Joseon Dynasty. 🖐

Side Stories 28

Dream in a Dream (28)

[Rachel: It's fine. Someone will soon arrive to assist us.]

[Rachel: I'll go catch Marcus, so please cooperate with them for now.]

Their vice leader tried her best to console Fermin, who couldn't help but despair.

"That son of a bitch. He really took everything."

"I always found him suspicious."

Darren sighed while massaging his forehead.

Fermin's eyes shot open and asked, "Really? How? What part of him was suspicious?"

"Huh? Ah... He always stayed out late these days and... he's been doing things alone for a while now."

They could see it in hindsight, but Marcus never did anything that would've raised suspicions. Fermin couldn't understand why he chose to run now of all times. He could've stolen much more if he waited until the auction ended.

"Ah... This is driving me nuts," she grumbled.

Whatever his reasons, looking at the empty safe felt heart-wrenching. It contained everything they possessed. Not only their cash, jewelry, and gold, but also the checks they used for transactions with other guilds to trade contribution points.

Marcus stole all of it. They only had the seven paintings left that Xtra auctioned at his exhibit.

“Haaa...”

Fermin couldn't help but sigh.

Sehat shook his head and approached the safe with one of his guild members who possessed the detect ability.

“Marcus left a lot of signs, but we can't tell where he went.”

The Reislauder guild came to help as an ally.

Fermin thanked them before collapsing into a chair.

“Does Vice Leader even know where Marcus went? How is she going to chase him?” Kayle asked out loud.

“Who knows? The swordsmanship tournament isn't even over yet,” Darren replied.

The English Royal Court's mansion suddenly grew rowdy outside. They heard dozens of footsteps rushing towards the basement where they kept the safe.

Fermin instantly stood and Sehat grabbed his sword. All of them held their breaths and heightened their senses before three knights in platinum armor entered the room.

The knights suddenly displayed a document and announced.

“I am the royal knight, Ruin. I have been issued a royal command to help all of you.”

A royal command meant it came from the king himself. They couldn't understand the situation, but Fermin nodded anyway since the knights came to help.

Then their smartwatches rang.

[The English Royal Court has become the first guild to come in contact with the king's command!]

[All guild members will receive contribution points!]

“This is a gift from Her Majesty.”

Ruin and the other knights placed a chest on the ground. It contained swords, wands, bows, and other equipment.

The guild members stood dumbfounded before reaching towards the chest. Fermin moved first and took two wands. These high-quality wands would serve her well as a healer.

“Her Majesty also plans to purchase all of Xtra’s paintings on auction and bestow them to the nobles. We will inform the nobles ourselves, so please hand over the paintings.”

Fermin’s forehead creased at Ruin’s words.

She knew this would happen. How dare they think of throwing a bone with some equipment and snatching these invaluable paintings from under their noses! These paintings would easily fetch at least a few billion won each!

Ruin extended a check to Fermin.

“This is the amount Her Majesty will pay.”

Fermin glared at the knight before taking the check. However, her vision suddenly spun and she felt dizzy when she laid eyes on the paper. It felt as if her eyeballs would pop out from their sockets.

“Oh my god... Wow... How many zeroes are there?” she muttered in shock.

Yes, the check had an endless number of zeroes.

I held a torch in one hand as we walked through the dark and winding underground passage. I focused my eyes deep inside in case any ghosts or monsters appeared. Fortunately, I didn't spot any enemies so far.

"Why did Marcus do that?"

Rachel finally spoke after a long silence. She still seemed to be arranging her thoughts.

Actually, I already had an idea why he would do something like that. I didn't know if I should tell Rachel though. Not to mention, I found something strange about Marcus' actions. He stabbed Rachel in the back, but sincerely worried about her every time something happened.

"Let's think about that later."

I looked at Yoo Yeonha, who busily messaged her Essence of the Strait members.

"Why don't you just go back if you're so worried about them?"

I peeked at Yoo Yeonha's conversation.

"Huh? Ah, what are you talking about? I'm not worried at all."

She waved and turned off her smartwatch.

"I already came all the way here, so I might as well see what's available over there."

"But... what did you tell your guild?"

"I told them I'll be absent for a while."

I recalled her last message and recited it out loud.

"...The English Royal Court's safe was just robbed, so stay vigilant. We're the guild with the most cash right now..."

“Ah...” Yoo Yeonha flinched at my words.

Rachel stole a glance at me before speed-walking away.

“Let’s hurry. We have to stop Lancaster and whatever there might be in that fake England.”

We pressed on. An hour passed, two hours, and three hours... Time flowed strangely within this underground passage. Only the time on our smartwatches changed, but the scenery around us never did.

“I think I have an idea why people get claustrophobic now.”

Yoo Yeonha grumbled and sighed while tapping the walls.

I took out my Black Lotus Bow and they both flinched.

“Is there something in front?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“Yeah.”

I looked at the horde of monsters ahead that looked like moles.

“I’ll shoot them down.”

Shwiiiiik!

My arrow fiercely flew towards them and penetrated their heads. I shot down eight of them with a single arrow that defied the laws of physics.

I placed the bow on my back again when my smartwatch rang.

[You have killed a monster on the boundary of space.]

[Your smartwatch will be disconnected from the previous continent.]

“Huh?”

“Eh?”

Rachel and Yoo Yeonha received the same message.

“What is this? What does this mean?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“I have no idea, but we can only press on.”

The corpses of the mole monsters appeared after we walked for around three minutes. It seemed to be about five hundred meters away from where we stood a while ago. My vision could only go so far here.

“Ugh...”

Yoo Yeonha groaned and covered her nose. Rachel also grimaced as she stepped over the corpses.

I didn’t spot anything out of the ordinary, but Yoo Yeonhwa suddenly asked.

“Excuse me, the air suddenly changed. Did you not feel that?”

“It must be the stench from those corpses,” I replied.

Indeed, the air reeked of a stench that I couldn’t quite make out. It probably came from those corpses.

Rachel and Yoo Yeonha formed a gas mask with their mana. My mask already had those functions.

“It feels much better now. Let’s keep moving.”

“Is that so?”

I took another step when my body suddenly staggered. My legs gave out before I knew it and I dropped to the floor. Thud!

“Hajin, are you alright?” Rachel asked as she helped me up.

I dusted my knees and bitterly smiled.

“Ah, yes. I think I tripped over something.”

“Be careful.”

Rachel seemed worried about me.

“Ha!” Yoo Yeonha scoffed and glared at us.

“The two of you look real good together.”

She emphasized the word good for some reason. Did she pronounce it wrong or did I mishear?

I continued walking, but found it difficult to maintain my balance. It felt like a strong gust of wind kept pulling and pushing me from the front and back. It also grew more difficult to think the further I walked.

Where was I? Oh, right. I'm in an underground tunnel... but it's too dark... Is it alright for a tunnel to be so dark?

Still, I continued walking.

Thud!

My body collapsed again, but my entire body lay on the ground this time.

Kim... Ha... Jin...?

Someone's voice distorted in an eerie manner.

I couldn't move my limbs and could only think as I sprawled on the ground.

Something feels off... Was I poisoned or drugged? No, that shouldn't be possible... One of my traits is the Medicinal Memory Physique, so it shouldn't be...

My consciousness began to drift and the world grew further away. My ears went dull and my vision slowly darkened as well.

A dark figure suddenly appeared and grabbed me by the shoulders. I couldn't see who, but it must've been a person.

“-----!”

A voice screamed like a broken record or a video being played in reverse.

My head felt as if it twisted and turned. No, it really did twist and turn.

“-----!”

The voice screamed again.

It felt as if the voice shook my brain and I couldn't help but grimace in pain.

“-----!”

The entire surroundings turned black after the third scream and my fleeting consciousness finally snapped.

I blacked out.

* * *

“... ”

“... ”

Kim Hajin groaned some gibberish before suddenly losing consciousness. Rachel and Yoo Yeonha became speechless at the turn of events. They blankly stood there and stared at him.

Only the wind blowing through the underground passage could be heard in this deafening silence. Neither of them moved.

Rachel stopped Yoo Yeonha from taking off Kim Hajin's mask.

"Why?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

"He's poisoned."

Rachel calmly diagnosed Kim Hajin's current state.

His blood vessels turned green, his lips turned purple, and his eyes lost focus. These signs clearly indicated he had been poisoned. However, Rachel couldn't tell what kind of poison.

"Ah... It'll be alright. We were told to ask for help whenever we needed it."

Yoo Yeonha quickly switched on her smartwatch.

[You have killed a monster on the boundary of space.]

[Your smartwatch will disconnect from the previous continent.]

Her smartwatch didn't work anymore.

"Oh, right... but everything will still be fine. We just have to go back the way we came—"

Kuuruu... ruuung...

A sinister sound echoed from behind them. It sounded like something coming up from the ground. Could it be more comrades of those mole monsters they just killed?

Yoo Yeonha nervously gulped and called out.

"Rachel?"

However, Rachel froze while looking down at Kim Hajin and didn't say a word.

"Kieeeeeee!"

Monsters cried out from behind them. Another cry could be heard from the front as if responding to those cries.

"Gueeeee!"

Yoo Yeonha sighed amid these monster cries going back and forth.

"Sigh... Maybe I shouldn't have come?"

She looked at Rachel again.

Rachel seemed to be panicking as her hands uncontrollably shook. Then she turned towards Yoo Yeonha.

"Let's run. We have to get out of here."

Cold sweat formed on Rachel's forehead.

"Alright, but I don't think those moles are that strong."

Kim Hajin wiped them out with a single arrow. Besides, Yoo Yeonha was also a high-intermediate rank hero. She pursed her lips and rolled up her sleeves. Then she took out the whip at her waist. It had been a long time since she used it, but the time to show off her skills had come.

"Leave the monsters to me. Just focus on protecting that guy. What about the poison though? Do you think you'll be able to cure it?"

"..."

Rachel remained silent and Yoo Yeonha clicked her tongue.

"Tsk... Figures, the spirit of poison is probably too difficult for you to handle.”

She glanced at Kim Hajin to check his current state. It seemed quite serious as he began to have difficulty breathing. She had never seen him in such a weakened state before.

Yoo Yeonha found it too strange. How come nothing happened to them and only Kim Hajin?

Bzz... Bzzt... Bzzt!

An electric current formed around her whip, which she used more as a conductor than a weapon. Her electricity's power would be amplified several times in this damp and narrow space.

“Run as soon as I give you the signal,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“Gueeee!”

The moles cried out in a threatening manner and seemed to have caught their scents.

Yoo Yeonha shouted at that exact moment.

“Now!”

She smacked her whip on the ground.

Bzzzaaaaaat!

A wave of electric currents ferociously spread across the narrow and damp passage.

Side Stories 29

Dream in a Dream (29)

Yoo Yeonha's wave of electric currents spread all over and heated the air in the underground passage. The ferocious currents devoured the mole monsters and the grotesque crackling of their flesh being fried replaced their earlier cries.

"Heh."

Yoo Yeonha smirked and confidently crossed her arms over her chest. She turned around with her heels clacking.

"How dare you go against...?"

The mole monsters suddenly cried out again in the middle of her victory speech.

"Kieeeeeee!"

Yoo Yeonha's smug smile disappeared and she stood there stupefied.

"Grrr..."

A toad with bright red eyes glared at her from the dark. She couldn't understand what just happened.

Bzzt!

Sparks crackled around the monsters and it seemed they already adapted to it. Yoo Yeonha just turned ordinary monsters into electric monsters.

"..."

“What did you do?”

Rachel asked when Yoo Yeonha became silent.

Yoo Yeonha grabbed the hem of Rachel’s clothes.

“I think... Hmm... It’ll be better for me to hold onto him and we both fight these monsters...”

“Huh?”

“Grrrrrrng!”

The mole monsters growled and unleashed electric currents from their bodies.

“Ouch!”

Yoo Yeonha jumped in surprise and hid behind Rachel while rubbing the arm that had been zapped.

“So... I think these monsters have resistance against electricity. What I’m trying to say is... It’s not an exaggeration to call them my natural predators... Hurry up and help...”

Yoo Yeonha muttered from behind.

“Ah... Please be careful with him,” Rachel replied.

“Hurry up and pass him to me. Those monsters are scaring me!”

Rachel thought for a moment before passing Kim Hajin over. Yoo Yeonha carried him on her back and faked a cough when the embarrassment finally came through.

“I’ll get going then,” Rachel said.

“Ehem!”

Yoo Yeonha faked another cough and stuck closely behind.

“Hap!”

Rachel kicked off the ground and charged forward.

“Kieeeeeee!”

The mole monsters charged as well, but Rachel bravely swung Galatine and pierced through the crowd. The monsters shot poison darts from behind them, but Yoo Yeonha defended with an electric barrier. The poison darts immediately disintegrated on contact.

“Don’t let go of him!”

Rachel shouted as she cut through the monsters. Blood and flesh splattered whenever Galatine shone. It didn’t take long for Rachel to be covered in blood.

“Don’t even think about looking back. A huge army of moles is chasing us!” Yoo Yeonha exclaimed in terror.

They continued running as the monsters chased them. The dark underground passage went on forever with no end in sight. They couldn’t help but doubt if an exit really existed. However, they couldn’t afford to turn back now. No, they could no longer turn back.

Rachel turned around to check Kim Hajin’s condition.

“Look in front of you! Look in front!”

Yoo Yeonha kept screaming, so Rachel’s eyes immediately darted back to the front.

A huge mole monster blocked the entire passage with its body.

Rachel swung Galatine as hard as she could.

-----!

Galatine unleashed a diagonal wave that split the monster in half. The three of them jumped through the huge monster's torn body while being rained with blood, flesh, and all sorts of bodily fluids.

“Ahhh... Fuck this...”

Yoo Yeonha cursed and looked like she would vomit at any moment.

* * *

Meanwhile, Tomer typed something on her laptop in the king's study. Only the king could use this unique laptop that could communicate between this world and the outside world.

[Search: Xtra]

[Search: Rachel]

[Search: Kim Hajin]

Tomer searched all sorts of keywords on the internet and Violet Banquet. She found a ton of articles on Rachel, who was famous since birth. She also found articles about Xtra, who had been a hot topic lately. However, she couldn't find anything on Kim Hajin.

“What the hell were you up to all this time?” Tomer muttered with a smile.

She knew he dropped out of Cube, but had no idea why and wanted to know what he had been doing.

Her face stiffened as she took out a letter from her pocket. Her father had left it for her and she would've never found it without Kim Hajin. This letter became Tomer's treasure because it contained her deceased father's honest feelings and thoughts.

“Hooo...”

Tomer sighed and reclined in her chair. She felt indebted to Kim Hajin and probably would've aimlessly wandered and become a djinn if not for him.

“...”

Tomer ran away after learning the truth from Kim Hajin that day.

However, she paid a heavy price to break free from her bonds. The djinns labeled her as a traitor and chased her to the ends of the earth. Ironically, she only became this strong thanks to that experience.

She stumbled upon a cave in Central Asia around three years ago while tending to her wounds. The djinns had been chasing her when she received an invitation from the General Assembly.

A strange message popped up on her smartwatch that day.

[Congratulations.]

[You have been selected as one of the Beta Testers for the general assembly.]

[Do you wish to participate in the general assembly?]

She would've ignored the message as spam any other day, but her enemies would soon close in on her hideout. Tomer tapped [Yes] and grasped onto anything she could find.

Then, she found herself in a dark space. A few hundred people also arrived there and the General Assembly tested them in various ways.

Tomer survived until the end.

“Ah... I'm getting worried...”

She couldn't personally help Kim Hajin despite owing him. She could indirectly help as the continent's ruler, but couldn't interfere any more than that.

Her best option would be to find someone who could support him, but it would have to be a living person from outside the general assembly. Tomer couldn't bring in too many people. She needed someone who could help Kim Hajin alone and support him to the fullest extent.

“Ah!”

Tomer exclaimed after thinking of the perfect person. She immediately opened her laptop again and messaged that person.

* * *

The underground passage contained various monsters.

Not only the mole monsters, but a huge anaconda also waited for them with its mouth wide open pretending to be a part of the passage. They almost fell for it and became snake food, but Rachel displayed superhuman strength and decimated all their enemies.

Her swordsmanship perfectly harmonized with her spirits. It seemed she finally broke through her limits.

“Over there!” Yoo Yeonha exclaimed and her face brightened up.

A faint light ahead signaled the end of their misery. They ran with all their remaining strength and jumped towards the light when they reached it.

The scenery changed almost immediately and the mole monsters and various other creatures chasing them disappeared.

“Haa... Haa... Haa...”

“Urgh!”

The two of them sat on the ground and caught their breaths. They remained like that for a while before checking their new surroundings.

It still seemed to be an underground tunnel, but a stream flowed in front with walkways on both sides wide enough to walk on.

They ended up in the sewers.

“Ah... This is killing me...” Yoo Yeonha grumbled.

Rachel, drenched in blood and gasping for air, approached her.

“Now... Please, give... to me...”

“Give what?”

“Hajin... Haa... Haa...”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled in disbelief before putting Kim Hajin on Rachel’s back.

Rachel began walking while carrying him.

“Let’s go.”

“Are you not even exhausted?” Yoo Yeonha asked while standing in the same spot.

“We don’t have time to rest. We have to hurry.”

Rachel glared at her. She couldn’t understand why Yoo Yeonha took her sweet time despite Hajin’s dire condition.

“Hey, you know... that guy isn’t so weak that you have to worry so much.”

Yoo Yeonha grumbled as if she found Rachel frustrating.

Honestly, Kim Hajin could pass as a top hero without a hitch in her opinion. He wouldn’t die from something like poison.

“Then, feel free to stay as long as you want. Alone,” Rachel curtly replied.

Yoo Yeonha couldn't help but sigh.

“Huuu... Alright, I'm coming.”

Fortunately, the sewers didn't have any monsters and it didn't take long for them to find a ladder going up. The ladder connected to a manhole that led to the surface.

“Wait a minute. Before we go up...”

Yoo Yeonha stopped Rachel from climbing and rummaged through her bag. She took out a water canteen and robes.

“Wash up first. We'll stand out too much.”

“Ah...”

Rachel realized she had been drenched in blood.

Yoo Yeonha poured the water and Rachel used her spirits to completely clean their bodies. Then, they covered themselves with the robes.

“Let's go.”

“Sure, sure.”

They climbed the ladder and peeked out of the manhole. The scene outside looked exactly like England.

“Ughhh...”

Yoo Yeonha stretched after leaving the manhole.

Rachel stood stupefied while looking around. She recognized the clear, yet gloomy sky and the brick and mortar buildings with a few wood ones sprinkled throughout. It looked like London before the reformation period.

Memories from the past made her nostalgic, but she shook her head and came back to her senses. She didn't have time to waste on nostalgia.

"Let's find a hospital first," Rachel quickly said.

"No." Yoo Yeonha stopped her with a warning.

"Lancaster will immediately find us if we go somewhere like that."

"But still—"

"I know we're in a rush, but let's try to think."

They had no idea how far Lancaster's influence reached here, so they couldn't afford to hastily act. Kim Hajin remained unconscious, but their enemies posed a far greater threat than the poison.

"What do you propose when we don't even have IDs? They'll call the police as soon as the hospital finds out."

"..."

Indeed, Rachel couldn't refute such a sound argument.

"Alright, we have to at least find a place for him to rest. We both learned how to cure poison, right? It's been a long time since we studied it, but..."

"Okay."

The two roamed the bustling London streets after agreeing.

Rachel couldn't help but wonder, What kind of world is Lancaster trying to create? Does he truly believe that he can be happy by turning what's fake into reality?

A signboard caught her eye. It belonged to a shop that sold newspapers and magazines. Rachel walked over and checked the date. It read January 1st of that year.

Meanwhile, Yoo Yeonha looked at the back of the newspaper after Rachel froze from seeing the date.

“Hmm... Follow me. I think we can get a place,” Yoo Yeonha told her.

[Share House – We Share Empty Places!]

* * *

“Shall we eat first?” Yoo Yeonha asked while rubbing her stomach. She felt like she would die from hunger after running and fighting an entire day without eating.

However, Rachel suffered the most and shook her head as if she didn’t have an appetite.

“Alright, well... I guess I have no choice then... Haaa... I should just cook up some ramyeon or something since I don’t have an appetite as well. This ramyeon... I normally don’t eat this, but... I guess I have no choice...”

Yoo Yeonha took out a gas stove and placed a pot on it while mumbling.

“It doesn’t taste that good and it’s classless food on the level of fodder. However, this is the best I can do right now since I need a quick bite. It cooks quite quickly, so I’ll have to eat this... Yeah, I have no choice but to eat this for my survival... Yes...”

Rachel paid her no mind and only focused on Kim Hajin. She tightly squeezed his hands, which had turned blue. She felt guilty that he ended up like this because of her, but strongly believed that he could overcome this.

“Don’t worry so much. He won’t die that easily. His body is probably naturally curing itself right now. See? He looks much better than a while ago, right?”

Yoo Yeonha pointed out the fact that he looked better than before. His body seemed to be slowly detoxifying the poison thanks to his [Medicinal Memory Physique], which they had no idea about.

“Hum Hum Hum...”

Rachel was worried sick despite his improving condition while Yoo Yeonha hummed a tune and cracked an egg over the ramyeon.

Rachel didn’t even spare her a glance.

Yoo Yeonhwa asked a bit reluctantly after cooking the ramyeon.

“Do you want a... Do you want a bite?”

Rachel looked at her and Yoo Yeonha nervously gulped. This moment felt extremely nerve-wracking for Yoo Yeonha. What would Rachel say?

“No.” Rachel shook her head.

Yoo Yeonha inwardly sighed in relief.

“Alright. It’s just ramyeon, so I’m sure you’re better off without it.”

Slurp! Slurp!

Yoo Yeonha made delicious sounds as she slurped the ramyeon. Rachel stared at her without saying anything.

Yoo Yeonha didn’t pay her any mind this time. She ignored her... ignored her... and ignored her... until she felt so bothered that she couldn’t ignore her anymore. She slammed her chopsticks down.

“What? What do you want?”

“...”

Rachel remained silent.

“Do you want a bite?”

“...”

“Say something, will you?”

“...”

“Then, I’ll finish this all by myself.”

Grrk... Grruuk...

Rachel’s stomach suddenly growled and she carefully muttered like a stray cat asking for food.

“Just... Just one bite...”

“Haa... this is driving me crazy...”

The trio spent their first day in this small, cozy, and cramped room.

Side Stories 30

Dream in a Dream (30)

Rachel stepped out onto the streets and went to buy a laptop at Yoo Yeonha's request. She paid for the laptop by bartering some of her items. The laptop didn't have high specs, but at least they could access the news and community sites.

They had undoubtedly ended up in the old England.

"Welcome back. What about the laptop? Did you manage to buy one?" Yoo Yeonha asked while observing Kim Hajin's blood sample.

"Yes," Rachel replied as she hung her robe on the coat stand.

"Please hand it over. I need to analyze the poison's properties."

Rachel widened her eyes and ran over with a look that seemed to say, Are you serious?

"I infused my electricity into the blood sample and it showed some reactions. I recognized the poison almost immediately since it's quite famous," Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly said.

Rachel stiffened at those words. A poison would only be famous for two reasons. One, people commonly encountered or used it. Two, it was one of the most lethal poisons out there.

"This poison is called Empty Dream," Yoo Yeonha informed her.

"Empty Dream..."

"It's a very rare and unique poison."

Empty Dream required extracts from all sorts of rare ingredients and could be considered one of the most lethal poisons. However, it couldn't directly kill the victim. Rather, it forced its victim into an eternal sleep that they would never wake up from.

"This is dangerous... very dangerous..."

"It'll take some time for him to wake up."

Rachel looked serious, but Yoo Yeonha only flashed a bitter smile.

Yoo Yeonha had always considered Kim Hajin to be much stronger than Kim Suho. He might've lost his passion and dropped out of Cube, but she firmly believed his toughness remained over the years.

"He'll be fine. I'm certain he'll wake up."

"..."

Rachel weakly nodded in agreement, but still had a hard time composing herself.

"Anyways, don't be too worried. Dreams are meant to be woken up from."

Yoo Yeonha took the laptop and sat in front of the desk.

Rachel watched her type away before suddenly thinking of a brilliant idea. The Empty Dream made its victim dream, but she recently experienced sharing dreams with Kim Hajin for some unknown reason.

That means...

Rachel snuck under the sheets and lay next to Kim Hajin. She brought her face as close as possible to his.

"Hey Rachel, come take a look at this... W-What?!" Yoo Yeonha exclaimed in surprise when she turned around and saw the situation. She stuttered in shock, "W-What do you think you're doing?"

“Who knows... this might work—” Rachel replied, but Yoo Yeonha immediately ran over and pulled her away from him.

“It looks too indecent!” she exclaimed.

“What do you mean by indecent? Let go of me. I have to sleep here to —”

“Get out this instant! Right now!”

“But it’s not what you think... Tsk...”

Rachel glared at Yoo Yeonha after being dragged out of the bed.

Yoo Yeonha’s face flushed red. “W-What do you think you’re doing when the sun is still up? Why are you doing this? Have you gone crazy? Are you insane?!”

“No... it’s not what you think...”

Yoo Yeonha kept chirping like a bird all worked up. Only after she calmed down did Rachel finally explain her plan.

* * *

Rachel experienced her first dream in the same familiar, yet unfamiliar space. She felt certain that Kim Hajin lived in this house and finally mustered the courage to open the bedroom door, which she failed to open last time. A man slept on the small bed.

Rachel silently observed him and he slowly opened his eyes as if he noticed her. She woke up from the dream the moment he woke up.

She dreamt her second dream at the Hampton Palace.

Kim Hajin found her this time and he placed her younger self on his shoulder as he ran away from the palace. She could feel a strange sense of warmth from him.

Then she woke up from that dream when the surroundings cracked and turned into a white space of nothingness.

Rachel's third dream took place at Kim Hajin's house again, but they could look at each other now. He lay in bed as she stood there, but she suddenly woke up. Oddly enough, she couldn't recall their conversation.

After that, she dreamt her fourth, fifth, and sixth dreams...

The two of them shared their past. Their dreams grew longer and clearer the more she dreamt. They gradually reached the depths of their consciousness.

"You're putting in quite the effort."

Yoo Yeonha looked at Rachel, who just woke up and rubbed her eyes.

"Did you share dreams again?" Yoo Yeonha asked her.

"Yes, but I can't remember our conversations..."

The results kept turning out the same. The vivid dream grew vague after she woke up and her memories from the dream scattered away.

"Then, shall we go for a stroll?" Yoo Yeonha suggested.

"..."

Rachel silently looked at Kim Hajin still under the Empty Dream.

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled and tapped Rachel's shoulder.

"It'll be alright. I've already set up a powerful barrier here, so we'll be immediately notified if something ever happens. Rather than that, don't you think time travel is a rare opportunity?"

Yoo Yeonha seemed to be in a good mood.

Rachel looked out the window and saw the pleasant weather today. This type of weather would be rare even in the real England. The sun brightly shone and a cool breeze gently blew through the trees. The scenery outside looked picturesque.

“Just for thirty minutes,” Rachel muttered.

“Sounds good.”

The two of them went out to the bustling streets of England. Several families also came out for the weekend. Children’s laughter and smiling parents made for a beautiful sight under the sun and gentle breeze.

Had the atmosphere always been this pleasant and peaceful before the reformation? No, before the incident at the Hampton Palace?

“Wow, this looks exactly like what I saw in textbooks!” Yoo Yeonha exclaimed as she stood in front of a red telephone booth.

Rachel smiled as Yoo Yeonha excitedly posed in front of the booth. However, her expression suddenly stiffened when she saw Buckingham Palace in the distance. A chill went down her spine and a sense of anxiety stifled her.

Lancaster had recreated this old England. Did that mean people from the past also existed?

“Oh, Buckingham Palace is over there.”

Yoo Yeonha pointed it out and Rachel flinched at her words.

“Shall we go closer?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

Rachel profusely shook her head since Lancaster could discover them if they carelessly approached.

“Well, I’m glad you know where to go and where to not go,” Yoo Yeonha said with a smirk.

“...”

What the heck? Is she looking down on me? Rachel thought while pouting.

“Pfft! Just make sure nostalgia doesn’t get a hold of you. All of this is fake anyways.”

“Fake...” Rachel muttered.

As she said, this entire world was just a fake. Nothing but a copy of the original world... a world where souls gathered...

“Now, shall we roam around for a bit before heading back?” Yoo Yeonha asked while linking arms with Rachel.

* * *

“...”

Rachel woke up at the break of dawn.

Today had been no different. She couldn’t recall her dream again. Her head became a blank slate no matter how much she forced herself to remember.

She could only recall his voice ringing in her ears as he said something.

“Vice Leader.”

Rachel instantly turned to the familiar voice. Her body stiffened when she spotted the man hanging upside down outside the window like a bat with his head covered in a hood. He pulled back his hood and Rachel glared at him with visible anger.

Marcus had suddenly appeared.

“You!” Rachel exclaimed as she grabbed Galatine, but Marcus raised both his hands in surrender.

Rachel pointed at him with her chin as if to say he better spill the beans. Marcus looked around before coming in through the window.

“Are you living with him here?” He asked while looking at Kim Hajin on the bed.

“You little—!” Rachel exclaimed in anger.

Marcus immediately placed a finger to his lips.

“Shh! I barely managed to sneak out. Don’t cause a fuss. I have something to tell you.”

“Yawn?”

Yoo Yeonha woke up with a yawn. She looked at Marcus before rubbing her eyes in case she was still dreaming. It didn’t seem to be a dream.

“Get to the point,” Rachel curtly told him. She didn’t show any respect towards the traitor who betrayed his guild, country, and comrades.

Marcus simply nodded.

“I have no idea how you managed to come here, but Lancaster is plotting to sacrifice every citizen in England.”

Rachel grimaced in anger, but Marcus continued.

“Did you run into those mole monsters by any chance, Vice Leader?”

Rachel nodded when he asked about the monsters they faced in the underground passage.

“Those monsters are currently digging underneath this city. They’re carving a huge magic circle. I have a hunch that the same magic circle has already been created underneath our England back home.”

Marcus anxiously looked around.

“They’re planning to swap the real England with this fake England using that.”

Yoo Yeonha approached and said, “Don’t tell me you believe this traitor?”

“Yes, Lancaster had brainwashed me too. I thought everything was Vice Leader and England’s fault.” Marcus honestly admitted before shaking his head, “But Vice Leader bears no responsibility for that incident. We’re the ones at fault. I only realized that after spending time with you, Vice Leader.”

He continued with his passionate plea.

“I’m helping Vice Leader and England with my own methods. I stole everything in our safe to obtain Lancaster’s trust. Also, I purposely let our guild members chase me to the secret passage so you would be able to come here.”

He didn’t give Rachel a chance to respond.

“I’m not asking you to fully trust me, but Lancaster will activate the general assembly’s miracle at the Hampton Palace on that day.”

Marcus looked at her with sorrowful eyes.

“I will open the door on that day. It’s impossible to stop them alone, so I hope Vice Leader will help stop them too.”

He lowered his head after finishing his monologue and weakly added, “I’m sorry...”

Rachel couldn’t tell if he told the truth or not. Should she trust a subordinate who already betrayed her once? She sat on the bed and observed Marcus. Suddenly, a breeze blew from the window and his body turned into fine particles that dispersed into the air.

The sun rose on the horizon and the first rays of sunlight shone on the sleeping Kim Hajin.

Rachel gently patted his head while thinking.

Will he be able to wake up before that day?

* * *

Rachel immersed herself in training after Marcus' visit. She wanted to perfectly harmonize her spirits with her sword to stop what would happen that day. The clock was ticking and every second counted.

"So... you only remember what happened, but not the specifics?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

Rachel also trained her mind to remember her dreams as much as possible. However, that proved even more difficult than harmonizing her sword and spirits.

"Yes..."

"You can't remember even the tiniest detail from your conversations?"

"They're all vague..."

"How are they vague? Tell me whatever you can recall."

Rachel tightly closed her eyes and focused on Yoo Yeonha's words.

Ughh...

She racked her brain until she felt a splitting headache and finally recalled a single word.

"A... pocket? Pouch? Pocket mouse?"

"What? A pocket mouse? You mean a mouse with a pocket?" Yoo Yeonha frowned.

Rachel sighed, “I have no idea...”

“Tsk... Forget it. Anyways, shall we eat something?”

“Sure...”

They sat in front of the table and ate pork kimchi stew for breakfast.

“It turned out quite nice today.”

Yoo Yeonha complimented her own cooking and Rachel nodded in agreement. It didn’t taste as good as Kim Hajin’s, but she did a fairly good job.

“Eat slowly.”

“Okay.”

“I said eat slowly. You’re eating too fast.” Yoo Yeonha suddenly slammed her spoon on the table as they enjoyed their meal.

Rachel froze in shock at her reaction. Did Yoo Yeonha get mad because she ate too much?

“Ah... Don’t tell me... he meant my pocket?!”

“P-Pocket?”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t bother explaining and ran to Kim Hajin. He still wore the same clothes since the water spirit took care of cleaning him and washing his clothes.

Yoo Yeonha rummaged through his pockets. She started with his pants, his inner pockets, his coat pockets... but he simply had too many pockets.

“Ehem... Ehem...” Rachel faked a cough as if to say she didn’t feel comfortable with Yoo Yeonha touching his body so freely.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha ignored her and continued searching.

“Ehem! Ehem!” Rachel faked a cough again and Yoo Yeonha became annoyed.

“Alright, I’ll be done soon.”

Rachel went over and began searching his body as well to speed things up.

Then, Yoo Yeonha placed her hand in one of his pockets and felt something.

“Huh? What’s this?” she muttered and took it out.

The beautifully crafted necklace brightly shone the moment sunlight reflected on it. The necklace looked so beautiful that even Yoo Yeonha, more well-versed in jewelry than anyone else, had never seen such a beautiful piece before.

“I’m jealous...” she grumbled and tossed the necklace to Rachel.

Rachel somehow caught it. The necklace felt smooth to the touch and sparkled like a mirage.

“What is it? I thought he had an antidote or something... Geez... This is so frustrating...” Yoo Yeonhwa grumbled and pouted when she realized that Kim Hajin prepared a gift for Rachel and passed it along in his dream while on his deathbed.

Rachel’s cheeks flushed red as all sorts of thoughts went through her mind. She wondered why Kim Hajin would gift her such a beautiful necklace.

“Huh?”

One of her spirits appeared by itself as Rachel became lost in her fantasy.

Yoo Yeonha looked at the spirit and Rachel with a serious expression.

The spirit and the necklace began resonating with each other.

Side Stories 31

Dream in a Dream (31)

A ray of light shone on the lifeless pair of eyes before slowly disappearing. How scary and cold it must've been? How much they must've despised me? My child's eyes looked at me. My wife's eyes slowly closed as she held onto our child. I can still see their eyes the moment the embers of their lives had been snuffed out.

The palace collapsed and the ground caved in. Many died a horrible death and their mangled corpses littered the floor. Their blood formed a stream that flowed into the abyss.

Amid this chaos no different from hell was the princess covered in blood and flesh. My lady that I swore to protect with my life...

I gave up everything to save her. I abandoned my wife and child, crushed by debris, to save the princess...

* * *

Lancaster stared at the single ray of light shining into his dark room. It made him reminisce about the painful past.

“Begone, light.”

The light disappeared with his command and the surroundings returned to darkness again.

His consciousness drifted and he could feel the long-awaited day growing closer. Everyone who died would come back to life and he would right the awful tragedy that happened. He would smash the cogwheels of fate that ran askew and replace them with new ones.

Lancaster was prepared to sacrifice his life for the greater good. The knight untainted by despair and agony would reappear as long as he crushed his corrupted soul. He had to preserve his consciousness for this reason. He would embed his consciousness into those eyes that watched as he abandoned them.

Lancaster slowly sunk.

The young princess was still there in that cozy place like a dream. The lifeless bodies of his wife and child also resided there.

He only hoped that everything could restart in this dream. Everyone's pain would be buried within this neverending dream and they could all be happy again.

The flowers that bloomed that day looked particularly beautiful.

He wouldn't waste this last chance.

* * *

Galatine unleashed a bright light as the water spirit compressed to its fullest and the sword's amplified sharpness threatened to cut anything in its path.

Shwaaa...

Rachel swung Galatine and the powerful aura surrounding her sword froze the air.

This slashing and freezing became the most lethal combination she could create using both her swordsmanship and spirit.

Clap! Clap! Clap! Clap!

Yoo Yeonha watched from the sidelines and clapped. Rachel called back her spirit and the glow surrounding Galatine disappeared.

"Excellent," Yoo Yeonha's voice echoed as if in a tunnel.

Their current environment did resemble one. They failed to find a suitable place to train, so they decided to go underground. In other words, they returned to the sewers.

Rachel's spirit purified the water and air, which made the sewers much cleaner than the surface.

"I have no idea what's going on, but I'm certain the necklace amplified your spirit powers."

Yoo Yeonha made an observation and Rachel nodded.

Rachel had grown 1.5 to 2 times stronger after receiving the necklace.

"I wonder where he found something like that..." Yoo Yeonha muttered while looking at the necklace around Rachel's neck. Rachel wondered the same.

Who would've thought that someone could become so much more powerful after wearing just a necklace? Also, where in the world did he find something like that? Lastly, why did he give it to her of all people?

"Hmm... I'll have to go back up for now. Will you be training more?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

"Yes, I'll train just a bit longer," Rachel replied.

"Well, I bet you're having a ton of fun thanks to that necklace. Anyways, see you later."

Yoo Yeonha climbed up the ladder.

"Hoo..."

Rachel sat in a lotus position after being left alone. She relaxed her mind before slowly taking deep breaths. Her breathing method became more effective in the sewers than on the surface because she grew closer to the ground.

Shwiiii...

The sewage water slowly rose as if reacting to her breathing. It gathered around her before shooting up like a geyser and lifting her off the ground.

A small thought distracted her when she almost took full control of the spirit.

“Ah...”

Shwaaaak!

The water spirit dispersed once she lost her concentration and the pillar of water collapsed as well. She fell into the sewage water, which was too clean to be called sewage water.

Rachel remained still and floated in the water with her cheeks flushed red.

“...”

She fiddled with the necklace while thinking of someone.

Did he prepare this necklace just for her? Did he really really really prepare something like this for her? Like, really really really really for her?

She covered her face after feeling embarrassed over nothing. The cool water splashed on her, but her face still felt hot. Even her heart began to act up.

Did she catch a disease somewhere or get poisoned too?

Rachel placed her hands on her chest and tightly closed her eyes. She tried to calm her breathing and her heart, but to no avail.

“What’s going on...” She muttered before giving up and floating in the water with her arms and legs stretched out. She blankly stared at the ceiling while floating.

The gently splashing water and the cool breeze over her face made her eyelids grow heavy.

“...”

A dream slowly came to her in this peaceful scenery and she closed her eyes.

* * *

[Pinnacle Rank External Injury Healing Potion]

[Royal Armband]

[Paper Crane]

[Great Magic Scroll]

[Magic Scroll...]

“These are what we have.”

Yoo Yeonha opened the sack they received from the royal palace.

It contained numerous useful artifacts enchanted with effects like magic power amplification and magic resistance. They also received a pinnacle rank healing potion and magic scrolls.

“That day is in February, right?” Yoo Yeonha asked while putting on the armband.

“Yes,” Rachel briefly replied.

“Hmm... As you know... we’re severely lacking in firepower with just the two of us. I’m certain their army will number in the thousands at least. We won’t be able to face them alone,” Yoo Yeonha said.

She made a fair point. Rachel couldn't possibly face an army of more than a thousand no matter how much her powers had been amplified.

"Even if we have excellent equipment... Wow, this is really good," Yoo Yeonha interrupted herself after coming across the capes from the royal palace.

Rachel picked one up and wore it too. "It even has a gliding function."

"I know. It seems they spared no efforts in supporting us. Also, the design is quite pretty. Don't you agree?"

"Yes, it looks luxurious."

"That's right. It looks like a branded item befitting the royal family. I won't look tacky wearing this in Seoul later, right?"

They merrily chatted over the capes and suddenly became silent. Then, they went back to the main topic.

"Can you trust Marcus?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

Rachel couldn't easily reply.

Marcus declared that he was a double agent, but he could be a triple agent or even a quadruple agent for all she knew.

"He hinted at something when he mentioned that he would open the door. It sounded as if he would open a backdoor so we could immediately fight Lancaster without facing his minions, right?"

They had a chance if Marcus sincerely helped them. Rachel's abilities had been greatly amplified, so she could face Lancaster one-on-one now.

"How are you related to Marcus?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

Rachel bit her lips before weakly replying, "Marcus lost his parents at the Hampton Palace incident."

Yoo Yeonha furrowed her brows, “You accepted him into your guild despite knowing that?”

“Because he did nothing wrong. That wasn’t his fault,” Rachel replied.

She even sponsored Marcus’ tuition fees at Cube.

Yoo Yeonha sighed before suddenly exclaiming, “Ah! I have a great idea!”

She proceeded to tear up the bedsheet and Rachel flinched at her sudden action.

Yoo Yeonha tied the pieces here and there to form something like an animal.

“What are you doing?”

“Can’t you tell? I’m making a vessel for your spirit.”

“Huh? Ah!”

Rachel finally realized it after some time.

Yoo Yeonha placed a bird on top of the bed after tying the final knot. It looked quite detailed despite being made from a bed sheet.

“Now, try infusing your spirit into this.”

“But I’ve never tried before—”

“It’s alright. Your teacher was an expert at this, right? I’m certain you can do it too.”

“...”

“Hurry up. What we need most right now is someone to scout for us.”

As Yoo Yeonha said, they desperately needed to scout the enemy since they didn't have any information.

Rachel sighed at the bird. She had only heard of this difficult technique and never attempted it before. She had never even seen it accomplished in person.

However, she felt confident thanks to the necklace's power.

Rachel closed her eyes and summoned her spirit. Then she infused it into the bird on the table. She chose the wind spirit and needed something to act as a link between her consciousness and the spirit.

She focused as hard as she could for a few minutes and the bird finally flapped its wings.

"Ah!" Yoo Yeonha exclaimed in surprise, but Rachel ignored her and only focused on the bird.

The bird flapping its wings soon linked with Rachel and the infused wind spirit cried out.

"Kiuuuuu!"

"Ugh..."

"Are you alright?"

Rachel staggered and Yoo Yeonha rushed over to catch her while intently observing the bird.

"Kiuuuuu! Kiuuuuu!"

The silvery bird looked beautiful. Fine dust spread out as it flapped its wings, which proved that the spirit had been successfully linked.

* * *

Rachel also sent a spirit rat along with the spirit bird to the Hampton

Palace.

A saying went that the bird eavesdropped during the day while the rat eavesdropped during the night. This proved to be true as the bird and rat completed their reconnaissance mission. They not only retrieved information regarding the palace's interior, but they also brought back information regarding Lancaster's minions guarding the place.

Rachel drew a blueprint of the palace based on the information her spirits retrieved.

"Right here. This is the only spot that's different from the Hampton Palace's original design."

She pointed at a passage beneath the palace floors with a pen.

It seemed to be the door that Marcus said he would open.

Yoo Yeonha rubbed her chin. "Then I guess this will be our destination and Lancaster is probably in there?"

"That should be the case if we go by Marcus' words... and trust him."

"Well, what can we do? We don't have any other options than to believe him, right? That's the best we can do now."

Yoo Yeonha tapped on the blueprint.

"Hmm... I guess we'll have to dig as well to get there..."

Rachel nodded in agreement.

Lancaster's minions guarded various paths to the Hampton Palace according to their new information, which meant any normal route would be no different from rushing head-first into a fire.

"Let's change our hideout first. It's simply too dangerous to stay in the same place. We should use the sewers as our hideout from now on."

“Yes, but I will carry Hajin—”

“I know. I never said anything about touching him. Go ahead.”

“No... That’s not what I meant...”

The duo brought Kim Hajin along and went down to the sewers, which they already grew quite familiar with.

Yoo Yeonha made a makeshift bed and Rachel placed him on top.

“Hmm... This place gives off a camping vibe. You know, setting up a tent beside a stream?”

The sewers became more of a natural garden thanks to the spirits that made the stream crystal clear and the fresh air had no hints of any pungent smell.

Yoo Yeonha smirked and set up a meeting table on top of the stream.

“Now, let us—”

A sinister vibration shook from somewhere when she prepared to start their meeting.

Badum...

Rachel immediately took out Galatine while Yoo Yeonha took a few steps back.

Badum... Badum... Badum...

The sound seemed to be coming from nearby.

“W-What is it?” Yoo Yeonha asked while nervously gulping.

Rachel took a few steps closer towards the sound with her guard up.

Badum...

The sound grew closer.

Badum... Badum...

A dense mana could be felt from where the vibration originated.

Cold sweat formed on Rachel's forehead and she summoned her spirit to scout ahead. The spirit butterfly fluttered its wings and flew towards the vibration.

Rachel closed her eyes and borrowed the spirit's eyes and ears.

Bam! Bam! Grrr... Grrr Waaaaah!

Something roared in a beast-like manner and didn't make any sense.

It slaughtered numerous things... but Rachel couldn't get a closer look because the berserk violence swept up her spirit.

She opened her eyes and spoke in a serious tone, "Yeonha, I'll leave Hajin to you."

"Okay," Yoo Yeonha immediately held onto Kim Hajin and prepared to run away if anything happened.

"Who are you?" Rachel asked as she raised Galatine. Her sword brightly shone to illuminate the dark sewers.

The light slowly spread throughout the sewers before a figure appeared.

"Strike first and take the initiative!"

The hideous figure screamed and charged at Rachel.

"Euk!"

Rachel instantly swung Galatine and blocked the first strike, but the next strike connected with her chin. The strike came so fast like an uppercut and completely neutralized her in one shot.

Ding!

That was the last sound she heard as her brain shook and struck her skull.

Side Stories 32

Dream in a Dream (32)

Everything settled down in the sewers.

“ ... ”

“ ... ”

“ ... ”

Three people stared at each other without a word.

The first person glanced at the second, but the second person instantly looked away and avoided locking eyes. The second person was forced to look at the third person, but the third person avoided eye contact as well.

They continued this game of avoiding each other's gaze before Yoo Yeonha stepped up and broke the awkward silence.

“I will apologize instead.”

Rachel grimaced while holding her chin, which swelled up after being struck by an uppercut or whatever that attack had been.

However, the ambusher didn't seem apologetic at all and muttered something under her breath while awkwardly scratching her neck. “Who told you to aim your sword at someone without even trying to talk?”

Rachel glared at her ambusher and gritted her teeth. “Ouch!”

A sharp pain struck her when she gritted her teeth too hard.

“Anyways!” Yoo Yeonha exclaimed with a clap, which got both of their attention. Then she asked Chae Nayun, who appeared out of nowhere, “How did you get here, Nayun?”

“How else...” Chae Nayun replied before stealing a glance at Kim Hajin by naturally rolling her eyes as if she simply checked the surroundings. She couldn’t help but wonder, How in the world is this sewer so clean? I mean, look at this water and the plants growing around.

“The king asked me to come,” she said.

“The king?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“Yeah, she wanted me to help Kim Hajin, who was in grave danger. So...” Chae Nayun’s words trailed off and she stole a glance at Rachel this time.

She initially thought only Kim Hajin would be here, but never imagined Rachel would appear as well.

Yoo Yeonha pointed at Kim Hajin. “So you’re here because of him? That’s what you’re saying?”

“Yeah, but what the hell’s going on? What kind of a situation is this?” Chae Nayun scratched her head with an annoyed expression.

She couldn’t understand the current situation. She came to save Kim Hajin, but he turned out to be with the princess and Yoo Yeonha. They claimed to be tagging along to clear a quest.

“Anyways, listen up Nayun. I will explain as simply as possible...” Yoo Yeonha proceeded to explain everything within fifteen minutes.

They ended up in the old England recreated in this world. Lancaster became the king and owner of this place. He plotted something so big that it would even affect the real world.

“Do you understand?” Yoo Yeonha asked after finishing her explanation.

“Erm... Yeah...” Chae Nayun replied with a serious look.

She knew very well that it would be impossible to swap this England and the real England unless someone used the fragment she was looking for. She became all the more certain that she would find it here.

“But... what happened to Kim Hajin?” Chae Nayun asked as she looked at him. She found it strange that he had been sleeping the entire time without moving an inch.

“He gotsh poishoned by a poishon called Emptwee Dweem,” Rachel replied. Her speech became slurred due to her swelling chin.

“Pfft!”

Chae Nayun tried to hold back her laughter, but marvelously failed.

“...”

Rachel glared at her and wanted to instantly cut her down.

Chae Nayun faked a cough, “Ehem... Empty Dream... What the heck is that?”

Yoo Yeonha answered this time, “It’s a poison that makes the victim keep dreaming. There’s no antidote and the victim can only recover by themself.”

“Oh... is that so?” Chae Nayun muttered while staring at Kim Hajin’s face.

This was the first time she saw him sleeping so peacefully.

“Hmm...”

Honestly, she felt relieved that he fell asleep. She rushed over after hearing he was in danger, but had been extremely nervous and didn’t dare to face him. Things turned out in her favor if she didn’t have to talk to him.

“Look at him sleeping...” she muttered.

Chae Nayun found him adorable after watching him sleep for so long. She flashed a mischievous smile and walked towards him. However, Rachel immediately dashed over and blocked her path.

“Down’t go closh to ze patience,” Rachel warned her.

“Aren’t you the patient?”

“What ziz you shay?”

Rachel pouted in anger, but ended up looking like a carp bread^[1] instead.

Chae Nayun burst into laughter. “Anyways, I understand what’s going on and I’m glad to help.”

* * *

Rachel and Chae Nayun covered themselves in robes and went to the surface. Chae Nayun stubbornly wanted to sightsee around the old England.

“Hmm... So even a tiny fragment can create a world like this...” Chae Nayun muttered while looking around the perfectly recreated England.

Rachel tilted her head in confusion and asked, “What ziz you shay?”

“No... Nothing. Pfft! Ah... this is hilarious. Hey, shouldn’t you go to the hospital or something?”

Rachel’s recovery took longer than usual because Chae Nayun’s fist had been filled to the brim with mana.

“No, Lanster’s eyes are all over zi playsh...” Rachel stopped talking midway after seeing Chae Nayun mock her with pouting lips.

Rachel lightly shoved her.

“Pfft! Ah, alright. I’ll stop it. Anyways, I’ll wreak havoc here while the two of you sneak in from underground, right?”

Rachel nodded.

Yoo Yeonha would plan the specifics, but the overall gist of their plan went like that.

“What if Kim Hajin doesn’t wake up by then?”

“We have to moove him to a swave pwaish.”

“Move him to a safe place?”

“Yesh.”

Rachel suddenly felt bothered by something. She noticed a hint of emotion in Chae Nayun’s voice when talking about Kim Hajin.

“You musht bwee cwosh? Seein you run here sho fasht,” Rachel nonchalantly asked.

Chae Nayun turned around and looked at her.

Diiing!

The Big Ben rang, signaling that the clock had struck twelve.

“You asked if we’re close?”

“Yesh.”

Chae Nayun placed both hands on the back of her neck and began thinking. Then she stretched her hands up, “Who knows?”

Kim Hajin and me. What are we to each other? Can we say that we're close?

She asked herself as the memories she shared with him flashed across her mind. She recalled the unforgivable things he did to her and she did to him.

Chae Nayun made a bitter smile that turned into a mischievous one. "Rather than being close... we're super close with each other."

"..."

"Very, Super, Close..."

Rachel's expression stiffened as she glared at Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun tapped her chin, "What? Whatcha gonna do about it?"

"I know you're lying."

"Pfft! Really? Is that what you think?"

"Hmph!"

"Believe what you want to believe."

"Layer..."

"You sound cute like that. Hey, cutie pie!" Chae Nayun teased and pinched Rachel's swollen cheeks.

Rachel slapped her hands away and glared.

"Hoo..."

Then she sighed in resignation. They had to cooperate, so she decided to be the adult and hold it in since Chae Nayun came all the way here to help Kim Hajin.

“Here,” Rachel handed a mirror to Chae Nayun.

“What’s this?”

“Itsh a miwor connected to my shprits vishoon.”

Her pronunciation seemed to be getting better by the minute.

“Hmm... Is that so?” Chae Nayun inspected the mirror.

A different scene played in the mirror. It showed the spirit rat’s vision that Rachel controlled.

“That rat ish going around the Hampton Palash and the area around it evweeday, sho use that to familiarize yourshelf with the area.”

“Sure... if you say so...” Chae Nayun placed the mirror in her pocket and began walking somewhere.

“Where are you going?” Rachel asked, but Chae Nayun simply waved without looking back.

“I’ll be sightseeing for a bit. I’ll be careful not to get caught, so don’t worry.”

“Hey...”

“I’ll be back real quick.”

“Haa...” Rachel sighed and shook her head. She turned around and returned to the sewers.

* * *

Their preparations for that day proceeded smoothly.

Yoo Yeonha made magic bombs infused with her mana. She designed them to minimize casualties while incapacitating the English forces with her lightning attribute. They used the spirit bird and spirit rat to install the bombs throughout England.

Rachel immersed herself in training and Chae Nayun volunteered to be her sparring partner. Rachel finally had a proper training session thanks to her.

“Ugh!”

“Too slow!”

“Kyah!”

“Just die!”

Anyone else who saw them sparring would probably mistake it for a one-sided beating.

Rachel couldn't keep up with Chae Nayun and Chae Nayun pummeled her into a corner using only bare fists.

“Heuk...” Rachel grabbed her stomach and collapsed after being punched in the guts.

Yoo Yeonha began worrying after watching them spar. “Hey, are you alright?”

However, her voice carried a hint of superiority more than worry. After all, Chae Nayun belonged to Essence of the Straits. Watching her one-sidedly pummel Rachel, the vice leader of another guild, felt quite pleasant.

“Not yet...” Rachel muttered while staggering.

Chae Nayun didn't give her any space and immediately attacked again. However, Rachel reacted this time and summoned her wind spirit to amplify her speed. She caught up to Chae Nayun and blocked the punch with Galatine. Then she kicked Chae Nayun in the abdomen.

Creeaaaak!

The tiles broke as Chae Nayun slammed her feet to the ground. She stood upright and clapped with a hint of sincerity.

“Oh, you grew stronger already?”

“Not yet...” Rachel muttered as she wiped the blood off her lips. A necklace became visible through her disheveled clothes.

Chae Nayun pointed at it and asked, “What’s that necklace? It looks pretty.”

Rachel didn’t plan on responding, but suddenly stood upright and flashed a mischievous smile.

“I got it as a gift...”

“From who?” Chae Nayun asked.

Rachel already anticipated her question and only flashed another smile.

Chae Nayun seemed to realize something and asked in a cold voice, “Don’t tell me... Kim Hajin?”

Rachel nodded in response.

“...”

Chae Nayun turned to look at Kim Hajin sound asleep on the bed. She stared at him for a while before taking off her watch.

The entire atmosphere suddenly changed.

Shwaaaaa!

A ferocious aura burned so strong that it seemed to snuff out the oxygen in the air. Rachel held her breath and staggered back.

“...”

Crack... Crack...

Chae Nayun cracked her neck and took a few steps forward. The sewer tiles caved in with every step.

“I’ll be getting serious now. Take care of yourself,” she said in a voice cold as ice.

Rachel nervously gulped and pleaded, “Hey... wait a minute... let’s take a break...”

“No.”

Puuuk!

Chae Nayun instantly appeared in front of her and punched her in the guts again. Rachel’s eyes trembled at the sudden impact and she couldn’t follow Chae Nayun’s movements at all. It seemed as if Chae Nayun disappeared and reappeared like the wind.

Rachel plopped face-first into the ground. She couldn’t even make a sound since everything happened in the blink of an eye.

“I’ll pummel you down if you don’t get up,” Chae Nayun warned in the same icy voice.

Rachel held her abdomen and slowly got up. The pain became fuel for her anger. She gritted her teeth and gripped her sword.

Chae Nayun suddenly struck her shin when Rachel prepared to move.

“Kyak!” Rachel shrieked like a dying bird and collapsed again.

“Hey, get up. We still have a long way to go...” Chae Nayun threatened.

Chae Nayun’s personal training could only be described as brutal.

Rachel had never experienced such brutality in her life. However, she could feel herself growing stronger at a more rapid pace than ever before.

* * *

January would soon end and every day that passed only made the atmosphere more nerve-wracking.

Rachel skipped training for today and stood on top of a building. She looked down at England's scenery.

The winter seemed quite peaceful. Everything felt too cozy and peaceful to call it fake. It would be a shame to lose this view because it looked so serene.

"What do you think about the results of your training?" someone asked from behind.

Rachel had no idea how, but Yoo Yeonha showed up from behind her.

"..."

Rachel pouted and removed the bandage on her nose. A shallow scratch remained from where she had been cut.

"I think I zid grow shtronger... after being beaten up..."

Her speech became slurred again after being struck on the chin.

"You're quite impressive. You made Nayun use her sword in just a week."

"I never knew zhat there wash that much of a gap between our abilities," Rachel said with a sigh.

She lost to Chae Nayun, who didn't even use a weapon, while she used Galatine all the time. No, Chae Nayun repeatedly pummeled her to the ground.

Rachel had no choice but to become stronger if she wanted to make it out alive from Chae Nayun's fists, which carried some deep personal feelings.

"We will meet him soon... Lanster..." Rachel said as she thought of Lancaster.

She wondered what she should say once they met. Could she possibly say anything to correct their ruined relationship? What should she say first?

She wanted to prepare exactly what to do and say, but it turned out to be much harder than she thought.

"Well, that's entirely your business..." Yoo Yeonha told her.

"Yesh..." Rachel muttered before a nervous thought crossed her mind.

"But... what about Hajing?"

If she and Yoo Yeonha had come here... then who guarded Kim Hajin?

"You don't have to worry. Nayun is taking care of him."

"Ah..." Rachel nodded. She felt relieved for a moment before realizing that she shouldn't be relieved.

"No!" She suddenly stood and exclaimed. Then she screamed in a trembling voice, "How can you leave the two of them alone!"

"Huh?"

"Damn it!" Rachel cursed and ran as fast as she could. She ran so fast that she began sweating profusely.

What would the two of them do alone? No, what kind of indecent things would Kim Hajin suffer at the hands of Chae Nayun?

Her blood shot up to her head just thinking about it. She became one with the wind and sped towards the sewers.

Rachel immediately arrived at the sewers and caught Chae Nayun doing something very indecent to Kim Hajin, who remained fast asleep and defenseless.

1. This is a popular Korean street snack known as Bungeo-Ppang that looks like a carp. It's originally from Japan and is also called Taiyaki. More info here: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bungeo-ppang> 🙋

Side Stories 33

Dream in a Dream (33)

“Huh? When did you arrive?” Chae Nayun nonchalantly asked while sitting on top of Kim Hajin and doing something to him.

Rachel instinctively reacted before saying anything and pushed her off.

“Euk!”

Chae Nayun fell into the sewage water.

“What are you doing?!” Rachel screamed while glaring at her with visible rage.

“Ugh...” Chae Nayun groaned while rubbing her hips. Then she retorted, “This little! Hey, you wanna die?!”

“What? You have zhe odasitee to say zhat?!” Rachel screamed in response.

“What the hell are you saying? Did you lose a tooth or something?” Chae Nayun grumbled and took something out of her pocket. She showed Rachel a root covered in dirt. It was a wild ginseng.

“I was trying to feed him this. Got a problem?”

“...?”

Rachel’s expression relaxed and she tilted her head in confusion.

“It’s not as good as the ones in Korea, but is there anything more effective in helping someone recuperate other than wild ginseng?”

Yoo Yeonha said they couldn't cure Empty Dream, but Chae Nayun wouldn't just sit around and twiddle her thumbs. She climbed the highest mountain in Britain called the Ben Nevis.

"I looked around and found some wild ginseng there," Chae Nayun said with a shrug.

She found some thanks to her herbalist skills rather than luck. She had a poor sense of direction, but an excellent sense of smell. Chae Nayun simply followed its scent and didn't have much difficulty finding these rare roots.

"Ah... Hmm... I see... Ehem... Ehem..." Rachel awkwardly faked a cough. Cold sweat formed on her forehead. She felt flustered and embarrassed by her actions just now.

Rachel rubbed her swollen chin, "So you wanted to feed him that?"

"Huh? Well, yeah... As you know, it's best to chew wild ginseng thoroughly, right? I wanted to see if he could instinctively chew it or not. I was going to grind it into a paste and forcefully feed him if he couldn't."

The best way to absorb the full benefits of wild ginseng was to chew on it.

Honestly, Chae Nayun considered feeding it to him mouth-to-mouth if he couldn't do it himself. She had foraged the wild ginseng two days ago, but waited until Rachel left.

"He won't be able to eat it... probably."

"Then, I'll just grind it up," Chae Nayun sighed in regret.

Rachel awkwardly squirmed before summoning the spirit of fire.

"Here."

"Thanks."

Chae Nayun tossed the wild ginseng into the spirit's blue fire.

The spirit didn't burn the wild ginseng. Instead, it slowly melted the wild ginseng and turned it into an extract. Rachel slowly fed the extract to Kim Hajin and stepped back to check his condition.

“...”

“...”

An awkward silence followed.

Kim Hajin showed no signs of any changes and Chae Nayun scratched her head in frustration.

“Hey, I'm going out for a while. Let me know if he gets better.”

Rachel nodded and continued observing Kim Hajin.

Grumble... Grumble...

Chae Nayun walked away while grumbling something under her breath.

* * *

— Welcome.

Rachel opened her eyes and saw Kim Hajin in front of her. She flinched in surprise and looked around. Then she finally realized they were dreaming.

Kim Hajin laughed as if he found her looking around quite cute.

— How are things these days? Is everything alright?

Rachel stared into his eyes and could see her reflection in them.

“Yes... things will start soon. I feel a bit nervous, but I’ll be fine. This is something I had to personally take care of from the start...”

— Slurp...

Kim Hajin sipped his coffee.

Rachel fiddled her thumbs and mustered her courage.

“But... that necklace...”

— Hmm? Ah, yes. What about it?

“That is...”

— I made it for you as a gift. I paid a lot of attention to making it.

Rachel’s eyes widened in surprise and Kim Hajin laughed at her reaction.

— How many times have you asked me this? I guess you can’t remember anything after waking up.

“Ah... yes... that’s correct...”

— Then, I’ll say this again. You don’t particularly need that necklace. You’ll do great on your own. After all, your concept is to overcome and be resolute.

She couldn’t understand his words, but felt the genuine faith he had in her through his voice alone.

A thought suddenly popped up in her head.

This person had more faith in me than I did in myself...

— Trust me if you can’t trust yourself. There’s nobody else who knows you better than I do.

His gentle voice resonated in her ears and she finally opened her eyes.

“Now, I’m almost done with my preparations.”

Yoo Yeonha slammed a button on the table.

Tak!

Rachel flinched and looked at it.

Yoo Yeonha made this button to remotely control the bombs.

“I’ll detonate all the bombs before we enter the palace. The entirety of England will be shrouded in darkness for at least a day. Also, take one of these.”

Yoo Yeonha passed a bundle of bombs to Rachel and Chae Nayun. Then she added, “Use them when you can. These bombs will be effective against our enemies.”

Chae Nayun pouted and complained, “I don’t need these.”

“Still, take it with you. Ah... Rachel, did Marcus tell you anything?” Yoo Yeonha asked. She needed a guarantee of some sort to fully believe Marcus about opening a back door.

However, Rachel shook her head.

“No, not yet.”

“Hmm... This makes him more credible for now, I guess... After all, he has to avoid Lancaster’s eyes, right?”

She would’ve suspected him more if he managed to freely contact them. Yoo Yeonha crossed her arms and continued.

“Anyways, Plan A is quite simple. We’ll enter through the back door and assassinate Lancaster. Come to think of it...”

Her words trailed off and she seriously looked at Rachel. “Can you tell us?”

Rachel flinched and shuddered at her question. However, Yoo Yeonha didn’t relent and pressed on.

“That day, what really happened?”

“...”

“I believe we have the right to know.”

Rachel dropped her head and bit her lips, but it didn’t take long for her to sigh and speak up. It felt painful to recall, but she mustered the courage to talk about it for these two that willingly became her comrades.

“Yes, I understand.”

Rachel’s expression became resolute.

Yoo Yeonha reclined in her chair while Chae Nayun looked at Rachel with interest.

Rachel scratched the back of her hand and carefully told her tale.

“Honestly... I found out the truth too late. I was the most important catalyst that triggered all of it... but I was oblivious to it for the longest time...”

The birth of England’s princess could potentially change the entire country’s fortune. They coined her as the greatest genius born in Europe. She gained plenty of other monikers and many enemies too. Having her abilities celebrated became her greatest weakness.

Djinns aimed at her for ransom and to increase their infamy. Other countries in Europe and even China and the United States wanted to keep her in check. They deployed all sorts of cowardly tactics to stunt her growth.

However, the young Rachel remained oblivious to all of this. She had no idea how many agents and knights had been sacrificed to keep her safe. Her supposed foolishness and ignorance resulted in the disastrous Hampton Palace Incident.

Rachel ran away from home that day because she felt sick and tired of all the nagging. Her life trapped inside Buckingham Palace began to bore her. She ran away to the Hampton Palace where her mother passed away.

Perhaps it was a stroke of bad luck, wrong timing, or just a curse. A djinn who still hasn't been identified to this day saw her enter the Hampton Palace and ambushed the place.

England's government and the royal palace issued a very simple order to the heroes.

Rescue Rachel.

The deployed heroes only searched for Rachel. They closed an eye to the countless people buried under the rubble asking for help as they scoured the place for her.

The heroes panicked because of the sudden disaster and the extreme orders from above. Of course, Rachel would've probably died if the heroes stopped to help anyone else.

The victims had been sacrificed to safely rescue Rachel.

Despite all that, the country didn't punish Rachel for running away. Rather, they punished the knights and maids in charge of looking after her for failing to stop her from running away. Not only that, they even proceeded to cover up what actually happened. They also blamed Lancaster, who abandoned his own family to rescue Rachel, as one of the people responsible for the disastrous incident.

England ended up making fools out of millions of their citizens to preserve Rachel's image as the child who would lead their country in the future.

Too many people had been sacrificed because Rachel had been born a princess with special talents. Even her most loyal knight became a criminal without her knowing it.

The young Rachel went into a coma at the time and everything had already been taken care of when she woke up. She only found out the truth once she grew up, but could no longer right that wrong.

The Hampton Palace Tragedy changed England as a whole and Rachel never slept well after that day.

“That sounds complicated...” Yoo Yeonha muttered after listening to her summary.

Rachel looked at her and smiled. “I thought you would already know everything.”

“I was young back then too. Also, I wouldn’t have dug deep into it either way. After all, that’s England’s business.”

“...”

Rachel couldn’t help but briefly glare at Yoo Yeonha. However, Yoo Yeonha’s words weren’t wrong. England’s business meant it wasn’t that important. The incident that shook their foundation didn’t even deserve a glance from South Korea.

“Hey... How can you say it like that? Are you just saying whatever comes to mind because it doesn’t affect you?”

Surprisingly, Chae Nayun got all worked up.

Yoo Yeonha shrugged. “I’m sorry. I’m more of a rational person. Anyways, what are you going to tell Lancaster once you meet him? Are you going to apologize? Or are you going to try and convince him to stop this madness?”

“...”

Rachel deeply pondered for a moment before replying.

“I have to fight.”

More people would die if Rachel didn't stop Lancaster. She couldn't abandon the present to rewrite the past.

She had to fight as the vice leader of the guild that represented England and also as the successor to the English throne. Even if she disappeared into nothingness along with Lancaster while bearing the burden of that incident.

“Alright, let's start preparing for real now,” Yoo Yeonha said with a smile.

* * *

Fermin and the other English Royal Court members found the underground tunnel that Marcus used thanks to assistance from their ally, Reislaufer.

“So that rat bastard escaped through here!” Fermin exclaimed after locating the small tunnel hidden behind overgrown bushes.

The English Royal Court members rolled up their sleeves and clenched their fists. They seemed ready to beat the living crap out of the traitor.

“Shall we go?” Kayle asked.

Fermin pondered for a moment after becoming the guild's temporary leader.

“Hmm...” She stole a glance at Sehat and the Reislaufer guild.

They nodded and smiled.

“We'll go with you,” Sehat said.

That was all she needed to hear.

Fermin gripped her staff and spoke without hesitation, “That settles it!

Let's go and kill that rat!"

"Yes!"

"Give me my money back!"

The guild members raised their weapons in the air as if they would charge inside the tunnel at any moment. However, Fermin slowly lowered her hand.

"But... before we go in... I think we should thoroughly prepare first..."

* * *

Marcus stood on top of the Big Ben the next day and looked down at England in the middle of the night.

This world precisely resembled pre-reformation England, but it wasn't real.

Marcus turned on his smartwatch and felt the cool night breeze on his face.

His guild members should slowly be making their move now. They would reach this place once they found the passageway and would probably make their choice once they arrived.

"Marcus, I think there's an intruder," a voice suddenly spoke from behind him.

This didn't surprise him. Instead, he turned around and calmly looked at the gigantic man.

"Yes, I'll go and check it right away."

"No, I'll come with you."

However, he hadn't calculated this. The large man wouldn't back down so easily.

“I can go check by myself.”

“No, it’s time for me to move as well.”

The man ignored Marcus’ words and stood.

Marcus grew anxious and felt certain that none of his guild members would survive if this monster went there.

“Lead the way.”

“Yes...”

He went along with the large man, but secretly tapped on his smartwatch. Messaging Rachel now would be akin to suicide, but he had no choice. He couldn’t simply let his guild members die.

“Please, follow me,” Marcus said with a slight bow.

He hid his left hand behind his back and urgently typed a message to Rachel.

* * *

Bzzzt!

Rachel suddenly felt a vibration in the peaceful sewers. Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun also noticed it and looked at her.

Rachel nervously gulped, “What was that?”

Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly pointed at her wrist, “It came from you.”

A message appeared on her smartwatch.

“Ah...” Rachel checked the message.

[Marcus: The English Royal Court members are crossing over through the passage I used. I'll send you the coordinates. A hit squad has already been formed to intercept them, so your urgent support is required.]

Rachel's eyes widened after reading the message.

"It says that our guild members are on the way here! However, Lancaster seems to have caught on to their arrival..." Rachel urgently said as she activated her mana without realizing it. Her guild members were in danger.

However, Yoo Yeonha remained calm and analyzed the situation.

"..."

The English Royal Court members... We'll be exposed as well if we save them... but there are still four days left before that day...

"Yeonha?" Rachel muttered.

Yoo Yeonha sighed, "I guess we have no choice. There won't be much difference whether we start now or in four days. We'll proceed as planned and I'll command from this sewer."

She placed Kim Hajin on her back and went further underground. They built an underground bunker to ensure Kim Hajin's safety. This bunker had several monitors inside and even the spirit mirror.

Yoo Yeonha placed Kim Hajin on the bed and picked up the walkie-talkie.

"Testing, one, two, three... testing, can you hear me?"

— Yes, I can.

— Yeah, I can hear you.

"Good, then I'll send the drones first."

— Okay.

Yoo Yeonha pressed a button and numerous drones instantly took flight. She had to get visuals on the location before anything else. Rachel gave her coordinates to the east at the end of the Thames River.

“Be very careful not to attract attention on the way.”

“...”

She suddenly felt someone staring at her from behind. Yoo Yeonha turned around, but didn’t find anything.

She shook her head and spoke into the walkie-talkie again, “I’m briefly cutting off London’s power supply.”

She detonated two of the bombs they installed.

Boom!

A small blast resounded in the distance and London became pitch-black.

The darkness would continue for at least ten minutes. Rachel and Chae Nayun used this opportunity to zigzag through the alleyways undetected.

“Huh?”

The drone monitors suddenly turned black.

Yoo Yeonha looked into the black monitor and saw the reflection of something hideous behind her. She couldn’t tell if it was a person or monster twitching and squirming in the corner.

A chill went down her spine and cold sweat broke out on her back.

“Guek... Guek... Gueeeek... Gueeeeeeeek...”

She heard faint groans and goosebumps rose all over her body.

— Estimated to arrive in one minute...

Yoo Yeonha couldn't hear the walkie-talkie as she stiffened from fear and anxiety.

She slowly reached for her waist and tightly gripped her whip.

Side Stories 34

Dream in a Dream (34)

Yoo Yeonha suspected that her mind simply played a trick on her since she could only see the creature through its reflection on the monitor. However, the reflection looked too hideous. She had never heard of nor seen such a grotesque monster.

“...”

She slowly turned her head sideways to steal a glance at the hideous figure. Yoo Yeonha still couldn't tell if it was a human, monster, or large insect.

The hideous creature had red eyes and squirmed grotesquely.

Guo... Gueeek...

She felt her heart drop when she realized it wasn't a hallucination. Yoo Yeonha tightly gripped her whip, but couldn't muster the courage to turn around and attack. She had never seen such a scary monster before in her life.

Yoo Yeonha nervously gulped and shifted her position. She could no longer see the creature now.

“Haa... Haa...”

Her heart pounded so hard that it could burst out of her chest at any moment.

She couldn't even watch a horror film alone, but had to deal with this horrifying thing. Could it be a ghost or a monster?

She had no reason to fight if it just stayed there and didn't move,

right?

Yoo Yeonha calmed her breathing when she suddenly remembered Kim Hajin. He lay on the bed not far from where she sat.

Ddrruuk...

She slowly moved in her wheeled chair and placed Kim Hajin in another chair. Then she pulled him towards the desk. Yoo Yeonha could easily lift a 75 kg adult male with one hand, but the fact that she had to do this without turning around or looking back made it slightly difficult.

“Hey... Wake up...” she whispered into his ears.

He didn’t respond, but just having someone sit next to her made her more comfortable.

Yoo Yeonha finally managed to compose herself thanks to Kim Hajin’s company. She thought about how that hideous creature managed to enter the bunker. They carefully planned this location without digging or breaking the sewer walls, so no enemies would spot it.

Did that creature manage to enter when she opened the door a while ago?

Chills spread throughout her body again and she slowly reached for the walkie-talkie.

Her hands trembled and she wanted to call for help. However, she stopped and didn’t press the talk button. Yoo Yeonha knew very well that everything would be ruined if she called for help.

She looked at Kim Hajin sound asleep beside her.

“When are you going to wake up?” she pleaded while tightly holding his hand.

He didn’t answer this time either, but she felt better with him leaning on her shoulder.

The city went into an uproar after the bombs cut off the power supply. Rachel and Chae Nayun safely reached the edge of the Thames River without being detected.

“Is this the right place?” Chae Nayun asked.

“...”

Rachel silently observed the riverbank and sensed someone underneath the water.

“In the water,” she said.

“Is that so? You go in,” Chae Nayun said.

“What about you?” Rachel asked.

“It seems we have a bothersome bunch to keep me company,” Chae Nayun smirked and turned around.

Boom!

A huge man suddenly landed on the ground from the sky and asked, “Are you the intruder?”

His entire body looked hard as a rock. He had broad shoulders and a chest so wide that someone could fit across. His black-painted body towered at least three meters.

The man looked like Colossus from ancient mythology.

However, Chae Nayun didn’t seem fazed at all and confidently stepped forward.

“Hey, what are you doing? I told you to go on.”

“Alright, I believe in you,” Rachel replied and dove into the river.

Only the two of them remained on the riverbank.

“Who the hell are you?” Chae Nayun asked.

The man didn’t respond and only stared at her. Chae Nayun cracked her neck and pulled out her 130 cm longsword from her back.

The man smiled as if he found her amusing.

Then another man wearing a robe suddenly appeared. He looked familiar to Chae Nayun.

She peeked under his hood and he seemed to fit the description of Marcus that Yoo Yeonha and Rachel told her about.

“And who the hell are you?” Chae Nayun asked.

“This man here is Chiffelin. He’s a djinn known as the Lord of the Arena at Pandemonium,” Marcus suddenly explained.

Chae Nayun sneered in disbelief, “Hmph... So what?”

She infused her mana into her longsword and it glowed bright blue.

“Sounds good to me. I can cut you in half if you’re a djinn.”

“Haha!” Chiffelin laughed as if he found her amusing.

Chae Nayun kicked off the ground and charged at the djinn. She instantly closed the gap and swung her longsword.

Bam!

The djinn grabbed her mana-infused longsword with his bare hand and her sword couldn’t budge an inch in his grip.

“What the hell is this?” Chae Nayun muttered in disbelief.

She became speechless at what happened when Marcus suddenly burst into laughter and exclaimed, “Hahaha! Chiffelin has great resistance against swords and steel! Something like your pathetic sword can never win against him!”

“...”

Chae Nayun realized that Marcus wanted to provide her with information regarding the djinn.

Chiffelin found his actions suspicious and glared at him. “Thanks for the praise, but you should shut up Marcus.”

“Huh? Ah, yes. I apologize, Chiffelin. I got irritated seeing that greenhorn act all high and mighty towards you,” Marcus replied while rubbing his hands together.

“Hmm... I see. I understand.”

“...”

Their exchange astounded Chae Nayun. This Chiffelin guy seemed dumber than he looked. She couldn’t help but wonder if his brains were also made of rocks.

“Hmm... Is that so? A sword won’t work against him?”

Chae Nayun withdrew her sword.

Marcus quickly spoke as if he had been waiting. “That’s right! Anything made from metal won’t work against the great Chiffelin! Idiots like you who only depend on weapons should just obediently kneel before greatness! Hahaha!”

“Mehehehe!” Chiffelin tried to suppress his laughter, but his shoulders shook.

Chae Nayun became flabbergasted by the djinn’s stupidity. She smirked and also laughed.

“Kehehehe!”

Chiffelin could no longer suppress his laughter after seeing her laugh, “Mwahahahaha!”

The two of them heartily laughed for a while before Chae Nayun raised her sword again.

“That’s only because you never met me before, you son of a bitch.”

She infused her mana into her longsword once more.

“Hey...” Marcus muttered in disbelief. He couldn’t understand after he already gave her all the hints to fight this musclehead.

However, it didn’t take long for the frustration on his face to turn into horror.

“What the hell is that?” he muttered in surprise.

Chae Nayun’s sword grew larger until it became the size of a tower crane.

Marcus had never witnessed such a sight in his life. He couldn’t help but stare in awe at the gigantic, majestic blade towering to the heavens. Even Chiffelin, who confidently laughed a moment ago, stared dumbfoundedly at her sword.

The giant mana sword that ascended to the heavens came crashing down with full force.

“Bwahahahaha!” Chae Nayun laughed like a maniac as she swung at the djinn.

* * *

The five English Royal Court and three Reislauffer guild members marched through the passage. The place had a sinister aura, but they didn’t worry after all their preparations.

“Don’t you think we went overboard and prepared too much?” Tilma grumbled while looking at the dozens of sacks tied around their waists.

They looked more like a traveling merchant troupe than heroes because of the sheer amount they brought.

“One cannot be too prepared,” Fermin replied as she infused mana into her staff and made a fire that served as their torch.

Thud!

A huge sound echoed from somewhere and the group stopped in their tracks. They nervously waited for what would appear, but nothing happened. They nodded at each other to confirm the coast was clear before marching onwards.

“I think this is the second continent. Does this mean that Vice Leader is here as well?” Darren asked.

“Who knows?” Fermin replied.

“Guee...”

They suddenly heard a low growl from somewhere. It sounded like the wind playing tricks on them or maybe something really lurked in the darkness.

“Wait a moment,” Fermin stopped the group after sensing something.

She sent a fireball into the darkness to illuminate the surroundings. The fireball went on until a hideous creature moaning in the corner appeared.

“What in the world is that?” Fermin furrowed her brows.

The creature looked like a wriggling tentacle, but it also resembled a human upon closer inspection. The humanoid creature stretched out its long arms and legs that wriggled. Smaller tentacles wriggled out from its red eyes.

The wriggling tentacles briefly stopped before darting towards the group.

“Ack!”

“Everyone, fall back!” Sehat exclaimed as he reacted first and swung his sword.

Clang!

The sound of clashing steel reverberated.

“Gueeeeeee!”

The creature opened its mouth and also shot out grotesque tentacles from it. The reddish-black tentacles shot forward and tried to grab the party members by their legs.

“Heup!” Tilma activated her mana shield. She jumped high and smashed her shield at the incoming tentacles.

However, the monster tentacles had already filled the entire passage.

“What in the world is that monster?” Fermin exclaimed in disbelief.

A serene mana suddenly flowed from somewhere when they had no idea what to do. The English Royal Court members flinched in surprise at the familiar presence.

“Kieeeeeee!”

The monster sensed the mana as well. It began convulsing hideously and shot its fluid all over the place. Its hot, gooey body fluid that seemed like acid covered their surroundings.

Whooooosh!

However, a powerful gust came through and swept away the monster’s body fluid.

The English Royal Court members felt surprised again, but at how powerful the gust had been.

Rachel appeared with Galatine in her hands.

“Is everyone alright?” she asked.

“Yes, but...” Fermin staggered and fell on one knee.

The smoke rising from the monster’s body fluid made her dizzy.

“It could be poison!” Sehat immediately shouted at Rachel.

She nodded and swung Galatine again. The water spirit came forward this time and slashed the monster’s tentacles.

“Kieeeeeek!”

The monster made an ear-piercing shriek and tried to shoot its body fluid again, but Rachel swung Galatine once more and swept its attack away.

The monster finally realized that it stood no chance against Rachel and gave up on fighting.

Instead...

Bam! Bam!

It stuck its limbs into the ground and its body began turning bright red.

Rachel quickly caught on to the monster’s self-destruct plan.

“Run!” she screamed and flung everyone to the far end of the passage with her wind spirit.

-----!

The monster exploded and a powerful force of mana blasted through the passage.

Shwaaa... Kabooooom!

Rachel tightly gripped her necklace as the explosion occurred.

In that instant, she summoned all her spirits and harmonized them together.

* * *

Meanwhile, Yoo Yeonha became locked in a fierce battle of her own. Well, it seemed more like a battle of wits regarding who looked at who first.

She observed Lancaster's movements through the monitor with one eye while observing the hideous monster with her other eye.

"Kieek... Gueek..."

The monster's voice grew louder by the minute.

"Hiiing..." Yoo Yeonha let out a whelp.

Fear, horror, and anxiety. She felt all three despite being a hero. After all, being a hero didn't mean immunity to these emotions. Most heroes had no qualms fighting djinns and monsters, but quite a few feared supernatural beings like ghosts.

Yoo Yeonha was one of them.

Gueee...

A breeze blew from within the closed-off space. It came from the hideous monster's breath and Yoo Yeonha felt it coming closer.

She suddenly felt something on her shoulder. A horrifying chill spread throughout her body and made her completely numb with fear.

Yoo Yeonha stole a sideways glance at Kim Hajin tossing and turning in his sleep.

Her eyes widened in surprise.

He shouldn't be tossing and turning. Someone in deep sleep wouldn't move like that. Movements only occurred in light sleep. This meant... Kim Hajin would soon wake up!

"Gueeeeeeeek!"

The monster made a horrifying shriek and snuffed out Yoo Yeonha's small ember of hope.

Gulp!

She mustered all her courage to finally turn around and face the creature.

The hideous monster stood just a few feet away. It stared at her with deep red eyes and a wide-open mouth that exposed all the grotesque contents inside.

The monster seemed to be smiling.

"Ugh... Euk! Hiccup! Hiccup!"

Yoo Yeonha felt like passing out. She tightly held onto Kim Hajin and uncontrollably shook from the chills throughout her body.

Then she formed an electric barrier around herself and Kim Hajin.

"Gueeeee!"

The monster finally made its move. It slammed against the barrier with its long arms.

Bam!

“Ugh!”

Yoo Yeonha trembled at the impact. However, anger slowly replaced her fear.

“Hey, are you taking me for a fool just because I let you off the hook?” she angrily spoke.

Yoo Yeonha clenched her fist and glared at the monster. Now she wanted to beat the living daylights out of this hideous thing.

However, the monster simply responded by widening its red eyes and small tentacles crawled out from its eye sockets.

A chill went down Yoo Yeonha’s spine. She couldn’t easily overcome this fear with just anger.

“What the hell is that?!” she screamed in horror.

Yoo Yeonha shut her eyes and tightly grasped Kim Hajin. She also infused as much mana as she could into her barrier.

Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam!

The monster continued knocking on the barrier. Its attacks grew more aggressive by the minute.

Yoo Yeonha became so overwhelmed by fear that she couldn’t even look at the monster anymore. She racked her brains for a way to kill the monster without looking at it.

She managed to keep defending while coming up with a solution. A way to deal with the monster without looking at it... Kim Hajin’s pocket contained the answer.

Something glimmered there. The weapon that she hoped he would gift her one day, his Desert Eagle.

Side Stories 35

Dream in a Dream (35)

Did he have this handgun in his pocket the entire time?

Yoo Yeonha tilted her head in confusion, but didn't have the luxury to think about it too much. She quickly took his handgun.

Click... Clack!

Yoo Yeonha learned how to shoot a long time ago since Essential Dynamics sold firearms as one of their main businesses.

Kieeeeek!

Her hands tightly gripped the handle. She slowly turned towards the monster, but tried her best not to look it in the eye as she aimed.

"Kieeeeeek!"

The monster slammed against the barrier with its tentacles again. Sparks flew all over as the electric barrier formed from millions of volts collided with the tentacles. The monster seemed unaffected by the electricity.

First, it was those moles and now it's this thing? Do all monsters living underground here have resistance to electricity or something? Yoo Yeonha inwardly grumbled in disbelief.

"Haa..." she sighed and composed herself.

"Gueeeeeek!"

Yoo Yeonha waited until the monster swung its arms at the barrier again before pulling the trigger.

Bang!

The bullet zipped through the air and penetrated the monster's body.

"Kieeeeek!"

The monster hideously shrieked after being struck.

Yoo Yeonha realized that the Desert Eagle actually worked and kept pulling the trigger.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

The sound of gunshots filled the underground bunker.

She finally stopped after using all the bullets in the handgun.

"Kiie... Kieeek..."

The monster's red eyes slowly faded and black blood similar to tar flowed from its body. The monster convulsed a few times before going limp and finally died.

"You weren't anything after all..." Yoo Yeonha muttered while trembling in her chair. She looked at the Desert Eagle in her hand and wondered. How could a handgun pack so much firepower? This Desert Eagle also looks like an older model. Should I just keep it for myself?

"Ughh..." She groaned at the hideous monster's carcass.

It looked much more horrifying than a ghost. She had grown used to grotesque insect monsters after working as a hero, but felt the urge to vomit when she saw this one.

"Ugh... Uek... Euk..."

Yoo Yeonha turned to Kim Hajin and tried her best to forget about the hideous monster. She only focused on him and suppressed her turning stomach.

“Sigh...” She returned the Desert Eagle to his pocket.

“I survived thanks to you,” she said with a smile and tapped his cheek twice.

Her attention returned to the monitors. The power had been restored to London while the police and heroes scoured the streets investigating.

Yoo Yeonha began thinking after witnessing that.

Did Lancaster send that monster here? Has our location been compromised? But... why would he do something so inefficient if he knew where we were? It would've been better to send his main forces to deal with us...

“Hmm...”

Regardless, she concluded that the underground bunker was no longer safe. The alarms in her head began ringing when she sensed a sinister aura lurking somewhere nearby.

Yoo Yeonha immediately stashed the portable monitor and walkie-talkie into her bag and carried Kim Hajin. She chose to evacuate for now.

* * *

Bam!

A gigantic sword smashed the ground. It smashed into the ground so many times that a part of the Thames River wharf crumbled. Only a crater remained where Chiffelin stood a while ago.

Bam! Bam! Bam!

Chae Nayun smashed her gigantic sword a dozen more times. She struck in a very systematic and rhythmical manner as she minced up Chiffelin.

“Huh?” Chae Nayun stopped swinging her sword.

The dust cleared and the djinn stood again.

She raised an eyebrow and muttered in amazement, “What a surprise.”

Chiffelin seemed much tougher than she initially thought.

However, Chae Nayun didn’t give him time to recover. She took the initiative again and minced the bastard into pieces. She didn’t care even if it took hundreds or thousands of strikes.

She planned to simply overpower the enemy with strength without being careless or arrogant. Chae Nayun called this battle style, Beat the living hell out of your enemy with strength.

Her giant mana sword smashed Chiffelin again, but the djinn didn’t dodge and faced it head-on. However, visible cracks began to form on his body after taking Chae Nayun’s onslaught.

Then...

“Stop!”

Chae Nayun looked around and saw that she had been surrounded.

“Are you a djinn?!” one of the heroes asked while aiming a bow at her.

“Huh? No, that bastard I’m beating up is a djinn,” Chae Nayun replied while tilting her head in confusion.

“How insolent! How dare you accuse Sir Chiffelin!”

“Ah...” Chae Nayun realized that this was how things went in this world. She found herself in a dilemma after being surrounded.

She wouldn’t lose against the hundreds of heroes surrounding her. In fact, she felt confident that she would definitely win. However, killing other heroes didn't sit well with her.

She briefly pondered before suddenly grabbing the closest people to her, Chiffelin and Marcus.

"Ack!" Marcus exclaimed in surprise after being yanked.

"I'll kill these two if you come any closer!" Chae Nayun threatened everyone.

"H-Hey! Let them go!"

The heroes tensed up and readied their weapons. One of them shot a mana arrow at Chae Nayun, but she easily blocked it.

"Are you crazy?! I'll cut their heads off if you try that again!" she angrily shouted.

"Enough! Everyone, stop! Sir Chiffelin's safety is our utmost priority right now!" the hero who seemed to be their leader exclaimed.

Chae Nayun slowly retreated with her two hostages. She glanced at her smartwatch and noticed that twenty minutes had passed. She figured that Rachel would've already safely met the others coming from underground.

"Take this!" Chae Nayun smacked Chiffelin's back.

Baaam!

The djinn, no, Sir Chiffelin flew and crashed into the heroes. A cloud of dust kicked up and the sudden turn of events caused disarray among the heroes.

Chae Nayun took this opportunity to grab Marcus and jump into the water.

"Bastard!"

The heroes rushed over, but they couldn't catch up to Chae Nayun swimming away as fast as she could while using mana.

* * *

Rachel slowly opened her eyes.

Pat!

A water droplet fell from the ceiling and a gentle breeze whispered in her ears.

Was this still underground or in the afterlife?

She looked around in a daze when something shone near her collarbone. It came from the necklace Kim Hajin gifted her.

The necklace shone in four different colors. This light symbolized all four major elements working in harmony.

“Ah!”

Only after seeing the necklace did Rachel finally stand up.

She checked the well-being of her guild members first: Fermin, Dale, Karen, Spleen, and Sliven. Sehat, Tilma, and Maurice from Reislauer also came. Thankfully, none of their lives seemed to be in danger.

“Hmm?”

The guild members brought numerous sacks that caught her eye. She opened one and found all sorts of potions and medicine.

“Wow...” Rachel muttered in amazement.

Who knew they would come so prepared? She opened the potions and fed them to her comrades.

Around thirty minutes passed before Fermin finally woke up.

“Eh?!” she exclaimed while looking around.

Rachel bitterly smiled and asked, “Are you alright?”

“Y-Yes, Vice Leader! Huh? Vice Leader!” Fermin cried out and jumped into Rachel’s embrace.

The others woke up one by one thanks to the commotion. Most of them had the same look on their faces before rushing over to Rachel like Fermin.

“Wait, hold on a minute. Calm down, everyone.”

Rachel placed a finger between her lips and motioned for them to be quiet. She felt happy to reunite with them too, but they didn’t have the luxury to rejoice right now.

“Things aren’t looking good,” she said. Rachel went straight to the point since they didn’t have time to sit around and chat. “Listen up, everyone. The owner of this place is Lancaster.”

“Huh?!?”

“What?!”

“Lancaster?!?”

“Yes, Lancaster is here,” Rachel replied and explained his plans to them.

At first, they seemed to be at a loss while listening to her. However, their faces slowly distorted into anger and confusion towards the end.

“Is something like that even possible?” Fermin asked.

Switching this recreated England with the real England sounded absurd.

“We can’t let it happen at all costs. Replacing what’s real with a fake... We can't let such a thing happen. That's why we have to stop him at all costs," Rachel told them.

"..."

Sehat rubbed his chin and muttered, "It's crazy that he even thought of something like that."

Rachel nodded and looked west as the breeze from that direction seemed to call her. She turned to her guild members. "I'm sorry, but we don't have time to rest. Also, Lancaster is over there. Will all of you be okay?"

They nodded without a hint of hesitation as if saying, We wouldn't have come in the first place if we weren't ready. Rachel truly felt grateful to have them.

"We'll help too."

"What?"

On the other hand, she felt slightly burdened by Reislaufer's assistance. This was England's business. Rachel and her guild members were prepared to put their lives on the line to stop this madness, but dragging a third party into their problems didn't sit well with her.

Sehat smiled and said, "We might be members of Reislaufer, but we're all heroes before that. A hero shouldn't turn a blind eye to saving people, upholding the peace, and stopping evil."

"..."

Rachel looked at the other two members, Tilma and Maurice. It seemed that both of them had already made their choices as well.

She hesitated for a second before finally nodding.

"I'll definitely reward you for your help."

The word Reislauer basically meant Swiss mercenary. Rachel made a joke by referencing it.

Sehat and Tilma laughed in response.

“Yes, we’ll make sure to charge you heftily for this.”

“Alright, that sounds good. Let’s work together to stop this madness.”

Rachel’s forces multiplied by three times as she made her way west towards the Hampton Palace.

* * *

Meanwhile, Yoo Yeonha walked along in the sewers while checking the monitor and spirit mirror. She headed towards none other than the Hampton Palace.

“Ah... Stop tossing and turning will you?” she grumbled when Kim Hajin suddenly moved and almost fell off her back. She immediately held and repositioned him.

“Sigh...”

Yoo Yeonha decided to check the location of the others.

Both Chae Nayun and Rachel were underground as well. Rachel headed west from the Thames River towards the Hampton Palace and Chae Nayun seemed to be right behind her. This meant that all three of them were heading to the same place right now.

“Then that means...”

Yoo Yeonha deeply pondered when Kim Hajin’s arm suddenly slid down and touched her somewhere very intimate.

“Ack! Where the hell do you think you’re touching?!” Yoo Yeonha exclaimed and jumped in surprise with her face flushed red.

Splash!

Kim Hajin fell into the sewage.

“Hey! You’re awake, aren’t you? Answer me!” Yoo Yeonha shouted while covering her body with her arms.

“Sigh...”

However, she didn’t receive any response from him and picked up the walkie-talkie instead.

“Can anyone hear me right now?”

— Me.

Chae Nayun quickly responded.

Yoo Yeonha looked around before asking, “What about Rachel?”

— No idea. I’m with that Circus guy right now.

“Circus?”

— It’s Marcus! Who the hell is Circus?!

— Oh, right. Marcus.

“Ah... I see...”

It seemed that Marcus, who was either a traitor or an ally, had met with Chae Nayun.

Yoo Yeonha looked at the portable monitor and confirmed Chae Nayun’s GPS location.

“You’ll find Rachel if you keep going straight from where you are. Try to meet up with her first and provide me with an update on what’s going on.”

— What about Kim Hajin? No, what about you?

Yoo Yeonha grimaced. Who did this girl really worry about?

“He’s safe, for now.”

— For now? What do you mean? Hey, did you abandon him by any chance?

“No, a hideous monster infiltrated the underground bunker. I suspect that the location has been compromised, so I decided to head towards you.”

Shwaa...

A chilling breeze blew.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and turned around.

Shwaa...

The dark sewers looked like a monster opening its jaws to devour her.

— Alright, so we’re meeting at the Hampton Palace then?

“Yeah... I think that’s what’s going to happen. Anyways, I’ll switch my walkie-talkie off for now.”

— Alright.

Yoo Yeonha had no idea when another monster would pop out.

Ah... Damn it... the moles were a thousand times better than that hideous thing...

Yoo Yeonha picked up Kim Hajin and began walking again. A brilliant idea suddenly flashed in her head.

“That’s it!”

She found a long wooden plank lying in front of her and tossed it into the sewage. Then, she infused her mana underneath the wooden plank to create an electric current.

Bzzzt... Bzzzt!

The current stabilized the wooden plank on top of the water. Yoo Yeonha sent a powerful burst of mana into it that made the wooden plank spring forward like a speedboat. This would be a hundred times better than walking.

Whoosh! Whoosh!

She rapidly sped through the sewers, but soon found herself in a completely different environment.

“What the hell?”

Her surroundings had changed in an instant. The sewage dried out and a huge door stood in front of her.

“This is?”

Yoo Yeonha got off the wooden plank and looked at the door with various extravagant engravings.

Should she try opening it or just wait here?

“Grrr...”

However, it seemed that she had no other choice as a sinister aura approached from a distance.

Something lurked in the darkness and her hero senses continually alarmed her of the looming danger. She could smell the same repulsive scent from the hideous monster in the underground bunker.

Yoo Yeonha opened the door with no other choice.

Creak...

The huge door eerily creaked open.

She surrounded herself with mana just in case, but hadn't expected what lay beyond the door.

Side Stories 36

Dream in a Dream (36)

A palace lobby lay beyond the door. Yoo Yeonha didn't know if it was the Hampton Palace, but she didn't sense any threats or dangers.

Was this the door that Marcus mentioned?

Yoo Yeonha briefly pondered and slowly walked in while holding onto Kim Hajin. She opened one of the bedroom doors in the lobby.

The room had creaking tiles, a desk, and a bed. Yoo Yeonha entered and placed Kim Hajin on the bed.

"Phew..."

She remained alert the entire time, but didn't sense any hostility in the surroundings. It seemed she could finally get some rest.

Yoo Yeonha wiped away the sweat and dirt on her before analyzing the situation.

First, what was that monster in the underground bunker? Its blood looked like tar and it exuded an evil aura. She suspected that various spirits had been mashed together to form that monster's physical body.

That could only mean one thing. Lancaster had captured those spirits of the dead.

"..."

Yoo Yeonha gritted her teeth. She found it despicable no matter how rational and calculative she acted. She was a hero, no, a human too in the end.

Just what in the world was Lancaster doing? Did he really believe he could change the past by doing this? Did he believe he was right to the extent that he would taint those souls?

Anger rose from within Yoo Yeonha.

“Haa...” she sighed to suppress her boiling anger and looked out the window. The sky turned dark as if ash covered the entire world.

Yoo Yeonha aimlessly looked around before heading towards the bed.

Kim Hajin peacefully slept there and she walked over to sit beside him. Then she switched on the walkie-talkie.

* * *

Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom!

Rachel and her party carefully walked through the passageway when a loud noise suddenly came from behind them.

Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom!

It sounded like something gigantic rushing towards them.

The party members immediately drew their weapons and turned around. They anxiously waited for whatever came.

Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom!

Was it a monster or a human?

All of them waited in suspense when the thing charging at them shouted out.

“It’s me!”

“Ah!”

Rachel immediately sheathed Galatine after recognizing the voice. The rest followed suit and also lowered their weapons.

Chae Nayun popped out from the darkness.

“Phew...” Rachel sighed in relief.

The others recognized Chae Nayun and looked at her full of respect. Honestly, Chae Nayun became something like a celebrity among heroes. They naturally felt starstruck in her presence.

“Hey, why weren’t you picking up your radio?” Chae Nayun grumbled.

Rachel glanced at the person Chae Nayun was carrying covered from head to toe in a robe.

“My walkie-talkie got destroyed. Rather than that, who are you carrying? I don’t think that’s Hajin?”

“Oh, this guy is yours. Take him,” Chae Nayun replied as she threw the robed man.

The robe flung back and Marcus’ face came into view.

“Hey! T-That! It’s that bastard!”

“It’s that son of a bitch Marcus!”

The English Royal Court members surrounded Marcus lying on the floor. It seemed like they would start beating him at any moment.

Chae Nayun nonchalantly ignored them and took out her walkie-talkie.

“Hey, Yoo Yeonha. I’ve arrived.”

Bzzt... Pssh...

It didn't take long for Yoo Yeonha to respond.

— Got it. I'm at some palace with him right now.

“Is that so? Where are you exactly?” Chae Nayun asked.

— I think... I think this is the Hampton Palace.

“Hampton?” Chae Nayun muttered.

Rachel reacted before a slight migraine struck her. The strange sensation felt as if hundreds of small needles had pierced her head.

— Yes. Marcus is with you, right? Can you ask him for me? I got in through a door, but can you ask him if this is the right door?

“Ughh...” Marcus groaned as he woke up just in time.

He looked around dumbfoundedly before gasping in horror and realizing the situation.

“You little bastard!” Fermin gritted her teeth and glared at him while cracking her knuckles.

Not just her, but the other guild members also expressed their hostility towards him.

Marcus raised his arms and tried to calm them.

“Wait a minute! I had my reasons for doing that!”

“What reasons could there be? Let's hear it after pulling out your arms and legs first!” Fermin roared.

“Stop,” Chae Nayun interfered in Marcus' judgment and stopped him from being executed. She managed to make the angry mob step back with just words. Then she asked Marcus, “Is there a door underground? Yoo Yeonha says that she entered through a door just now.”

"Huh? Ah, yes... that's right," Marcus replied with a nod. He proceeded to explain, "There's a door at the end of the western underground passage. It's a place that Lancaster treasures, so it's always locked and hidden away from view. However, I snuck in last night and opened it. She's probably at the right place if she found a door."

"Is that so?"

"Yeah, but that place is filled with illusions. They better be careful over there."

"Illusions?" Chae Nayun frowned.

"Yeah," Marcus replied with a grimace. "That entire place is no different than a dream."

* * *

Yoo Yeonha closed her eyes for a second while radioing Rachel and Chae Nayun. She yawned a few times as drowsiness overcame her. Then she shook her head awake, but found that the walkie-talkie had been disconnected.

"Huh? What happened?" she wondered and got up to leave the room.

The palace lobby was well-lit. It didn't look extravagant, but preserved the period when this place was built. A few tiles and walls were chipped here and there, which showed the place's old age. The candlesticks and plates added to the strong Renaissance atmosphere.

Yoo Yeonha took her time looking around before she suddenly felt a strange aura from somewhere. She spotted a strange shadow in one corner of the lobby. It looked like a human, but she couldn't tell with its hands covering its face.

Yoo Yeonha fixed her gaze on the shadow as she slowly took out her whip.

The shadow suddenly showed its hideous face and charged at her.

Thud! Thud! Thud! Thud!

Its bloody eyes and torn chin came inches away from her. The face looked even more grotesque from up close.

“Euk!”

Yoo Yeonha felt so surprised that she couldn't even scream. She just stood there as her heartbeat stopped. The floor around her slowly turned black and her body slowly sunk into the dark floor. She couldn't move a muscle as the hideous ghost flashed a smile.

A warm breeze blew from somewhere and burned the ghost away as Yoo Yeonha sunk into the black swamp.

“Kyaaaaaahk!”

The ghost screamed in agony as it turned into ashes.

Yoo Yeonha helplessly fell to her knees after the ghost died. A set of arms pulled her out from the swamp and asked, “Are you alright?”

Her eyes instantly shot open at the familiar voice. She immediately looked at the person without realizing she was drenched in her own sweat and tears.

Kim Hajin tried to suppress his laughter at Yoo Yeonha's messy state. He had never seen her like this before.

“Hmm... You don't look too good right now.”

Yoo Yeonha wanted to reply, I know that. However, she couldn't muster her voice as her body uncontrollably shook.

“Pfft!” Kim Hajin finally let out a snicker after seeing Yoo Yeonha's pale face trying to speak.

The way he laughed sounded quite mischievous for some reason.

“Where... W-Where are we? W-Where is this place?” Yoo Yeonha finally uttered, but she stuttered as her lips and body violently shook. “Ah... N-No... W-When did you wake up? Y-You could have... t-told me if you were awake...”

Kim Hajin gently wiped away her tears as he replied, “I didn’t wake up yet.”

“What do you mean by that?” Yoo Yeonha asked with a frown.

Kim Hajin looked around before telling her, “This is a dream.”

“...?”

Yoo Yeonha couldn’t understand what he just said.

Could a dream feel this vivid? Also, wouldn’t anyone wake up if they were shocked to this extent?

No, rather than that... Why did this guy speak so formally and gently all of a sudden?

“Anyways, why don’t you get up first?” Kim Hajin smiled and took out his Desert Eagle.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly felt killing intent from all around them. The hostility came from numerous evil spirits surrounding them.

“You’ll end up peeing yourself if you stay here,” Kim Hajin said with a mischievous smile.

“W-What?! W-When did I piss myself?!” Yoo Yeonha retorted, but Kim Hajin didn’t say anything as he pulled her behind him and pulled the trigger.

Bang! Shwoooooosh!

A bullet flew in slow motion.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly opened her eyes.

“...!”

She found herself in a completely different environment after waking up.

Rachel and Chae Nayun sighed in relief.

“She woke up. Phew... I thought you got poisoned by that dream thing too...” Chae Nayun said.

Yoo Yeonha stared dumbfoundedly at them for a while.

“What zhe...?”

She noticed herself slurring and touched her cheeks to find them quite swollen.

Chae Nayun awkwardly laughed, “Oops, sorry. I think I struck you a bit too hard while trying to wake you up.”

“What...? Ack! It hurts! Why you little!” Yoo Yeonha screamed as she grabbed a handful of Chae Nayun’s hair in anger. The pain from both her cheeks came rushing all at once.

* * *

The situation slightly calmed in the Hampton Palace’s grand ballroom. Twelve individuals sat around a long table for a serious meeting.

“We know that this place is safe for now and we also know that this place has a mysterious power. Even Lancaster won’t be able to come here carelessly. However, that means we won’t be able to stop him if we don’t leave this place,” Marcus seriously said.

He couldn’t help but feel tense with so many sharp gazes from the English Royal Court members on him. He slightly tilted his head to avoid their gazes before continuing with his explanation.

“We also need to keep in mind that we’ll sink into our subconscious the more we try to move up to the surface. In short, we’ll fall asleep. The best thing would be to not fall asleep in the first place, but we’ll be dragged to the dream world if we doze off for even a split second. So...”

“That won’t be a problem,” Yoo Yeonha interrupted him.

Marcus turned around to say something, but Yoo Yeonha didn’t give him the chance.

“That person will be in our dreams,” she said while pointing at Kim Hajin sound asleep with his head on Rachel’s lap.

Rachel faked a cough after feeling awkward with all their gazes on her.

“Huh? What do you mean by that?” Marcus asked while tilting his head in confusion.

“I dreamt too and that person appeared in my dream. Not only that, but he also helped me,” Yoo Yeonha explained.

The Kim Hajin she met in her dream was quite powerful. He acted fearless too and didn’t even bat an eye against the ghosts.

How was it possible for someone to not even flinch and massacre those hideous ghosts?

“In your dream? He helped you?” Marcus frowned.

“Yes, and if we fall into a dream... then the one in a deeper slumber will be more powerful, right?”

“That sounds possible.”

“Well, this person is currently poisoned by the Empty Dream. That means he’s stronger than anyone else in the dream world,” Yoo Yeonha said as she pointed at Kim Hajin with her chin.

However, Marcus remained skeptical.

“That could be true, but... it’s not possible to appear in someone else’s dream. I dare say it was just a coincidence you met him in your dream or maybe your mind recreated him as a coping mechanism—”

“No,” Rachel cut him off. “It’s possible for Hajin. Rather than that, is what you just said true, Yeonha?”

She looked at Yoo Yeonha with a hint of jealousy.

Yoo Yeonha haughtily scoffed in response, “It’s true.”

“I see...” Rachel muttered.

Fermin and the other English Royal Court members looked at each other. All of them wanted to ask the same question whether that man sleeping on the vice leader’s lap called Kim Hajin was Xtra.

“Excuse me—” Fermin spoke out, but Rachel didn’t give them an inch and immediately cut her off.

“Have all of you enjoyed your meals?” Rachel suddenly asked her members.

The long banquet table in the grand ballroom was filled with food that Fermin and the others brought. They took everything out and everyone ate to their heart’s content. It would be quite ironic if hunger held them back at the most crucial moment later on.

“Yes, it was a delicious meal.”

“It was really good. I’m glad we brought all that with us.”

Sehit and Tilma replied while wiping their mouths with a napkin.

The rest of the party members wolfed down their food.

“We’re done too.”

“Then... shall we start moving, Marcus?” Rachel asked.

“Yes, ma’am,” Marcus replied.

They left the grand ballroom.

“I’ll lead the way,” Marcus said as he walked in front.

They found themselves in front of a giant staircase at the center of the lobby. This staircase didn’t exist in the original Hampton Palace.

“This is the place. Everyone, please be careful,” Marcus warned them before climbing the staircase.

Rachel felt a strange sensation as she climbed the stairs. It felt as if time slowly became irrelevant and she grew lighter with each step.

Step... Step...

They continued climbing without a word until one of them suddenly collapsed. It was Dale.

“I’ll carry him,” Marcus said.

The rest of the party resumed climbing and they finally caught sight of the end after almost a hundred steps.

“It’s a door. Everyone, follow me...” Rachel said as she opened the door and entered.

The space beyond the door contained absolutely nothing.

“Rachel?”

A warm, gentle voice that sounded like a soft breeze called her from the other side of the room.

Rachel suddenly felt dizzy, but forced herself to look towards the voice.

“You’ve grown into a wonderful young lady,” the voice said.

Rachel’s heart sank.

The person she had only ever seen in portraits stood in front of her with eyes full of warmth.

“Come over here. Come to your mother.”

Rachel had never met this person before.

“You have truly grown into a wonderful person. Your mother is so proud of you.”

Rachel’s feet slowly walked towards her mother.

Her mother wore a blue dress and her voice and gesture calling for Rachel felt so affectionate for some reason.

Rachel began tearing up as she walked towards her mother as if bewitched.

“Don’t go there.”

Another voice suddenly spoke.

Rachel flinched and turned around to find Kim Hajin behind her.

How and where did he suddenly come from? Why did he tell her not to go to her own mother?

She found herself in a dilemma and didn’t even realize she was currently stuck in a dream.

“Come to me instead,” Kim Hajin said as he walked over and hugged her.

He hugged her as tight as he could so she wouldn’t leave for that illusion bewitching her.

“Stay by my side,” he told her.

Rachel looked into his eyes full of certainty.

“Stay by my side until you wake up.”

He took off his coat and placed it over her.

She felt her eyelids growing heavy as the coat’s warmth enveloped her. His scent tickled her nose.

This warm, cozy feeling felt so familiar in the foreign dream world.

Side Stories 37

Dream in a Dream (37)

“You have to... wake up... now...”

A clear voice slowly faded into the distance as Rachel opened her eyes.

She sat in a daze for a while before touching her face and the ground. She could feel the stone’s coldness underneath her. Then she suddenly recalled her dream.

“Are you alright, Vice Leader?”

Another familiar voice completely woke her up. It belonged to Marcus this time.

“It’s time to get up.”

He extended a hand towards Rachel.

“What about the others?” she asked as she grabbed his hand.

A piece of her clothing suddenly fell when she stood. Rachel quickly tried to hold on so she wouldn’t be undressed. However, the clothing was far too big for her.

“Huh?”

She definitely didn’t have this coat on a while ago.

Rachel recalled what happened and looked around, but couldn’t find Kim Hajin anywhere. They left him behind in the bedroom downstairs with Yoo Yeonha since Marcus suggested that would be the safest place for him.

“...”

Rachel caressed the coat before taking a whiff of its scent. She could still smell him.

This truly felt mysterious and borderline supernatural. They had only met in her dream, so how could she have his coat?

Unless I'm still dreaming right now... She thought to herself and rummaged through the coat.

Marcus tilted his head in confusion as he observed his vice leader squirming in embarrassment with her face flushed.

“Hmm...” Rachel looked around her surroundings. It seemed she hadn't been dreaming until she got up to this part of the staircase.

Fermin, Dale, Karen, Sehit, Tilma, and even Chae Nayun sprawled out on the stairs asleep.

“Almost all of them fell asleep,” Marcus said.

Chae Nayun suddenly got up screaming, “Whoaa!” She looked around with a shocked expression and Rachel couldn't help but wonder what she dreamt about.

“What the hell? Was it all just a dream?” Chae Nayun grumbled in a daze.

After that, the others began waking up one by one. Every one of them had a different reaction. Some of them screamed at the top of their lungs while others violently convulsed before waking up.

“Is everyone alright?” Rachel asked after they woke up.

She told them to do some light exercises and stretch to wake up their mind and body. They resumed climbing the staircase after a round of aerobic exercises.

Step... Step...

Rachel could hear them murmuring from behind after they climbed a few steps.

“What kind of dream did you have?”

“I... It’s something from the past.”

“Me too.”

“It seems that whoever is doing this is purposely targeting our traumas. Don’t you think so?”

“Yes, but it was exactly as Yoo Yeonha said. That man appeared in my dream and helped me.”

“Huh? He appeared to you too?”

Rachel faked a cough and straightened her back. She felt somewhat proud for no reason after hearing that Kim Hajin helped them.

“Hey, what’s that?” Chae Nayun asked as she grabbed Rachel’s coat.

Rachel nonchalantly replied with a shrug, “A coat.”

“Isn’t this the coat Kim Hajin was wearing? When did you have the time to make a trip back down to get this? No, there’s no way that’s possible. Am I dreaming right now?”

“You’re not dreaming and I did receive this from Kim Hajin.”

“Who are you trying to fool? I know very well this is all a dream,” Chae Nayun said with a scoff.

They continued climbing for quite a while, but could no longer distinguish the boundary between dreams and reality.

Soon, they began collapsing one by one again and had to take a break

if the ones carrying those who fell asleep also fell unconscious. It took them an eternity just to climb the staircase.

“I see a light over there.” Rachel pointed into the distance.

Marcus looked and nodded. “Yes, that’s the entrance to the central hall.”

The other party members grew exhausted already.

Marcus turned around and smirked at them, “We somehow managed to come all the way here, eh?”

He spoke as he usually did since it seemed like everything had returned to normal.

“Shut your filthy mouth.”

“You better watch it before I kill you.”

“Has that bastard finally lost his mind?”

However, the English Royal Court members still treated him like an outcast.

“Ehem... Shall we go?” Marcus opened the door.

Creak... Ddruuu!

He pushed the door as hard as he could.

A vast, empty hall appeared before them. However, the original Hampton Palace hall had never been this vast and empty.

Rachel stepped forward after looking around, but Marcus grabbed her shoulder and stopped her. He pointed at a large stone statue on the other side.

“That’s the gatekeeper.”

The large statue with broad shoulders and a long beard slowly moved its empty hands when it spotted the intruders.

The party members prepared for combat when Rachel suddenly pondered if she was still dreaming.

— Can you hear me? We don't have much time.

Yoo Yeonha's voice rang out from the walkie-talkie to inform Rachel that the sky over England was turning red. That definitely seemed like an ominous omen.

Marcus frowned at the bad news.

"I'll handle this guy," Chae Nayun stepped forward with her greatsword. She turned around and told them, "We don't have much time, so why don't you all go on ahead."

The stone statue opened its eyes.

Creak...

The ground trembled as the statue took a step.

"Got it?" Chae Nayun urged them.

Rachel and the others nodded. They firmly believed that Chae Nayun wouldn't lose against that gatekeeper.

Chae Nayun infused mana into her sword and it grew exponentially until its tip reached the ceiling.

"Guuuuu!"

The party members ran towards the corridor on the other side when the huge sword distracted the stone statue.

Chwaaaaak!

The stone statue shot out hundreds of tentacles to tie up the intruders, but Chae Nayun released a ray of light that disintegrated the tentacles.

* * *

Rachel opened the Hampton Palace's main entrance and proceeded inside.

Lancaster waited for her across the pond surrounded by withered grass. The sky here had turned purple with gray clouds.

He held a sword and was fully dressed in armor, which made him look exactly like the knight from her memories.

"Have you arrived?" Lancaster asked. His voice sounded clear despite the distance between them.

Rachel took out Galatine while pondering if this was still a dream or reality.

"I have a lot of things I want to talk about with you, princess."

"..."

Rachel stepped forward and felt something strange.

"Guuuoooh..."

The bloody face of a spirit that resembled a human eerily cried out.

Rachel felt the urge to puke, but suppressed it.

"You!" She glared at Lancaster with seething anger and gripped Galatine so tightly that her hands turned pale.

"All of these spirits were born that day. They lost their bodies and were reborn as spirits," Lancaster nonchalantly said. He pulled out his sword and added, "They are regrets embodied and pain manifested..."

“Kyaaak! Kwuaaak!”

Rachel felt a sharp pain in her head from the spirits’ constant screaming.

Dozens of tentacles suddenly shot up and tried to grab her, but she quickly cut them down.

“Kieeeeek! Gwuoooh!”

The spirits cried out even louder. Their cries seemed to carry both anguish and agony.

Rachel felt her heart being torn to pieces as she listened to their tormented cries.

“Princess,” Lancaster said as he slowly walked towards her. Then he asked, “Do you still not understand?”

Tears welled up in his eyes as he spoke, but Rachel couldn’t understand his sadness.

“This dream... This is the only way we can change the cogs of fate. This is the last chance we have to turn back time and right our mistakes,” Lancaster said before extending his hand towards her. “Join me and let us save these people. You have already suffered enough too, princess.”

The spirits’ tormented cries grew louder after Lancaster finished speaking.

“...”

“Please, take my hand.”

Rachel remained silent as she thought. She may have accepted his offer a year ago when she was still weak. She was too young, dumb, and naive at the time.

However...

“No,” Rachel refused and decided to stop blaming herself for everything that happened. She decided to march forward from now on for the people that trusted and supported her.

“You shouldn’t try to change something that can’t be changed. The only thing we can do is to honor them by remembering them as we live on,” she told him.

A large hole appeared in her heart after that incident, but that hole had already healed and left a scar. Rachel would never forget because of that.

That was the difference between her and Lancaster, who still had a gaping hole in his heart.

“Is that so...” Lancaster muttered as he stared at Rachel. He sighed and nodded in acknowledgment of how much she had changed from her younger days.

“I guess I have no choice then,” he said.

“Kwuaaaaaah!”

The spirits of the dead shot up from the ground and gathered to form a monster. The monster had a large head and dozens of arms and legs hanging all over its body. The cries of hundreds of spirits could be heard from each limb.

“Have you finally decided to become someone who can’t be redeemed?” Rachel asked as she gritted her teeth and gripped Galatine.

The monster shot hundreds of tentacles towards her.

Rachel summoned her spirits and a bright light shot out from the coat and her necklace.

Shwaaaaa!

Her spirits appeared and shone a bright light on the monster.

Lancaster watched the entire scene with a smile. He looked at Rachel with warmth in his eyes.

* * *

Chae Nayun could easily distinguish between dreaming and reality. Her sharp instincts noticed the slightest difference. This meant that she could recklessly swing her sword without any worries. Chunks of the stone statue broke every time she slammed her sword against it.

The stone statue shot out its tentacles, but couldn't even touch Chae Nayun before she cut them down.

Chae Nayun felt confident in winning. No, she felt confident in never losing. After all, the difference in their strength was close to ten times apart.

“Ah... Damn it...”

However, something kept bothering her. A sad cry from somewhere in the hall grew louder every time she cut down the tentacles and smashed the stone statue. The cry began tugging on her heartstrings.

The stone statue contained numerous spirits in its body, which left a bitter taste in Chae Nayun's mouth. However, that didn't deter her as she continued her merciless onslaught without a hint of hesitation. She swung her sword again and again without stopping.

The stone statue seemed greatly taken aback by her composure and coldness.

“You...” The stone statue spoke for the first time in a low depressed voice that seemed to evoke one's empathy.

Chae Nayun smirked at the stone statue's attempt. “Cheap tricks won't work on me you little shit.”

The stone statue tried to wage psychological warfare against her like a coward since it couldn't win against her physically. However, such cheap tricks would never work against Chae Nayun.

I'm probably in the top ten in the world when it comes to mental fortitude.
Chae Nayun's mind slightly wandered before her face suddenly hardened.

“ ... ”

She sensed the emotions of something whenever she slashed the stone statue. Her sharp instincts automatically picked it up.

Chae Nayun looked at the stone statue, the ground, and then the ceiling. Countless spirits squirmed all over the place. No, this entire space was made up of the spirits themselves.

She looked at them and muttered, “All of you want to regress as well, right? Regardless if it's real or not...”

They seemed aware that their regression wouldn't be the real thing. Lancaster himself seemed aware of it too. However, Lancaster chose an eternal dream anyways and tried to drag Rachel along.

That's not what I want. What I really want is...

Chae Nayun spoke with the spirits as she swung her sword. They knew they had already died and seemed to want eternal rest now.

Chae Nayun swung her sword with all her might when she suddenly spotted a dark silhouette behind her.

“Huh?” She immediately turned around.

“Ack!” She screamed and her eyes shot wide open.

Kim Hajin shouldn't be here, but he suddenly stood behind her and shocked her.

“W-What?! What the hell?! When did you come here? No, why are you here?! You surprised me!” Chae Nayun exclaimed before nervously gulping.

Side Stories 38

Dream in a Dream (38)

The darkness receded as I stood in the brightly lit garden with her.

I knelt on one knee and looked at the princess, small and delicate as a rose. It felt as if she would break if I squeezed a bit too hard.

The princess smiled at me. Her bright and innocent smile made me smile too.

Then a thought suddenly crossed my mind. Why did I swear to protect her? What conviction pushed me to the brink of destruction? No, could that even be called conviction in the first place? Or was it the price I had to pay for turning back on my oath?

Multiple VIP guests gathered in Buckingham Palace's rear garden.

The royal family and the queen watched as I swore my oath of fealty. Even my wife and child were there, albeit at a distance.

I looked at myself kneeling on the ground and beaming with pride.

I recited my oath starting with the words, My lord..., and I swore to protect her for the rest of my life.

The princess looked at me with a bright expression. She had no idea what was going on as I knelt on the ground and recited my oath to protect her for the rest of my life.

“Awright!” she exclaimed in her squeaky voice with a huge smile.

However, I didn't smile or laugh at her adorable actions. Instead, I looked at her in amazement when I realized this little bird would be England's hope.

“Shank you!” she said in the purest voice I had ever heard.

Her cheerfulness felt contagious.

Yes... now I remember...

My desire to protect the princess stemmed from my empty self. It didn't come from the princess' request and no one forced me to swear an oath to protect her.

Honestly, no special reason existed. Everything began with some words I picked up somewhere while growing up when I had no idea what being a knight meant.

I solemnly declared that I would risk my life to protect the princess of my own volition.

* * *

Shwaaa...

Rachel's spirit illuminated the heavens and earth. The blinding light disintegrated the evil spirits.

Meanwhile, Lancaster calmly observed Rachel from a short distance away.

“...”

He smiled at the warm dream that suddenly popped up in his mind. The warmth from her spirit's light reminded him of his memories buried deep inside.

Now, Rachel walked towards him as her spirit's light rapidly spread like the wind. The evil spirits couldn't withstand the light and they either ran away or disintegrated. However, she suddenly stopped when an agonizing pain brought her to her knees.

The situation... is getting... better...

It will... soon... happen...

The noise she often heard resounded in her head. No, it felt like the noise was pounding in her brain.

She gritted her teeth and tried to endure. “Keuk!”

Rachel forced herself back up and aimed her sword at Lancaster, who stood quite close.

Shwaaaak!

Her spirit pierced through the evil spirits between them. She saw him looking down at her. He had a sad solemn look on his face before suddenly smiling.

“Vice Leader! Vice Leader!”

Someone violently shook her and Rachel’s eyes suddenly shot open. She blinked a few times and looked around.

The sky above looked clear and sunny.

Rachel looked at the people who shook her awake. Her guild members all seemed worried.

“Where am I? Where is this?” she asked.

She felt extremely confused about what just happened. Wasn’t she just with Lancaster a moment ago?

“We aren’t sure ourselves, but we suspect that we’re now outside the Hampton Palace.”

“Then was I dreaming just now?”

“Yes, I think you were.”

Rachel frowned at the realization that everything had been a dream when the ground violently shook.

Dozens of hooded figures appeared around them and looked exactly like the robed minions who attacked them on their way to the general assembly.

They appeared one by one until numbering in the hundreds and fully surrounded Rachel's party.

"Hahahaha!" A burst of laughter echoed out.

The laughter came from a gigantic rock-like person a distance away.

Marcus flinched after seeing the djinn Chiffelin who served Lancaster.

Chiffeling snickered and said, "Marcus! Great job! It would've been impossible to lure the princess and these English Royal Court bastards if it wasn't for you!"

The guild members instantly glared at Marcus, who vigorously shook his head in denial.

"No! It's not what you think! I didn't do anything!"

"You damn bastard... You dare trick us until the end!"

"Hey, you piece of scum!"

"This was another trap? How could you do this to us?!"

"No! I said it wasn't me!"

"Shh!" Rachel hushed her guild members and gripped Galatine.

She looked around and even over Chiffelin's towering height, but couldn't find Lancaster anywhere.

Chiffelin shouted to start the main event, "Now! It's time to activate the spell since the main character is here!"

The ground underneath their feet began to squirm like a slithering snake and a powerful energy surged from beneath them.

They stood on a massive magic circle that slowly painted the sky gray.

“We have to stop it—” Marcus tried to shout, but a louder noise interrupted him.

Wooong... Kaboom!

Bzzt! Bzzt! Bzzt!

An electric current shot out from the ground and zapped them.

“What’s going on... Ouch!” Rachel wondered what happened when she realized that Yoo Yeonhwa had detonated the homemade bombs across England.

The magic circle stopped activating thanks to her efforts.

“Which stupid son of a whore did this?!” Chiffelin cried out in anger.

He and his minions instantly glared at Rachel’s party.

Rachel didn’t have to say anything for her party members to immediately prepare for combat. She wielded Galatine in reverse even though she knew the back of the blade wouldn’t be able to cut anyone.

However, that was exactly what she wanted. She felt sick and tired of this endless cycle of revenge and hatred from someone losing their life. She would put an end to all this once and for all.

* * *

Step... Step...

Chae Nayun slowly walked towards Kim Hajin. The stone statue stood there looking for any gaps in her defense, so she couldn’t carelessly turn her back.

Kim Hajin laughed while looking at her carefully approaching him.

“Why are you here?” she asked him.

She could smell his nostalgic stench of cigarettes.

Kim Hajin didn’t respond and simply continued staring at her.

She stole a glance at him before suddenly looking away. Strangely enough, her cheeks became flushed red and her hands trembled.

Why did she get so nervous when she knew full well this was just a fake Kim Hajin?

“This... This is all a dream, right?” she glanced at him and asked.

The breeze in the hall stopped blowing and the stone statue suddenly froze. It seemed as if time had stopped when Chae Nayun realized this was all a dream.

“Yes, you already destroyed the stone statue. Remember?” Kim Hajin replied.

“Did I? Maybe I can’t remember because I destroyed it in a single blow. I’m that strong after all...”

“Exactly, the stone statue released a wave of illusion when it got destroyed.”

“No wonder, I had a strong feeling this was all a dream. You know my instincts are never wrong, right?”

Her memories slowly returned after talking to Kim Hajin. She suddenly looked downcast and asked, “Then, I won’t be able to wake up like you?”

“No,” Kim Hajin shook his head. After all, he already finished deciphering the secrets behind the dreams in this place.

He grabbed Chae Nayun's wrist.

"Crazy bastard!" She flinched and tried to pull her hand away, but Kim Hajin tightly gripped it and refused to let go.

No, more like she only pretended to pull her hand away. She didn't want him to let go of her.

"Hey, what are you doing right now? You... Hey... hey hey hey hey!"

"Stay still, will you? I'm trying to detoxify you."

Kim Hajin applied the antidote from his Medicinal Memory Physique. Chae Nayun shuddered at the strange sensation when he directly injected the antidote into her vein.

"Done," Kim Hajin said as he let go of her wrist.

Chae Nayun slightly regretted when his touch left her skin.

"Is that it?" she asked.

"Yeah, you'll wake up soon," he nonchalantly replied.

"Hmm... Is that so?"

Chae Nayun crossed her arms over her chest and stared at Kim Hajin.

She figured that the Kim Hajin in this world was just a fake who didn't have the same complicated relationship with her as the real one. It would probably be fine not to be so awkward around him.

"Hey."

"Time for you to get up."

“H-Huh? What?”

“I said, wake up.”

“No thanks, I still have a lot to tell you.”

Chae Nayun narrowed her eyes and asked, “You’re from this world, right?”

She asked just in case since the real Kim Hajin could also have been transported here like her. However, it looked like Kim Hajin had no idea what she meant.

Chae Nayun sighed before shaking her head. “Nothing. Never mind.”

She got the result she wanted. Now she had an idea of how to get the Miracle Stone Fragment from this place. The evil spirits gave her a hint about the real owner of this dream.

“Sure,” Kim Hajin replied with a smile.

His smile looked warm and gentle for some reason, but that was the last she saw of him.

Chae Nayun pouted when she woke up from her dream.

The sun brightly shone on her. She squinted her eyes and covered them with her hand as she got up. How many hours did she sleep? Why did her body hurt so much?

“Ughh!”

She stretched and got up on her feet.

“Phew...”

One two... One two...

Chae Nayun lightly stretched and walked towards the door. She flung open the main doors and steeled her resolve to finally obtain the Miracle Stone Fragment.

Creak...

The world beyond the door appeared.

“...?”

Chae Nayun stood there dumbfounded and blinked a few times.

Blink... Blink... Blink... Blink...

She closed her eyes a few times and even rubbed them in case she was seeing things.

“What the hell is this?!” she exclaimed in disbelief.

This wasn’t the Hampton Palace anymore. No, forget about the Hampton Palace... An entirely different world had popped up in front of her.

“Isn’t this just... England?” she muttered in astonishment before jumping in surprise.

The general assembly had kicked her out without her noticing.

“What the hell is this? Huh? Hey... wait a minute... but why?”

A thought suddenly flashed across her mind when she felt completely flabbergasted and at a loss about what to do.

“Wait a minute...” She calmly looked around.

Her instincts were telling her something. No, the spirit that clung to her wanted her to realize something.

It tried to tell her that the ending she wanted was somewhere nearby.

“Heup!”

Yoo Yeonha detonated all the bombs she installed across the fake England.

Wooong... Booom! Boooooom! Boooooom!

A powerful tremor could be felt even underground. The atmosphere around her instantly changed after the explosions.

“...”

Reddish-black spirits that looked hideous emitted sinister auras.

“Hey... this is a bit too scary for me. I might actually lose my mind here.” Yoo Yeonha weakly complained with tears welling in her eyes.

“Kiiieeee...”

She looked at the ceiling where the sound came from. An evil spirit suddenly pushed its face through the ceiling and stared at her with its wide open mouth.

“Hiccup! Argh... Ahh...” Yoo Yeonha froze and jumped sideways to avoid the evil spirit’s drool. Then she carried Kim Hajin and ran out of the room.

She almost fell on the way out with Kim Hajin when her legs suddenly gave out.

“Mommy!” she screamed and looked around the lobby.

Not only the bedroom, but evil spirits crawled all over the place. Rather, the entire place was made up of evil spirits. Her feet sunk into the jaws of evil spirits whenever she took a step.

“Ah... Eugh... Hiccup! Huk... Huk...” Yoo Yeonha began

hyperventilating from the fear and suddenly noticed her back felt quite light.

Her face turned ghastly pale and she instantly turned around to find that Kim Hajin had gone missing.

Don't tell me I threw him away without realizing it? She questioned herself as her entire body trembled.

Yoo Yeonha looked around the floor in hopes of finding him when someone suddenly spoke from behind her, “What are you looking for?”

She flinched and turned around to find Kim Hajin smiling at her.

Then, she finally realized that this was once again just a dream. She would wake up from this nightmare soon enough.

Contrary to her expectations...

“This isn’t a dream. I’ve woken up,” he said with a smile that didn’t suit their situation. His smile definitely felt mischievous.

Yoo Yeonha composed herself and asked, “No... ah... I mean... really... geez... You sure took your time sleeping, didn’t you? Hey, do you even know how long you’ve been asleep?”

“Of course, I can go back to sleep if you want me to,” Kim Hajin teased her while snickering.

He looked into the distance at something.

[Medicinal Memory Physique has fully detoxified the Empty Dream.]

[Tower of Wish Bonus — You have received a special inheritance!]

[You have inherited one skill stored in the player’s storage!]

Inherited Skill ► [Extraction, Materialization, and Synthesis]

A string of notifications appeared in front of him without Yoo Yeonha's knowledge.

"What are you doing?" she asked while pouting.

Kim Hajin took out his Black Lotus Bow, nocked a dark ore arrow, and aimed at the ceiling.

Then he shot the arrow and activated one of the Black Lotus Bow's effects, which could purify evil spirits.

The evil spirits that filled the place slowly disappeared after screaming in agony.

"Let's go up now," he said.

"Hiing... Well... I guess guarding you all this time came with some benefit. Alright, let's go," Yoo Yeonha replied with a nod.

She regained her confidence and haughty look after he vanquished all the evil spirits. They promptly climbed the stairs.

However, the walls and stairs began to melt like candle wax. The wailing spirits gave them a sharp headache.

"Kieeeeeek!"

Yoo Yeonha tightly held onto Kim Hajin. She asked him some questions to distract herself from the horrifying screams.

"How long were you stuck in your dreams? It must've been quite a long time, right?"

"..."

Kim Hajin glanced at her and nonchalantly replied with a shrug, "Perhaps around... fifteen or twenty years? At least that's how it felt."

"WHAT?!" Yoo Yeonha's jaws dropped. "Fifteen... Fifteen years?!"

Then... Then... do you remember everything that happened in your dreams?”

“Yeah, I do. Rather, I tried to remember them.”

“Why? Isn’t it better for you to just forget about them?”

He flashed a smile filled with sadness.

“I got to meet everyone that I’ve been wanting to meet.”

Yoo Yeonha couldn’t understand what he meant. She stared at him intently for a while before looking away and feeling sorry for him.

“Is that so?”

“Yeah.”

“I see...”

She didn’t say anymore and quietly followed him.

The long staircase leading up kept winding and she gradually grew drowsy for some reason. She staggered up the stairs and buried her face into Kim Hajin’s back.

“We have a problem...” she muttered.

Kim Hajin stopped and turned around.

Yoo Yeonha looked at him with droopy eyes.

“I feel so sleepy. I think I’m going to die at this rate if I don’t sleep...”

Her voice trailed off as she rubbed her face against his back.

Kim Hajin smirked at her, “You can go to sleep. I’ll let you have the sweetest dream ever.”

His voice sounded reassuring for some reason. Yoo Yeonha smiled before collapsing and Kim Hajin carried her on his back.

Step... Step...

Yoo Yeonha fell into a deep slumber with her chin resting on his shoulder. Only the sound of his footsteps filled their surroundings.

She didn't know why, but she knew she would have a good dream this time.

Side Stories 39

Dream in a Dream (39)

Rachel engaged in a fierce battle where one of the most disastrous events in England's history had occurred, the Hampton Palace. She marched forward and knocked out her enemies with the back of Galatine's blade.

She resolved to stop the magic circle at all costs and her party members felt the same.

“Keuk!”

However, the enemy had no intentions of fighting and only stalled for time. Lancaster already finished his preparations to destroy England. She knew very well that not only her, but the real England would also be destroyed if Lancaster activated this gigantic magic circle.

“This looks tough,” Marcus said while smiling with his forehead drenched in sweat.

“We managed to stop the magic circle thanks to the bombs, but... Argh!” He couldn't finish as an energy blast from an enemy flung him back.

Rachel didn't have the time to check on him as the same attack struck her too.

Clang!

However, she summoned her spirit just in time and parried the energy blast with Galatine. She pushed back the enemies in front by combining her fire and wind spirit. However, they were still far too outnumbered and severely disadvantaged.

It was ten against a battalion that numbered in the thousands if one counted the undead and monsters as well.

“Rachel,” Sehat called her. “That man called Chiffelin is standing at the core of the magic circle. Can you see it?”

Sehat had been racking his brains the entire time to find a way to destroy the magic circle.

Rachel nodded at his words. As he said, Chiffelin undoubtedly stood at the magic circle’s core judging by the fact that all the mana gathered there.

“We’ll attract his attention, so you should focus on destroying it,” Sehat said.

“SAYS WHO?!” someone suddenly shouted.

A hail of bullets rained on them.

Rachel blocked them with Galatine, but hundreds of mana-compressed bullets immediately followed the barrage.

“It’ll be difficult to charge in,” Rachel said as she summoned her earth and wind spirit to form a barrier against the bullets.

“No, it’s possible,” another voice suddenly spoke.

Rachel felt a chill down her spine and her eyes widened. She turned towards the voice and saw a man standing on top of the Hampton Palace’s roof. He smiled brightly at her.

“I’ll protect you, so it’ll definitely be possible,” he reassured her.

“...”

Rachel stared at him for a while before finally nodding. She could proceed as planned with a light heart now that he arrived.

“I’ll give you the signal,” Kim Hajin said as he pulled his bowstring.

Rachel prepared to dash forward at any second with Sehat, Tilma, Marcus, and the others behind her.

“One.”

Creak...

He pulled the arrow on his bowstring and aimed at Chiffelin.

“Two.”

Rachel infused mana into her legs and summoned her wind spirit to spring forward at any moment.

“Three. Now!” Kim Hajin shouted and released his arrow.

Shwiiiiii!

The arrow ferociously flew towards Chiffelin while burning through every enemy and spirit in its path. Rachel dashed right through the path opened by the arrow.

She headed towards where Chiffelin stood.

Mana would gather at the magic circle’s core just like a human’s mana gathered in their core. They could stop the magic circle if they destroyed that spot.

The enemies rushed in from both sides to close her path, but another arrow and bullets rained down to protect her. A few of the enemies managed to slip past the cover fire, but Rachel’s party members suddenly appeared and blocked them.

“You dare!” Chiffelin growled when Rachel finally reached the magic circle’s core.

Rachel immediately flashed her spirit’s light at the djinn. Chiffelin could feel his body slowly disintegrating from the purifying light.

“Kuuuuuuh!”

She shoved the screaming djinn as hard as she could.

“Haaaaap!”

Then she screamed the loudest she ever had in her entire life and stabbed Galatine into the magic circle’s core.

Rumble... Rumble...

Galatine spread the power of Rachel’s spirit throughout the magic circle as if laying down its roots. Rachel squeezed every last ounce of her strength and pushed her spirit deeper into the magic circle.

Her wood spirit manifested into roots and blocked the movement of mana within the magic circle. Her earth spirit shook the ground and hampered the magic circle’s progress. Her water spirit erased and altered parts of the magic circle. Lastly, her fire and wind spirit combined to unleash a powerful blaze that melted the magic circle.

She was showing the classic example of easier said than done right now. The magic circle was enormous and spread across all 243,610 square kilometers of England. Rachel was destroying that enormous magic circle all alone.

Ddrruu... Ddrruuu...

The sound of cogwheels turning and screeching could be heard before the magic circle finally stopped operating.

“Ah...” Rachel fell to the ground after exhausting all her energy, but someone’s warm embrace caught her before she hit the ground.

She saw that it was Kim Hajin and couldn’t help but smile like a fool.

“You finally woke up...” she weakly muttered.

“Yes, I have. Just leave the rest to me,” he replied.

“Will you be alright?”

Rachel was still worried even though they stopped the magic circle. Chiffelin and the number of enemies still posed a huge threat.

However, Kim Hajin didn’t seem concerned at all and leisurely pointed into the distance.

Rachel squeezed whatever strength she had left and turned to where he pointed.

“Huh?”

A person’s silhouette came into view. This short woman wore a dress accompanied by a tall woman wielding a bow.

Rachel’s eyes widened in surprise.

Aileen and Jin Seyeon had somehow arrived.

“Hey, you criminal! Chiffelin, I’ve come to arrest you!” Aileen shouted.

She sounded adorable, yet dependable at the same time. Rachel passed out with a peaceful look and fell asleep without a single worry.

* * *

They destroyed the gigantic magic circle, but Lancaster didn’t seem bothered at all. He didn’t expect the magic circle to be completed in the first place. He worried in the dark if he was right.

Was his revenge justified?

He already realized a long time ago that justified revenge didn’t exist. The emotions he buried deep inside himself surfaced again as darkness surrounded him.

Grief initially consumed him and he lost all purpose in life. Then anger and resentment overcame him and he tried to inflict as much pain as possible on Rachel. In the end, he finally realized that his main purpose in life was to destroy the cogs of fate and rewrite the past tragedy that should never have occurred.

However, Rachel viciously fought even in this dream world. She could've lived a peaceful and happy life if she just gave in. She could've even put down all the burdens she carried.

Despite all that, she chose to fight against this dream. Her subconscious floated around like an aimless buoy, but suddenly shone brightly like a steadfast lighthouse in the dark.

Lancaster recalled the warmth of the tiny girl he once held in his arms. He slowly opened his eyes and saw the princess from the darkness. The princess was smiling in the embrace of another man.

"I regretted it a lot," he slowly said while looking at her.

"It saddened me too. The fact that all this happened because of you and me."

He shouldn't have let Rachel go that day. Lancaster always regretted his actions.

That day's tragedy wouldn't have happened if he was a bit more strict with her. If only he fulfilled his obligations as a knight and protected her.

"However, it'll be different now," Lancaster muttered while looking down at the shining stone in his hand.

This force had made everything possible. The fragment of miracle that he obtained after painstaking efforts.

"I will make you happy now. In this place..."

Was this what they called a gift?

Lancaster had no idea. He tightly gripped the stone in his hand that sapped his life force in exchange for fulfilling his desires.

“Forever...”

This stone’s power would now complete the world he envisioned and Rachel would be trapped in this dream world forever. She would finally live a happy life without ever realizing that she was trapped in a dream.

Through that, he would finally fulfill his duty as her knight.

Lancaster smiled as his consciousness slowly drifted into the darkness.

He heard the voices of those he dearly missed and slowly melted away. He saw the faces of his beloved family.

* * *

Chae Nayun ran as fast as she could while only relying on her instinct. England’s scenery whooshed past her and she arrived at the location where the spirit guided her.

It was a warm and cozy garden with bees, flowers, and trees living in harmony.

Lancaster sat at the center of this garden. The flowers and trees peacefully surrounded him. He gave off a gentle aura despite the decades of hatred he harbored.

Chae Nayun slowly and carefully approached the knight. She noticed the faint golden glimmer from a stone after taking a few steps towards him.

“Were you the one who took it?” she asked.

However, Lancaster didn’t reply and kept his eyes closed as if in a deep slumber.

“Are you pretending to be asleep?” she asked again while thinking, There’s no way that’s going to work on me.

She tapped his shoulder and he spoke in a very faint voice, “I have returned...”

“What the hell are you talking about? Returned from where?”

“...”

Lancaster smiled with a rose in his hand.

“Hmm...” Chae Nayun roughly understood the situation.

Lancaster injected his mana into the Miracle Stone Fragment and probably wished for a dream that continued forever. He probably wished to live in a world that satisfied him instead of the cruel reality that tormented him.

“I’ll be taking this. It was mine to begin with,” Chae Nayun said and took her Miracle Stone.

She infused her mana into the fist-sized golden stone and the fragment with Lancaster slowly flew towards her. It combined with the Miracle Stone in her hand and became whole again.

“Well, that was kinda anti-climatic...” she grumbled.

Lancaster didn’t resist or put up a fight. Of course, she would’ve crushed him and beaten him to a pulp if he did.

“Sigh...”

Anyways, she successfully retrieved the fragment and everything finally ended.

She sighed in relief and bid the knight farewell, “I’ll get going now.”

It was time for everyone to wake up from their dreams now.

Chae Nayun smirked as she looked at the completed Miracle Stone.

However...

Krrrwaaaaa!

A huge amount of mana surged out from the sleeping Lancaster. This powerful energy shook the entire world they were in.

“What the hell?!” Chae Nayun cried out as the Miracle Stone began resonating with this powerful energy.

The Miracle Stone shot out silver threads and bound Chae Nayun.

She screamed in anger, “Hey! Let me go! I said let me go! Why you little! Hey! Wait a minute... Hey!”

The world Lancaster created was Rachel’s dream and didn’t permit Chae Nayun’s existence. She found herself in a different world after she blinked.

No, she had returned to the real world.

“Gasp!”

Chae Nayun immediately stood and looked around. Numerous people slept on beds under a white ceiling.

This place was called the Empty Dream Patient Center at Severance Hospital.

Chae Nayun looked around for a while and muttered under her breath, “Fuck.”

That damned bastard Lancaster used the fragment’s power to expel her from that world. This meant she could no longer interfere in that world and she couldn’t save Rachel either. Rachel would have to wake up from that dream by herself.

“Ah... This has gotten annoying.”

Chae Nayun jumped out of bed and rushed somewhere. She arrived at the hospital's top floor where the VIP wards were located.

[VIP Ward]

“You can't enter here—”

“I'm Chae Nayun! Get out of my way!”

Bam!

She shoved the bodyguard guarding the entrance and barged in.

“Kiyahk!”

Rachel lay in bed like a dead person. Evandel slept at her side and chirped like a frightened chick when Chae Nayun barged in.

“Huk... Huk!”

“Oh, my bad. Did I scare you?” Chae Nayun asked before sitting down beside the shaking Evandel and patting her head.

The news flashed on tv.

[Twenty days have passed since the incident caused by the Tower of Miracle. The Sleeping Shockwave sent out by the tower when it collapsed has caused tens of millions to enter an Empty Dream. They are currently not showing any signs of recovery...]

Chae Nayun let out a sigh.

They succeeded in the Tower of Miracle, but something no one expected had occurred and affected the entire world.

The Empty Dream Shockwave happened right after the tower collapsed. It not only affected all the Essence of the Strait members who participated in the raid, but it also dragged in other people like Rachel.

None of the affected had woken up yet.

“Tsk...” Chae Nayun clicked her tongue in frustration while looking at the sound asleep and smiling Rachel.

A person having a wonderful dream would obviously resist waking up from it. Lancaster would win at this rate.

Was this really Lancaster’s ultimate goal? To let Rachel dream forever? Would this quench his thirst for vengeance?

“E-Excuse m-me...” Evandel stuttered and nervously looked back and forth between Rachel and Chae Nayun. The way she twiddled her thumbs looked too cute.

“What?” Chae Nayun frowned and curtly replied.

“That is... That is... That... is... Sniff! Sniff!”

Tears began welling up in the little girl’s eyes after seeing Chae Nayun’s face. All of Evandel’s stress came crashing after seeing Chae Nayun’s scary face.

“Hey hey, don’t cry. Nothing’s going to happen,” Chae Nayun said as she placed Evandel in a headlock and scuffled her hair.

Evandel finally burst into tears at Chae Nayun’s violence.

“Right, where is Kim Hajin?”

“Hajin just left...”

“Is that so? He must’ve gone looking for a way to fix this mess. Alright, I’ll be off now.”

“H-Huh? Oh, okay. Then, goodbye...”

Chae Nayun left after releasing the poor girl from her headlock.

Lancaster used the Miracle Stone Fragment to create a dream world for Rachel. This meant she had to wake up for tens of millions to be freed.

Chae Nayun sighed while walking through the corridor and leaned against the wall.

“What am I supposed to do now?” she weakly grumbled.

She finally managed to retrieve the fragment, but couldn’t wake Rachel up anymore.

She could only infiltrate Rachel’s dream in the first place thanks to the connection between the Miracle Stone and its fragment. However, that connection had been lost when she retrieved the fragment.

Despite that, she couldn’t afford to turn her back and leave now. That would leave a very sour, no, bitter taste in her mouth.

She rummaged through her pockets and a box of cigarettes fell out. Chae Nayun bit the cigarette and prepared to light it when she suddenly recalled something that made her crumple the cigarette and throw it on the ground.

The crushed cigarette turned into ashes that littered the floor.

* * *

Rachel, Kim Hajin, and the others stuck in the dream world returned to Tomer’s continent.

Tomer heartily laughed and welcomed them, “Excellent! You did great! I’ll purify that fake England later, so don’t worry about it. I’ll wipe them off the map!”

“No...” Rachel shook her head.

Tomer probably meant she would exorcise the evil spirits on the other side.

“I hope those people can continue living a normal life... without ever realizing the England they are living in is a fake...”

“Huh?”

“Is that possible?”

“Well, that’s a bit unexpected. I’ll try nevertheless.”

“I’ll visit frequently to help out.”

“Ah, that will make things easier.”

Tomer patted Rachel on the shoulder and asked, “So what are you going to do now?”

Her voice carried a commanding aura befitting a king.

Rachel pondered for a moment before replying, “I’ll need to leave the general assembly for now. I have a lot of things to inform them about. Starting with Xtra and Lancaster...”

“Hmm... You’ll need a trophy to bring back too, right?”

“That’s...”

Tomer called her subordinates before Rachel could respond. Her subordinates rushed over with an expensive-looking chest. Tomer opened it and Rachel’s eyes sparkled at the contents.

“This is an artifact that won’t disappear even outside the general assembly. Of course, I’m not sure what it’s worth in the current market. I think it’ll fetch at least two billion won,” Tomer nonchalantly said.

Forget about two billion, this artifact would easily fetch five billion won outside. What shocked Rachel most was that this chest contained twenty of these artifacts.

She couldn't suppress her joy and greedily salivated over the artifacts.

"Thank you. I will never forget your kindness."

"What kindness are you talking about... Geez..."

Knock... Knock...

Someone knocked on the door and Kim Hajin soon entered.

"Are you ready, Rachel? We're going to leave now," he said with a smile.

Rachel replied with a bright smile, "Yes! Let's go together!"

"Erm... but what's that treasure chest?"

"King Tomer bestowed it to me," Rachel proudly showed off the chest.

"Wow! Let me take a look," Kim Hajin exclaimed and walked towards the chest.

The two of them stood face to face with the chest between them.

"Hmm..."

Kim Hajin busily inspected the contents before looking at Rachel.

"..."

The two of them ended up gazing into each other's eyes.

Rachel felt a strong urge welling up in her chest, but failed to muster the courage. She awkwardly squirmed without doing anything in the end.

“Ehem...”

Kim Hajin avoided her gaze first as his face flushed bright red.

Rachel felt good seeing him like that.

“Ehem ehem...” What do you think you’re doing in my office? Get out,” Tomer growled and couldn’t stand the strange atmosphere between the two of them.

“Ah, I apologize. We’ll take our leave now,” Rachel bowed and left with Kim Hajin.

She suddenly stopped when she felt a strange sensation throughout her body. Just now, it felt like someone had called her...

“What are you doing?” Kim Hajin asked.

Rachel flinched and shook her head.

“It’s nothing. Let’s go,” she said and continued following him.

Side Stories 40

Dream in a Dream (40)

“Bam!” Aileen shouted as she slammed her seal on the letter of approval. “Here! You can now increase your guild members to twenty people! Congratulations, you’ve progressed a step further!”

“Thank you,” Rachel replied with a bow before receiving the letter.

She had earned this reward from the contribution points she gained while fighting against Lancaster, which allowed her to bring more guild members to the general assembly.

“Alright then. Go and have a great time,” Aileen said as she waved them away.

Jin Seyeon smiled from next to her and spoke, “Have a pleasant trip back home. Oh right, Mr. Kim Hajin?”

“Yes?”

Jin Seyeon suddenly extended her smartwatch towards him. Rachel nervously watched in anticipation as to what would happen.

“Shall we exchange contact information? It’s been a long time since I met someone like you. It must be fate that brought us together,” Jin Seyeon smiled at him.

“Ah... Sure... it’s an honor...” Kim Hajin replied with an awkward smile.

The memory of them shooting arrows while standing back to back left quite an impression on him too. She would be a dependable ally one day if he ever needed one.

“ ... ”

Rachel looked at the two of them smiling and exchanging contact information. She turned around and left the general assembly first. The rest of her guild members followed and Kim Hajin came out last.

Both of Rachel's cheeks puffed out as she grumbled, “This must be fate my butt. Sounds more like a coincidence to me...”

Fermin flashed a mischievous smile when she heard Rachel's faint grumbling from behind.

* * *

It took five days for the guild members to reach Mumbai from the general assembly. They took the portal there to return to England.

However, the press was already waiting for them at the airport's portal for some reason.

— Please tell us what kind of tests were waiting for you at the general assembly!

— Why do you think the English Royal Court guild was eliminated first... Hey! Don't push!

— Which guild is leading the general assembly right now? Is it Essence of the Strait or Creator's Sacred Grace?!

The press unleashed a torrent of questions assuming that the English Royal Court had been eliminated from the general assembly. This made Rachel scoff under her breath.

“The English Royal Court has not been eliminated from the general assembly. In fact, our campaign has been quite successful,” Rachel confidently replied and began to list every one of their achievements.

She proudly showed off their loot and talked about the endless possibilities in the general assembly. Not only that, she even revealed Lancaster's evil deeds and proclaimed Xtra's innocence.

The press went silent for a moment before bursting into laughter. They thought Rachel's bold claims were nothing more than baseless lies.

Skeptical questions poured in like, Aren't those just consolation prizes instead of loot? She almost wanted to exert some violence on them.

Rachel barely managed to suppress her anger and deeply reflected on trying to boast for her own people.

The press conference concluded and she returned to the English Royal Court's headquarters.

"What are all of these? And why are you in my office, Prime Minister?"

A mountain of documents on her table greeted her. Surprisingly, England's prime minister also paid her a visit.

The prime minister said in a serious tone, "The English Royal Court received a substantial amount of investments while you were away, Vice Leader. These are the documents listing the investors."

"Huh? What do you mean?" Rachel muttered in disbelief before rushing over to check the documents.

[Investment Company – EXTRION Hathshire]

Only then did Rachel finally notice the newly constructed building outside her office window. That building definitely hadn't been there when she left for the general assembly.

She grabbed her hair while immersing herself in the documents that detailed their new investors. Her eyes grew bigger when she saw the total amount invested into their guild.

"..."

Rachel looked at the prime minister without saying anything, but the confusion in her eyes seemed to be asking him for an explanation.

The prime minister sighed and explained, “The English Royal Court’s situation plunged to the worst it’s ever been in history after you left for the general assembly. All of our financial credit lines were blocked and the banks began to foreclose our assets. They came attacking from all sides as if they had been waiting for an opportunity to strike all along. Then this investment company suddenly popped out of nowhere and offered us their proposal.”

The prime minister initially thought it was some sort of relief money aimed at taking over the English Royal Court. However, EXTRION Hathshire offered an absurdly good proposal. No, it was near perfect and exactly what they needed at the moment.

They simply had to agree to the terms and the blueprint provided by the investment company. The guild would immediately receive twenty-five trillion Korean won^[1].

“Not only that, their blueprint is almost flawless. It looks like they used Essence of the Strait as a benchmark for it. The English Royal Court is faithfully following every step laid out in their proposal. I will try to arrange a dinner meeting so we can meet them and discuss further,” the prime minister added.

Rachel read the document while listening to the prime minister's explanation. She looked up after he finished speaking. His last words suddenly bothered her. What did he mean by a dinner meeting?

The prime minister immediately looked away and avoided her gaze with a fake cough.

“The investor says that he has always respected Vice Leader Rachel. I believe that it would be possible to gain more from them if you have a meal together and casually talk with them...”

Rachel looked down at the document again, specifically at the words EXTRION Hathshire and the twenty-five trillion won written on it.

Twenty-five trillion won was simply too big of a figure no matter how successful their general assembly campaign had been.

“Then, I’ll be taking my leave now. Oh, and please let me know of a convenient time, date, and place for the dinner meeting,” the prime minister seemed to be hinting that he wouldn’t take no for an answer. He bowed and left her office.

“Haa...” Rachel sighed after being left alone. She tapped her finger on the document while seemingly in a dilemma.

She didn’t mind having a meal with someone. No, she had to accept this dinner meeting for the sake of her guild and country. However, she felt uneasy about it for some reason.

“...”

Rachel stared into space for a while before tapping her smartwatch and sending a message to the person who caused her uneasiness.

[What are you doing right now (☉⊥☉)?]

Her smartwatch screen suddenly changed as a call came in.

[Master Shin Yeohwa]

It came from her elementalist teacher and master, Shin Yeohwa.

Rachel flinched and her shoulders trembled when she read the name. She almost instinctively blurted out, I’m sorry, out of pure habit.

However, she suddenly recalled what Kim Hajin told her last time. Could she really consider someone who suppressed her talents as a teacher and master? The answer was obvious now that she thought about it. She had been acting ignorant and stupid for far too long.

She would make her decision now and no longer needed to hang her head in shame.

Rachel was the vice leader of the glorious English Royal Court guild as well as England’s princess. Not only that, she was the one and only spirit swordsman in the world. She could definitely be proud of that.

“Hmph!”

Rachel steeled her resolve to hate Shin Yeohwa from now on and growled at the portrait that popped up on her smartwatch.

Of course, she didn’t answer the call.

* * *

[Hajin-chan! I’m attaching the investment report for the English Royal Court! Give it a read! I wrote it so you could easily understand nyang!]

I read the report on our new investment in the English Royal Court guild. Kim Hoseop invested in them and also gave them a blueprint to become like the most advanced guild in the world, Essence of the Strait. It would aid the English Royal Court in their future developments.

It would’ve been difficult for them to accept a third party’s opinion, but the English Royal Court lowered their pride and accepted because of the huge twenty-five trillion won.

I set down the report and called Kim Hoseop.

— Hajin-chan!

“Hey, I just looked at the investment report. Great job, Hoseop.”

— Okay! Is everything finished?

“Yeah, it’s almost done.”

I probably owed Kim Hoseop the most out of everyone now that I thought about it. I had no idea how I would’ve made it without him.

— Was the general assembly fun, nyang?

“I’m not sure...”

Could I call it fun?

I went through all sorts of hardships, but failed to find a way to return to my original world. Well, seeing my parents again even though it was just a dream gave me some comfort at least.

“I guess it was a bit fun?”

— Okay. Anyways, I’m hanging up now. It’s time for me to watch my anime!

“Alright.”

I ended the call and turned on the TV.

— The famous EXTRION Hathshire is about to add another successful record to their legacy. They have invested an astronomical twenty-five trillion won into the English Royal Court guild, which has been going through severe financial difficulties in recent months. The risky gamble placed by EXTRION Hathshire seems to be paying off as... and the public’s sentiment towards the English Royal Court guild seems to be improving day by day...

Evandel slept nearby and squirmed when the TV blasted on. I patted her head and eased her back to sleep.

I worried about her quite a bit since I left for such a long time. However, only a few tears welled up in her eyes when I returned.

Her lack of reactions slightly saddened me. I didn’t expect her to say something like, Don’t you dare disappear for so long ever again! Still, I felt disappointed that she didn’t seem too bothered by my absence.

Bzzt... Bzzt... Bzzt...

My smartwatch vibrated with a message from Rachel.

[What are you doing right now (◉└◉)?]

I looked over at Evandel and decided to take the initiative this time.

[I was thinking of you, Rachel.]

I wanted to introduce her to Evandel, but had no idea if Rachel would feel afraid, disgusted, or even like Evandel once they met.

Evandel had resulted from my foolish mistake when I treated this world as just a novel. I had a responsibility to clean up my own mess.

A sharp pain struck my head when I thought about how to make them meet.

“Euk!”

However, the pain only lasted for a split second and disappeared. The sudden pain left me stupified.

The strange sensation felt as if this world was nothing but a fleeting dream. As if this world was too rich and vivid...

I absent-mindedly sat on the sofa.

Rachel would probably reply back any minute now, but I decided to switch off my smartwatch.

* * *

On the other hand, Rachel's hands trembled after reading the message on her smartwatch. Her face grew so red that it would probably explode because of one sentence.

[I was thinking of you, Rachel.]

That message sounded too aggressive.

[Really? That's a bit surprising...]

Rachel almost hit send, but deleted it. She couldn't sit still and began pacing around the room.

Should I cancel the dinner meeting with EXTRION Hathshire? What if he finds out about the dinner meeting? Will he be disappointed? I mean... that's not my intention for agreeing to it but...

Rachel racked her brains for a while before finally sending a reply.

[Thank you.]

She sounded too impulsive!

Rachel tried to delete the message before he read it, but it had already been marked as read. However, a reply didn't come back no matter how long she waited.

"Ah..."

Rachel squirmed and struggled while looking at her smartwatch. She sent another message after exactly eleven minutes passed.

*[I didn't mean anything by that. I was just thinking the same thing too... 💧]*

Five minutes passed... Ten minutes...

The clock ticked away, but no reply came. He didn't even read her last message.

Rachel felt depressed by the sudden turn of events and jumped into bed. She began venting her frustration on her innocent blanket.

* * *

Public sentiment towards the English Royal Court slowly improved after Rachel returned from the general assembly.

They relaunched an investigation into the issue regarding Xtra. Kim Hoseop supplied them with detailed and crucial information regarding Lancaster's minions. The government successfully captured all the criminals thanks to him.

Not only that, Rachel finally received a long-awaited reply from Kim Hajin! Was it because everything seemed to be going too smoothly? Rachel felt her mood brightening up.

She sat in front of the clay oven and watched a piece of meat being slowly grilled.

"It's meat! Meat! Delicious meat!" Rachel exclaimed.

A party took place at the English Royal Court's garden, but the prime minister had to watch Vice Leader Rachel sitting in front of an oven and singing praises to a piece of meat.

The English Royal Court had solved their financial crisis thanks to EXTRION Hathshire, but they still had a lot to gain from the new partnership.

The prime minister had heard that EXTRION Hathshire's CEO was a young man. They would probably receive much more investments if Rachel wooed him with her charms.

"Vice Leader, when do you plan to have the dinner meeting?" the prime minister asked.

Rachel briefly pondered as she placed the grilled meat on her plate.

"We have the ribbon-cutting ceremony for our newly constructed training ground, right? I heard it's been completed."

It was only right to display one's gratitude towards their benefactor. Having a meal together surely wouldn't cause any misunderstandings.

"Yes, it's a state-of-the-art training ground we constructed thanks to EXTRION's investment," the prime minister heavily emphasized where the investment came from.

"Then we shall dine together after the ribbon-cutting ceremony,"

Rachel coolly replied since she was in a good mood these days.

That seemed like the perfect time to have the dinner meeting.

The prime minister nodded in satisfaction with a smile. “I understand. I’ll make the necessary arrangements.”

* * *

— Hajin-chan! The English Royal Court invited us to the ribbon-cutting ceremony for their new training ground.

[The English Royal Court would be tremendously honored if EXTRION Hathshire’s chairman graces us with his presence during the ribbon-cutting ceremony...]

I felt slightly embarrassed hearing them refer to me as EXTRION Hathshire’s chairman since the company was too small for me to be called a chairman.

The company simply ran by itself thanks to the cash and stocks that Kim Hoseop and I put in. Nothing great particularly stood out about the company.

Of course, we reluctantly hired some talented individuals after news of our successful investments spread like wildfire in the market. Numerous talents came flocking in at our main office in Seoul, South Korea. It was also undoubtedly the most prime real estate in the world.

We only had thirty employees, so I didn’t consider us to be a major company.

“Sounds good. Tell them we’ll be going.”

I planned to introduce Evandel to Rachel on that day.

— Alright, nyang!

My identity would be exposed if I attended the ribbon-cutting ceremony, but I also wanted to live a normal life as a salaryman from now on without having to lurk in the shadows.

I wanted Evandel to be proud of me.

“Hey... Evandel...”

“Yes?”

I called her as she played a game with her eyes fully fixated on the screen. She seemed to be playing some kind of racing game.

“Do you want to go somewhere with me next Friday?”

“No, I promised to go watch a show with my friends.”

I didn’t expect her to shoot me down like that. I froze for a while before speaking again in a stern manner.

“No, you have to come.”

“I don’t want to.”

“No, you have to come with me.”

Evandel squinted and glared at me before growling like an angry kitten. She tried to express that she didn’t want to go with her entire body.

“I told you. I have to watch a show with my friends.”

“You can go watch it next time. Come with me just this once. I guarantee that you won’t regret it.”

“Why?”

“I’ll tell you once we get there, so come with me.”

“...”

Evandel puffed her cheeks and stomped towards her room.

“Haa... Geez...”

Is that punk going through puberty these days or is she putting up a front because I was away for too long?

I suddenly received a message on my laptop.

[Pleasure to meet you.]

It came from Rachel, but her manner of speech seemed quite tense for some reason.

“What the heck?”

I wondered what was wrong with her this time, but noticed that she had messaged me through official channels. She hadn’t messaged Kim Hajin, but EXTRION Hathshire’s CEO.

A fun idea popped up in my head after reading her message.

[Hello, pleased to meet you too. My name is Im Jinha.]

I feigned ignorance and replied. This would probably surprise her even more, right?

[I am the vice leader of the English Royal Court guild, Rachel.]

Tap... Tap... Tap...

I immediately typed a response.

[Hoho! Have you eaten dinner?]

[Yes.]

I looked at the time on my laptop that read 4:17 P.M.

[It's only four o'clock, but you already had your dinner?]

[Yes, I tend to have my meals much earlier than others.]

Oh, is that so? I flashed a mischievous smile and typed away again.

[We will probably communicate quite often from now on. What do you say we have a meal together sometime?]

It took her five minutes to reply back.

[I have prepared a meal for us after the ribbon-cutting ceremony.]

[I mean, before that.]

It took another fifteen minutes for her to reply this time.

[I have prepared a meal for us after the ribbon-cutting ceremony.]

[Huh?]

[I have prepared a meal for us after the ribbon-cutting ceremony.]

Why did she suddenly turn into a computer? I sent her a simple [Okay]. Then I messaged her with my personal smartwatch.

[Have you had dinner yet?]

[Not yet ☹️!]

She replied so fast that I found it scary. She sent another message before I even had the chance to think of a reply.

[But why are you asking? Are you in London by any chance ㄥ ?]

“ ... ”

I looked back and forth between the two chats and felt the drastic difference in her reactions. I couldn't help but wonder if this meant she was giving me the green light.

I began typing a reply as my heart fluttered.

[No, I was just curious. I'll be there next week. Do you want to meet? Let's have a meal or something if you're free. There's something I want to tell you.]

[Of course! I'm free 100% > ☐ < !]

[Alright, I'll contact you then.]

Let's meet at the ribbon-cutting ceremony. I thought to myself with a mischievous smile as I turned off my smartwatch.

1. Roughly 25 billion USD. 🤞

Side Stories 41

Dream in a Dream (41)

Rachel went shopping for clothes on a sunny and peaceful day with Fermin at a famous formal attire store.

“That investment company seems to be quite famous,” Fermin said while looking through the formal attire in the store.

Formal attire felt foreign to heroes used to wearing casual attire most of the time.

“You mean EXTRION Hathshire?” Rachel asked in response.

“Yeah, they’ve only been around for four or five years. However, they’re known for having most major stocks in the world in the palm of their hands. I was shocked when I looked them up. Their annual revenue can only be described as... astronomical...”

Rachel had also heard of their renown. They were especially influential in South Korea and possessed enough influence to raise or ruin a country at whim.

“A company like that swept up a majority of our shares! It’s become a hot topic on the internet these days!”

EXTRION had bought more than 40% of the English Royal Court’s stocks while Rachel was away at the general assembly.

Ding!

Rachel’s smartwatch suddenly rang when she was about to say something. She frowned at what came in.

Fermin tilted her head in confusion and asked, “What is it?”

“A message,” Rachel replied.

“From who?” Fermin curiously asked.

Rachel frowned again as if she found Fermin annoying and replied,
“The CEO of EXTRION.”

“WHAAAT?!” Fermin screamed in shock. Her eyes widened and her jaws dropped. She set down the formal wear and ran towards Rachel.

“What did he say?” she asked.

“Nothing much.”

The content of the message went something along the lines of, [Have you eaten? I'm looking forward to our meeting next week.]

“Wow! As expected of our Vice Leader! Even a super rich person like him is dying to meet you!”

“Please don’t exaggerate...” Rachel grumbled and shrugged.

A worrying thought flashed across her mind after she read the message. If she remembered correctly, Kim Hajin also said he would visit her in London next week.

What if... just maybe... their dates happened to overlap?

That worry spread throughout her mind like wildfire and she found herself in a dilemma. She subconsciously raised a thumb to her mouth and began biting her nail.

“Ack! What are you doing, Vice Leader?!” Fermin exclaimed and smacked Rachel’s hand away. She reprimanded the princess, “You should be mindful of your appearance!”

“Ah... Sorry... it was a mistake...”

“The formal wear you requested is here,” the store clerk told them.

Fermin grinned and received the clothes from the clerk. She placed it on top of Rachel.

“Wow...” Fermin couldn’t help but gasp in admiration.

It looked perfect on Rachel. The white blouse, black jacket, slacks, and coat that went down to her knees could only be described as a perfect fit.

“Try wearing it! Hurry!” Fermin pushed Rachel towards the dressing room.

A moment passed and Rachel finished changing into her formal attire. Fermin exclaimed in awe again.

The formal attire accentuated Rachel’s sharp features and complimented her figure quite nicely. Not only that, the black colors somewhat made her look colder. However, her beautiful features made her look warm at the same time. On top of that, her golden hair was tied in a ponytail and she wore high heels. She simply embodied perfection.

“What do you think? Is it alright? Do you think it’s a bit too much?” Rachel asked while smiling awkwardly.

She turned a few times in front of the mirror seemingly unsure whether the attire looked good on her or not.

Fermin and the store clerks stared at her. Rachel looked more beautiful than anyone else in the world. All of them gave her a thumbs-up to express their approval.

* * *

Rachel’s daily schedule became packed after she returned from the general assembly. Conferences, interviews, public events, charity works, etc...

She didn’t even have time to meet friends or send them a message. Her twenty-four hours only consisted of events in England and other countries.

She couldn't help but feel a bit insecure because she couldn't talk to the person she wanted to speak with most due to her busy schedule. Rachel worried that he might think ill of her or misunderstand.

"Haa..." She sat in her office chair with a sigh. Rachel stared at her smartwatch and contemplated whether to send a message or not. She had a lot of work to finish today.

First, she had to reinstate Dake. He used to be their human resource manager and was the one who secretly hired Xtra. She had reunited with Kim Hajin thanks to him.

Rachel decided to reinstate him and send him as the person in charge of their general assembly branch.

Rumble... Rumble...

A commotion occurred outside her office as someone ran through the corridor. Rachel had a good idea who and began counting down.

Three... Two... One...

Bam!

Someone slammed open her office door as if intending to break it.

"Vice Leader! We have a problem!"

As expected, Fermin had barged in. She immediately shut the door and shouted, "An article popped up in Korea!"

"Is that so?" Rachel calmly replied with a nod.

She didn't feel surprised about an article since she had more than one million members in her fan club.

Fermin showed it to Rachel, who still felt smug about herself. Rachel began trembling when she read the article.

[EXTRION Hathshire's CEO is rumored to be dating the English Royal Court's vice leader.]

Ding!

It felt as if a gong rang out in her head and she stood flabbergasted after reading the article.

“W-What is this?” she muttered and doubted whether it was just a bad dream.

However, anger welled up in her when she realized it was real. Who in their right mind would write this cheap tabloid?!

These types of articles usually contacted the people themselves to confirm the rumor before releasing it. This had been the industry standard since time immemorial.

To think they would look down on England this much... Wait a minute... What if this was all a ploy hatched by EXTRION's CEO?

Rachel's eyes trembled from the anger and shock. That could be the case. No, that probably was the case since certain industries often used such tactics.

“Should we release a statement?” Fermin carefully asked.

“Please prepare one at once and step out of my office for now,” Rachel said with seething anger.

She immediately browsed through her smartwatch contacts for a specific name. Her finger trembled when she found the name.

“Hoo... Haa...” she inhaled and exhaled a few times to calm herself and tapped the call button.

The phone rang a few times before he finally picked up.

— Hello?

Kim Hajin's voice came from the other end.

Rachel flinched when she heard his voice. It seemed that he had seen the news as well.

“Hajin?”

— Yes?

She suddenly felt self-conscious and began stuttering, “Uhm... the thing is... did you perhaps... see the article... by any chance?”

— Ah, yes. Do you mean the one where you were dating someone? It was on the morning news too.

What she feared most had happened. Rachel grabbed her hair in frustration.

“That... you shouldn't believe it... It's not true...”

— Oh, it's not?

“Never. Over my dead body. That would never happen.”

— Over your dead body?

“Of course! Yes! Never ever!”

Kim Hajin became silent for a few seconds before sighing.

— Ah... That's a bit... unfortunate...

“Huh?”

— Anyways, I'm hanging up now. I'm a bit busy, so I'll contact you later. Sigh...

Kim Hajin ended the call without any further explanation.

Rachel stood dumbfounded for a while before her body began trembling again. She plopped to the floor like a doll cut from its strings.

“That... That basta...” she muttered.

Rachel immediately sent a message to EXTRION Hathshire’s CEO. She asked if he was the culprit behind the article, but he didn’t reply.

Of course, he didn’t reply since Kim Hajin just said he was busy. He was drawing up plans with Kim Hoseop on how to develop not only the English Royal Court guild, but all of London.

* * *

Rachel couldn’t help but be conscious of Kim Hajin after the article came out. Of course, he reassured her with his awkward messages and laughed it off.

[Hehe, I’m alright. I’m sure you’ll tell me what happened later on.]

He didn’t seem alright at all to her. She could tell that it bothered him. He wouldn’t be able to fool her after they fought together with their lives on the line. They had spent countless days and nights together in their dreams.

“Vice Leader! Vice Leader!” a staffer urgently whispered to her as she spaced out at the podium.

“Oh... yes...” Rachel regained her senses and grabbed the mic.

She had been invited to give a speech at the Britain Academy today in their largest hall with almost every student in attendance. They all gathered to see England’s pride and future, the one and only princess and vice leader.

The crowd clapped and cheered when she grabbed the mic. Rachel bowed at their enthusiasm and recited her speech.

“I always hated myself for such a long time. I sincerely loathed myself because I kept failing and disappointing people with my shortcomings...”

She shared how she broke through her limits by overcoming her self-loathing. She shared how a positive mindset coupled with her training allowed her to progress. Then she showcased her ability to harmonize spirits that she gained from the general assembly.

“Thank you for your hard work.”

“Thank you.”

Rachel finished her speech and rode her limousine to where the ribbon-cutting ceremony would take place.

The English Royal Court called their new state-of-the-art training facility the Raid Ark. The guild members and Britain Academy students would be able to train there together.

She arrived at the training facility that spanned thirty-three thousand square meters.

“Welcome, Your Highness.”

The prime minister, guild executives, Britain Academy’s dean, and various government officials had already arrived.

“Thank you. Where is the CEO?” Rachel asked.

“He has not arrived yet,” the prime minister replied.

She had a lot to say to EXTRION’s CEO. Something along the lines of, Do you know what sort of trouble you caused because of the rumor you spread? She began loading the bullets to shoot him with and wanted to give him a piece of her mind once they met.

Fermin and the other guild members busily chatted away with each other.

“How much were his total assets again?”

“Who knows? All I know is that he has enough money to buy an entire country.”

“I heard this is the first time he’s appearing in public, right?”

“Yeah, that proves how much he likes our Vice Leader!”

They only talked about EXTRION’s CEO.

Fermin listened to all the gossip with a mischievous smile. However, she felt surprised when she looked sideways and saw a familiar face.

“Huh? Hajin?” she muttered in disbelief. Her voice hadn’t been that loud, but Rachel’s ears somehow perked up at those words.

Rachel immediately turned and saw Kim Hajin arriving with his attendants.

“Ack!”

She gasped and immediately ran towards Kim Hajin. Tons of questions filled her mind like, Why is he here?

The prime minister and government officials all glared at Kim Hajin when she ran over to him.

The prime minister looked at Rachel happily skipping over like a kitten running to its owner. He finally understood why she had been so hesitant about the dinner meeting.

“Look into that guy,” the prime minister discreetly said to one of his agents.

“Hajin! What brings you here?” Rachel asked while trying her best to hide how happy she felt.

“Well, I had some business to attend to and I heard you were here so... I came to meet you haha... ha... ha...” Kim Hajin awkwardly laughed.

Rachel failed to catch the meaning behind his awkward laugh.

“Ah... Is that so? Come, follow me,” she said.

“Huh?”

Rachel grabbed his hand and dragged him around to meet various people. She introduced him to the prime minister, the other ministers, the dean, and the VIPs who ran the country.

Kim Hajin didn't like being dragged around and forced to meet people, but he tried his best not to show it since it was Rachel showing him around. He could only bitterly smile and shake the hands of everyone she introduced him to.

“Ah, just give me a moment Hajin. There's something I want to give you. I'll be right back,” Rachel said as she suddenly recalled something.

The prime minister and other officials from the palace approached him with visible hostility as soon as she left.

“Who are you?” they asked with apparent hostility.

“Ah... I'm Rachel's friend,” Kim Hajin awkwardly replied.

“Rachel?” the prime minister frowned and scanned Kim Hajin from head to toe. He wore an expensive suit, but the fact that some commoner even tried to dress like them was laughable.

Then the prime minister received a message on his smartwatch from his agent.

[It seems he's just another typical person who struck it rich.]

The prime minister smirked and spoke in a condescending tone,

“You... I don’t know what kind of relationship you have with the princess, but I hope you know your place.”

“Huh? Ah, yes. I’m well aware of my place,” Kim Hajin replied with a smile.

“That’s a relief,” the prime minister replied while still scornfully looking at Kim Hajin, but his expression immediately softened when Rachel returned. “So you were one of our princess’ friends. I hope you enjoy the banquet.”

“Huh? Oh, yes, thank you,” Kim Hajin replied.

“But when is our guest of honor coming?” The Britain Academy dean asked while sipping on champagne.

The identity of EXTRION Hathshire’s CEO was veiled in secrecy. Not a single soul knew him, but he was publicly revealing himself for the first time just to see Rachel.

They all scornfully looked at Kim Hajin for this reason. They wanted him gone before their esteemed guest arrived.

“I suggest you give him a call,” the prime minister said.

Rachel glanced at Kim Hajin. He avoided her gaze and nervously looked around their surroundings.

In the end, Rachel was forced to call that person with her smartwatch because all the officials kept pressuring her.

Side Stories 42

Dream in a Dream (42)

Rachel called EXTRION's CEO, who was supposed to attend the ribbon-cutting ceremony today.

Ring... Ring... Ring... Ring...

A crease formed on her forehead. The ceremony would begin at 6:00 P.M. and it was already 5:50 P.M., but the man still hadn't arrived.

Ring... Ring... Ring... Ring...

She didn't like people who took promises lightly and especially those who took their sweet time answering a call.

Ring... Ring... Ring... Ring...

The dial tone kept ringing. It was the only sound that echoed in her ears and began annoying her.

— Hello?

“Yes, hello.”

The CEO finally answered, but his voice continued to echo.

Rachel tilted her head in confusion at the poor connection.

“Hello?”

— Yes, hello.

“Yes, hello.”

She was hearing his voice for the first time, but it sounded oddly familiar for some reason. Not only that, the people around her suddenly began acting strange. Everyone froze and looked at the same place in horror.

Rachel also looked in the same direction when...

“Huh?” she gasped without realizing it.

Kim Hajin looked at her with a mischievous smile and spoke into his smartwatch.

“Nice to meet you, Rachel. My name is Im Jinha.”

— Nice to meet you, Rachel. My name is Im Jinha.

The sound echoed again.

Kim Hajin ended the call and looked at Rachel, who remained flabbergasted.

“Im Jinha. Jinha in reverse is Im Hajin, right?”

“...!”

An exclamation mark literally appeared on top of Rachel’s head and she suddenly recalled the messages she sent the CEO. She slowly grimaced as tears welled up in her eyes and glared at Kim Hajin. Then she covered her face and ran away.

“Excuse me...” the prime minister carefully said as he approached Kim Hajin after Rachel left.

“Yes?” Kim Hajin replied with a smile.

“It’s nice to meet you... Haha... Haha... Ha...” the prime minister awkwardly greeted him and bowed with cold sweat forming on his forehead.

“Ah, it’s fine. After all, I was the one pulling a prank. Shall we proceed with the ribbon-cutting ceremony? Of course, we’ll have to call back the person who ran away,” Kim Hajin nonchalantly said while pointing at Rachel.

She hid behind the ornamental plants decorating the venue. Her bright red ears and cheeks stood out among the greenery.

* * *

The ribbon-cutting ceremony proceeded smoothly.

Kim Hajin explained his plans to develop not only the English Royal Court, but all of London. The prime minister nodded in awe along with the other officials as they agreed to his plans.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony ended without a hitch and Rachel guided Kim Hajin to a famous restaurant she booked in advance.

“...”

“...”

The entire restaurant was empty except for the two of them.

Rachel stole glances at him amid their silence. Only the sound of their clinking cutlery could be heard. She had a hard time lifting her head from the embarrassment.

“Don’t worry about it too much. It’s my fault, so you don’t have to be self-conscious about it. I never expected you to take it so seriously,” Kim Hajin said as he bitterly laughed.

Rachel glared at him and retorted, “That’s right! How could you pull... such a... mean... prank...”

Her voice slowly grew quieter until she hung her head again.

“I think I gave you a lot of hints though. I mean, was the name not enough?”

“Korean isn’t my native language. I didn’t think of rearranging the name.”

Kim Hajin warmly smiled at her and set down his knife. The two of them barely touched their food. Rachel simply felt too nervous, but Kim Hajin felt the same too.

“There’s something serious I want to tell you today, Rachel,” he said in a deep voice.

Rachel looked up at him and her cheeks blushed when he mentioned something serious.

Don’t tell me... Is it that?

“Ehem... Ehem...” Kim Hajin cleared his throat a few times and wiped his mouth with a napkin.

Rachel hid her trembling hands under the table, but her heart kept pounding faster.

“This... will you take a look at this?” Kim Hajin said as he showed her his smartwatch gallery.

Rachel held her hands together and looked at the hologram projected from his smartwatch. It showed a small and cute girl who looked like a smaller version of herself. She immediately recognized the little girl.

“Oh, it’s Evandel,” she said.

“This little girl is... Huh? Eh? Eh? What did you just say?” Kim Hajin asked. His eyes widened in surprise as if he had seen a ghost.

Rachel tilted her head in confusion before replying, “You told me in our dream, right?”

“Hmm? Oh...”

Kim Hajin couldn't exactly remember what he said or did in his dream. It wouldn't be a dream if he remembered everything in the first place.

"Did I? I can't remember what happened in the dream..."

"You told me that you fed a seed my blood and nurtured it."

"Huh? Ah... that sounds about right. I guess I did tell you in the dream," Kim Hajin said with a nod.

"Then, where is the child right now?" Rachel asked. She really wanted to meet Evandel. An unexplainable joy and urge welled up inside her.

"Give me a moment..." Kim Hajin said as he called someone on his smartwatch.

He said a few things over the phone and exactly three minutes passed before a child entered the restaurant only occupied by them.

Rachel immediately recognized her. The little girl wore a hat and sunglasses, but she was certainly Evandel.

Evandel carefully walked over to their table with Hayang in her arms.

"Ah..." Rachel gasped before she immediately stood and walked over to Evandel.

It definitely felt strange. They had just met for the first time, but it felt like reuniting with a long lost relative.

"Are you Evandel?" Rachel asked.

Evandel looked up at Rachel and blinked a few times. Tears began welling up in her eyes.

Could she somehow instinctively tell that she came from Rachel?

"It's alright. You don't have to cry... Heup!" Rachel smiled at the little girl, but a sharp pain suddenly struck her. It felt like a sharp object had stabbed her in the forehead.

“Excuse me...” Evandel meekly muttered.

Rachel grimaced from the pain, but immediately smiled at the girl.

“It’s been a long time. I missed you.”

Why did she say it’s been a long time and why did she say that she missed her?

Rachel couldn’t understand it herself after saying those words. Perhaps she felt too nervous about meeting the girl that she made a mistake? She decided to ignore it and knelt to look the little girl in the eyes.

“I... missed you... too...” Evandel said as she slowly stepped towards Rachel and hugged her.

Kim Hajin watched them hug and couldn’t help but smile. He felt somewhat proud of himself. He was also in disbelief that the issue he thought to be insurmountable was solved so easily.

* * *

“Wow! Wow!”

I went to Clancy Islet with Evandel and Rachel.

Evandel exclaimed as she looked around here and there. The luxury island seemed like a mystical place for a curious and energetic child like her.

“But don’t you think people will misunderstand? Evandel looks so much like you,” I asked Rachel while holding a balloon and looking at Evandel.

“Hmm? Let them misunderstand if they want. I decided a long time ago not to be so conscious about what others think of me. Besides, there aren't that many people today since the island's reopening is tomorrow," Rachel nonchalantly replied.

"I see..."

"Rachel!"

Evandel approached Rachel and extended her hand out. Rachel looked at me before grasping Evandel's hand.

The two began walking while holding hands and I watched them from behind.

"Hmm... I wonder what it is..." I muttered and shook my head.

It felt like I was forgetting something important. This feeling at the back of my mind kept telling me that, but Evandel's voice snapped me out of it.

"Hajin! Hajin!"

Rachel turned around and looked at me too. She brightly smiled and motioned for me to come over.

I walked over to them with a smile and held Evandel's hand. I held Evandel's left hand while Rachel held her right hand and we walked with Evandel between us.

* * *

"Nice to meet you all. My name is Rachel and I am the vice leader of the English Royal Court guild..." Rachel greeted the Britain Academy students at the hall in Raid Ark.

"Your efforts will never betray you! Negative thoughts will only hamper your growth and lower your self-esteem!"

She conducted her speech in a stern voice and stressed the importance of training to the students.

“Do you understand?!”

She tried to imitate the infamous tiger instructor from Cube and it seemed to work as the students tensed up.

“Now, we will start with a very simple test.”

Rachel began to search if anyone among the students could also use spirits like her. She summoned her wind spirit, Windy, and asked it to sniff out the students.

— There is one person here who possesses quite the talent.

Windy transmitted to Rachel, who nodded in response.

People talented with spirits were uncommon, but not as rare as they were believed to be. The only reason they were thought to be rare was because of other selfish elementalists.

The first elementalist only took in one disciple, Shin Yeohwa. Likewise, Shin Yeohwa only took in one disciple, which was Rachel.

“You, what’s your name?” Rachel asked the girl in a strict voice.

The brown-haired girl began trembling after Rachel showed a completely different attitude from her public persona.

“My name is Jerin!” the girl replied.

“Follow me,” Rachel said.

“Eeek! I apologize!”

“You did nothing wrong, so be quiet and follow me.”

Rachel planned to separate her and enroll her in the Elementalist Academy she created.

She spent almost half a day at Raid Ark before returning to her guild office.

“Hoo...” Rachel sat in her chair and sighed in relief. She blankly stared at the ceiling for ten minutes before leaving her office again.

She walked along the corridor before stopping at an office with a nameplate that read, [EXTRION Hathshire – Kim Hajin].

“Ehem...”

Rachel created an actual office within the guild for Kim Hajin, who now became an important partner to the English Royal Court.

Knock... Knock...

She composed herself and knocked on the door, which suddenly swung open.

Rachel flinched and jumped back in surprise, “Hiiik! That surprised me...”

“Huh? When did you get here? Did I ask you to come? Rather, are you alright?”

“Ah... I got here just now... just now...”

“Well, that’s great. Come on in.”

Rachel grinned and entered his office. Kim Hajin sat in his chair and Rachel took a seat across from him.

She felt good looking at him like this. It helped to recharge her energy for some reason.

“How’s the office? Do you like it?” she asked.

The English Royal Court went all out while building this office for him.

Kim Hajin also stayed here with Evandel at a luxury penthouse he bought a while back. This sixty-floor building boasted one of the most expensive price tags in all of London.

Rumors said that Kim Hajin, as EXTRION's CEO, owned a unit in every major city in the world or something like that. Fermin mentioned that he looked more attractive because of his wealth.

Rachel shook her head and tried to forget the mischievous things that Fermin mentioned.

"I like it. Going to work is fun too. Oh, right," Kim Hajin suddenly stopped mid-sentence and brought out a sack.

Whoosh!

A Pomeranian with golden fur suddenly jumped out from it.

The puppy momentarily surprised Rachel, but she caught the cute furry creature and hugged it.

"Wow! So cute! I really like animals. This one looks so cute and innocent!" Rachel exclaimed and showed her feminine side.

The cute furry creature huffed a few times before opening its mouth and talking, "Hehe... It's Rachel... Hehe..."

"Huh? Kyaaah!"

Rachel screamed and jumped back from the puppy, but the puppy only giggled and walked towards Rachel while calling her name.

"Rachel."

"What... What is... this?"

Kim Hajin and the puppy both had mischievous smiles on their faces.

"It's one of Evandel's tricks," Kim Hajin told her.

“Evandel?”

“Yes.”

The puppy slowly transformed and turned into Evandel. She proudly stood with both hands on her waist and said, “Hehehe, I bet you were surprised!”

“Geez... really...” Rachel sighed in relief and hugged Evandel, who continued giggling in her embrace.

Rachel patted the little girl’s soft golden hair and looked at Kim Hajin.

He smiled and walked over to them. The sight of Rachel hugging Evandel reflected in his eyes. He felt a sense of happiness and sadness at the same time deep within his heart.

Wiiing! Wiiing!

A siren suddenly blared. This particular siren meant an emergency had occurred.

“Let’s go,” Kim Hajin spoke first.

Rachel nodded and looked at the little girl in her arms. “Evandel, you stay here.”

The two of them ran out as soon as they received the coordinates on their smartwatches.

“Wait a minute!” Kim Hajin shouted.

He went to an empty area and opened a briefcase that suddenly turned into a helicopter.

Rachel took a few steps back in surprise as Kim Hajin called out to her, “Hop on. This will be much faster than running.”

She stood there flabbergasted and couldn’t believe a mere briefcase transformed into a helicopter. Soon, she snapped out of it and hopped into the helicopter along with other guild members passing by.

“Hold on tight. We’ll be there in two minutes,” Kim Hajin said as he skillfully maneuvered the controls.

* * *

Beep... Beep... Beep...

Beep... Beep... Beep...

“Ugh...”

Rachel groaned as her alarm woke her the next day. Her head felt like it would split in half. She grabbed her aching head and sat on the bed only to find Kim Hajin sleeping beside her.

“...”

She absentmindedly stared at the man sound asleep next to her when her eyes suddenly widened and she looked around her surroundings. She was in a penthouse, on the same bed, and under the same sheets as him. Then, she suddenly recalled what happened last night.

She went to a bar with her guild members after feeling good about making quick work of the monsters that appeared. They drank... and drank... and drank... and... she couldn’t remember anything after that.

However, she found herself in bed with him now.

Rachel’s face turned bright red as she tried her best to remember if anything happened. However, she could only recall drinking and chatting with her guild members. There was also the part where she wanted to get drunk, so she purposely drank some hard liquor...

“Haangmm...”

“...!”

Kim Hajin rolled over and she almost jumped out of bed when he moved. He looked so peaceful while sleeping. He was certainly still asleep.

“Phew...”

He showed no signs of waking up and slept like a baby.

Rachel stretched and got out of bed.

She decided to look around Kim Hajin’s house. The penthouse wasn’t just huge, but also luxurious. Every piece of furniture in the unit had a certain brand.

Huh? Jinzel? Is this really Jinzel? Is this for real? That Jinzel that costs billions of won and is only sold at auctions? Rachel doubted her eyes.

“Wow... It’s my first time seeing one in person...” she muttered while staring at the furniture.

Jinzel was considered a premium among premium brands and even Rachel knew them. No wonder she didn’t feel tired at all despite drinking so much last night.

Rachel nervously gulped and looked at Kim Hajin.

One second passed... two seconds... three seconds...

“Yaaawn...”

Rachel contemplated for three whole seconds before yawning and lying back down next to him. Her heart pounded, but she forced herself to fall asleep.

However, she felt somewhat uncomfortable and tossed and turned for a bit. Then, her head finally found the perfect place on his arm.

“Hehe...”

Rachel giggled in satisfaction after resting on his arm. She slowly closed her eyes with a smile and feigned ignorance.

Side Stories 43

Dream in a Dream (43)

“Haaa...” Rachel sighed in relief after lying in bed for fifteen minutes.

She couldn't sleep for a variety of reasons. The biggest one keeping her up was the conversation going on in the [English Royal Court Group Chat].

[Marcus: Wow! It's freaking huge in here!]

[Kayle: Awesome!]

[Fermin: The bathroom is bigger than my house;;]

The other guild members seemed to be in the building as well.

Rachel left a note before tiptoeing out of the room.

An absurdly spacious corridor greeted her along with various furniture and doors. It seemed like the penthouse used up the entire floor with so much space.

Rachel walked along the corridor and heard someone's footsteps coming towards her. She straightened her posture and cleared her throat.

Fermin peeked out from the corner and greeted Rachel with a sleazy smile, “Vice Leader.”

Nothing seemed out of the ordinary about Fermin's demeanor, so Rachel decided to carefully ask, “Uhm... Fermin... I... No, did something happen yesterday... by any chance?”

“Hmm? Yesterday?” Fermin tilted her head in confusion before flashing another sleazy smile. Her smile turned evil as she tapped on her smartwatch.

Tap... Tap... Tap...

“I knew you would say that, so I recorded everything. Vice Leader promised to give us all a vacation that day,” Fermin said as she projected a hologram that showed what happened last night.

“...”

Rachel stared dumbfoundedly at the video.

— Thank you for everything you’ve done for us... We only managed thanks to you Hajin...

She saw a very drunk version of herself stubbornly clinging onto Kim Hajin. She had her arms wrapped around his and kept rubbing her face on his shoulder. Fermin jokingly touched Kim Hajin’s shoulder and Rachel glared at her before smacking her hand away.

— How dare you!

“N... No!” Rachel cried out as she turned off the video.

It was more accurate to say that she channeled out her mana and destroyed the hologram. Her face turned ghastly pale like she had seen a ghost.

Fermin mischievously smiled and began teasing Rachel, “Why? I thought you were extremely cute last night. I’m sure the CEO found you cute as well. As for the other guild members... I think they were probably too drunk to even remember anything.”

“Ah... That’s a relief...”

“Oh right, you kept clinging onto him until we got here. So... did something happen between you two?” Fermin asked while feigning ignorance.

It seemed the guild members now treated Kim Hajin as their CEO too.

Rachel decided to act thick-skinned and said, “No... Nothing happened... and that person in the video isn’t me...”

“Then who is it?”

“Who knows? There are a lot of blonde women in England, you know?”

“...”

“Please delete the video.”

“Well, I just want you to know that I’m not against it. In fact, this might be a good thing.”

“What is?” Rachel glared at her.

Fermin snickered before snapping her fingers. “Oh right! Have you noticed most of the furniture here is from Jinzel?”

“Yeah...”

Anyone remotely interested in furniture would know the premium Jinzel brand. One couldn’t simply buy this brand even if they had the money. However, the fact that this brand littered the entire penthouse was a testament to Hajin’s enormous wealth.

“These are really good! I took a nap on one of them and felt like a newborn child! I think he has lots of beds from this brand. Do you think he’ll give us one if we ask?”

“Don’t, we’re already troubling him enough,” Rachel crossed her arms over her chest to look as strict as possible.

* * *

Summer neared as the English Royal Court planned to raid a dungeon.

They aimed to fully conquer and subjugate one of the ten dungeons that appeared in England.

However, their vice leader Rachel announced that she wouldn't participate. She made this decision so the guild members could gain real experience without her help. Each hero had to break through their own limits for the guild to grow stronger as well.

Of course, Rachel didn't want any of them getting hurt. She ordered their data department to establish a special task force and thoroughly analyze every dungeon's mana density and monsters.

However, she soon realized just how much she had neglected the guild's administrative sectors. The data department performed quite poorly. No, that would be an understatement. Most of their skilled personnel had left and their equipment had been sold off during their harsh financial times.

Rachel pushed herself to the limits and investigated seven of the ten dungeons herself. Marcus, Fermin, and the other guild members fortunately finished investigating the remaining three.

"Haaa..."

However, investigating a dungeon wasn't an easy task. She couldn't even finish one dungeon after twelve hours without rest.

Snore... Snore...

Evandel's snoring could be heard in Rachel's office. The little girl had fallen asleep while waiting for Rachel to finish working.

Rachel felt bad as she watched the sleeping child, but a knock on the door interrupted her.

Knock... Knock!

"Yes, come in," Rachel responded in a tired voice.

Kim Hajin entered and she straightened her posture without realizing it.

“Are you working overtime again?” he asked while placing an energy drink on her desk.

“My workload just somehow keeps increasing...” Rachel tried to sound nonchalant and hide her nervousness. She hoped that she sounded normal.

Kim Hajin sat on the sofa and stroked Evandel’s head. He looked at the mountain of documents on Rachel’s desk.

“What kind of work is it?” he asked.

“Ah, I’m calculating the dungeons to see if we can raid one...”

Kim Hajin stood and walked over beside her. He took the document from her and asked, “Do you have a pen and paper?”

“Eh? Ah, yes. Here you go...” Rachel replied somewhat flustered.

She became self-conscious about how close they were. Their lips could practically touch if either of them moved an inch closer. She tried her best to suppress her pounding heart and passed him the pen and paper.

“Give me a second,” Kim Hajin said as he scribbled something down.

Rachel initially wondered what he was doing and looked on with curiosity. Her curiosity slowly became replaced with shock.

Kim Hajin quickly drew up the dungeon.

Ironically, Rachel had been working on this for almost half a day. She had to check every piece of information available, consult with experts, and post questions on online forums to barely make sense of the task.

However, this man inches away from her managed to complete it in less than ten minutes.

“What do you think? It should be pretty accurate,” Kim Hajin said as he passed her the finished product.

He not only calculated the mana density and monsters in the dungeon, but even drew the dungeon’s layout.

Rachel dumbfoundedly stared at it before nodding, “I don’t know but... I’m sure everything is right since you’re a genius.”

“Where are the rest?”

“H-Huh?”

“You said there were other dungeons. Give them to me. I’ll do all of them for you.”

Kim Hajin stole all of Rachel’s work with his trustworthy skills. He worked on them for a while and presented her with the finished product. It took him less than an hour to finish all her work.

“Here you go.”

Rachel received two notebooks from him. He had calculated all seven dungeons and compressed their information into two notebooks. Honestly, she felt that this was impossible and wondered if she was dreaming.

“Ah... Thank... Thank you very much...” Rachel spoke while still seemingly dazed.

“Hmm? No problem,” Kim Hajin replied with a smile.

Rachel opened the notebook when Kim Hajin suddenly said, “Oh right, wait a minute.”

He took something out of his bag that looked like blue leather armor.

“Here.”

“What’s this?”

“It’s a gift.”

She stared at him and blinked a few times before checking the blue leather armor. She could instantly tell that it had been crafted with mana and possessed incredible abilities.

“Wow...” she gasped in awe without realizing it.

To be frank, Rachel could feel her materialistic side coming back these days. It may have been because she began using social media again or that the guild’s finances had greatly improved.

Whatever the reason, she started to notice and felt bothered whenever she saw other European heroes bragging about their new equipment.

A gift at this moment simply...

Rachel stared at Kim Hajin without a word. For some reason, he looked extremely handsome today. His jawline and hair made him look like a handsome doll.

“What do you think?” he asked with a smile.

Rachel found him extremely charming and attractive. All her fatigue from working until late at night caused her to... impulsively wrap her arms around him and tightly hug him.

* * *

“There are ten files in total. The dungeon’s interior as well as other information are compiled in them. We just got them vetted from the association last week. They declared the files to be flawless.”

Rachel presented Kim Hajin’s files to everyone at the English Royal Court’s executive meeting. It shocked all the guild executives.

“Then... I guess we don’t have to hesitate any longer. We should start training our members based on the information provided!”

“Yes, please distribute these files to all of our senior members.”

[In-Depth Analysis of Ten Dungeons – by Kim Hajin]

The meeting concluded with Kim Hajin’s files being distributed to all their senior guild members.

Rachel left the meeting room as her secretary walked up to her.

“It’ll soon be time for the press conference.”

“Yes, let’s make our way there now. Please tell them to get ready,” Rachel replied as she fixed her clothes and headed towards the main hall.

The guild members leisurely chatted during their lunch. All of them greeted Rachel whenever she passed by.

Rachel walked with her chest out and her head held high. The leather armor that Kim Hajin gifted her brightly shone as she strutted through the corridor.

* * *

The English Royal Court granted vacations to the guild members who participated in the general assembly. The guild members faced a new dilemma about where to go for their holiday. Their pockets became quite full thanks to the rewards from the general assembly.

A certain generous individual soon resolved their dilemma. That individual suggested they visit South Korea and he would even let them use his private beach and villa during their stay.

“Wow, this is my first time seeing someone with a vacation house in Gangwondo.”

Gangwondo's mountainous terrain featured the most famous dungeon in the world, but the world's most famous vacation spot could also be found east of it. The East Sea's pristine water made it one of the few remaining clean seas in the world. The world-renowned mountain guild, Blessing of the Mountain, also patrolled the mountains overlooking the sea. That made the area around the East Sea much safer and more tranquil. Many considered it an even better place to live than Seoul.

Of course, the price of land reflected all of that. Owning a vacation house there was equivalent to owning an entire commercial building in London.

However, Kim Hajin owned tens of thousands of acres and his private beach resided in an even more expensive area.

"I know right? Wow, they say this sea is safe to swim in and there aren't any monsters."

"Yeah, it's clear of monsters."

Marcus, Dale, Karen, and the others who participated in the general assembly looked towards the East Sea's horizon in awe.

The white, sandy beach and the beautiful landscape meticulously crafted with magitech captivated them. It felt as if the open sea was enticing them to jump in.

However, they had to unpack their luggage first before enjoying a swim. The nearly dozen guild members became encumbered with the sheer amount of luggage they brought.

"Everyone, follow me," Rachel led the way with her blue leather armor brightly shining under the sun.

The guild members snickered at Rachel, who insisted on wearing her leather armor instead of casual wear. This wasn't the first time she did this. She wore that leather armor everywhere. It was a given that she wore it while subjugating monsters, but she even wore it during meetings, press conferences, and meals.

“This is the place,” Rachel said while standing in front of a door.

She sounded like the owner, but the guild members didn’t mind as they stared in awe at the lush green garden that spread out towards the horizon.

“Wow...”

“What the hell...”

“Really... does he even live in the same world as us?”

How was this even possible in the first place? The penthouse they slept in last time already shocked them enough, but this garden looked even larger than most parks. Also, who kept the grass so neatly trimmed and all the flowers looking so healthy?

As they all admired the lush garden...

“Welcome,” Kim Hajin opened the door and greeted them with Evandel and numerous staff.

The guild members became dumbfounded when they saw the cute, little girl with blonde hair.

“Shall we eat first?” Kim Hajin asked them.

* * *

The English Royal Court members ran to the beach after eating. All of them dressed to play in the water.

Rachel, Evandel, and Kim Hajin didn’t join and built sandcastles on the beach instead.

“...”

Rachel stole a glance at Kim Hajin. He didn’t seem too fond of the water for some reason.

“Hey, Rachel,” Evandel called out to her while poking her blue leather armor.

“Hmm?” Rachel looked down at her.

Evandel innocently looked at her before asking, “Don’t you want to go back, Rachel?”

“...?” Rachel blinked a few times.

A strange sensation spread all over her at Evandel’s words, but it instantly disappeared.

“Huh? What did you say?” Rachel asked just to make sure.

What did Evandel mean by wanting to go back? Did she perhaps mean to go into the water?

Evandel shook her head and brightly smiled, “No, it’s nothing.”

“...”

It simply felt too strange. Rachel placed a hand on her chest and could feel her heart wildly beating. She tightly hugged Evandel out of frustration.

Rachel smiled and asked her, “Do you want to play in the water with me?”

“Hmm... I’m okay as long as I’m with Rachel,” Evandel replied.

However, Evandel looked a bit sad for some reason and Rachel couldn’t understand why.

Rachel looked towards the sea and the horizon. The sparkling surface and the gentle waves felt so peaceful, but she couldn’t shake off the strange feeling that made her heart pound.

Side Stories 44

Dream in a Dream (44)

The guild members returned to the villa and gathered at the rooftop by dusk. They lit a campfire underneath the orange sky and began grilling barbeque.

Rachel looked at the peaceful scenery of her guild members chatting, the gentle breeze blowing from the sea, and the campfire crackling in the background. Such a peaceful sight felt unfamiliar to her.

She looked around seemingly downcast before spotting Kim Hajin. She decided to approach him and whisper in his ear, “Hajin...”

He turned around with a smile, “Yes?”

“...”

She wanted to say a lot of things, but felt afraid.

Did Kim Hajin also feel the strange sensation from before? Or did he not feel it? She wasn’t sure which answer would scare her more.

“No, it’s nothing,” Rachel replied and shook her head.

Kim Hajin smiled and held her hand as she bitterly smiled.

“Hey! Put that down!”

The guild members’ rowdy shouting interrupted them. Marcus had snatched the expensive whiskey that Fermin brought. He acted as annoyingly as possible while running away from Fermin chasing him. The guild members laughed while looking at them playing cat and mouse.

Rachel ended up laughing at them as well. She looked up at the night sky again. Bright, sparkling stars littered the sky with the moon shining brighter than all of them. The view looked surreal.

“...”

She tightly held Kim Hajin’s hand and he tilted his head at her before smiling and locking their fingers together. Rachel’s face turned bright red before she shifted her gaze to Evandel, who fell asleep beside her. Evandel looked so innocent as she slept.

Then, Rachel suddenly recalled what Evandel said earlier in the day.

— Don’t you want to go back?

She knew she hadn’t heard wrong and she felt certain that Evandel was referring to this world...

Crackle!

Rachel flinched when the fire crackled and spat out embers. Kim Hajin smiled at her.

Only then did the guild members finally notice the two of them.

“Ack!” Rachel shrieked in surprise and quickly carried the sleeping Evandel.

Evandel peeked her eyes open and looked at Rachel. She buried her face in Rachel’s shoulder and went back to sleep.

Everyone found the sight of Rachel hugging Evandel quite cute and heartwarming. All of them looked on with gentle smiles.

* * *

The English Royal Court’s preparation for their dungeon raid went smoothly. Rachel oversaw the entire process and didn’t forget to take her breaks.

She thoroughly enjoyed her time with Evandel as they went to the amusement park, aquarium, concerts, theatrical plays, movies, etc. Things she couldn't enjoy due to her usual mountain of work. Of course, Kim Hajin tagged along.

“Ack!” Rachel frowned and screamed in the center of Seoul.

The slender crane was either too weak or unwilling and kept failing to grab a doll.

“Ugh! Hey!”

Rachel failed to grab a doll for the nineteenth time today. She couldn't help but scream in frustration.

Evandel sighed as she watched Rachel screaming in frustration. She patted and comforted Rachel.

“It's alright. We can just order one online.”

“Let me try,” Kim Hajin stepped forward.

Rachel moved aside while ferociously glaring at the crane in the machine.

You punk... I'm going to smash you to pieces if you don't properly work this time! she inwardly threatened.

“Huh?”

However, the crane obediently listened to Kim Hajin. Its three arms shook a few times before grabbing and delivering the Pororo^[1] doll that Evandel and Rachel wanted.

“Here,” Kim Hajin gave the doll to Evandel.

Evandel smiled and tightly hugged the doll, but Rachel puffed her cheeks as if to say, I like dolls too!

Kim Hajin immediately went back to the machine and grabbed another doll after he noticed Rachel sulking.

“Thank you...” Rachel said in a small voice and smiled while hugging the doll.

The sight of her smiling and hugging the doll looked exactly like Evandel.

Kim Hajin laughed and said, “Shall we go?”

“Yes.”

“Yeah.”

Rachel and Evandel replied at the same time.

“Run! Run! Run!” Evandel excitedly shouted as she ran through the streets.

Rachel and Kim Hajin busily chased after her. Kim Hajin suddenly held Rachel’s hand and their fingers interlocked. Rachel couldn’t suppress her smile. She could only hide her embarrassment by pulling down her hat and pushing up her sunglasses. Of course, she smiled like a fool underneath all that.

“...!”

Rachel suddenly stopped in her tracks and everything around her stopped as well. Evandel shuddered and immediately turned around.

“Hmm?” Kim Hajin tilted his head at her.

Rachel looked at him and saw his face turning blurry like a mirage.

“What’s wrong?” he asked.

She shook her head and replied, “It’s nothing...”

Rachel composed herself and took a step forward. The world around her began moving again.

She continued walking as if nothing happened, but felt the corners of her eyes growing wetter. She wiped her eyes and found tears.

“Ah...”

Why was she crying? She couldn't pinpoint the reason why, but wanted to know.

“Evandel,” she called out through the busy street in Seoul.

“Yes?” Evandel replied and slowly walked to Rachel.

Rachel patted her head as the sun shone on them. Evandel's eyes sparkled even brighter while looking at Rachel.

“Shall we go back?” Rachel asked in a trembling voice.

The same strange sensation spread throughout her surroundings and disappeared, but she only focused on Evandel's response.

Evandel looked around before flashing a sad smile, “Not now. Let's play a bit more and go back when Rachel wants to.”

“Okay...” Rachel said before hugging her. She patted Evandel on the back and muttered, “Thank you...”

I still want to do a lot of things here. I want to be a bit happier. If this is all a dream, then I want to enjoy it a little longer. I'm allowed to be happy to my heart's content, right? Really... that should be alright...

* * *

Rachel's days went on as usual. These normal days made her so happy. The happiness from each passing day snowballed into even greater happiness. It allowed her to forget about her burdens and even her traumas.

She felt just as scared as she was happy. Rachel feared waking up from this dream. She didn't even know if she had the right to be happy like this.

However, those negative thoughts slowly disappeared as time went by. Soon, she realized that she couldn't delay her decision any longer. She knew she would become trapped in this world the longer she remained happy in it. She would slowly fade away like her negative thoughts.

Rachel couldn't let that happen. She was the princess of a nation and the leader of a guild. She wouldn't abandon her duties just to be happy and engraved this conviction in her heart so she would never forget or throw it away.

Rachel went to the Cornwall Lighthouse to sort out her conflicting thoughts. She sat on a bench and watched the waves crashing against the rocks. She had to make her decision now.

She couldn't afford to stay forever even if it allowed her to be the happiest person in the world. She could continue to be happy here and forget everything about the real world.

Of course, she could close her eyes and turn a blind eye to reality. She could live happily ever after if she closed her eyes like Lancaster told her.

However...

"What are you doing here?"

Kim Hajin popped up when she least expected him. Rachel looked at him and tried not to look surprised. After all, the Kim Hajin in this world showed up whenever she wanted him to.

Kim Hajin sat beside her on the bench and Rachel naturally held his hand like they always did.

"Hajin," she whispered while holding his hand.

“Yes?”

“I... Puuu! Puupuuu! Puuuu!”

She was about to say something when a strong sea breeze messed up her hair and a handful of hair went inside her mouth.

Rachel tried her best to spit out her hair.

“Hahaha!” Kim Hajin laughed at her.

Rachel puffed her cheeks and grumbled, “It’s not easy having long hair, you know?”

“Then cut it,” Kim Hajin nonchalantly replied.

“You said you liked long hair last time...” Rachel grumbled.

Kim Hajin reached out and arranged her hair. His warm touch patted her head and he tucked her hair behind her ears.

Rachel felt her heart skip a beat and something deep inside her shook. She wanted to stay like this longer and squeezed his hand tighter.

Rachel faked a cough and asked, “This place has quite a nice view, right?”

“Yes, it’s quite nice here,” Kim Hajin replied while looking at the steadfast lighthouse on top of lush green grass and the never-ending sea beyond.

This place had a stark contrast in colors and was quite famous. Heroes always had to run over and kill the sea monsters whenever the lighthouse sent a warning.

“You see...”

“Yes?”

Rachel leaned on his shoulder.

Kim Hajin looked down and saw his feet beside hers. A mischievous thought flashed across his mind. He took off his shoe and placed his feet on top of hers.

“You see...” Rachel repeated.

“Yes, tell me.”

“That is... Ack!”

Kim Hajin lifted her feet and placed her leg on top of his.

Rachel screamed in a panic when he lifted her. He lifted her by the knee as his hand supported her back like cradling a baby.

“Why?” he asked with a smile.

“Ah... That’s... no, it’s nothing...” Rachel muttered in embarrassment and avoided his gaze.

A little game of him chasing her eyes ensued. He smiled while continuing this mischievous game and found Rachel to be quite cute.

“Eh... Eh! Eh!” Rachel exclaimed before she mustered the courage to tightly hug him.

“Hey, wait a minute. This is...”

“Do you think I like you?” Rachel asked while Kim Hajin became flustered from her sneaky counter-attack.

She was strangely asking someone else about her own feelings that even she wasn’t certain of. She felt that she would never find out if she didn’t muster the courage here and now.

“...?”

Kim Hajin seemed taken aback by her sudden confession, no, question. He soon smiled and awkwardly scratched the back of his neck.

“Who knows... I have no idea... I mean, how could I know?”

Rachel smiled at him, “I guess so, right?”

“Yes,” Kim Hajin replied with an awkward smile.

Rachel decided to ask a slightly different question.

“Should I just give up?”

Kim Hajin had no clue what she would give up on, but he smiled and shook his head.

“No. I don’t know what you’re going to give up on, but not giving up suits you much better... just like a knight full of conviction.”

Was this answer enough for her?

Kim Hajin didn’t seem satisfied with his own answer and rubbed his chin deep in thought. Then he added in a serious tone this time, “I hope you won’t give up because... I felt that this world was worth living in thanks to you, Rachel.”

Rachel’s eyes widened. This was the first time she heard him say something like that and her heart wildly fluttered. It didn’t matter to her if this was the real world or not.

Kim Hajin looked straight into her eyes and confessed, “I’m not a person from this world.”

Rachel felt surprised again. She pondered what he meant, but couldn’t understand no matter how much she racked her brains.

“What do you mean?”

“I’m from another world. It’s probably safe to call me an alien. That world doesn't have monsters, mana, or even heroes. It's a peaceful, yet not-so-peaceful place. Yes... the world we saw together in our dream... that's the world where I'm from."

"Huh?"

Rachel found everything difficult to understand.

Kim Hajin continued without minding her confusion, "That's why I didn't want to live in this world. I wanted to return to my world. After all, my loved ones are in that world and this world is nothing but a fake."

The sea breeze blew stronger, but Rachel's hair didn't end up in a mess this time as Kim Hajin already tied it for her.

He looked deep into Rachel's eyes and said, "But now, that's no longer the case..."

His eyes seemed to be telling her that she was the reason for the change.

Rachel stared back into his eyes as she reached her limits, "Hajin..."

Her heart fluttered.

Am I really dreaming right now? Will all of this disappear once I wake up? Will all of this really disappear?

"Thank you, Rachel."

She suddenly thought of something. It didn't matter if all of this disappeared and the dream ended once she woke up. As long as she didn't forget...

"Then... just a bit longer..." she leaned back on his shoulder and continued, "Let me stay by your side for just a bit longer..."

The wind blew and the sun shone on them.

Rachel wanted to take in all these feelings and engrave them deep in her heart. She didn't want to forget this moment. She had no idea how to describe her feelings... this anxiety coupled with a warmth that felt so familiar, yet foreign...

Now that she thought about it, she never asked for these emotions. Rachel slowly closed her eyes and a voice called out to her.

— Princess...

A familiar garden appeared in her mind and she somehow saw Lancaster standing in it.

— You won't be happy if you leave this place.

Rachel nodded. She knew she wouldn't be happier anywhere else than here. Kim Hajin wouldn't feel the same way as now once she returned to the real world.

Nevertheless, Rachel acted according to her heart.

“My happiness comes from my country's peace and prosperity. My great-grandmother said that this is the duty of the royal household.”

— Those are just excuses...

“I know. I know they're just excuses, but it doesn't matter to me. I've decided not to give up.”

Her response rendered Lancaster speechless. He turned into dust and scattered away in the wind.

“Ah...”

Rachel opened her eyes with Kim Hajin still beside her.

She brightly smiled at him and felt satisfied spending her days in this world that didn't feel like a dream and this person who felt so real... even though this was all just a fleeting dream.

“Hajin,” Rachel called out his name and wrapped her arms around his neck.

She closed her eyes and muttered, “Thank you too...”

Rachel looked at his face, inches away, and closed her eyes again. She slowly moved her lips towards his.

Their lips met.

It was her first kiss.

His lips felt dry and rough, but also tender for some reason.

He seemed surprised as his lips remained stiff. She wanted to open her eyes and look at his expression, but abandoned such thoughts.

She only wanted to focus on this moment right now.

The only thought on her mind during this magical and beautiful moment was...

I don't want to forget this memory even when I wake up.

I hope these memories will always stay with me and give me strength when I feel like giving up.

That's all I want and all I'm asking for...

1. Pororo is a Korean cartoon penguin beloved by children. 🐧

Side Stories 45.1

Dream in a Dream (45)

Rachel went to work the next day.

The guild hall grew crowded and bustled with people early in the morning after the English Royal Court became the center of attention.

The guild members filled the hall with journalists looking to score interviews, students on a site visit, etc.

Rachel composed herself and fixed her clothes before walking into the guild hall.

“Hello, Vice Leader!”

“It’s... It’s an honor to meet you!”

“W-Wow! I’m a huge fan!”

“Yes, yes, thank you very much. Good day to all of you,” Rachel replied while waving to all of them.

She tried her best to reply to everyone while heading to her office and wasn’t used to such attention.

However, Fermin kicked open the door and barged in as soon as Rachel sat in her office.

“Vice Leader, there’s an emergency!”

Rachel was going through the stack of documents on her table when she stopped and looked at Fermin like a deer caught in headlights.

“What happened?”

“Look! Look at this!” Fermin exclaimed and projected a hologram from her smartwatch.

[EXTRION Hathshire CEO Attends a Han River VIP Yacht Party.]

The news article claimed that EXTRION Hathshire’s CEO, Kim Hajin, had attended a yacht party at the Han River. It was already ten in the afternoon in England, which meant it was six in the evening for South Korea. He should still be at the party.

“What about it?” Rachel asked while tilting her head in confusion.

“Ah, what do you mean? What about it?!” Fermin shouted in frustration and projected another hologram.

The picture showed various women wearing extravagant dresses around Kim Hajin. They tried wooing him to the best of their abilities.

Only then did Rachel finally realize the meaning behind Fermin’s words.

“W-What is this?! Are you sure this isn’t photoshopped?!”

“What else could it be? Also, it’s real. Look, they’re flirting with your precious CEO left and right as we speak. Looks like he put something in his shoes to look taller too...”

Kim Hajin was already taller than the average South Korean male, but his shoe heels made him look even taller and nearly flawless when it came to looks.

Rachel frowned and asked, “Should I go there right now?!”

“Yes! Of course, you should!” Fermin fanned Rachel’s jealousy without hesitation.

Rachel stood from her chair and ran to the London portal with Fermin cheering her on from behind. She traveled from London to Seoul in less than three minutes through a VIP portal thanks to her royal status.

The article said he was at a yacht party on the Han River, right?

Rachel used her wind spirit to zoom through the air at a tremendous speed. She spotted the bodyguards guarding the perimeter.

The bodyguards immediately tried to stop her and felt surprised when a blonde woman wearing blue leather armor popped out of nowhere.

However, one of them recognized her, “Huh? Isn’t that Princess Rachel?”

They immediately stood down and thought she had also been invited to the party as a VIP guest. It wasn’t strange for them to think so given her royal status and fame these days.

“I wish to enter,” Rachel declared.

The bodyguard scanned her from head to toe and awkwardly scratched his neck, “Yes... but you are violating the dress code, Your Highness...”

“No way. This is an excellent piece of equipment,” Rachel replied and proudly puffed out her chest to emphasize her leather armor.

The bodyguards inspected her leather armor and noticed that it was indeed an excellent piece of equipment. The leather armor exuded a powerful aura that they had never seen before.

The bodyguards looked at each other before sighing in resignation and nodding.

“Yes, you may enter, Your Highness.”

It was a tough decision for them since this was a VIP party, but it also didn’t make sense to deny a royal at the door because of the dress code policy.

Rachel boarded the yacht that was the size of a cruise after the bodyguards gave her permission.

She stood out like a sore thumb among the crowd wearing luxury dresses and tuxedos, but their gazes didn't bother her as she walked around looking for Kim Hajin.

Soon, she found him in the distance when a waiter suddenly passed her a tray. The waiter seemed to have mistaken her for a fellow staffer.

Anyways, she found Kim Hajin surrounded by a crowd. Some were very famous people that even Rachel recognized. They included famous European heroes, Yi Jiyeon from Essence of the Straits, and even Jin Seyeon from the Temple of Justice.

Only then did Rachel finally realize EXTRION Hathshire's greatness.

She put down the tray and walked over to him.

Some of the men and women in the area noisily chattered among themselves.

"Somebody call the guards! Some woman wearing leather armor is here!"

"..."

However, Rachel ignored them and only looked at Kim Hajin with several women surrounding him. Anger welled up inside her and she thought it was rude of him to attend a party without informing her.

"Hmm?" Kim Hajin also spotted Rachel.

She pouted when she knew that he saw her.

"Ah, she's here just in time," Kim Hajin brightly smiled as if he had been waiting for her all this time.

He grabbed her by the arm and pulled her into his embrace. Rachel flinched in surprise at the sudden turn of events.

“Let me introduce her,” Kim Hajin said to the people around while tightly holding her with one arm.

“This is my beloved,” he publicly declared to everyone.

Rachel felt like she would have a heart attack. She literally felt like her heart would burst and stop at any moment from how fast it beat.

“Ah, no wonder. I thought that would be the case. It was from during that time, right?” Jin Seyeon asked with a smile.

The women flirting with Kim Hajin a moment ago clicked their tongues in disappointment.

“Would you like to greet them as well, Rachel?” Kim Hajin asked.

“...”

Rachel slightly trembled in his embrace.

The confidence and bravery she came with to make a scene had long disappeared. She looked at Kim Hajin and flashed an awkward smile as her cheeks blushed from embarrassment.

“Yes... Hello, it's nice to meet all of you. My name is Rachel...” she introduced herself to the VIPs gathered around.

She barged in like a tank armed in leather armor, but now shyly introduced herself while awkwardly touching her hair.

Some of the VIPs looked at her in disbelief because of her actions.

* * *

Rachel diligently prepared dinner on a peaceful evening.

She made kimchi stew, egg rolls that were Evandel's favorite, and steamed rice. She hadn't prepared a lot of dishes, but did her best.

"Hmm..." Rachel scanned the dining table one more time.

She nodded in satisfaction after thinking this would be more than enough and called Kim Hajin.

"Hajin."

Kim Hajin and Evandel were playing video games in another room and came waltzing out.

"Come and eat."

Rachel looked nervous as she watched them lift their spoons.

How would it taste? Would they like her cooking? Or would they find it disgusting and horrible?

The two of them took a bite before their eyes shot wide open.

"Wow! It's delicious!"

"Yeah, this is really good."

Thankfully, their reactions weren't bad. Rachel sighed in relief and took a seat to eat as well.

"Yum."

She came to the same conclusion after taking a bite.

"Fortunately, it came out good," she said with a smile.

"Yes, it's quite good," Kim Hajin replied.

"Hehe..."

The three of them finished eating dinner.

Rachel took a bath with Evandel and helped to dry her hair. Then the three of them watched TV in the living room until Evandel fell asleep.

They carried Evandel to her room and lay with her in bed. Kim Hajin and Rachel patted her head while watching her sleep.

“Yawn...”

Both of them felt sleepy too and hugged each other with Evandel between them.

Rachel watched Kim Hajin fall asleep and found it quite cute. She mischievously poked his cheeks a few times.

Poke... Poke... Poke... Poke...

“It’s a relief...” she muttered.

She wanted her final days to be normal and everything seemed to be going according to her wishes.

Rachel got up from the bed and stretched. She quietly walked over to the balcony and made sure not to wake them up.

“Haa...” she sighed while leaning on the rails and looked at the night sky filled with stars.

What was she thinking and feeling? Even she wasn’t sure. Was it anxiety, regret, or just wishful thinking? She had no clue.

However, she didn’t let it sway her and already made up her mind. She decided to treasure the memories from this world no matter what.

“Rachel?” Someone called her from behind in the most gentle and warm tone.

“Ah...”

That person walked over as she leaned on the rail and warmly hugged her from behind. She could feel her heart fluttering.

Rachel bitterly smiled at his sudden show of affection. She wanted to be alone right now and always hesitated whenever he did something like this. She kept delaying the choice she already made whenever he made her heart flutter like this.

“What are you doing?” Kim Hajin asked in a warm, yet slightly drowsy voice.

Rachel tried her best to act as normal as possible.

“Me?”

“Yes.”

“I was...”

Rachel turned around and buried her face in his chest. She looked up and smiled at him before continuing, “I was getting ready to wake up.”

“Wake up?” Kim Hajin asked while tilting his head in confusion.

“Yes,” Rachel nodded, “I’m going to wake up.”

She wondered what would happen after she woke up from this dream. Would I be able to see you again after I wake up? Can I still be with you? Even though you won’t love me like right now...

Rachel wrapped her arms around Kim Hajin’s waist and buried her face in his chest again.

“Still, I’m not going to give up.”

Did Kim Hajin know what she was talking about right now?

“Yes, don’t give up,” he gently said with a smile.

Rachel looked into his eyes and saw the stars reflecting in them. She smiled without even realizing it.

They watched the night sky in each other's embrace. It felt as if every star in the world was shining down on them. She took in every bit of this scenery while in his arms.

The sun began to rise and lit up the horizon.

It was time for her to wake up from this sweet dream now.

However, Rachel wanted to whisper something to her beloved in his embrace for the last time... before she woke up from this dream.

She decided to keep the words she whispered a secret for the rest of her life.

Side Stories 45.2

Dream in a Dream (45)

The nurse taking care of the patient at the Severance Hospital VIP ward went about her business and checked the patient's condition like usual.

Blood pressure... normal.

Pulse... normal.

Nutrition... normal.

Surprisingly, the patient didn't suffer from any nutritional deficiency despite not having eaten or been injected with anything for the longest time. It seemed her body remained in its most optimum condition while asleep.

The nurse went through her checklist before checking the patient's eyes.

"Huh?"

The patient's blue eyes seemed to be looking at the ceiling after opening. A tear formed and sparkled like a crystal.

"H-Huh?!" the nurse screamed and fell on her butt. She crawled on all four and left the ward as fast as she could, "Doctor! Doctor!"

Rachel finally woke up from her slumber after the nurse left. She groaned and turned in bed to find Evandel asleep beside her.

A smile full of love bloomed on Rachel's face.

It seemed that Evandel also had the same dream to stay with me...

Bam!

Someone loudly barged in through the door. It wasn't the doctor or nurse, but Kim Hajin. It seemed he just woke up too.

He walked towards her with a relieved expression.

"Hajin?" Rachel weakly smiled in response.

"Yes, it's me."

It's me.

He didn't sound any different from usual, but Rachel felt something heavy push down on her chest after hearing those words. However, she tried her best to suppress the pain welling up from her heart and stroked Evandel's head before changing the topic.

"Evandel must still be dreaming, right?"

"Yes, it must be related to the dream. Rachel..."

"Yeah, her dream was connected to mine."

Evandel followed her all the way inside the dream and probably wouldn't wake if Rachel didn't.

"Are you alright?" Kim Hajin carefully asked.

Rachel smiled at him, "Aren't you curious what kind of dream I had?"

"Huh? Ah... Yeah, I'm curious..." Kim Hajin replied with a nod.

Rachel already prepared a response if he ever asked about her dream.

"A dream about never giving up."

"What? Never giving up on what?"

He seemed quite dense right now for some reason.

Rachel flashed a mischievous smile and thought about what kind of a person he was to her.

“Hmm... Hajin...” she muttered with a finger on her lips.

“Yes?”

“Do you want me to give up?”

Kim Hajin tilted his head in confusion, but Rachel didn't explain as she pressed him for a response.

“Hurry up. Answer me.”

“Hmm...” Kim Hajin contemplated for a moment and smirked, “No.”

He gave the same response like in her sweet dream, “I don't know what you're going to give up on, but not giving up suits you much better... like a knight full of conviction.”

It was a satisfactory answer. Her heart ached, but she felt proud of herself for some reason.

“But why are you suddenly asking that? And what aren't you giving up on?” Kim Hajin asked with a curious look.

Rachel grabbed his arm and pulled him towards her for a hug. No, she tried to hug him, but noticed someone standing at the door looking at them. She chose to wrap her arms around his neck and put him in a headlock.

Only after Kim Hajin coughed a few times and seemed to be suffering did she finally let him go.

“W-What was that all about?”

Rachel shrugged and flashed a mischievous smile, “I'm not going to tell you. Never ever.”

She sounded like the bright and cheery Rachel that Kim Hajin always knew.

* * *

Rachel and Evandel went to the East Sea on a bright summer day after Evandel said she wanted to play at the beach.

“Hihihi! Kim Hayang lost to me!”

“Meow!”

Evandel was having a competition with Hayang on the beach while Rachel summoned her spirits and tried to harmonize them.

“It still works...” she muttered in surprise.

The growth she achieved in her dream had remained.

The dream world was actually a smaller world created by the Tower of Miracle from what she heard. It could be considered another dimension, so half the things that occurred in it could be considered real.

The theory was difficult to understand, but that was all in the past now.

Of course, she missed that past from time to time. She missed that person always inches away from her... swimming in happiness all the time.

However, Rachel gained a powerful motivation after waking up from her dream.

She felt confident that she could overcome anything and everything now. She could accomplish all her goals in life. That dream gave her the conviction to never give up under any circumstances and that became her new life motto.

Someone familiar approached as she reminisced about those memories.

“Are you okay?”

Rachel realized who it was from that single sentence and didn’t even bother looking. The person sat next to her on the bench.

“Yeah, I’m fine,” Rachel replied.

“Nice try. What do you mean you’re fine? I bet you’re dying inside right now,” Chae Nayun teased her by being ever so direct.

Rachel looked at her.

Chae Nayun stuck out her tongue to annoy Rachel.

“Pfft... No, I still have a lot of time left,” Rachel said with a laugh.

“A lot of time?”

“Yeah, I think I might actually have a chance.”

“What? What chance are you talking about?”

“I decided not to give up, you see.”

Rachel decided to accept the challenge. She steeled her resolve to not run away anymore whether it be England, her guild, or love. She resolved to pursue them until the very end. She no longer wanted to be a coward who ran away from challenges.

“Also, I think Evandel will like me the most from now on,” Rachel said with a smile.

“Ha! You’re funny,” Chae Nayun scoffed in response.

Chae Nayun muttered something under her breath along the lines of, What kind of childish nonsense are you talking about?

Rachel went on the offensive this time, “What about you? Are you okay?”

“Me? Ah, I’ve finished my preparations as well,” Chae Nayun took out something that looked like a piece of ham.

“What’s that?”

“A time capsule. Kim Hajin gave it to me a long time ago.”

The Miracle Stone gifted Chae Nayun the ability to regress using this time capsule as a medium.

“Oh,” Rachel found the whole thing quite intriguing. Then she asked, “So what are you going to do if you go back?”

“Who knows? I don’t have any plans to be honest. I don’t really want to meddle with things... Oh, I’ll save my brother at least,” Chae Nayun replied with a shrug.

“That sounds like something you would do.”

“You seem to have changed a lot.”

Rachel smirked at Chae Nayun’s words.

Chae Nayun pursed her lips and looked at Evandel playing on the beach with Hayang.

Rachel followed Chae Nayun’s gaze and asked, “In your world... Evandel might not exist, right?”

Chae Nayun yawned and leaned back on the beach. She looked carefree like always.

“Again, who knows? After all, I do have some attachment to that kid...”

Then, she opened the locks on the time capsule.

Click... Clack!

Rachel curiously peeked inside the time capsule.

Chae Nayun placed the fully recovered Miracle Stone in the time capsule and closed it again.

“Are you going now?” Rachel asked.

“Yeah, I should get going now that you’re back,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

“Ah... Thanks for everything.”

“Thanks for what?” Chae Nayun looked at Rachel and continued, “Well, take care. Explain to the others for me if I suddenly disappear, princess.”

Chae Nayun saluted Rachel in a mocking manner and raised her left hand to her forehead.

“You should use your right hand when you salute...” Rachel corrected her.

Chae Nayun squinted at her and grumbled, “What does it matter whether I use my right or left hand? Are you a boomer? Ah... I almost forgot. Here, take this.”

She extended something towards Rachel, “Here.”

“...?”

Rachel tilted her head in confusion when Chae Nayun placed a purple stone fragment in her hand.

“It’s a fragment of the Miracle Stone that created your dream. No, it was a bit too real to call it a dream. Let’s just call it another world. Anyways, it’s what remains of that world. Oh, Kim Hajin was also in your dream by the way.”

“Huh? Hajin was?” Rachel’s eyes widened.

Did that mean not only Evandel, but also Kim Hajin was in her dream?

Rachel’s face turned bright red as she recalled her memories from the dream.

“Yeah, he spent a week trying to save you. I don’t think he remembers anything from the dream though. I doubt he was even able to act according to how he wanted in your dream. He became quite weak, you see.”

“Ah... what the...”

“I have no idea what that’s for, but I just thought I should probably give it to you. After all, I was able to retrieve my fragment thanks to you. Think of it as a little souvenir from your dream.”

Rachel looked down at the purple stone the size of her nail. It didn’t feel like an ordinary stone that simply looked pretty.

“Then, I’m going for real this time.”

Chae Nayun sounded like she was taking a short trip somewhere not too far away. Rachel couldn’t say goodbye and only watched her leave.

Goodbyes were always painful, but everyone had to live with them.

“Take care,” Chae Nayun said as she walked away while waving.

The sun began to set and painted the sky orange, but a bright ray of light suddenly exploded and illuminated the entire world.

Rachel closed her eyes and opened them again.

Shwaa...

The waves gently swayed and the sun slowly set as if nothing had happened.

Chae Nayun, who was just beside her, began a journey to somewhere no one else knew and disappeared like a mirage that never existed.

“Evandel... It’s time to go home,” Rachel called out with a smile.

Evandel had been making a pillar out of seashells and ran towards Rachel while giggling and racing with Hayang.

“Hihihi!”

Evandel jumped into Rachel’s embrace after beating Hayang again. Rachel watched the sunset as she hugged the child.

The setting sun looked breathtaking.

“Haa...” Rachel sighed when the memories she treasured in the corner of her heart popped up in her head again. Her memories from the dream when she confessed to the person she loved. She reminisced about those beautiful memories one by one as she left the beach with Evandel.

The cool breeze brushed past her hair and the last rays of sunlight shone on her before the sky turned dark. The waves crashing against the rocks could be heard and a bird flying through the sky let out a small cry.

No one remained on the bench anymore.

Rachel would now go against the tides of reality armed with the newly found conviction she obtained from the sweetest dream in her life.

PbF by: traitor/SEN

The Novel's Extra

WUXIA
WORLD

KW

The Novel's Extra

- 소설 속 엑스트라 -

- VOLUME 6 -

-AUTHOR-
Ji-gab-song

[Wuxiaworld]

Side Stories 46

Chae Nayun (1)

March 7th

The Tower of Miracle raid was successful.

I managed to obtain the Miracle Stone, but the crystal violently shook when I held it. It bounced in my hands like a slippery eel before falling to the ground.

A small portion of the crystal broke off and caused a huge shockwave.

March 8th

Tens of millions, including Rachel, fell asleep because of the shockwave. They became stuck in an unending dream and the Miracle Stone's fragment was most likely in that dream.

March 15th

I decided to enter their dreams after deliberating about it for a long time.

...

June 13th

Rachel woke up from the dream and everything ended. She was praised as the hero who ended the long dream and was invited to various TV shows, press conferences, etc.

I can't help but feel jealous. It's not wrong since she was the one who stopped it.

...

June 20th

My regression.

Chae Nayun closed her diary after scribbling a few things. Keeping a diary helped her make sense of everything that happened, but not much made sense to her right now.

The regression happened in an instant. It happened so abruptly that her mind became jumbled.

“Ah... Did I put in the wrong date?”

It was currently 2:40 A.M. and she found herself in the penthouse given only to the top cadets at Cube. This proved that she had indeed traveled back in time.

Chae Nayun scratched her disheveled hair and checked the time on her smartwatch.

[First Period: Relativity of Mana and Magic (Beginner)]

She deduced from her schedule that she was currently halfway through her freshman year. They already finished their hectic midterm exam and a report written by Kim Hajin sat in front of her.

[Report on Chae Nayun]

Chae Nayun only shoots her arrows from obvious spots. In short, she lacks the common sense to be an archer.

...

A sharpshooter requires terrain knowledge and the ability to analyze. Chae Nayun lacks both and background knowledge on various monsters to fight one-on-one against them.

...

She is quite gifted with the ability to read her opponent's movements, but lacks the ability to calculate an arrow's speed.

...

To summarize, Chae Nayun is not suited to use the bow. It is a weapon that requires meticulous calculation every second in battle.

"This still irritates me..." Chae Nayun pouted and grumbled.

She recalled how angry, no, how enraged she felt when she first read this report. It didn't anger her anymore though. In fact, she was happy this report existed because it was another link between them.

"Ack! Ah, damn it. My head hurts..." Chae Nayun groaned and grabbed her head while standing still.

A sharp pain struck her.

"This side effect is too painful..." she grumbled.

Her throbbing head made her realize that she had indeed regressed. She suppressed the sadness welling up inside her and switched on the TV.

— What are we going to do there? We need to know before going there...

— What are you talking about? Just go and do whatever they ask once you get there!

— We can just go to Seoul instead then, right? Why the hell did they choose Africa of all places...

A show she often used to watch and enjoy was playing.

All seven individuals on the show were ex-heroes. The show sent them to various local and foreign places to clear challenges. Everyone considered it the best Korean variety show until it was discontinued for some reason.

Chae Nayun smiled while watching the nostalgic show and reminisced about the past. Her head felt like a mess due to the regression, so she decided to distract herself by watching TV.

* * *

She finished watching the TV show in her penthouse living room.

“I’ll start the briefing now...” Chae Nayun said to her dolls lined up in front of her.

“First, we will prioritize every opportunity to coincidentally bump into each other. After all, people are bound to think coincidences are fate.”

The agenda of her briefing was, [Coincidental Meetings].

“Our first target is at the cafeteria. Kim Hajin always eats alone at the same time and hour.”

She figured that she would naturally end up talking to him if she went there.

“The second target is during workouts. Kim Hajin always works out alone at the same time every day.”

It was quite natural for someone to work out after eating. He wouldn’t think too much about it, right?

“Alright, the third target is during the final exam.”

The midterms had already finished, but they still had the final exam. Chae Nayun planned to maintain a friendly relationship with Kim Hajin until then.

“Oh right, there’s Evandel as well...”

She suddenly remembered, albeit a bit late.

Rachel had asked about Evandel, who likely wasn’t born yet in this timeline.

In the end, Chae Nayun decided that the best course of action was to ask Kim Hajin to give the seed to Rachel.

“Or... should I just raise her?”

Chae Nayun imagined how Evandel would turn out if Evandel took after her instead of Rachel...

— No! I don’t want to! I don’t like ham sandwiches! I’m not going to eat it if there’s no truffle! No! No! No! Truffle and shark fins!
Gyaaaaaaah!

“That would be a disaster.”

A chill went down her spine when she imagined a smaller version of herself throwing tantrums. That made it much easier to decide that Evandel should take after Rachel just like in her original timeline.

“Also... the most important thing is...” Chae Nayun muttered with a serious look.

She picked up a family portrait on the table. Chae Jinyoon brightly smiled in it with his hand on her shoulder.

“I’ll have to wake up oppa...”

Of course, it would be difficult to wake Chae Jinyoon even though Baal had disappeared. That didn’t mean a solution didn’t exist.

“Haaa...” Chae Nayun sighed and looked at the time.

7:00 A.M.

It would be time for class soon.

Chae Nayun changed into her uniform. It had been ages since she last wore a Cube uniform, but she felt quite comfortable in it. The Cube uniform looked like a formal suit, but it felt like wearing comfortable trainers.

She put on her necktie without bothering to tie it nicely and left the penthouse unit.

Chae Nayun rode the elevator down to the dormitory lobby on the first floor^[1].

A few cadets were already eating or just finished their breakfast in the lobby.

“Oh! Hi, Nayun.”

“You’re up early?”

Some of them greeted Chae Nayun.

“Yeah, yeah. Hi,” Chae Nayun lazily waved to them.

“Ah, Nayun! You woke up early! Do you want to eat with me?” Yi Jiyeon suddenly popped out of nowhere and asked.

She hadn’t changed at all in this regressed life compared to Chae Nayun’s previous life.

Chae Nayun smirked and replied, “No, I already ate.”

“Ah, is that so? Alright.”

Chae Nayun passed by them and went outside. The breeze carried a salty scent from the East Sea that could be seen in the horizon. The gentle waves under the bright sky felt calm and tranquil.

“Haaa...”

Chae Nayun inhaled the scent of this scenery that she dearly missed. It was good to be back... and the fact that she became younger was a bonus.

“Good... good...” she said with a smile.

Chae Nayun walked to the building where freshmen took their classes. She passed the café that cadets often went to, the library with its lights always on, the gym that smelled like sweat, and the training grounds where wooden swords resounded even early in the morning.

Chae Nayun arrived in front of her classroom.

[Class — Veritas]

She looked at the door plate and calmed her breathing.

That person will be in here... that person who I had nothing but bitter memories with...

Chae Nayun didn't hesitate any longer and opened the classroom door.

Rachel sat in the second seat of the first row. Then she spotted Yoo Yeonha and finally Kim Hajin after looking around for a while.

Kim Hajin sat at the back and hunched over the table as if he was hiding.

Chae Nayun pondered where she should go first, but Yoo Yeonha found it strange that Chae Nayun came to class so early and interrupted her thoughts.

“Nayun?” Yoo Yeonha called out to her.

“Y-Yes?”

“Come sit here,” she pointed to the seat beside her.

“Y-Yeah...”

Chae Nayun sat next to Yoo Yeonha, but kept looking back and stealing glances at Kim Hajin.

“You’re up early today,” Yoo Yeonha asked with a curious expression.

“Hmm? Well, it happens,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied while stealing glances at Kim Hajin.

“Is today special or something?” Yoo Yeonha tilted her head in confusion.

“Hmm? No, it’s not. Why would it be?” Chae Nayun replied while continuing to steal glances at the back.

Glance... Glance...

She couldn’t help but steal glances at him. His face during his Cube days looked quite interesting.

Yoo Yeonha frowned at her, “What are you looking for like a meerkat?”

“Huh? No, when did I? I’m not looking for anything,” Chae Nayun awkwardly replied while faking a cough.

Her eyes kept trying to steal glances at Kim Hajin, but she did her best to suppress the urge.

A while passed and more cadets arrived to class one by one. Their chatting grew louder until the entire classroom became rowdy.

Chae Nayun found the atmosphere very familiar.

Their noisy chattering immediately died when their instructor, Kim Soohyuk, entered the room.

Kim Soohyuk made some announcements before their first period began. The Veritas cadets went to the magic hall on the fifth floor for their first class of the day.

A magician waited for them at the magic hall filled with various instruments for experiments.

“Welcome, everyone,” the magician greeted them.

Chae Nayun tried her best to recall the magician’s name, but she had completely forgotten. No, she had never been interested in this subject and always yawned in class without listening to a word.

“Our class today is... That’s right... outside. We’ll... Oh, also, we will be having an on-site lesson tomorrow. You will be forming pairs...” the magician informed them.

Kim Hajin frowned at the magician’s words. It seemed he didn’t want to pair up with anyone.

Chae Nayun saw the look on his face and smirked.

“However, you won’t be forming pairs or groups right now. You will be paired once you get there,” the magician added.

Hmm? Wait a minute? Was there such a class before? Chae Nayun wondered and felt that something was off for some reason.

Bzzt!

She felt a small vibration on her wrist.

[Hunting Club – Winter Cabin Trip]

[We’re going on a trip to the cabin this Wednesday.]

[All Hunting Club members are requested to attend.]

[Please inform us in advance if you won’t be attending.]

[Thank you.]

It came from the Hunting Club that Chae Nayun joined during her

Cube days.

She read the message and instantly turned towards Kim Hajin, who also checked his smartwatch.

“Nice!” she exclaimed under her breath.

He probably saw the same message and she was certain Kim Hajin was also a Hunting Club member in her previous life.

Chae Nayun inwardly cheered in triumph.

* * *

Chae Nayun had a glass of mango juice at the café after their morning classes.

She wanted to follow Kim Hajin and identify his daily routine, but a bunch of kids caught her and forced her to sit with them.

Damn it...

Blurb! Blurb!

She played with her mango juice to quell her anger.

Yeah! That's right! Keep boiling little mango juice! She gritted her teeth and blew on the straw as hard as she could.

“What’s wrong with her?” Yoo Yeonha muttered and sighed at the sight of Chae Nayun puffing her cheeks and blowing into a straw as hard as she could.

Chae Nayun suddenly glared at her.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and asked, “W-What?”

“Nothing... Don’t mind me...” Chae Nayun said with a shrug before looking around the table.

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan... Yoo Yeonha and Shin Jonghak...

They always hung out together during her Cube days. She was glad to see them again, but could always see them whenever she wanted.

“Hey, Chae Nayun. How are you with that guy Kim Hajin these days?” Shin Jonghak suddenly asked.

The other three at the table naturally shifted their gaze towards her.

“What?” Chae Nayun grumbled in response.

“You agreed to some bet with him, right? Was it archery? Why are you wasting your time with someone like him?” Shin Jonghak asked with a scoff before sipping his coffee and continuing, “Why would you let some peasant like him get near... Ack!”

Chae Nayun nudged the coffee cup that Shin Jonghak was about to drink from.

“W-Why?” Shin Jonghak stood and muttered with wide eyes.

The coffee spilled all over his face and pants. A coffee stain formed around his lips and looked like a beard.

Yoo Yeonha pulled out some tissues and gave them to him.

“Isn’t it hot?” she asked.

However, Shin Jonghak ignored her and still looked confused. He wanted an explanation from Chae Nayun, “Why?”

“Shut up. You’re annoying,” Chae Nayun frowned and grumbled.

“...”

Shin Jonghak quietly sat again.

An awkward silence descended at the table before Yi Yeonghan broke the silence, “Oh, right. Do you guys want to join the Board Game Club?”

What the hell is that guy saying all of a sudden? Chae Nayun inwardly grumbled while yawning.

“It’s a bit different from the established clubs since it’s more of a hobby club, but we can still get funding from the academy. Don’t you think it’ll be fun?” Yi Yeonghan continued his nonsense.

Chae Nayun yawned and ignored Yi Yeonghan when she suddenly remembered something.

“Ah!” she exclaimed and stood from her chair.

The others flinched in surprise at her sudden action.

“W-Why? What is it this time?”

Club... Club... Club...

This single word continued to ring in her mind.

“Should I make a club as well?” she asked.

“What kind of club? A board game club?” Yi Yeonghan asked in response.

“No, a pharmacy club or something like that?” Chae Nayun said with a shrug.

“Nayun... what are you saying all of a sudden?” Yoo Yeonha asked with a sigh.

“I want to make a medicine that can wake up my oppa,” Chae Nayun cut her off.

“...”

Everyone fell silent at her words. They glanced at each other, but no one dared to say anything.

“So, what do you think? Do you guys want to join? We just need five people to form a club, right?” Chae Nayun pressed on with sparkling eyes.

A standard club required a minimum number of members from each year, but a hobby club only required the bare minimum of members.

Kim Suho nodded and said, “I’m in...”

Yi Yeonghan seemed to be bitter about the fact that his Board Game Club was shot down. He mumbled something like, It’s not fair if you use a cheat like that. However, he also nodded after hesitating.

Chae Nayun smirked.

Alright, Yoo Yeonha will definitely agree. I just have to convince Kim Hajin to join! Chae Nayun excitedly thought.

“I’m in too.”

Shin Jonghak suddenly expressed his interest to join as well. He bitterly smiled as if he didn’t really want to join, but had no choice.

“You can get lost,” Chae Nayun replied.

“Huh?”

“You don’t even know what med in medicine stands for,” she grumbled.

“Hahaha...” Shin Jonghak burst into laughter. He waved while laughing and thought Chae Nayun was joking.

Does this idiot think I’m joking right now? Chae Nayun glared at him.

Yoo Yeonha carefully asked, “But Nayun... we need five people to form a club, right? Who are you going to bring if Jonghak isn't joining?"

"Ah, I already have someone in mind," Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

"Who?"

Kim Suho, Yoo Yeonha, and Yi Yeonghan asked at the same time.

Shin Jonghak began to nervously fidget after realizing Chae Nayun was dead serious.

She smirked when she saw all of them waiting in suspense at who she would mention.

"Kim Hajin," she said with a grin.

Silence ensued after she said his name.

1. All buildings in Korea start on the first floor instead of the ground floor. The ground floor and Mezzanine concept are not that widespread in Korea. That's why most novels refer to the ground floor as the first floor. 🤔

Side Stories 47

Chae Nayun (2)

Chae Nayun went to the main building to look for Instructor Kim Soohyuk at six in the evening.

“A club?” Kim Soohyuk was working in his office and tilted his head in confusion.

“Yes,” Chae Nayun said as she handed him a piece of paper.

Yoo Yeonha already completed the club application form.

“It’s called the Pharmacy Club! The details are written on the club application form!” Chae Nayun said as she emphasized every syllable like an elementary kid during a presentation.

Kim Soohyuk stared at her for a while before taking the application.

“Hmm...” he scanned the paper.

Chae Nayun couldn’t help but feel nervous. After all, Kim Soohyuk was quite infamous for being strict and inflexible among the cadets.

He opened his drawer and placed their application inside. Then he said, “Alright. I’ll assign you a club room and send an advisor soon.”

“Ah! Yes!... Huh?” Chae Nayun cheered before tilting her head in confusion at Kim Soohyuk’s last few words.

“Advisor? Do we need one?” she asked.

“Why are you asking the obvious? Each club gets a room and a budget sponsored by the school, so it’s obvious you’ll also need an advisor to supervise you. The clubs you participate in during your academy days will have a huge impact on your hero career later on,” Kim Soohyuk explained.

“Ah... I see... Thank you very... much...” Chae Nayun said with a bow and tried her best to hide her disappointment.

“Alright, get going then.”

“Yes, sir!”

Chae Nayun left the staff office.

Bzzt!

Her smartwatch vibrated when she left the office. It came from her father, Chae Shinhyuk.

“Hello,” Chae Nayun answered in a bright and cheery tone.

— Hi, Nayun.

A familiar voice called her from the other end.

Chae Nayun responded in an even cheerier tone, “Yes, what’s up?”

— Ah, I just called to ask you something since I need your opinion on the matter.

“What is it?”

— A proposal to reform Cube came...

Chae Shinhyuk received a request from Cube executives since the Daehyun corporation was their largest sponsor.

Cube wanted to reform their classes and asked for Chae Shinhyuk’s opinion on the matter.

— So I was wondering what you thought.

“Ah...”

Chae Nayun recalled this event in her previous life before regressing. She vaguely remembered telling her father something like, Why would they even want to change it? The regression seemed to be gnawing away at her memories bit by bit starting from the ones that held no significance.

“I don’t really mind. Just do whatever you want,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

— Alright, study hard.

Chae Shinhyuk ended the call.

Chae Nayun looked at her smartwatch with a smile before happily skipping out of the building.

“Wow...”

The sunset outside mesmerized her as it shone over the sea and sunk below the horizon.

Cadets busily walked under the streetlights to their dormitories.

Chae Nayun stood still for a while and took in the sight around her. She could only describe the sight as one she missed, was too familiar with, and sick of all at the same time. In short, it felt complicated.

“Haaa...” she sighed at the thought of going to Cube for three years again.

She wanted nothing more than to enjoy these three years this time around. She didn’t want to deal with any tragedies, disasters, or emergencies. She didn’t want to be lonely or depressed like last time.

The setting sun shone on her before disappearing into the horizon.

Chae Nayun could feel her troubled heart slowly being filled with darkness and tried her best to remain optimistic. It felt as if a large boulder was pressing down on her chest and suffocating her.

“...”

Chae Nayun fixed her hair being blown by the sea breeze. She had to face the problem she feared no matter what.

Step... Step...

She spotted the back of someone's head. It looked quite familiar for some reason. That person had long, golden hair and walked with her head held high. It was Rachel.

Chae Nayun thought about just walking past her, but saw Rachel hiding behind a lamppost for some reason.

Why is she hiding? Chae Nayun wondered as she continued to observe.

“Oh?” she muttered and one of her brows went up.

Kim Hajin was up ahead and Rachel bit her nails while tailing him!

Chae Nayun felt something raging inside her and decided to sneak behind Rachel. Then she grabbed Rachel's shoulders and asked, “What are you doing?”

“...!”

Rachel jumped like a frightened cat with all its fur standing.

“Hiss!”

She immediately turned around and hissed at Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun laughed in disbelief before asking, “Who are you tailing?”

“...!”

Rachel tried to compose herself and rearranged her necktie and shirt. However, her hair remained standing and showed no signs of going down. On top of that, she broke out into cold sweat despite her best efforts to appear calm.

“I’m not sure what you’re talking about,” Rachel nonchalantly replied while arranging her disheveled hair.

Chae Nayun crossed her arms and sneered, “Oh right, you got crushed by Kim Hajin in theory class. Are you tailing him to find out his secret or something?”

“...!”

The blonde cat hissed again, but silently this time. She seemed to be glaring at Chae Nayun with the eyes of a beast. Chae Nayun couldn’t help but think, Oh... I’m shaking in my boots.

“Hihi,” Chae Nayun snickered after seeing this childish version of Rachel.

This was more than enough since Kim Hajin had already long disappeared.

She tapped Rachel on the shoulder, “Just go to your room and get some sleep. You won’t be able to win against him in theory no matter how much you try.”

“Hmph!” Rachel scoffed and continued glaring at her.

Then she quickly ran away, which reminded Chae Nayun of a cat again.

Chae Nayun couldn’t help but smile as she watched the blonde cat zoom into the distance.

* * *

[Reformation of Cube Classes]

— Proposal to reduce or consolidate the number of classes and focus more on practical tests geared towards combat.

— Addition of practical combat score to the grading of cadets...

News of classes being reformed circulated campus the next day. They said the academy would reduce or consolidate existing classes and add a special class once a week. This didn't exist in the original story.

It was understandable since djinns made a ruckus during the midterms. However, something about it bothered me.

“There's no reaction at all these days...”

I looked down at my smartwatch. It used to notify me whenever things changed from the original story. This was a special privilege given to the author or something, but no notifications appeared for quite some time now.

Had my early-stage bonus ended already? This made me nervous for some reason.

Clack...

I put down my tray at the collection booth.

“Ah, that was good.”

The food at Cube tasted delicious. Not only that, it was quite cheap too. I didn't starve to death thanks to the food costs here. A chunk of beef cost only four thousand won.

“Huh? You're that guy, right?”

Someone poked my shoulder as I prepared to leave the cafeteria. This girl of western descent seemed to be in her second year at Cube.

She looked at my face and smirked, “You're that gunner!”

“Huh?” I laughed in disbelief when she spoke in a rough manner that didn’t suit a refined western lady.

“Yes, that’s me,” I replied.

I had no idea who she was, but had grown accustomed to such situations. I became somewhat famous after the midterms.

“Let’s take a picture together,” she raised her smartwatch above her head and switched on the selfie mode.

A square appeared and captured us. Meanwhile, I glanced at her nametag as she busily took pictures.

[Scarlet]

She didn’t seem like a complete nobody since her name sounded somewhat familiar. I walked past her after she finished taking selfies.

“Hmm? Hey, where are you going?” she asked.

“Ah, I’m sorry. I have a theory class to attend,” I looked at my smartwatch and pretended to be in a rush.

I really was busy with theory classes in the morning and an outdoor class, [Mountain and Forests]. The latter sounded cool, but was just hiking.

Of course, there was something special about it.

— What the hell is wrong with him?

— Come on, there’s no need to get so worked up. He’s just a clueless freshman.

— How can he not know who I am? I’m Scarlet. Who the hell does he think he is to...

Yes, I don’t know who you are. I inwardly thought while doing my best to ignore them badmouthing me.

My superior sense of hearing tended to pick up strange things from time to time.

* * *

The theory class this morning was on one of the most notorious subjects in all of Cube's curriculum, [Mana Theory]. Our topic for the day was mountains and mana veins. The class was quite easy for me and the professor in charge treated me favorably.

I noticed Rachel tightly gripping her pen in anger, but what could I do about it?

The class ended after two hours.

I went straight to the portal after finishing my lunch. I traveled to Pyeonganbuk-do for the next outdoor class.

The Veritas cadets showed up one by one when I was about thirty minutes away from the rendezvous point.

"Is everyone here?"

The instructor appeared exactly on time and the one hundred cadets taking part today had gathered as well.

However, I couldn't help but feel surprised.

"Nice to meet all of you. My name is Seo Youngji. I am the hero tasked with leading the class today."

Our instructor for today was the rank 7 hero from the association, Seo Youngji. She was a famous hero who frequently appeared on TV and social media, so all the cadets felt surprised to see her.

"I'm sure most of you are surprised by the sudden change, but things won't be too different from the usual."

We saw her once during the midterms, but who would have known she would show up again so soon?

I checked my smartwatch for any notifications, but nothing out of the ordinary appeared.

“You will be climbing a mountain today. It’s called the Yulak Mountain, which is infamous for its rough and difficult terrain.”

The cadets noisily murmured among themselves at the instructor’s briefing, but simply because they still felt starstruck after meeting Seo Youngji.

Seo Youngji bitterly smiled and found the attention burdensome. Nonetheless, she continued.

“Your goal is to find a mana vein. You might run into monsters or beasts in the process. However, you should be able to deal with them as long as you remain calm. I advise you not to panic or get scared. Just do...”

“Hajin.”

Someone suddenly called me. This handsome guy brightly smiled with his perfect white teeth. It was Kim Suho.

“Yeah, what?” I briefly replied, but Kim Suho still approached with a smile.

Then he whispered, “You said that you like Chae Nayun, right?”

“What?” I immediately frowned.

What batshit crazy nonsense is this guy spouting?

However, I soon understood because of what I said when we were in Paris.

— I’ve been thinking about her for far longer than you and I’ve been watching over her all this time.

— So I know far more about her than you.

It seemed I created a cringeworthy moment of myself. I shuddered at my own words and vehemently shook my head to explain, “No, that was...”

Kim Suho didn’t seem interested in my explanation and cut me off, “So I was thinking... You can score some points with her. You see, Nayun decided to make a Pharmacy Club.”

“Pharmacy Club?”

“Yeah, that’s... I don’t know the exact details to be honest, but I think it would be great if you joined us too. What do you say? If you’re interested, no, give it a thought and let me know. It sounds like the perfect fit for you since you’re really smart...”

“Now, let’s start!”

Seo Youngji’s sudden shout interrupted Kim Suho.

Kim Suho flashed a cheeky smile that seemed to say, Think about it, okay? He walked away to the front.

I watched him leave before slowly walking as well.

“...?”

However, I couldn’t help but feel someone intently staring at me. I pretended to nonchalantly walk before suddenly turning around. A girl turned her head away at the same time.

It was Chae Nayun.

“Sigh...”

I guess what happened in Paris bothered her too. Why did I have to say something so crazy...

I shook my head and began hiking up the mountain.

* * *

“Fwuuaaa!”

Meanwhile, Seo Youngji reached the peak in less than three minutes. She yawned out of boredom.

She had never imagined becoming a Cube instructor, but had no choice since the higher-ups basically commanded her to.

Cube requested the association’s assistance to ensure the safety of their cadets. She somewhat understood why they included her.

However, the association gave her another command that was a bit strange.

“What do they want? Geez...”

She had no idea what the higher-ups intended, but she would do her best in every task.

Seo Youngji discarded her distracting thoughts and focused on the hundreds of monitors in the tent. These monitors showed every cadet in real time.

Seo Youngji boasted the highest agility among all the association heroes. She also possessed a vision that far surpassed normal humans, which allowed her to simultaneously monitor every cadet.

“Oh, it’s Kim Hajin.”

She noticed Kim Hajin out of the hundred cadets. He was at the center of attention these days. The words that described him best would be gun and orphan.

“The only orphan among Cube cadets...”

She could relate to his upbringing since she grew up without parents too. She had parents unlike Kim Hajin, but her mother ran off and her father passed away.

Both of her parents weren't good people from what she recalled. Her mother always had a warm and gentle smile, but ended up abandoning her. Her father tried to work hard and raise her alone, but ended up meeting a tragic end.

A saying went that misery loves company. Perhaps that was the biggest reason why Kim Hajin caught her eye, but that wasn't the only reason.

Kim Hajin possessed a strange and unknown ability among the cadets. An unknown ability was considered dangerous in this industry.

Seo Youngji analyzed the path Kim Hajin would take through the cameras. He moved alone without anyone else by his side.

“Wow, he's quite agile. I'll give him that.”

Flutter!

The tent's entrance fluttered as someone entered.

It was Oh Junhyuk, another high rank hero from the association. They dispatched him just like Seo Youngji to assist Cube with classes.

Oh Junhyuk looked at the monitor, “Oh, it's that guy.”

He pointed at Kim Hajin on the monitor.

“I was reading the analysis report on him on my way here.”

“Analysis report?” Seo Youngji looked at him.

Oh Junhyuk smirked and tapped on his smartwatch, “Yeah, the videos from the Cube midterms have already been uploaded. There are several analysis reports on him on the Mid Hero Forum.”

Mid hero referred to intermediate rank heroes and the Mid Hero Forum was a community that only those above intermediate rank could join. You could call it an advanced version of the Hero Community.

“Is that so?” Seo Youngji muttered while thinking, I should take a look later.

However, her curiosity got the better of her and her hand immediately darted towards her smartwatch.

[High Hero Community – Mid Hero Forum]

[Hot Topic: A gunslinger appeared in Cube?!]

Heroes from all over the world gathered on the Hero Community, but the gunslinger named Kim Hajin proudly took the top spot.

“Hmmm...”

“Hey... focus on the job in front of you...” Oh Junhyuk grumbled and waved over the hologram that projected from Seo Youngji’s smartwatch. He handed a piece of paper to her, “Take a look at this.”

“What is it?” Seo Youngji frowned as she took the A4-sized document.

It had some strange words written on it.

[Club Application Form]

[Pharmacy Club]

“Club application form? Pharmacy Club? What the hell is this?” Seo Youngji asked and glared at Oh Junhyuk for an explanation. Her expression seemed to be asking, Why the hell are you showing me this?

Oh Junhyuk smirked and replied, “What else is it? You’re going to be their advisor.”

Side Stories 48

Chae Nayun (3)

[Class Objective]

— Locate a mana vein.

A short and straightforward message popped up on my smartwatch when I set foot on the mountain.

I began hiking and braved through the overgrown forest.

The Yulak Mountain was a 2,750 meter tall mountain that appeared after the great mana explosion. The Daehyun Group currently owned it. It had an overgrown forest and lush vegetation due to the high concentration of mana.

Decreased oxygen levels from the denser mana in the air also made it more difficult to climb. Still, I didn't find it that difficult. Probably because my stamina improved.

Whoosh!

The cool mountain breeze blew against my sweaty face and shook the leaves. The surroundings were tranquil and the sun pleasantly shone.

I stopped at a clearing to better appreciate nature's beauty.

"Hooo..."

I took out a lunchbox from my rucksack. It was a modest meal of beef, doenjang-jjigae^[1], and brown rice.

It looked modest, but tasted extremely delicious.

I enjoyed my lunch while thinking to myself, “There should be something around here...”

Munch... Munch...

A mountain with high mana density was bound to have monsters.

Munch... Munch...

I wondered what episode would occur today.

Munch... Munch...

Or would it just be another peaceful class?

Munch... Munch...

“Ah... That was good.”

I cleaned up after finishing my meal and began hiking again.

I walked around for twenty minutes when I spotted a familiar face ahead.

“Ah...”

This person was quite troublesome to deal with.

Chae Nayun carried a huge rucksack on her back and squatted on the floor. No, she was digging something with a hand plow.

I looked a bit further and saw two other familiar faces with her, Yi Jiyeon and Kim Jinsu.

I walked towards them since there was only one way up the mountain.

“Who’s there?!” Chae Nayun turned around when she sensed my presence, but she jumped in surprise when we made eye contact.

“W-What... W-When did you get here, K-Kim Hajin?”

Chae Nayun stuttered for some strange reason. Who the hell was K-Kim Hajin, seriously?

I simply shrugged and ignored her. I continued on my way, but Chae Nayun awkwardly squirmed and aimed her hand plow at me.

“T-This is our territory,” she awkwardly said.

“Territory?”

“Y-Yeah. Also, I was just digging for medicinal herbs. I wasn’t doing anything else...”

“I didn’t say anything...”

Dirt covered her face like a mole. No, she looked more like a puppy digging through dirt now that I took a closer look. I stole a glance at the pit she was digging and noticed something that looked like a plant.

“Nayun is right. This is our territory,” Yi Jiyeon said as she intently glared at me. It felt like lasers would shoot out of her eyes.

“Yeah, sure. Whatever you guys say...” I replied and tried to sound as disinterested as possible. I couldn’t really be bothered by what they were doing.

However, Chae Nayun suddenly ran up and grabbed my sleeve.

“Wait.”

She looked at the ground and acted all shy.

“Well... still... You helped me out last time, so... I can let you in if you want...”

Well, this was unexpected.

Yi Jiyoong flinched at Chae Nayun's words and said to me, "Alright, we'll let you in!"

"Are you a parrot?" I asked.

"What did you just say?"

"Nothing. Just forget about it. Also, you don't have to."

I refused their offer and Chae Nayun awkwardly scratched her neck.

I planned on walking away, but the plant that Chae Nayun dug up suddenly bothered me.

I pointed at the plant in her hand and asked, "Hey, what are you planning to do with that?"

"Huh? Oh, this one?" she replied with a bright smile and lifted the entire sack of plants she had dug. Then she asked, "Do you want some of these medicinal herbs? We have more over there."

"...?"

What was wrong with this girl all of a sudden? She diligently dug all these plants judging from her dirty face, but offered to give them all to me? Did she even know what those herbs were?

I bitterly smiled and declined, "No, I'm alright."

"Huh? Why? You can take these. I can just dig more whenever I want," Chae Nayun said as she pushed the plants towards me more aggressively this time.

Nudge... Nudge...

She pressed the medicinal herbs against my shoulder.

Nudge... Nudge...

“Hey... It’s not what you think... Those plants are... You should probably just throw them away...”

“Huh? What are you talking about?” Chae Nayun tilted her head in confusion.

I sighed after reading the notification above the plants that Chae Nayun had been calling medicinal herbs.

“Those are poisonous plants.”

“Huh? What? Poison?” Chae Nayun pursed her lips and I inwardly snickered.

She was trying to set up a Pharmacy Club, which seemed out of character. However, this was indeed the Chae Nayun I knew.

“Yeah, so throw them away.”

“No... that can’t be... How is this a poisonous plant? Yi Jiyeon said these were medicinal herbs. Don’t you know what yumun herbs are? Look, they look exactly like yumun herbs! Do you want me to show you the almanac?” Chae Nayun innocently retorted.

“Ah, those look like yumun herbs, but...”

“No way, I think you’re mistaken. How could these be poisonous plants?” Chae Nayun grumbled and I couldn’t even finish my sentence before she sniffed the poisonous plant.

When she sniffed it...

Fart!

The poisonous plant farted a cloud of gas directly at her face and pushed her back quite a distance.

“Uwaaaaagh!”

“That’s actually a poisonous plant that spews toxic gas on par with biological weapons.”

“Ah! What the hell is this?! Ack! I’m dying! AAAACK!”

Chae Nayun plopped to the ground.

The poisonous plant that Chae Nayun dug up was called a gas root plant. It spewed toxic gas equivalent to or more potent than those used in gas chambers^[2]. There was no way she would be fine after taking it straight in the face.

Haaa... Haaa...

Chae Nayun squirmed on the ground with her face covered in snot and tears. She looked like someone lamenting the loss of her country and loved ones. No, even someone like that wouldn’t cry like how she was right now.

Yi Jiyeon looked at me visibly shaken by what happened.

“Ehem...” I faked a cough and couldn’t do anything about the situation.

I decided to ignore the trio and continue hiking up the mountain. No, I tried to ignore them, but...

“Aaaack!”

The sound that kept coming from behind me was quite difficult to ignore.

“Aaaack!”

It was hard to tell if someone was crying or screaming their lungs out. Was that how pterodactyls sounded?

“Aaaack! Kyaaaahk!”

I decided to walk faster and get farther away since the screaming unnerved me.

* * *

Thirty minutes later...

“Heuk! Shame... Sniff... Heuk! The shame! Ughh!” Chae Nayun cried as snot and tears covered her face.

There was undoubtedly a huge difference in her body before and after she regressed. Something like a poisonous plant would have never posed a threat before. She never imagined in her wildest dreams that she would one day end up covered in tears and snot because of some poisonous plant passing gas on her face. Her hands and feet uncontrollably shook and her insides churned. She felt like puking.

“Blueerrghhh!”

“Are you alright, Nayun?” Yi Jiyeon carefully asked.

Chae Nayun turned and threw a handful of dirt at her.

“Kyahk!”

Yi Jiyeon was the one who said the poisonous plant was an extremely rare yumun herb. She shrieked and ran away.

“You did that on purpose, didn’t you?” Chae Nayun asked while glaring at the sly culprit.

“N-No... not at all! I... I didn’t know!” Yi Jiyeon shouted.

“Hey, stop lying. Ah, forget about it. Just go away. I’m going to be moving alone from now on,” Chae Nayun got up and said.

She ended up showing an unsightly side of herself to Kim Hajin because of Yi Jiyeon.

Splash!

She washed her face and hands before hiking up the mountain again.

Stomp! Stomp! Stomp! Stomp!

Chae Nayun angrily stomped up the mountain while Yi Jiyeon and the others cautiously followed her.

She reached the peak in no time after angrily stomping away. Only then did she bitterly smile.

Right... this was a class. I should've looked for a mana vein on my way up, but I completely forgot...

A large boulder caught her eye. The big and odd rock formation stuck out from the cliff.

Chae Nayun narrowed her eyes and her curiosity got the better of her. She jumped towards the rock.

“Oh...”

She could see the entire mountain from a bird's eye view after landing on top of the boulder. She felt as if her nose could touch the sky and clouds from this height. The overgrown forest lay beneath her.

“The view is amazing from here,” Chae Nayun muttered as she plopped down on the large boulder and enjoyed the sun slowly setting.

One of the events that bothered her popped up in her mind.

The Kwang-Oh Incident...

The merciless slaughter was masterminded by the association and Kim Sukho, the current president at that time. Almost a hundred innocent civilians died that day and it stayed on Chae Nayun's mind ever since she found out about it.

“Haaa...”

A long sigh escaped from her.

Could she say the incident had nothing to do with her if Kim Hajin found out about it? Or would he say she had nothing to do with what happened once he learned the truth behind that incident?

“Why did Grandpa do something like that...”

She could ask all the questions she wanted, but couldn't do anything about it.

The Kim Hajin from before she regressed knew about the Kwang-Oh Incident, but he didn't despise her over what happened. He even went as far as to say that he didn't harbor any ill feelings towards her because of it.

But was that because of his guilt from killing Chae Jinyoon? Or was there another reason?

Chae Nayun rummaged through her pockets while lying on the boulder. She instinctively craved a smoke, but it was just out of pure habit. A hero's body didn't suffer withdrawals from not smoking.

“Sigh...”

The sky turned dark and the stars appeared one by one. Chae Nayun sighed and began counting the stars.

She counted thirty-seven stars when she felt someone's presence behind her. A familiar scent tickled her nose and she turned towards that person.

“You came?”

“Yeah, just now.” Kim Suho smirked and sat beside her.

Chae Nayun asked him, “Did you find a mana vein?”

“Huh? Ah, yeah. I found one.”

“Tell me where it is on the way down.”

“Come on. That’s cheating.”

“What’s cheating? Sounds rich coming from you.”

“Haha...” Kim Suho awkwardly laughed.

Chae Nayun puffed her cheeks like balloons in response.

Kim Suho stared at the stars in the night sky and said, “I asked Kim Hajin.”

Whiik!

Chae Nayun immediately looked at Kim Suho and asked, “What did you say?”

“The club.”

“...”

“I didn’t say much. I just asked if he was...”

“Hey! You crazy little fucker! Why were you the one who asked him?!”

Puk!

Chae Nayun smacked Kim Suho’s shoulder. It was quite a powerful blow.

Kim Suho dumbfoundedly stared at her while massaging his shoulder.

“Ah... Damn it! I was going to carefully ask him!”

“That hurts... Hey, Kim Hajin told me he was kind of interested, so...”

“Hey, what kind of nonsense is... Huh? What? Are you serious?!” Chae Nayun shouted in surprise.

Kim Suho nodded while rubbing his bruised shoulder, “Yeah... I kind of discussed it with him.”

Honestly, Chae Nayun had no idea what Kim Hajin was thinking at this point in time. Sure, that thing happened in Paris, but she wasn’t sure if he sincerely liked her or not.

She had no way to check how he really felt about her.

Chae Nayun had no choice but to muster her courage and ask, “What... What did he say?”

However, Kim Suho shook his head and replied, “Ah, that’s a secret.”

Chae Nayun dumbfoundedly stared at Kim Suho for a while as the urge to push him off the boulder welled up inside her.

Seriously, what was he doing right now? It was only customary for someone to either finish speaking or just shut up if they didn’t plan to.

Chae Nayun couldn’t help but wonder, Is this guy some sort of sociopath?

* * *

The sky grew dark quite early by seven in the evening. However, it remained bright for me thanks to my superior vision.

I spotted Yoo Yeonha lighting a campfire in the dark. She was discussing something with her minions.

— They said the class might last more than a day, so it doesn’t really matter if we’re late or not. What matters right now is locating a mana vein.

Yoo Yeonha said without a change in her expression, but the atmosphere around the campfire had turned sullen.

It seemed the minions under Yoo Yeonha would be replaced after tonight.

— Let's rest up for a bit before searching again.

— Yes...

The minions looked pitiful even though it wasn't their fault that they couldn't find a mana vein.

I smirked and walked towards them.

“...?”

Yoo Yeonha looked at me without saying a word, but her eyes seemed to be saying, Why is he coming here?

The five minions also dumbly blinked at me.

I didn't pay them any mind since the goal of this class was to locate a mana vein. They were on top of a mana vein right now.

“What do you want?” Yoo Yeonha asked after observing me for a while.

I was less than a foot away from her and squatted to dig the ground. I began shoveling dirt into a plastic bag.

“What are you doing? Why are you digging all of a sudden? This is my land,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“I didn't see your name anywhere,” I nonchalantly replied.

“Ha? Hey, what do you think you are doing?” Yoo Yeonha stood and retorted.

She seemed quite alert and on guard against me.

“This is the center of the mana vein,” I replied with a shrug.

“What did you just say?” Yoo Yeonha frowned and looked around her surroundings.

She looked back at me with visible skepticism.

It probably only looked like a normal piece of land to them since this mana vein was located deep underground. I barely found it thanks to the system.

“This place is?” Yoo Yeonha asked and I nodded.

“Stop lying.”

“I already told you, so let me borrow this campfire. Alright?”

“What? You’re being a nuisance right now!”

Yoo Yeonha grumbled and glared at me with skepticism, but took out her shovel from her rucksack.

Her minions did the same. All of them began shoveling dirt into plastic bags while trying to look as skeptical as possible.

I didn’t care and took out everything I needed from my rucksack.

Pork kimchi stew, rice, egg omelets, ramyeon, etc.

Yoo Yeonha froze with her mouth wide open after seeing my food. She licked her lips a few times before sitting in front of the campfire and staring at my rations.

“Do you want some?” I asked.

“W-Who eats that stuff? I don’t eat those kinds of low quality food...”
Yoo Yeonha turned her head away and haughtily replied.

“Suit yourself. Hey, what about you guys?” I asked the minions.

They all stole a glance at Yoo Yeonha before shaking their heads.

“Fine, more for me then,” I said with a shrug.

I began eating alone and started with the pork kimchi stew with the rice and egg omelet on the side. Then I put the ramyeon in the kimchi stew after finishing half of my rice.

“That looks horrible... You submerged the meat in water and turned it into rubber... Hey, why are you putting ramyeon in that? Is that egg? It looks like a chick laid it. It’s so small and looks so pale. That looks like a pig’s feet rather than the meat... Ah, maybe it’s a guinea pig’s feet?” Yoo Yeonha went on a tirade.

“It’s delicious,” I nonchalantly retorted.

“Who said I’m talking to you?”

“You kept criticizing my food.”

“Hmph!”

I ignored Yoo Yeonha hurling insults at my food and finished my meal.

I wiped the sweat off my forehead and saw Yoo Yeonha glaring at me.

“I’m going now. Ah, I’ll leave the cleanup to you guys.”

“W-What?! Hey, have you gone insane? Ha! Look at this guy!”

“What? I found a mana vein for you guys.”

“Is this really a mana vein?” Yoo Yeonha asked with a hint of skepticism.

My face stiffened and I took out my gun from its holster.

“What are you doing?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“Shh... Listen.”

A low vibration echoed in the silent forest.

Boom... Boom... Boom...

It came from quite a distance away, but was moving fast judging from how much louder it got.

Boom... Boom... Boom...

The vibrations grew stronger along with the sound.

“Looks like it’s a troll,” Yoo Yeonha said.

I nodded and replied, “I’ll take care of its eyes.”

“Then we’ll take care of the rest,” Yoo Yeonha added.

Her minions assembled beside her in their battle formation. They seemed to have practiced a few times and moved in sync.

Crash! Crash!

Dozens of trees fell in the distance and the troll finally appeared.

The mountain troll flashed a hideous smile at us. It was overjoyed with finding a large group of prey late at night.

I immediately pulled the trigger.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

My bullets accurately dug into the mountain troll’s eyes. However, a chill that screamed danger went down my spine.

I instinctively activated bullet time and stretched out my hand.

A set of fangs shot out from the bushes towards Yoo Yeonha's head. I managed to push her just in time and the fangs bit down on my arm instead.

I felt a sharp pain, but didn't even groan as I immediately turned to identify the culprit.

A goblin had attacked us.

1. A staple Korean stew. More info here: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Doenjang-jjigae> 📖

2. The gas chamber reference here is NOT the one used by a certain European dictator in the past. The gas chamber here refers to a kind of training that all male Koreans serving national service (military) have to go through. They lock them in a room with faulty gas masks and they have to withstand the gas blown into the room. 📖

Side Stories 49

Chae Nayun (4)

An army of goblins emerged from the bushes. I spotted even more crouched behind the bushes and aiming their ranged weapons at us.

I prioritized freeing my arm from the goblin's jaws. I felt a sharp pain again, but endured it.

“Are you alright?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

Everything happened in an instant, but she had already finished analyzing the situation. We didn't have time to discuss any strategy with an army of goblins around us and a hungry troll in front.

“Haaap!”

Yoo Yeonha's minion number one shouted and raised his shield. The mana-infused shield split into multiple shields and guarded us in every direction.

— Krwuuuaaah!

The mountain troll smashed its club into the ground. The club carried a ridiculous force, but couldn't break through the minion's shield.

Bam! Bam! Bam!

The minion became drenched in sweat as he continued to block the mountain troll's barrage. The real fight began as the minion blocked the enemy's attack.

“Heup!”

Yoo Yeonha cracked her whip and wrapped it around the mountain

troll's neck while I fired at the goblins hiding in the bushes. Yoo Yeonha's second and third minions spread out to the sides and slashed the mountain troll's ankles.

The goblins scurried away after I unloaded my gun a few times. The cunning monsters instinctively knew their chances of winning had decreased to near zero.

I aimed and fired at the mountain troll again.

Bang!

A medium-sized mountain troll didn't pose much threat to the six of us. Most Cube cadets already knew how to fight by the time they turned seventeen. The battle concluded anti-climatically and Yoo Yeonha's party leisurely watched the mountain troll collapse before sheathing their weapons.

"Great work," Yoo Yeonha said.

However, I was preoccupied with the goblins that just appeared.

"Is there a new dungeon around here?" I asked.

"I think so... Nayun just hit the jackpot if it's a goblin dungeon," Yoo Yeonha replied while looking envious.

Goblins in this world were different from other monsters. They could craft artifacts, medicine, weapons, etc. Humans usually tamed them rather than subjugating them. Properly managing goblins gave whoever owned them a handsome profit.

Goblins showing up from a dungeon was equivalent to striking oil back in my original world.

"This place belongs to Chae Nayun?" I asked.

"You didn't know? I think we're only able to use this mountain because Nayun approved it. After all, Yulak Mountain is quite famous," Yoo Yeonha replied.

“I see...” I wrapped my injured arm with a bandage.

Yoo Yeonha looked at me for a while before asking, “Are you alright?”

“No, it hurts really bad.”

I had no idea if I was poisoned or not, but I had finished applying first aid with stigma’s mana.

Yoo Yeonha stared at my arm before nodding, “You seem just fine.”

“I just said I’m not.”

“Whatever. I think we should descend now. Follow me,” Yoo Yeonha began walking down the mountain alone.

* * *

It was ten in the evening by the time we descended the mountain.

We scored big time by finding a mana vein, killing a mountain troll, and identifying the presence of goblins.

“Those are quite the achievements. Congratulations,” Seo Youngji praised us with a smile.

I received a Cube badge for doing a good job with Yoo Yeonha and her minions. I somehow ended up being lumped with them.

— I’m telling you the mole was fucking huge!

— I ran into a golem. Ah, but it looked so freaking disgusting. You know, right? The grotesque golems that appear on mountains.

Other cadets also finished the class and sat on nearby benches while chatting about their experiences. Most had encountered a monster or two.

“I’m going,” I waved to Yoo Yeonha, who stood with her eyes fixed on her smartwatch.

She suddenly stopped me from leaving, "Wait a minute."

"What?"

Yoo Yeonha looked at my bandaged hand before rolling her eyes, "No, it's nothing."

"What the?" I grumbled in response.

She pouted, "I could've easily taken care of a goblin, you know?"

She looked quite cute, but her words contained a thorn.

I smirked at her, "I'm sure you would've."

"I'm serious. It's not that I'm not grateful for the help, but I want you to know that I didn't need it."

I was well aware. After all, Yoo Yeonha would become a strong hero. She was stronger than me right now. That meant her pride was quite strong too. The feeling of being protected didn't sit well with her.

"I know. I'm serious."

I tried to show her that I agreed before she finally waved and dismissed me, "Alright, you can go now if you understand."

She sounded a bit embarrassed and annoyed at the same time.

"Yes, ma'am," I sarcastically replied.

I felt someone's gaze scanning me from head to toe. I immediately stopped and looked around, but the feeling disappeared.

"What the hell is it this time?"

I wasn't sure if I had been mistaken because I felt too tired. This was my limit no matter how much my stamina improved. I tried my best to ignore the feeling and checked my smartwatch as I walked.

[You have gained 47 SP]

[You have gained 27 SP]

[You have gained 15 SP]

[You have gained 32 SP]

“Hoho...”

I gained an abundant amount of SP these days. This made me grin from ear to ear when a message popped up on my smartwatch.

Ding!

[Our Hunting Club will finally go on a trip tomorrow! ^-^]

[We're going to Norway, so please inform us right away if you can't make it.]

* * *

Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep...

“Today is the day!”

Chae Nayun jumped out of bed.

She woke up early today. No, she didn't sleep at all. Today was originally a day trip, but it had changed into a two day trip.

“Heup!”

She carried her bag and ran to the meeting place as fast as she could.

Most of them had already gathered at the Seoul portal, but she couldn't find Kim Hajin.

That guy would probably appear right before they departed judging from his personality.

“Hi, Nayun.”

“Hey, long time no see.”

Several cadets greeted her and she greeted them back while leisurely walking.

However, she felt anxious deep inside. A mishap had occurred during their last meeting, but she steeled her resolve to properly do things this time.

Chae Nayun was dead set on pairing with Kim Hajin and casually talking with him.

“Someone isn't here yet? Hmm... Kim Hajin? Who was that again?” the club president grumbled.

“The gunner. You heard of him, right?”

“Ah, that guy?”

The sophomores talked about Kim Hajin.

A man wearing long sleeves and slacks walked towards the crowd. Kim Hajin bowed and greeted his seniors before joining the group.

Chae Nayun suppressed the smile forming on her face and slowly inched towards Kim Hajin.

“Listen up everyone! We're going to depart now!”

The group made their way to the portal after the club president announced their departure.

Cube cadets didn't have to line up and could access the portals mainly reserved for the military. They reached Norway in no time thanks to that.

They finished checking out at the portal airport and took a car to the winter villa.

Chae Nayun maintained a certain distance from Kim Hajin as they traveled. She made sure not to be too close while staying three or four steps away.

Their eyes occasionally met and Chae Nayun would awkwardly flash a smile. Kim Hajin just looked away without any reaction. Nevertheless, Chae Nayun felt happy since she would soon be paired with Kim Hajin.

However...

“Eh? What is this? This shouldn't be happening. Damn it! Who did this?! What's going on?”

Chae Nayun muttered to herself like a crazy person at the villa. The future in this world had slightly changed. This specific event of all things had changed!

Kim Hajin ended up getting paired with some random girl.

“Ah...”

Chae Nayun fumed over what happened. She still had a lot of time before the event ended, but all her enthusiasm disappeared as she dragged herself to her room.

The sudden turn of events annoyed her, but she couldn't do anything about it. She had to start planning what to do with their remaining time.

Chae Nayun jumped into bed and closed her eyes.

Snore... Snore... Snore... Snore...

She snored a few times and opened her eyes.

“Yaaawn?”

She let out a big yawn after waking up and felt strange for some reason. Her mind felt clear and all her fatigue had washed away.

Chae Nayun nervously looked at her smartwatch.

“Huh?”

11:40 P.M.

11:40 P.M.

11:40 P.M.

“Heok!”

She gasped in horror, jumped out of bed, and began tapping her innocent smartwatch. Of course, the time wouldn't change just because she desperately tapped on it.

“Ah fuck, what the hell is this?!” Chae Nayun exclaimed in horror and ran over to open the window.

“H-Hiiik!”

The sky had turned pitch black. In short, every program they planned for this trip had already concluded.

Chae Nayun despaired at the night sky.

You stupid fool! You lazy sleepyhead! Your IQ is lower than a dolphin's...

She pulled her hair and cursed herself, but froze when a familiar scent tickled her nose.

“Wait a minute...”

This oddly familiar scent came from outside and slowly invaded her room.

Chae Nayun wondered what it was when her eyes suddenly widened and she exclaimed, “It’s a cigarette!”

A bolt of lightning struck her as she recalled the book, [103 Ways to Build Successful Relationships with Others].

The author said the most important one among the 103 ways was... sharing something in common!

* * *

How could those stars shine so brightly when the night sky, darker than anything else, surrounded them?

The cold evening breeze blew past me and the swaying trees resonated like a quiet melody.

There I was, smoking a cigarette in the tranquil Norwegian woods.

“...?”

Someone’s footsteps interrupted the peaceful surrounding.

Thud! Thud! Thud! Thud!

I initially thought it was a monster judging from how loud the steps were, but the footsteps soon stopped a distance away to collect its breath.

I looked towards the direction out of curiosity when Chae Nayun suddenly appeared with a “Tada!”

“...”

“...”

My brain stopped functioning for a moment when she popped out of nowhere. Why did she suddenly appear here when she spent the whole day who knows where.

Chae Nayun nervously gulped before pointing at me, “Hey, what’s that? What are you doing right now?”

I looked down at the cigarette in my hand and looked at Chae Nayun again, but my brain still wasn’t functioning. I couldn’t think of an excuse.

Chae Nayun pushed her hair back and asked again, “What? You’re smoking now?”

She slurred her speech and her eyes looked a bit swollen as if she had rushed over after waking up.

Did the stench of my cigarette wake her? Now I felt slightly sorry for her. No, I didn’t. I couldn’t say anything in response.

Chae Nayun reached out and said, “You little hooligan. Hey, hand that thing over.”

“What thing?”

“What else is there? Hand it over.”

“This?”

I looked down at the smoldering cigarette in my hand.

Chae Nayun licked her lips for some strange reason as she looked at the cigarette.

“Hey, hand it over. I said give it to me.”

“I can just throw it away. Why should I give it to you?”

I was about to rub the cigarette on the ground when her hand suddenly rushed in and snatched it away.

I jumped in surprise.

Chae Nayun casually placed the cigarette between her index and middle finger. She looked well-versed with it for some reason.

“Hey... what are you doing?” I asked, but Chae Nayun took a drag of the cigarette without giving me a chance to stop her.

She continued inhaling the smoke before puffing it out with a “Hooo.” She spat out the smoke while leaning against a wall.

“I suddenly got a craving. It’s nothing big. I smoked this before thanks to some guy,” Chae Nayun said with a smirk.

However, her face soon turned purple. Her cheeks swelled and her hand holding the cigarette began trembling too.

I looked at Chae Nayun in disbelief.

“Hey.”

“What?”

“Why don’t you just stop?”

“Stop what... I’m really... fine right now...” she replied while trying to sound as nonchalant as possible. She took another drag of the cigarette. “What’s wrong... with me?” she asked while wobbling.

I passed her a water bottle and she drank it so fast that she ended up coughing.

“Cough! Cough!”

“You can’t even eat junk food, so how did you expect to smoke a cigarette?” I sighed in disbelief.

Chae Nayun had a sensitive palette, so it would be impossible for her to smoke unless she lost her sense of taste.

“What? How did you know about that? I’ve never... told anyone...”
Chae Nayun looked at me with wide eyes.

She was still quite sharp despite her current condition.

Her question slightly flustered me, but I tried my best not to show it and nonchalantly replied, “You’re quite famous for it, you know? You don’t even eat our school’s food.”

Chae Nayun seemed to be deep in thought before nodding in agreement. She shook her head and nodded several more times.

“Well, I guess that makes sense. This is nothing like that though. My body just isn’t used to it because it’s been a long time since I last smoked. You understand?”

“What long time? Did you start smoking when you were thirteen or something? Why are you trying to put on airs all of a sudden?”

“Put on airs? Hey, it’s not like that. I’m not bluffing, but... sigh... Never mind, what would you know?” Chae Nayun said as she looked at me in disappointment.

She squatted on the ground out of frustration and refused to get up for a while.

I looked at what she was doing. She drew something in the snow. A circle with eyes, a nose, and lips. Its eyes looked fierce for some reason.

“Hum hum...”

I took this opportunity to escape and slowly inched my way towards the building. I felt like I would freeze to death out here, so...

“Hey...”

However, Chae Nayun turned around and looked at me with eyes like a lost puppy. Where did she learn this new skill?

“...”

“Hey. Hey. Hey. Hey.”

“...”

“Hey. Hey.”

“What is it?”

“What is what?”

Chae Nayun spoke again, “I heard Kim Suho told you.”

“Told me what?”

“The club.”

“Ah... He did.”

Chae Nayun suddenly sighed at my response.

I had no clue what was going on in her head and there was no way to find out. Was it because I mentioned Chae Jinyoon last time? Or was it because of the incident in Paris? It felt as if Chae Nayun had drastically changed recently.

Chae Nayun composed herself and asked, “Do you want to join? The club I mean.”

I silently stared at her, but she avoided my eyes and looked at my chest instead. Her hands were trembling and I could see her white breath from the cold.

Crackle... Krwaaaaang!

Something flashed in the sky and sounded like an explosion.

“Ah fuck! That scared the shit out of me!” Chae Nayun screamed as she jumped onto my back.

Something soft rubbed against my back when she hopped on. I suddenly felt nervous because of a totally different reason.

Anyways, I looked at the night sky.

Krwaaaaang!

Numerous streaks of light flashed across the sky.

I tapped Chae Nayun holding onto me. No, she was squeezing the living daylights out of me.

“Open your eyes. It’s not something to be afraid of. I think you’ll be disappointed if you miss it.”

“What?”

“It’s a mana phenomenon.”

This mana phenomenon was something that occurred when mana intertwined with each other in the air. It resembled lightning to put it simply. No, it would be more appropriate to compare it to an aurora since we were in the northern hemisphere.

Mana zipped across the night sky in a straight line and pierced through every cloud standing in its way. It left behind a wave of mana that mixed and illuminated the clouds.

“Wow... what is that?” Chae Nayun asked with sparkling eyes like a child. “Hey, I asked you what that is. Huh? What the hell?”

She noticed that she had her arms and legs wrapped around my body.

Chae Nayun blinked a few times and screamed, “Kyaaaah!”

She fell off my back as if struck by lightning.

“Ah, sorry. My bad. Sorry. It was a mistake. Sorry. What? Why are you looking at me like that? I said it was a mistake!”

“I didn’t say anything.”

“It was really a mistake! I’m serious!”

“Alright...”

“I didn’t do that on purpose! Hey, are you thinking I did that on purpose by any chance?”

Chae Nayun stirred up a fuss over nothing when my smartwatch buzzed for the first time in a long time.

Bzzzt!

I looked at my smartwatch without much thought.

[Main Character Setting Has Been Edited – ■■■■]

[You have met ■■■■ in your world.]

[The episodes from here on out will significantly change.]

[Your luck has activated!]

[You have gained a massive amount of SP.]

[You have obtained 4,500 SP.]

The system greeted me with an absurd message after a long absence. It felt like getting struck hard in the back of my head.

Side Stories 50

Chae Nayun (5)

[You have met ■■■ in your world.]

[The episodes from here on out will significantly change.]

[Your luck has activated!]

[You have gained a massive amount of SP.]

[You have obtained 4,500 SP.]

A sharp pain stung my eyes and traveled to my brain.

I checked the system message again to make sure I wasn't dreaming. I had to pinch myself a few times to be certain. Then I looked at Chae Nayun.

"Hey, are you joining the club or not?" Chae Nayun asked while pouting with her arms crossed over her chest.

However, my mind was preoccupied with questions that I desperately needed the answers to. I began to fidget anxiously after reading the system messages. Did the ■■■ in the system message refer to Chae Nayun? Did the system somehow intervene and do something to her?

"What the hell? Hey..." Chae Nayun grumbled.

I didn't know the answers to those questions, but Chae Nayun was definitely related to the system messages just now. My next course of action became obvious. After all, I couldn't just ignore such a huge variable, right?

"Let's do it..."

“Hmm? What? Do what?” Chae Nayun’s ears turned red and her eyes trembled.

Her reaction slightly bothered me, but I ignored it and clarified the misunderstanding.

“The Pharmacy Club.”

“Ah,” Chae Nayun muttered while blinking a few times.

She made a strange noise that resembled a boiling kettle before finally clearing her throat, “Ehem. Alright, I’ll let you join. However, I have one condition.”

“What condition? You were the one asking me to join...”

“Regardless, I’m the club president! Anyways, I want you to come to the club room every day.”

“What if I don’t want to?”

“Then that leaves me no choice,” Chae Nayun looked at me with a solemn expression and stretched out her right hand, “You pass.”

“...”

I didn’t bother shaking her hand. Chae Nayun frowned and continued shaking her hand in front of me. She kept trying to force me to shake her hand.

I reluctantly shook her hand in the end, which made her feel triumphant for some reason.

“Hey.”

I decided to tell her about something that had been bothering me for a while.

“What?”

“You have eye boogers.”

“What?”

I pointed at her left eye and she immediately wiped it with her sleeve. A huge eye booger the size of a chip crumb appeared on her sleeve.

“Oh, this? This isn’t eye booger. Geez, does this look like that to you? This is...” Chae Nayun mumbled before suddenly running away.

I couldn’t help but smile at her childishness, but my face soon stiffened after she disappeared. I looked at my smartwatch again.

[You have met ■■■ in your world.]

[The episodes from here on out will significantly change.]

It seemed I would have to stay up all night again. No, there honestly wasn’t even much time left for me to catch some sleep.

I scratched my head and looked at the overgrown trees in the forest. The snow-covered trees seemed to encircle the entire world. I could see the moon peeking out from behind them. It brightly shone with a pale coldness.

* * *

I woke up without my alarm on the last weekend of the month. I stretched and checked on the almond (Evandel), who continued to snore in the makeshift nest I made. Then I hopped into the shower.

[Monster of the Day]

[Cube’s Night View.jpg]

[Images of the new, infamous group in Pandemonium, Girasong.]

[Association News: We will definitely solve the discrimination against heroes who didn’t graduate from Cube.]

[Modern Tycoon vs Prestigious Hero Family]

I glossed over trending topics on the community forum before logging into a site similar to Youtube.

“Hmm?”

I saw a familiar face after scrolling for a bit.

[Seo Youngji’s Hero Survival – Season 3]

Our new Cube instructor, Seo Youngji, had participated as a judge in some sort of survival program. The TV program gathered hero academy dropouts and the winner would be able to become a hero. The program was quite famous and already in its third season.

[Youngji unni is so pretty ㅇㅇㅇㅇㅇ]

[That’s what the most agile hero looks like... Wow... She’s unbelievably fast...]

[I can’t stand that Kim Yongin guy... Argh!]

[They aren’t dropouts for nothing hahaha! Look at how shitty their mindsets are.]

[Did that Daniel dude come here to flirt with women? Crazy bastard...]

I wasted around twenty minutes watching the program before turning it off and leaving.

Ding!

I received a message when I reached the first floor.

[Hey, r u ub?]

[Go 4 food if ur ub?]

The messy texts came from Chae Nayun. She looked like the one who needed to get up first. I didn't bother replying and made my way to the cafeteria.

"Thank you."

The breakfast menu consisted of bibimbap, crab stew, salad, and ribs. I brought my tray filled with nutritious food to the table and sat down. The cafeteria didn't have too many cadets on a Sunday morning.

I ate my breakfast while focusing on the system. Not one of my concerns from last week had been resolved yet. I hadn't found a use for the absurd amount of SP I gained or who the ■■■ in the system message referred to.

► [Dazzling Dexterity] [Low] [No Attribute] [Evolving] [Grade 10]

— Dexterity

The user's hands will become quite flexible and crafty.

— Dazzling

The user's hands will move in ways that defy logic and common sense.

I contemplated whether or not to create this gift since yesterday. Dexterity might not seem flashy or useful, but this useful ability would help me with daily tasks like cooking, drawing, and writing. It would also help in combat with shooting, swordsmanship, hand-to-hand, etc.

However, it cost a hefty 3,000 SP. It originally cost only 2,000 SP, but adding the word dazzling increased the price by another 1,000 SP.

[Do you wish to save this setting?]

I contemplated whether to hit save or not when someone took a seat at another table across from me. We looked at each other with one table between us.

She just got out of the shower with her hair still drenched and had a towel around her neck.

“Oh, it’s Kim Hajin. Hi!”

Chae Nayun covered her mouth in surprise and waved at me.

I nodded and stood from my seat. I wasn’t avoiding her or anything. I just finished eating and didn’t see a point sitting there any longer.

* * *

— Welcome, Rank 934 Kim Hajin.

A mechanical voice greeted me as I stepped into the training room.

I hated this thing whenever I came here. Did this robot like making fun of me for being ranked 934th?

I changed into my training attire and began the session. I lightly stretched before sitting on the bench and lifting weights.

— Welcome, Rank 4 Chae Nayun.

I heard a familiar name and my eyes naturally went to the entrance. Chae Nayun stood there with her wet hair.

She waved after seeing me, “Oh? It’s Kim Hajin. Hi!”

I simply nodded and focused on my workout again.

Around a minute passed and Chae Nayun returned with her training attire on and came next to me.

She grabbed a dumbbell in each hand.

“Heup!”

Chae Nayun proceeded to lift the weights that were... quite heavy. Her weights were three times more than what I could carry.

“Huff! Huff!”

“...”

Is this some sort of new hazing? Why did she feel the need to show off in front of me? More importantly, how could she have so much strength with those thin arms? Which crazy bastard created this story setting?

“Fwah! Fwah!”

Chae Nayun began to get on my nerves, but I didn’t show it on my face. I left the training center after working out for just ten minutes.

“Fwah! Fwah!”

* * *

The third thing on my agenda was the firing range.

— Rank 934, Kim Hajin, confirmed.

— Creating targets. Please choose the number of targets. You may choose a minimum of two and a maximum of twenty.

“Maximum targets. Start.”

— Creating targets. Please choose your difficulty. You may choose from one to nine.

“7.”

— Training will soon begin. Difficult Level: 7.

Twenty holographic images of flying monsters appeared.

I aimed at them and pulled the trigger. The flying monsters instantly fell.

— Training has ended. Duration: 29.86 seconds. Score: 83/100

— Training has ended. Duration: 28.97 seconds. Score: 91/100

— Training has ended. Duration: 29.15 seconds. Score: 87/100...

I repeated the thirty second training sessions around a hundred times.

“It only increased by 1%?”

My [Master Sharpshooter] no longer grew with just training alone. I only gained 0.6% after grinding for two hours. I didn’t have many options since real-life combat still scared me.

“Should I start going to dungeons...” I grumbled to myself and made my way out of the training room.

I didn’t know if it was just a coincidence, but I bumped into Chae Nayun outside the door.

“Ack!” I jumped in surprise.

“Oh? Hi Kim Hajin!” Chae Nayun waved at me with a huge smile.

I couldn’t respond as I calmed my heart from the shock. Anger began to surge from within me for some reason as I looked at her brightly smiling.

“Hey, what the hell are you up to?”

“What?”

“Why do you keep popping up in front of me? Are you following me?”

Chae Nayun frowned at my words and retorted, “Hey, what bullshit are you spouting? I came to train too.”

“You came to what?”

“Wow, this bastard is quite delusional. Are you a narcissist? Do you think everything revolves around you? Ah, get lost if you’re done training. I have to train too.”

“...”

Only then did I manage to compose myself. Well, she was also a sharpshooter and she wasn’t the type to be lazy. It made perfect sense for her to come train instead of following me around.

[Main Character Setting Has Been Edited – ■■■■]

I guess the ■■■■ kept bothering me.

“You didn’t forget about tomorrow, right?”

“Huh? What’s tomorrow?”

“Ah, damn it. I knew you wouldn’t see the message. Go check your messages. I sent you something,” Chae Nayun grumbled in frustration and pointed at my wrist.

I checked my smartwatch and found several messages.

[Come to the club room as soon as class is finished tomorrow. We’ll be having our inauguration ceremony.]

She must’ve meant this. I simply nodded after checking the message.

“Don’t be late. Everyone else will be there too.”

“Alright, alright. I’m leaving now.”

I lightly waved and walked past her.

She suddenly said something in a small voice, “Also...”

It was quite uncharacteristic of her to sound like that, so I stopped in my tracks.

“Can’t you reply just once?”

I turned around and looked at her.

Chae Nayun was smiling, but there was something different about her this time. There seemed to be a hint of sadness in her smile.

But I wondered... what was there for her to be sad about regarding me?

I checked my message log in case I missed something important. I had ignored a lot of her messages.

[Hey, r u ub?]

[Go 4 food if ur ub?]

[R u eating alone?]

[Why are you eating like a pig? Haha!]

[Who knew I would run into you at the cafeteria?]

[Hey, are you free tomorrow after class? We’re having the inauguration ceremony, so you should come too.]

[Got it?]

[Answer me if you got it.]

[Hey, are you going to ignore the club president?]

[Ah... you’re pissing me off now kid.]

[Hey, fucking bastard.]

[Sorry.]

[Picture Attached]

[Video Attached]

[Mobile Gift Cards Attached]

[Did you get fooled? Hehe.]

[—.—]

[Hey, can't you reply if you read it?]

[Wow... Look at this punk...]

[Ah, forget about it.]

[Come to the club room as soon as class is finished tomorrow. We'll be having the inauguration ceremony.]

I never knew she sent me so many messages.

“Alright... I'll be there tomorrow...”

* * *

The next day, Chae Nayun woke up in class when the bell rang. Well, she actually slept through the bell and only woke up when Yi Jiyeon shook her awake.

“Nayun, it's time to get up. Class is over.”

“Huh? Oh, ok... Slurp...”

Chae Nayun wiped her drool and sat in her chair dazed for a while before shaking her head. She opened her eyes and saw a bunch of nauseating formulas on the board.

“Wow... what the hell are all of those? Is that some sort of alien language or something?” she grumbled.

She still had no talent for theory despite regressing and couldn't understand why she had to sit through such a class. After all, she had no problem barging into a dungeon and navigating through it by instinct instead of using all this complicated jargon.

Yoo Yeonha spoke while arranging her pencil case, “Nayun, I heard our club room has been decided.”

“Oh, right! Hey, I'm going ahead!” Chae Nayun ran out of the room like the wind.

Yi Yeonghan, Kim Suho, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Jiyeon, and Shin Jonghak watched her scurrying away like an excited puppy before they walked out as well.

The club room was located on the fourth floor of the Serenity Wing, which was just constructed last year. Their room was called the wood room.

“Oh, this place looks nice,” Chae Nayun softly exclaimed while looking around.

It was more spacious than most classrooms and decorated with expensive furniture and items thanks to her family background. They also had expensive leather sofas, computers, research tools, medical almanacs, etc.

“Hmm... Looks like they did their best. This seems usable for now. Besides, I've always wanted to make my own club. Something related to medicine will also be a good boost to my resume. Oh, which brand are these furniture from?” Yoo Yeonha asked as she inspected the leather sofas and the room.

Clack... Clack... Clack... Clack...

Her high heels soon stopped at the kitchenette with a refrigerator and basket of snacks. Yoo Yeonha inspected the basket while trying to look as disinterested as possible.

Potato chips, cup noodles, chocolates, and various other snacks sparkled like jewels in her eyes. She stood there bewitched by them.

“Do they expect us to read all this?” Chae Nayun grumbled as she took out the medical almanacs one by one.

Flip... Flip... Flip...

She flipped through the pages before putting them back on the shelf.

Kim Suho suddenly appeared and said, “We should read them.”

“You scared me! When did you get here?”

“I was right behind you. Anyways, you should read all of those and do things properly if you’re going to start something.”

Kim Suho seemed serious about pharmacy now.

Chae Nayun smirked and sat on the leather sofa, “Yeah, I should... but what is she doing?”

Yoo Yeonha stood motionless in front of the snack basket and stared at it like a ghost who died without being able to eat snacks or something. Her long hair didn’t help with her ghostly appearance.

Ddruuk...

The door to the club room opened again.

Chae Nayun assumed it was probably Yi Yeonghan, so she didn’t pay much attention to it. She was half right as Yi Yeonghan entered with Seo Youngji.

“Huh?” Chae Nayun felt surprised at the sight of Seo Youngji.

Seo Youngji was quite tall and also had an imposing aura as a high rank hero. She fixed her glasses when she made eye contact with Chae Nayun and Kim Suho.

The two cadets respectfully bowed and greeted her without even realizing it.

Meanwhile, Yoo Yeonha's full attention was still on the snack basket.

"Ah, hero Seo Youngji? Are you perhaps...?" Chae Nayun asked.

"Yes, I will be the supervisor for the Pharmacy Club. It will only be for this semester though," Seo Youngji said with a shrug.

Chae Nayun nodded while in a daze and wondered to herself, Oh... so our supervisor is Seo Youngji, but why would a hero of her caliber work as the supervisor for a hobby club? Is she that free?

Someone rummaging through plastic could be heard amid their awkward silence. Yoo Yeonha kept poking at a bag of potato chips for some strange reason.

Poke... Poke... Poke... Poke...

"Then, shall we start by introducing ourselves?" Seo Youngji asked as she looked around the room.

"My name is Kim Suho."

"I'm Yi Yeonghan. I'm a huge fan! I follow the survival program you're..."

"Shut it. I'm Chae Nayun."

"...Shin Jonghak."

"Huh? What the? Hey, Shin Jonghak! When did you get here? No, why are you even here?"

"I told him to come. I'm Yoo Yeonha. It's been a while, hero Seo Youngji."

Yoo Yeonha snapped out of her obsession with the snack basket and nonchalantly sat on the sofa. Some drool could still be seen on her lips.

“Alright, my name is Seo Youngji. I’m the rank 7 hero from the Hero Association,” Seo Youngji introduced herself with a smile.

Meanwhile, Chae Nayun looked around the room like a meerkat. Where the hell is he? Why isn’t he here? Don’t tell me he’s not coming... but he said he would. She anxiously thought to herself.

“I’ll be speaking informally to all of you from now on. I hope everyone is fine with that,” Seo Youngji continued.

Ah, crap! I didn’t tell him where the club room is! Chae Nayun inwardly exclaimed.

Chae Nayun was about to message him on her smartwatch during Seo Youngji’s speech when the door to the club room suddenly opened.

“I’ll be your supervisor and...?” Seo Youngji stopped midway in her sentence.

She looked over at the door and saw the cadet she referred to as the Cube mutant, Kim Hajin.

Kim Suho smiled and Yoo Yeonha narrowed her eyes at him. Yi Yeonghan only focused on Seo Youngji while Shin Jonghak grumbled under his breath. Chae Nayun covered her mouth with both hands when Kim Hajin entered the room.

“Are you a member of this club too?” Seo Youngji asked.

Kim Hajin only nodded at her question.

A vein protruded from Seo Youngji’s forehead at the Cube mutant’s rude response. However, she tried her best to suppress her anger and forced a smile, “Alright, then...”

Despite her efforts, Kim Hajin completely ignored her and looked at something else on his smartwatch. His actions were indeed quite rude.

Seo Youngji was a high rank hero supervising their small club. It would only be for a semester, but his reaction was still unexpected. Did he not know what an honor it was to meet a high rank hero because he never met one before?

There were less than three thousand high rank heroes in the world, so it was quite difficult to meet one. What was wrong with this kid and his rude behavior?

People would kill to meet Seo Youngji and she knew her worth quite well.

Seo Youngji, the high rank hero from the association, could easily subdue a group of cadets with only one hand. She gritted her teeth in frustration and growled, "Can you all focus? Especially you, Kim Hajin."

Side Stories 51

Chae Nayun (6)

“I will explain the basics of medicine.”

Seo Youngji stood in front of the whiteboard and lectured us. I never imagined an important character like her would become a supervisor for a school club. She was supposed to appear in the middle of the story, but suddenly appeared now.

I couldn't help but find her intentions suspicious.

“The basics of medicine are none other than materials,” Seo Youngji explained as she began her lecture.

She prepared quite thoroughly and even used a beam projector to present a PowerPoint.

“Take a look at this medicinal plant known as the white frost. You might think it's easy to spot because of its white leaves, but you'll only be able to find this plant in permafrost because it lives by sucking the essence of snow. That's why this is a precious plant that's quite difficult to find. As you all know, the color white represents the absence of attribute and protection. You can use the roots of the white frost plant to make liquor...”

Seo Youngji explained various medicinal plants as the cadets earnestly listened.

I continued to watch this scene that didn't exist in the original story. I paid attention to everything with my own eyes.

“Ah, teacher,” Chae Nayun raised her hand.

This girl always slept through classes, but enthusiastically held a pen and a notebook now.

“Yes?”

“Then, does something like an elixir exist?”

Yoo Yeonha covered her mouth and snickered. Yi Yeonghan also openly sneered at Chae Nayun. Both of them were well aware that something like an elixir was just a myth.

However, an elixir actually existed in this world unbeknownst to them. This godly medicine’s rarity could be compared to a unicorn, the Ruyi Jingu Bang^[1], or Excalibur. Only I knew for a fact that it existed, but even I didn’t know how to make one.

“The elixir is nothing but a myth. However, modern medicines known as elixirs do exist,” Seo Youngji explained.

She was surprisingly prepared for such a question and immediately transitioned to a slide about modern elixirs as Yoo Yeonha and Yi Yeonghan laughed at Chae Nayun.

A picture of something sold at an auction thirteen years ago appeared on the screen.

[Tears of Heaven – 50,000,000,000₩]

“Tears of Heaven?” Chae Nayun’s eyes suddenly widened.

The snickering Yoo Yeonha also sat up straight. Even Shin Jonghak, who seemed disinterested ever since the lecture began, showed interest.

The rare item drew everyone’s attention and they all turned serious.

“That’s right. I’m sure all of you know that potions or healing abilities can’t treat illnesses, but the Tears of Heaven is known as a miraculous medicine that can cure anything and everything.”

The Tears of Heaven was the closest thing to the godly elixir. No one knew if it was manmade or something that naturally appeared. It was sold at the auction house in the neutral state of Rukr and an anonymous buyer bought it for fifty billion won in cash.

“But isn’t that auction house in Pandemonium?” Kim Suho raised his hand and asked.

Seo Youngji smiled and shook her head, “No, neutral states like Rukr are completely different from Pandemonium.”

She proceeded to introduce the few known neutral states: Rukr, Leon, New Alliance, etc.

I had created some of them and never heard of others since the story didn’t progress far enough for them to appear.

“Neutral states can survive on their own without external help. They don’t depend on trade such as importing and exporting goods. Also, you shouldn’t think that only djinns live there. They probably have fewer djinns than ordinary people.”

Yi Yeonghan tilted his head in confusion and asked, “Then are we allowed to go to those places?”

“Nothing is stopping you. You will all be heroes one day, so you can even go to Pandemonium if you want,” Seo Youngji replied with a shrug.

Pandemonium was quite peaceful despite its infamy as the center of all evil. Of course, murders occurred in the streets every day and survival of the fittest reigned as opposed to civil laws. However, not every living being there was a djinn. Numerous humans such as mercenaries, bounty hunters, dungeon hunters, corrupted heroes, and Jin Sahyuk lived in the metropolis known as Pandemonium.

Neutral states were quite peaceful too considering even Pandemonium enjoyed peace. Other nations had no reason to conquer these neutral states with powerful backers lurking in the shadows. More importantly, these states usually paid protection fees to ensure their survival.

“You can even meet other races there. It might be a rare occurrence though. Of course, they restrict normal people from entering their cities. It should be fine for us since I’m a hero and you are all soon-to-be heroes,” Seo Youngji informed them.

This world differed from the modern one I came from where unclaimed territories didn’t exist. Nearly half of this world remained desolate and unclaimed. Humans definitely didn’t rule the world here.

“Oh...” Chae Nayun muttered in awe.

On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha looked serious for some reason. Knowing her, she was probably calculating the risks and rewards from those neutral states.

Kim Suho reacted the same as Chae Nayun, but also seemed more serious.

As for me? Well...

“So, shall we visit that place this weekend for our club’s first excursion?” Seo Youngji asked.

I looked at her and she smiled back. Her stunning beauty resembled a fox.

I lowered my gaze to her smartwatch and attempted to hack it.

[150 SP will be required to hack Seo Youngji’s smartwatch.]

“Hmm... 150 SP...”

It would be useful to access her smartwatch, but 150 SP was too steep a price. However, it wouldn’t be a good idea to follow her to a neutral state without knowing her intentions.

Chae Nayun suddenly raised her hand and asked, “Will there be any issues? We need permission before going to such places, right?”

“We’ll be easily approved if we choose the most peaceful neutral state, which is New Alliance,” Seo Youngji replied.

I rubbed my chin and contemplated whether or not to hack her when I thought of a brilliant idea. I stared into the air and waited for the text to appear.

► [Hacking] [Intermediate Rank] [No Attribute]

— Hacking

Break through an object’s security system and take control of it.*

The amount of stigma consumed will vary based on the strength of the security system.*

I added a few more words to the new gift I just created.

[3,000 SP is required.]

[Do you wish to save this setting?]

It was quite expensive because we lived in an age of information. It seemed crazy to spend 3,000 SP on a support ability like [Hacking], but...

[The cost of Hacking will be reduced if it is added as a subcategory to your authority, Setting Intervention.]

[The required SP has been decreased to 1,500 SP.]

[Do you wish to save this setting?]

I welcomed this unexpected discount that made it more feasible. I contemplated one last time before hitting [YES]. The golden text in front of me scattered into the air like spring petals.

[Your luck has activated!]

[The effect of your gift, Hacking, has been increased...]

“Then, our first destination will be New Alliance.”

“Yay! That sounds great!”

Meanwhile, the club finished choosing their trip.

“Hey, it’s fun, right? Right?!” Chae Nayun asked me with a huge grin. She seemed to be enjoying herself.

I nonchalantly nodded without a word.

* * *

Seo Youngji’s ability to get things done was truly commendable and befitting of a high rank hero. We finalized the trip on Monday, but she already formed a detailed plan and distributed it to us the next day.

Thanks to that, we went to the portal after classes ended on Thursday. We headed to St. Petersburg through the portal. All five of us looked tired after finishing our classes.

The Pharmacy Club members stood at the square of the second city in Russia, St. Petersburg. We curiously looked around our surroundings.

“Ah... It’s been a while since I got to enjoy the weekends, but... what is this...?” Yi Yeonghan sighed and complained.

I felt the same. I would be busy this weekend and didn’t have the luxury to be tied down here.

“Hey, get lost if you’re going to keep complaining,” Chae Nayun crossed her arms over her chest.

She displayed her authority as the club president and Yi Yeonghan could only grumble.

“Kim Hajin, are you alright with this?” Yi Yeonghan asked.

“Not really.”

“Huh? Hey, club president! This guy wants to leave too!” Yi Yeonghan shouted and pointed at me.

Chae Nayun squinted her eyes at me, but I didn’t shy away from her inquisitive gaze. She could only pout in the end and didn’t say anything.

“What the? Why aren’t you saying anything to him?” Yi Yeonghan protested.

“Kim Hajin is smart. We need him.”

“Oh... you’re right...”

Yi Yeonghan backed down after Chae Nayun’s simple explanation.

Meanwhile, I opened the map on my smartwatch and checked the neutral state of New Alliance. It seemed to be located somewhere with a very damp and gloomy climate.

“Looks like it’ll be cold,” I grumbled.

“What? Cold? Don’t be such a wuss. I’ll be there with you!” Chae Nayun smacked my shoulder.

Seriously, she kept hanging around next to me since a while ago?

I took a step back, but she stepped back as well. I stepped to the right and immediately went left. Chae Nayun tried to follow, but my sudden change in direction caused her feet to tangle.

“Hmm? Hey, I think that’s our ride,” Kim Suho said.

A vehicle appeared around the corner and drove towards us. The sturdy, black SUV arrived with the sunset’s orange hue behind it.

The SUV stopped in front of us and the window rolled down. As expected, Seo Youngji sat in the driver's seat.

"Oh? Nobody is late?" she said.

"Wow!" Yi Yeonghan exclaimed as he looked at the car with sparkling eyes. He admired it so much that he didn't even dare to touch it.

"Is this the Silverwood series?" he asked.

"Yes, that's exactly right. I got it recently too," Seo Youngji replied.

"It's a used car..." I thought in my head, but ended up saying it out loud after reading the car's description. I quickly covered my mouth, but it was too late as Seo Youngji glared at me.

"You... You seem to know a bit about cars?" she asked.

"Huh? Ah, well, this car would still fetch seven to eight hundred million won even if it's used," I said with an awkward smile.

Chae Nayun stood there and muttered something strange under her breath, So he likes cars...

"Hop in," Seo Youngji curtly said after I dampened her mood.

"Yes, ma'am!"

Kim Suho sat in the passenger seat. Yoo Yeonha and Yi Yeonghan sat in the first row. Chae Nayun was about to enter the car when she flinched and stopped.

"Hmm..." She looked back and forth between me and Shin Jonghak a few times.

Then she looked back at the car and muttered something under her breath. Chae Nayun waved after finishing her calculations.

"Hey, Shin Jonghak. You go in first. Sit beside Yi Yeonghan."

“Why?” Shin Jonghak grumbled and vehemently opposed when...

“Just go home if you don’t want to.”

“I was about to get in. Don’t worry.”

Yoo Yeonha, Yi Yeonghan, and Shin Jonghak sat in the first row. Only two seats remained behind them.

Chae Nayun pushed me and said, “It’s your turn. Go in.”

I went inside without a word and Chae Nayun naturally sat beside me. I had no idea why, but she couldn’t stop grinning from ear to ear.

Hoho! This is great. I didn’t know a club president had this much power!
She seemed to be thinking something like that.

I frowned at Chae Nayun. She suddenly stopped grinning and blushed when I stared at her.

“W-What? W-Why? It just happened by coincidence. Do you have a problem?”

“No, not that.”

“Then w-w-what?”

“Forget it.”

I must’ve been mistaken, so I decided to just ignore it.

Phew...

Chae Nayun sighed in relief for some reason.

“I’ll start driving now. This car is quite safe despite being used, so don’t worry about anything,” Seo Youngji coolly said.

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan laughed at her remark while Shin Jonghak glared at me through the rearview mirror. Yoo Yeonha seemed to be conscious of Shin Jonghak looking at Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun took out a game device she brought and handed it to me.

“Hey, Kim Hajin. Let’s play. This is really fun,” she said.

“I’m going to sleep.”

“Hey, come on. Let’s play just a bit before you go to sleep. Ah, open your eyes... You better open your eyes while I’m being nice. This is your club president’s order. Damn you...”

The car drove off as Chae Nayun threatened me.

* * *

The SUV seamlessly drove on the paved roads for a while, but soon crossed over to rugged mountain terrain. The comfort level didn’t change much despite the bumpy mountain roads. As expected, the Silverwood was a reliable model right below Goldwood (similar to S-class vehicles in my original world). The used car ran perfectly.

Kim Suho looked out the window and asked, “It’s starting to get dark. Are you sure there’s a city around here?”

“It’ll take us a while to reach it. I think we might have to camp outside tonight,” Seo Youngji replied.

“Camp outside?”

“Yes, it’ll be fun. Also, you’ll be camping outside quite often once you become heroes. It’s not a bad idea to get some experience now.”

New Alliance was a neutral state known for its medicinal herbs, so even I felt curious about it.

Chae Nayun kept dozing off and leaning on my shoulder. I pushed her away with a finger every time, but her head always immediately returned. I was forced to let her use my shoulder in the end.

We traveled for thirty more minutes into the woods. I was certain some of us wondered, There's no way Seo Youngji is trying to kidnap and bury us somewhere, right?

[Yeah, I'm going to be a babysitter for a while. I'm sure it'll be fun though.]

[Oh Junhyuk] [Is it manageable? What do you think of that gunner kid?]

[He's alright if you disregard the fact that he can be quite rude. I swear he seems more fickle than Shin Jonghak sometimes. He had the nerve to call out my used car.]

[Oh Junhyuk] [Kekeke! Who told you to buy a used car in the first place? I told you, right? You have to buy a new car if it's an SUV. It's not like you're poor.]

[Shut up.]

[Oh Junhyuk] [Anyways, don't forget the task that the association gave you.]

[I'm already on it.]

I felt relieved after hacking Seo Youngji's smartwatch.

Then I spotted several bright lights flickering above the trees. These bluish lights looked like will-o-wisps from afar. I couldn't help but stare at them for a while.

“Wow! Hey Kim Hajin, what are those? Do you know what they are?”

Chae Nayun woke up and looked outside the window with her chin resting on my shoulder.

“Those are will-o-wisps. We should probably stop driving and set up camp,” I replied.

Seo Youngji slowed the car, which woke up Yoo Yeonha.

Yoo Yeonha pretended to have never fallen asleep as she woke up. “Have we arrived?” she asked.

“Hmm? Didn’t you hear me a while ago? We’re camping outside tonight,” Seo Youngji replied.

“What?”

“We’ll get there by tomorrow. Time to get out.”

Seo Youngji smiled and got out of the car. All of us naturally followed her.

“Hmm...”

I observed our surroundings and thought it was an adequate spot to camp. Trees surrounded us and we stood on a flat surface with a clearing ahead. It was the perfect spot for a campfire and to pitch our tents.

Kim Suho asked Seo Youngji, “But we didn’t bring anything?”

“Consider this a part of your lecture. A high rank hero like me from the association has the authority to write letters of recommendation to cadets. I’m willing to use my authority if you show me what you’re capable of,” Seo Youngji replied.

Honestly, this proposal didn’t interest Chae Jong Hwa (Chae Nayun, Shin Jonghak, and Yoo Yeonhwa). However, Yi Yeonghan’s eyes lit up with determination and Kim Suho seemed pleased with the offer too. After all, Kim Suho was the reincarnation of determination itself.

“Alright, I’ll be pitching my tent and waiting for all of you here. Why don’t you go hunt for food? I’ll be watching over you, so don’t worry. Oh right, it’ll be better if I divide you into pairs.”

I didn't feel the need to pair up and prepared to leave on my own, but a small head already blocked my path before I could take a step.

I ignored Chae Nayun and continued walking, but she followed right behind me. I turned around and looked at her.

“...”

“What? What do you want, Kim Hajin? Is there something on my face?”

“What do you mean?”

“...”

“Speak, will you?”

I looked behind her and saw that everyone had already paired up. Kim Suho went with Yi Yeonghan and Yoo Yeonha paired with Shin Jonghak. Shin Jonghak kept glancing at me, but Yoo Yeonha forcefully dragged him away.

“Nevermind...”

I shook my head and sighed in resignation. This was still better than pairing up with Shin Jonghak.

Chae Nayun looked at my face and smiled, “Hihi...”

Her smile looked quite stupid as if she was about to freeze to death or something. She probably felt cold since her cheeks and nose flushed red.

I decided to flick her on the nose.

Tak!

Oops... That sounded quite loud. Maybe I struck her too hard?

“Ack! Hey! What the hell?! Ha! Look at this punk. Have you gone crazy?!” Chae Nayun fiercely growled.

I had no idea why I decided to flick her nose. I just couldn’t suppress the strange urge. However, I found it funny as she rubbed her nose. I laughed and changed the topic.

“I’m going to have to work harder because of you. I’m a busy person, you know?”

“Do you want to die? Hey, I’m watching you Kim Hajin. Don’t try to act all high and mighty in front of me, little runt. I can knock you out with a single punch, you got that?”

She spoke roughly, but wore a funny smile on her face.

Rather, why did she keep calling me little? Was it because her birthday came before mine? But we should be the same age?

I found it annoying that someone seven years younger than me (my actual age) kept calling me little like I was the younger one.

I decided to ignore it and dragged Chae Nayun into the woods.

“Just shut up and follow me.”

1. Sun Wukong’s staff. 🙏

Side Stories 52

Chae Nayun (7)

I trudged through the snowy mountain path. I could feel my feet sinking and the sound of crunching snow could be heard with each step.

Chae Nayun's voice echoed in this peaceful forest, "There must be a lot of monsters here, right?"

"Yeah, but I don't think you have anything to worry about," I replied.

Seo Youngji was fast. She was a high rank hero who specialized in agility and I recalled her title was supersonic something if I wasn't mistaken. She would come running to us in less than five seconds if we sent a distress call.

"Who says I'm worried? I can easily handle them alone."

"Did you even bring your weapon?"

"No, I don't need it."

"Sure..."

We continued walking while talking about numerous things. I didn't find this situation particularly bothersome since I had to find out as much as I could about ■■■.

"Hey! There's something over there!" Chae Nayun shouted as she stepped in front of me and spread her arms as if she was my bodyguard.

I abruptly stopped thanks to her and looked in front of us.

A creature that resembled a wild boar hid behind a thicket.

“It looks like a wild boar.”

“Oh, really? Will it be tasty if we cook it?”

“I don’t think you’ll be able to eat it...”

Chae Nayun’s taste buds didn’t suit camping since she grew up eating only the best food available, but it was also because of the stress and trauma from her childhood.

However, Chae Nayun puffed her cheeks and retorted, “Why won’t I be able to eat it?”

“What will you do if it has parasites in it?”

“I can just roast it properly.”

“Then suit yourself.”

Chae Nayun glanced at me as I took out my gun without another word. Then I aimed between the wild boar’s eyes, but soon lowered my gun and looked at Chae Nayun.

“You catch it.”

I thought it would be better to kill it with an arrow instead of a gun so the taste wouldn’t be ruined.

“With what?”

“Your bow.”

“You told me not to use it.”

“You can use it in cases like this.”

Chae Nayun scoffed at me before conjuring an arrow with her mana. She placed the mana arrow on her bowstring and pulled it as far back as possible before letting it fly.

Shwiiiish!

The arrow screamed as it pierced through the air and dug into the wild boar's neck.

“Bullseye.”

We went over to the wild boar, but Chae Nayun suddenly disappeared during that short walk. At the same time, I could hear someone groaning from behind, “Uwaaah!”

“What was that? Hey, Chae Nayun... are you alright?”

It seemed like Chae Nayun tripped and rolled down the mountain.

I knelt on one knee and looked down at her. She fell about fifteen meters back and curled on the ground.

“Ugh...” she replied with a moan when I called her.

In the end, I had no choice but to quickly descend by infusing stigma's mana into my shoes.

* * *

“Ah, I think it's broken.”

Chae Nayun acted like a baby in front of Kim Hajin, who had become a human rickshaw. He sighed as he carried her on his back with a rope tied to the wild boar wrapped around his waist

“I never imagined there would be a hole there... Hey, your back is quite wide,” Chae Nayun blabbered in an upbeat manner.

‘It looks like this guy didn't laze around with his training. Look at how wide his back has become,’ she thought.

“Hey, did you really get hurt?” he asked with a hint of suspicion in his voice.

However, she feigned ignorance and replied, “Huh? Ah, sorry. I think I was slacking in my training.”

She found herself acting even more childish as she clung to his back. No, it was more accurate to say that her memories from before the regression were slowly fading away. Those memories sank to the depths of her consciousness like grains of sand, and her memories from this lifetime slowly piled on top of the old ones.

Most likely, the regression caused this phenomenon because it would be impossible for her to live properly in this life with all her memories from before intact.

“Hey, Kim Hajin.”

“What?”

“Last time... you spoke badly about my brother. What made you do that?”

Kim Hajin briefly stopped before he started walking again and replied, “That incident... would you believe me if I said I didn’t know what happened to him?”

“Yeah, I will.”

“Huh?” Kim Hajin looked flabbergasted at her unexpected response.

Chae Nayun smirked and repeated, “I said I’ll believe you.”

She already considered Kim Hajin one of the world’s mysteries. How did he know about her brother’s condition? Was it because he was extremely smart?

“Ehem... Is that so? Anyways, your brother is the reason you created this Pharmacy Club, right?”

Chae Nayun didn't reply and buried her face in Kim Hajin's shoulder. She recalled the painful memory of when Kim Hajin killed Chae Jinyoon in her previous life. The memory of when he pulled the trigger and blew her brother's head into pieces.

However, Chae Nayun also recalled Kim Hajin's life story. He lost his parents in the Kwang-Oh Incident and had to face life all alone at a young age.

How difficult and lonely had he felt all these years? He always carried all the burdens and faced everything alone.

Chae Nayun's heart ached the more she thought about it. She closed her eyes and fought back the tears welling up.

She composed herself and made a resolution, 'I'm not going to let my brother die in this world and I'm not going to let Kim Hajin kill him... I'm not going to let Kim Hajin carry such a huge burden by himself.'

“Huh? Nayun is here.” Someone from the campsite spoke. It turned out to be Yoo Yeonha.

Shin Jonghak sat next to her and stood up with his spear when he saw Chae Nayun on Kim Hajin's back.

“Ah, thanks for the ride,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly said before hopping off his back.

She limped towards the campfire like nothing happened and left Kim Hajin with a look of disbelief on his face.

“Oh, it's a wild boar. Then... who's going to cook it?” Seo Youngji asked.

Kim Hajin cleared his throat and raised his hand. He volunteered to test out his new gift, [Dazzling Dexterity]. Everyone else, except for Chae Nayun, looked at him with skeptical eyes.

However, it took exactly forty-five minutes for their skepticism to turn into songs of praise.

Kim Suho expressed his sincere gratitude towards the chef. Shin Jonghak, who probably had the biggest ego among them, quickly ate two portions. Yoo Yeonha, who was secretly a glutton, suppressed her tears of joy while eating the food.

* * *

“That’s the New Alliance. Can you see it?” Seo Youngji said while pointing at a city.

We looked at the neutral state through the car window.

“Wow... What is that? Is it a city? Isn’t it just a mountain?” That was Chae Nayun’s first impression of it.

Most people would probably wonder if the city was built on a mountain or if the entire mountain had been used as a city whenever they saw the New Alliance for the first time.

Her words probably weren’t the best way to describe it, but that was the impression the city gave.

“A lot of retired heroes live here,” Seo Youngji added.

The New Alliance was roughly six times the size of Yeouido and it had an estimated population of four hundred thousand people.

Unfortunately, a tall wall blocked off the mountain city’s entrance.

Their SUV slowed as they approached the city. A man in full armor, probably a member of the city’s self-defense force, blocked the vehicle’s path.

“Vehicle entry is restricted from this point onwards,” the man said.

“You heard him, right?” Seo Youngji turned around to them and they all got off the SUV.

“Do you have any IDs?” the man asked with a stern look.

Seo Youngji took out her hero license and gave it to him.

He compared the face on the license with hers before nodding, “Hero Seo Youngji’s seventh visit has been confirmed.”

Creak... Creak... Creak...

The sound of gears turning could be heard as the tall wall slowly opened. We stared at it opening like a theater curtain with our jaws dropped and our faces flushed with excitement and anticipation.

“Wow...”

“What the hell? Isn’t this just a rural province?”

The New Alliance gave off a very lively, yet cozy first impression.

Smoke rose from chimneys and filled the place with the scrumptious scent of delicious food. Horses and carriages transporting people and goods filled the streets. Quite a lot of people busily went about their daily lives.

“Follow me. We’ll be heading to an inn first,” Seo Youngji said.

We followed her while looking around the city.

I somewhat expected this when the man told us our vehicle wasn’t allowed, but the entire city was basically analog. Even the streetlamps didn’t have electricity and they purely ran on mana instead.

[Inn – Peaceful Day]

We arrived at a five-story building beautifully built with logs. A bell rang out as we entered. A western man with a thick, long beard who looked like the owner greeted us from the counter.

“Two rooms, please,” Seo Youngji said as she paid in cash.

The inn owner inspected us from head to toe before handing over two keys with 201 and 301 written on them respectively.

“Oh, they accept Korean won here?” Shin Jonghak muttered before stepping towards the counter, “Please give me the best room in the house.”

He opened his wallet with at least two million won inside.

Seo Youngji’s eyes sparkled and the inn owner’s brow went up at the sight of the rich kid’s wallet. Then the inn owner threw him a key while grumbling something under his breath.

“I’ll be sleeping alone,” Shin Jonghak said after receiving the key and heading upstairs.

We made our way up the stairs as well.

Seo Youngji gathered us after we reached the second floor and said, “You guys are on the third floor. Unpack your things and do whatever you want. It’ll be free time until I call you. Oh right, they also have an underground hot spring here.”

“Oh, really? Okay.”

The three girls went to room 201 while the three guys went to room 301.

“Ah, Shin Jonghak that sly bastard... booking his own room...” Yi Yeonghan grumbled.

I ignored him and looked around the room. Our cozy room had three beds, a fireplace, and a carpet made of animal hide. It resembled more of a mountain cabin or a lodge than an inn.

“Hey, Hajin. Do you want to take a dip at the hot spring?” Kim Suho asked after changing his clothes.

I shook my head no, but Yi Yeonghan reacted the exact opposite.

“Oh! A hot spring? Sounds good to me! Let’s go!”

“Okay, then shall we go?”

“You guys go ahead.”

Yi Yeonghan and Kim Suho left. I remained all alone and looked out the window.

Today was Friday, so it would be the evening of that day once we left on Sunday. The timing would be tight.

I called up the system.

► [Precise Hacking] [Intermediate Rank] [No Attribute]

— Hacking: Break through an object’s security system and take control of it. The amount of stigma consumed will vary based on the strength of the security system.

— Precise: The hacking efficiency and result will be affected by luck.

The new gift I added last time, [Hacking], received a bonus called, [Precise], after my luck triggered.

“Let’s see...”

This gift seemed useless in a place with no electronics, but such an assumption would be a mistake.

I looked at the light bulb illuminating the room. This magical lamp ran on neither oil nor electricity, but it was technically electronic equipment in a sense.

I used [Precise Hacking] on it.

[Hacking Target Identified – Magic Lamp]

[Loading...]

[Connection Established – You have taken over the target.]

It required a bit of stigma, but I successfully hacked it.

I tried changing the lamp's color to blue, red, yellow, etc. 'Not bad.' I returned the lamp to its original color and looked out the window again.

I spotted a luxurious leather carriage on the street.

"I wonder if it'll work on that too..." I wasn't sure as I tried connecting to the carriage's rear wheel.

[Hacking Target Identified – Carriage Rear Wheel]

[Loading...]

[Connection Established – You have taken over the target.]

The wheel I hacked suddenly locked itself as if clamped by something. The horse also stopped, which made the entire carriage stop in its tracks.

A person wearing a robe as luxurious as the carriage stepped out from it. That person looked around and almost spotted me when he looked up.

"...!" I immediately ducked and hid.

I had no reason to hide, but I just felt like it.

* * *

We went out after I took a refreshing shower.

Seo Youngji divided us into two teams. She took all the guys, except for me, into her team. I ended up with Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha.

“Let’s go! Just follow President Chae!” Chae Nayun exclaimed as she confidently led the way.

Yoo Yeonha looked a bit tired and disappointed because she didn’t get to be with Shin Jonghak.

“Are you tired?” I asked.

Yoo Yeonha glanced at me and replied, “Not really.”

“Work hard and I’ll cook you tasty food. I’m good at making ramyeon too, you know?”

“What? Do I look like someone who would eat crappy junk food?”

“Forget it then if you don’t want to.”

Yoo Yeonha scoffed at me and walked ahead, but she seemed much more energetic now for some reason.

Our first destination for today was the apothecary.

“Huh? Hey, Kim Hajin. Look over there.” Chae Nayun stopped in the middle of the street and pointed at a merchant peddler on the street.

The merchant sold a variety of things like food, tools, and medicinal plants. What caught my eye wasn’t the wares, but the merchant herself. She had long pointy ears and wore a tattered robe. In short, she was an elf.

“What is this?” Chae Nayun asked.

“It’s a necklace made from the branch of a spirit tree that has expended all of its life force.”

“Oh.” Chae Nayun continued looking at the merchant’s wares while Yoo Yeonha became distracted by the different food on sale.

I suddenly felt someone observing me.

“...?”

It definitely came from somewhere nearby. I turned and saw the person wearing the luxurious robe looking at me.

I felt an unexplainable sense of anxiety creeping on my skin. My instincts rang like an alarm as my anxiety grew and cold sweat broke out on my back.

I noticed a smartwatch on the robed person’s wrist.

[Hacking Target Identified – E013 Unidentified Smartwatch]

I immediately activated [Precise Hacking] and felt a large amount of mana leaving my body. I had no idea why so much mana left my body, but I suddenly felt weak. My instincts and luck definitely weren’t lying to me. That robed person was dangerous.

[Loading...]

[Connection Established – You have taken over the target.]

My smartwatch successfully connected to the robed person’s smartwatch. The first thing I did was check for their name.

[Jin Sahyuk]

It felt as if the ground beneath me caved in and my heart sank along with it.

“Here we go.”

Someone placed something on my neck. I flinched in surprise and instantly grabbed the hand inches away. It turned out to be Chae Nayun. I seemed to have scared her as she also flinched and backed away.

“...”

“W-What?” Chae Nayun asked with her eyes wide in surprise.

“He doesn’t like it,” Yoo Yeonha said from next to me.

She went on a monologue as if casting some sporting event or narrating a show, “You can say it’s a habit. A person who’s had a close call with death is bound to have a habit or two whenever they sense danger. They usually hate being touched by someone else without their permission and tend to be especially sensitive with their necks.”

“Oh, right...” Chae Nayun muttered.

‘What bullshit logic is that?’ I grumbled inwardly before looking back at Jin Sahyuk, but she had already disappeared.

Well, at least I successfully managed to hack her smartwatch.

“Ah, sorry. You don’t like wearing necklaces?” Chae Nayun asked, but I ignored her and focused on wiretapping the hacked smartwatch.

Step... Step...

I could hear someone’s footsteps followed by a conversation.

— Huh? Why are you back so soon?

— The carriage broke, so I sent it for repair.

— Ah, what? That sturdy carriage broke?

It seemed like the carriage I hacked earlier belonged to this person.

I intently eavesdropped on the conversation when Chae Nayun came close to my ear and whispered, “Hey, Kim Hajin. What are you doing?”

“Huh?”

She glared at my smartwatch and seemed pissed off for some reason.

“Who are you talking to?”

“It’s nothing... More importantly... medicinal plants. Yeah, let’s go look for medicinal plants. I’m sure the apothecary is around here somewhere.”

I feigned ignorance and looked around for the store. Lo and behold, it wasn’t far off from where we stood and I pointed it out.

Chae Nayun didn’t even bother looking as she glared at me with her arms crossed over her chest.

“You look suspicious...”

“Alright, let’s go!” I completely ignored her and led the way to the apothecary.

Truth be told, my heart still pounded from the earlier anxiety for some inexplicable reason.

It didn’t take long for us to reach the apothecary and I immediately rushed in after opening the door.

My heart sank once again.

“Some bastard did something to my carriage’s wheel, but I haven’t found out who.”

I was sure my luck exceeded nine... so could this chain of events be considered lucky or unlucky?

“Sigh, what brave bastard would dare to try that on you?”

The conversation I eavesdropped on continued in front of me.

Jin Sahyuk wore a hood that covered his face as he spoke to the apothecary’s owner.

“I’ll kill them if I ever catch them.”

“Hoho... Ho... I wonder which brave bastard it is... that person is in a world of trouble now... Oh! It’s a customer!”

I immediately turned off my smartwatch.

The apothecary owner greeted us with a big smile while Jin Sahyuk observed us from the counter.

Chae Nayun stole a glance at Jin Sahyuk before asking the owner, “What’s your best seller here?”

Meanwhile, I looked at Jin Sahyuk and my eyes peered through the hood covering his face.

“What the...?”

However, something was strange. I couldn’t understand when I saw Jin Sahyuk’s face.

Jin Sahyuk was supposed to be a man, but a woman’s face appeared underneath the hood. I looked from all sorts of angles just in case, but nothing changed.

What in the world happened? Why did he suddenly change into a woman? Did he just look feminine? No, I could also make out the curves in his body...

I furrowed my brows at the unexpected turn of events.

On the other hand, Jin Sahyuk’s eyes suddenly formed into crescents as she smiled for some reason.

At the same time, an alarm regarding Jin Sahyuk popped up on my smartwatch.

Side Stories 53

Chae Nayun (8)

[Jin Sahyuk's gender has been changed according to the change in Kim Suho's storyline.]

[Jin Sahyuk's special ego was not fully changed by ■■ and a part of it remains.]

I thought Jin Sahyuk would be a guy since he was a male in my original story. Nevertheless, this wasn't completely out of my expectations. Jin Sahyuk's story setting directly correlated with Kim Suho's, so the co-author could've changed his gender.

"Our best selling medicinal plant is the hope plant, but... is there anything specific you're looking for? We sell most known medicinal plants," the owner asked Chae Nayun.

On the other hand, I kept my focus on Jin Sahyuk. She continued to smirk with her legs crossed.

"Oh, you're right. It has most things except for what I'm looking for. I'm looking for information regarding the Tears of Heaven," Chae Nayun replied.

She sounded quite experienced while dealing with the apothecary owner. The way she stood in front of the counter without showing any emotions also made her look like a veteran.

However, I felt like walking on thin ice with cracks forming underneath me.

"Ah, Tears of Heaven? Something like that doesn't exist."

"Doesn't exist?"

“Yes, that was only created because a coincidence happened on top of a coincidence on top of another coincidence. It was nothing less than a miracle. I mean, logically, who would be able to create such a thing? It was probably made naturally and humans just found it.”

“...”

Chae Nayun didn't show any emotion on her face. Not even a hint of disappointment could be seen. I found it quite surprising since the Chae Nayun I knew would probably have already lashed out with something like, 'How does that make any sense?!'

“Tears of Heaven, eh? I know about it quite well,” Jin Sahyuk interjected.

She didn't lower her hood, but her figure became slightly visible when she stood up and the robe partly opened. She wore a tight leather suit of all things...

“Who are you?” Chae Nayun asked.

Jin Sahyuk shrugged and nonchalantly replied, “I was there when the Tears of Heaven was auctioned.”

“Really?”

“Yeah, the Rukr Auction House. I thought about killing the guy who bought it, but decided otherwise since it would be too troublesome,” Jin Sahyuk replied before glancing at me. No, she blatantly looked at me.

“Hmm... This is quite strange...” Jin Sahyuk muttered while tilting her head in confusion. She had a perplexed look on her face. Her face appeared inches away from mine and she asked, “Why do you seem so familiar?”

“...”

“Hey, have we met before?”

I wanted to retort with, ‘What in the world are you talking about?’ However, my mouth wouldn’t move because I knew very well that Jin Sahyuk could kill everyone here with a wave of her hand.

Chae Nayun suddenly stepped in front of Jin Sahyuk and growled, “What are you trying to do here?” She glared at her in a threatening manner.

However, Jin Sahyuk didn’t back down. In fact, she flat-out ignored Chae Nayun and kept her gaze on me.

“You,” she extended her smartwatch towards me.

Then an alert rang on my smartwatch.

[Unidentified Smartwatch E013 has sent you a friend request.]

“Accept it. I’ll kill you if you don’t,” she added.

It was a very straightforward and efficient way to ask someone to do something in my opinion.

“What? Hey, ignore it,” Chae Nayun told me with a scoff.

However, I knew very well that Jin Sahyuk wasn’t the type to make empty threats. I immediately pressed [Yes] and accepted the friend request.

“I accepted it,” I said.

“Huh? Hey, why did you accept that?” Chae Nayun protested.

Jin Sahyuk checked her smartwatch and nodded in satisfaction, “Alright, I checked it. Ah, don’t be mistaken. I’m not considering you a friend or anything just because I added you.”

“Let’s go,” I dragged Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha out of the shop with Jin Sahyuk’s gaze still on the back of my head.

I had no idea why or how, but she seemed to know who I was.

* * *

“What was that just now? Why did you suddenly add him as a contact?” the owner asked in disbelief.

Jin Sahyuk didn’t bother to respond and sat back in her chair. She felt strange since a while ago. The guy’s face looked familiar for some reason. No, familiar was an understatement.

She felt her heart oddly resonate with him and had never felt this foreign feeling before.

“I don’t know,” she muttered.

“You don’t know?”

“Hmm... Okay, listen...” she explained how she felt to the owner.

The owner intently listened until she finished and said, “That... isn’t that love at first sight?”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk suppressed her urge to kill the apothecary owner. She may have fallen in status, but she wouldn’t fall for a loser like that guy. However, she couldn’t deny that she felt confused after pondering. She never felt this way before, so she decided to spare the apothecary owner.

“Can you find out more about that guy?” she asked.

“Hmm? Well, I heard he’s a Cube cadet.”

“Cube?”

“Yes.”

Jin Sahyuk rubbed her chin. That guy was also at Cube right now.

“Is there a way for me to infiltrate that place?”

“I think South Korea will be quite tricky. Things have recently gotten strict due to a bunch of lunatics causing a scene there,” the owner shook his head and replied.

His information network rivaled Pandemonium executives, but it would still be difficult.

“I see... Okay, get things ready for me then.”

However, Jin Sahyuk didn’t give a fuck about what he said. It had been a long time since she felt such a surge of emotion in her mundane life. It felt like a strong wave suddenly rose out of nowhere and crashed into the hull of her ship. She couldn’t simply let go of this exhilarating excitement.

“Huh?”

“A week should be enough, right?”

The owner became flabbergasted at the sudden turn of events, but Jin Sahyuk didn’t care and immediately left after making her request.

* * *

Chae Nayun felt bothered by what happened. Who was that person just now? She would’ve immediately known if she rummaged through her memories before regressing, but that person covered their face too well and she never got a glimpse.

In the end, she decided to ask Kim Hajin instead, “Was that someone you knew? Hey, I asked you a question. Who was that? Don’t tell me... Your ex-girlfriend? No... that can’t be... Hey, Kim Hajin! You better answer me right now.”

She went on a tirade, but Kim Hajin simply sighed and picked his ear. This went on for a while until they reached the city outskirts.

“Hold up. That’s a cave, right?” Kim Hajin said after spotting a cave. This discovery meant his luck would trigger again.

“That isn’t important right now. Who was that? Did you even know who that was before accepting their friend request?”

“Hmm... I’m curious now too. Who was that? What kind of relationship do you have with that person?” Yoo Yeonha chimed in.

“Ah, you guys are too noisy. Just be quiet and follow me,” Kim Hajin grumbled and dragged them into the cave to change the topic.

“Ha... Why you little...” Chae Nayun gritted her teeth in anger.

They ventured for five minutes before the limestone in the cave ceiling brightly shone red. The ray of light slithered to the ground like a snake. It was truly a rare natural phenomenon.

“Wow... what is this place? That’s freaking awesome...” Chae Nayun muttered in awe at the sight.

Kim Hajin smirked while looking at her, ‘Is she a carp or something? What’s with that face?’

“Hmm...”

On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha thought about what happened a while ago as she intently observed the phenomenon.

The hooded person from before seemed quite strong, but such a person somehow knew Kim Hajin. Could Kim Hajin have come to this place before? But he was only seventeen years old?

If that was true, then what in the world was this guy? His size and face couldn’t be any plainer than a passerby on the street, but what he had accomplished so far alone was...

Yoo Yeonha couldn’t help but feel more intrigued and fearful as she dug deeper into Kim Hajin’s identity. She got the chills as she learned more about him.

“Follow me.”

She flinched at Kim Hajin’s sudden words.

He walked somewhere without a hint of hesitation in his steps. The darkness only grew as they ventured further inside, but he didn’t seem bothered.

“Hey, walk slowly. I can’t see anything,” Chae Nayun whined.

Kim Hajin grabbed her hand and led her. That seemed to do the trick and shut her up.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha confirmed once again that this guy also liked Chae Nayun.

“It’s over there...” Kim Hajin said while pointing into the distance.

They looked at where he was pointing and spotted a source of light in the darkness. It looked like an orb or a jewel on the ground and gave off a gentle glow.

“What is that?” Yoo Yeonha asked while staring at the orb in a daze.

Kim Hajin smiled and picked up the orb that actually turned out to be a bundle of grass.

“We’re quite lucky,” he said. “It’s a hope plant.”

[Hope Plant] [Rare]

A rare plant that grows in extremely dark environments. Its roots contain a dense concentration of mana that allows it to glow brightly. This plant is also known to be a superior material that possesses the spirit property.

Information regarding the plant appeared in front of his eyes.

Chae Nayun stared dumbfoundedly at the plant.

“What do you think? This is quite a rare plant,” Kim Hajin said with a smug smile.

The plant lit up his face as he held it near his chin and he looked quite funny from that angle.

“Pfft...”

She couldn't help but snicker at how he looked. Not a single part of him looked good, but she found him adorable nonetheless. In fact, he even looked handsome to her now. This emotion blossomed within her seven years ago and she still couldn't understand it.

‘What did I like so much about this guy?’ she wondered.

Whatever the reason, she knew that some feelings didn't require any justifications. The desire to be with him all the time simply overcame her and she couldn't suppress it.

“Let's go,” Kim Hajin said after foraging the hope plant.

Chae Nayun continued to daydream with her cheeks flushed pink. She stood up after him and asked, “That's something valuable, right?”

“Yeah, it could become even more valuable once we use it to make an elixir or the Tears of Heaven.”

The hope plant in Kim Hajin's hand glowed even brighter as if accepting him as its rightful owner.

The plant's sudden glow mesmerized Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun.

“This is probably needed to make both of those.”

This plant would be their first required ingredient.

Boom!

A tremor shook the ground and they all flinched before turning towards the source. A silhouette of something big moved in the dark.

Yoo Yeonha recognized it first, “It’s a bear with a crescent on its chest.”

The crescent moon bear wasn’t a monster, but an apex predator among normal animals. Its bright red eyes glared at them.

“Hey, Kim Hajin. Support me with cover fire,” Chae Nayun whispered as she unsheathed her sword.

“A sword?”

“Yeah, I’ve been practicing.”

“Hey, a few weeks of practice won’t—”

“Just shut up and watch me.”

Kim Hajin expressed his skepticism, but Chae Nayun seemed confident.

In the end, Kim Hajin and Yoo Yeonha had no choice but to take out their weapons and support Chae Nayun.

“Krwuuuaaaah!”

The apex predator shook the cave with its roar, but Chae Nayun didn’t even bat an eye as she infused mana into her sword.

Both of them clashed head-on.

“Here I go!”

* * *

That was how we also managed to obtain bear bile. We finally returned to Cube on Sunday.

The Pharmacy Club members stored the items from their New Alliance trip in the club storeroom. However, President Chae seemed dissatisfied with it and ordered a custom [Manatech Mobile Greenhouse] to store all the items and medicinal plants.

The club members returned to their daily lives after that. Chae Nayun left first and said she had somewhere to go. Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan went to train and Shin Jonghak returned to his penthouse.

Then there was me...

[Pharmacy Club]

I went back to the dormitory, changed my clothes, and returned to the club room. I wanted to expose my almond (Evandel) to the mana in the expensive manatech greenhouse.

Drrrk—

I was caught by surprise after opening the door to the club room, but the person inside seemed even more shocked.

“What do you want?” Yoo Yeonha asked while staring at me with a devastated look. Cup ramyeon, potato chips, choco chips, etc. littered the table.

It seemed like she ate all of it alone.

Yoo Yeonha continued staring at me for a while before stuttering, “T-Thief...”

“Thief?”

“I... h-heard there was a thief, so... I came to look...”

“...”

I looked around the club room and muttered under my breath, “Ah... So a thief came in to eat potato chips and cup ramyeon? Without even touching that expensive greenhouse and everything inside?”

Who would ever believe a thief ignored that mobile greenhouse the size of a piano and the hope plant inside for snacks in the club room instead?

“Y-Yes... there’s no way I ate all of this, right?”

“Then we should report this immediately.”

“Ack!”

Yoo Yeonha screamed when I began tapping on my smartwatch.

“Ack! Ack!”

“Geez... You’re too loud. What is it this time?”

“Ehem ehem...” She cleared her throat and brazenly changed the subject, “Have you seen the notice?”

“What? What notice?”

“The specialization class notice.”

I checked my smartwatch, but didn’t see any notice no matter how much I scrolled through my messages.

[Heyyyyyy u wa the hzcek eh you ahwhw]

Only a strange indecipherable message came from Jin Sahyuk. She probably didn’t know how to use a smartwatch or didn’t know how to type since she came from a planet with no electronics. Rather than that, how did she even manage to send a friend request at that time?

“You probably didn’t receive it yet since my father sent it to me in advance,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“Then why did you even bother asking...” I replied in disbelief.

Yoo Yeonha scoffed in response and cleared the table, “I feel bad for the thief, so I’ll let them off this time. Imagine how hungry they must’ve been to eat this trashy food. Also, why would you report them to the police? Are you really that petty? Haven’t you read Le Miresable?”

“It’s Le Misérable, not Le Miresable.”

“Anyways, why did you come here?”

I hid my almond (Evandel) in my pocket.

“I came to check on the medicinal plant,” I replied before sitting on the couch.

The hope plant’s luster shone through the glass greenhouse. Increasing the security around it would be a good idea.

“When did you start liking her?” Yoo Yeonha asked another random question out of nowhere.

“What are you talking about?”

“I’m talking about Nayun.”

“What?” I furrowed my brows and grumbled in response.

What bullshit was she spouting this time?

She totally misunderstood my reaction and continued in a serious tone, “There’s nothing to be so surprised about. There are a lot of guys who like Nayun. I think half of the boys in her previous school had a thing for her or something...”

She sounded tired while reminiscing.

“I have no idea where you got that idea or who told you, but I don’t have a thing for her.”

“That’s good then. Nayun has no interest in you whatsoever.”

“Hey...”

I almost retorted back, but decided to just shut my mouth.

Yoo Yeonha glanced at me before adding, “Oh right, Nayun probably went to see her brother.”

“I didn’t ask.”

Yoo Yeonha went on a childish tirade of mocking me for a while before moving on to the next topic, “Enough about that. You seem to have gone to that neutral state a few times judging from how you bumped into someone familiar.”

“No, that was... Ah, never mind. Think whatever you want.”

I couldn’t make up any excuses since even I had no idea how Jin Sahyuk knew me. The co-author probably pulled some stunt, but I had no idea what those plans were.

“Did you lie about your age by any chance? Or maybe your birth was registered late?” Yoo Yeonha took a jab at me.

Her sharp question stung me because I technically did lie about my age. Yoo Yeonha picked up on my reaction and nodded in satisfaction.

“No, I didn’t lie about my age.”

“Is that so?”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t say much after that, but her last three words carried some weight. It seemed like she was imagining all sorts of scenarios in her head.

“The specialization class will start tomorrow. Don’t be surprised if cameras suddenly appear,” Yoo Yeonha said while stretching her arms.

“Cameras?”

“Yes, they said they’re filming a documentary.”

Another troublesome thing had occurred.

“They’re calling us the golden generation these days,” Yoo Yeonha grumbled and sighed in resignation.

The people’s reaction was understandable. Forget about Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Chae Nayun, Rachel, and Yoo Yeonha. Even other cadets in this batch like Yi Jiyeon, Yi Yeonghan, Kim Horak, etc. would all be amazing heroes in the future.

Well, only if I managed to survive in this world until then.

“The Cube executives are trying to recover their public image because of the last midterm exam. I wanted to oppose this decision, but Daehyun, I mean Nayun’s side has already agreed to it so... We just have to endure even if it’s annoying,” Yoo Yeonha said as she stood from her seat.

“I’m going now,” she patted my back before leaving.

That girl acted exactly like her set character. No, she became more than what I set her to be.

I sighed with a mixture of awe, frustration, and relief before opening the greenhouse door.

“Let me know if the hope plant bothers you or if you don’t like it here. I’ll take you out immediately...” I placed the squirming almond (Evandel) into the greenhouse.

Thankfully, the almond (Evandel) seemed to like her new environment and happily squirmed a few times before burying itself in the soil.

Side Stories 54

Chae Nayun (9)

Chae Nayun stood at the VIP ward surrounded by a military grade manatech barrier that didn't allow even a single ray of sunlight to enter. She stared at Chae Jinyoon lying on the bed.

"I'm here..."

Her precious person was fast asleep as he had always been. He wasted almost a decade of his youth in this ward and his final moments had been filled with anguish and agony because of those devils.

"Hey..."

However, Chae Nayun shook her head to forget the past. Bell and Baal no longer existed in this world. That tragedy wouldn't happen to Chae Jinyoon here. A devil would no longer hatch from him.

"You can get up if you try, right?"

Chae Nayun sighed while caressing her brother's forehead. He looked younger than her now.

"I believe in you."

She took out a forever flower she foraged from New Alliance and placed it in a vase. The forever flower was a mysterious flower that remained beautiful throughout numerous seasons as its name suggested.

"They say this flower doesn't wilt for three years. I'll come back to wake you up before it wilts," Chae Nayun said while resolving herself.

She wiped the tears from her eyes and left the ward like nothing happened.

“Are you alright, Young Lady?”

Two gigantic bodyguards waited for her outside.

Chae Nayun greeted them with a quick bow and walked out of the hospital.

“Please get on, Young Lady.”

A driver from Daehyun waited for her at the hospital entrance. She didn’t say anything as she got into the car.

“Shall I drive you directly to Cube or do you wish to rest at the house first?”

“Please go directly to Cube.”

“As you wish, Young Lady.”

The Goldwood limousine smoothly accelerated as if floating above the ground.

Chae Nayun leaned against the window and looked at the scenery outside before suddenly messaging Kim Hajin.

[What are you doing?]

He quickly replied this time.

[Playing a game.]

[Oh? What game?]

[Half of Legend]

[Awesome. I play that too. Do you want to play together? I’m really good. I can carry you keke!]

[I only play solo.]

“Bastard...”

She knew he would respond like that, so she didn’t expect much in the first place. She proudly smirked at her foresight and thought of the next topic to talk about.

“The product you requested has been prepared, Young Lady,” the bodyguard in the passenger seat said as he extended a box to Chae Nayun.

“Ah, thank you,” Chae Nayun took the box and opened it. “Ohh...”

It contained numerous bottles of elixirs and potions, even a wild ginseng that was known to be extremely precious.

Chae Nayun had personally requested these items from her father.

“The chairman says you may ask for more if you need anything else,” the bodyguard added.

Chae Nayun didn’t plan to receive any help from her family after regressing. She even lashed out when her father and grandfather offered to help. It was nothing more than her stubbornness and pride. However, there was something more important than her pride right now. That’s why Chae Nayun had no choice but to seek help from her family.

“There should be another one aside from this, right?” she asked.

“Yes, Young Lady. The other product is currently being shipped from overseas. It should arrive within the week,” the bodyguard replied.

“Ah, alright,” Chae Nayun smiled.

She had prepared a gift for Kim Hajin and it was quite an awesome

one. She planned to shove it at him and pretend it was her way of paying him back for the hope plant.

“Let’s see...” Chae Nayun muttered as she ripped a root from the wild ginseng and munched on it.

Munch... Munch... She could feel the energy seeping out from the root as she chewed it. She happily ate as many roots as she wanted until she suddenly stopped.

“Hmm...”

She couldn’t help but think of that guy while eating something good. She had no idea if he would like it, but decided to share some with him later.

After all, a saying went that people would become closer if they shared a single bean... or something like that...

* * *

[Yyy uuu isss whooooo]

I received a strange message at four in the morning. It said something along the lines of, ‘Who are you?’

“Haaa...”

“Why did you want my number if you had no idea who I was?” I grumbled while sighing and yawning at the same time.

Rather than that, she could’ve just typed what she wanted to say with a keyboard. Why was she struggling so much?

“Could it be... she doesn’t know how to activate the keyboard?”

That theory sounded somewhat plausible if she didn’t know that the smartwatch was actually just a tool to project holograms of what one needed.

[A Cube cadet.]

I replied since I didn't want to get into trouble.

However, no reply came from the other end. Five minutes... ten minutes... fifteen minutes... thirty minutes... I waited until five in the morning and concluded that she probably had no idea how to reply.

“What a strange fellow.”

I closed my eyes while hoping that Jin Sahyuk would continue having trouble operating her smartwatch and slowly fell asleep.

Ring... Ring... Ring...

It felt like only seconds had passed since I closed my eyes.

“Ah... Damn it... I had a nightmare...”

I dreamt that Jin Sahyuk went on a killing spree and Kim Suho's neck lay on the ground with my limbs torn apart.

“Ah... I think I have a neck cramp...”

I dragged my feet to the restroom like a corpse and showered before leaving the dormitory. I arrived to class soon afterwards.

Creak...

I opened the door and found a camera in one corner like Yoo Yeonha told me. The camera seemed to be remotely controlled with no cameraman around.

“What the hell is that?” I grumbled and felt uncomfortable when the camera zoomed in on my face.

I walked over and sat in the corner like usual. I plopped down on my desk because I felt quite tired.

Time passed as my consciousness drifted. I only woke up after the murmuring in the classroom grew louder.

“What the?”

I saw a head that looked familiar, which made me think twice if I was in the right place. However, I confirmed that I was indeed in the right place after looking around.

I stared at the head. It was Chae Nayun no matter how I looked at it, but why was she here?

“Pharmacy Club? Why so suddenly?”

“Ah... Nothing, I just thought it would be nice to join. I’m also a supporter, right?”

“Hmm... Nah.”

“Come on, don’t be like that. Let me join too, President Chae. President Chae...”

Chae Nayun and Yi Jiyeon noisily spoke.

Ddrrk!

The classroom door opened and everyone fell silent as a man wearing a robe walked in.

“Hello, it’s nice to meet all of you in the Veritas class.”

I opened my eyes and looked at the golden emblem on his robe.

[Head of Seoul Magic Tower, Kim Hyojun]

“I will be assisting all of you in your specialization classes. My name is Kim Hyojun. I am the head magician of the Seoul Magic Tower. I believe a few of you may have heard of me.”

I furrowed my brows when I recognized this magician. He was basically a scumbag.

This guy, according to my story setting, was born as the third generation of a renowned magic family. However, he lacked talent and became an educator instead. He had a bad temper and was ruthless.

He often got extremely jealous and obsessed with others to the point of stalking them. He always acted like the victim of the problems he caused. In short, the word trash suited him quite well.

“I’ll only be in charge of a part of your specialization class. I won’t be teaching all of it. Haha! Don’t look so regretful. First, shall we all stand?” Kim Hyojun said with a friendly smile.

The cadets looked lost for a while before they stood one by one.

“Then, shall we all move to the auditorium?” Kim Hyojun said as he led the way.

All the cadets still looked lost, but followed him nevertheless. The cadets noisily murmured as they walked to the specialization class that would soon start.

“Nayun, Nayun! Let’s be on the same team,” Yi Jiyoona clung to Chae Nayun’s arm and pestered her.

Chae Nayun pushed away Yi Jiyoona, who kept rubbing on her arm like a hamster.

“What same team? Who said anything about forming teams?”

“Still...”

“It could be a theory class.”

“Really? Oh, if it’s theory then...”

Yi Jiyoong transformed from a cute hamster to a fox as she slowly moved away from Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun scoffed and glared at Yi Jiyoong in disbelief.

Yi Jiyoong flashed a smile and clung back to Chae Nayun as if she had just been joking.

However, I somehow felt that Yi Jiyoong was just biding her time and would leave Chae Nayun the first chance she got. She was probably eyeing Yoo Yeonha next.

We suddenly locked eyes and I immediately moved away when she stepped towards my direction.

“...?”

Thud—

I bumped into the blonde princess. Rachel tilted her head in confusion.

I flashed an awkward smile and asked out of courtesy, “What do you think about the specialization class?”

Rachel smiled as if to say she had no idea. I awkwardly scratched my neck as she passed by and walked a few meters behind her.

Soon, I reached the main auditorium after an awkward walk.

The main auditorium was a large hall befitting its name. It probably equaled the size of three or four football pitches put together. A viewing deck above filled with cameras zoomed down on us.

“Everyone is here, right?” Kim Hyojun asked.

Yi Yeonghan used his gifted vision to scout the auditorium and reported to Kim Hyojun.

“Thank you, class president. Alright, please line up on the side. All freshmen will be participating in this class.”

The cadets lined up to the side and sat with their backs against the wall.

It didn't take long for the auditorium to fill up as nearly a thousand cadets came in from ten classes: Moral, Intelligence, Wisdom, Character, Honor, Veritas, etc.

Instructor Kim Suhyeok appeared out of nowhere and stood beside Kim Hyojun.

“Listen up all of you!”

His thunderous voice grabbed everyone's attention.

“We will conduct a small test before commencing the specialization class. Line up according to your roles!”

The cadets separated into warriors, sharpshooters, and supporters. Of course, I lined up with the other sharpshooters.

“The test will check your basic capabilities in dueling, sharpshooting, healing, decision making, etc. to see how much you've grown!”

Various rectangular arenas shot up from the ground surrounded by mana barriers. Each one had a different theme like a desert, forest, sea, or cave.

The story had progressed in an entirely different manner from the original plot, but I remained calm. I mean, the storyline had already been screwed up beyond repair like Jin Sahyuk's appearance.

“We will start in thirty minutes! Proceed to warm up!”

I decided to compose myself and do some light stretches.

On the other hand, representatives from each guild sat in the VIP viewing box located at the auditorium's top section. These prestigious guilds had been granted a sneak peek into Cube.

"There are quite a lot..." Yun Seung-Ah grumbled as she hadn't expected a crowd.

She expected most of them to ignore such a small event since guilds were usually busy during this time of the season, but everyone dropped what they were doing and came running. This could only mean one thing.

'This year's cadets must be quite promising,' she thought.

"That's because the average potential of these cadets is quite promising even if you exclude Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak," Yi Jun, Yun Seung-Ah's subordinate, replied while busily typing on his laptop.

Yun Seung-Ah stole a glance around the VIP viewing box. A lot of world-renowned guilds had come, like Essence of the Straits, Desolate Moon, Frost Sanctuary, General, Rothschild, etc.

However, a hooded person among them caught her eye.

"Who is that?"

Yi Jun looked at the hooded person before shaking his head, "I have no idea. Perhaps Cube specially invited that person?"

"Hmm... You think so? Well, that's the only explanation, I guess..."
Yun Seung-Ah shrugged it off and turned to the auditorium.

The auditorium bustled with nearly a thousand cadets, but only half of them would survive the test.

"Nice to meet all of you. Thank you for making this event an even brighter one," a hero appeared at the entrance and greeted the viewers.

Seo Youngji had been sent by the association to assist Cube. She was also quite skilled at handling the VIPs.

“Due to the monster invasion that occurred last time, Cube has decided to abandon its stubborn educational policies and allow outsiders to... (omitted)... so we have decided to seek your guidance on the specialization of our cadets. Also, you may find a brief introduction of our cadets in this pamphlet.”

Yun Seung-Ah took out the pamphlet and scanned through it. This pamphlet provided by Cube could arguably be considered a treasure trove of information for guilds.

“There are two main characters. It seems they had a hard time choosing only one.”

As expected, the main characters were Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak. These two handsome boys stood side by side and made the pamphlet look like a photo shoot with models.

She turned to the next page and found Chae Nayun, Rachel, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Yeonghan, Kim Horak, Yi Jiyeon, Shen Wuiyan, Miyamoto Yohei, etc. Not only guilds, but even the entertainment industry would covet these cadets.

“Hmm?” An interesting name caught Yun Seung-Ah’s eye.

The name didn’t appear on any particularly interesting page.

■ 934. Kim Hajin (金河珍)

— Gunner

— Cube’s only mutant this year.

A gunner sounded interesting.

“Oh, this guy even has a picture.”

The last bunch in the rankings usually only had a few words to describe them, but rank 934 Kim Hajin had a picture of him holding a pistol. The impact of him beating Kim Horak during the midterm exam left a lasting impression on everyone.

Well, that duel had been impressive on account of Kim Horak's stupidity and Kim Hajin's craftiness.

"What do you think about that gunner?" Yi Jun asked while typing on his laptop.

"Who knows? I just find him interesting. That's all. It's interesting if his gift uses guns, right?"

The gun didn't have a long history and not a single gun-related gift had ever appeared among heroes. It would be interesting if Kim Hajin possessed a gun-related gift because he would be the first in the world.

"That's all, right? Nothing more than just interesting?"

"Yeah, seems like it."

"The first test will now commence," Seo Youngji announced.

Every eye in the viewing box darted towards the auditorium after her announcement. Yun Seung-Ah busily browsed through the pamphlet and instantly shifted her gaze to the auditorium.

However, something kept bothering her and she suddenly glanced sideways.

The mysterious hooded person continued looking down at the pamphlet even as the test began.

"Oh, Vice Leader. It's Chae Nayun," Yi Jun said.

Yun Seung-Ah looked back to the auditorium at his words.

Chae Nayun walked up to the arena as a sharpshooter and leisurely drew her bowstring. Her movements didn't contain a hint of nervousness. Instead, she kept licking her lips as if she couldn't wait for the test to start.

Everyone in the viewing box intently watched her full of expectations.

Side Stories 55

Chae Nayun (10)

Jin Sahyuk watched full of expectations, but it didn't take long for her excitement to be extinguished and replaced with disappointment.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

Gunfire filled the auditorium.

That guy just stood in place and pulled the trigger. He seemed like a nobody no matter how long she watched him.

“...”

This confused Jin Sahyuk even more.

He was definitely a good-for-nothing gunner who only knew how to pull the trigger judging from his actions, but something in her kept resonating with his existence.

“Well, his aim is quite good.”

Someone's voice flowed into her ears.

It took Jin Sahyuk a while to realize that person was talking to her. She looked sideways and saw Yun Seung-Ah smiling at her.

“That cadet's name is Kim Hajin. His gift is related to guns...” Yun Seung-Ah blabbered on while trying to be friendly.

However, Jin Sahyuk paid her no mind and only focused on that guy below.

She felt as if a wave of emotions rose from the abyss and swept her away. This strange sensation truly dumbfounded her like an ego sleeping inside her was saying...

‘You should never forget. You must repay him.’

However, Jin Sahyuk had no idea what to do and couldn’t decipher the feeling that guy gave her.

— We will now start forming groups for the specialization class!

A new voice spoke from the auditorium.

— The next class will simulate a real battle, which is the most basic skill a hero should possess!

* * *

[Everyone, gather in the Pharmacy Club room. This is an emergency.]

The next day, President Chae issued a command for everyone to gather in the club room. However, I couldn’t go from my current location.

“Why is she suddenly acting like this?” I grumbled while untangling the branches wrapped around my legs and sent her a reply.

[I can’t come.]

I continued climbing as I looked for a road through the thick vegetation.

The vegetation in Mount Geomjuk of Hamgyeong Province was quite overgrown and made it difficult to see ahead. It didn’t trouble me since I already figured out the way thanks to the Book of Truth...

“Eugh!”

That’s what I thought, but a tree root suddenly caught my foot.

Thud!

I fell face-first into the ground. Only then did I see the root binding my feet.

“What is this... Huh? Wait a minute...”

It didn't look like an ordinary root after a closer look. I crawled on all four to inspect it. This dirty, long root was the size of my arm with more slender legs growing from it.

“Oh my god...”

I found a wild ginseng. Not only that, this looked older than the last one I found judging from its size.

I looked around.

Gulp!

I subconsciously gulped. This wasn't the first time I got lucky and found a wild ginseng, but this was definitely the first time I came across one the size of a mandrake.

“Huff... Huff...”

I even used stigma to dig the wild ginseng out as carefully as possible.

* * *

Meanwhile, the Pharmacy Club members gathered in the club room while Kim Hajin busily foraged the wild ginsengs on Mount Geomjuk, which was Chae Nayun's private property.

“Why did you ask us to gather?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

She sat on the sofa and pouted to show her dissatisfaction with being summoned. It was understandable since President Chae one-sidedly called for them to gather.

Chae Nayun kept looking at her smartwatch without making any announcements.

“Ah... Damn it... why is that guy not coming?”

[I can't come.]

‘I already prepared a gift for you, so you’re the only one who loses if you don’t come. Stupid.’

“Chae Nayun?”

Only after Kim Suho called her did she finally take her eyes off the smartwatch.

“Yeah?”

“Why did you ask us to gather?”

“Oh, right. Take a look at this,” Chae Nayun said as she projected the hologram of a poster from the Hero Community.

[Neutral City-State Virance – Adventurer’s Colosseum]

This poster came from Virance, a very famous neutral city-state.

The club members stared intently at it before tilting their heads in confusion.

“First place gets the Gautz Gauntlets? What about it? I know it’s a famous artifact, but only Yi Yeonghan uses fists among us.”

“Ah! Chae Nayun you... just for me?!”

“Ah, damn it. Do you have a death wish? Not that one, look at the second place prize.”

The club members slightly lowered their gaze on the poster. The second place prize had quite a unique name.

“Soul Mana Vermillion... Ah, this one?” Yoo Yeonha said with a smirk.

However, Kim Suho and Yi Yonghan still seemed clueless. Shin Jonghak pretended to know when he also had no clue.

“Sigh... How can you guys call yourselves members of the Pharmacy Club when you don’t even know what this is? It’s an orb with a spirit and mana concentration. Can’t you see? It’s an extremely precious medicine. I saw it on the almanac.”

‘Chae Nayun? Almanac?’

Those two polar opposite words rendered Yoo Yeonha speechless.

“But Nayun, how do you plan to win?” she asked.

“How else? I just have to participate in the colosseum, right?”

“What? Are you crazy?” Yoo Yeonha frowned at her words.

Chae Nayun’s declaration also surprised Yi Yeonghan, Kim Suho, and Shin Jonghak.

However, she seemed confident for some reason.

“Why? I don’t think it’s impossible. We just have to place second, right? I hope you guys aren’t thinking that we can’t achieve that.”

“No, Nayun. You seem to be looking down on the neutral city-states too much. No, rather than that, it might be problematic if people found out we’re cadets.”

“It’s alright. They can guarantee our anonymity, so we just have to wear a mask or something. Better yet, we could all go in wearing full disguises. Also, our value will only increase if we perform well in places like this. I already asked my dad’s friends about it.”

The information would be credible if it came from Chae Shinhyuk’s side. Not to mention, a lot of heroes saw their value jump after performing well in neutral city-states. Prime examples of this included Yoo Sihyuk and Aileen.

However, it would still be risky nonetheless.

“Sounds like it’ll be fun,” Kim Suho said.

“What are you talking about—” Yoo Yeonha retorted.

However, Shin Jonghak interrupted her, “Sounds good to me. It was starting to get boring since I couldn’t find a match in Cube. I think it’ll be a great opportunity to test my skills against other people from neutral city-states.”

Yoo Yeonha felt appalled by Shin Jonghak for the first time in her life after hearing his bluff.

Regardless of how she felt, three of them already agreed. Only she and Yi Yeonghan remained. She glared at Yi Yeonghan, who flinched in response. It didn’t look like he opposed the idea. He probably felt more optimistic about it as a fist user because of the Gautz Gauntlets.

Yoo Yeonha glared at Chae Nayun with a dissatisfied look before finally conceding, “Then, when are we leaving?”

“When? Of course, it’ll be this Thursday,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

Yoo Yeonha frowned at Chae Nayun with quite a scary expression.

* * *

I was forced to join the Pharmacy Club on Thursday after our theory class ended. No, to be more accurate, they abducted me.

Chae Nayun said I had no choice since I missed the last club meeting. She abducted me from the gym and shoved me into an SUV. Then we headed off to the large portal at Cube to travel to China.

“So this is a Goldwood.”

The Pharmacy Club supervisor, Seo Youngji, also came with us. She admired the Goldwood SUV, which actually resembled diamond more than gold. She gripped the steering wheel with trembling hands.

“I’m going to drive now... Is it really fine for someone like me to drive a gorgeous beast like you?” she muttered like a crazy person before stepping on the accelerator. The Goldwood SUV fiercely, yet gently sped away.

“Oh right, Yoo Yeonha. You’re going against Kim Hajin, right?” Chae Nayun asked with a smirk.

As she said, I got matched against Yoo Yeonha in one-on-one combat for the specialization class.

“Yeah... it just turned out that way,” Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly replied while stealing glances at me.

“Go easy on me,” I added.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t say anything and only bit her lower lip. She seemed dissatisfied with the match-up.

Of course, a match between a supporter and a sharpshooter would always be uneven since a supporter usually hid behind the warrior. However, Cube wanted to test the supporters’ abilities if the warrior died. Besides, Yoo Yeonha was one of the rare cadets in Cube who could serve as a supporter and sharpshooter.

In short, Yoo Yeonha would be an insurmountable wall for someone like me. Our ranks were way too far apart. I was ranked 934 while she ranked in the single digits.

“You should be the one going easy on me.”

“No, I’ll treat it as a life and death situation. You should go easy on me though.”

“Ha... Unbelievable...” Yoo Yeonha scoffed and looked out the window.

“I should quickly finish my match and come watch you two,” Chae Nayun snickered without letting go of the game device in her hands.

The SUV ran without a hitch for hours until we reached our destination.

“That’s... that’s the city...” Seo Youngji muttered. She became too excited after driving the Goldwood for six hours and seemed out of it.

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened in surprise and she asked, “We’re already here?”

“Yeah... this car is... too good...” Seo Youngji replied with a disoriented look. Her eyes caressed every inch of the car.

“Ah... Alright... let’s get out.”

The club members exited the car at President Chae’s order and Seo Youngji went to park the SUV.

“Wow... who knew a city could exist in the middle of nowhere?”

Chae Nayun’s description of the city-state was quite accurate. Virance had been built in the middle of a desert like Las Vegas, but they chose traditional architecture instead of modern designs. High-rise buildings could hardly be seen here. Most buildings had been built with bricks instead of concrete.

“Let’s go. Follow me,” Chae Nayun confidently led the way and we followed closely behind.

We couldn’t help but feel nervous approaching a city situated on the border of a danger zone. However, China was nearby and this place had enough visitors that they didn’t require any strict inspections like New Alliance.

Thanks to that, we entered the city without a hitch.

“Let’s head straight to the colosseum and register before anything else,” Chae Nayun said.

I slowed down and leisurely looked around. People crowded the streets. Most of them carried weapons on their waists or backs. They all looked like mercenaries.

“This city is famous for mercenaries.”

“Ack! You surprised me!”

“Ack!”

Seo Youngji appeared out of nowhere and surprised us.

“Ah... You’re really fast...”

“The leader of this city is a madman, so nobody dares to stir up trouble here.”

“Oh, I see.”

Everyone, including myself, understood what she meant.

The Hunters of Madness ruled this city, so nobody dared to pick a fight. I didn’t create this story setting, but easily understood her warning.

“Then, shall we head to the hotel?” Seo Youngji said before flashing a shiny card that contained the Pharmacy Club’s stipend.

“We can stay anywhere and even book one room per person,” Seo Youngji smiled and led us to a luxurious hotel called [Angel’s Sanctuary].

We immediately left the hotel after unpacking due to Chae Nayun’s pestering.

“We only have an hour left before the public transportation stops. Hurry and walk faster!” Chae Nayun shouted from the front.

Stomp! Stomp! Stomp! Stomp!

We ran with Chae Nayun in the lead until we spotted a crowd at the city square.

I slowed to a halt.

“Everyone! Time to place your bets! Who will emerge victorious this season in the colosseum? The minimum bet starts at one million Korean won!”

The city square featured a big board surrounded by bookies collecting money from people and handing out receipts.

I could tell from a glance that this was the place to gamble in regards to the colosseum. I tiptoed towards the betting board and looked around.

“Hey, Kim Hajin,” Chae Nayun called me.

She squatted in front of a street peddler.

“Look at this,” she pointed to a wolf cub and played with it as it barked.

“Should we raise one?”

“...”

I checked the cub’s breed. It was a black wolf, which wasn’t that special.

“Why?”

“This looks like you. It has eyes, a nose, and ears. Its hair is also black like yours.”

“Is that what looking alike means nowadays?”

Going by her logic, the wolf cub probably had five hundred million other people it looked like.

“Is that so?” Chae Nayun replied and hugged the wolf cub. She already planned to buy it.

“...?”

She extended the wolf cub towards me and motioned for me to hug it.

I suddenly noticed two hooded figures in the distance as Chae Nayun tried to shove the wolf cub into my arms. They wore black robes that covered their entire bodies and their hoods also covered their faces. They walked on the street without sparing a glance at anything.

However, I sensed a dangerous aura from them and peered through their disguises.

“...”

I could see their faces and recognized them from the midterm exam. They probably also came for the colosseum.

One of them suddenly stopped and looked around. It seemed he felt my gaze.

“Hey.”

“Huh? What?”

I pulled Chae Nayun’s arm towards me. I didn’t even pull that hard, but she ended up hitting her head on my chest and embracing me.

“W-What is this... Kya!”

I pulled her into an alley as the sudden turn of events surprised her. I treated her a bit rough, but Chae Nayun easily came along as if letting herself be taken.

“Stay still for a moment.”

“H-Huh? W-Why?”

I pushed Chae Nayun against the alley wall and placed a finger on her lips while motioning, ‘Shh!’

Fortunately, Chae Nayun didn’t ask any questions and obediently listened.

I patiently waited until those two disappeared from view. It would be problematic if they saw me since we met during the midterm exam.

“...”

“...”

Thankfully, they left without any particular reactions. I finally sighed in relief and let go of Chae Nayun.

“Who is it this time?” I grumbled after spotting another group of robed people.

Around twenty of them walked in single file. Most of them were djinns and probably belonged to one of the evil organizations.

Our chances of winning would greatly diminish if they also participated in the colosseum event.

— Hey, do you think we can make any money out of this?

— Don’t worry. I already did my research and we have an 80% chance of winning.

— What about the remaining 20%?

— Just shut up and stop being a worry wart.

However, their goal was just to bet. A strict rule prohibited anyone and their friends from participating if they had placed a bet.

“Mmph... mmm... haaang...”

Suddenly, I heard someone moaning. I looked down and saw steam rising from Chae Nayun’s head. I wasn’t exaggerating. Actual steam came out of her head.

“Oh...”

I finally realized that I stuck too close, but why did she react like that? Was she going to throw up? Well, that would be understandable since I hadn’t showered after being abducted from the gym.

I took a few steps back and tapped her on the shoulder, “Hey, Chae Nayun.”

She looked up at me. Her eyes were out of focus and she kept biting her lips, which made me certain that she would throw up at any second.

“I’m sorry. Are you alright?” I asked.

“H... H-Huh...?”

“Are you sick?”

“W... W-Why?”

“Come on. Let’s go register.”

I left the alley and Chae Nayun obediently followed with the wolf cub in her arms.

Sniff... Sniff...

I discreetly sniffed my shirt. It did smell a bit. No, I reeked of sweat. However, I couldn’t do anything about that since this desert city was incredibly hot.

Side Stories 56

Chae Nayun (11)

I walked alongside Chae Nayun towards the grand structure in the distance known as the colosseum. The colosseum towered above everything else, so we didn't need to ask for any directions.

“Hey...” I carefully called out.

I couldn't help but be bothered by her. She acted strong and nonchalant, but I knew very well how sensitive and emotional she was. She was the prime example of being strong on the outside, but fragile on the inside. What happened just now would probably be enough to make her loathe someone like me.

“What, punk?” Chae Nayun responded.

Thankfully, she sounded like her usual self.

I looked back with a sigh of relief as she busily petted the wolf.

“Anyways, I'm sorry.”

“Sorry for what?”

“Just now.”

“...Did you eat something wrong?”

Our conversation was cut short as we arrived in front of the colosseum. This grand structure in the middle of the desert certainly looked like the one in Rome, but it stood even taller with a roof over it.

Kim Suho and the others waited for us near the structure.

“Hey, what took you guys so long?” he asked.

He winked at me, but I had no idea why.

Shin Jonghak rushed to Chae Nayun, who simply shoved him back and went to Yoo Yeonha.

She showed the wolf to Yoo Yeonha and asked, “Hey, what do you think of this?”

“...It’s a wolf.”

“Doesn’t it look like him?” Chae Nayun asked while pointing at me.

Yoo Yeonha looked at me and the wolf before frowning.

“Alright, is everyone here? Follow me,” Seo Youngji clapped and grabbed our attention. Then she added, “We have to register. There are a lot of people, so be careful of pickpockets.”

She was our advisor, but didn’t dissuade us from joining the colosseum. In fact, she encouraged us to participate.

Chae Nayun liked this about her and replied with an affirmative yes before skipping away like a child.

“But hero Seo Youngji... Can we really do this? Do we have a chance?” Yoo Yeonha asked while walking behind Seo Youngji.

She seemed against the whole idea unlike Chae Nayun, who happily skipped in front.

“Hmm... I don’t think you don’t stand a chance. Besides, the colosseum has a rookie bonus system. The second place reward, Soul Mana Vermillion, will only be awarded to rookies,” Seo Youngji replied.

“Hmpf...” Yoo Yeonha pouted.

Meanwhile, the party reached the registration area and everyone received a registration form except for Seo Youngji.

“You don’t have to write anything else aside from your alias and your type of weapon. You can think of your alias as something like a game ID,” the registrar explained.

I immediately finished my form and handed it to the registrar.

[Alias: X-Man. Weapon: Firearm.]

“The registration fee is one million Korean won per person,” the registrar added after receiving my form.

“Here you go.”

Chae Nayun stepped up and gave six million won to the registrar to cover the unexpected costs.

“I have confirmed your registrations. Please take one card each.”

We received our cards with our respective aliases along with nine thousand points.

“Huh? Did you copy me?” Chae Nayun tapped on my shoulder and showed me her card.

Her nickname was [JaJangMan].

“...What the hell is that?” I frowned and questioned her strange naming sense.

However, the registrar interrupted us before Chae Nayun had the chance to retort.

“Alright, I will explain how your card works. You will be fighting in the colosseum and will gain points every time you win. You may use your points to purchase things within the colosseum or convert them for cash once you leave. The participant with the highest points at the end of the month will receive the [Gautz Gauntlet] as a reward. Of course, the points and rewards are different. Just because you win the reward does not mean we'll be taking your points. Do you understand?"

All of us nodded at the registrar's explanation. Honestly, I had no idea how the specifics worked, but everything here seemed to operate with a well-thought-out system.

"Then, please enter before five in the afternoon tomorrow," the registrar added.

We turned around after receiving our cards.

Seo Youngji smirked and said, "Amazing, right? Varance is quite well-known and affluent among the neutral cities. You'll get to see a lot of amazing things here. If New Alliance was a place for you to rest and recover, then this is the place for you to spend your money."

Chae Nayun went, Aha, as if she understood what Seo Youngji meant. Then she asked, "You seem quite knowledgeable about this."

"Yeah, I've participated in the colosseum a few times as a cadet. Forget about that. It'll start tomorrow, so you should enjoy today," Seo Youngji smiled and pulled out a credit card in a flashy, yet pointless manner.

The Dahyun corporation gave us this credit card for the trip and not even Chae Nayun knew how much it contained.

* * *

I looked out my hotel room window. It had a good view of the swimming pool and party hall. The lighting around the hotel grounds brightly shone under the darkening sky. I slightly opened the window as laughter and music flowed into my room.

I wondered if those people were really happy. Did they live without fear of their fellow humans, who suddenly turned into superhumans? I mean, could they simply accept that fact and not be bothered that another person could kill them with the slight wave of a hand?

Knock... Knock...

Someone knocked on the door and interrupted my meaningless train of thought. I didn't bother opening the door or responding, but the door opened anyway.

Everyone, except for Shin Jonghak and Seo Youngji, came into my room.

"...What do you all want?" I asked.

"Nothing much. It's our free time and we were bored, so we came to play some cards," Chae Nayun replied with an awkward smile.

"But where are the other two?"

"They said they're going out sightseeing."

"Really?"

Shin Jonghak seemed to be spending quite a lot of time with Seo Youngji these days. Could something be going on between them?

Chae Nayun and Kim Suho sat at the table and shuffled the deck while Yoo Yeonha sat on the sofa and checked something on her smartwatch.

"Why a game of cards all of a sudden?" I asked with some suspicion.

Chae Nayun tilted her head in confusion, "Why? You don't know how to play? I know you're good at it."

"No, that's not it..."

Did these four innocent kids (Chae Nayun, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Yeonghan, and Kim Suho) know what they were getting into by challenging me?

"None of you... will be able to beat me," I said in a cocky, yet confident manner.

“Ha! Have you ever played?” Yoo Yeonha retorted with a scoff.

The perfect saying to describe her attitude was probably, ‘Fools rush in where angels fear to tread.’

“Yeah, I’ve never lost in my life.”

“Then today is the day you’ll taste your first defeat,” Yoo Yeonha opened the briefcase she brought and took out the chips.

She looked confident as she divided the chips and probably thought all of it would come back to her in the end.

“By the way, these are real chips I bought from a hotel casino. It probably adds up to one hundred million won. I originally wanted to play at a real casino, but I guess we have to make do with this. I’ll divide this into five for each of us. Just consider it a small loan from me,” Yoo Yeonha said with her usual air of haughtiness.

“Oh, this is getting fun! Let’s play!” Chae Nayun exclaimed and further instigated the situation.

I didn’t know if it was because of the wolf pup running around the room, but Chae Nayun seemed excited about everything.

“Alright... don’t regret it if you go broke though. Hold on. One hundred million won is one year of your allowance, right?” I asked.

“What are you talking about... Wait a minute. How do you know how much my allowance is?!” Yoo Yeonha exclaimed in surprise.

“I didn’t?”

“...What the hell?”

Anyways, she really did scrape up her annual allowance and converted it into chips.

I sat at the table intending to suck her dry. It only took slightly over an hour for the game to end.

As expected, every single chip ended up in front of me.

“Wow... What just happened?”

“Does that mean I have to pay twenty million won to Kim Hajin? That’s a bit much... You’re going to cut me some slack, right?”

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan seemed to be in disbelief over what just happened while Yoo Yeonha was in a daze with her mouth wide open. It looked as if cracks would form all over her and she would crumble if someone poked her.

Chae Nayun threw the cards on the table and grumbled, “Ah, fuck... It’s annoying to keep losing. Hey, Kim Hajin. I’m hungry. Let’s go and eat something.”

“...I’ll just cook for you guys. I mean, I just won a hundred million won from all of you. It’s the least I can do.”

Yoo Yeonha flinched in response, but I ignored her and went to cook.

“Wow, really? Are you sure? I don’t mind if you do,” Chae Nayun replied.

My cooking skills already reached the pinnacle thanks to my Dazzling Dexterity. I confidently took out my cooking set from my bag and started cooking.

“Whoa... Sniff! sniff! That smells really good... Sseup! Sniff! Sniff!”

Chae Nayun sneaked behind me and rested her chin on my shoulder as she sniffed the aroma.

I looked at her while marinating the meat and asked, “Are you a dog? Why are you sniffing like that? Can you get off me?”

“Sniff! Sniff! Sniff! Sniff!” Chae Nayun completely ignored me and continued sniffing like a dog with a huge grin.

Meanwhile, the sound of someone lamenting, “My money... my precious money...” could be heard from one corner of the room.

* * *

The next day, we left right away in the afternoon. Of course, we headed to the colosseum.

“What’s our goal? It’s the Soul Mana Vermillion. Don’t forget that,” Chae Nayun said.

She gathered us into a huddle and gave a pep talk, but everyone aside from Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan seemed annoyed by her antics.

Yoo Yeonha, the biggest loser from last night who lost a ridiculous three hundred million won, looked like a soulless panda with big dark circles under her eyes.

“It should be fine if I place first, right?” Shin Jonghak said as he put on airs.

“Yeah, it’s fine. Either I or Kim Suho will place second if you win first anyways,” Chae Nayun replied with a shrug.

“Hmm... I guess you’re right,” Shin Jonghak replied with a confident smirk.

Chae Nayun became quite skilled at handling Shin Jonghak.

On the other hand, I felt nervous as opposed to the confident trio of Shin Jonghak, Chae Nayun, and Kim Suho.

They did mention that participants could concede during the match, so I shouldn’t die at least.

“The entrance will soon open! All participants! Please gather around!” one of the staff members shouted by the gates when the clock struck five o'clock.

The people loitering around gathered. Some came to support their friends, some entered in parties just like us, and others covered their faces with hoods, etc.

We also wore the masks we had prepared beforehand and entered the colosseum.

“Hey, looks like we’ll be split up. Good luck everyone! I’ll kill you if you get eliminated!” Chae Nayun shouted.

“Pharmacy Club, fighting!”

“...My precious money.”

Only one corridor appeared at first, but it soon divided into multiple.

I walked for around five minutes before a woman appeared in front of me.

“Hello, I am your manager, Riyu! May you please give me your card?”

“Ah, sure.”

I looked at her pink hair in amazement before handing her my card.

She brightly smiled and took it before saying, “It’s nice to meet you. Let’s see... X-Man... your weapon is... a firearm?”

Her bubbly personality and jolly voice suddenly went down a notch. She blinked a few times while staring at my card and her expression turned into an obviously disappointed one.

“Firearm means...”

I showed her my Desert Eagle, “Yes, a gun.”

“Ah...”

Riyu didn't say anything after that and I leaned against the corridor wall.

She turned away and put a hand on her ear. Then she whispered, "Yes... yes... a gun... I think he's a mercenary... Yes... as soon as possible..."

It seemed that people looked down on guns even at the colosseum. Well, I didn't have any qualms with that since I was way below the likes of Shin Jonghak and Kim Suho. I simply smiled at the fiasco.

"Excuse me, X-Man? Please follow me. I'll quickly process everything," Riyu said.

She initially addressed me politely, but immediately downgraded me afterwards. I had no problems with that since it was somewhat true. I actually liked it since she seemed willing to fast-track the process and get it over with.

I followed her through the corridor until we arrived at a dome-shaped area.

"Oh, right. I should explain the rules since you're a rookie," she said.

"Yes."

Riyu sighed as if she found it to be cumbersome.

"There are one hundred twenty-seven arenas within the colosseum divided into their respective ranks. Sixty-four of them are the lowest, thirty-two are low, sixteen are low-mid, eight are mid, four are mid-high, two are high, and the last remaining one is the highest. It's up to the participants to decide which arena they want to fight in, but all rookies are limited to the low-mid arenas at most. Do you understand? Go on in if you do."

She finished her rude explanation and I stepped into the colosseum.

"What the hell is this?" I grumbled as pitch-black darkness surrounded me.

The lights installed in the ceiling suddenly turned on and illuminated the darkness.

— The brave contender who came here with only a single gun, X-Man!

The voice reminded me of wrestling matches and suddenly blasted across the arena as it introduced me to the crowd. Only then did the darkness disappear.

I looked around and saw around one hundred spectators in the huge arena large enough to seat three thousand people.

No one among the spectators was cheering or hooting. They just scratched their heads and looked at me as if I was a strange creature.

— First match!

Thud!

The caged door on the other side opened and a pair of aggressive eyes brightly shone from the darkness.

“Grrr...!”

A threatening growl could be heard as a two meter tall creature with green skin and a muscular body walked out.

“Oh, it’s an orc,” I muttered as I prepared my Desert Eagle.

I changed my Desert Eagle into a shotgun with the help of aether.

— Will X-Man win against the orc?!

“Krrwaaagh!” the orc let out a deafening cry and rushed at me.

I could only thank the orc for closing the distance between us.

Bang!

I pulled the trigger and my shotgun blew up the orc. A deafening silence filled the arena.

— S-Second match!

The second monster was a draco, a lizard that walked on two legs and possessed tough skin.

It stomped its large feet on the ground to threaten me and seemed to be around rank 9 judging from its size.

However, I simply pulled the trigger again.

Whoosh!

The monster quickly moved and dodged the bullets, but I already anticipated its next two moves. Two shotgun shells ended up in its abdomen.

The draco died and the crowd remained silent.

“Hey, who the hell is that guy? Why is everything dying from one hit? Is that even a gun?” someone in the crowd asked.

— Third match!

Thud! Thud! Thud! Thud!

The ground shook as something big came out from the door. I instinctively recognized the monster from the tremor it caused. It was definitely an ogre.

The crowd finally grew excited after seeing the ogre.

I prepared myself and infused stigma into my bullets.

“Gwaaaaah! Rwaaaaah!”

The ogre rushed at me like a maniac as soon as it stepped into the arena.

I infused stigma into my feet and jumped when it swung its club. Then I aimed my shotgun at the monster and pulled the trigger.

Bang!

The bullets infused with the fire attribute exploded when they struck the ogre's head. This immediately stopped the monster from moving.

“Gwa...! Gwaa... Grrrwaaaaah!”

The ogre trembled in agony, but I didn't let my guard down. After all, an ogre was still an ogre.

I transformed my shotgun into a machine gun and unleashed a bullet shower from a safe distance. The strengthened bullets had no problem piercing the ogre's thick hide.

“Grr... Krruoh... Grrrwaaaaah!”

The ogre wildly swung its club in every direction, but it would never be able to hit me because my first attack had already burned its eyes away.

* * *

My manager guided me to the common lounge after the match ended.

“This is the common lounge, X-Man. There's a separate rest area for winners, so please feel free to rest before your next match,” Riyu said.

“Ah, sure...”

The pink-haired Riyu suddenly addressed me with the utmost respect again.

Anyways, the common lounge had various amenities like couches, computers, and a bar.

I sat on the couch and waited for my teammates. Around ten minutes passed before someone wearing a fox mask came into the common lounge.

“It’s me, codename: JaJangMan.”

“I know even if you don’t tell me.”

“Show me your card.”

I compared my card with Chae Nayun’s. She had three hundred points more than me.

“Okay, I just have to maintain enough to place second until the end of the month, right?”

“Yeah, that’s correct.”

The colosseum only went on for a month and we would probably have to go back in the middle of it for our midterms exam...

The common lounge door opened again and a group of hooded figures came in.

I immediately used Hacking to figure out their identities. The crowd was made up of evil djinns, mercenaries, sophomore Cube cadets, etc.

Fortunately, the person I was wary of didn’t show up.

“Hey...” Chae Nayun called out.

I turned to her.

“So I was saying, we have to use our points sparingly if we want to maintain our rank, right? I was thinking...”

It looked like she had something to say, but kept hesitating and bit her lips. She started mumbling gibberish.

“Ah... Uw... Uh...”

“What are you trying to say? Just hurry up and spit it out.”

“Ah... That’s...”

The way she acted frustrated me, but she soon calmed her breathing and composed herself.

“Let’s sleep in the same room to save up,” she said.

She blurted out a barrage of words before I could even respond.

“I gave it some thought and we have to save our points to place second in the rankings and obtain the reward. However, we have to save up quite a bit to do that. I was thinking it would definitely help if we shared instead of wasting points on separate rooms.”

Side Stories 57

Chae Nayun (12)

"Haaa..." Chae Nayun sighed as she lay on the sofa.

She mustered the courage to make her proposal. Fortunately, Kim Hajin agreed that it was a great idea and accepted.

"I actually thought we would go up against other people, so I was really nervous."

"Me too. I was slightly nervous as well."

Yi Yeonghan and Kim Suho respectively spoke while lying on the floor.

Yoo Yeonha also sat beside them. She wore a wrist protector, ankle protector, waist protector, and magic rings. Indeed, she lived up to her name as a gear maniac with her entire body covered in artifacts.

Anyways...

Kim Hajin misunderstood Chae Nayun's offer as having everyone in one room instead of just the two of them.

"Ah... Annoying... Argh! Annoying! Damn it!" Chae Nayun cried out.

"Hey, what's wrong with you?"

"GRRWAAAH!" Chae Nayun suddenly started screaming and stomping her feet.

Kim Hajin was meditating a distance away and opened his eyes. He glared at her because of the commotion.

“That little...”

Chae Nayun thought he should’ve picked up on the subtle hints by now, but she realized that was unlikely because of their relationship at this point. The fact that they were currently in the same club was already a miracle since they weren’t on good terms yet.

“Hey, what are you doing?” she asked.

Kim Hajin turned towards her, but didn’t say anything. Instead, he handed her the announcement written on his card.

[Choose One – Battle or Hurdle]

“What’s that?”

“It’s what we have to do next. We need to choose one. Why don’t you check your card?”

Chae Nayun took her card out of her pocket.

It seemed that ‘Battle’ meant an actual battle against another person and ‘Hurdle’ meant they would have to fight against a certain situation.

“Hmm... Do we have to choose one or the other? Hey, what are you guys choosing?” Chae Nayun asked.

“I’m going for battle. I should probably use this opportunity to gain some real-life combat experience,” Yi Yeonghan said as he shot his hand up.

Kim Suho contemplated for a moment before deciding to go with battle too.

Chae Nayun glanced at Kim Hajin and asked, “Hey, Kim Hajin. What are you going for?”

“Why?”

“I want to choose the opposite of what you choose.”

Kim Hajin tilted his head in confusion.

Chae Nayun continued with a disgruntled look, “We can’t meet as enemies, right? Stupid...”

Everyone looked at Chae Nayun.

Yi Yeonghan frowned and Kim Suho did the same.

“Wow... what is she doing right now? Is she being considerate? I swear she was ready to beat us to death, but not Kim Hajin?”

“I know, right?”

Chae Nayun instinctively reacted when the duo put on a sleazy smile and teased her. She grabbed the pillow beside her and threw it at their faces. The pillow struck Yi Yeonghan before bouncing off and striking Kim Suho too.

“I’m going for the hurdle...” Kim Hajin said in a small voice.

Chae Nayun nodded, “Okay, I’ll go for battle then.”

Then she looked at Yoo Yeonha, who remained deep in thought.

Yoo Yeonha finally replied, “I think I’ll go for the hurdle too.”

* * *

I entered the hurdle the next day. The hurdle was a bit, no, quite a unique place.

“...Is this the Amazon or what?”

Lush overgrown vegetation surrounded me and large trees that I couldn’t identify towered above. The environment felt humid and the hot breeze caressing my skin made me uncomfortable.

“Ah... This is starting to annoy me...”

I looked at that card from the colosseum. The manager told me that most of the things happening here would be recorded on the card.

To my surprise, the card did contain a message.

[You will gain more points the longer you survive...]

The sentence stopped halfway. Maybe the card malfunctioned because it was too hot here? I placed it back in my pocket and began walking.

“...Just how big is this arena?” I wondered while walking.

I walked and walked and walked.

I was covered in sweat after two hours due to the crazy humidity and the fact that it was quite difficult to walk through this mushy terrain.

“This heat is going to kill me sooner or later...”

However, I actually preferred this. It was worth a shot if all I had to do was survive without having to fight anyone. My card malfunctioned, so I had no idea how long I had to stay here. I needed to find some food if I wanted to survive.

I pulled out my dagger and headed towards the swamp to catch some alligators.

“Kwaaah! Krrwaaaah! Brrruaaararararah!”

“...”

Two dinosaurs fought each other in the swamp.

I instinctively retreated as far back from the swamp as possible. Then I spotted an alligator. Well, it seemed more like a lizard the size of an alligator.

“Kireuk!”

The creature hissed at me and I immediately threw my dagger. It flew like a bullet before piercing between the creature’s eyes.

The dagger moved by itself and dug into the creature’s brain. This combo was a synergy between [Dazzling Dexterity] and [Master Sharpshooter].

“Haaa...”

I skinned the lizard and deboned its meat with the dagger. Next, I tanned its hide with stigma. The lizard’s tough hide instantly turned soft like the ones sold in the market. Then, I processed it with [Dazzling Dexterity].

[Lizard Leather Bag] [Intermediate Rank]

— A bag made from lizard leather, skinned and tanned on the spot. It has numerous features and can be considered a luxury item.

[Intermediate Rank Preserve Freshness]

[Low Rank Weight Reduction]

The results satisfied me considering I used half of my mana. I placed the meat into the bag and began walking again.

Around three hours passed.

“Ukiki! Ukiki!”

I spotted a monkey swinging from tree to tree.

“Hold on...”

I realized something. This place filled with towering trees meant it was no different from a... parkour heaven.

I immediately climbed a tree and began jumping from one to another so fast that it looked like I was gliding through the air.

“Hmm?”

A familiar figure caught my eye as I sped through the trees.

Yoo Yeonha held her whip against six men wielding swords. I had no idea what was going on, but the atmosphere between them didn't look good.

I stopped on top of a tree and transformed my Desert Eagle into a sniper rifle.

The men channeled their mana and charged at Yoo Yeonha.

I aimed at them and pulled the trigger.

Pshwoo! Pshwoo! Pshwoo!

The entire situation de-escalated before Yoo Yeonha could even swing her whip.

“...What happened just now?” she muttered while looking around in disbelief.

I snapped a branch off the tree and threw it at her. The branch flew in an arc before hitting her forehead.

Tak!

“Hiyaak!” she screamed and jumped as if something electrocuted her.

The blow wasn't strong enough to kill her, but it seemed I threw it a bit too hard and she stood there rubbing her forehead.

I lightly jumped off the tree and landed behind her.

“Hey.”

“Hiiieeek!”

We had been here for close to eight hours. Yoo Yeonha seemed mentally exhausted as she shrieked in horror and jumped when I called her.

I found the sight quite funny. It looked like she had been struck by lightning.

* * *

Sixteen hours passed since we arrived in the jungle and the sky began to darken.

Yoo Yeonha sat on a tree stump and stared at the campfire, but it made her uncomfortable because the flames danced and hissed like a lizard.

“So... the spectators are watching us from somewhere?” she asked.

“They should be,” Kim Hajin replied.

“I feel like a victim of voyeurism... Such perverts...”

“At least your face is covered.”

Yoo Yeonha wore a fox mask that anyone would call a cat mask, but she insisted it was a fox.

“Haa... I wonder what part of this is a hurdle?”

“Stop whining and eat this,” Kim Hajin retorted and passed her some food.

Yoo Yeonha looked down at the food on a big leaf that he used as a plate.

It looked like normal meatballs, but she knew it was made from mushed lizard meat. It looked normal on the outside, but lizard meat... lizard meat... she was supposed to eat lizard meat... she had no choice but to eat it if she wanted to survive... but lizard meat...

Yoo Yeonha sighed and picked up a meatball. She closed her eyes and bravely put one in her mouth.

“...!”

Her eyes slowly lost strength before opening again as the lizard meat caressed her tongue.

“Hang...!” she let out an unintentional moan before quickly covering her mouth in surprise.

Kim Hajin laughed and asked, “Is it good?”

“Hmpf! Beats me...”

“Then don’t eat it.”

“Ah! It’s good! It’s delicious! It’s so good that I would buy them if it’s sold at the market...”

Yoo Yeonha’s pride took a hit, but the meatball definitely tasted delicious. She gobbled up every meatball that Kim Hajin gave her.

“Do we have any leftovers?” she asked.

“Do you want more?”

“No, I was just asking. We’ll have to throw away the leftovers, right?”

“I can just smoke them and keep them for tomorrow.”

“Hiing...” Yoo Yeonha suppressed her disappointment.

Kim Hajin was truly a jack of all trades. He easily built a shack using cordage made from animal tendons, knitted leaves together to form a roof, and made makeshift walls out of tree bark. He did all this on top of cooking those perfect meatballs despite their environment.

Yoo Yeonha couldn't help but feel bothered by how capable and crafty he was. She wondered when he had the time to learn all these survival skills.

Honestly, she already realized the answer to that question a long time ago. He must've learned all of this while trying to survive in this world. He must've suffered unimaginable loneliness and faced numerous hardships alone.

In the end, the countless trials and tribulations the world threw at him failed to kill him and only made him stronger. He must be so level-headed thanks to surviving in this world alone.

Kim Hajin mistook Yoo Yeonha's silence as her falling asleep and said, "Go sleep up there if you're going to sleep. It's quite comfortable up there."

"I'm not sleeping," she retorted.

Ironically, she began feeling sleepy right afterwards. It was then that the thicket behind her suddenly rustled.

Yoo Yeonha felt the hair on the back of her neck stand up and goosebumps spread all over her body. She sensed strong killing intent from the darkness and two people soon emerged.

"..."

Both of them wore long robes and stood behind her and Kim Hajin.

Yoo Yeonha couldn't utter a word and felt a life-threatening danger just standing in their presence. The crippling fear made it seem as if the entire world froze.

On the other hand, Kim Hajin nonchalantly enjoyed his meal.

Yoo Yeonha couldn't understand how he kept enjoying his meal when those two figures appeared out of nowhere with such powerful killing intent.

Even the two robed figures seemed taken aback by his eccentric behavior.

Thanks to that, the killing intent enveloping the area slightly subsided and Yoo Yeonha finally regained control of her body.

She plopped down on the ground and tried to catch her breath,
“Haa... Haa... Haa...”

Meanwhile, Kim Hajin glanced at the robed individuals. Their shadows danced around the campfire.

“Did you come looking for food?” he nonchalantly asked.

The two robed figures glanced at each other before one of them glared at Kim Hajin.

“It seems you have a good grasp of what’s going on,” one of them, a woman judging by her voice, spoke.

Yoo Yeonha looked at Kim Hajin, but he didn’t say anything in response.

“Hey... what... is she... saying?” Yoo Yeonha asked as her curiosity triumphed over the crippling fear incapacitating her.

The other robed figure, who was a man, courteously replied, “What she means is, this place isn’t the colosseum.”

“...?” Yoo Yeonha couldn’t say anything and simply looked at Kim Hajin again.

Kim Hajin still looked relaxed. He looked so peaceful that Yoo Yeonha wondered what the hell was going through his mind.

‘Ah... We’re fucked...’

Actually, Kim Hajin had blocked off all of his senses. It wasn't that difficult since he could use stigma for anything, so he used it to block all the sensory receptors in his body.

Kim Hajin felt his heart stop too. Yes, it literally stopped when those two appeared and he quickly made the decision to block off his senses to prevent the killing intent from causing him any further damage.

Thanks to that, his vision became quite limited and he could only make out their silhouettes. He could only faintly hear sounds now too. His sense of touch and instincts also became completely blocked off to avoid feeling even a sliver of the killing intent that the robed figures exuded.

The robed man looked down at Kim Hajin and muttered, "What a strange fellow..."

Then his eyes darted towards the lizard meatballs.

"Is that food?" he asked.

Yoo Yeonha became confused for a moment. She couldn't tell if he was referring to them as food or the meatballs.

"W-What do you mean?" Yoo Yeonha asked as her imagination ran wild with all sorts of scenarios where she ended up as human meat.

Kim Hajin suddenly asked, "Do you want a bite?"

"..."

The robed duo looked at each other. Eighteen hours had passed since they arrived here and they had starved the entire time.

"Boss?"

"I don't think we have to kill them," the so-called boss uttered spine-tingling words before sitting in front of the campfire.

Tak...! Tak...! Tak...!

Only the crackling campfire could be heard as the four of them looked at the lizard meatballs.

“...What’s going on?” Yoo Yeonha muttered in disbelief.

She felt it with her own skin that the robed duo were definitely seasoned veterans. The fact that their presence alone drove her into a corner proved that.

However, Kim Hajin seemed unaffected by them. He didn’t back down for even a second. In other words, he was confident enough to not lose against them!

“Haaa...” Yoo Yeonha sighed in relief.

The fact that she had a companion like him became a huge relief.

It was then.

Ding!

A message popped up on their cards.

Side Stories 58

Chae Nayun (13)

— The winner! The new rising super rookie, JaJangMan!

The ring announcer shouted and raised Chae Nayun's hand. The crowd went crazy after she won her third consecutive victory.

“Yes, thank you! Thank you!” Chae Nayun nonchalantly brushed it off.

The matches didn't excite her much. After all, a bunch of rookies stood no chance against her when she regressed with all of her combat experience. Most of her opponents couldn't even exchange a proper blow before being beaten to the ground.

“Great work, JaJangMan! See you next week at the colosseum!”

“Yeah, sure. See you.”

Chae Nayun and her manager greeted each other before she left the colosseum.

She stretched after finally getting a breath of fresh air. Then she looked around her surroundings. The desert's blue hue looked beautiful at dawn.

“Hey! Hey, Chae Nayun!”

Someone suddenly called her.

Chae Nayun turned around and saw Yi Yeonghan rushing towards her while huffing and puffing. He held a piece of paper in his hand.

“Why? What's up?” Chae Nayun asked.

“Hey, hey, hey! Something big happened!” Yi Yeonghan exclaimed in response.

“What is it?”

“A problem! A huge problem!”

Chae Nayun tilted her head in confusion.

Kim Suho appeared behind Yi Yeonghan with a serious expression too.

“Take a look at this...” Yi Yeonghan showed her the paper in his hand.

[Red Notice: Wanted]

Name: Derio Rekru

Age: 33

Bounty: Three billion won (Dead or Alive)

It had a picture of a man in his thirties who looked like a drug addict. Aside from that, the poster looked like any other wanted poster.

“What about this? This is that guy, right?” Chae Nayun asked.

“You know who this is?” Yi Yeonghan asked in response.

“Of course, I do. Do you think I’m stupid or something?”

The Insane Witch Doctor, Derio Rekru. He was one of the most wanted criminals in the world and every Cube cadet had to memorize his name.

Yi Yeonghan shouted, “He’s holding the entire colosseum hostage!”

“...What bullshit are you spouting? We just left the colosseum,” Chae Nayun replied with a frown.

Kim Suho shook his head, “We weren’t affected because we chose ‘Battle’.”

“Huh?”

“All the participants who chose ‘Hurdle’ along with the spectators have gone missing.”

“...”

Chae Nayun became speechless with her mouth wide open. A fly even went into her mouth and left.

A powerful gust suddenly blew and Seo Youngji appeared. She seemed to be talking to someone on the phone.

“Yes, the neutral city-state. Derio Rekrü... yeah... yeah... hmm... really? Alright, I guess we have no choice. Yeah, that sounds good.”

Seo Youngji ended the call.

Chae Nayun glared at her and asked, “Was that the association? Are they coming?”

“Hmm? Ah, no, no. The association doesn’t get involved with neutral city-states. In return, I received approval for us to get involved. Anyways, I never imagined they would be ballsy enough to mess with the colosseum. He’s truly insane. As expected...”

Seo Youngji looked relaxed while Chae Nayun nervously bit her fingernails.

Kim Hajin and Yoo Yeonha were definitely involved if everyone who selected ‘Hurdle’ had been taken hostage.

“What should we do now?” Kim Suho asked.

Seo Youngji shrugged, “We have to think. We have to find out how that witch doctor managed to abduct the entire colosseum. Let’s wait for a bit longer since Jonghak is on his way here.”

“...”

Chae Nayun gritted her teeth and looked at the colosseum. She tried to recall if something like this happened in the past, but realized that was futile.

“Are you worried?” Kim Suho asked.

Chae Nayun glanced at him with a smirk, “No, Kim Hajin is strong.”

That guy was definitely strong. He wouldn’t get done in by a mere witch doctor, but why did she feel so anxious and frustrated despite knowing that?

“Haaa...” Chae Nayun sighed full of complicated emotions.

* * *

[Blood... s... a... Stage...]

[...K... i... ll... All... a... f...]

A bunch of difficult to understand text appeared on my card. No, this felt more like a curse than words.

“...”

I observed my surroundings a bit before releasing the restrictions I placed on my senses. Thankfully, they withdrew their killing intent and I no longer felt anything suppressing me. Also, this place was so humid that my cold sweat wouldn’t be obvious.

“P-Please help yourself.”

I ended up getting tongue-tied as I welcomed them to eat the lizard meatballs.

Both of them instantly looked at me and I blocked my senses again. This time, I cranked it up to the max. It would be impossible to deal with them if I didn't do this.

► Arts (1/3)

1. Parkour

I checked my arts that only had parkour and decided to add another one.

[Acting] [Intermediate Rank]

— Will allow the user to express their feelings better.

— Will acquire mental fortitude that will not be affected by external factors.

— The user will attain inner peace.

This was the best I could come up with to save myself from this predicament. It cost me five hundred SP, but I would receive a portion back if I ever deleted the art. It wouldn't be too burdensome.

[You have used 500 SP]

[Do you wish to save the new art?]

[Your luck has activated!]

I clicked [Yes] and my new art slightly improved because my luck triggered.

“Hoo...”

My new art immediately got to work and spread all over my body. I finally composed myself.

I offered the lizard meatballs to the two visitors, “It's cooked now.

Please help yourselves.”

“Haha...” the man responded first and simply laughed as he placed a meatball in his mouth. Then he flinched for a moment and exclaimed, “Wow... what’s this? It’s really good.”

One... two... three... four...

He began throwing one meatball after another into his mouth, but the woman simply watched him without eating.

I picked up a meatball and offered it to her, “I suggest you try one too.”

I had no idea why I spoke so strangely, but she didn’t mind and ate the meatball. She seemed to like it and began eating on her own afterwards.

“Wow... this is really good,” the man muttered in amazement at my cooking.

He took off his robe and finally showed his face. He looked handsome and surprisingly friendly.

The man stared at me for a while before asking, “Anyways, since when did you know?”

Of course, I had no idea what he meant. However, I knew very well that the Chameleon Troupe wasn’t running a charity. They were a bunch of strange evildoers who couldn’t be predicted like how a rugby ball could bounce in any direction.

Perhaps I shouldn’t have appeared so indifferent since that caught his attention. He exuded a strange mana that pressured me to tell the truth.

I crossed my arms over my chest and used Acting to the maximum to pretend that I was thinking.

“Hmmm...”

There didn't seem to be any barriers. After all, those two would've easily destroyed it if that was the case. Also, it would be too unnatural to say that we were teleported to another place. Something on this scale would require a huge magic circle and an archmage to cast.

[Blood... s... a... Stage...]

[...K... i... ll... All... a... f...]

I faintly recalled writing a similar setting as this one. I hurriedly opened the story settings and went over it. I didn't write anything in detail, but...

"...A curse?" I carefully mentioned whatever conclusion I reached.

The man smiled and exclaimed, "Wow! You really knew about it!"

Yoo Yeonha looked at me with wide eyes like an owl.

It felt like I guessed the correct answer to question number thirty on the CSAT. Having high luck surely did benefit me at times.

Clap! Clap! Clap! Clap! Clap! Clap!

"How did you know? That's amazing! You must be at least an expert!" the man exclaimed and gave me a round of applause.

Clap! Clap! Clap!

Meanwhile, the woman quietly ate the meatballs and grumbled, "... Noisy."

The man ignored her and continued, "Ah, we're actually here because of a request. We were going to assassinate that witch doctor, but I think that guy pulled some stunt. Haha! Unfortunately, we got caught in whatever he did."

The woman finished eating and the man got up from his seat.

I could see a reddish snake-like spear when his robes fluttered open, the Zhang Long Serpent Spear.

I looked at him and he returned a smile.

“Thanks for the food,” he said.

I simply nodded.

“Oh right, there seems to be a lot of djinns here. They probably got roped in like us, I guess? They seem to number in the thousands,” he added.

I had no idea if he was advising or warning us, so I simply asked, “Do you plan to kill that witch doctor or whatever he is?”

“We should.”

“...Do you have a way to kill him?”

“Beats me... We have to find a way, I guess?” the man flashed an innocent smile before putting on his hood.

The woman, the so-called boss, stared at me without saying anything. I had no idea why, but I suddenly tensed up from her gaze.

“Thanks for the food.”

Fortunately, she warmly thanked me before getting up and leaving.

* * *

“Amazing, right?”

The Chameleon Troupe reached the highest point in the jungle.

Lee Byul scanned the jungle to get a better grasp of the situation.

“Do you think he’s strong?”

Lee Byul didn’t respond, but the shadows around her spread out to analyze the curse. They recorded, absorbed, and analyzed the curse before returning to her.

“Is there a way for us to get out of here?”

“...”

It didn’t look easy to get out of this place. The best method would be to resist the curse. No, it would only be possible if they outright dispelled the curse. Unfortunately, no one in the Chameleon Troupe possessed the ability to do that. After all, a curse was something complex and intricate.

“There’s someone who we might be able to cooperate with. Wicked, that woman is here.”

“...”

“Or we could cooperate with those two we just met. At least we won’t be starving to death if we stick with them.”

“But you tried to kill them.”

Jin Yohan smiled, “Honestly, I planned to at first. What options did we have though? Those meatballs were so good. I mean, you enjoyed it too, right? Boss?”

“What nonsense are you spouting?” Lee Byul feigned ignorance.

Jin Yohan recalled the girl and boy they met. The girl lacked a bit in terms of strength, but she looked smart. Meanwhile, the boy was a strong one.

However, the really impressive part about the boy was that he had perfect control over his mana. Truth be told, Jin Yohan couldn’t sense any mana from him. The reason he tried to kill them was because of how skilled the boy was in controlling mana.

“He looked quite adept. It’s as if he’s also an assassin,” Lee Byul said.

She met Kim Hajin once before at Cube, but didn’t recognize him since he wore a mask this time.

“But...” Lee Byul looked at the red sky that was gradually turning dark. “He’s not strong enough,” she muttered.

Derio Rekru was capable of unleashing such a curse by channeling all his hatred and loathing for this world. He was not someone to underestimate.

Lee Byul smiled. She thought this would be an easy job, but things became slightly interesting.

“Yeah, there are quite a lot of interesting people in this world,” Jin Yohan said with a smile.

Lee Byul simply nodded in agreement.

However, Jin Yohan was referring to the boy and not who Lee Byul was thinking about.

* * *

“What’s the plan?” Yoo Yeonha asked while braving the overgrown jungle path.

“No idea,” I nonchalantly replied while scratching my chin.

I was actually at a loss too. It was only thanks to [Acting] that I managed to look calm.

“I think we should look for a way out first.”

“Rather than that... how did you know this happened because of a curse?”

“I got lucky.”

“What?” Yoo Yeonha squinted and glared at me like an angry cat.

“It’s true.”

I continued briskly walking while keeping a watch over my surroundings. A catalyst would be required to cast a curse of this scale no matter how powerful that witch doctor was. The value of such a catalyst would definitely be astronomical.

“Ah...” Yoo Yeonha muttered as she stopped.

I stopped too.

We both stared in awe at the overwhelming scenery on the horizon.

“Amazing... this is a curse?” Yoo Yeonha muttered.

A vast swamp stretched into the horizon like the ocean. The darkness made the swamp look like the ground, but any fool who walked into that would definitely sink and suffocate to death.

“I know, right?”

— Hey!

Someone suddenly shouted at us. I looked towards the voice and saw a group at the swamp, but we couldn’t possibly reach them over this distance.

— Hey! You guys! Over here!

— Huh?! Someone’s there!

— Where are you guys from?

They seemed confused about the entire situation too.

— Do you know what’s going on?!

— Hey! Where the fuck is this?!

I was going to respond when I felt a powerful surge of killing intent from deep underneath the swamp. It soon materialized as the ground shook.

Then, Death emerged from the swamp.

“_____!”

The huge darkness let out an ear-splitting cry that sounded unintelligible. The group a distance away from us heard it too.

— W-What?!

— F-Fuck! What’s that thing?! Aaaack!

They started to run, but I remained still and dumbfoundedly stared at the strange creature. It looked like a wild beast with its entire body covered in darkness. No, a creature that used both hands and walked on both feet couldn’t be called a beast.

The darkness threw the humans into its mouth.

Gulp!

It closed its eyes after swallowing them alive.

Yoo Yeonha tried to drag me away and I obediently followed her while whispering, “Is that the boss of this place?”

“...I have no idea.”

Someone else called out to us.

— Hey!

— Psst! Psst!

It sounded like they were calling for a dog or something, but we decided to head towards them nonetheless.

Surprisingly, another robed figure pulled us into the thicket.

“What are you guys doing? Do you have a death wish? That’s a swamp dokkaebi^[1]!”

“Swamp dokkaebi?”

The swamp dokkaebi was one of the strongest monsters that required a team of high rank heroes to hunt. It was also known as the owner of the Amazon.

“That’s right! A top-tier monster! You guys will die if you get caught!”

The woman seemed quite upset as she scolded us. I didn’t say a word and just stared at her.

She found my gaze annoying and scoffed, “What? You got a problem? You do know that I saved you, right?”

Whoosh!

A breeze blew past the quiet swamp. It briefly distracted me, but I looked at the woman again.

“No, it’s not that. I was just thankful. What’s your name?” I asked.

“Yes, that’s how you should respond. My name is Zomer.”

“...”

Zomer extended her hand. I almost shook it, but flinched instead. Zomer sounded like a very familiar name...

I observed my surroundings again and noticed that it went eerily silent. I pretended to shake Zomer’s hand before yanking her towards me.

“Kyah!”

I overpowered her with the help of aether and pointed my Desert Eagle at her spine.

“I’ll snap your spine in half,” I threatened.

“What are you doing?”

“How many comrades do you have? Tell me quietly.”

Yoo Yeonha quickly picked up on the situation and prepared to reach for her whip at any moment.

Zomer, no, Tomer continued to feign ignorance, “What are you talking about?”

I placed my finger on the trigger and she began making a fuss.

“WAIT! Wait! Wait! I’m going to scream! That swamp dokkaebi will come here if I do!”

“Just die, goodbye.”

Of course, I had no intention of killing her. However, my voice carried quite the killing intent. Actually, I was surprised by how scary I sounded myself. It was probably thanks to [Acting] that I added a while ago.

Tomer gasped in horror and immediately said, “O-Okay! Wait! Wait a minute! I’m sorry!”

“Just answer my question.”

“Alright, alright! Three. There are only three others. All of them are currently injured, so...” she stopped halfway.

I pressed the gun against her spine and forced her to continue, “So what?”

“...I was wondering if you guys had any potions with you.”

It didn't seem like she was lying. I looked over at Yoo Yeonha and she seemed to agree.

“Alright, lead the way. I'm warning you though. I'll pull the trigger if you try anything. Tell that guy up there to back off too,” I said.

'Damn... '

Tomer bit her lips and obediently led the way.

1. Dokkaebi is a mythical creature in Korean culture. 📖

Side Stories 59

Chae Nayun (14)

I walked with my gun pressed against Tomer's spine and she continued forward with both of her arms in the air. We proceeded until the mushy ground turned flat and found two injured individuals on the ground.

"I told you, right?" Tomer said.

However, I didn't drop my guard and remained alert, "Where are the rest?"

"What do you mean the rest?!"

"You're with the djinns, right?"

"...How did you know?"

"I saw them in the city."

Tomer seemed taken aback, but soon shook her head with a smirk.

"I'm just affiliated with them. I don't really care what happens to them. They can die for all I care. Besides, I'm not even officially a djinn."

"Hmm... Is that so?"

Fortunately, Tomer hadn't fully converted to the djinns yet.

"Are they with the djinns?" I asked while pointing at the two injured people.

“No, I met them in the city. We hung around for three months. I can’t simply let them die, so... before that, can you let go of me?”

I nodded and let Tomer go. Then I went over to check on the injured duo. Both of them sustained fatal injuries. One had his guts spilling out while the other’s rotting right arm began infecting the rest of his body.

“Sigh... I saved you only to have you threaten to kill me...” Tomer shook her head in disbelief.

“Saved us from what? Just hurry up and tell that guy up the tree to come down,” I retorted.

“Tsk... Anyways, can you save these guys?” Tomer asked while pitifully looking at them.

“Yeah, I can save them,” I confidently replied.

It wouldn’t be difficult to heal them with stigma and the mana-filled vegetation in this jungle.

“What? Really? I don’t think either of you is a healer... Do you have some potions with you? But I don’t think it’ll work unless it’s a high-grade one.”

“I have my ways... Oh, right. Before that, do you know anything about the Tears of Heaven? It’s a medicine that’s on par with the elixir of life.”

I decided to get any information I could regarding the Tears of Heaven since I had a strange feeling she knew something. I mean, I designed her to find aether by herself like a search dog.

“Oh, that one? Yeah, I know a bit about it. The djinns are searching for it right now.”

“The djinns?”

“Yeah, I’ll tell you the details after you save these two.”

The offer didn't interest me much, but Yoo Yeonha interjected before I could say anything.

"Let's do that," she whispered.

"..."

She looked at Tomer with sparkling eyes and I bitterly smiled. This was partly my fault since one of the traits I included in Yoo Yeonha's setting was that she couldn't resist recruiting talented individuals.

I began foraging the mana-filled grass around us. These plants only possessed mana and didn't have any healing capabilities. However, I could turn them into medicinal herbs by using [Setting Intervention]. It didn't require much SP. I only had to toggle the grass' mana and medicinal properties from [Off] to [On].

I mashed the medicinal herbs into a paste and began the operation.

I attended to the patient with a rotting right arm first. Stigma transformed into a sharp blade and cleanly cut off his rotting right arm in one smooth motion. Then I applied the medicinal paste to stop the wound from bleeding and dressed it with a cloth.

Next, I treated the one with his guts spilling out. I covered my hand with stigma and pushed his guts back into his abdomen. Then I arranged his insides to make sure everything was in its rightful place. Of course, I applied the same medicinal paste to stop the wound from bleeding and dressed it with a cloth.

"Phew..." I wiped the sweat off my forehead.

"...Is it done?" Tomer asked.

"They won't die as long as they remain like this. Now it's your turn," I looked at Tomer.

A child suddenly emerged from behind a tree. She only stood around 140 cm tall.

The child bowed to me before running over to check on the patients.

“How are they?” Tomer asked the child.

“They look fine... Although one of them lost an arm...”

Yoo Yeonha and I looked at Tomer.

Tomer shrugged and explained, “They’re siblings.”

“Thank you, ahjussi,” the child said with a bow.

“A-Ahjussi? Is that the proper way to address your benefactor?!” I retorted.

The child smiled and Yoo Yeonha loudly cackled.

“Haaa... Anyways, back to the Tears of Heaven. I have no idea why you’re looking for it, but you know that it was sold at an auction a long time ago, right?” Tomer asked.

“Yeah.”

“Okay, our team tried looking for it last time, but no one knows who bought it or if it really works. You can trust me on this as we’re quite the treasure hunters. So we narrowed down our search. Our first theory was that this was the doing of a ghost.”

I almost snapped and lost my patience.

“The second one is that the Tears of Heaven didn’t exist in the first place. This is the most probable explanation. A lot of people tend to do these things to launder money.”

Yoo Yeonha frivolously nodded in agreement.

However, I was certain that the second theory was wrong because I personally added the Tears of Heaven to the item settings.

“There’s a third and fourth theory, but forget about those. I have my own theory,” Tomer said.

I crossed my arms over my chest and looked at her.

Tomer came closer and spoke in a small voice, “The Tears of Heaven was probably deconstructed. You’re familiar with the story of the goose that laid golden eggs, right? It’s similar to that. I think whoever bought it tried picking it apart to replicate it.”

“...Is that so?”

“Yeah, I believe this is the most plausible explanation since there was a mansion that blew up shortly after the Tears of Heaven was auctioned. It belonged to some rich neutral city-state noble. The land it was on became completely contaminated. Forget about the mansion grounds, all the surrounding villages got contaminated too. Do you know why?”

Tomer smirked and continued, “It was probably divine punishment for trying to deconstruct the Tears of Heaven. They say that there’s a fine line between medicine and poison, right? I’m confident that you’ll find something if you go and investigate that place. Well, I didn’t go there because it was too far and dangerous.”

“Hmm...”

Even I had no idea how to make the Tears of Heaven. I hoped to get my hands on it by luck, but if what Tomer just said was true then...

“Can you tell us where that mansion is?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“Hmm? Ah, I can tell you whatever you want for the right price. Of course, that’s only if we manage to get out of here,” Tomer replied.

She was absolutely right that we had to find a way out of here first.

It grew late and I already exhausted most of my stigma. I stood up and dusted my hands.

“What are you going to do?” Tomer asked.

I took out my dagger, “I’m setting up camp.”

* * *

I made two makeshift beds for the injured and a cozy hut with [Dazzling Dexterity]. The injured slept on the beds and I left the three girls in the hut.

I came out and laid my remaining ammunition on the ground.

[20 x 82 mm Essence Bullet]

I had three hundred rounds left and changed one of their settings.

— Destructiveness has been enhanced.

— The bullets will now be able to pierce through mana and aura.

I modified them to pierce through mana and enhanced their destructiveness. In short, I made them stronger. It only cost two hundred SP to change the settings. The bullets now had a dark red aura that made them easier to identify at a glance.

Tomer came out of the hut and I quickly stored the bullets in my pockets.

She loitered behind me for a bit before approaching, “Hey, aren’t you curious why you’re trapped here?”

“It should be because of a curse,” I nonchalantly replied.

“Oh? You’re quite sharp. You don’t know who did this though, right?” Tomer crouched in front of me.

I thought she would continue even if I didn’t say anything.

She went on as expected, “I’m sure you’ve heard of the Witch Doctor

Derio Rekru since he's quite famous. Anyways, he ran away with a treasure after killing everyone in my team except for me."

"He killed your entire team?"

"Yeah, I told you. I was once a treasure hunter. That bastard stole the treasure and used its power for this massive curse."

"What's the treasure?"

"..." Tomer bit her lips and flashed a cold smile, "Unfortunately, I can't tell you that."

That was more than enough for me. I could simply ask the Book of Truth tomorrow once I recovered enough stigma.

"Sure."

"What? Aren't you curious?"

"Not really."

Tomer frowned and looked at me in disbelief.

"Just go and get some sleep," I leaned against a tree and closed my eyes.

Tomer looked at me for a while before muttering, "Heart of the Amazon."

I opened my eyes.

"Ha... I guess you've heard of it too. It's obvious any item called 'Heart of Something' would be famous," Tomer grumbled.

Indeed, she was correct. Heart of Ice, Heart of the Amazon, etc. were all treasures that bestowed its owner with certain absolute properties. The term absolute meant that the treasure's owner could assimilate with the property.

Such a treasure should never fall into the hands of djinns or the Chameleon Troupe. If I had to choose between them, it would be slightly better if the latter got it.

The Amazon contained various undiscovered treasures and monsters, which made it all the more important to stop djinns from forming a base there.

“Tsk tsk... What I’m trying to say is... someone like you shouldn’t get involved. It’s worth hundreds of billions of won. No, it would be in the tens of trillions already. Do you really think the djinns will idly sit by and watch? All the treasures and artifacts hidden in the Amazon will belong to them as long as they have the Heart of the Amazon,” Tomer explained.

I leaned against the tree and continued connecting the dots between the three major events to come up with the most plausible story setting.

What if... what if the witch doctor hid his body in the swamp dokkaebi?

“Hmm... Can we have a chat, Zomer?” Yoo Yeonha suddenly appeared and called Tomer by her alias.

I furrowed my brows at Yoo Yeonha.

“Me? About what?” Zomer, no, Tomer asked in response.

“I just have something to say. That’s all.”

“Hmm... Okay, I guess?”

Tomer went inside the hut with Yoo Yeonha.

I had a feeling Yoo Yeonha would try building rapport with Tomer, so I didn’t stop her.

— Who’s that guy? Why does he keep acting high and mighty all the time?

- ... He's stronger than you think. Anyways, are you really a djinn?
- Why are you curious about that?
- Because I'm not a djinn.
- What kind of logic is that?
- More importantly, why don't you retire and join a guild if you're not a djinn?

* * *

The morning sun slowly illuminated the jungle.

I only slept for three hours before the cold morning dew woke me. I got up and went to the swamp where the swamp dokkaebi appeared yesterday.

“The swamp dokkaebi must be in there somewhere...”

The swamp really resembled a vast sea. It was probably bigger than the largest lake in the world.

The swamp dokkaebi must be hiding somewhere underneath those murky waters.

“I should find a spot...”

I searched for a clear view of the swamp to use as a hideout. It didn't take long to find a tall tree that had lots of leaves, which would make for the perfect hiding spot.

I climbed up and positioned myself on a branch while hiding behind the leaves. Then I infused stigma into my eyes.

My vision expanded kilometers ahead and I could almost see the entire swamp. I spotted various individuals like colosseum spectators, infamous criminals, famous mercenaries, duelists, the Chameleon Troupe, and probably even Wicked's henchmen.

I planned to draw all of them towards the swamp. This was the most obvious course of action since it would be impossible to kill the swamp dokkaebi alone.

Clack...

I took something out from my belt. This mana grenade looked like a pine cone. I infused stigma into it and threw it into the swamp about two kilometers away.

Whiiiiing... Kabooooooooom! Kkrrrrwaaaazz!

An explosion resounded and the shockwave emitted by the grenade shook the entire swamp. A crater formed where the grenade landed.

I actually felt surprised because the crater looked bigger than I expected. The system message informed me why the mana grenade became so effective.

[Dazzling Dexterity and stigma have simultaneously activated.]

[The results will vary depending on how you handle stigma.]

— Hey, can you hear me?

I heard Yoo Yeonha's voice through the walkie-talkie function on my smartwatch.

“Yeah.”

— Where are you and what are you doing? Something just exploded.

“Just sit tight and wait. I can't make a sound from now on. The same goes for you. Don't move and just wait where you are.”

— What? Hmph! Okay, I'll do as you say...

Soon afterwards, the swamp dokkaebi emerged and roared,
“Gwuoooh!”

The monster stood as tall as the tree I hid in, but couldn’t see me.

I channeled more stigma into my eyes and inspected its body.

“Keuk!”

I felt a blood vessel in my eye pop, but I endured the pain and continued inspecting. My vision penetrated the giant swamp dokkaebi’s body... through all the mud... I finally spotted the witch doctor responsible for the curse curled up in the monster’s body.

“Keuk...”

I covered my bleeding bloodshot eyes. The pain felt agonizing, but I confirmed the witch doctor’s location in the swamp dokkaebi.

However, it wasn’t time for me to move yet. I had to wait for the Chameleon Troupe and Wicked to raid this gigantic monster.

Until then, I had to be one with this tree... Yes, this tree was one with me and I was one with this tree.

* * *

I opened my eyes at night. I didn’t mean to wake up, but an eerie sensation kept crawling on my skin. Goosebumps spread all over my body and my instincts warned me of something sinister.

I looked down at the darkness. The Chameleon Troupe and Wicked glared at each other with the swamp between them.

It seemed that they finally found the witch doctor’s location after four days, but they didn’t seem willing to cooperate. Neither of them opened their mouths, but they somehow communicated mentally through telepathy or something.

—... So I presume talks have broken down between us?

Wicked broke the silence and asked with a smile.

The Chameleon Troupe's boss nodded and replied.

— A temporary alliance. However, keep in mind that the treasure will be ownerless once its owner dies.

— The rightful owner is me, Wicked.

— Does that even matter right now? You do know it got stolen from you, right?

—... Alright, I won't stop you if you want to die so desperately.

The swamp began to shake as they busily taunted each other.

Ddruu...! Ddruu...! Ddruu...! Ddruu...!

Waves rose from the swamp as an overwhelming presence emerged.

I stiffened at the sight of the monster and my heart rapidly pounded as I tried to suppress the crippling fear taking over my body. I even thought of running away and leaving the rest to them. They were probably more than capable of dealing with that thing.

Besides, I probably wouldn't be much help anyways. They didn't need me here, so why should I take the risk and...

"Seup..."

However, I couldn't shake off the feeling that the treasure was somehow related to the Tears of Heaven. Perhaps it was my instinct as the original author or my absurdly high luck. Whatever it was, it would be the key to what we were looking for.

Those people considered the strongest in the world rushed towards the swamp dokkaebi, which everyone considered a mythical and legendary monster.

Meanwhile, I remained perched on the tree and inspected my Desert Eagle and wire...

After all, I needed patience to snatch away the treasure at the most critical moment. The Heart of the Amazon. I planned on snatching it while the Chameleon Troupe and Wicked fought each other after killing the swamp dokkaebi. The enhanced bullets, aether, and my wire would be more than enough to steal it.

I closed my eyes and erased my presence. My body didn't have an ounce of mana, so they wouldn't detect me anyways.

I just had to prowl like a hyena from a safe distance that wasn't too far or too close. No, it would be more appropriate to compare me to a small pest like a mosquito trying to go between giants...

* * *

"Hey, what is she doing?"

"I have no idea..."

Meanwhile, Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan watched Chae Nayun in disbelief.

She sat on a chair and blankly stared at the colosseum. She told them there was nothing to worry about, but had been in this state since yesterday.

"Oh, she looked down."

Chae Nayun moved for the first time in two hours. She kept blankly staring for 120 minutes before looking down and pulling her hair for five minutes. No one knew what she was thinking during those five minutes, but she would do that for five minutes before...

"Haa..." she sighed again.

Then she repeated the entire process of staring at the colosseum.

However, a new pattern suddenly appeared!

“Uh... ah... eh...” Chae Nayun began pacing back and forth like a constipated dog.

She kept pacing back and forth while moaning before returning to her seat and covering her face.

“Ugh... Hiing... Argh...” she continued moaning like a sick patient.

“Sigh...” Kim Suho walked to her with Yi Yeonghan following behind.

“Hey, Chae Nayun,” Kim Suho called out.

“H-Huh? Oh, hey... What’s up?” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

She magically reverted to her old self from the constipated dog a while ago.

Kim Suho wanted to tell her to stop worrying, but she beat him to it.

“What’s up with your faces? I told you not to worry, right? Don’t tell me you can’t trust me?”

She sounded quite brazen.

“Huh...? What did you say?” Kim Suho asked in disbelief.

“What do you mean huh? It’s exactly as I told you. Stop worrying! Nothing’s going to happen to them, so go back and get some sleep...” Chae Nayun said.

She repeated the same, ‘Don’t worry. Nothing will happen,’ tirade for around ten minutes.

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan couldn’t help but worry about her mental state. Even Shin Jonghak, who hid and observed her from nearby, was sincerely worried.

Side Stories 60

Chae Nayun (15)

Kim Hajin couldn't follow the battle with his eyes. He could only see shadows flying around like blades and Wicked's large thorns shooting up from the swamp.

An incredible amount of mana that Kim Hajin didn't dare to measure exploded over the swamp as these humans who transcended ordinary mortals unleashed their abilities.

He focused on his objective in the presence of these monsters and connected the wire to his bullet with aether.

His plan was simple. Snipe the witch doctor in the heart and pull out the treasure from his body.

However, Kim Hajin couldn't help but doubt. 'Can someone like me pull it off?' He was filled with anxiety. Still, he composed himself and decided to go for it.

No one had seen his face, so they wouldn't come after him. The curse would be lifted the moment the witch doctor died. They could only suspect each other once the curse disappeared and would never imagine an extra like himself had been lurking.

Kim Hajin forced himself to calm down and held his breath to lower his heart rate. Even a single fidgeting finger could ruin the entire operation. He focused his senses and infused stigma into the aether wire already connected to the enhanced bullet.

The enhanced bullet would dissolve as soon as it penetrated the swamp dokkaebi's hide and the wire would snatch away the witch doctor's heart. The plan sounded perfect in theory. He only had to execute it now.

He had to get the timing precisely to the hundredth of a second. It wouldn't be difficult since he could slow everything down with bullet time, which gave him an overwhelming advantage.

Kim Hajin could feel the moment growing closer as the clock ticked away. Everyone involved in this mess probably felt the same.

The swamp dokkaebi's body became riddled with shadows and thorns. The monster tried to resist with all its strength, but the end was inevitable.

Wicked's thorns restrained the swamp dokkaebi while Lee Byul sliced off a huge chunk of its flesh with her shadows.

The swamp dokkaebi was barely alive at this point. All they had to do was pull out the witch doctor from within.

— Also.

No one expected what would happen next.

Djinns fired their evil mana, Lee Byul controlled her shadows, Wicked shot her thorns, and Jin Yohan swung his Zhang Long Serpent Spear. Their eyes all darted in the same direction.

The dazzling light attracted everyone's attention. Something flashed during the intense battle and flew towards the swamp dokkaebi's chest like a comet.

Shwaaa!

Everyone witnessed it, but no one could react.

Guuu...

The swamp dokkaebi let out a low, eerie moan before falling to the ground. A strange tune came from its heart as moonlight shone on it.

A bullet pierced the swamp dokkaebi's hide and killed the witch doctor inside. Then the wire attached to the bullet snatched away the Heart of the Amazon.

“What the hell?” someone muttered, but the curse disappeared before they could finish.

The curse spat everyone out after the caster died and they instantly returned to the city from the jungle.

“This is?”

Everything happened in a split second.

Wicked looked around her surroundings. She had returned to the city square and could see the colosseum in the distance. She looked to the side and saw the Chameleon Troupe.

Wicked glared at them and...

Chwaaaaak!

A venomous thorn shot up from the ground towards the Chameleon Troupe, but they easily dodged it. The thorn continued chasing, but failed to catch them.

Soon, Wicked stopped.

“That’s enough,” someone said from behind.

Wicked looked back and saw the head of the city along with dozens of hunters.

“No bloodshed is allowed in my city outside of the colosseum,” he said.

“...”

Wicked gritted her teeth and glared at the Chameleon Troupe. She realized her mistake. The Chameleon Troupe cleverly hid one of their members and went after the Heart of the Amazon.

However, she hadn't sensed this hidden member at all the entire time they fought the swamp dokkaebi. She couldn't help but be impressed while also feeling the urge to tear this person apart limb by limb.

On the other hand, the Chameleon Troupe remained quite calm. Wicked was hot as fire while they remained cold as ice.

Wicked instinctively blamed the Chameleon Troupe, but they simply observed the angry djinn. Why would Wicked be so angry if she stole the treasure?

Lee Byul concluded that either a third party intervened or the djinns were excellent actors. However, she could tell from the fire blazing in Wicked's eyes that it was most likely the former. She knew very well that Wicked couldn't put on such a realistic act.

In the end, Lee Byul concluded that a third party stole the treasure. As to whom the third party was... that remained a mystery.

"Okay, I would like to ask everyone to disperse," the head said.

Wicked glared at the old man, but he simply looked at her with a warm smile.

"So what do we do, boss?" Jin Yohan asked.

Lee Byul simply nodded and walked away.

Wicked glared at Lee Byul and composed herself, "We're leaving. For now."

"Yes, ma'am."

Wicked and her underlings left the scene.

The mosquito hiding and observing the scene buzzed away after confirming that he was safe.

‘Success! I didn’t get caught!’

This was probably the best result I ever achieved after living as an extra for six months!

“Yawn!”

I staggered forward after all the stress finally came crashing down on me. My legs gave out and I almost collapsed when someone caught me.

It was Yoo Yeonha.

I also saw Tomer and her group, but had no idea how Yoo Yeonha managed to convince them to tag along.

“Are you alright?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

I nodded since we finally escaped the curse.

Yoo Yeonha sighed in relief after confirming my response.

— Dadadada!

“What’s that?” Tomer asked while looking at the cloud of dust that someone kicked up as they rushed towards us.

That person approached at a frightening speed.

“HEY——!”

I finally relaxed after hearing that loud voice and seeing that big smile. I confirmed it was that idiot, who ran towards me without slowing down at all.

She ran with all her strength and we came dangerously close to crashing before she fully stopped at the final step.

I ended up in Chae Nayun's arms.

“...”

I didn't expect this. It caught me completely off guard as my heart had barely recovered from the previous stress.

I couldn't tell if I was dreaming or not. Chae Nayun didn't say a word. Instead, she wrapped her arms around my waist and hugged me.

“Hoo? What is this?” Yoo Yeonha coyly asked.

Chae Nayun buried her face in my chest and began trembling. This went on for a while before she rubbed her face on my shirt and stepped back.

I could see a small teardrop from her eyes.

“Did you cry...?” I asked her in disbelief.

She flinched and denied it, “Huh? W-What? What are you talking about? I didn't cry because of you, okay? It's not because of you...”

Chae Nayun went over to hug Yoo Yeonha. She tightly hugged her as if to make it obvious she was hugging her.

“Euk... N... Nayun... Let... go of... Euaaak...! Let me go!” Yoo Yeonha cried out and squirmed as she tried to break free from the suffocating hug.

Chae Nayun finally let go... only after something popped in Yoo Yeonha's lower back.

My heart was still wildly beating in the midst of all this. Was it because of what just happened or something else? I had no idea.

“Who are these people?” Chae Nayun asked while looking at Tomer and the others behind us.

Yoo Yeonha rubbed her lower back and nonchalantly replied, “Ah, they’ll be with me from now on.”

Tomer corrected her, “Just for a while. We’ll be with her for just a while. Nice to meet you. My name is Tomer.”

“Hmm... I see...” Chae Nayun muttered while inspecting Tomer from head to toe.

A group suddenly appeared in the distance and shouted, “Hey! They’re over there!”

“Yoo Yeonha! Kim Hajin!”

“Are you guys alright?”

Kim Suho, Yi Yeonghan, Shin Jonghak, and Seo Youngji also reunited with them.

* * *

Of course, I returned to Cube without anyone finding out that I stole the Heart of the Amazon. Only after I stepped foot onto Cube did I finally feel relieved and the heavy burden on me was lifted.

However, I still had work to do.

The higher-ups at Cube called for the Pharmacy Club members involved in the colosseum incident.

Chae Nayun, Shin Jonghak, and Yoo Yeonha got away scot-free while Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan received a small penalty. Meanwhile, they interrogated and grilled me.

— I’m asking you to spill the beans on what happened over there!

— Why did you go there?! Why was someone like you over there?!

— Witch Doctor? What happened to him?

— Were you their porter?

I wondered if this was the fate of someone without any connections. Screams, threats, punishments, penalties, expulsion... you name it. I endured the stream of criticisms and threats before finally leaving. I walked through the corridor and kicked my feet at the unfair treatment until I reached the main building.

To my surprise, someone waited for me in front of the main entrance.

Chae Nayun smiled and waved, “You’re here?”

“Why are you here?” I curtly replied despite her warm greeting.

“I’m the club president. I sent the others back. No, they went back because they were busy,” Chae Nayun said.

Yoo Yeonha and Tomer went to Seoul. Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan left to train. Shin Jonghak and Seo Youngji went to a café and said they had something to discuss.

“Is that so...”

“Yeah, I’m the only one who cares about you.”

“No, I don’t have anyone I can trust,” I shook my head and walked away.

“What the... Don’t say things like that...” Chae Nayun muttered and followed me.

It had already turned dark as I walked to the dorm. A cold sea breeze blew and the moon illuminated the night.

I wanted to walk alone in silence, but that was impossible with Chae Nayun.

She smirked and asked, “Hey, hey! What are you going to do?”

“About what?”

“We skipped two days of classes.”

“Doesn’t matter to me.”

Classes didn’t mean much. I couldn’t care less if I got good grades or not. The fact that I was half a hero wouldn’t change no matter how good my grades were.

“Hmm... Really? It doesn’t matter?” Chae Nayun muttered.

She seemed deep in thought while rubbing her cheek and smirked at me.

“Hey.”

“What now?”

“Where do you want to go next?”

Where to go next... I hadn’t thought of that. I briefly pondered and decided it would be best if we attended the colosseum a few more times to get the Soul Mana Vermillion. Then we should go to the mansion that Tomer mentioned.

“There’s this place related to the Tears of Heaven, so I’m thinking of going there during vacation. The exams are coming up soon, right?”

“Hmm? Really? Okay, then let’s do as you say,” Chae Nayun replied with a nod.

Her response slightly surprised me. Our archery duel would be coming up soon, but... did she perhaps forget about it?

“Hey,” she called me again.

“What?” I curtly responded and stopped to look ahead.

We reached a fork in the road. The right path led to the girls' dorm and the left led to the boys' dorm.

"Thanks..." Chae Nayun smiled and avoided my eyes.

I caught a whiff of her scent because of the breeze blowing in my direction. No, a bed of roses must've been nearby. It smelled really good...

"...?" I tilted my head in confusion. Why did she suddenly thank me?

Chae Nayun furrowed her brows and acted all shy. She came closer and whispered, "You're doing your best. Honestly, you don't have anything to gain from this club, right?"

'Ah, that's what she meant... '

I smiled in response because she was mistaken. It would be a huge boon if Chae Jinyoon recovered thanks to me. I wanted to fix the parts that deviated from the original story and make sure everything properly flowed.

"Oh right, do you want to play Half of Battery together?" Chae Nayun tapped my shoulder and asked.

"..."

I would've usually refused, but felt like agreeing today.

I didn't know what changed my mind. Perhaps it was the beautiful night sky, but I kind of liked everything this idiot was doing tonight. I agreed since I figured I could be a good friend at least.

"...Just one game," I said with a nod.

"Oh! Nice! Hey, come online as soon as you get back to your room! I'll be waiting!" Chae Nayun exclaimed and ran to the dorms.

I was left all alone under the night sky. I looked up and thought about my ten remaining years in this world. An entire decade would be a long time, but it didn't seem like it would be boring at all.

[Kim Hajin! Are you online?]

[Go go go go!]

[Go go go!]

[Go go go go go!]

I received a barrage of messages when I returned to my room.

‘Ah, maybe I should’ve refused after all. I feel so tired now that I’m home... ’

I suddenly regretted the decision I made on the spur of the moment.

I sent her a reply.

[Wait.]

[Why? Why why why why why why why why?]

[I’m going to wash up first.]

[Ah, can’t you wash up later? —.—]

[Wait.]

[Ah, why?!]

[Wait.]

[Ah... Damn it... Alright, be quick. I’ll give you five minutes.]

[Wait.]

[Hey, I got it. Hurry and wash up... You better come online as soon as you're done though.]

I looked out the window in the middle of texting and saw my faint reflection.

I was smiling.

I hadn't seen myself smile like that ever since I came to this world.

Side Stories 61

Chae Nayun (16)

Lee Suro sat all alone at the head of a rectangular wooden table in the meeting room on the highest floor of Cube.

Soon, holograms suddenly appeared around the table and nine silhouettes came to attend the secret meeting.

“I have no idea why they went there or what they were after...”

Someone raised a question before the meeting even officially began. The topic was none other than what happened to the Pharmacy Club, which became a hot topic in Cube as well.

Of course, what happened took place during official club activities under the supervision of an association hero, Seo Youngji. However, Chae Nayun’s actions these days caught the higher-ups’ attention.

“I don’t have any particular reasons, but we need to keep an eye on them. Who knows what those kids will do? They could stir up trouble while believing their backgrounds will save them...” the deep voice sounded angry.

“How? Are you brave enough to mess with them?” someone responded in a mocking tone.

The deep voice pointed his finger and retorted, “It’s better than not being able to say a single word like you...”

“Enough.”

A single word was more than enough to stop them from bickering. Everyone sat up straight after the hologram at the head of the table spoke.

The silhouette grew clearer. It was the former president of South Korea, Kim Sukho.

The other hologram silhouettes also became clear after Kim Sukho appeared. A conglomerate chairman, guild leader, neutral city-state owner, and other influential figures in society gathered around.

“I don’t think those kids are investigating us. She must be going around trying to save her elder brother.”

“But will it not be an issue if he woke up?” the chairman asked.

Kim Sukho glared at him in response and the chairman immediately lowered his head.

“There’s no way he’ll wake up. Besides, we can just get rid of him if he somehow did,” Kim Sukho said.

He was confident as long as it was the Chae family because he could easily suppress Chae Joochul. If Chae Jinyoon wanted to be a filial son and grandson, then he shouldn’t wake up.

After all, Chae Joochul was no longer the legend he once was.

“Continue monitoring the situation. I noticed two new names in their little gang.”

“Yes, they’re Kim Suho and Kim Hajin. Both of them are Cube cadets.”

These two commoners dared to loiter around Chae Nayun. One had quite the talent and potential while the other was naturally born with a bad attitude.

“Go ahead and get rid of those two if the opportunity ever presents itself. However, you must make sure to do so only at the right moment. Remember to operate covertly at all times...”

[Kekeke... We got quite a lot of items today.]

JaJangMan (Male: Barbarian) flexed his muscles at X-Man while sitting on a rock. Meanwhile, X-Man sat on the ground and looked over their loot.

[It's really strange how the loot turns out good when I'm playing with you. Keke!]

Four days passed since they returned to Cube. Hunting for items with Chae Nayun became one of Kim Hajin's new routines during those days. Coincidentally, the class synergy between X-Man and JaJangMan was quite good.

[Is that so?]

X-Man (Male: Elf) curtly replied while brushing his long golden hair.

JaJangMan crossed his arms over his chest.

[Oh right, I heard the Direkuma raid will open soon. Do you want to go raid that? Keke!]

[If I have time, but you do know finals are coming up soon, right?]

[Doesn't matter to me keke! It doesn't matter to you as well, right? Kekeke!]

X-Man simply smiled in response and passed an item to JaJangMan.

The warrior item, [Gondor's Battleaxe], went to JaJangMan while the archer items went to X-Man.

[Keke! This thing will fetch at least fifty million won if I manage to enhance it five times!]

[Can you stop doing that keke thing?]

[I have to live up to my character, right? Keke! Also, this is a macro.]

Keke!]

X-Man stared at JaJangMan's hideous smile before shrugging.

[Sure, whatever you say. Anyways, I'm going to sleep. You better go to sleep too.]

[Sure keke! I'll test this ax out for a bit before going to sleep. Keke!]

The barbarian's scarred eye shone red.

[Keke...!]

The barbarian flashed a spine-tingling smile.

Kim Hajin cut off the connection and threw his VR helmet aside. He went to bed and tried to fall asleep before suddenly recalling the Heart of the Amazon he stole.

[Heart of the Amazon] [Treasure]

— The essence of the Amazon. The holder's abilities will be significantly enhanced with this item in their possession while in a swamp or jungle.

This treasure enhanced the holder's abilities in swamps and jungles. Of course, its main weakness was the fact that a swamp or jungle wasn't common terrain. However... I could probably change that with [Setting Intervention].

Then I suddenly received a message.

[Hello, you didn't forget about our appointment tomorrow, right?]

It came from Yoo Yeonha. I stored the Heart of the Amazon inside stigma and immediately replied.

[Yeah, but do I really have to go?]

[I have something to discuss about that person. There are other things I want to talk about as well.]

I pondered for a moment before agreeing.

[Sure, I'll see you tomorrow at three then.]

* * *

D-7 until the final exam. I went to Seoul with a week left.

“This Seoul isn’t Seoul at all...”

The scenery looked completely different from the Seoul I knew. I had no idea if it was because so many guilds crowded the place, but a lot of people walked around with swords and bows.

I stole glances at them while trying to find my way.

“Huh? Kim Hajin?” A familiar voice called me.

A limousine stopped in the nearby traffic and the window rolled down. Then a head peeked out.

The person smiled at me, “It’s Kim Hajin! Hey, Kim Hajin! H-Huh? W-Wait!”

The traffic light turned green and the limousine began to move. Chae Nayun urgently said something to the driver and brought the limousine to a halt. Then she got off.

I watched in disbelief as she ran towards me.

“Hey! What a coincidence, right?” Chae Nayun said with a wave.

I forced a smile and nodded.

“Why are you here?” she asked. “You don’t usually come to Seoul.”

“I have somewhere to go,” I replied and walked away.

“Oh, really?” Chae Nayun walked beside me with her hands behind her back. She skipped and hopped before suddenly asking, “Where are you going? What are you going to do?”

“I have someone to meet.”

“What? Who?”

“...”

I arrived at my destination just in time. I looked up at the building that was the headquarters of the second largest guild in the world, Essence of the Straits. They truly lived up to their reputation with a state-of-the-art complex that sprawled out 165,000 square meters in the heart of Seoul.

I shifted my gaze from the building to Chae Nayun.

She flinched and stepped back before asking, “Don’t tell me... You’re here to meet Yoo Yeonha...?”

“Yeah.”

“Why would you?! Hey, did... perhaps...?!” Chae Nayun exclaimed with her eyes and mouth wide open in horror. Then she asked, “D... Did... something happen between you two in the jungle...?”

I could see mana smoking out of her head as she stuttered and asked in horror.

* * *

“Hmm...”

Yoo Yeonha crossed her arms over her chest and looked at both of them. She never imagined they would come together.

“Here, take a look at this,” she completely ignored Chae Nayun’s grumpy expression and handed them a document.

Kim Hajin and Chae Nayun’s eyes naturally shifted to the document.

“I investigated the mansion that Zomer mentioned last time. It’s quite close to Pandemonium, but it’s worth taking a look. The contamination over there is something I’ve never heard of in my life,” Yoo Yeonha added.

“Then, is this our next destination?” Chae Nayun asked as she glared at Yoo Yeonha and snatched the document she wouldn’t understand anyways. She added, “But why were you only going to tell Kim Hajin? I’m the club president.”

“...You were the one who told me you were busy. I even texted you last night that I had something to say,” Yoo Yeonha grumbled in response.

“Hmm... Did you? I don’t remember...” Chae Nayun muttered and checked her smartwatch.

She scrolled through her messages in an attempt to find the message that Yoo Yeonha probably never sent...

[Hey, Nayun. Are you free this weekend? I have something to tell you.]

“...You did. Ha! Don’t tell me you thought I forgot? I just asked for the sake of asking. I was a bit busy because I had to go to the hospital, but I ran into Kim Hajin on the way so I dropped by as well,” Chae Nayun explained.

She finally relaxed and leaned back on the sofa.

‘Heh, I got worried for nothing,’ she thought.

“But that’s not what’s important,” Yoo Yeonha said with a sigh. She looked back and forth at Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin a few times.

Kim Hajin noticed her seriousness and set down the document.

“There’s something strange these days... Should I call it being stalked? It feels like someone is following and observing me...” Yoo Yeonha said.

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened and she frivolously nodded, “Yeah, me too. I thought it was just a paparazzi or something!”

“Right?” Yoo Yeonha said as she looked at Kim Hajin.

However, Kim Hajin looked like he didn’t care at all whether someone tailed him or not. He seemed fairly confident that he could beat whoever planned to ambush him.

Yoo Yeonha realized something and said, “That’s why I’m planning to bring a few bodyguards to our club’s next activity after our final exams. I’ll make sure they don’t stand out, so don’t worry.”

“Ah, well. It doesn’t matter to me,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly agreed.

What about Kim Hajin? Yoo Yeonha intently stared at him for a while before he finally nodded in agreement.

“It might be uncomfortable for you, but please bear with it temporarily. We don’t know who is tailing us right now or why. Anyways, you can take that document. Oh, right... You can take this business card too,” Yoo Yeonha handed a business card to Kim Hajin.

He took it and saw that it had Tomer’s alias, Zomer, written on it.

“Zomer...”

“Yes, Zomer asked me to pass it on to you. She won’t be able to reply because she’s out on a mission, but you can probably reach her in two days.”

“Sure.”

Chae Nayun intently observed the exchange between them until Kim Hajin abruptly stood up and left. She hurriedly bid goodbye to Yoo Yeonha and chased after him with a smile.

“What are those two doing? They look like puppies playing tag...” Yoo Yeonha muttered.

She was left all alone in her office when someone suddenly called her phone. She frowned at the name on the screen. It didn't seem like someone she was comfortable speaking to.

— Hello, how are you?

“Hello?”

— Yes, my knees.

It was Yoo Yeonha's uncle who was banished from their family, Yoo Jinhyuk.

“...What? Knees?”

— Yes, my lovely little niece! What's up?

“You know very well. What happened to the thing I asked you, Uncle?”

She asked her uncle to investigate Kim Hajin. The abilities and strategies he showed in the jungle weren't something that could be mastered in a day or two. She couldn't help but grow curious about his secret.

— That? There's not much progress.

“That's probably because you didn't do it properly. Just give me back my money if you don't plan on doing it properly...”

— Hey, niece. What are you going to do with your lunch money?

“What did you say? Give it back this instant!”

— Alright, alright. I'll do it properly. But there really is nothing... hold on. I'll call you back... request...

Beep... Beep... Beep...

“What? No! Don’t you dare hang up! Hello! Hey!”

The call abruptly ended.

Yoo Yeonha sat on her sofa as steam rose from her head. However, she realized that someone mentioned something right before the call was disconnected.

‘...Request? Did he have a customer?’ she wondered when she received a message on her smartwatch.

[Niece, you better stop snooping around that Kim Hajin or whatever his name is. Someone just came and he seems to be quite dangerous.]

Yoo Yeonha stared at the message.

* * *

I called for a taxi outside the building.

Chae Nayun naturally sat beside me. I thought she would start chattering, but she only looked out the window for twenty minutes.

“Hey...”

I broke the silence first and Chae Nayun looked at me with wide eyes in surprise.

“You forgot about the archery duel?”

“Ah, that?” Chae Nayun smirked and shook her head, “I’m just going to use a sword from now on.”

“...What?”

It was quite an anti-climactic conclusion. I purposely practiced my archery because Chae Nayun’s growth was faster than in the original story.

“You’re giving up that easily...?”

I probably shouldn’t have asked. I got the result I wanted without having to compete, but grew curious as to why she suddenly changed her mind.

Chae Nayun just stared at me without saying anything. I saw my reflection in her eyes, which looked clear as a lake.

“I’m not giving up...” she said with a smile. “I just chose to believe in you.”

My eyes looked into hers, and it felt as if time stopped. I couldn’t say anything and simply looked out the window.

The city’s scenery and the trees passed by as the sun shone on me.

Side Stories 62

Chae Nayun (17)

[What about this?]

I received a picture on my smartwatch.

[Calculation of Internal Mana in a Mock Dungeon]

Rachel sent me her calculation. I reviewed her work before sending back a reply.

[It's correct. Not a single thing is wrong.]

[Ah! Really? That's a relief! V-V]

[Thank you! Have a great time studying, Hajin! ★v★!]

It would be theory week soon, so the Cube Community Forum and the library became quite busy. Of course, I didn't have to study and was free compared to others.

"Hmm..."

Anyways, I finished helping Rachel and should probably continue what I was doing. I inspected the modified Heart of the Amazon floating in midair.

[Heart of Adaptation] [Treasure]

A heart that will adapt to its environment.

The heart will slowly adapt to its environment and empower its user. The user will be empowered the longer the heart remains in the same environment.

The user will adapt to their current environment along with the heart.

The heart's power decreased, but it became more flexible to use since I removed its restriction of only being able to be used in swamps and jungles. I didn't forget to add a roll-back function just in case I found myself in the Amazon one day.

"Ah... I'm broke..."

It cost me a whopping 1,250 SP just to alter this heart's settings, which was most of my SP. I only had three remaining SP left now.

I did obtain a large chunk of SP when I stole the Heart of the Amazon, but I didn't gain as much as I thought since the incident had been kept under wraps.

"Well, this is still good enough..."

I planned on using this item as medicine one day, so it wasn't a bad idea to revert it to its original settings for a forty to fifty percent SP refund.

"Sigh..." I let out a sigh.

The description described me as its user, but it was basically... erm... something too grotesque to put into words.

I placed the heart on my chest and it suddenly melted into my skin. It felt like having a hot mud pack on my chest, but the only difference was that it didn't feel good at all.

Then, the heart finally finished settling in my body. I felt much better right away after that.

"Phew..."

I fell asleep immediately afterwards.

Tuesday was Cube's special class, Rush for the Artifacts.

Tak! Tak! Tak! Tak!

Yoo Yeonha ran through a passageway and spotted someone blocking the end of it. It was the white team's ace and gatekeeper, Chae Nayun.

Yoo Yeonha didn't slow down and ran even faster towards her. She swung the whip in her hand.

Chwaaak!

However, Chae Nayun casually turned her body and easily avoided the whip. Then she bent over and pulled out her sword.

She pulled out her sword in an instant and swung it towards Yoo Yeonha's blind spot.

Clang!

However, a bullet came flying and blocked Chae Nayun's sword. She ended up missing Yoo Yeonha after having to change trajectory.

Yoo Yeonha jumped back to safety. "Phew..." she sighed in relief.

"..."

Chae Nayun looked around indifferently, but couldn't spot the sharpshooter. On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha held the artifact close to her chest after realizing that reinforcement arrived.

Someone asked through her earpiece.

— Can you get past her?

Yoo Yeonha observed Chae Nayun guarding the path with a sword and bow.

There were no weapon limitations in today's class, so Chae Nayun decided to use both today. Meanwhile, Kim Hajin also used a large monster sniping rifle instead of his handgun thanks to this exemption rule.

"Cover me," Yoo Yeonha replied.

Chae Nayun suddenly rushed towards her as soon as she said those two words. She looked like an angry bull right now, and every one of her movements contained animosity.

Bang!

However, a large bullet suddenly zipped through the air and struck Chae Nayun before she could even reach Yoo Yeonha.

"Euk...!" Chae Nayun grunted in pain and flew far back after being hit by the bullet infused with stigma and the knockback effect that Kim Hajin added to its settings.

It was impossible for the bullet to pierce through all of Chae Nayun's defenses, but it was still possible to knock her back.

— Run.

Yoo Yeonha infused mana into her legs and kicked off the ground. She ran as fast as she could and could feel the soles of her shoes wearing down. She also felt a scary gust of wind chasing after her from behind.

Chae Nayun was coming for her.

Bang!

"Argh! Stop it!" Chae Nayun shouted in frustration after Kim Hajin struck her with another bullet.

Kim Hajin covered Yoo Yeonha without a hitch, which frustrated Chae Nayun. However, what frustrated her even more was the fact that she could see the bullets, but couldn't evade them. The main problem wasn't the bullet's speed, but the surface area it covered.

Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom!

Kim Hajin's bullets triggered a chain of explosions as soon as they hit the ground. They were the prototype exploding bullets developed by Essence of the Straits.

"Touchdown!" Yoo Yeonha exclaimed in delight after arriving at the end zone.

The class ended with the blue team emerging victorious.

"Alright, great job."

Kim Hyojun and Kim Suhyeok greeted Yoo Yeonha after she came out of the man-made cave.

She placed the artifact on the ground and sat beside it.

Chae Nayun came walking out of the cave as well.

"Ah, that Kim Hajin... I should have made him retire first... I shouldn't have given him a chance..." Chae Nayun grumbled in anger.

The savior of the blue team, Kim Hajin, came out of the cave with a large sniper rifle on his back. Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak followed him out and kept each other at bay the entire time. Then Kim Horak and the others who retired from the match also came out.

Kim Suhyeok gave a speech with all of the cadets out of the cave, "Alright, all sophomores are required to write a battle report."

The sophomores attended this class too and monitored the freshmen in the cave from the outside. Every one of them looked at Kim Hajin in a strange manner. His [Parkour] ability allowed him to move like a beast and instantly secured him a sniping spot. His vision as a sharpshooter also left quite an impression on them.

"I'm not going easy on you next time..." Chae Nayun tapped Kim Hajin's shoulder and grumbled.

Kim Haijn simply nodded in response.

On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha still trembled on the ground after being the artifact courier. Chae Nayun's aura and anger overwhelmed her, which was definitely not something a mere cadet could unleash.

"Alright, this is the end of our class. Go rest up and prepare for your final exam. Don't forget to prepare for your practical tests too!" Kim Suhyeok said before he dismissed the class.

* * *

"Bye, Kim Hajin! Great work today!"

Friday, deep within an unnamed forest in Gangwondo.

I, along with Kim Suho, acquired [Misteltein]. We found it at a much earlier time than in the original story because [Misteltein] was a weapon that would be much stronger the sooner we acquired it.

"See you at Cube."

"Okay! See you!"

I separated from Kim Suho and went my own way. I walked on a quiet path before I suddenly felt someone looking at me. It felt as if someone was watching me from behind. I turned around, but found no one there.

I brushed it off as some passerby walked past, but then suddenly recalled what Yoo Yeonha said.

'Someone seems to be following us.'

I continued walking without showing any signs that I noticed them, but the dark path felt eerie now that I knew someone was following me. I couldn't help but feel nervous inside.

I put my right hand on my Desert Eagle as I walked and prepared to fight back if required.

Thud... Thud...

Thud... Thud...

However, there was no attack whatsoever no matter how much I walked. Soon, I reached the main road.

“...What was that all about?”

Was it an owl? Or were they looking for an opening before deciding to bail?

I stood underneath a bright street lamp and looked back, but the only thing I could see was the eerie darkness.

* * *

“Eup! Eup! Euuuup!”

Jin Sahyuk covered the struggling man’s mouth.

“Who are you and why are you following him?” she asked.

She had been watching over Kim Hajin this entire time. She wanted to find out the reason behind the strange emotions and sense of familiarity she felt towards him.

However, she suddenly noticed that insects began to swarm around him. She caught one of them before they could step out of line.

“Answer me. What’s your objective?” she asked, but the man refused to answer.

Of course, that was definitely the wrong choice as she immediately twisted the man’s neck without an ounce of hesitation.

C-Crack!

The man was killed in an instant. His smartwatch immediately conveyed the death of its owner. The signal was sent to the higher-up who ordered the covert action. The higher-up misunderstood that Kim Hajin was the culprit behind the man's death.

All of this happened in a place that Jin Sahyuk wasn't aware of and through a technology she wasn't familiar with. Of course, Jin Sahyuk wouldn't have cared even if she knew all of this. She nonchalantly threw the man's corpse away before following Kim Hajin again.

"Who are you really?" she muttered while following him.

It was still not the right time, but she was going to ask him sooner or later. That was the only way she would find out the reason why she came to this world...

"I'm certain that the key behind my identity is with you..." she said before blending into the darkness.

* * *

The Jonghwa Island located at Goseong, Gangwondo truly lived up to its name as an island. Jonghwa Island was an island the size of Yeouido that emerged after the mana explosion occurred. It quickly cemented its position as Gangwondo's main city thanks to its spectacular views and abundant monster fields.

I finished my task given by Cube's practical test, the monster hunt, and went to the cafe.

"Does this mean the final exam has been changed for this year? That's surprising..."

A problem suddenly occurred. We had to obtain the butterfly dust for our final exam, but the fact that the final exam deviated from the... No, was this actually better since it became much easier?

We had to go to the test area and obtain the butterfly dust either by ourselves or with a team. Whoever used outside help could simply justify it as foraging ingredients for medicine.

“Hey, is this difficult? Can you grade this, Yeonha?” Chae Nayun showed the exam paper to Yoo Yeonha.

It was quite surprising that Chae Nayun was studying for a change...

“Give it to me,” Yoo Yeonha took the paper and scanned it before saying, “Hmm... It’s easy. You get 53% for this.”

I found it funny that she stole a glance at me just in case she was wrong.

“Aaaaack!”

“Yaaaawn...!”

Yi Yeonghan and Kim Suho stretched.

“Ah... Theory is really difficult... Hey, Hajin, how are you so good at this?” Kim Suho asked.

I remained silent and continued drinking my coffee.

Chae Nayun threw her pencil and grumbled, “Why do we have to study this difficult crap? Where are we even going to use this?”

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled and replied, “It’s still good to study it. You’ll need to make calculations while you’re inside a dungeon after all. Of course, you’ll be going to a dungeon with a member specializing in making calculations, but who knows what could happen in one.”

“...”

I found it difficult to adapt to these so-called main characters. I initially planned to hunt alone, but had no idea how Chae Nayun caught wind of it and clung to me.

“Kim Hajin,” Chae Nayun called me.

I looked at her, but she was fixated on her paper while mumbling.

“Kim Hajin... Kim Kim Hajin... Kim Hajin... Kim Kim Hajin...”

Why did she have to mumble my name? She kept it up and even sang a tune for a while before eventually turning over her paper.

“Ah, this is too difficult... I give up!”

“Hey, you’re going to lose to Rachel again if you keep that up.”

“Nah, I’m just going to lose. Forget about it,” Chae Nayun simply shrugged off Yoo Yeonha’s attempt to instigate her.

I noticed that she had been acting quite mature these days, which was unlike her.

Yoo Yeonha continued studying before feigning indifference and nonchalantly asking, “By the way, where’s Jonghak?”

“Who knows? He must be with our club supervisor. They’ve been meeting up quite often these days,” Chae Nayun replied.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha’s face darkened for a split second before she nonchalantly replied, “Hmm... I see...”

She took out her smartwatch and began angrily tapping on it.

It was then.

Kkrwaaang! Khrwaaang! Kkkhrwaaaang!

Extremely loud thunder exploded in the distance and lightning with mana shook the entire cafe.

Chae Nayun jumped and clung to me, “W-What was that? What’s going on?”

“Wow... my heart almost dropped...”

The lights in the cafe went out for a moment before switching back on. Chae Nayun looked out the window while holding onto my clothes.

Krrwaaang! Kkkkrhwaaaaaang!

Thunder erupted again and it began to heavily rain as if a hole was torn in the sky.

“Wow... let’s go back now. I’m scared... What’s wrong with the weather?”

“...Good idea.”

We collected all of our belongings and left the cafe.

Whiiiiish! Whooooooosh!

The wind outside was no joke. We could see something similar to a typhoon coming from beyond the coastline.

“Ah, this is so annoying!” Chae Nayun shouted in anger before setting up a barrier.

The round barrier blocked the wind and protected our party.

“Wow, Chae Nayun. You’ve grown stronger.”

“This is nothing,” Chae Nayun smugly replied.

I could see that she was handling her mana quite well. We were amazed at her control and began walking.

It didn’t take long for us to reach the portal station. This was the only portal station on Junghwa Island, so it bustled with people.

Forget about civilians and guild members, a lot of cadets from Cube also came to do their practical exam.

— What happened here?

— Why won't the door open?!

— Hey! I'm busy! I have a meeting to attend!

However, the portal was closed shut.

Only after the people vehemently protested did a fearful station employee come out.

The staffer repeatedly bowed and apologized, "I apologize! The portal station is closed today due to safety reasons! The lighting is too strong, so the portal is unstable! I repeat... the portal is closed today due to safety reasons..."

Everyone was disgruntled, but there was nothing they could do about natural disasters.

Chae Nayun clicked her tongue a few times, "Ah... Well, there's nothing we can do... Let's go back to the villa."

All of us turned around, but I couldn't help but feel bothered.

Rain, wind, lightning, and an island... I was pretty sure that the four of these belonged to an episode that I decided not to use in the original story...

We followed Chae Nayun, but she soon stopped after spotting a few Cube cadets loitering around the station.

"Hey! You guys!" she called out to them.

All of them looked at us. I noticed they were all freshmen judging from their name tags.

Chae Nayun brightly smiled and shouted, "Come follow us if you don't have a place to stay! I'll let you sleep for free!"

Side Stories 63

Chae Nayun (18)

“Dead? All of them?”

A mansion standing tall in the center of Seoul brightly shone in the night.

Kim Sukho was in his study decorated with a luxurious chandelier and silver candle stands. He was writing something with his expensive pen when he received a disturbing report.

— Yes, some of them were strong ones on par with high rank heroes...

All of the people they sent to tail Kim Hajin ended up dead. It was definitely Kim Hajin's doing.

Kim Sukho bit on a cigar and didn't say anything else.

— We suspect that all of them were discovered while tailing the target and lost their lives. Fortunately, we're certain that they didn't spill anything before dying.

“I see...” Kim Sukho muttered with a nod, but the wrinkle on his forehead showed that he was visibly angry. “What a stubborn kid...”

All of the people they sent were found dead with their necks twisted, hearts pierced, limbs torn apart, and other hideous methods. It was hard to believe that a cadet at rank 934 in Cube was capable of killing people in such a gruesome manner.

— Yes, we suspect that this kid has been hiding his strength all this time. We cannot confirm the reason as to why, but we have no doubt that Kim Hajin is far stronger than we initially believed.

“Tsk...”

That was one thing, but Kim Sukho couldn't help but feel this kid was far too hot-headed. How could someone mercilessly kill in such a gruesome manner just because they were following him? Did he simply hate being followed to the point that it would trigger him or did he harbor strong hatred against someone and he simply vented it out on those he caught following him?

“Did you find anything else about him aside from that?” Kim Sukho asked.

— We are currently doing our best, but it's quite difficult to get anything about him. He seems to be guarding his identity quite well.

Kim Hajin was an orphan who graduated from the Military Agent Academy before proceeding to enroll in Cube as a cadet. That was the end of it. His records from his days at the Military Agent Academy showed nothing special. The only interesting thing from his records at Cube was the fact that he chose to use a gun.

“Continue observing him.”

However, Kim Sukho was certain that the boy was hiding something. It was also possible that he was hiding a terrifying weapon under his sleeve. Kim Sukho couldn't help but suspect that the boy was harboring some evil intentions deep inside.

— Yes sir.

The call ended.

Kim Sukho felt like he was missing something right now. The background check on the boy only produced a few lines. The only eye-catching thing about it was the fact that he was an orphan.

Kim Sukho intently stared at the date the boy entered the orphanage and the calendar on his table.

Tak...! Tak...! Tak...! Tak...! Tak...!

The rain and wind knocked on the window. The typhoon raged outside, but only the calm sound of rain could be heard inside the villa.

I watched the natural disaster unfold before deciding to open a window.

Kkhrwaaaang! Kkhhrwaaaa!

I immediately closed the window.

Tak...! Tak...! Tak...! Tak...! Tak...!

As expected, the villa's soundproofing was excellent.

“What are you doing?” Chae Nayun approached me and asked.

I simply shrugged in response.

Chae Nayun nudged me and showed me her smartwatch.

— There is a storm raging on the east coast. The downpour is so strong that the bridge connecting Jonghwa Island to the mainland is already submerged...

“They say the bridge is underwater now,” Chae Nayun said.

It seemed that our other means of leaving the island aside from the portal had disappeared as well.

“Yeah, I heard.”

“I don't think we have a way out today. We should give up on leaving and go eat something. They said the food is ready,” Chae Nayun told me.

I went to the dining hall with her. Numerous chairs surrounded the long table in the expensive-looking and brightly lit room.

“You have no idea how glad we are to see you after such a long time, my lady. All of you are our young lady’s friends, right? Please enjoy your meals. Hoho...” the aunty in charge of the villa warmly welcomed all of us.

The guests, or rather us cadets, were comprised of our five club members and seven freshmen. All of us sat at the table.

“Thank you for the meal!”

The eating started after Hazuki, someone I was acquainted with, thanked the aunty for the food.

— In preparation for the sea water overflowing in land... bzzt... bzzt...!

The TV disconnected while we busily chatted over our meal. Then the lights went out.

“Just stay calm and wait,” Chae Nayun said before she shot her mana towards the ceiling.

A cozy blue light illuminated the dining hall and allowed us to finish our meal without a hitch.

All of the cadets gathered in the living room. They huddled up on the sofa or on the floor in front of the fireplace to keep warm. Nobody wanted to be alone right now. It was as if all of them instinctively knew that danger was lurking somewhere nearby in the corner.

“Hey, Nayun. I recall you saying that you had a training area in the basement, right?” Kim Suho asked.

“Yeah, there’s a training area down there. Go ahead and use it if you want,” Chae Nayun replied.

“Do you want to join me?” Kim Suho asked.

Chae Nayun stole a glance at me before shaking her head, “Nah, I’m good. Go and have fun with Yeonghan.”

“Alright, sounds good,” Yi Yeonghan stood up and stretched.

Yoo Yeonha peacefully sat on a rocking chair and sipped on tea like a grandmother.

“Alright...” Chae Nayun stood up and scanned the room after the training-crazed duo left.

She snapped her fingers and thought of a brilliant idea.

Tak!

“Shall we play a game?”

* * *

“The culprit is... you! Kim Hajin!”

We played a game that suited numerous people, the Mafia game.

There was one police, one doctor, six civilians, and three mafias for a total of eleven players and seven had already died.

Chae Nayun pointed at me with absolute confidence.

I was in complete disbelief. I mean, she was right that I was the mafia, but she needed a sound reason to back up her statement.

“Your reason is?” I asked.

“Hazuki will explain that. It’s no use if I explain it as you guys are probably suspecting me as well,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly replied.

Hazuki, who was a civilian in this round, flinched in surprise. “Huh? But... Hajin is... the doctor, right?”

“Ha? Why is he the doctor? I’m the doctor,” Chae Nayun retorted.

“What? R-Really...?”

“Of course! I, Chae Nayun, am the doctor and that guy is an impostor!”

I observed Chae Nayun before looking around at the people in the game. I scanned from left to right, and one more time from right to left.

“T-Then... do you have anything you wish to say, Hajin? I have to listen to both of you first...” Hazuki asked me.

I suddenly sensed something strange and a tingling sensation traveled down my spine as goosebumps rose all over my body.

“Hey, wait a minute. We started with one police, one doctor, six civilians, and three mafias, right?” I asked.

“Hahaha! Look at him changing the subject!” Chae Nayun cackled.

Yoo Yeonha squinted her eyes and looked at me full of suspicion, “Yeah, he’s talking nonsense all of a sudden. I think he really is the mafia. Let’s kill him.”

On a side note, Yoo Yeonha was also a mafia.

“No, listen to me first. A total of eleven people joined this game, right? Night came twice, so four died...” I said.

There were five Pharmacy Club members and seven Cube cadets in the villa for a total of twelve, but Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan went down to the basement to train.

Then, I asked in a whisper, “...Shouldn’t there only be ten of us?”

I could feel the hair on my neck stand.

Yoo Yeonha frowned and glared at me before thinking about it. Then she let out a scream and clung to my arm.

Chae Nayun suddenly shouted and stuttered, “T-T-T-That’s right! He’s right! There should only be ten of us... but how...?”

Hazuki’s face turned pale as she immediately started counting. There were only ten of us right now including the active players and the ones who died, but we were quite sure that we started the game with eleven players.

Kkhrwaaang!

Thunder erupted and all of us looked at each other with fear on our faces. There were supposed to be ten of us, but we started the game with eleven people and then went back to being ten.

Kkhrwaaaaang!

All of us were frozen stiff from the fear.

Kkraa... Bam... Bam... Baaaam...!

A loud sound caught our attention while we were all frozen stiff from fear. We ran to the window and saw the dike crumbling. This shocked everyone.

Hazuki shouted first, “Ah! Look! Look over there!”

There were rescue workers near the dike that crumbled. All of us looked at each other and knew what we needed to do.

The cadets opened the windows and rushed out, “We’re Cube cadets! We’ll help you!”

Some of the cadets channeled their mana and supported the crumbling dike while the others pushed the raging water back.

I stood at the back and watched the cadets bravely fight the natural disaster since I couldn't use mana.

“...What is this feeling?” I muttered under my breath and tilted my head in confusion.

I initially wondered why the color of the water looked so dark. The water pushing through the dike was pitch-black like a shadow.

I took a closer look and realized that it wasn't pitch-black like a shadow, but it was a real shadow. A huge creature approached us from underneath the water.

“...Huh?”

That was the only sound that came out of my mouth.

Chwaaaaaak!

Eyes as big as the moon and a jaw large enough to take a bite out of the heavens emerged from the waters. It was a colossal whale.

“...!”

The colossal whale wanted to devour the cadets, but they instantly reacted and evaded the creature's attack.

However, Chae Nayun wasn't so fortunate and couldn't escape. She was at the front and focused all of her mana to keep the dike intact. The colossal whale was a step faster than her.

I immediately activated bullet time and the world around me slowed down. I didn't hesitate one bit as I threw aether towards her and wrapped it around her waist, but the whale's next actions were completely out of my calculations.

Shwwuuuup!

“W-What's going on?! Aaaaack!”

Chae Nayun lost her balance as I pulled her with aether, but she was still vacuumed into the colossal whale's mouth.

I was connected to her through aether, so I was also dragged along with her into the colossal whale's body...

* * *

Pat... Pat... Pat...

I could feel the rain dripping in this damp environment. I slowly opened my eyes and saw Chae Nayun's face.

She let out a sigh of relief after seeing me open my eyes, "Ah... that's a relief..."

However, she soon frowned and smacked my forehead.

"Hey, are you a troll? I could have escaped if you let me be! Why did you pull me all of a sudden? Damn it..."

"Ehem... Yeah, my bad... I'm sorry..." I immediately apologized while recalling what just happened. I couldn't help but scratch the back of my neck in embarrassment.

I didn't expect the whale's next move, but I also didn't expect Chae Nayun's reflex to be so quick. She would have been fine even if I didn't butt in...

"Are we in the whale's stomach right now...?" Chae Nayun asked.

"Yeah, I think so," I replied and stood up.

I looked around the surroundings.

Badump! Badump! Badump! Badump!

I was certain that we were in the whale's stomach after seeing the walls pulsating.

Chae Nayun crossed her arms over her chest and asked, “But what the hell is this whale? Is it some sort of ancient deep sea creature?”

“Most whales are not deep sea creatures. More importantly, I think we need to think of a way out of here.”

I closely inspected my surroundings. A whale’s body was large and mysterious, so I was confident that we could get out as long as we maintained our focus.

We were not in danger yet. Of course, it would be a different story if acid came rushing at us...

“What if we just cut our way out?” Chae Nayun wielded her sword and asked.

I shook my head, “We can’t do that. Its internal walls will be extremely tough and we might stir up its acid if we do anything to irritate it.”

“Hmm... I guess you’re right...”

“Give me a moment.”

I looked up the word whale in my settings.

[Whale]

— Types of whales

— Strength of a whale...

However, I couldn’t find anything related to escaping from a whale. I did see something quite interesting though.

“...Hold on. Follow me for now.”

“Huh? Where are you going?”

“I have something to find.”

“Something to find? In here?”

“Yeah. Hey, did you know that a whale stores mana in its body?”

A whale swallowed its prey and seawater at the same time, but seawater in this world contained mana. This was especially true for deeper waters as there was more mana in seawater the deeper it came from.

The mana found in the ocean had different characteristics from mana on dry land. Mana in seawater continuously flowed and didn't gather in one place, so it wasn't possible for it to compress into things such as wild ginseng or mana stones.

However, that became a different story when a whale was involved. A whale consumed large amounts of sea creatures and seawater, which made it possible for mana to solidify and take shape in its body.

“What does that mean?” Chae Nayun tilted her head in absolute confusion.

“I mean... I'm extremely lucky,” I replied with a bitter smile.

I possessed tremendous luck that would allow me to survive even if I stumbled upon a tiger's den. I was definitely feeling my luck working right now.

“Just follow me for now. I feel that we'll get quite a haul in here...”

That was how we ended up walking and inspecting the whale's body for around thirty minutes.

“Ah! It's that one!” I exclaimed after finding what I was looking for.

It was an object that resembled a crystal. We found it where the ocean's mana gathered and solidified. It was the essence of the sea that could only be found in a whale's body.

I carefully extracted the essence and showed it to Chae Nayun.

“Look at this! This is...” I was about to explain, but then I noticed that Chae Nayun looked quite pale for some reason.

Her face slowly turned purple and she started moaning.

“What’s wrong with you?” I asked.

“Ah, it’s nothing serious... Blurgh!”

Her half-digested dinner came gushing out of her mouth. She staggered as her knees gave in and I immediately rushed over to catch her.

Sniff... Sniff...

Only then did I notice that this place reeked of a strange stench. I sniffed the air a bit more and realized that the entire place was filled with the stench of the whale’s stomach acid.

“What the hell?”

I wondered what was wrong with Chae Nayun, but it didn’t take long to find out.

I was fine thanks to the [Heart of Adaptation]. On the other hand, Chae Nayun didn’t have the same resistance as I did and ended up getting poisoned.

“Ah... Damn it...” I muttered after realizing how stupid I was to have kept walking with her.

My head started to ache after seeing her veins turn purple from the poison.

I gritted my teeth and started racking my brains. I literally pushed my brain to its limits to come up with a solution. In fact, I even activated bullet time to slow down time to have more time to think.

It was then that a single ray of light shone in my head.

I immediately opened [System Intervention].

[Heart of Adaptation]

— Anyone in contact with the heart's owner will receive the same effects as long as they remain in contact with each other.

It required a significant amount of SP just to add this single line, but I had a way to replenish my SP in times like this.

I erased one of the arts that I added last time.

[Art, Acting, will be deleted. You will receive a portion of the SP back.]

I changed the setting of the Heart of Adaptation with the refunded SP.

[Setting saved.]

[Your luck has triggered...!]

I didn't have the luxury to go over it as I hugged Chae Nayun as close as possible to my chest and channeled stigma into the heart to enhance its effects.

Chae Nayun's breathing returned to normal after a short while.

"Phew... Ah... I thought she was going to die..." I sighed in relief after getting over the dangerous part.

Chae Nayun slowly opened her eyes and gazed at me intently.

I asked her if she was alright and she weakly smiled in response. Her smile looked quite funny, but I strangely found it cute for some reason.

This girl wasn't always like this...

“Don’t smile... You should have told me if you weren’t feeling well... Geez...” I grumbled before flicking her forehead.

However, she flashed an even bigger and stupid smile after getting hit. I mean, what was so good about getting hit?

Nonetheless, it seemed like she was still struggling from the poison.

Side Stories 64

Chae Nayun (19)

We were still in the wriggling stomach of the whale.

“...You should’ve told me if you felt sick.”

I couldn’t think of anything else to say, so I started scolding Chae Nayun with her back pressed against mine.

I heard her faint laughter before she replied, “Ah, sorry... I thought I was alright...”

I couldn’t see her face right now since our backs were against each other. I had no choice but to do this due to the change I made to the Heart of Adaptation. As long as we remained in contact with each other...

“Don’t try anything funny,” I warned and squeezed her squirming fingers.

“Argh! That hurts!”

“I told you not to do anything funny.”

The plan was to let her lean on my back until she felt better, but she kept complaining that it wasn’t as effective. I had no choice but to hold her hands too.

“Hey... I think holding hands isn’t enough... I feel nauseous...”

“Deal with it.”

“What? You told me to tell you if I felt like fainting, right? Ah... I’m dying. I’m dying.”

“Shut up. I’m going to sleep, so don’t bother me,” I grumbled and closed my eyes.

Still, I couldn’t help but be bothered by Chae Nayun’s squirming behind me.

...Was bothered the right way to put it? I sensed something strange, so I opened my eyes.

I was aware that the pulsating sensation didn’t come from the whale, but from my own heart wildly beating. I also knew that I would have to return to my own world someday.

That was the reason why I shouldn’t let this novel get to me. The world in this novel... I would only end up saying goodbye to it. Both of us would only end up hurt if we pursued our feelings here.

I didn’t want that.

“But how are we alright all of a sudden?” Chae Nayun asked.

Her weak voice sounded different from her usual lively voice.

“Just think of it as one of my abilities,” I casually replied.

“Wow, really?”

“Yeah, think of it as something related to adapting. In gaming terms... You know what damage over time is, right? I can adapt to those trickling damages like poison and not get hurt by them later on.”

“Wow, so you don’t get damaged by ticks?”

“Exactly.”

Chae Nayun nodded after learning something new about me. Then she twisted her head towards me and rested it on my shoulder.

Her smiling face was suddenly looking at me with her back still against mine...

“Then, how do you plan to get out of here?”

“...I have a way.”

I gently shrugged and put her neck back in place.

I was confident that I could relay my thoughts to the whale through stigma. It would be much easier since I was currently inside the whale's body.

“Hmm... Well, if you say that you have a way, I guess you really do. Anyways, what do you plan to do with that crystal?”

[Whale Crystal] [Jewel]

A crystal made out of the essence of the sea. The holder will have a whale's lung capacity while possessing this underwater.

This [Whale Crystal] that brightly shone between my legs boasted an ability that was far better than any underwater gear known to man despite being merely a crystal.

“I'm sure we'll find a use for it. I'll sell it to you if it has some sort of medicinal properties,” I said.

“Wow, really? How much?”

“Expensive. Anyways, I'm going back to sleep.”

I had to prioritize recovering my stigma above anything else. I used up too much to treat Chae Nayun, so I didn't have enough to control the whale.

Four hours of rest should be enough for me to recuperate sufficient stigma. I closed my eyes and leaned back. Chae Nayun's back felt small, but it was better than nothing.

“...Hey,” Chae Nayun suddenly spoke.

“What?”

“Do you want to lie down?” she sounded a bit embarrassed.

I shook my head and asked, “How can I lie down here?”

She suddenly turned and I fell down with her back gone. Instead, my back landed on something soft.

“This will do, right?” Chae Nayun said.

I looked up and saw her face. Her cheeks were flushed red and her trembling eyes looked down at me.

“...”

I blinked a few times and became speechless. My heart started to wildly beat again.

Chae Nayun bit her lips and avoided my gaze. Was she embarrassed or did she regret her action?

Whatever it was, I found myself in quite a peculiar situation. It didn't feel bad as I was slowly being lulled to sleep.

I had no idea why, but it felt cozy for some reason. I had a feeling that Chae Nayun was using her mana to make me feel this way, but I couldn't think any longer as my eyelids grew heavy.

I fell asleep.

* * *

“Gwuoooooh...!”

The whale spat us out.

Fortunately, Chae Nayun covered us with her mana so the whale's vomit didn't get on us.

"We somehow managed to get out," I said.

We ended up on some island and the sky looked clear. The sun also shone down on us. The whale peeked at us before diving back into the water.

"Yeah, I can't believe we made it out already..." Chae Nayun grumbled with a hint of regret in her voice.

"What do you mean already..." I also grumbled back in response.

We were stranded in the whale's stomach for nearly eighteen hours. I poured out all of stigma, but the whale wouldn't listen to me. In the end, I had to recharge stigma again and repeat the whole process two more times.

"It was good..." Chae Nayun pouted and looked at the sky. She suddenly recalled something and asked, "Oh right, what happened to that? You know, there were only ten of us, but suddenly we had eleven?"

"Oh, that?" I smiled.

It was one of the story settings I abandoned, the mystery of the rainy night. Unfortunately, it wasn't a big episode and was designed to be something even less than filler content.

"That was a night stalker."

"Huh? Night stalker?"

"Yeah, you can look it up later once we're back. I have a feeling Kim Suho already took care of it though," I said with a shrug.

The night stalker was a ghost that usually moved at night, but I wasn't worried at all. The night stalker was originally going to be taken care of by Kim Suho in my story setting, so he probably took care of it already even if I was gone.”

“We should focus on going back...” I said while checking our current coordinates on my smartwatch.

[37°50'27.2"N 130°38'35.4"E]

We were on an uninhabited island near Ulleung Island. It was a normal volcanic island and there didn't seem to be anything around us.

Chae Nayun whistled while looking around our surroundings.

“Hey, let's go,” I said.

“Huh? How? Shouldn't we wait for rescue?”

“Waiting around for rescue is a waste of time.”

I morphed aether into a boat complete with a pointy bow and an engine. I worked on it for a few minutes when a system message suddenly popped up in front of me.

[Aether and Dazzling Dexterity have formed a synergy!]

[Anything you manifest with aether will receive a suitable ability from now on!]

It was a message informing me that my dexterity would add an effect to aether's forms from now on.

Chae Nayun stared at the boat I made in mere minutes with wide eyes.

“Wow... this looks like a real boat...” she muttered in amazement.

“Yeah, it's a real boat,” I said while pushing the boat to the water.

I hopped on board and extended my hand to her, “Hop on.”

“...Huh?” Chae Nayun flinched and stared at my hand. Then she smiled brightly and exclaimed, “SURE!”

“We’re taking off.”

“Okay! Go! Go! Go!”

Chwaaaaaa!

The boat created with aether and Dazzling Dexterity was faster than most speedboats. We thoroughly enjoyed its speed while zipping through the waters underneath the bright sun.

“Hey, Kim Hajin.”

“What...?”

I responded a bit late to her call.

She came close to me and whispered in a small voice, “...I like.”

I couldn’t hear her properly because of the crashing waves, but I thought I heard something...

I stared at her for a moment, but Chae Nayun already looked away at the sea instead of me.

“I like this view! It’s so beautiful!” she exclaimed.

But... I wondered why her ears had turned bright red.

I didn’t say anything and just looked forward. Then I gripped the steering wheel and stepped on the accelerator. The boat sped up and it didn’t take long for us to make landfall.

As expected, Kim Suho had already sealed the night stalker in Misteltein.

The time of the year that Cube cadets loathed was nothing short of a vacation for me. Soon, theory week ended.

I would probably ace the exam without any problems... was what I was thinking as I left the classroom until I saw something strange in the distance, Chae Nayun and Rachel.

Chae Nayun seemed to say something to Rachel, who had a serious look while nodding. I had no idea what they were talking about, but how were those two having a normal conversation?

Did I stare at them too intently while in shock? Both of them spotted me.

“Ehem... Anyways, you understand what I’m saying, right?” Chae Nayun cleared her throat.

Rachel nodded again and both of them separated.

I was curious, but they disappeared almost immediately and I didn’t get the chance to ask them anything.

In the end, I walked back to the dorm without satisfying my curiosity.

“Excuse me...”

Someone suddenly called me from within the trees.

I looked around and found Yoo Yeonha leaning against a tree with her arms crossed over her chest. She seemed to be trying to look cool or something...

I shrugged in response.

“Are you aware that there’s a strange rumor circling around these days?” she said in a cold voice.

“What rumor? Ah, your meddling in the decision making?” I nonchalantly replied.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and stared at me, “What did you just say? Meddling? How did you know... No, there’s no such thing.”

“Alright, forget about it then,” I said with a shrug.

Was it not the right time yet?

Yoo Yeonha frowned and curtly replied, “Anyways... I think you’re acting quite rash these days. I wanted to tell you to be careful. A lot of people have started paying attention to you recently.”

“Me?”

“Yes, you know about it, right?”

“...”

I simply nodded in response.

She was probably referring to the whale incident that happened last week since my name was mentioned a few times on the Hero Community Forum thanks to that.

“Also... only I know this information, but...” Yoo Yeonha said before she looked around her surroundings just to make sure no one else was around. She hid herself under the tree’s shadow before continuing, “It’ll be best if you don’t get too aggressive just because you find being followed annoying.”

It was quite a strange thing to say as I had no idea what she was talking about.

I raised an eyebrow to show her that I didn’t understand what she meant, but it seemed that she took it the wrong way.

“Well, I’m just advising you. It’s up to you how you interpret that.”

Yoo Yeonha disappeared into the forest after those words.

I was left all alone and stared at her disappearing into the woods. I was certain that kid was going down the know-it-all route...

* * *

The first day of the practical final exam arrived. This was the first day of the week-long practical exam. The first subject was basic survival.

More than one thousand freshman cadets gathered at the Black Mountain. The main goal was quite simply to hunt as many monsters or cadets as possible within forty-eight hours to earn points. Only solo-hunted monsters counted and the cadet that dealt the killing blow would receive the points if they were in a party.

In short, this exam was basically a solo survival event. It was currently twenty-two hours into the exam.

Yoo Yeonha faced one of the most perilous moments in her life.

“Gulp!” she tightly gripped her whip.

The sharpshooter looking down at her from a higher place made her extremely nervous.

“I’ll give it my all!” Yoo Yeonha shouted.

Kim Hajin simply nodded in response.

“Gulp!” Yoo Yeonha nervously gulped again, but suddenly recalled a rumor she heard from the underground world.

She received it from the information guild, Fallen Flower, that Kim Sukho’s agents were dying one by one. One of the dead agents had been the infamous expert known as Jipen.

These kinds of rumors wouldn’t be floating around if Jipen hadn’t died since he was directly scouted by Kim Sukho after displaying stellar results on Violet Banquet.

However, the next information provided by Fallen Flower shocked Yoo Yeonha even more. The summary of the information stated that it was highly likely the person who killed Jipen was a Cube cadet. Yoo Yeonha suspected that Kim Hajin was the most likely culprit.

Jipen was a strong individual that even Yoo Yeonha frequently heard of. Did it really make sense that Kim Hajin killed such a powerful person?

“What are you doing? Are you just going to stand around all day?” Kim Hajin asked.

Yoo Yeonha felt as if there was a crippling dark aura hiding underneath his low indifferent voice. She started breaking out in cold sweat as her hand holding her whip began trembling.

However, she couldn't back down. Her reputation was one thing, but she needed points to secure her ranking no matter what. She couldn't afford to retire from the exam when only twenty-two hours had passed.

“Hiyap!” Yoo Yeonha swung her whip with all of her might.

Chwaaaak!

Her whip shot forward like a hungry viper and aimed for Kim Hajin's neck, but he easily took a step back and grabbed the whip.

“Ha!” Yoo Yeonha let out a triumphant shout.

Things were going just the way she wanted it to go. Grabbing her whip was the worst mistake he could've made in this fight.

Yoo Yeonha converted her mana into millions of volts and infused it into her whip.

Bzzt! Bzzt! Bzzt! Bzzt!

However, Kim Hajin wasn't affected and still grabbed her whip. In fact, he was simply blinking while staring at her.

“...”

It was then that Yoo Yeonha finally admitted it. Kim Hajin was the worst enemy she could go up against whether it had to do with skills or attributes.

She immediately threw her hands in the air, “I surrender.”

“...?”

“How many points do you want? I have 103 points,” she said in a tone that resembled a negotiating merchant.

However, Kim Hajin shook his head. “No, I don’t want your points. Instead, I have a favor.”

“A favor?” Yoo Yeonha tilted her head in confusion at the unexpected request.

Kim Hajin bitterly smiled and scratched the back of his neck, “Ah... The favor I want to ask is...”

Side Stories 65

Chae Nayun (20)

“...Do you mean to say this will hatch if you incubate it?” Yoo Yeonha asked while inspecting my almond in a cave.

I nodded in response.

Yoo Yeonha raised a brow and asked, “Why are you telling me this? You should tell the owner of the blood you fed it, no?”

“I plan to do so,” I replied.

Evandel would be born soon, but I wouldn’t be able to raise Evandel on my own. I had the Pharmacy Club and also those strange people following me around. I didn’t dare imagine what would happen if they decided to kidnap Evandel all of a sudden.

“Anyways... You want me to help you feed this peanut, right?”

“Yeah, that’s it.”

“Hmm... I guess I could if this peanut is really as great as you claim it is...”

I extended a smoked jerky to her. This meat was cooked with smoke instead of fire, so it didn’t have any bad odors.

Yoo Yeonha frowned and her expression seemed to say, ‘I don’t really eat these kinds of food, but I’ll eat it since we don’t have a choice.’ She accepted the smoked jerky.

We finished our meal quite quickly and Yoo Yeonha went fwah from satisfaction.

“Oh right, how did you block my electricity?”

“Hmm? Oh, that...”

It was all thanks to the synergy between aether and Dazzling Dexterity. I was able to imbue certain characteristics to the formless aether thanks to my dexterity.

I immediately changed aether into a transparent rubber when I noticed Yoo Yeonha was about to use her ability, which made it impossible for her to win because rubber wasn't a conductor.

“...It's a secret,” I said with a smirk.

“Hmph! Whatever, I'll be leaving now,” Yoo Yeonha said.

She really meant what she said and got up. Yoo Yeonha dusted her clothes and left the cave.

Barely a minute passed before she came back and pointed at the smoked jerky.

“Can I take some with me? I don't think you'll be able to finish it since there's so much. I'm just helping you out so you don't end up letting them go to waste...”

“Sure thing.”

Yoo Yeonha took a big piece of my smoked jerky and wrapped it in leaves.

“Hmm...”

She stole a glance at me before taking another, and another, and another, and another... She took six big pieces in total...

* * *

[First Practical Exam: Basic Survival]

[Second Practical Exam: Hostage Rescue]

[Third Practical Exam: One Versus One Duel]

[Fourth Practical Exam: Fight for the Underground Artifact]

The final exams ended on a good note among the cadets. The long-awaited reward after an entire week without taking the weekend off was finally here.

Summer vacation!

“Ah, feels so good!” Chae Nayun exclaimed while walking down the road.

She seemed to be in quite a good mood since vacation started, but it would be a short one...

The rest of the Pharmacy Club members walked behind her.

Yoo Yeonha frowned while looking at her report card. On the other hand, Yi Yeonghan and Kim Suho walked like a pair of zombies. It seemed like they bombed their exams.

“Everyone, did you bring your luggage?” Seo Youngji asked.

“Yes!” Chae Nayun enthusiastically replied.

We placed our luggage in the trunk compartment of the SUV.

“Hey, can I see your theory report card?” Yoo Yeonha tapped my shoulder and asked.

I took out my report card from my pocket.

Whish!

Yoo Yeonha snatched it out of my hand and glared at my results with bloodshot eyes.

[Theory Exam Results – Kim Hajin]

[Mana Theory: 20/20]

[Dungeon Theory: 20/20]

[Hero Theory: 20/20...]

“Ha...” Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh as if her whole world was falling apart.

I wondered just how bad her results were that she reacted in such a way, so I stole a glance at her results.

[Theory Exam Results – Yoo Yeonha]

[Mana Theory: 13.5/20]

[Dungeon Theory: 18.5/20]

[Hero Theory: 20/20...]

“The mana theory was quite difficult. I think you’ll place in the top five with 13.5 points,” I said.

“...!” Yoo Yeonha flinched before crumpling her report card. “H-How dare you look at my results without my permission!” she raged.

“Why did you look at mine then?”

“...You didn’t bomb your test, so it doesn’t matter,” she pouted and complained before giving me my report card back.

However, she seemed to cheer up almost immediately after hearing that she would be in the top five. After all, our ranks were given based on the other cadets’ performances too.

“Oh right... Hey guys, we have someone else joining us today,” Chae Nayun said after putting her luggage in the trunk compartment.

Someone else? Everyone tilted their heads in confusion at the mention of an additional member.

A familiar figure emerged from behind a tree. She wore silver armor with long golden flowing hair. She also seemed to be holding a crumpled paper in her hand that I assumed was her report card.

“...Hello,” Rachel nodded and meekly greeted us.

We were flabbergasted for a while after seeing her fully armed. Forget about the armor, she looked like a warrior going to war with her greaves, bracers, armguards, and even her sword, Galatine.

Yi Yeonghan was the first to break the awkward silence with a joke, “Your outfit... Are you going to war?”

“I dressed accordingly after hearing that we’re going to the outskirts of a neutral city-state,” Rachel replied.

“I see...”

“But why are all of you dressed so comfortably?” she asked.

I felt that it was a rhetorical question, but she asked with absolute confidence that we started to question ourselves why we were underdressed for the trip.

“Ah, forget about that. Just hurry up and get on. We have a long drive ahead of us,” Chae Nayun said as she opened the SUV door and threw Rachel in.

Rachel’s armor got caught on the way into the SUV, but she didn’t seem bothered by it as she comfortably sat in the front passenger seat.

* * *

The drive lasted for eighteen hours.

We headed for the neutral city-state, Trooper, which was where the mansion that Tomer mentioned was located. We traveled for a whole day without rest before we finally managed to reach the neutral city-state located near the borders of Pandemonium.

“You took your armor off,” Yoo Yeonha said to Rachel after getting out of the SUV.

Rachel only wore her breastplate now. The rest of her armor, such as her greaves, bracers, armguards, etc. remained on the SUV floor like a snake that shed its skin.

“I’m wearing it,” Rachel pointed at her breastplate and defended her honor.

“Hmm... Anyways, follow me. My informant is nearby,” Yoo Yeonha said.

First, we unpacked our luggage at the hotel and followed the directions Tomer provided.

The directions she gave led us to a mountain nearby the neutral city-state. The mountain’s forest was quite dark and filled with black leaves and rotting tree stumps. The overall atmosphere of the place was quite eerie. On top of that, the foul stench of organic matter rotting didn’t help at all.

We walked up the mountain for around thirty minutes.

“Hey, hey. Over here.”

Tomer and her group finally appeared. They already finished pitching their tents while they waited for us.

We went over and joined them.

“Over there. Look toward the northeast,” Tomer said as she handed us a pair of binoculars.

Chae Nayun was the first to take a look, but I used my sharp vision to look as well.

I could see it clearly... the dark greenish land was a complete mess as if it was bombed by a nuclear bomb. What remained of the mansion could be seen.

“Ah, I can see it. Is that what you mentioned last time?”

“Yeah, it’s the contamination that occurred after the mansion was destroyed.”

“So that’s the place we’re going to investigate today...”

Chae Nayun passed the binoculars to the others and said, “I’ll divide us into teams first. I already drafted our team composition in the car.”

Team 1: Chae Nayun, Kim Hajin, Rachel

Team 2: Zomer (Tomer), Kim Suho, Yi Yeonghan

Team 3: Shin Jonghak, Seo Youngji, Yoo Yeonha

Chae Nayun divided the group into three teams that she thought up. Team 1 would go and investigate the soil around the mansion. Team 2 would go and investigate the mountain. Team 3 would go to the nearby settlements and ask around for any information.

“Got it?”

The club members didn’t respond as all of them were busy looking into the binoculars they found in their tents. After all, the mansion's rubble and the contaminated ground were quite a sight.

“Tsk... Hey, Rachel and Kim Hajin. Both of you, follow me,” Chae Nayun clicked her tongue.

Our team made our way towards the mansion grounds.

Rachel seemed nervous and tightly gripped her sword on alert. Seeing her on the edge bothered me a bit, but what bothered me even more was... How did Chae Nayun convince her to come in the first place?

However, I didn't bother asking her.

Chae Nayun was the first one to speak after we reached our destination, "Alright! Kim Hajin, I choose you! Go investigate!"

"...Am I your pokemon or what?" I grumbled in response before squatting down and touching the ground.

There seemed to be some sort of acid in the dark green soil as I could feel it was still quite hot with faint steam rising out of it.

"What do you think?" Chae Nayun asked.

"Hmm... Give me a while..." I replied.

I covered my hand with aether and grabbed a patch of the soil into my hand. Then, the soil suddenly started to squirm like a living organism.

Squirm... Squirm... Squirm... Squirm...

It looked quite disgusting, to be honest.

"Whoa! W-What's that thing?!"

"What is that?!"

Chae Nayun jumped back while Rachel pulled out her sword. Both of them were extremely shocked after seeing the soil squirm and start to take shape. They intently watched the soil with curiosity in their eyes.

"Beats me... I have no idea, but I'm certain that something happened here," I said before I turned aether into a trowel.

I took a scoop of soil from the area where I felt the concentration of mana was the densest and put it in a plastic bag.

"Let's go back to the hotel with this for now," I said.

"Already?" Chae Nayun asked.

“Yeah, you can somewhat feel it too, right?”

I was talking about the strange sinister feeling I was getting from this place. There was no need to mention that it felt like someone was watching us, but the air itself felt hostile towards us. In fact, it felt like the air in this place was trying to rip a hole in my lungs whenever I tried to breathe.

Chae Nayun nodded and agreed, “It sure does feel that way... Hey, before that. Should we break some of those rubble and take them back too? You know, just in case?”

Rachel looked at the rubble that was the remnants of the mansion, “... Let’s not mess with that.”

“Go ahead.”

On the other hand, I let Chae Nayun do whatever she pleased.

* * *

The atmosphere of the neutral city-state Trooper was quite extravagant, yet desolate. The entire city was lit up by magic, but the dark sky and low-rise buildings in the backdrop painted a gloomy picture.

However, its public security was good and the self-defense forces that were in charge of its security were known to be strong.

“Sigh...”

Rachel let out a sigh as she walked into the back alley of this city that seemed far from modern civilization. Despite their good safety record, she could feel her temples throbbing from being on edge the whole time.

“Hey, child. I already told you that you don’t have to be so alert,” Chae Nayun said.

However, Rachel only weakly nodded in response. Her mind was fully occupied with thoughts like she was a princess, so she couldn't afford to die a dog's death in a place like this. No, it was more like she couldn't afford to get abducted and held for ransom even if it cost her life.

However, a part of her was feeling excited by the fact that this was her first rebellious act in ten years.

"Huh? Look, it's Shin Jonghak," Chae Nayun spotted Shin Jonghak and Team 3.

They seemed to have decided to start from the city's outskirts as they had quite a lot of food and souvenirs with them.

Chae Nayun frowned and walked over to them.

"Hey, are you on a picnic? Ha?! Are you here to play? I mean, supervisor, you should have stopped them, no? That punk looks like he came here to shop!"

"Huh...? Ah, don't worry. We got some good information. We didn't shop much," Seo Youngji replied before she hid the shopping bags she was holding in both hands behind her back.

"Rather, what have you guys been up to? Where's Hajin?" she asked.

"He's doing some research. We're on our way to the magic shop to buy some stuff he asked for," Chae Nayun replied.

"Really? Then let's go together. We wanted to see their magic shop too."

"..."

Chae Nayun glared at Seo Youngji, but she didn't say anything after that as they went to the magic shop together.

Trooper lived up to its reputation as a city of magic. They had things that one would not easily find in Seoul, which were readily available here. Well, technically, it was more of a case of it being illegal rather than being hard to find in Seoul.

“Here is the blue slime’s tail and witch’s powder you requested. Do you need anything else?” the shopkeeper asked.

“Blood of black frost mountain troll please,” Rachel replied.

She finally relaxed after coming into the magic shop. She looked around the shop in amazement like a little kid.

“That will be three hundred and fifty million won in total,” the shopkeeper said.

“W-What?! Three hundred and fifty million won?!” Rachel exclaimed in shock.

Three hundred and fifty million won was a huge sum for Rachel, but Chae Nayun nonchalantly paid it in full cash.

“Hmm... It’s not counterfeit... Alright, take it.”

Chae Nayun collected the materials and left.

Then Shin Jonghak walked up to the counter and asked, “How much are all of these?”

“Hoo... How did you pick all of this? You have good eyes,” the shopkeeper praised him.

“I asked you how much are they?” Shin Jonghak frowned and asked with a hint of irritation in his voice.

“Hoho! This is a magic tarot card and you won’t find it that easily even in this city. That’s going to easily cost you more than one billion won,” the shopkeeper said with a haughty grin.

“W-What?! One b-b-b-billion won?!” Rachel was shocked once again.

“I’ll pay you 1.2 billion won then,” Shin Jonghak nonchalantly said as he threw the shopkeeper the amount in full cash.

This was something that Rachel couldn't comprehend, 'One billion and five hundred fifty million won is three years' worth of Cube tuition fees... '

Cube didn't charge tuition fees to locals, but they charged foreigners. Most people wouldn't be able to afford these exorbitant fees, so Cube would pay their tuition fees first in exchange for a guarantee signed by their country.

"Let's go," Chae Nayun said.

The party left the magic shop.

Ssak... Ssak... Ssak... Ssak...

Something suddenly zipped past them from a nearby alley. Rachel immediately pulled out Gallatine as she prepared to engage in combat.

"Don't worry. Trooper has a lot of delinquents and street urchins. It might have good security, but that's only when compared to other neutral city-states. Just ignore them and keep walking," Seo Youngji said.

"...Yes," Rachel replied.

"Oh, just be careful of pickpockets though," Seo Youngji added.

Rachel finally relaxed only after the high rank hero assured her that it was going to be alright.

The party made their way to the hotel whilst being careful of pickpockets.

They were staying at the penthouse of the most luxurious hotel in Trooper as Chae Nayun rented the entire floor for the Pharmacy Club.

"Hey, we're back!" Chae Nayun opened the door and smiled brightly.

Kim Hajin was supposed to be in the room waiting for her but...

“Hey, what are you planning to do with these... huh?”

He wasn't there.

Whoosh...

A cold breeze entered through the open window. The room was empty.

“...?”

Chae Nayun blinked a few times. Shin Jonghak and the other members entered the room while she was staring blankly.

“Hey, Nayun...” Yoo Yeonha called her with some tension in her voice.

Chae Nayun flinched before walking over to her.

“Look at this,” Yoo Yeonha said as she handed her a piece of paper.

A single sentence was written on the white background.

[I'm going to borrow this guy for a while.]

Side Stories 66

Chae Nayun (21)

[The King of the Otherworld, Jin Sahyuk, has taken an interest in you.]

[You have gained 750 SP.]

“I don’t know...”

I looked at my abductor, who had her face covered with a hood.

She looked into my eyes and tried to get into my head.

“No, there’s no way you don’t know,” she said while attempting to infiltrate my consciousness. Then she gritted her teeth and stood after failing to get into my head. She paced around the tiny room while mumbling something under her breath, “If I know you, then you must know me too...”

“...”

I had no idea why Jin Sahyuk was doing this. I wondered if she went insane or if this was yet another story setting that was added without my knowledge.

Whatever it was, it looked like Jin Sahyuk wasn’t in the right state of mind. I didn’t want to trigger her at all costs.

“I only came here to investigate. I heard a rumor that the Tears of Heaven was delivered here after the auction so...” I explained.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk stared down at me. Her gaze underneath the hood was quite ominous.

“I don’t care about things like... Eugh!” she suddenly groaned mid-sentence.

It was only then that I noticed her forehead was covered in sweat. She was holding onto her right arm while groaning in pain.

“...Are you hurt somewhere?” I asked her.

Jin Sahyuk glared at me in response, but soon let out a sigh and rolled up her right sleeve.

“What the...” I was rendered speechless.

A massive curse was on her right arm. Some sort of pitch-black liquid that resembled tar was squirming on her arm before it turned into the shape of a rose.

“What’s that...?” I asked.

“A curse cast from a grudge. I got it after killing some annoying bastard... I never imagined that this kind of defense mechanism existed...” she replied.

I inspected the curse’s setting.

[Grudge Curse] [High Rank]

— A mana curse cast before the caster’s death.

— The curse’s strength will depend on how strong of a grudge the caster harbored.

It was a curse of the highest rank, which was known to be quite tricky to deal with. Its host would have probably died a long time ago if it wasn’t Jin Sahyuk.

“...”

I glanced at her.

She looked at me without saying anything, but it felt like she had some sort of expectations for me.

“Did you... bring me here because of this?” I asked.

“...I didn’t want us to meet like this, but I got this curse because of you,” she replied.

I honestly had no idea what she was talking about and how she got the curse because of me.

“Hmm...”

I started to ponder if I should help her get rid of the curse or just let her be. I already knew that Jin Sahyuk was a monster on par with the final boss of the novel, but she wasn’t as violent or aggressive as I imagined her to be.

As I pondered whether to help or not...

She said, “I’m going to kill you if you refuse to lift this curse.”

That was more than enough to motivate me to help her.

* * *

The situation was quite dire, but Chae Nayun seemed surprisingly calm. It was all thanks to the experience and instincts she accumulated from her previous life that she was able to rationally assess the situation.

First, there were no signs of resistance in the room. She could tell that the abductor had some sort of relationship with Kim Hajin judging from the letter left behind.

Second, the abductor came through the window and shared a conversation with Kim Hajin before abducting him. This meant that whoever abducted him had no plans to harm him.

Lastly...

“Hey, Nayun. He sent a message in our group chat. He says he met someone he knows, so he’ll come back later,” Yoo Yeonha said.

Chae Nayun opened her smartwatch and checked the message.

[I met someone I know, so I’ll come back later.]

What were the chances that Kim Hajin wrote this message? Chae Nayun was a hundred percent sure that it was him. How was she so sure? Well, there was a selfie attached to the message...

“Hmm... Things turned out as I expected...” Chae Nayun nodded and sat on a chair while nodding like a detective who cracked a case.

Her pounding heart slowly started to calm down.

“Ah, what the hell, guys... You surprised me...”

“Yeah, you scared me too.”

Yi Yeonghan and Kim Suho rushed back after hearing that Kim Hajin had been abducted. Meanwhile, Shin Jonghak was playing with cards at the table.

“I had no idea at the time,” Chae Nayun said with a shrug. She walked over to Shin Jonghak and said, “Hey, Shin Jonghak. That’s expensive, right? Do it for me first.”

Shin Jonghak smirked and nodded.

“So? So? Will I be able to create a medicine for oppa?”

“Draw three cards.”

Chae Nayun drew three cards and showed them to him.

Shin Jonghak looked at the cards. He squinted his eyes and said in a low voice, “You will have to offer someone’s blood as tribute. A Golden Luck is watching over you...”

Ding!

Yoo Yeonha’s smartwatch rang while Shin Jonghak was interpreting the magic cards.

[Yoo Jinhyuk]

Yoo Yeonha left the room after seeing the name of the caller.

“Hello?”

— Is it a good time to talk?

“Yes, it is.”

There was something strange about Yoo Jinhyuk’s voice. It sounded as if he was being chased or panicking and feeling nervous about something. Whatever it was, Yoo Yeonha could definitely tell that he sounded quite different from his usual happy-go-lucky self.

— It’s about that Kim Hajin guy you asked me to investigate last time.

“Yes?”

Yoo Jinhyuk hesitated for quite a while, and Yoo Yeonha could tell that he was hiding something big.

—... It seems that his parents were the heroes that Kim Sukho executed in the past.

Chills spread throughout Yoo Yeonha’s body after hearing those words.

* * *

The club members went outside after Shin Jonghak was done reading magic tarot cards for them. They planned to take a look around the city since Kim Hajin seemed to be safe.

There were quite a lot of magical things in the City of Magic, Trooper. The streetlights were running on magic, and witches were cackling as they zipped through the sky on brooms.

It was an unimaginable sight in Seoul, where flying was strictly prohibited.

Chae Nayun went to a shop and purchased a bag of magic dust.

“This is magic dust that conveys one’s words. You will be able to convey your words by sprinkling it on your target after telling the dust what you want to convey,” the shopkeeper explained.

“...”

‘I’ll probably need this later,’ Chae Nayun thought while blushing.

“Hmm...?”

She spotted someone in the crowd while looking around the city. It was a small silhouette that she was all too familiar with, but the person seemed to have done their best to disguise themselves with a big hat. However, the person was someone that Chae Nayun missed, so she easily recognized them at a single glance.

“Ai... Oh, right...”

Chae Nayun was about to call out to that person, but immediately stopped herself. She wasn’t acquainted with that person yet and ended up confusing her previous life with her current life.

Chae Nayun faked a cough in embarrassment.

“Hmm?”

Someone made the same sound as Chae Nayun. It seemed that Seo

Youngji also spotted the cute little girl disguised with a large hat, Aileen.

“Hmm...” Seo Youngji found herself in a dilemma.

Anyone could tell that it was Aileen, but she wondered if she should pretend that she didn't see or call out to Aileen.

While Seo Youngji faced a dilemma, Aileen seemed to have felt her gaze and looked at her.

Aileen was holding a hotdog in one hand when both of their gazes met. She definitely recognized Seo Youngji judging from her reaction.

“...Lala... Lalala...”

However, Aileen did her best to pretend that she didn't see Seo Youngji and awkwardly hummed a tune to put up an act.

Seo Youngji took the hint and decided to pretend that she never saw Aileen.

“Hmm?”

It was then that she ran into another unexpected encounter.

“Whoa, are you Hero Seo Youngji?”

“...?”

Seo Youngji looked back after hearing the voice and saw the Head Magician of Seoul Magic Tower and current Cube instructor, Kim Hyojun.

Kim Hyojun tilted his head and looked at the cadets lined up behind Seo Youngji.

“What brings you here, and why are the cadets with you?” he asked.

“Ah, this is a part of their practical training. What about you?”

“Ah, I came together with the Seoul Magic Tower. We have an unofficial meeting here today, you see.”

“By unofficial meeting you mean...?”

“All twenty-three magic towers have gathered here in Trooper.”

“Ah, it must be the magic tower’s Grand Meeting,” Seo Youngji said with a nod.

The Grand Meeting of the magic towers was usually conducted in neutral city-states as frequent quarrels broke out between the magicians whenever they hosted the meeting in any of the known countries.

Kim Hyojun smiled and said, “I ran away since the meeting was almost over.”

“Ran away...?”

“Yes, the finale is usually...”

When the cadets tilted their heads in confusion and Seo Youngji was about to ask why he ran away, a mana explosion occurred from somewhere nearby.

Kkrwaaaaang!

Everyone jumped in surprise and their eyes darted towards the source of the explosion. They saw a magic dome appear from the center of the city. Then, the dome covered all of Trooper.

“...What is going on?” Rachel pulled out her sword and asked.

Both Kim Suho and Chae Nayun also looked quite concerned with what was going on.

However, Kim Hyojun nonchalantly said, “There’s no need to worry about it. That’s a common occurrence.”

“A common occurrence...?”

“Yes. You see, magicians are quite envious people. It’s a given that they’re going to fight if they gather together. Hmm... This fight looks like it’s between a Tower Master and a Vice Tower Master... I advise you all to be careful and not get caught up in it. Also, some djinns usually use this opportunity to sow discord. Do be careful of that as well. After all, things could get quite ugly if all of that happens simultaneously.”

Surprisingly, Kim Hyojun was quite calm as he explained the situation. He sounded as if this was an all too common occurrence.

* * *

[Art, Medicinal Wisdom, has been saved!]

[Your luck has triggered! Art, Medicinal Wisdom, has been upgraded!]

I was left with no other options due to the extreme threat. I had to use the SP I obtained from Jin Sahyuk to create an art that could treat her. The name of the art was [Medicinal Wisdom], and it wasn’t that burdensome since I would eventually need it to develop a medicine for Choi Jinyoon later.

[Medicinal Wisdom] [Intermediate Rank] [Growth Type]

— Will possess promising talent in the field of Magic Medicine. This art will synchronize with [Dazzling Dexterity] and allow the user to measure things with far greater precision compared to machines. It will also allow the user to diagnose a patient through palpation.

— The user may enhance their wisdom by utilizing stigma.

“Give me your arm,” I said.

“...”

Jin Sahyuk extended her arm to me without any complaints.

I touched her cursed arm, and the remedy for this curse instantly popped up in my head when I came into contact with her arm.

“Keuk...” Jin Sahyuk groaned in pain.

I immediately took my hand off of her arm and faked a cough.

“It seems that we’ll need quite a few ingredients. Do you think you can collect it in your current state?”

“I’m alright. Just tell me what you need.”

I recited the medicinal ingredients that I would need.

Jin Sahyuk nodded a few times before she immediately left after I recited the full list of ingredients. She came back in fifteen minutes with all of the ingredients I required.

I mixed the ingredients and created an antidote to lift the curse. I was able to create the antidote in less than thirty minutes thanks to cranking up stigma to the max.

“Lie down...”

Jin Sahyuk listened to my instructions and obediently lay on the bed.

I poured the gel-like antidote on her arm.

“Kieeeeeek! Gwuoooooh! Kyaaaaaahk!”

The curse started to scream as soon as the antidote came in contact with it.

I momentarily covered my ears and continued to apply the antidote to her arm. The curse screamed even louder the more I applied the antidote.

The curse wasn't the only thing screaming in this tiny room as Jin Sahyuk was also screaming at the top of her lungs.

“...Heuuuuk! Kwaaaaaaaaah!”

The curse was finally purified after a lengthy struggle. The tar-like liquid covering her arm turned to dust and fell to the floor.

“It's over.”

“Haa... Haa...”

Jin Sahyuk was completely drenched in sweat and gasping for air.

“Hey, I'm not expecting anything in return for this, but can I ask something?”

“...”

I showed the contaminated soil in the plastic bag to her and asked, “You said that you're familiar with the Tears of Heaven, right?”

“...”

I spread out aether and placed the contaminated soil on top of it. The contaminated soil started to squirm in a hideous manner like it did last time.

“Look... the soil is moving like it's alive, right? So... does this mean that this can bring the dead back to...”

Hold on. That was wrong. Something was different. No, something was very different.

I opened my eyes as various thoughts rushed into my head. My thought process before and after I obtained [Medicinal Wisdom] became quite different. I just thought of a new hypothesis.

If this soil was indeed a remnant of the Tears of Heaven, then the elixir didn't resurrect the dead, but...

“Yaaawn...”

A sudden yawn interrupted my thoughts. It was Jin Sahyuk. She was looking at me with half-open eyes while dozing off.

She started to mumble something in her drowsy voice, “Alright... go... ahead... up... to... you...”

Jin Sahyuk closed her eyes and fell asleep, but not before mumbling, “Mmm... My... loyal... subject...”

“What the heck... Is this an aftereffect of the curse?”

A system message popped up after I stood.

[Setting Modification – The pain inflicted by the curse on the king has awakened Jin Sahyuk's memories from her previous life.]

[You have obtained Kim Chundong's Diary.]

[The progress of the episode will be sped up from now on.]

“...?” I had no idea what the system was saying.

As I was taken aback by the strange system message, an explosion suddenly erupted outside.

Boooooom!

“...”

I looked at Jin Sahyuk, who was still sound asleep. This probably meant that it was okay for me to run away, right? I wore my outer clothing and was about to leave, but came to a stop.

“Just in case...”

[I'm going. Take care of yourself.]

I decided to leave her a note. I would be running away if I simply left, but I was just leaving if I left a note.

I stepped out of Jin Sahyuk's room.

Side Stories 67

Chae Nayun (22)

Boom! Taaaang! Kaboom!

Magic collided against each other and chaos descended on the city. The bolts of man-made lightning ran wild and spewed mana all over the place.

Chae Nayun sought refuge in an alley with Rachel and Yoo Yeonha while they watched the display of magical might.

“Is that really a fight between magicians?” Chae Nayun grumbled as she sensed a hint of demonic energy in the fight between magicians.

Yoo Yeonha answered her, “This city is close to Pandemonium, so there will definitely be some djinns here.”

“Hmm... You think so? That’s quite intriguing...”

Fire, lightning, and explosions flew across the air.

As Chae Nayun was captivated by the powerful magic flying overhead, someone approached her and whispered in her ear.

“Are you having fun?”

“Kyak!” Chae Nayun screamed before turning around and slapping the whisperer.

Chwak!

The slap was so loud that it almost rivaled the sound of the magic.

The victim's neck twisted after being struck by the mighty slap. Chae Nayun was shocked once more after seeing the victim's face.

"H-Hey! Hey! Are you alright?!"

"..."

"Aigoo... What should I do? Does it hurt?"

Kim Hajin stared at her in disbelief. She was the one who slapped him, but now she also worried about him.

Chae Nayun glanced at him and carefully muttered, "Why would you sneak up like that... Rather, where have you been all this time?"

"Forget about that for now. Follow me. We're going to end up getting dragged into that if we stay here," Kim Hajin motioned for them to follow him and ran off.

Chae Nayun and Rachel immediately followed him, but Yoo Yeonha wasn't willing to do the same.

However, Yoo Yeonha pondered for a while and realized she didn't have a choice. She ran as fast as she could to catch up to them.

* * *

I went down to the sewers with the three girls. It was quite damp and eerie here, but this was probably the safest place for now.

I didn't know about the rest, but a weakling like me would get instantly killed the moment I got hit by one of those magic.

"What about the rest? Kim Suho and the others?" I asked.

"They went to hunt down the djinns and we came to look for you," Chae Nayun replied.

I nodded, "Really? Okay, walk while you listen to me."

I realized a few things today, but they weren't good news.

"The soil we found at the mansion grounds... If the contaminant was indeed caused by the Tears of Heaven, then the Tears of Heaven is not an elixir that can bring the dead back to life."

"Huh? Really?"

"You saw the soil move, right? It moved as if it was alive. The Tears of Heaven would go into living or non-living things and make them move."

The Tears of Heaven wasn't the elixir we thought it was. It was just a mutation that was created by chance.

"In short, it's something closer to a parasite."

The Tears of Heaven wasn't an elixir that could bring the dead to life, but it was closer to a parasite that took over the host body.

"That means..."

"The Tears of Heaven is not the answer we're looking for."

However, we still had hope. The path that the Pharmacy Club walked until now led us to collecting the Hope Plant, the Soul Mana Vermillion, and the Heart of the Amazon. This order was definitely not a coincidence. The episode was definitely guiding us to the end game.

"It's alright. We'll eventually find the answer if we eliminate things one by one. Anyways, let's go back to the mansion for now."

We continued running until we found a ladder leading to above the ground. I climbed the ladder and checked my smartwatch to make sure we were at the right place before running towards the mansion.

"...Wait."

I spotted a hideous creature when the mansion came into view.

“Guoooo...”

The creature’s low and eerie moan rooted me in place.

“What the hell is that...?”

Chae Nayun and Rachel immediately readied their swords.

The hideous creature was squirming among the mansion’s rubble. The rubble clung to the creature’s body, which was made out of mud. It looked like a golem, but I had an idea of the creature’s real identity.

“That’s probably... the Tears of Heaven,” I said.

“What?” Chae Nayun muttered in disbelief.

“Gwuoooooh...”

The hideous creature spotted us, and the ground started to shake shortly afterwards. It felt as if the ground was moving according to the creature’s command.

That was most certainly the case as the creature soon used the ground to attack us.

Dddruuu! Kkkung!

The ground slithered like a snake and opened its jaws at us. We spread out and evaded the attack, but the creature already prepared its next attack.

“...!”

The creature gathered mana in its body before shooting it out in all directions. The black-reddish beams it shot out were extremely powerful. It was hard to get an accurate grasp of how strong it was.

I knew it was quite likely that aether would break if I used it to block the attack, but I didn't hesitate and formed aether into a barrier.

It was then...

A bright light shot out from my pocket and my almond floated into the air. Evandel spread out a barrier while she was still in her almond form.

“...?”

The barrier blocked all of the creature's attacks. The powerful demonic mana could no longer be felt and completely disappeared.

“W-What was that?”

“Hajin? What's that seed?”

Chae Nayun and Rachel looked at me and the seed with wide eyes in surprise.

To be honest, I was stunned too. However, I immediately came back to my senses.

“Ah, this is... I'll explain later!” I shouted as our enemy was still alive and well.

“Gwwuoooooh!”

Also, our enemy was no pushover. There was no other way for us to win aside from combining our strengths.

The barrier that Evandel formed disappeared and the creature used this opening to channel its mana once again. It gathered its mana in its mouth in preparation to shoot while causing massive tremors to make sure that we wouldn't be able to approach it.

“Kwuoooooh!”

“Stop.”

However, the creature wasn't able to fire the mana it gathered as a single word suppressed it.

“Hoho, I came to see what was going on here.”

Clack...! Clack...!

The sound of high heels could be heard before a hero emerged.

Her eyes were quite sharp despite her small stature. She looked around her surroundings with curious, yet commanding eyes.

“Interesting,” Aileen muttered before using Spirit Speech with a skewer still in her hand.

“Hey, this skewer will skewer your heart. Then, you won't be able to move for a long time.”

The ordinary skewer suddenly flashed and pierced through the hideous creature's core. The creature turned into stone after its core was pierced.

“Hmm... What an interesting fellow. What is this anyway?”

This was the power of one of the strongest heroes in the world. The user of Spirit Speech affiliated with the Temple of Justice, Aileen.

She inspected the Tears of Heaven with curious eyes before looking at us and smirking, “Oh, right. Now, now... it's time for you kids to go home. You kids should be in bed.”

* * *

The situation was quickly resolved after Aileen appeared.

Kim Suho was busy playing police as he ran around Trooper and started arresting the djinns. Aileen took the djinns he arrested and brought all of them to the association.

I returned to the hotel with the others, but I still had to explain everything to them.

“So... a child who inherited Rachel’s blood is going to be born from that seed?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“Yes...” I weakly nodded in response.

I already apologized to Rachel a dozen times.

“Then that means... we’ll have to nurture it from now on,” Yoo Yeonha said.

Rachel didn’t show any reaction whatsoever. It seemed she still found it difficult to accept that a magical being who inherited her DNA was going to be born.

“Where do you plan to raise it?” I asked.

“I’ll take care of that. After all, you can’t be trusted,” Yoo Yeonha replied with a scoff.

“What? What’s there not to be trusted about him?” Chae Nayun defended me.

Yoo Yeonha frowned and glared at her before saying, “Anyways, we have to keep this a secret. Oh, by the way, Rachel?”

Rachel flinched and nodded in response.

“Are you alright? Your child will be born if we exaggerate it a bit,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“Huh? Ah...” Rachel looked at the snoring seed. She looked at it for quite a while before letting out a sigh, “I’m not sure... but I hope it won’t grow up the same way I did... Ah... I really don’t know, but I think I’m alright for now.” She looked at us and smiled brightly.

I went up to the hotel's rooftop late at night. The night sky was filled with stars... and mana thanks to the still ongoing war between the magicians.

They toned it down a bit compared to earlier in the day, but there were still some mana explosions erupting and going, "Boom! Boom!" from time to time.

"Sigh..."

I was feeling troubled. The entire scenery looked different. Even the milky way looked different from where I came from. This world looked similar to Earth, but it was quite different at the same time.

And I was stranded here in this faraway place. Was I ever going to go back?

I felt the emptiness and depression I was holding back for some time now come crashing down on me. Half a year had already passed, and I was going to have to repeat this at least fifteen more times before I could get a hint on how to go back home. Could I withstand it for that long?

I suddenly sensed someone behind me, so I simply sat there and waited for that person to come closer.

She was a character I created, but now possessed some sort of secret. She was someone who bothered and concerned me every single day without fail...

"What are you doing here?"

Chae Nayun (■■■■) sat beside me.

I looked at her before looking forward again and replied, "Just watching the scenery."

"Really? That's a coincidence. I came up here to do just that."

Chae Nayun looked up at the night sky like I did. I looked at her instead and saw the stars brightly reflecting in her big, beautiful eyes.

“It’s really beautiful... Ehem... Hey, Kim Hajin. Take this,” she cleared her throat and gave me something.

It was a pouch the size of my fist.

“What’s this?” I asked.

“Magic dust. I recorded my voice in it. Listen to it later when you get the chance.”

I opened the pouch, but Chae Nayun jumped and stopped me from opening it.

— What I wanted to say is...

The voice was cut short after Chae Nayun closed the pouch.

“No! No! Not now! Listen to it later! Maybe after a year? Think of it as a time capsule, okay?”

I nodded in response and placed the pouch in my pocket. I could just listen to it tomorrow.

“Good boy...”

We silently watched the night sky. The mana and stars intertwined with each other. Mana would flash from behind the clouds from time to time.

However, the rooftop had a solemn atmosphere.

I looked at Chae Nayun once again. She was making a sad face that didn’t suit her. I thought it was highly likely that she was still reeling from the shock of the Tears of Heaven turning out to be nothing more than an abomination.

I let out a sigh and said, “The Tears of Heaven might not have been what we were looking for, but... we’ll be able to make the medicine he needs. No, we still aren’t sure if that monster was indeed the Tears of Heaven or not.

“...?”

Chae Nayun looked at me without saying a word. She looked confused as if asking, ‘What are you talking about?’ Soon, she warmly smiled and nodded.

I continued, “So I’m just saying this, but... can I go see your oppa with you?”

“My oppa... what?!”

Chae Nayun looked shocked at my request.

“W-Why?! What do you plan to do?!”

“What do you mean plan? What else would I do there?”

“Do you plan to kill him?!”

“Hey, are you crazy?”

I lightly hit her shoulder after she started spouting nonsense, but she was still glaring at me with skeptical eyes.

“I just feel that I might figure something out if I take a look at your oppa.”

“Take a look?”

“Yeah. I mean, we need to identify the symptoms to treat him, right? Don’t you want to wake him up?”

We gazed at each other. I had no idea why, but it felt like the stars in her eyes were crossing over to mine.

"I'll save him," I said.

"...Really?"

"Yeah. It might have been a bust this time, but we'll figure it out soon."

"Really? Really?"

"Yeah, really."

"..."

Then, Chae Nayun silently looked at the night sky again and I looked up too.

The stars were littered across the horizon, but my view was blocked when a system message popped up in front of my eyes.

[The identity of ■■■ has been unraveled.]

[Chae Nayun's setting has been updated – Regressor.]

[You have gained 1,000 SP.]

I couldn't make sense of these words, and had no idea what events caused them to appear.

I reread the system message word by word before my eyes shot wide open. My hands trembled and it felt like my heart was about to beat its way out of my chest.

I seemed to be looking at the same thing as Chae Nayun, but our point of view was entirely different.

"Hey," Chae Nayun called me.

She didn't give me time to respond or the chance for me to run away.

“I like you.”

She confessed her feelings with those three words.

I felt my heart drop and the stars in the night sky shook.

Side Stories 68

Chae Nayun (23)

Rejected.

No, it was more appropriate to say that she didn't get a response, but she could tell from Kim Hajin's expression that she had been rejected.

“...”

Chae Nayun blankly stared at the ceiling.

She was caught up in the atmosphere when Kim Hajin mentioned that he would save her brother. The emotions from her previous life welled up at that moment and she failed to prevent her confession from spilling out of her mouth.

The problem was that her emotions and the current timeline didn't match at all.

Kim Hajin had no idea about the Chae Nayun before she regressed, so she was just an idiot that he spent roughly four months with from his perspective.

Even she would be surprised if an idiot like her suddenly confessed out of nowhere.

“Eh... huh...? Aaah... AAAAHHHHH!” Chae Nayun screamed while punching her mattress.

Yoo Yeonha finally managed to fall asleep not too long ago, but she forcefully opened her eyes at the ruckus Chae Nayun was causing. She couldn't fall asleep as she kept thinking about what Yoo Jinhyuk had told her, so she glared at Chae Nayun with bloodshot eyes.

“Nayun...”

“AAAAAH! AAAAAH! AAAAH!”

“Haa...”

Yoo Yeonha used her mana to conjure makeshift earplugs and covered her ears with them.

Chae Nayun finally managed to calm down after kicking up a fuss in the middle of the night, but her entire body felt hot. It was so hot that she couldn't fall asleep because of it, so she got up from her bed.

She walked out to the balcony and stared at the sky.

The sun rising from the west faintly illuminated the sky. It was already sunrise, but she didn't feel refreshed at all.

Chae Nayun leaned on the balcony railing and let out a sigh.

“...I like you.”

‘I really like you. I only like you. I like you the most.’

“I like you, but...”

Chae Nayun was left trembling in embarrassment and shame after failing to suppress the words she desperately wanted to say out loud to the person she loved.

* * *

[The identity of ■■■ has been unraveled.]

[Chae Nayun's setting has been updated – Regressor.]

[You have gained 1,000 SP.]

I stared at the system message with my eyes wide open. It was already dawn, but I failed to sleep even a wink. No, I wasn't sleepy at all.

'Regressor.'

That single word was more than enough to shake my very soul and form countless theories and questions in my head.

Why was regressor suddenly added to Chae Nayun's setting? Then, is her first life the real world or is her second life the real one?

I had a splitting headache after these torrents of thoughts came crashing down on me, but I knew very well that my complicated thoughts simply didn't occur because I saw the word regressor in her setting.

"...I'm having a fever."

My cheeks felt hot and my heart was beating like crazy. Chae Nayun's bold confession kept ringing in my ears.

"Ah..."

I ended up grabbing my hair at the complicated feeling welling up inside of me. It wasn't that I had never dated anyone before or was never confessed to. Of course, I was usually the one confessing and her boldness did take me by surprise. However...

It was strange.

I was supposed to focus on the keyword regressor, but my heart was forcing me to think about something else.

"...This is driving me crazy."

Chae Nayun was a character in my novel. She was a person I created with the settings I wrote with my own two hands...

Yes, that was right. She was a person. She wasn't just a character in a novel, but technically a living breathing person.

Kim Suho came back at daybreak. “Oh, Hajin. You’re already awake?”

He left around three in the morning and came back drenched in sweat. I guess he went to train or something.

“Yeah... I’m awake now. What did you do outside?”

“Ah, I went to hunt some monsters. There are quite a lot of them in the vicinity,” Kim Suho replied with a sheepish smile before sitting on his bed.

It seemed that he really liked his new weapon judging by how he kept affectionately touching it.

“Oh right, what did you do with Chae Nayun?”

“...”

My heart felt like it was caught off guard and hit by a straight punch at his sudden question.

I simply tilted my head in confusion and Kim Suho brightly smiled.

“Some strange vibes were coming from the two of you,” he said with a sheepish grin.

“What strange vibes are you talking about?” I retorted.

I had no idea why, but I ended up looking at my smartwatch to search for the location of the [Butterfly Sapling] that I saved a while back.

“Rather, are you free sometime soon? There’s somewhere I need to go with you,” I changed the subject.

“You need to go with me?”

“Yeah, I found an item.”

“Hmm... I think I’m free next week, but what item is it?”

“I’ll tell you once we’re there.”

“Okay, sounds good to me!” Kim Suho replied before standing up and heading to the bathroom.

Shwaaaa!

I read [Kim Chundong’s Diary] while Kim Suho was taking a shower.

“...What the hell is this?”

The content of the diary was that the extra I possessed, Kim Chundong, traveled to another world and lived as Jin Sahyuk’s subordinate named Kindspring. He was her most loyal subject, but he was betrayed in the end.

I could deduce from the content of this diary that Jin Sahyuk recognized me as Kindspring and...

It was then.

“Ack!”

A sharp pain struck my head. It was the familiar feeling of a pair of hot fangs digging themselves into my skull, the feeling of another streak of stigma being added.

I grabbed my arm and plopped down on my bed.

“Ughhh...”

I helplessly trembled and squirmed in pain before I lost consciousness.

* * *

The Pharmacy Club left Trooper and came back to the portal station in Seoul. The club’s mood was quite downcast after realizing that our main goal, the Tears of Heaven, ended up being a dud.

“...Our car is waiting outside,” Chae Nayun weakly said.

There were a lot of people at the portal station, but I was certain that she was talking to me.

“...Okay,” I replied as nonchalantly as possible.

All of us exited the portal station and a limousine appeared just as Chae Nayun spoke. The driver opened the door for us and everyone hopped in.

“Just drop me and Yi Yeonghan at the bus stop nearby,” Kim Suho said.

“...Alright,” Chae Nayun weakly replied.

The limousine set off and the club members got off one by one as time passed. Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan were the first ones to get off at the bus stop. Shin Jonghak got off at Frost Sanctuary’s headquarters, Seo Youngji at the association, and lastly Yoo Yeonha at Essence of the Straits’ headquarters.

“I’ll be going now. Oh right, I already prepared a place for Evandel. Just let me know once she’s born,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“Ah, okay,” I replied.

Only the two of us remained after Yoo Yeonha got off.

The air in the limousine felt suffocating.

Chae Nayun simply looked out the window without saying anything. Her face and upper body looked relaxed, but I could see her legs trembling.

“...”

I quietly stared out the window as well.

Time passed and various sceneries flew by in front of my eyes before we finally reached the hospital. We were dropped off in front of the VIP ward located deep within the hospital grounds.

“Hey, this is our stop. Let’s go,” Chae Nayun said.

“Huh? Ah, alright.”

She walked ahead, but her legs looked quite unnatural for some reason. Anyways, I simply followed her.

We were able to pass through the heavy security simply with her identity until we finally reached Chae Jinyoon’s room.

“This is it. Do you want to go in?”

I nodded in response.

Chae Nayun told the guard to open the door, which instantly opened at her command.

It was a wide and brightly lit room. Chae Jinyoon was on a bed that was so lavishly decorated that it didn’t look like a hospital bed at all.

“Oppa... I’m here... This is... erm... my friend. His name is Kim Hajin...” Chae Nayun stole glances at me while introducing me.

I awkwardly smiled and walked over beside her.

“Hello, my name is Kim Hajin. I’m here to diagnose your symptoms,” I said.

“...”

“Can I go ahead?” I asked Chae Nayun.

She hesitated for a moment before nodding in approval.

I placed my hand on Chae Jinyoon's forehead.

"Hmm..."

However, I couldn't figure anything out. I couldn't find anything with my current level, so I was left with no choice but to use my stigma.

Shwaaaaa...

I infused stigma into my hand. It enhanced my gift before entering Chae Jinyoon's body. I continued until I used up all of stigma, but I failed to find a cure for his illness.

However...

"...What?" I asked.

Chae Nayun was suddenly beside me and looked like she was about to burst into tears at any moment while holding onto my arm.

"Hey, what are you doing?" I asked again.

"...You might kill him."

"Huh? What are you talking about?" I said with a laugh.

However, it didn't seem like Chae Nayun was joking. I stared at her mortified expression when a thought suddenly flashed in my head.

What if I did something bad to Chae Jinyoon in her previous life? No, then there was no way Chae Nayun would have feelings for me, right?

"Hey, no, I mean... a joke. Yes, that's right... I was just joking. Rather, did you find out anything?" Chae Nayun asked after immediately composing herself.

"Yeah, a little bit. The main problem is his heart," I said.

I failed to find the root of his illness, but this was probably enough.

“...Heart?”

“Yeah, what did the doctors say?”

Chae Nayun stole a glance at Chae Jinyoon before looking me in the eyes, “They said there’s nothing wrong with him.”

“...That’s what they would’ve probably said.”

Actually, there was nothing wrong with his heart itself. The problem was with how his heart was running right now. In short, his heart functions were all tangled up and in a mess.

I was certain there was a way to bring his heart back to normal. There was definitely a way if I could combine the Heart of Adaptation in me with various other medicinal ingredients... Yes, that would be worth a try.

Knock! Knock!

A vicious-looking bodyguard entered the room and said, “Milady, visiting hours for outsiders are over.”

Chae Nayun tried to shoo the bodyguard away, but I simply nodded and left the room.

“I’ll be going first,” I said.

“Huh? Ah, okay. Then I’ll bring you home,” Chae Nayun said.

“Nah, you stay here and spend more time with your brother...”

* * *

Chae Nayun was struggling after sending Kim Hajin away like that yesterday. She went online hoping to catch him in the game, but he never came online.

[X Man (Offline)]

“Haa... My heart hurts...” Chae Nayun let out a sigh after coming out of the game capsule.

She thought she would be fine since she lived longer than him, but she felt her heartstrings tugging as if her heart was throwing a tantrum.

She pondered if she should send him a message and say that it was just a joke to mess with him, but... that sounded too cowardly...

Ring! Ring!

Her smartwatch at her desk loudly rang to inform her that a message arrived.

Chae Nayun instantly shot up and ran to check her smartwatch.

[Hey, Chae Nayun.]

It was from Kim Suho.

Chae Nayun felt anger well up from inside of her. She was about to ignore the message and put her smartwatch down when...

[I'm going with Hajin to look for an item. Do you want to tag along?]

“...”

Chae Nayun's eyes shot wide open at the message.

Gulp!

She nervously gulped and thought:

‘It's still not over. There's still a lot of time for us to make memories together. At least six months or even a whole year if we take things slowly. Then I can simply confess again after we develop feelings for each other... ’

‘Well, he might hate me for doing this while being aware of the future. Or he could ask me how I knew about the future if he ever finds out... but worst of all, he could already be aware that I know the future... ’

‘However... I can’t help but feel selfish... I want to hold him in my arms someday. No, I want to hold him in my arms right now. He was the one that made me take up the sword, he was the one who brought salvation to oppa, and he was the reason that everything happened in my life... ’

‘So I’m not going to give up simply because I got rejected once. The only thing I can do now is to love him even more passionately than before...!’

[I’m going.]

Chae Nayun immediately replied and jumped online to start searching for things in a frenzy. Her fingers typed so fast that they started to become blurry.

[Summer Fashion]

[Female Hero Summer Fashion]

[Perfume Suggestion]

[Summer Dress?]

[Something other than a dress]

[What should I wear?]

[Blouse]

[Luxury Branded Blouse]

* * *

It was now mid-July, which was the peak of summer vacation.

I arrived at the East Sea harbor as promised and stared at Kim Suho in disbelief.

“Oh! You’re already here, Hajin?” Kim Suho said.

That bastard Kim Suho... Why was he smiling so brightly with Chae Nayun beside him?

“Oh, Kim Hajin is here! I was waiting for you,” Chae Nayun said with an awkward smile on her yacht.

“...”

However, something felt off about the entire thing. I wasn’t sure if it was because of the blinding sunlight or the scent of summer, but her squirming silhouette on the yacht deck looked quite... lovely.

“Heave-ho!” Chae Nayun hopped in front of me and smiled brightly.

Her smile was adorable and reminded me of a cartoon character from my previous world.

“I heard that you guys were going to some island, so I prepared a yacht. As for manning the yacht... I’m sure you can do it, right? Well, I just came to lend you the yacht. I don’t mind going home if you tell me that you don’t want me to tag along, but...” Chae Nayun said while squirming in her white blouse and blue shorts.

She looked innocent in her current fashion compared to her usual look.

I sighed and replied, “...Just come with us if you want. I can drive the yacht.”

“What?! Really?! Wait, no... Ehem... If you say you want me to tag along then I guess I have no choice...” Chae Nayun cleared her throat and did her best to suppress her smile.

I frowned and pinched Kim Suho on the waist as I found his sheepish smile to be quite annoying.

Kim Suho screamed, “Ack!” before stepping away from us.

“Then, let’s go,” I said.

All of us headed to the yacht. I stood at the helm after being forced to be the helmsman of the yacht.

Chae Nayun came beside me and said, “Wow, Kim Hajin is so good at driving!”

She rested her chin on my shoulder while mumbling nonsense. I mean... We didn’t even set sail yet...

I simply smirked in disbelief, but suddenly turned around. I looked at the forest behind the harbor.

I couldn’t sense anything from it, but... nobody’s going to come chasing after us, right?

“What’s wrong, Hajin?” Kim Suho asked.

I shook my head in response and replied, “No, it’s nothing... We’re setting sail now.”

Krwaaaa!

The yacht pierced through the surface of the water. The sun was shining brightly and made the water around us glimmer like jewels. Water splashed around us as if it was raining.

Kim Suho conjured a fishing rod with his mana and prepared to fish while Chae Nayun pretended to lose her balance and leaned against me.

She looked up at me and smiled brightly.

I tried my best to act indifferent, but... I felt a faint smile forming against my wishes.

Side Stories 69

Chae Nayun (24)

We arrived at the uninhabited, nameless island that was supposed to be used as the main stage for the final exam if things proceeded according to the original story.

We immediately went to search for the [Butterfly Sapling] somewhere on this island.

“There are quite a lot of monsters.”

“...Yeah, you’re right.”

However, the island was densely populated with monsters to the point that it was downright absurd. A monster popped up whenever we took a step and they were all at a level that was difficult for me to handle.

“They’ll be quite helpful for my training,” Kim Suho said as he easily disposed of the monsters.

A monster’s head would split in half whenever he smacked them with his stick (Misteltein).

“Yeah,” Chae Nayun agreed.

It was the same for her as she skillfully cut down the monsters with her sword, which flowed like water but struck like lightning. Well, she probably learned those skills from her previous life.

Anyways...

We marched on while facing battle after battle until night fell on us.

“Let’s rest for tonight,” I said after finding a suitable camping site.

However, Chae Nayun and Kim Suho simultaneously tilted their heads.

“Already?”

“I think we can keep going, no?”

“...We should preserve our stamina in preparation for any worst-case scenarios,” I replied.

The butterfly sapling was not an easy opponent, so resting was an absolute must. Yes, I wasn't asking to rest because I was tired or anything like that...

“Go and gather some firewood while I pitch the tent,” I said.

“Okay,” Chae Nayun and Kim Suho replied before venturing into the forest.

I started to pitch the tent I prepared in advance. As I was busy pitching the tent, a monster popped out from the bushes.

“What...”

This monster had a dark body that blended with the darkness and I immediately recognized it as the rank 1 monkey-type monster, darkie.

The sudden ambush was definitely not something I expected, but the monster was split in half before it could even reach me.

Chae Nayun's single strike slashed its body apart.

“No wonder I felt nervous for some reason...” she muttered while swinging the blood off of her sword as she emerged from the bushes. Then she said, “Hey, that bastard has been lurking around us for quite a while now.”

“Really...?”

“Yeah. Anyways, you owe me one,” Chae Nayun said as she gave me a hand.

I fell on my butt at the sudden ambush, so I grabbed her hand and got up.

“Thanks.”

“Good that you know. Here, the firewood,” Chae Nayun said as she placed down an armful of firewood.

“Alright...”

I used the firewood to light a campfire.

Crackle... Crackle... Crackle... Crackle...

The campfire burned brightly in the darkness.

I could see Chae Nayun across the dancing flames. She hugged her knees while staring at the fire.

Her hair was shoulder length and her blouse was stained with monster blood. I was busy staring at her appearance when she suddenly spoke.

“Hey.”

“...YeAh?! Ehem... Yeah, what?” I squeaked, but immediately cleared my throat.

Chae Nayun stared at me over the fire and continued, “You know... that thing I said last time...”

“...”

I didn’t respond. My silence seemed to have embarrassed or angered her as she grabbed a piece of firewood and crushed it to pieces.

“I’m not going to give up.”

Her voice sounded quite calm and I simply continued staring at her.

Then, I suddenly noticed something. Her face was flushed and her eyes seemed out of focus. I initially thought it was because of the campfire smoke, but a faint sweet smell was tickling my nose.

“Just you wait... just you wait...” she grumbled.

I recognized the scent of alcohol.

Chae Nayun pointed and looked at me with out-of-focus eyes before saying, “You! You won’t be able to live without me!”

“...”

I wasn’t sure if she was placing a curse on me or confessing again, but her actions just now made me certain.

This girl is drunk.

“Did you drink?”

“What are you talking about... hiccup!”

Chae Nayun started to hiccup.

I looked at the pouch hanging on her waist and found a bottleneck peeking out.

“...I drank a bit,” Chae Nayun said while awkwardly scratching the back of her neck.

“I thought cadets didn’t get drunk that easily?”

“I learned how to get drunk.”

“When did you learn something like that? You usually learn that after you graduate and get into a guild, no?”

I feigned ignorance and threw a seemingly harmless question. However, that question was aimed at finding out more about her regression.

Chae Nayun seemed taken aback by my question, but immediately thought of an excuse. "I'm quite talented, so it didn't take me long to learn it."

She muttered some stuff under her breath along the lines of, 'Yes... that's right... I'm talented... '

"I'm not a fan of people who drink and smoke... I mean, I barely managed to cut my own habit, but it's a hassle if someone around me keeps reminding me of it," I said.

"I can quit... that's not a problem... not at all..." Chae Nayun muttered with a serious look.

"..."

I simply stared at her.

Chae Nayun seemed to have felt my gaze and looked at me before quickly avoiding eye contact. She scratched her cheek in embarrassment.

"...W-What?"

"..."

"What's your problem?"

"..."

"Ah, why are you staring at me? I said, why are you staring!"

I burst into laughter. I tried my best to suppress it, but it came flooding out. It had been a while since something made me laugh this much.

Chae Nayun stared at me dumbfoundedly before laughing as well.

As our laughter spread into the darkness, Kim Suho finally appeared.

“Oh, what’s going on? What happened? What’s so funny?” he asked like a curious child.

I stopped laughing and shook my head, “Nothing.”

“Ah, fuck...” Chae Nayun grumbled and glared at Kim Suho.

Kim Suho tilted his head in confusion and asked with an innocent look, “What?”

“...You senseless bastard.”

“What did I do? Hey, why were you guys laughing?”

“Forget about it. Let’s just eat something,” I placed a grill over the campfire.

* * *

Kugugugu!

The butterfly sapling spread its dust all over the place before collapsing. Its dust contained powerful chemicals that made anyone who inhaled it fall asleep, but the party had prepared gas masks.

They gathered all of the dust and sat on the floor.

“Phew...”

The fight lasted for three hours. Kim Hajin was exhausted to the point of death while the vanguards of the fight, Kim Suho and Chae Nayun, looked quite tired as well.

They rested for a while.

“Ah... I’m dying... Alright, it’s time to split it between us,” Kim Hajin said as he divided the powder into three.

“I don’t need it. You guys can have it all,” Chae Nayun said.

“Shut up,” Kim Hajin snapped back.

In the end, she was left with her share of the butterfly dust and reluctantly accepted it.

Chae Nayun grumbled inwardly, ‘Ah, you don’t want to be indebted to me. Is that it?’

Kim Suho inspected the sparkling dust and asked, “What is this for, Hajin?”

“This dust will allow any equipment to reach its full potential. You can use it on that wooden stick of yours.”

“Oh right, I should probably do that,” Kim Suho said with a bright smile.

Meanwhile, Chae Nayun was still pouting and sulking.

“Let’s go back,” Kim Hajin said.

“Huh? Already? Why? Why don’t we rest for a day here?” Chae Nayun asked.

“Who knows what could happen if we dilly dally? I mean, it’s likely that treasure hunters will swarm this place in less than a day. The butterfly sapling is quite flashy and its mana waves would’ve probably reached Japan by now.”

“Tsk... Always acting so smart...”

“Just hurry up and follow me.”

Kim Hajin completely ignored Chae Nayun’s grumblings and started walking back. She was still pouting and sulking, but did as he said.

They soon reached the shore where their yacht was exactly as they left it. Kim Hajin used [Hacking] just in case to make sure there was nothing wrong with the yacht.

“Hmm... It looks good. Let’s hop on board.”

Fortunately, the yacht was alright with no signs of tampering. The three of them hopped onto the yacht.

“Alright, we’re setting sail now,” Kim Hajin said as he grabbed the steering wheel.

Kwaaaaa!

The yacht zipped through the waters.

Kim Suho sat in a corner and applied the butterfly sapling dust to Misteltein while Chae Nayun quietly sat beside Kim Hajin at the helm.

“...?”

A while passed when Chae Nayun suddenly sensed something. A cold sinister feeling made the hair at the back of her neck stand, but she didn’t have time to think about anything else.

She instinctively wrapped her arms around Kim Hajin and pulled him to the ground.

“What...?”

Chae Nayun’s adrenaline kicked in and time slowed for her. She looked towards the direction where her instincts warned her and saw something sharp ferociously flying towards Kim Hajin. She held him close and turned her body, so the danger would hit her instead.

She knew evading it was impossible, so she prepared herself and hoped that her aura would be able to block the incoming threat.

Pak!

...Nothing happened aside from the sound of a bubble popping.

“What the...?” Chae Nayun muttered while looking around her surroundings.

Her arms were still tightly wrapped around Kim Hajin. He tapped on her arms to tell her that he was getting suffocated.

“What was that just now...?” Chae Nayun muttered once again.

She released Kim Hajin and looked around her surroundings, but there was nothing in the water around them for someone to use as a platform and launch such an attack.

“Keuk! Keuh! Keuh! Ah... Keeeeek!” Kim Hajin gasped for breath after finally being let go.

Chae Nayun was still inspecting their surroundings for the culprit.

‘Magic.’

She was a hundred percent certain that it was a colorless, odorless, and formless magic that perfectly hid its killing intent. However, the magic disappeared when it came into contact with her as if nothing happened.

Various suspicions popped up in her head.

‘First, it could’ve been a homing-type magic, but that’s highly unlikely as it disappeared the moment it struck me. Besides, there’s no way that I wouldn’t be able to recognize that kind of magic when I’m so sensitive to mana.’

‘Second, maybe they were just trying to scare us? That’s highly unlikely too as they perfectly hid their presence. A magician capable of something like that was just trying to scare us? No way, they would’ve used flashy explosion magic if they were trying to scare us.’

“Then, the most likely explanation would be... The assassin was aiming for Kim Hajin, but they withdrew their mana when I protected him. I have no idea who was behind it, but I’m certain they were after Kim Hajin. They had no plans to harm anyone else aside from Kim Hajin, especially me... but why would such a skilled assassin come after Kim Hajin? For what?”

“Hey, Kim Hajin,” Chae Nayun looked at him.

Her eyes were sharp as a predator and she looked dead serious.

Kim Hajin was still gasping for air, but immediately turned serious when he saw Chae Nayun’s eyes.

Chae Nayun lowered her voice and whispered, “Someone’s after you.”

Exactly three seconds later...

“There was something just now! Be careful, Hajin!” Kim Suho shouted.

Chae Nayun and Kim Suho immediately jumped and surrounded Kim Hajin to protect him.

* * *

We arrived at the East Sea harbor.

Kim Suho went home first in a limousine prepared by Chae Nayun. I was thinking of going back to Cube, but...

“I said you can’t!” Chae Nayun vehemently protested.

I stopped walking and looked back at her.

Her face flushed red as she shouted, “Cube is dangerous during the summer vacations! I can’t accept that!”

“...”

I ignored her and continued walking, but I looked back again after a while to find Chae Nayun still following me.

“You heard Kim Suho as well, right? There was some kind of magic after you.”

“That’s why I’ll protect you. I must protect you!”

“It’s dangerous!”

Chae Nayun shouted a line every time I looked back.

“Hey...” I let out a sigh.

Of course, I felt the magic they were talking about at the yacht, albeit faintly. However, I couldn’t understand why she was overreacting...

“...!”

Then, my eyes shot wide open as a thought flashed across my mind.

Don’t tell me... What if... What if I died in her previous life? And what if Chae Nayun and I were lovers in that world?

It was highly unlikely, but everything would fall into place if that was the case. Still, it didn’t make sense that Chae Nayun would worry about me harming Chae Jinyoon. Yeah, I found it impossible that she would fall for someone like me...

“I can just inform Cube about what happened, right?” I said.

“No, not at all. Who’s going to believe you? Also, I’ll just wait it out if I was the assassin. You don’t know much about assassination, right? Assassination is not something done at the spur of the moment, but it’s a fight of attrition that lasts for a fucking long time,” Chae Nayun replied.

“You’re talking as if you’ve been an active assassin for a few years.”

“Well, that is...”

Chae Nayun suddenly got tongue-tied and started to mumble, ‘Err... uhm... uhh...’

She continued making such sounds with her mouth open. It looked like she was trying to come up with something, but continued to be in that state even after five, ten, fifteen seconds passed.

In the end, I had no choice but to change the subject.

“Let’s say you’re right. Where am I going to stay then?”

Then Chae Nayun finally spoke, “Who knows? First things first... it has to be somewhere I can protect you. You have a house in Seoul, right? I think that’ll be perfect.”

“What about your place? It’s wide and there are a lot of rooms, right?”

“My place is a no-go. It’s off-limits to outsiders.”

“I saw on the news that people frequently visit it...”

“That’s not our house. It’s just an extension of it.”

“So what I’m saying is... I can just stay at that extension, right?”

“...”

Chae Nayun closed her mouth and glared at me.

Grit... Grit...

I could hear her gritting her teeth, but I didn’t back down.

Our battle of wits continued for a while until she finally spoke first, “My dad won’t allow it.”

“...”

That was something I couldn't argue with.

* * *

I had no choice but to bring Chae Nayun to the apartment I stayed in before enrolling at Cube.

"Oh... Such a place exists?" Chae Nayun muttered while looking around in amazement.

The look on her face seemed to say something along the lines of, 'This entire house is smaller than my bathroom,' or something like that.

She finally sat on the floor and said, "Anyways, I'll protect you until vacation ends... Well, it's not necessarily going to be safe just because classes resume, but I'll still protect you. Don't worry!"

"...Alright," I replied with a nod.

I had no idea why I was a target, but it was true that something happened onboard the yacht. Besides, I could use this opportunity to observe her nearby and see if my theory was correct or not.

"Alright, now you're being a good boy... Urghhhh!" Chae Nayun said before stretching her arms. She plopped on the ground before continuing, "Be grateful that a great swordsman like me is protecting you. Do you understand?"

"..."

"Hohoho!" Chae Nayun let out a sinister laughter before closing her eyes. Exactly five minutes passed when she suddenly stood up.

"...What's wrong?" I asked.

"Hmm..."

Chae Nayun ignored me and continued pressing on the floor with her feet.

“What is it? Tell me.”

“Well... don’t you have... a bed? I can’t sleep without a bed. My body’s quite stiff after camping for two nights... Actually, I didn’t get a wink of sleep because it was quite uncomfortable. I’ve been awake for sixty hours now...”

“...”

Her mannerism was like a construction worker, but her habits were even more refined than a noble lady.

“Follow me,” I led her to my bedroom against my wishes.

My bedroom was quite small. It was barely large enough to fit a bed and a closet.

“Oh, was this the bedroom door? It was so small that I thought it was a storage or something,” Chae Nayun nonchalantly commented.

She walked over to my bed and was about to jump on it when she froze and looked at me.

“Why? Aren’t you sleepy?” I asked.

“No... it’s not that... it’s just... erm...”

She slowly laid down on the bed and wrapped herself in the blanket. She squirmed a few times before suddenly standing up.

“Wow... it reeks of cigarettes...” she said.

“Oh... right...”

I completely forgot that I used to smoke packs while in bed. That was just four months ago, so the scent of my depression and devastation was still fresh there.

“Move. I’ll clean it for you,” I said.

It was quite embarrassing, so I activated stigma to immediately clean it up.

Side Stories 70

Chae Nayun (25)

“Hiik... Hiii... Hihi...”

It would’ve been quite a peaceful afternoon without Chae Nayun’s annoying laughter. She was smiling and laughing like an idiot while watching a show on her smartwatch.

“Hahaha! This is so funny! But why is it so funny? It’s so silly! Hahaha!”

Meanwhile, I was looking up information related to the story setting on my laptop to narrow down the identity of the assassin coming after me. However, I couldn’t find anyone who might harbor a grudge even when I factored in Kim Chundong’s life.

“Phew...”

I sighed in frustration when my smartwatch suddenly rang.

[Bbb... aazz... wwqllppp...]

It came from Jin Sahyuk.

I stole a glance at Chae Nayun for some strange reason before quickly replying, ‘How is your wound?’

It seemed like Jin Sahyuk already lost her seat as the novel’s final boss. Thanks to that, I had no idea who the final boss would be, but it wasn’t that bad. I could possibly ask Jin Sahyuk for help from now on.

“Hey, Kim Hajin. What are you doing?” Chae Nayun asked as she craned her neck towards me while lying on the sofa.

I immediately accessed the Hero Community Forum and replied, "I'm browsing the community forum."

"Ah, okay. By the way, what's your ID there? I have a lot of points. Let me give you some."

"Forget about it."

"Hey, it's really good if you have a lot of points!"

Chae Nayun reached towards me before falling off the sofa. She immediately broke her fall by planting her hand and twisting in mid-air to land on her feet. Then, she rested her chin on my shoulder and peeked at my laptop screen.

"Your ID is Extra... Hey, why is everything extra for you?"

"Aren't you going home?"

I shrugged Chae Nayun's chin off of my shoulder.

She pouted and pressed random keys on my laptop. "I already told you... Do I have to explain again?"

"No, I know. Can't I just ask Kim Suho though?"

"No, the opponent is stronger than you think. You will just be putting Kim Suho in harm's way like that."

"Then what about you?"

"The assassin isn't after me. No, it's more accurate to say that they can't kill me."

It did make sense since Kim Suho wasn't invincible, but Chae Nayun's family was definitely invincible. They were one of the most influential families not only in Korea, but the entire world. Even those in Baekdu Mountain were affiliated with them.

“Then, don’t just laze around doing nothing. Go and use your family’s network of informants to find out who ordered the hit on me or something.”

“Oh, you’re right... Yes... you’re right...”

Chae Nayun’s eyes shot wide open as she rubbed her chin and started to ponder something.

Yes, it would be possible for her to find out the culprit if she used her knowledge from her previous...

“Don’t tell me... I hope it’s not my grandfather...”

“W-What?”

“Ah, it’s probably not. My grandfather isn’t interested in you at all. It’s more likely that...”

Chae Nayun looked at me and seemed to wonder if she could tell me what was on her mind.

“Say it.”

“No... I’ll tell you later...”

In the end, she swallowed what she wanted to say. I didn’t bother pressing her any further as she left to watch TV.

“Wow, I’ve been watching this show for days...” she nonchalantly tried to lean her head on my shoulder again.

I responded by avoiding her and standing.

“Ack!”

Chae Nayun fell head-first to the floor and glared at me. I ignored her glare and waltzed into the kitchen.

“Things didn’t go according to plan?”

Two people stood on the lawn of Kim Hajin’s apartment complex and looked up at a unit on the tenth floor.

“Yeah, it went bad.”

They initially thought it would be an easy mission, but Chae Nayun clung to the guy and cranked up the mission’s difficulty.

“Do we have to kill both of them in the end?” one of the two, a woman, asked.

The other one, a man, glared at her and said, “Are you crazy? We won’t be able to take a single step in this world if we do that.”

“But boss said it too. It’s fine if we kill both of them if we don’t see an opportunity to kill the boy alone.”

“That was a bluff...”

“Are you saying boss was bluffing?”

The man no longer replied.

Both of them were magic specialists. They weren’t at a level where they could raze a city, but they were definitely strong enough to raze a village.

Regardless of how powerful they were, both of them didn’t dare to be at odds with Chae Joochul. Still, they didn’t want to disobey their boss’ command.

All they had to do was quietly kill that boy called Kim Hajin...

“Ah, it seems like someone’s on their way here,” the man said.

The woman nodded in response.

A ferocious presence emerged from the forest behind the apartment lawn. The duo instinctively knew this hooded figure was powerful.

“You guys... don’t seem as hopeless as those rabbles they sent last time...” the hooded figure said.

The hooded figure’s cold voice provoked them. The duo and the hooded figure stood at a safe distance while assessing each other.

“You’re an expert too... What is that guy to you that you’re always protecting him?” the woman asked in disbelief.

The man seemed to share the same sentiments as he nodded in agreement.

Both of them finally understood that there was no way that sly geezer would give a huge reward for such an easy mission like this in the first place.

“I’ll give you a choice. I might spare you since I’m interested in hearing your story,” Jin Sahyuk asked.

She was genuinely curious why they were trying to kill Kim Hajin. It seemed like they couldn’t stand him.

“...”

“But if you refuse.”

The environment around them suddenly changed without warning after a single wave of Jin Sahyuk’s hand. It felt like the sky was crumbling and being replaced by the darkness she conjured.

“I will kill you.”

The man and woman looked at each other before smiling, “What are you gonna do?”

“Well, I guess you leave me no choice...” Jin Sahyuk said as she prepared for combat.

The duo gathered their mana and prepared to fight too.

Kwang!

Both of them simultaneously kicked off the ground, but their target wasn't Jin Sahyuk. They suddenly smashed their heads into the ground like a pair of moles.

“...?”

Jin Sahyuk was completely caught off guard and blinked a few times. She sensed that they were deep underground and made a run for it.

“Hmm...”

Jin Sahyuk remained all alone on the lawn and stared up at the apartment.

“So that's where Kim Hajin is staying...”

She stood in the same spot for a while before looking at her smartwatch.

[How is your wound?]

His message sounded quite polite.

Jin Sahyuk continued staring at the message and muttered, “...You're not my subject.”

‘However, his presence is definitely within you somewhere. I'm sure you're aware of that person in the memories that I recovered.’

Jin Sahyuk sent a reply.

[Ssss eee yyyyyy ttwww oooo wkkksss...]

What she wanted to say was, ‘See you in two weeks.’

* * *

A week somehow passed as I lived with Chae Nayun the entire time. She slept only three hours a day and stood watch over me, or so she claimed.

She followed me when I went to buy groceries, went to work out, watched a movie, and even when I went out to eat.

I could sense that this familiarity was slowly starting to get dangerous.

“Ah, that really hit the spot!” Chae Nayun smiled in satisfaction after we finished eating dinner.

I intently stared at her before getting up. She got up too and followed me with the plates and utensils.

“Hey, let’s go watch a movie tomorrow again.”

“...You said there’s an assassin.”

“It’s fine as long as I’m with you.”

“There’s nothing good showing these days.”

Chae Nayun grumbled and ran to the sofa after I flat-out rejected her. Then she started doing breathing exercises.

Hoo... Hoo... Hoo... Hoo...

Her breathing exercise was quite peculiar. It worked in an environment that didn’t have much mana like my house. The air glowed with a faint blue hue and a faint trace of mana circulated around her whenever she breathed.

I observed the mana circulating around her nose and mouth before snickering. A grain of rice clung for its dear life on her cheek. I quietly reached out to pluck the grain of rice from her cheek, but she suddenly opened her eyes and stared at me.

“...”

Our faces were inches away from each other.

Chae Nayun suddenly let out a hot exhale and closed her eyes, which made the situation even more tense. I had no idea what she was doing, but I could feel my consciousness slowly drifting as if something else was taking over my body.

I... continued staring at her wet lips...

Then, I managed to snap out of it and took a few steps back.

“What the...” Chae Nayun opened her eyes and grumbled in disappointment when nothing happened after a while.

“Ah, prepare your stuff so we can go out for our morning training session tomorrow,” I stood up and tried to sound as nonchalant as possible.

I peeked at her while walking to the room and saw...

Chae Nayun seemed downcast and disappointed with her arms wrapped around her head.

* * *

I trained every morning with Chae Nayun. We started by hiking up a mountain and added more exercises as time passed.

Kududududu!

I pulled the trigger of my silenced machine gun. The bullets ferociously flew towards my target, Chae Nayun.

However, Chae Nayun easily swung her sword and sliced all of the bullets in half.

“How’s that?!” she triumphantly exclaimed.

The result was... not a single bullet managed to hit Chae Nayun. It was an amazing growth rate judging from how ten out of thirty bullets struck her just four days ago.

“You’re good...”

“Right? I think my skills are slowly coming back!”

“What skills?”

“...”

Chae Nayun seemed to lag a bit as if she was still buffering before unleashing a barrage of words, “Ah, once upon a time I studied how to wield a sword at Baekdu Mountain. I trained really hard that time you know, so I learned a thing or two back then. Geez, I wonder if someone like you would know about it?”

“...Pfft!”

I couldn’t hold back my laughter.

She was quite amazing and unique in many ways.

“What? Why are you laughing?”

“No, it’s nothing. Let’s start making our way down now.”

My hand reached out for her without me even realizing it. I realized my mistake and was about to withdraw my hand, but she didn’t miss the opportunity and quickly grabbed it.

“Sure!”

She smiled brightly like a child and tightly gripped my hand as if to say she wouldn't let go.

I mean... she really didn't have to grip so hard since I had no intention of pulling away...

I couldn't help but think that something in me was slowly changing.

* * *

The end was in sight. Chae Nayun could feel cracks forming in the fortress walls that Kim Hajin surrounded himself with.

'You might be smart and clever, but how are you going to reject me?' Chae Nayun thought.

At the same time, she could feel herself getting more immersed in him as the days went by. First, it started with 'I like you,' but she could feel something stronger as her present emotions and pre-regression emotions mixed.

If she was to put it into words, it felt like she was sinking to the depths of a bottomless ocean whenever she was with him.

Chae Nayun felt worried about being so engrossed with him, but didn't want to stop feeling this way at the same time. She felt happy every day and felt like the day wasn't long enough when night came.

Of course, she wasn't so drunk on her emotions that she lost sight of what was important. She already placed a request to find the assassin's identity. She even personally used her name, Chae Nayun, to send a request to Baekdu Mountain.

However, the most concerning thing right now was...

"Classes will be resuming next week."

Summer vacation would end next week. Not next week Friday, but next week Monday.

Chae Nayun bit her nails while looking at the calendar. She felt extremely anxious about going back to Cube, but Kim Hajin seemed calm about it.

“Hey, Kim Hajin... Why don’t you just drop out and live with me?”

“Nope, I can’t do that.”

He instantly shot down her offer.

Chae Nayun shook her head, ‘Why are vacations from Cube so short? Ah, this is really annoying... Do cadets have no rights at all? Are we a bunch of machines?’

When she was busy cursing Cube...

Ding... Dong!

The doorbell rang.

Kim Hajin was about to answer the door, but Chae Nayun ran and stopped him.

“Shh! I’ll go.”

“...Sure.”

Chae Nayun used the intercom to check who was outside. The visitor looked highly suspicious with their face covered by a hood.

“Huh?” Kim Hajin muttered after seeing the hood on the intercom display.

“Why? You know that person?”

“Yeah, I do. I was about to contact her just now,” Kim Hajin said before he went to the door and opened it.

Chae Nayun ran again and stood between Kim Hajin and the hooded visitor outside the door.

“...Who are you?” Chae Nayun asked first.

However, the hooded visitor ignored her. Instead, the visitor looked over Chae Nayun’s shoulder and asked Kim Hajin, “Your girlfriend?”

“No, it’s not like that...” Kim Hajin replied.

“What the hell...? You’re a girl?” Chae Nayun frowned after hearing the visitor’s bothersome voice.

The hooded female entered the house, closed the door, and waltzed into the living room.

“Who’s that?” Chae Nayun sharply asked.

Kim Hajin was about to respond when he suddenly thought of a test and maintained his silence.

The two of them went to the living room too. They found Jin Sahyuk sitting in the living room as if she owned the place.

Jin Sahyuk looked at Kim Hajin and Chae Nayun before taking her hood off.

“Ah!” Chae Nayun exclaimed as her eyes shot wide open. She shouted the answer to Kim Hajin’s test, “Jin Sahyuk!”

Not only did she shout the name, but it sounded like a growl with a hint of hostility.

Jin Sahyuk tilted her head in confusion, “How do you know my name?”

That simple question sent Chae Nayun into a panic.

“...”

Kim Hajin observed Chae Nayun for a few seconds and decided to change the subject as she descended into the same charade she already pulled a few times.

“Why are you here?”

“I told you I would come and find you, right?”

“...I don’t think anyone in this world would be able to decipher the message you sent.”

Jin Sahyuk stared at Kim Hajin.

He noticed that her eyes looked quite calm today for some reason.

Jin Sahyuk ignored the statue in the room called Chae Nayun and continued, “Kim Hajin. You look like my subject in the past. No, I should probably tell you about my past before we discuss this.”

It was then.

Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!

My smartwatch rang.

“As I was saying, in the past I came from...”

Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!

“So...”

*Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!
Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!
Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!*

The smartwatch continued ringing to the point that it was impossible to continue the conversation.

Jin Sahyuk gritted her teeth and a vein bulged on her temple as Chae

Nayun and I checked our smartwatches that were causing a ruckus.

[Hey, what are you doing?]

[There's a news article about you!]

[Hey, Kim Hajin. Is this true?]

[What the hell are you, Kim Hajin?]

*[Wow! This gossip is the bomb! It's all a mistake, right? How did you...?
;;]*

[Kim Hajin! Is this true?!]

[Kekeke! Hey, look at this! Kekekeke! You and Chae Nayun! Kekekeke!]

He was receiving a flurry of messages from numerous cadets, even from ones he had never met before.

Meanwhile, things were much more serious for Chae Nayun.

Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!

She was not only getting bombarded with messages from cadets, but even her friends and family were sending her messages to the point that her smartwatch rang numerous times every second.

[Hey, look at this news article. I'll send you the link.]

Thankfully, Kim Hajin was able to read the news article everyone was talking about after someone sent him the link. It turned out that there were numerous articles.

[Rising Star Cadet, Chae Nayun is currently living together with another cadet?]

[Cube Star, Chae Nayun's lover is a Rank 934th cadet...?]

[A modern tale of romance! Going against social differences!]

[Shocking! Chae Nayun, a minor, is living with another minor!]

Kim Hajin read the articles with trembling eyes before muttering in a defeated voice, "...Is this how they assassinate people these days?"

In other words, he was getting socially assassinated.

On the other hand, Chae Nayun seemed a bit agitated. However, she showed a completely different reaction.

"Hmm... Yes, they must be trying to separate us. Well, it's not a bad plan. I'll give them that..."

No, in fact, she seemed satisfied by the social assassination that Kim Hajin was suffering.

Chae Nayun seemed content while Kim Hajin looked completely dead. Between them was Jin Sahyuk observing their opposite reactions with interest.

Side Stories 71

Chae Nayun (26)

We put aside Jin Sahyuk's story and focused on quelling the situation. After all, we needed to prevent this from blowing out of proportion.

— Breaking News! Rumors say that the precious child of Daehyun, also known as the rising star of Cube, Chae Nayun has been discovered to be living with her partner...

"What should we do?" Chae Nayun asked.

The news already made it to television.

"What do you mean what should we do? You should go home for now."

"What? Why should I go home? Also, what are you going to do if the assassin shows up?"

"I'll be fine if I'm with her," I replied while pointing at the sofa.

Jin Sahyuk was comfortably sleeping on the sofa. She seemed quite tired and was already snoring.

Chae Nayun frowned and retorted, "Ah, are you kidding me? No, I can't agree with this. She could be the assassin for all we know!"

"Then she would have probably killed me as soon as she got here."

"Forget about it. We're the losers if we separate now! I can't do that!" Chae Nayun exclaimed before switching her smartwatch back on.

Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!

We were used to the alarms by now and it no longer bothered us. She checked a few of her messages and suddenly flinched after reading one.

I used [Hacking] to see the message.

[Is it true?]

It came from her father.

“First things first... let’s say living together is a misunderstanding and we’re just dating.”

I furrowed my brows at her words, “Do we have to?”

“They have countless pictures of us together. Besides, think about it this way. Dating and living together are two completely different things. Let’s just say that we’re dating for now. Then we can explain that we had no choice after we catch the mastermind behind the assassination. Also... just in case... if you change your mind later... we can continue being a couple...”

“Shut up,” I snapped back and stood up to check the calendar.

Only four days left before our vacation ended. I knew we were short on time, but we were really short on time.

“Hmm...” I started to think.

First, I looked at Jin Sahyuk sound asleep and snoring on the sofa.

Chae Nayun followed my gaze and asked, “Right, what do you plan to do with her?”

“Beats me...”

I knew what Jin Sahyuk wanted. There was a high probability that it had something to do with Kim Chundong, but I had no idea if she just wanted to confirm something or if she wanted full closure.

“Let’s just monitor her for now.”

Jin Sahyuk still had value.

Then she suddenly shot up, “Waaaaah!”

“Whoa, that scared me.”

Jin Sahyuk looked at me and Chae Nayun after waking up with a blast. She haughtily scoffed before saying, “I don’t think it’s the right time, so I’ll be heading back for today. I’ll be waiting for you, so you better show your face later.”

To be honest, I had no idea what she was talking about.

Jin Sahyuk opened the window and jumped out.

Whiiiiik!

Her silhouette flew away like a bird and descended at a great speed before turning into a dot and disappearing from view.

I stood dumbfoundedly with Chae Nayun after seeing Jin Sahyuk’s flashy exit.

* * *

Summer vacation finally ended and it was time to return to Cube. A huge crowd of reporters waited at the portal station, so the place had to be barricaded. We had to take a boat to Cube instead.

It took us two hours from the East Sea to reach Cube. We could tell from afar that Cube was crowded as well. A ton of cadets waited for us at the portal station, which forced us to disembark like a pair of smugglers and clandestinely make our way to the Pharmacy Club.

Ddreuk...

We sneaked through the hallways and safely reached our clubroom.

Then we opened the door and found the rest of the club members waiting for us as promised.

Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Yeonghan, and even Rachel were there. All of them looked at us with eyes demanding an explanation.

“So, you’re finally here,” Yoo Yeonha said with her arms crossed over her chest.

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan looked naive as usual while Shin Jonghak openly expressed his discomfort. Meanwhile, Rachel watched in awe as if she found the entire thing amazing.

“So, what happened is...” Chae Nayun sat on a sofa and began explaining.

I followed suit and sat on the sofa.

“Pfft! Pfft... Huehuehue... Pffaaaaah...!”

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan did their best to suppress their laughter.

“Hey, can you guys shut up? Just listen to me first. It’s not a happy story as you make it out to be. So what happened is... as you might be aware too, Kim Suho,” Chae Nayun started explaining.

Kim Suho’s smile disappeared and a serious expression replaced it as Chae Nayun talked about the incident that happened after we left the island.

“So that’s what happened... Some strong fella is aiming for this guy, but that fella seems to be wary of hurting me. That’s why I had no choice but to stay with this guy.”

“Hmm... I see... Assassination attempt you say...” Yoo Yeonha muttered.

She easily understood the entire situation and rubbed her chin in thought.

I had a strange feeling that she knew something about this situation.

“Ha... What a mess... do you really have to protect that guy even if it tarnishes your reputation?” Shin Jonghak gritted his teeth and asked.

Chae Nayun glared at him and seemed to say, ‘You got a problem?’ Then she replied, “I’m doing it because I want to. Why? Is there a problem?”

“I don’t understand why you would do that!” Shin Jonghak retorted.

The atmosphere was starting to get tense, but Yi Yeonghan laughed and stood up to diffuse the situation.

“Hey, hey, shouldn’t you have told us if something like that happened? What did you hope to achieve alone? I mean, what are friends for, right?”

“All of you will be in danger if I didn’t do it. Our opponent is no joke.”

Shin Jonghak seemed to disagree and stormed out of the room. His temper flared for the first time in a long while.

Right after he stormed out, a bright light shone from my chest. A gentle breeze slowly spun faster and faster until it became a whirlwind around me.

Everyone was shocked and I knew very well why.

“Is it magic? Kim Hajin! Kim Hajin!”

“It’s not, so shut up.”

“Ugh...”

Chae Nayun screamed and tried to cling onto me, but I shoved her face back. I took out the small seed in my breast pocket.

The light and wind were coming out from the cracks forming on the seed.

“Ah, this is...”

“No way...”

It was the long-awaited birth of Evandel. All of the club members stood flabbergasted at what was going on.

The seed fully opened and a life form appeared from it.

“Oh...”

“Heup!”

All of us gasped and held our breaths.

It was an adorable child who looked exactly like Rachel. Her mana spread all over the room as she curiously inspected her surroundings. I didn’t dare think anything in this world would be more adorable than this little girl innocently blinking at us.

“...Fwah!”

The child breathed out before smiling and turning to us.

“Kyah!”

She looked at me with an adorable smile and turned to Rachel.

The little girl smiled even brighter before exclaiming, “It’s me!”

* * *

We renovated the clubroom into Evandel’s temporary residence and she also needed a guardian.

“But can you make sure we won’t get caught? I mean, you’ll have to be here the entire time, you know?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

She seemed quite concerned. Chae Nayun and Rachel also shared her sentiment.

“It’ll be fine,” I confidently replied.

I looked at Evandel and asked, “Now, Evandel. What should you do when someone suddenly comes in?”

“Like this!” she exclaimed before transforming into a puppy.

She turned into a Pomeranian with flowing golden fur. Everyone in the clubroom froze after she turned into a puppy.

“Cute...”

“Ah...”

Rachel seemed a bit dazed as she approached Evandel and hugged her.

Evandel dug her face into Rachel’s chest and giggled, “Hehe, did Evandel do a good job?”

“Yes, you did good, Evandel,” Rachel replied and started spinning in place.

The two of them seemed to be in a world of their own as they spun like a top.

“...Hey, Kim Hajin,” Chae Nayun pulled my sleeve as I watched them spinning.

I looked at her, “What?”

“No... it’s nothing.” She smiled and asked, “Should we go train?”

“Do you think that’s even possible? We’re going to get swarmed by people in three seconds.”

I looked at Evandel and wondered how someone could be that adorable... but Chae Nayun stood in front of me and blocked my vision. I tried to move so I could look at Evandel, but Chae Nayun kept pestering me.

“Hey, what’s your problem...?” I grumbled.

“Let’s go train. Let’s go.”

She continued pestering me and even started to pull my arm. Of course, our massive difference in strength left me no choice as she dragged me away.

“Hey, wait a minute, Evandel! I... Evandel...”

“Hajin, have fun!”

“See, even Evandel is telling you to go.”

If Chae Nayun was an elephant, then I was a monkey. There was no way that I, the monkey, would be able to break free from the elephant’s grip.

I was helplessly dragged to the shooting range like a ragdoll.

* * *

The first day of classes.

Every pair of eyes in the classroom darted towards me when I entered. I could tell that they were looking at me inquisitively.

Silence descended in the entire room as they watched me walk to my seat. Then they whispered among themselves.

“Wow, it’s really amazing. Did he really land Chae Nayun? How did someone like him get someone like her? But Chae Nayun can be quite the handful... Yeah, I agree. That Kim Hajin must be good at receiving whatever shit she throws at him. Well, he is smart and composed. Is it because Chae Nayun is dumb?"

The gossip instantly disappeared after Chae Nayun entered the room and sat beside me.

"Phew... It's quite nerve-wracking, right?" Chae Nayun said as she insensitively leaned on my shoulder.

I tried to push her away, but it was already too late as the room erupted in whispering once again.

"Can't you just stay still...?"

"What? I'm staying still, aren't I?"

"..."

I gave up on debating with her and opened my book.

Our first class was the [Theory of Body and Mana], so I browsed through the book in preparation. Professor Kim Soohyuk entered as soon as the clock struck eight.

"It's good to see all of you again. I hope you enjoyed your vacation," Kim Soohyuk greeted the cadets.

I had no idea if he knew about our scandal or not, but there was nothing special about his demeanor. He went on to tell us that it would only get harder from now on. We had to do our best in both theory and practical tests. We would have to achieve a perfect balance to become a good hero, etc.

"Also, I will announce the new rankings."

He acted quite strange in the sense that he placed great emphasis on things none of us cared about before nonchalantly delivering the news that all of us wanted to hear.

“Now... don’t get too caught up in your rankings and continue to do your best,” Kim Soohyuk said before he taped a large piece of paper on the board and left.

All of the cadets shot up and ran towards the paper.

“Wow, Kim Hajin. What’s gotten into you? Rank 401st? Your rank doubled!” Chae Nayun said while tapping my shoulder.

“Yeah, I guess...”

1. Kim Suho

2. Shin Jonghak

3. Rachel

4. Chae Nayun

5. Shen Yuan

...

...

8. Yoo Yeonha

9. Yi Yeonghan

...

...

...

401. Kim Hajin

“Alright, get back to your seats!”

The theory professor entered and the cadets dispersed. All of them returned to their seats with different looks on their faces.

It seemed that the scandal between me and Chae Nayun had been wiped from their minds.

“So, there was a big incident recently, right? I was surprised after hearing about it.”

However, that imbecile known as a professor just had to bring it up again. Everyone’s eyes darted to me and Chae Nayun.

“Hahaha! I think it’s a great synergy if Hajin can use his brains and lead Chae Nayun in her studies, but dating so openly is ill-advised and could lead to penalties. I suggest you pretend to break up for a while. Haha!”

Everyone, including Chae Nayun, laughed at the imbecile’s joke except for me. I simply tapped my mechanical pencil on my open book.

“Then... let’s do ten pages today since all of you just got back from vacation.”

“Booooooo! Booooooo!”

The cadets jeered, but the professor didn’t seem to care at all.

Thus, our first class began after returning to Cube.

* * *

The mere ten pages the theory professor gave us took nearly one hundred fifty minutes to complete. All of the cadets were in a daze after the mental torture they just underwent.

Our practical class for today was [Improving Mana Control]. It was a class where cadets used their mana under the supervision of an instructor and a magician.

“Hello, everyone. It’s been a while. I heard that there was a huge incident over the break...” Kim Hojun said while looking at us.

I had a feeling that this was going to be everyone’s one-liner before classes started for at least a week, and I was barely able to suppress the sigh welling up inside of me.

“I hope that both of you are prepared for the consequences?” Kim Hyojun said.

He and the rest of the cadets broke into laughter.

“Hahaha!”

Then, he went back to looking serious and continued, “Anyways, I will introduce a new instructor today. Magician Lee Jinjun was supposed to be your instructor, but he unfortunately got injured. We have requested another magician in his stead. This person has a stellar track record and career, so please give a round of applause to welcome her!” Kim Hyojun exclaimed.

A magician wearing a hood appeared in the sky and all of the cadets started clapping.

Clap! Clap! Clap! Clap!

She skillfully landed on the ground and pulled down her hood.

“Wow! Whoa! Woot!”

The male cadets cheered after seeing her face.

Her black hair was tied up in a ponytail and her eyes were as fierce as a predator. Our instructor for today was a tremendous beauty who gave off the scent of the wild.

“H-Huh...?” Kim Suho muttered and trembled.

Chae Nayun’s eyes shot wide open too.

“Nice to meet you... My name is Jin Sahyuk.”

I was surprised as well, but soon understood what was going on. Jin Sahyuk certainly did say that we would meet again soon. I just never imagined that we would meet in this way.

“I am your instructor for today,” Jin Sahyuk said as she looked over at me, Chae Nayun, and Kim Suho. She flashed an ominous smile and added, “It won’t be that easy, so you guys better brace yourself.”

Side Stories 72

Chae Nayun (27)

Jin Sahyuk's class could only be described as extreme. It was pretty obvious that the class was [Improving Mana Control], but Jin Sahyuk was sending the cadets flying left and right with her mana.

She would probably justify her actions by saying, 'I'm doing this to improve your resistance', but there was no way any of the cadets could withstand her attacks. Of course, that was excluding Kim Suho and Chae Nayun.

In the end, Jin Sahyuk concluded the class after razing the entire field we stood on.

"...She's a crazy bitch," Chae Nayun grumbled in disbelief after returning to the Pharmacy Club room.

Kim Suho, Yi Yeonghan, and Shin Jonghak were absent due to classes. Even our supervisor, Seo Youngji, was absent for the entire week due to some circumstances.

The Pharmacy Club would have a substitute supervisor come in next week. As of now, they were left to fend for themselves without supervision.

President Chae got up from the sofa and walked to the board, "Then... shall we think about what the club will do from now on?"

She tried to decide on the club's future activities, but there was no way that was possible because of Evandel.

Kim Hajin, Yoo Yeonha, and Rachel were all captivated by Evandel. Truth be told, even Chae Nayun couldn't help but keep stealing glances at her while trying to speak in front. It seemed like she was suppressing her desire to run up to the little girl and start rubbing her hair.

In the end, she couldn't win against her desires and ran up to pinch Evandel's cheeks.

Kim Hajin stepped in and stopped her, "Don't bully her."

Evandel ran to Kim Hajin's embrace and started smiling.

"Hey... what did I do...? Anyways..." Chae Nayun grumbled before pointing at the empty board.

However, none of them had any idea what their next objective would be. They gathered a lot of precious medicinal plants and even a variety of ingredients from the whale's body, but had no idea how to mix it all together.

They even wondered if a skilled alchemist would be able to create an elixir out of the materials they gathered if they handed everything over...

"You just need to sit still and do nothing," Kim Hajin suddenly said.

Chae Nayun tilted her head in confusion.

"I'll take care of everything else," Kim Hajin added with a smile.

Chae Nayun blushed in response as his overflowing confidence and smile made her feel all warm and fuzzy inside... She stood motionless for quite a while with her cheeks flushed red.

"Did you find a cure or something?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

Kim Hajin hesitated for a second and shook his head, "I'm not certain yet, but I have a feeling I'm on to something."

He already obtained a hint that could help in finding a cure for Chae Jinyoon's condition. What he needed now was time and cooperation. He had plenty of time, but the cooperation part was what irked him.

After all, he needed Jin Sahyuk's help to achieve his goal.

"Alright, I'm sure you have a plan," Yoo Yeonha said.

However, her expression didn't look good. She seemed anxious for some reason despite trying to sound as nonchalant as possible. Still, it didn't take long for her to smile as Evandel wobbled over to her.

The little girl quickly became the club's adorable mascot.

"Hey, Nayun. We're going to start our real-life combat classes soon. What are you going to do about that?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

"Oh, I completely forgot about that!" Chae Nayun exclaimed in response.

On the other hand, Kim Hajin seemed to be at a loss and asked, "Real-life combat classes? How in the world do you guys know about that?"

"Ah, we were informed in advance. We're going to travel on a train and there will be cadets from other countries too."

"A train?"

"Yeah, you heard of those transcontinental trains, right? You know, the ones used by heroes and mercenaries?"

"Ah..."

The transcontinental trains linked Korea to the monster fields in Russia. Those fields were known to be subjected to harsh climates that made it impossible to operate portals there. These trains were the only method of transportation to reach them.

"Hmm... I think it should be alright. I purchased a piece of equipment recently. I'll give it to you, so you better keep it on you at all times," Chae Nayun said.

"That... erm..." Yoo Yeonha looked like she wanted to say something, but bit her lips and didn't say anything.

She had a piece of information that she had to share with Chae Nayun, but felt too afraid. The incident that Yoo Jinhyuk told her about, the tragedy that unfolded in Kim Hajin's past...

She could deduce that it was related to the assassination attempts, but couldn't bring herself to say it...

* * *

A week passed since classes resumed and life at Cube remained difficult for me.

[Chae Nayun is still maintaining her silence...]

[How are the two cadets doing after returning to Cube?]

[Who is Chae Nayun's lover, Kim Hajin?]

The media didn't get tired of me at all and kept bringing up my name.

[You have obtained 17 SP.]

[You have obtained 23 SP.]

[You have obtained 6 SP.]

[You have obtained 7 SP.]

[You have obtained 9 SP.]

[You have obtained 12 SP.]

[You have obtained 3 SP.]

I gained a lot of SP thanks to them, but that didn't change the fact that I found this situation burdensome.

I couldn't help but think that I was being targeted solely because I stood out too much.

"Oh, Kim Hajin is up."

Also, my accommodation was moved to the clubroom.

The clubroom underwent numerous renovations after Chae Nayun's generous donation. It was redesigned to have three rooms. On top of that, a powerful barrier and various safety mechanisms were installed to accommodate me and Evandel.

However, Chae Nayun didn't seem satisfied as she further renovated the clubroom and added another room for herself.

"Good morning."

"...Ah, good morning."

Also, Chae Nayun's roommate was Rachel. Both of them were quite tidy, so they complemented each other. They had been roommates for a week now and no problems had occurred yet.

"Ah, but what are we supposed to do now? He'll definitely be targeted this time..."

Today was the day of our real-life combat class. The day we would board the train. It would be a stretch to say that we were going on a trip, but it still felt like one.

On the other hand, I prepared myself for any ambushes by adding another gift. I added the words, one-time use, since I wanted to maximize its power as much as possible.

It didn't matter how good or strong the assassin was. I was confident that this gift would save me at least once.

"It's going to be alright, so get ready. We might run late," I confidently said.

We arrived in Russia for the [Real-Life Combat Class – Transcontinental Train].

Jin Sahyuk and the other instructors were already on the train. She was unexpectedly popular among her peers. It was probably all thanks to her beauty.

“Ah, this is my first time on a train. It’s making me nervous,” Chae Nayun said as she wrapped her arm around mine.

“Yeah, me too,” I replied.

I flinched in surprise when I realized that I didn’t resist her arm wrapping around mine.

“Tsk...” Chae Nayun clicked her tongue.

“Oh, looking good, you two. Should I snap a photo for you guys?” Yi Yeonghan said with a sleazy smile.

We completely ignored him.

“Listen up! Form two rows and line up!” Kim Soohyuk shouted.

Chae Nayun grabbed my arm tight after she heard there would be two rows. It just so happened that everyone else lined up right behind us.

“Good, we will now start boarding...”

I wasn’t sure if it was because of spatial magic, but the train cabin was quite spacious. There were two rooms in each cabin and four of us could fit without a problem.

“Then, I’ll sleep with Hajin. Chae Nayun, you can go and stay with Yoo Yeonha,” Kim Suho said.

I was paired with Kim Suho while Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha were paired together.

We unpacked first before leaving the cabin to take a look around.

“Wow... this is amazing.”

The corridor was wider than we expected. There were seats where two people could sit side by side without feeling cramped.

Kim Suho and I sat at a random spot.

“...Hello?”

Someone suddenly approached us. I flinched in surprise because I kept hearing the word assassin these days and became quite jumpy.

“My name is Cyril. I’m from the General Academy,” the girl introduced herself.

She was definitely a blonde, but she dyed her hair blue. She also wore earrings and necklace artifacts made out of animal bones. On top of that, her t-shirt depicted the image of a sinister skull.

I guess you could say she looked quite hiphop-ish.

“Huh...? Ah, hello. Nice to meet you,” I awkwardly replied.

It seemed that they were from the American academy that boarded the train too.

She smiled brightly from the seat across from us.

Kim Suho and I ended up exchanging glances and felt that we had to say something to entertain her.

“Hmm... Do you know where this train will stop? Are there multiple stops?”

“There are ten stops as far as I know. All of them are monster fields.”

I was already used to seeing Westerners fluently speak Korean.

I awkwardly scratched my cheek and asked again, “Ah... Then, is this train safe? I heard that we’re passing some dangerous places.”

“No, it’s not safe. It gets attacked quite frequently, and it’s our job to fight against those monsters. That’s also the reason why they call it a real-life combat class.”

“Oh... What year are you?”

“I’m in my third year at the academy,” Cyril replied with a smile.

The train finally started to depart.

Tssh... Tssh... Tssh... Tssh...

I could hear the sound of mana chafing against the rails.

“Hey, Cyril. What are you doing over there? Did you seduce them already?”

Another Western girl with red hair suddenly appeared. The ginger brightly smiled and approached us.

“Hello, my name is Loelle.”

“...Loelle?”

The name sounded familiar to me for some odd reason.

Loelle... Loelle... I tried to remember where I heard that name before and decided to open my story settings to look her up.

[Loelle]

— An American affiliated with the General

— Red Hair, Red Eyes

— Gift

— Potential 8-9

— Currently has not blossomed

— Currently cursed

She was a character in the story settings that didn't appear in the original story, but I recall creating her as an American hero.

Who would have known that I would bump into her at a place like this?

“W-Who the hell are you people?!”

Someone kicked up a fuss from a distance behind us. I could confidently say that it was Chae Nayun. She appeared with Yoo Yeonha and stomped her way towards us.

“Ah! Ms. Chae Nayun! It's an honor to meet you. My name is Cyril. I'm a big fan!” Cyril exclaimed.

“...A fan?”

“Yes! You're the idol of every female cadet!”

“Idol...?”

Chae Nayun bit her lips and started to sheepishly smile. She basically lost after a single exchange.

“Ehem... Yes, what business do you have here?” she faked a cough and asked.

“We wanted to get acquainted since we saw a few famous faces,” Cyril replied while looking at me and Kim Suho. Then she looked at Chae Nayun. “But... is it true? You know... that both of you are dating...” she carefully asked.

Chae Nayun glanced at me before clearing her throat. She approached Cyril and whispered, “Yes, we’re passionately in love. That guy can’t get enough of me, so...”

‘I can hear you, you know?’

* * *

It was late at night, but the train tirelessly continued.

Yoo Yeonha sat alone in the empty corridor while looking out the window. A dilemma kept her awake, so she watched the scenery pass by. The passing light and stars made the window look like a canvas with art by Vincent van Gogh.

She admired the scenery until someone suddenly appeared behind her.

“What’s up?” Chae Nayun asked.

Kim Hajin was also with her.

Yoo Yeonha had something she definitely wanted to tell them.

“I think we can get on top of the train. What do you think?” she asked.

It was quite uncharacteristic of her to propose such a risky endeavor. That made Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin tilt their heads in confusion.

In the end, the three of them made their way up to the train’s roof.

“Wow...”

The view was breathtaking.

The train's speed was a cause for concern, but Chae Nayun actually liked it all the more because of how fast it was moving while Kim Hajin clung to her for dear life.

"About the assassin last time..." Yoo Yeonha said.

Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin looked at her.

"You already know about it, right? Nayun?"

Chae Nayun flinched at Yoo Yeonha's question. She nervously gulped and peeked at Kim Hajin. It looked like she knew something as he stared at her.

"What is it?"

"..."

"It's alright. You can say it," Kim Hajin placed his hand on her shoulder as if to console her.

Chae Nayun didn't respond as she continued to stare at the hand on her shoulder.

"Don't tell me... Did you plan this entire assassination attempt thing? Is it something like that?"

"N-No way!"

Kim Hajin's plan to ease the tension worked. He smiled and Chae Nayun also smiled in disbelief.

Then she let out a sigh, "So... I only have my suspicions as to who is the mastermind behind the assassination attempt and why they're after you..."

It was then.

A large veil-like object came flying towards the train. It was so large that it looked like it would cover the entire train.

“W-What’s that?!”

The trio panicked after being engulfed by darkness, but it didn’t take them long to assess the situation and sense the individuals who suddenly occupied the cabin underneath their feet.

“I think it’s a hijacking,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“...Why?” Kim Hajin innocently asked.

“What do you mean why?”

“No... wait a moment...” Kim Hajin switched on his smartwatch and used [Hacking].

He read the information of the hijackers and overheard a strange conversation.

[The treasure is here somewhere.]

[That’s our main objective, but kill Kim Hajin on sight if you come across him.]

“Shh!” Chae Nayun placed her finger between her lips and grabbed Kim Hajin’s hand.

“I think they’re after you, Kim Hajin.”

She looked like she made up her mind and whispered to him, “All of this is probably... Kim Sukho’s doing. The previous president, Kim Sukho. You know him too, right?”

Kim Sukho, there was no way Kim Hajin wouldn’t know that name. Kim Sukho was the previous president of the Republic of Korea and once stood on top of the world.

Why would someone like him come after Kim Hajin?

Kim Hajin frowned and Chae Nayun nodded.

“You might not be aware of what’s going on yet, but I’ll explain everything to you later. Just wait a little longer,” she said.

Kim Hajin had no idea why, but the word yet bothered him.

Did that mean that Chae Nayun knew why he was being targeted because of the world where she came from?

“Sure...”

In the end, Kim Hajin decided to trust Chae Nayun and did as she said.

Side Stories 73

Chae Nayun (28)

[Kill Kim Hajin on sight if you come across him.]

I used [Hacking] and found out that I was up against these assailants who covered the entire train in darkness. They were after me. I used a portion of stigma to obtain control of the darkness.

“But do those lunatics really think they can hijack this train? I mean, it’s full of cadets and heroes, right?” Chae Nayun asked.

Yoo Yeonha started to think after hearing what Chae Nayun said. Then she replied, “I think this darkness can eliminate sound and presence.”

“Yeah, that’s right,” I said.

I was able to look at the details of this dark veil thanks to [Hacking].

[Veil of Darkness – A veil that eliminates all sound and presence of the object it covers.]

“Really...? Then, their objective must be to stall the train,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“That’s half-correct. I think I heard there was some jewel or treasure on this train. They must be after that,” I said.

“Jewel or treasure...?” Yoo Yeonha muttered and tilted her head in confusion.

I relayed what I found out after hacking the hijackers’ smartwatches.

“I think there’s a VIP that’s transporting some sort of jewel. The VIP probably thought they would be safe with all of us onboard... No, this entire test could be the doing of this VIP so they could reach their destination as safely as possible.”

“What are you talking about...?” Chae Nayun asked.

Yoo Yeonha seemed to be at a loss as well, but I had no time to convince them.

I infused mana into my gift, [Master Sharpshooter]. I could feel my eyes burning as I looked through the entire train.

“A total of thirty-three... there are four or five of them per cabin...” I recited the number of hijackers I saw.

Not only that, but I also identified the jewel they were looking for in the VIP cabin.

I used stigma once again and placed my hand on the veil.

[You have stolen ownership of the target.]

[Veil of Darkness has been saved in stigma.]

The veil covering the entire train was sucked into my arm and stored in stigma to be more precise.

Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha watched with visible shock on their faces, but I ignored them and continued monitoring the situation in the cabins.

— What’s going on?

— I have no idea. The veil suddenly...

— There’s no need to talk about it. We’ll retreat for now. Gather up.

It looked like they were trying to escape with a magic scroll, but a magic scroll was a very expensive item. All thirty-three of them would have to huddle together.

They started to huddle around the individual holding the magic scroll, who I assumed was their leader.

I waited until the moment all thirty-three of them gathered into a massive clump.

— We're going.

When the leader was about to rip the magic scroll, I shot out the Veil of Darkness from inside the stigma.

The veil shot out like a net and successfully caught all thirty-three hijackers.

“What the... what's going on?”

Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha were still flabbergasted.

I infused stigma into the veil and replied, “What else? I caught them alive. Just hurry up and go wake the others up. I won't be able to hold them for long...”

The hijackers trapped under the net resisted to the best of their abilities to escape...

* * *

Kim Soohyuk, Jin Sahyuk, and the rest of the faculty appeared a bit later to capture the hijackers. One of the faculty members possessed the ability to capture people alive, so they used that ability and threw the hijackers with the cargo.

The hijacking of the train ended as a minor mishap.

“Hmm...”

Meanwhile, I inspected the Veil of Darkness that had been reduced to the size of a handkerchief in my palm. On top of that, I was able to awaken a synergy between stigma and [Hacking] thanks to the hijackers.

[Gift Saved With Hacking]

[1. Veil of Darkness – A veil that eliminates all sound and presence of the object it covers.]

I was able to take control of an ability using [Hacking] and analyze it using stigma. Then I could replicate it completely in a similar manner. I would say it was one of stigma's many variations rather than an outright ability that [Hacking] possessed.

Whatever it was, I knew for sure that it was a very useful ability.

"Listen up, everyone!"

Kim Soohyuk suddenly shouted after all of us got off the train and gathered at the train stop.

I stood beside Kim Suho and Chae Nayun stood on the other side of him. It felt like she took a step back from me after the incident last night.

I was sure that I wasn't acting paranoid because whenever our eyes met, she would...

"...!"

...Flinch and lower her head to avoid my eyes.

I was certain that this was because of what Yoo Yeonha wanted to say last night.

"Your mission is to exterminate the monsters in this place. You better get used to the environment here as you will be frequenting Russia after you become a fully-fledged hero. A hero must know how to take care of their own equipment. You will find a lot of useful materials here. Now, take a look at this."

Kim Soohyuk showed the smartwatch on his left wrist and explained how this field worked. There was no need to handle the monster corpses after hunting them down. All we had to do was send the coordinates to these people known as scavengers and they would retrieve everything for us for a thirteen percent fee.

“Wow, that’s very convenient. I think we can earn a lot in no time over here,” Kim Suho said.

That guy started to become materialistic these days for some odd reason. I wasn’t a hundred percent sure why, but I had a hunch that he was trying to bribe Evandel by showering her with gifts.

“This is a real-life situation. You will be graded according to the number of monsters you kill in the next thirty-six hours. It doesn’t matter whether you act alone or form a team as long as you do your best. Now, that’s all. Move out!”

* * *

I killed roughly over a dozen monsters and entered the coordinates in my smartwatch. [Ten o’clock, northeast.]

The scavengers would come and retrieve these monster corpses and sell them off for me.

“Sigh...” I let out a sigh after sensing a presence behind me.

Chae Nayun was still here somewhere, but I couldn’t see her. She was probably hiding at a distance where she could run to me at a moment’s notice if something were to happen.

I really couldn’t get used to that girl’s sudden change in attitude...

“I should rest a bit...”

I walked out of the forest and continued walking until the trees around me grew shorter and shorter. I was now on elevated terrain with a vantage point of my surroundings.

It seemed like I was standing on a mound. The mound was elevated and had clear visuals over the surroundings, so I doubted I was in danger of getting ambushed and assassinated here.

“Hey, what are you doing?” I called out to Chae Nayun, who was hiding behind a tree around five hundred meters away from me.

Rustle... Rustle...

The sound of her fidgeting behind the tree was carried over by the wind.

“Come out if you have something to say,” I added.

Only then did Chae Nayun finally show herself. She awkwardly scratched the back of her neck and made her way towards me.

Thud!

She sat on the ground.

“What is it?” I asked.

Chae Nayun didn’t respond. Instead, she chewed her lower lip and hesitated to say something.

“Just say it. It’s fine.”

“...”

She looked at me and tears started welling up in her eyes as if she was about to cry at any moment.

I didn’t know what to do, so I just pinched her nose.

“Gwuah...!”

“Aren’t you going to talk?”

Chae Nayun pouted while her nose was being pinched, but she didn't resist or slap my hands away. It was only after a while that she finally shook my hand off and took a few steps back.

She let out a sigh and opened her mouth, but quickly closed it again.

Then, she composed herself and finally spoke, "That time... the thing Yoo Yeonha said..."

She hesitated once again before looking at me and forced, no, squeezed the words out of her mouth, "I think... Kim Sukho is really the one behind this."

"Kim Sukho?" I muttered in response.

Chae Nayun mumbled something under her breath along the lines of, 'I knew it. He still has no idea,' before nodding.

"Yeah, Kim Sukho will probably find out who you really are."

"..."

My heart dropped after hearing her say that. Did she already figure out that this world was just a novel...?

Chae Nayun asked, "You... do you know about the Kwang-Oh Incident?"

"..."

That was something I didn't have a single inkling of, so I just remained silent. However, what she said next was something I had never heard of before in my life. I couldn't afford to ignore it though.

After all, it was related to me. No, Kim Chundong to be more precise, the character I was currently possessing.

The Kwang-Oh Incident was a tragedy related to Kim Chundong's past and Chae Nayun was telling me all about it.

She explained that her grandfather, Chae Joochul, was the perpetrator behind it at the behest of Kim Sukho. Their plan had been swiftly carried out without a hitch. In the end, her family was the culprit behind my life being ruined.

“So... my grandfather...” Chae Nayun said as she gritted her teeth.

She was gritting her teeth so hard that it wouldn't be weird if one of her teeth cracked and she was clenching her fist so tightly that her nails dug into her skin.

She wiped the tears welling up in her eyes and said, “He took away everything from you... your life... your family... your future...”

Chae Nayun composed herself and continued in a voice mixed with sadness and fear, “And Kim Sukho probably realized who you are, so he's trying to kill you to cover up that incident. That's the only reason I can think of. If that's the case, then... I'm sorry for telling you only now...”

I stood rooted in my spot and looked up, but I couldn't find the answer among the stars littered across the night sky.

“...”

What should I say? How should I respond? Should I tell her that the incident she mentioned was none of my business? That I'm someone else and didn't have any relation to that incident? Was that the right thing to say?

But why was it... why did it feel so bittersweet after hearing what happened? Did Chae Nayun fall for me only because she was trying to atone for what her family did during that incident? Was that it...?

“I'm not trying to atone for anything or pity you...” Chae Nayun said as if she read my mind.

She wiped away her tears and looked me straight in the eyes, “I didn't fall for you because I felt sorry for you. I...”

She bit her trembling lips while looking at me. I could see from her face just how foolish my thoughts were.

“I just like you. That’s all.”

I laughed in response.

“...Why are you laughing?”

I simply shook my head.

It was quite obvious now that I thought about it. This world wasn’t built with everything calculated or predetermined, so there was no grand prerequisite for someone to like anyone else.

I was only trying to come up with a bunch of excuses and blame the politics of this world that was created out of a novel.

“...”

It was now time for me to respond to her courage.

However, that didn’t mean that I was simply going to introduce myself as a writer or the person who created this world. That was crazy talk.

That was... something I shouldn’t say and something I couldn’t say. Just like how Chae Nayun couldn’t tell me that she was a regressor... there was no need for me to say it.

Most importantly, it was something I should never utter to anyone in this world.

“It’s alright...”

In the end, the only thing I could do was reassure her. I decided to convey my honesty to her and state the facts.

“It wasn’t your fault.”

I let out a sigh and looked at her. Chae Nayun looked at me with teary eyes. I could see the surprise in her eyes as well.

I inched my face closer to hers.

Then, our lips met.

“...”

It happened in an instant without any warning, and it felt like the entire world around us turned silent.

Chae Nayun retreated and plopped on the ground with tears trickling down her cheeks.

“...”

“...”

Neither of us said anything afterwards and an awkward silence surrounded us.

I looked at her a while later and she smiled at me with swollen eyes. Her smile tugged at my heartstrings.

“I like you,” Chae Nayun confessed and slowly crawled towards me.

I could’ve evaded her if I wanted to since she was crawling at a cute pace, but I didn’t.

“...I like you,” she repeated.

I had a lot of burdens, so I couldn’t make the first move. However, if she was the one who came to me... if she continued coming to me... I could probably justify not moving away at least...

I was allowed to do that much, right...?

“...”

In the end, she was so close that our bodies tangled with each other and our noses touched.

Chae Nayun rubbed her nose against mine and whispered, "I like you."

Our lips touched again. We pressed our lips against each other in the silence and refused to part with one another.

I opened my eyes and saw you smiling with your eyes closed as you continued to press your lips against mine.

You looked so happy. So happy that I couldn't help but ask myself...

The small changes that would occur from now on would definitely change me, but am I allowed to like you despite knowing this?

Am I allowed to fall in love with a character I created?

However, you didn't hesitate like I did.

I have no idea what miracles you went through to regress and love me, but I know that you didn't hesitate.

Not only that, you didn't want anything else from me. Maybe that's why you were able to confidently confess your feelings?

Chae Nayun slowly opened her eyes and looked at me after our lips parted. I could feel her arms wrapped around my neck trembling and I could feel her heart wildly beating against my chest.

She looked at me with trembling eyes before burying her face in my chest.

I could feel her hot breath on my chest as she pressed her weight against me. I remained steadfast and supported her entire body. Was she heavy? No, not at all.

However...

Each of us carried a secret that was heavier than anything else in this world. We would probably have to share each other's burdens and secrets in the near future.

I suddenly came to a realization as I was thinking...

Maybe that wouldn't be so bad after all?

Side Stories 74

Chae Nayun (29)

It was already dawn by the time we returned to the train. Chae Nayun scurried to her room while I sat by the window.

I needed time to think. Not only about what happened today with Chae Nayun, but also about the jewel that was being transported in the train. Also, there were a few other minor things in my mind that I had to sort out.

“ ... ”

I placed my hand on the table and rested my chin in my palm. The sun was starting to rise on the horizon and illuminated the surroundings.

I admired the scenery for a bit before turning my eyes to the VIP Cabin. I already knew how many people were inside.

There were quite a lot of Asians and a jewel kept in a safe within the cabin.

[Eye of the Sun] [Ancient Relic]

— A relic found in the ruins of an ancient pyramid. It may be used as a source of light.

The ancient relic possessed immense potential.

I wondered why they were taking risks and going to such great lengths just to transport that jewel to Russia? Was this related to Kim Sukho?

If that was the case, I needed to steal that ancient relic.

“...Who goes there?” I immediately placed my hand on my gun and asked when I felt a presence in the corridor.

“Just a human?” a familiar voice replied.

A girl emerged from the dark. It was the American cadet we met earlier in the day, Loelle.

“I’m on my way back from hunting,” she said.

“...Alright.”

I noticed her right arm was tainted dark red, which bothered me. I was certain she was a good person in my settings, so it would be best if she didn’t stray and remained useful to me later on.

“Your right arm looks strange,” I tested her.

“Ah, this? It’s nothing serious. I was born with it. Oh, what year did you say you were in?” she asked in response.

“First year.”

“Then why are you speaking so casually? You do know that I’m two years older than you, right?”

Loelle crossed her arms over her chest and glared at me.

I simply smirked and shook my head, “Sorry.”

“Be careful from now on,” Loelle growled and wobbled back to her room.

I got up from my seat and went to my room as well. There, I found Jin Sahyuk instead of Kim Suho in our room.

She was sitting on a chair and grinding a sword against another sword.

“You’re here?” she asked while grinding her sword.

Sseuk...! Sseuk...! Sseuk...! Sseuk...!

I instantly froze and gulped before walking towards her.

She raised a brow at my awkward approach.

“Yeah, I’m here. Also, I know why you’re here,” I said.

I decided to come swinging right out of the gates. However, I couldn’t see any signs of surprise, disbelief, or anything else on her face. Instead, she simply smiled in response and unleashed her killing intent.

I refused to back down and added, “And... you’re probably looking for your... servant.”

“...”

Her eyes glimmered while glaring at me. It felt as if everything in the room, including the air, had frozen.

Jin Sahyuk inspected me from head to toe, “As expected. You’re that guy, right?”

She was probably referring to Kim Chundong.

Anyways, I shook my head and replied, “I have that person’s diary.”

“Diary?”

I showed her my smartwatch on my left wrist.

Jin Sahyuk blinked a few times while staring at it. It looked like she was trying to disassemble the watch with her intense gaze.

“How the hell is that a diary?” she grumbled in disbelief.

It was an expected response from someone who came from a civilization where machinery and technological advancements didn't exist.

“Huh? Then were you expecting a paperback book? Who uses that these days? Everyone uses a smartwatch in this day and age, you know?”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk seemed to be pondering something before finally nodding.

“I can show you the contents of the diary with this,” I projected a hologram from my smartwatch.

Jin Sahyuk impatiently stretched her hands to grab it, but her hands simply phased through the hologram.

She looked visibly upset and asked, “Hey, what’s going on? Why can’t I touch it?”

“I have to grant you permission to read it. I’ll let you read it in exchange for one condition.”

“One condition?”

“Yeah, I want you to help us.”

Jin Sahyuk frowned and scoffed in disbelief.

“One hundred seven times,” she whispered.

I stared into her eyes, which glared at me like an apex predator.

Then she continued, “That’s the number of times you would’ve been dead if it wasn’t for me. I’ve already helped you countless times. It wouldn’t be enough even if you kowtowed to me for the rest of your life... but what? A condition?”

“Ah, so that was you? Thanks for that.”

“...What?” she looked surprised.

I awkwardly scratched my cheek in response.

To be honest, I was already under the impression that someone was helping me since I came across information last night that all of the assassins sent to kill me had died despite me having done nothing.

“The help I’ll be asking from you this time isn’t something too difficult,” I said.

The ingredients required to wake Chae Jinyoon were probably the [Heart of Adaptation] combined with various other ingredients. The final ingredient was probably her, Jin Sahyuk.

I needed her cheat-like ability, which allowed her to form her mana into whatever she wished.

“I’ll tell you everything after you help us. I’ll show you the diary that person left behind, Kindspring or Winterspring, whatever his name was. I’ll even tell you what kind of person he was.”

“...”

Jin Sahyuk silently stared at me, but I didn’t avoid her nerve-wracking gaze.

In the end, she leaned against the chair and crossed her arms over her chest. It was the body language of a king who was commanding her servant to spill the beans.

* * *

Meanwhile, Chae Nayun was lying in bed.

Hehe...

He...

Hehehehe...

Hehehehehehehe...

Hehe...

He...

Hehehehe...

Hehehe...

She started laughing in an eerie manner and couldn't suppress the laughter welling up from inside her. Well, she didn't want to suppress it in the first place.

Thanks to her, the light sleeper Yoo Yeonha woke up and began trembling in horror.

Hehehe...

Hehehehe...

"W-What's going on?" Yoo Yeonha asked with a nervous gulp.

She slowly peeked at the bed below and Chae Nayun's face suddenly popped up in front of her.

"Kyaaaaaahk!"

Yoo Yeonha screamed and crashed to the floor. She fell face first with her legs over her head and saw Chae Nayun crawling towards her.

"What are you doing? Are you alright?" Chae Nayun asked.

'It's you again, Nayun!' Yoo Yeonha gritted her teeth and got up. She glared at Chae Nayun with killing intent.

“Hehe...” Chae Nayun was still smiling like an idiot.

“...You seem to be in a good mood?”

Chae Nayun flinched at her words. Then, she cleared her throat and feigned ignorance, “Not really.”

“Hmm... It seems something good happened today... with Kim Hajin.”

“...?!”

Chae Nayun’s eyes shot wide open. She started trembling as if struck by lightning.

“H-How did you know?!” she asked.

Yoo Yeonha smirked and replied, “I didn’t. I was just testing you.”

“Ah... That’s cheating...”

“That’s not what’s important. What happened between you two?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

Chae Nayun awkwardly scratched the back of her neck and replied, “Well, nothing. Just... I confessed everything...”

“Confessed?”

“Yeah, that the assassins were sent by Kim Sukho... and the rest is... a secret.”

“Alright.”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t seem that interested while Chae Nayun was itching to tell her what happened.

However, Chae Nayun held her tongue because she knew that Kim Hajin would be in a pinch if she divulged what happened to anyone else.

‘We’re basically going to depend on each other from now on, so... I shouldn’t do anything that would burden him... still... I want to tell someone... It should be fine if I told Yeonha, right? I mean, she’s quite tight-lipped after all... Yeah, I’ll see if I get a chance later on and tell her then. Not now,’ Chae Nayun thought.

“Can you set it aside for tonight and please go to sleep? You do know that we have to hunt tomorrow, right?”

“Oh, you’re right.”

Only then did Chae Nayun finally realize that they were in a class and not a field trip. She needed to hunt as many monsters as possible to increase her points.

How many did she hunt yesterday? Well, she spent the entire day tailing Kim Hajin, so she only got two kills.

“Well, it doesn’t really matter...” she muttered.

She couldn’t care less if she dropped to the 1,000th rank. After all, life was meant to be enjoyed.

Chae Nayun giggled for the last time and plopped onto her bed.

She began to reminisce about everything that happened while squirming with joy. It was only after five in the morning when she finally managed to sleep.

* * *

We were still at the first stop when the second day arrived. The stop had restaurants, accommodations, shops, self-defense forces, etc. so it wasn’t too uncomfortable.

“Hihi...”

Except for the fact that Chae Nayun kept clinging to me like gum.

This was probably the last place anyone would come on a date, but she clung to my arm while pointing here and there.

However, I didn't hate it. No, I should probably say that I liked it even.

"Oh, right... We have to go hunt. We'll end up in last place at this rate," Chae Nayun said after a while passed.

Only then did I remember that we were technically in class right now.

"Yeah, let's go."

I pulled out my gun from its holster and Chae Nayun led the way as I followed from behind. We ventured into the forest and found a troll almost immediately.

"Gwuoooooh!"

It was quite a big one holding a club the size of a baobab tree.

Thud!

The enormous troll swung its club, but Chae Nayun easily blocked it with her sword despite not even being half the troll's size.

I shot the troll in the eyes and the explosive bullets blew up its eyeballs.

Chae Nayun didn't miss this opportunity and cleanly cut off the troll's head from its shoulders.

It took us exactly five seconds to kill the troll.

Chae Nayun giggled and clung to me after mercilessly killing the troll.

"We're quite the pair, right?" she said with a big smile.

“...Yeah, we’re quite compatible,” I replied with a smile.

I didn’t intend to smile, but my mouth wouldn’t listen and smiled on its own.

“See? I told you. We’re invincible together. Anyways, send the coordinates. Let’s go hunt the next one.”

“Okay.”

...We immersed ourselves in hunting after that.

We easily killed trolls, orcs, mountain boars, jungle chimpanzees, man-eating flowers, forest yetis, etc.

By the way, the forest yetis were rank 1 intermediate monsters, but they didn’t stand a chance against our combination.

Not to mention, my SP skyrocketed after we hunted thirty monsters in under three hours.

We sat on the grass and took a break.

“Hey hey hey, look at this!” Chae Nayun said while resting her chin on my shoulder.

She showed me her smartwatch with a funny video playing.

“Hahaha! Hey, isn’t this super funny?”

“...Yeah.”

I stared at Chae Nayun reclining back to the point where I could hug her by simply wrapping my arms around.

“Huh? What are they doing?” Chae Nayun asked while pointing towards the other end of the dark forest.

I checked with my vision and saw Loelle lying flat on her face. Neither of us said anything as we rushed over to her.

“Hey, what happened to you?” Chae Nayun asked.

Loelle was covered in cold sweat and writhing in pain. I noticed that she was grabbing her right arm.

“It’s... nothing...” she said.

“I don’t think it’s nothing from the looks of it,” Chae Nayun replied.

She walked over to Loelle and I followed suit after checking our surroundings for any potential threats. Then I inspected her arm, which had fully turned dark red.

“Kyak! Don’t touch it!” she screamed when I reached out.

The result of my diagnosis was... a powerful curse.

“How does it look?” Chae Nayun asked.

“I think I can cure it,” I replied.

“Then what are you doing? Hurry up and cure her.”

“...”

“What? Cure? Cure what? Have both of you gone mad?! Don’t you dare! Don’t come near me! I warned you already!” Loelle growled at us.

“Shut up,” I said before enveloping my hand with stigma and grabbing her right arm.

It was possible to lift the curse, but it was quite a powerful one so it would definitely hurt.

“Kyaaaahk! Arrrrgh! KYAAAAAHK!” Loelle screamed like a wounded beast.

Well, that wasn't strange since her ability was to turn into a beast in the first place. Ironically, she seemed to have activated her ability as her teeth turned into sharp fangs. She also grew a tail and animal ears on top of her head.

However, she couldn't maintain her ability as her transformation went back and forth.

It took around three minutes to fully lift the curse. It was only after I used up half of stigma that the curse was finally lifted.

“Grrrwaa...”

Loelle was out cold on the ground and foaming at the mouth.

“Heok, what's wrong with her? Is she dead?” Chae Nayun asked.

“No, she survived, but I think I'm going to die...” I replied as I suddenly felt lethargic after using up half of stigma in one go.

My knees gave out and I almost fell, but Chae Nayun instantly ran up and caught me.

She caressed my cheek and asked, “But what do you think she was doing here?”

“Who knows...?”

However, it didn't take long for us to figure out what she was doing in this dark forest all alone.

“Huh? Hey, Hajin! Look at this!” Chae Nayun exclaimed while pointing at a sparkling stone that fell out of Loelle's pocket.

[Eye of the Sun] [Ancient Relic]

— A relic found in the ruins of an ancient pyramid. It may be used as a source of light.

It was the Eye of the Sun.

Side Stories 75

Chae Nayun (30)

“Is she a thief...?” Chae Nayun asked.

Meanwhile, I picked up the jewel.

It was truly strange. Why did she have this jewel? I’m pretty sure I didn’t include kleptomaniac in her settings... Did the settings change by itself again?

“...She isn’t wearing a smartwatch either,” I pointed out.

I was about to hack her smartwatch, but found nothing on her wrist.

“Her ability makes her sensitive to electromagnetic waves, but I wonder why she stole this? I’m pretty sure she’s not that kind of a person...” Chae Nayun said.

“...Have you met her somewhere before?” I asked.

It sounded like she knew Loelle.

Chae Nayun suddenly started to tremble and clunk like an old vehicle before awkwardly grinning, “S-She’s quite famous. She’s famous in the United States... No, she’s famous in the Korean community too.”

“...”

I decided not to pry any further and help Loelle instead.

“Let’s bring her back to the station for now,” I said.

“Y-Yeah, let’s do that...” Chae Nayun replied while still stuttering.

We returned to the train station with Loelle.

Surprisingly, a lot of people gathered at the station and it seemed quite rowdy today. Not only did cadets gather, but even the faculty members all gathered around.

“Do you know who I am...?! Ha?! Do you know me or not?!” the man who was the owner of the jewel started to stir up a fuss.

I was pretty sure he acted like that because of the [Eye of the Sun]. I decided to ignore him and hacked into his smartwatch to gather more information.

“...Tomb raider?”

I saw the words tomb raiding among the messages he exchanged. I read through the messages and found out that the man obtained the jewel by tomb raiding. His customer was none other than Kim Sukho.

It seemed that Kim Sukho was supposed to smuggle the jewel through Russia, but he didn't want to pay the tomb raider. Instead, he hired those hijackers to steal the jewel.

I couldn't help but scoff in amazement at how dirty and petty that guy was.

“None of you will be able to get on the train until I find what I'm looking for!” the VIP screamed in anger.

Meanwhile, Jin Sahyuk was staring at the VIP from behind. That was more than enough for me to deduce what that man's ending would look like.

“This place is teeming with cadets and heroes, but you failed to catch a thief... Ah, what has the world come to? I used to be surrounded by talented individuals like Jin Seyeon and Aileen, but who is this ragtag bunch?” the VIP clicked his tongue and sneered.

“Hey, did he hire us as his security or something? What the hell is that bastard talking about?” Chae Nayun nudged me and said.

Also, she seemed visibly upset.

* * *

As expected, the train was in motion once again. However, we couldn't stop at our second stop because too much time had been wasted after the VIP threw a fit.

In the end, we had to transit to another train heading for Seoul this time.

"Why did you steal this?"

Also, I dragged Loelle to my room after she woke up. Together with me were Kim Suho, Chae Nayun, and Yoo Yeonha.

I took out the [Eye of the Sun] and showed it to her.

"I overheard that guy by sheer coincidence on the train. He was bragging that the jewel had the power to cure any illness or curse... So I wanted to borrow it for a while, but..." Loelle replied.

She caressed her right arm, which was no longer dark red and no longer had any traces of the curse.

"I guess I shouldn't have done that. That damned jewel didn't cure me. Instead, it... ugh... thinking about it is making my head hurt..."

"Then, it's fine if I take this, right? After all, I lifted your curse," I said.

"What do you plan to do with that? You'll probably end up dead if they find out you're holding that. I don't think it's something worth risking your life over..."

"Who knows."

I infused stigma into the jewel and it started to glow brightly. It glowed an orange hue that resembled sunset. It was extremely bright while also dim at the same time as if it would disappear at any second.

“This jewel can be used as a light source. It’s not a light that can cure or heal people, but it’s definitely going to be useful. We might be able to craft a very useful artifact from it later on,” I explained.

However, Kim Suho and Yoo Yeonha seemed to be bothered by the fact that it was stolen.

“That guy was also a thief,” I added.

“Huh? He was a thief?” Yoo Yeonha asked in response.

“Yeah, he was a tomb raider. He stole this from the ruins of the pyramids,” I replied.

Loelle frowned and asked, “How do you know that?”

“I’m somewhat of a pro hacker, you see.”

“Huh? What nonsense are you...”

“Anyways...”

I stood up.

This jewel was still incomplete, but I was certain that I could turn it into something befitting an ancient relic through [System Intervention]. I wasn’t so fond of giving something like this to someone else. Knowing it would end up in Kim Sukho’s hands made me loathe the idea even more.

“Let’s exchange contact details for now,” I said and extended my smartwatch to Loelle.

Loelle tilted her head in confusion while Chae Nayun pouted and looked at me with eyes that seemed to say, ‘Do you really have to do that?’

We arrived at Cube early Friday morning and immediately went to the club room to see Evandel. Thankfully, Evandel was getting along very well with the old butler from the English Royal Palace.

“...But Evandel, what’s that?”

She was holding a luxurious-looking bone.

“Ah, a mister gave this to me!” Evandel brightly smiled and replied.

“Who?” I asked.

“A scary-looking mister with long hair!”

I immediately thought of Shin Jonghak. Why would he give a bone to a human? Aren’t these for dogs...?

Yoo Yeonha seemed to be wondering the same thing before she suddenly raised a finger and said, “Ah, he must’ve met her when she was in her puppy form.”

“Oh... That sounds about right.”

“He must’ve found Evandel to be quite cute since he gave her this bone and all.”

He didn’t come to the club room after he fought with Chae Nayun last time, but it seemed that he came by when we weren’t around.

After all, Evandel is extremely cute in her puppy form.

“Come and sit here for a second,” I called over all the club members to the sofa.

I stood in front of the board as Chae Nayun looked at me with both hands on her chin.

Sparkle! Sparkle!

Her sparkling eyes were quite burdensome.

“We will be seriously discussing how to wake Chae Jinyoon from now on.”

Kim Suho, Rachel, and everyone else suddenly became serious.

“...But, there’s something we must do before we wake up Chae Jinyoon.”

“Huh? What do you mean before we wake him up? Are you saying that you found a cure for him?” Yoo Yeonha asked with her eyes wide open in surprise.

“Yeah, I found a way. I believe it’s highly likely it’ll work.”

“Oh! As expected of our top theory cadet!”

Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan exclaimed and smiled.

I simply nodded and continued, “Before that, we have to understand the cause behind it.”

“...Cause?”

It was Chae Nayun this time.

“Yeah, we have to find out why Chae Jinyoon ended up like that in the first place.”

“...”

It was probably a heavy topic for Chae Nayun, but it was something we had to do.

“Their explanation that he became like that after fighting a djinn is not enough to convince me. It’s imperative that we find what actually happened before anything else,” I said while looking at Chae Nayun.

Everyone else seemed to be wary of Chae Nayun, but none of them dared to say anything.

Chae Nayun looked downcast compared to her usual self, but soon flashed a bitter smile and nodded.

“Yeah, we should do that,” she said.

* * *

The next afternoon, the Pharmacy Club went to Seoul.

“I’m going to the broadcast station first,” I said.

There were probably quite a lot of unbroadcasted clips that I could make use of with [Hacking].

“Then I’m going with Hajin,” Chae Nayun said and clung to me.

Everyone else squinted at her.

“I guess you lot will have to follow me,” Yoo Yeonha said as she motioned for Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan to follow her.

On a side note, Rachel stayed behind to look after Evandel while Shin Jonghak was out on a date with Seo Youngji again.

“Where are we going?” Yi Yeonghan asked.

“You’ll find out once we get there. It’s somewhat difficult for me to go alone, so...” Yoo Yeonha replied.

Chae Nayun winked at Yoo Yeonha, but I caught her in the act.

“W-What? Something was in my eye. Yes, something was in it... That’s why I winked...”

“I didn’t say anything.”

Anyways, we split up into two teams. Yoo Yeonha led Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan while I was paired with Chae Nayun.

She squirmed in the middle of the street before holding my hand.

“...Hehe,” she giggled when I held her hand and didn’t let go.

“Let’s go.”

We walked together hand in hand, but didn’t attract any attention as both of us wore sunglasses. Chae Nayun was also wearing a beret. We explored a bit here and there. It felt like we were on a date.

“That’s the broadcasting station, SBN,” Chae Nayun said as she pointed at a building.

The SBN building stood tall at the center of the city.

“Let’s go.”

We made our way towards the building and started to see celebrities the closer we got there.

“Wow, that’s Genti,” Chae Nayun said while sticking close to my back.

A man wearing shades with a guitar on his back was walking with another man, who I presumed was his manager. The man’s blonde hair made him stick out like a sore thumb, but I had no idea who he was.

“Who’s that?”

“You don’t know? That’s Genti. The famous singer who sweeps the charts. He’s so handsome in real life.”

“...You can’t even see his face, what handsome are you talking about?"

"Huh? Don't tell me... are you jealous?"

Chae Nayun looked like she was holding her laughter back while wiggling her brows.

"Just hurry up and keep walking," I grumbled.

Actually, she caught me red-handed. I just wanted to get out of that situation as soon as possible.

We entered the building and sat at the cafe on the first floor. We ordered a cup of Americano and a cup of Supreme Basic Luwak Dutch Latte.

I took a sip of my Americano while Chae Nayun just stared at her latte.

"Does it taste different if you pay forty thousand won for it?"

"Hmm? Ah, not really. More importantly, are we going to find something by coming here?"

"We need to try at least. Oh, I just remembered. Do you know of any politicians or celebrities being supported by Kim Sukho?"

"Hmm..." Chae Nayun frowned.

Now that I thought about it, I wondered what kind of a life this girl lived in her previous life that she didn't even suspect anything regarding that incident. Ah, never mind... I was sure she wouldn't have been able to muster the courage to investigate the matter. She was quite the softie inside, so it wouldn't have been easy for her.

"Ah! I remembered something from the entertainment industry! Have you heard of EN Entertainment?"

"Yeah."

“I remember hearing some rumors about them. They said that they were able to scout a lot of heroes because Kim Sukho was supporting them or something like that. I think Kim Sukho’s father’s friend’s grandson is the owner of that company.”

I nodded in response. Our next destination was EN Entertainment.

“Oh? It’s Seung-Ah unni,” Chae Nayun said in surprise.

I looked back and saw Yun Seung-Ah coming in through the main door. She was with an old gentleman.

Both Chae Nayun and I flinched.

It was Kim Sukho.

I nonchalantly continued to sip my Americano as I activated [Hacking].

“...what the hell is this?”

[Smartwatch – Kim Sukho]

[Messages – 0]

There was nothing on his smartwatch. This was probably his work smartwatch, so I tried to scan for another watch on him.

Unfortunately, he already got into a sedan and sped away.

“Tsk... Let’s get up and go in,” I said.

“Alright, just give me a minute. I’ll be able to get us a pass if I call my father.”

* * *

We scoured through the broadcasting station stealing information left and right until sunset, but weren’t able to get anything related to Chae

Jinyoon by the time we exited the building.

Oddly enough, Chae Nayun still energetically walked like a child on a night stroll while holding my hand.

However, I could see the sadness behind her smile. The fact that we were currently going through what happened to Chae Jinyoon was already more than enough to make her sad.

“Ah! It’s an arcade!” Chae Nayun exclaimed.

She was huffing and puffing from excitement. I patted her head to calm her down.

She suddenly turned towards me and stared into my eyes.

“What?”

“Hey... don’t touch me there...”

“Why?”

“I’m sensitive there...”

“...”

Was she talking about her erogenous spot right now...?

Anyways, I faked a cough and said, “Let’s go in.”

Chae Nayun simply nodded with her cheeks blushing.

We entered the arcade and various sounds and flashing lights greeted us.

Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding!

Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding!

Beep! Beep! Beep! Beep!

I wondered if I was just really lucky or if it was because I was in Seoul. We ran into another so-called main character.

“Ha... Really, why isn’t this working, Boss? Should I just destroy it?”

“Don’t, you’re just bad at it.”

“Even you can’t get that doll, Boss.”

“I can get it if I wanted to, but I’m just trying to stick to the rules.”

“How’s that any different from not being able to get it?”

“Shut your mouth.”

The Chameleon Troupe was in the arcade. I was certain that the gigantic man in a robe with his head almost touching the ceiling was Cheok Jungyeong. The small person next to him also in a robe was their boss.

They were currently struggling in front of a [Difficulty – High] claw machine.

Also, I could see Aileen from the Temple of Justice further inside the arcade.

It was highly likely that they hadn’t gathered here out of pure coincidence. I could feel that an incident would happen or they received orders to mobilize.

“Shall we try our luck with those dolls?” Chae Nayun asked as she walked towards the Chameleon Troupe.

“No!”

“Gosh, you scared me. Why not?”

I didn't want to bump into them at all costs, but both of them were already looking at me after I shouted.

I quickly turned around and hugged Chae Nayun. I made sure to push her against the wall so both of our faces wouldn't be visible to them.

"Huh...?" Chae Nayun muttered.

I could feel her breath on my neck, but I didn't pay attention to that as I used my vision to look behind me.

"Haa..." I let out a sincere sigh of relief and swept my hair back.

"Kim Hajin..."

On the other hand, Chae Nayun was looking at me with a strange expression. No, it was more accurate to say that she was giving me quite a dangerous look.

Side Stories 76

Chae Nayun (31)

An array of flashy lights lit the Han River underneath the Seoul night sky.

We arrived in front of EN Entertainment's headquarters.

"Is this the right place?" I asked.

The building was so modern yet artistic that I wondered if it was really a building or a piece of art. Its edges were so sharp and intricate as if carved with a sculpting knife and chiseled one by one.

Chae Nayun counted the floors before nodding, "Yeah, I think this is it."

I looked inside with my thousand-mile eyes. There was nobody in the CEO's office as expected, but quite a lot of employees were working overtime.

"You stay here. I'll go and hack the CEO's pc."

"Why? Let's go together."

"It's easier for me to move alone," I said before I took out the Veil of Darkness.

It was the ability the hijackers so kindly gifted me. I changed it to the size of a blanket and used it like a garment.

"Hey, wait a minute. I can squeeze in there too... I think I can..."

However, Chae Nayun forced her way into the veil. She squirmed a bit before looking up at me with a smile.

I looked at her in disbelief, but she seemed adamant about going together.

“It’s dangerous if you go alone,” she said.

“...Alright, let’s go together.”

I moved with Chae Nayun. We were so close that we basically moved as one. Then, we jumped as high as we could and reached the building’s rooftop. I immediately hacked the building’s security system.

[Hacking Target – EN Entertainment Security System]

Control over the security system was soon transferred to my smartwatch. I opened the rooftop door and confidently walked down the stairs.

[CEO’s Office]

The CEO’s office was right below the rooftop.

I took advantage of the administrative control I gained through [Hacking] and opened the door.

“Wow, they really went all out decorating this place,” Chae Nayun said as she looked around the office.

The office was decorated in a manner that Chae Nayun liked. It had all sorts of awards and antique furniture. There was even a screen golf system installed.

[Hacking Target – Kim Jiheung]

“The CEO is Kim Jiheung, right?”

“Yeah, you’re right.”

I hacked the CEO’s pc to take all the files, emails, and messages in it. I even combed through to see if there were any files related to Chae Jinyoon.

“Did you find anything?”

“...No.”

As expected, there weren't any files related to Chae Jinyoon on the PC. Those files were probably stored in Kim Jiheung's private server if any of them did exist.

“Do you think they deleted everything?”

“These kinds of people don't trust their own kind. It's very likely that they didn't delete it and are keeping it somewhere else.”

Most underlings usually kept an insurance even though they knew things would get ugly if they were caught with it.

“Tsk... There's nothing...”

I continued to comb through the files, but didn't find anything useful.

“Let's go.”

“You're done?”

“Yeah, he's probably going to sync his smartwatch to this pc one day. We just have to wait for him to do that.”

I would get access to his smartwatch the moment he synced the two together. Every single file in his smartwatch would be at my disposal.

Thud!

A large sound resounded from outside the window.

Both of us froze on the spot and felt our legs become weak, but we rushed as fast as we could back to the rooftop.

“Ah... What the hell is that thing?” Chae Nayun grumbled while pointing at a monster peeking out from the Han River.

It was a gigantic snake-like monster that let out a ferocious scream at the top of its lungs late at night.

“It’s a djinn’s doing,” I replied.

It was quite common for such ambushes or disturbances to occur in this world. Seoul was the capital of South Korea, which was the strongest country in this world according to my story setting. These kinds of events frequently occurred at least once every two to three months.

However...

The thing that scared me right now was... there were suddenly two people behind us.

“Aren’t these the two brats we saw at the arcade, Boss?”

It was a gigantic man and a small woman from the Chameleon Troupe.

Both of them had their eyes on us and walked towards us.

Chae Nayun immediately pulled out her sword and I infused aether into my Desert Eagle.

“Hey, don’t try anything funny. We just came here to enjoy the view,” Cheok Jungyeong said.

“Fuck off,” Chae Nayun growled as she infused mana into her sword.

Cheok Jungyeong suddenly smiled brightly after seeing the mana infused sword. He exclaimed in delight, “Hehe! You’re quite brave. Alright, if you insist. We shall have a go at...”

Boss blocked Cheok Jungyeong.

However, I noticed that her eyes were focused on me.

“You there. Your heart has caught my eye,” she said.

My heart started beating wildly at her words.

Boss didn't say anything after that. It seemed like she was pondering something. I couldn't help but feel extremely nervous as to what she was thinking. To be honest, the suspense was killing me.

“Hmm... Ah... So it was you that time,” Boss realized.

The air around us suddenly grew heavy after she had a realization and her shadows started to slither like snakes.

However, a single ray of mana cut all the shadowy snakes down.

It was Chae Nayun.

“Oh? Hoho! You're quite skilled!” Cheok Jungyeong exclaimed in delight once again.

He grinned from ear to ear and clenched his fist until his muscles started pulsating.

Boss suddenly said in a cold voice, “I have no interest in you, little girl. I just have something I wish to discuss with the boy.”

“Huh? What are you talking about, Boss? That kid is quite strong too. No, I think only that kid is strong,” Cheok Jungyeong said while scratching his head.

“Step aside, little girl,” Boss warned again.

“Little girl your face,” Chae Nayun retorted before she stood in front of me.

I looked at her in surprise, but she seemed adamant about protecting me. In the end, I simply nodded and tried to send an SOS signal to Jin

Sahyuk.

“Hey, what are you doing over there?”

A clear voice suddenly asked. The tense situation was instantly defused by the voice as Boss’ shadows stood down and all of us looked at where the voice came from.

“You’ve got guts crawling out of your cave and coming to Seoul. You bunch of thieves.”

“...Seung-Ah unni?”

It was the vice leader of Creator’s Sacred Grace, Yun Seung-Ah.

She looked at the Chameleon Troupe and shrugged, “I’m not the only one here. You know that Divine Archer, right?”

Creak...!

We suddenly sensed a bowstring being pulled quite a distance away from us. The sound was so crisp and clear that the sound traveled through the air.

“So can’t you just go back to where you came from?” Yun Seung-Ah asked.

She said it in a manner that sounded like she was asking a favor, but was in fact threatening them.

However, Boss showed no reaction to the threat. Instead, her gaze was still fixed on me. Well, on my heart to be precise.

Then, she spoke in a voice mixed with a hint of laughter, “...I guess we’ll run into each other again.”

After that, both of them were suddenly shrouded by a shadow and disappeared from the rooftop.

Tak... Tak... Tak... Tak...

Yun Seung-Ah approached Chae Nayun and placed a hand on her shoulder.

“Are you alright?”

“Huh? Ah, yeah. I’m okay. But unni, what was that just now?” Chae Nayun asked.

Yun Seung-Ah bitterly smiled and replied, “We had a meeting today.”

“A meeting?”

“Yeah.”

Yun Seung-Ah stole a glance at a tall skyscraper in the middle of Seoul before shaking her head.

“The association was having a meeting on what to do with some relics they recently obtained... but the association is just a political field these days. They’re completely divided. They were transporting the relics through the sewer network, but the djinns somehow got wind of it. So they ambushed it, what else?”

“...Really?”

It seemed that the association was much more corrupt than I wrote them to be.

“Anyways, you’re fine, right?”

“Yeah, I’m okay.”

“What about you?” Yun Seung-Ah checked up on me as well.

“I’m fine as well,” I replied.

“That’s a relief. Then, follow me. It’s dangerous if you stay in these kinds of places.”

We followed Yun Seung-Ah to the streets.

Not even five minutes had passed, but the djinn’s ambush seemed to have been resolved already.

Yun Seung-Ah accompanied us to the main street before saying that she had to go back to her guild and disappeared.

“I’m tired...” I grumbled under my breath.

To be honest, my future looked bleak. I mean, the Chameleon Troupe’s boss basically told me that I was marked. Come on, I already changed the heart’s settings. Was it really that obvious?

“Are you tired...?” Chae Nayun asked.

“Yeah,” I said with a nod.

Chae Nayun suddenly grabbed my sleeve and muttered, “Then... we need to talk about what happened a while ago and...”

She looked around us before whispering in my ear, “Shall we... go rest for a bit?”

“...”

I looked around our surroundings and saw numerous signboards with the word ‘HOTEL’ around us. I looked back at Chae Nayun and she lowered her brightly flushed face.

“Haa...” I let out a sigh as cold sweat formed on my forehead.

* * *

A new class started on Monday. It was a rank based class.

We were basically grouped into twelve groups based on our ranks. The 1st to 99th, 100th to 199th, 200th to 299th, and so on.

I arrived where the ones in the four hundredths were having their class at the dueling arena. There were quite a lot of cadets present. All of them were waiting for class to start.

“Hey, isn’t that Chae Nayun’s boyfriend?”

I was going to sit, but some big guy appeared in front of me and blocked my path. I stared at him without saying anything. He grinned and extended his hand to me.

“Nice to meet you. I’m the third son of Yedang, Lee Sanghun.”

It was an unexpected situation, but I simply nodded and shook his hand in response.

“I heard the rumors about you,” he said while shaking my hand.

Then, he came a bit closer and asked, “So... I was thinking... Can you teach me? I’m talking about that skill you used to seduce Chae Nayun. I’m sure you have some amazing skills, right? Can you teach me some of that...?”

* * *

Meanwhile, the atmosphere at the first group’s dueling arena was even more intense than the one with the four hundredth ranked cadets.

Chae Nayun was glaring at Jin Sahyuk, who looked down at her with an arrogant gaze. Chae Nayun gathered her mana and materialized it into a twenty meter long sword. She swung it down with all of her strength.

Kwaaaaaang!

However, the gigantic sword failed to graze the hem of Jin Sahyuk’s clothes. She had summoned a shield that easily blocked the sword and followed up by swinging a whip at the gaps in Chae Nayun’s defense.

“Euk!”

Chae Nayun was flung back after getting smacked in the chest.

This was already her sixth time failing.

Jin Sahyuk looked down at her with the same eyes as if to openly humiliate her.

“You’re weak,” she said.

Chae Nayun gritted her teeth at the comment and got up. She rushed at Jin Sahyuk for the seventh time. This time, she used a combination of feints and consecutive attacks. Dozens of mana swords ferociously charged at Jin Sahyuk.

“Hmm...”

However, Jin Sahyuk simply tapped the ground with her feet and dozens of spears shot up from the ground to destroy Chae Nayun’s swords.

“Ah!” Chae Nayun exclaimed and froze on the spot.

“Pitiful... Do you really think you can protect him from them with pitiful skills like yours?”

Chae Nayun’s eyes widened as she realized the meaning behind those words. Jin Sahyuk was referring to those people they encountered that day, the Chameleon Troupe. After all, Chae Nayun recognized the stupid voice of that gigantic man as well.

However, what surprised her was the fact that this woman was watching them that day.

“You bitch...”

Anger welled up inside of Chae Nayun, but her head became cooler the angrier she got.

She controlled her shattered sword with mana and mended it.

“I suggest that you give up.”

“...You better shut your trap while I’m still being nice.”

“I’m not someone the likes of you can handle.”

“Shut up!” Chae Nayun's voice thundered across the dueling arena.

Someone suddenly interrupted, “Hey, cursing at the instructor is a point deduction!”

However, she didn’t care about that at all. Chae Nayun surrounded her entire body with mana and everyone in the arena gasped in shock.

She was now armed with mana armor. The armor made out of layers of tempered mana wasn’t aura. It was an entirely different type of armor that perfectly protected its wearer.

Jin Sahyuk raised a brow at the unexpected display and started to warm up her mana.

“Kwuuuuahhh!” Chae Nayun screamed and swung her sword with all her might to kill that bitch.

* * *

Classes finally ended at five exactly when the sun began to set.

I went to the club room while massaging my aching wrist.

“Hajin!”

I bumped into Kim Suho in the corridor.

“Ah, you surprised me. What do you want?”

Kim Suho bitterly smiled and placed his arm around my shoulder,
“There’s no club activity today.”

“...What?”

I furrowed my brows and looked at the bags in Kim Suho’s hands.
They were probably the toys that Evandel always wanted.

“Hoo, are you trying to compete? Evandel is still going to choose me in the end, you know?” I sneered.

“Haha, no. Not that,” Kim Suho shook his head and smiled.

He gave me a piece of paper. It was a visiting ticket.

“Go drop by the infirmary for me.”

“...?”

He said a few other things that instantly convinced me to change my destination to the infirmary.

I really wanted to see Evandel, but she was my priority right now.

* * *

“Erm...?”

Chae Nayun could feel someone’s gentle touch on her forehead.

“...Ah.”

She opened her eyes and saw a familiar face sitting in front of her bed.
Perhaps it was because she was dizzy, but everything seemed so hazy and dream-like.

Was he always this handsome or did he start to get handsome these days? It would be a problem if he got any more handsome than this...

“Why did you get so worked up?” he asked in a grumbling voice.

However, Chae Nayun felt happy since she could feel that he was sincerely worried about her. She still had a hard time discerning if this was just a dream, so she pinched her cheek.

It hurt, but also felt good.

“Hehehe...”

Kim Hajin furrowed his brows after seeing Chae Nayun laugh like an idiot.

“Answer me,” he said.

“Ah... She provoked me first... I thought I could win, but... it was a stretch...”

Chae Nayun knew very well how much stronger she had grown. In fact, she was confident that she could win against the twenty-two year old Chae Nayun from her previous life if they fought right now.

However, Jin Sahyuk was much stronger than her past self.

“Yawn...!”

Anyways, a loss was a loss. What was important was that Kim Hajin finally came.

Chae Nayun yawned after finally letting go of the tension and Kim Hajin suddenly placed his hand on her forehead.

She could feel warm mana flow from his hand into her body and started to feel warm.

Chae Nayun looked at Kim Hajin dumbfoundedly.

“Don’t overdo it from now on,” he whispered.

She felt like her ear would melt from his warm, gentle voice. She felt all warm and fuzzy inside.

Chae Nayun smiled, but suddenly recalled what Jin Sahyuk said.

Pitiful... Do you really think you can protect him from them with those pitiful skills of yours?

A corner of her heart felt heavy after remembering those words, but she continued to smile.

She steeled her resolve to become stronger and protect Kim Hajin, Chae Jinyoon, her happiness, and all of her friends.

“Alright...” Chae Nayun replied with a smile.

However, a sharp pain suddenly struck her head and forced her to wrap her hands around it.

“Keuk!”

Kim Hajin jumped from his seat and asked, “Hey, are you alright...?”

Chae Nayun didn’t miss this opportunity. She wrapped her arms around his neck and pulled him down.

Kim Hajin muttered, “Eh? Aah?” before falling on top of her in the bed.

Chae Nayun wrapped her arms around his waist and kissed him. Kim Hajin was severely taken aback by her boldness, but slowly surrendered himself and kissed her back.

A faint gentle warmth blossomed in the closed white space.

Side Stories 77

Chae Nayun (32)

I stayed in the Pharmacy Club's room and checked my smartwatch. The EN Entertainment's CEO just accessed his pc.

I watched the mouse cursor move when I suddenly felt a weight on my shoulder.

“Oh... Where did you learn this skill?”

It was Chae Nayun. She clung to my back with her chin resting on my shoulder. Her entire body weight was on my shoulder.

Suddenly, the CEO synced his personal server to his desktop.

“Ah! He connected it!” I exclaimed and stood up.

“Ack! I bith my thong... ouch...”

“Quiet down and wait.”

“Ah... My tongue hurts... What's going on?”

Click... Clack...

The mouse cursor moved and clicked a few times before he accessed his personal server. I immediately used [Hacking] the moment he opened the server.

[Hacking Target – Kim Jiheung's Personal Server]

I instantly copied the entire server database before Kim Jiheung was able to switch his PC off. I started to comb through the files on the database.

“Hmm...”

There were a lot of files on the server, but none of them were related to Chae Jinyoon. However, there was one recorded conversation that caught my eye.

[How about we stick to Chae Joochul from now on? I think it's a matter of time before things come to light.]

[Let's discuss that matter in person later.]

This couldn't be considered concrete evidence, but was more than enough to tell me that I was going in the right direction. There was definitely some sort of connection between Kim Sukho and Chae Jinyoon.

“This...”

Chae Nayun suddenly frowned while looking at the monitor.

Ddreuk...

The clubroom door opened and the newly formed trio of Yoo Yeonha, Kim Suho, and Yi Yeonghan entered. Yoo Yeonha was carrying a stack of files at her waist.

“Did you find something?” she asked before placing the stack of files on the table.

“Yeah, a bit.”

“That's good. We also found something. Let me brief you on what we found first,” Yoo Yeonha said.

She took out a pen from her pocket and continued, “I asked my uncle... No, someone I know for a favor, but it's going to take time. We did some digging ourselves.”

She underlined the name of a hospital ward in red and said, “Here. We heard a strange rumor from this unexpected place.”

Both Chae Nayun and I took a closer look at the file Yoo Yeonha marked.

“Where’s that?” Chae Nayun asked.

“But... the people that were following us were probably sent by Kim Sukho, right?” Yoo Yeonha changed the subject with a question.

I simply nodded in response.

“I guess so...” Chae Nayun muttered.

“So I was thinking...” Yoo Yeonha muttered while stealing glances at Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun’s face stiffened before she let out a sigh, “Haa...”

Yoo Yeonha focused her gaze on the file on the table and said, “The place Chae Jinyoon went to was... not a den of djinns, but rather... A place where the association and djinns secretly traded the relics they stole from others.”

“...What?” Chae Nayun muttered in shock.

She gritted her teeth so hard that we could clearly hear it and she glared at Yoo Yeonha.

The information Yoo Yeonha shared was so shocking that even Kim Suho and Yi Yeonghan looked at her in disbelief.

“W-Where did you hear that?”

“A patient in a mental hospital.”

“Huh? What? Hey, are you asking us to believe that right now or what?” Chae Nayun asked with a frown.

I could feel the heat of her anger radiating on my skin.

“That mental patient was the guild dispatcher in charge of sending Chae Jinyoon the coordinates, but he suddenly became mentally ill and was admitted to an asylum right after that incident. The strange thing is... he was admitted to an asylum in Hamgyong Province, and a very remote one at that,” Yoo Yeonha explained.

“...”

Chae Nayun covered her face and didn't say anything.

I held her hand as she trembled and she looked at me with eyes that had tears welling out of them.

She tightly held my hand and said, “Then... my brother he... in that incident...”

“It's possible that the association pulled some stunt to make sure he was silenced,” Yoo Yeonha continued.

Chae Nayun gritted her teeth and trembled. Her anger had reached a point where she had to clench her fist just to suppress it.

I wrapped my arms around her and hugged her. Her trembling anger resonated all over my body.

“Calm down. It's only a possibility and nothing is certain yet. Also, we're not strong enough even if it was true. We're up against Kim Sukho,” Yoo Yeonha said. She bit her lips and added, “At least three years... We're going to need that much time at least. I will become the guild leader of Essence of the Straits and you should establish yourself as a hero with your own forces, Nayun. It won't be easy, but we will have to endure until then...”

Chae Nayun didn't respond as she was busy suppressing the anger inside of her. It wouldn't have been possible for the original Chae Nayun to suppress her anger in this kind of situation, but the current Chae Nayun was more than capable of controlling her emotions.

I responded on Chae Nayun's behalf, "I think there's a way to shorten that period."

"Huh...? Ah, of course. We could do that if Nayun's father, my father, and Jonghak help us. However, we'll need more concrete evidence if we were to get their cooperation."

"No, not that," I shook my head.

We needed something else instead of family connections or power to put Kim Sukho on trial and pay for his crimes.

What we needed to do was...

Something that was clearly illegal and even more cowardly than the tactics he used.

* * *

In a skyscraper in Cheongdam overlooking the Seoul night sky and Han River.

"I see..." Kim Sukho nodded after receiving a report.

The report stated that a few Cube cadets visited the asylum in Hamgyong Province. There wasn't much to it at a glance. However, it was a vital piece of information if matched with the current events that took place recently.

"What do you think is our best course of action?"

Kim Sukho looked down at his subordinate making the report and smiled.

"They're kids that don't know what they're doing," he said.

Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin, both of them had no idea what truth was waiting for them at the end. They were most likely clueless as to what that truth even was.

Chae Nayun was probably after the truth behind what happened to her brother while Kim Hajin was probably out for vengeance for his parents. Ironically, that boy was helping the girl whose family was the main culprit behind the death of his parents. That girl was also in love with the boy that her family ruined.

To think that his lover's family was the one who killed his parents...

How ironic was that? It was hard to believe that such a tragic story could exist in real life in the first place. Perhaps that was the reason so many tragedies existed in this world.

"I guess there's no helping it."

However, both of them and even Kim Sukho would be greatly affected should the truth behind the Kwang-Oh Incident be exposed to the world.

That truth would bring destruction to the current order.

Kim Sukho had no idea if those lovers would be able to continue loving each other after the truth came to light, so he felt that it was his duty as an adult to prevent those two from experiencing such heartbreak.

"First, eliminate that annoying little brat," Kim Sukho ordered.

"Yes, I understand," the subordinate replied before retreating to the balcony and jumping off the skyscraper.

Kim Sukho watched as the man was carried away by the wind and disappeared from his sight.

* * *

The second semester felt much shorter compared to the first semester. It was probably because of the people I hung out with during the second semester.

Anyways...

Thanks to that, our midterm exam was right around the corner. However, I was spending my time using [Hacking] to dig up dirt on those in power.

Also, I started training with Chae Nayun. I used stigma to help her perfectly control her mana and she was rapidly growing stronger thanks to her innate talent.

“Phew... I’m so tired...”

Chae Nayun was drenched in sweat, but immediately reached for my body and started touching me all over.

“H-Hey, we’re in public right now.”

“Hehe, who cares?”

I pointed at a boulder on top of the mountain behind us just to distract her from trying to tickle me.

“Look at that,” I said.

“What? Huh...?” Chae Nayun looked at where I was pointing and found Jin Sahyuk. She frowned and grumbled, “Why is she there...?”

“I called her,” I answered.

“Huh? Why?!” Chae Nayun shouted before pouting and sulking. She started bashing her forehead on my shoulder.

“To show you how I plan to wake up Chae Jinyoon.”

“...”

She immediately stopped bashing her forehead on my shoulder and nodded before standing up.

I called Jin Sahyuk, “Hey! Come down!”

Jin Sahyuk let out a sigh and shook her head before jumping and landing in front of us. She looked at Chae Nayun with eyes full of pity and sighed.

“...You look hopeless. Aren’t you even ashamed of yourself?” Jin Sahyuk asked.

“What? Are you talking about me? Why? Jealous?” Chae Nayun sneered in response.

“Tsk...” Jin Sahyuk simply clicked her tongue in annoyance.

“Ha... I guess you’re jealous. Just admit that you’re jealous,” Chae Nayun continued sneering.

I immediately put a stop to her childish tirade, “Stop it. Can you show that to Nayun as well?”

Jin Sahyuk frowned at my words and Chae Nayun expressed her discontent on the matter as well.

I looked at Chae Nayun and said, “Don’t act like that to someone willing to help you.”

“Ah... Alright...” Chae Nayun muttered before her expression shifted to that of an innocent angel. She extended her hand towards Jin Sahyuk.

However, Jin Sahyuk completely ignored her outstretched hand and said, “Before that...”

She tapped on her smartwatch and projected a hologram of a notebook. It was Kim Chundong’s diary that I gave her a while back.

“Tell me the password to this damned diary...” Jin Sahyuk grumbled.

“I already told you last time...” I squinted my eyes and replied.

“I forgot... No, I know it but I can’t open it. I think you pulled some trick or something...”

It seemed that her pride wouldn't allow her to admit that she simply forgot the password...

* * *

I came to Seoul alone this time without Chae Nayun. This was because of the first midterm exam.

[First Midterms Exam: Please go to your designated testing center.]

Under normal circumstances, I would've said this was a new kind of test. However, I found out through [Hacking] that it was highly likely that the test was a trap and an assassin was waiting for me.

This was something I wished for as well since I couldn't keep looking behind me all the time.

I braced myself and walked the streets of Seoul. There were numerous hints and riddles about where the testing center was spread across the city. I arrived at a manhole after solving all of the puzzles.

“...Do I have to go down?” I wondered.

Of course, there was no one for me to ask. I opened the manhole cover and made my way down.

Tak! Tak! Tak!

The only sounds in this dark and damp environment were my feet hitting the ladder every time I took a step down. I heightened my senses and remained vigilant for any possible dangers, but I was able to make it down without any problems.

“...What the?”

Initially, I was certain that this would definitely be a trap.

“Oh, Kim Hajin is here too?”

Surprisingly, there were around twenty cadets present including familiar faces from my class such as Yi Jiyoon and Jin Hoseung. There were even other named cadets like Shen Yuan from China as well.

“Oh, it’s Nayun’s boyfriend,” Yi Jiyoon teased as she tapped me on the shoulder.

I looked at her and saw that she was wearing a pair of spectacles.

“What’s that?” I asked.

“Ah, this? It’s glasses that can film videos.”

“Why would you film videos...?”

“My PR video. Most cadets have started filming those in recent days. Our chances of getting into a good guild will increase if we film how we do in these kinds of tests. Ah, you should’ve brought one as well. Who knows? Maybe you’ll need it to force your way into the same guild as Nayun.”

“...Is that so?”

I bitterly smiled at her sneering before taking a look around us.

“Hmph!” Yi Jiyoon scoffed at my response.

I saw Yoo Yeonha busily ordering her underlings around like usual.

Around thirty minutes passed before another twenty-nine other cadets arrived. It was exactly at that moment that the fiftieth cadet came down and the ceiling suddenly started rumbling.

— The first midterm exam will now start since the required number of participants has been fulfilled.

A voice signaled the start of the exam.

All of the cadets anxiously waited for the test to start, but nothing happened after that. We couldn't feel any mana or the presence of monsters nearby.

Sseuuu...

The only thing that followed was the sound of flowing water, which sounded a bit strange and distant.

I didn't think much about it, but I decided to check where the sound was coming from just in case. My thousand-mile eyes pierced through the darkness and spotted a huge wave of water rushing towards us.

— Survive and make it out of this place in one piece.

“A wave is coming!” I shouted.

All of the cadets looked at me and tilted their heads, but their confused faces didn't last long as the sound of waves crashing quickly approached us in no time.

Kwaaaaang!

Everything else happened in a split second as the powerful waves swallowed us in the blink of an eye.

I was thrown to the floor and ceiling numerous times as I tumbled underwater. I could feel the water forcing itself into every single hole in my body.

However, the strange thing was that... I wasn't struggling at all.

Strangely enough, I was able to breathe underwater.

I racked my brains for a while before suddenly recalling the jewel I obtained from the whale. I was able to breathe underwater thanks to the Essence of the Sea in stigma.

I freely swam underwater thanks to that and immediately went towards Yoo Yeonha. I grabbed her wrist.

I swam up with her in tow and pulled her to the surface of the water.

“Bleu... Bleurghh...!”

“Are you alright?”

“Mmpf... bleurgh...! Yeah... Huff... Huff...” Yoo Yeonha replied as she squirted water out of her nose, ears, and mouth.

“M-Me too! Help me too! Please!”

I suddenly heard Yi Jiyeon’s voice and grabbed her.

She composed her breathing and checked her glasses, “Phew! It didn’t break!”

“Is that important right now?”

“Me too! Me too! Kim Hajin! We were on the same team that one time!”

It was Jin Hoseung this time.

I used aether to save all three of them. We were currently floating like a buoy on the surface of the water.

It was at that moment...

I sensed a sinister wave of mana quickly making its way towards us. It was aimed at the space between the surface of the water and the ceiling.

I immediately pulled the cadets down with me.

Kwuuuuuung!

A destructive sound resounded above the water. The force was so great that it evaporated more than half of the water in the sewer.

“Phew...”

I shook my drenched body and an unfamiliar sinister voice spoke from a distance.

— Did you really want to take your friends along with you that badly? You should’ve just gotten yourself swept along by the currents.

— Yes, you shouldn’t have dragged them in.

Yoo Yeonha readied her whip while Yi Jiyeon and Jin Hoseung jumped up in fright and clung behind me.

“This... things have taken a bad turn...” Yoo Yeonha said with obvious anxiety in her voice.

However, I simply replied with a smirk, “I already knew.”

I knew a long time ago that there would be assassins waiting for me.

“...You knew?” Yoo Yeonha muttered in disbelief.

That was why I already made full preparation for this day. Today was the day that my one-time use gift I paid 1,000 SP for would make its debut.

I only paid 1,000 SP for this cheat-like combat gift since I placed a hefty penalty of only being able to use it once in battle.

“Yeah,” I replied while taking my cadet coat off.

A dagger suddenly flew towards me without making a sound. It flew at the speed of light aiming for my neck, but I simply stopped it with a single finger. However, that wasn’t the end of it as dozens of daggers rained towards me.

“Kyah! What’s this?!”

Yi Jiyeon and Jin Hoseung were scared for their lives, but I was actually smiling right now.

“Just you wait,” I said with an excited smile.

I saw the assassin smiling as well from within the darkness.

My body was itching to do only one thing right now. To see how long that bastard would keep smiling.

Time to find out.

Side Stories 78

Chae Nayun (33)

[Final Radiance]

— A temporary enlightenment will occur during critical moments and last for seventy seconds.

— This gift will be consumed the moment it is used.

Final radiance would allow me to use all of my stigma. It was a one-time-use gift that only lasted a bit over a minute. I honestly didn't have any idea how to handle the surge of stigma that became available to me.

“Hap...!”

The mark of stigma became extremely prominent on my arm.

Stigma viciously swirled all over my body and heated it up. I could feel it enveloping my entire body, which started unleashing mana sparks.

This was a luxury I wouldn't be able to even imagine in my wildest dreams.

The assailants unleashed their mana and shook the ground, but I immediately responded by forming an earth barrier. Then, the earth barrier immediately disappeared after it blocked the burst of mana that the assailants shot. However, my barrier wasn't the only thing that disappeared because their mana disintegrated as well.

“...?”

They seemed flabbergasted by the unbelievable situation. Their reaction gave me confidence that this unleashed stigma of mine definitely gave me powers much stronger than theirs.

I conjured a spear in one hand and immediately sprung to action as seventy seconds would be nowhere near enough. I had to make sure not to waste even a sliver of a second.

This spear, rather, the javelin I conjured would be far more destructive than any arrow or bullet I could fire. I could still apply my [Master Sharpshooter] gift to it when throwing.

Bzzzt...! Bzzzt...!

The javelin, which was much larger than an arrow, emitted a fearsome mana. I aimed at the assailants that were still flabbergasted.

They flinched and prepared to evade, but I already captured them in my sights.

My thousand-mile eyes were now amplified by the unsealed stigma. A single look was more than enough for me to activate my gift. I was confident that I was now in a realm where I could perfectly hit my targets without fail.

In short, I was now able to hit any moving targets that I laid eyes on.

I threw my spear at my targets.

...!

The blue spear zipped through the air without a sound. It flew silently because its speed surpassed the speed of sound, and it exploded upon reaching its intended targets.

However, it didn't damage the walls of the sewer. Stigma's mana possessed quite the mysterious ability to damage only its intended target and nothing else.

Stigma's ability to differentiate its target was truly amazing.

“Kuheuk...”

I ended up using thirty seconds of my time with that attack and fell to my knee gasping for air.

I could see the mana particles floating in the distance where I threw the mana javelin. The assailants hit by the mana javelin were sprawled on the ground.

They looked like a mess... just like how I was right now.

“Ah... I’m dying...” I muttered before falling on my butt.

I looked around my surroundings and saw three sets of eyes looking at me. Yoo Yeonha seemed to be the one most surprised by what just happened.

The three of them gathered around me not long afterwards.

“Wow! You’re quite the fighter, Hajin. But I guess that was a part of the test, right? They were probably trying to test our cooperation with each other or something, right? Right?” Yi Jiyeon asked and added with a grin, “We should be getting the highest mark, right? I supported you after all, right? Right?”

Did Yi Jiyeon buff me?

It was only after hearing her that I checked my body. I found a clear energy circulating in me. I guess you could expect this much from a cadet born with the innate talent to be a top-class supporter.

“Anyways...” I said before I looked at the male and female assailants.

I tried to see if there was anything on them that I could hack, but unfortunately, they weren’t wearing a smartwatch.

— Kim Hajin, Yi Jiyeon, Yoo Yeonha, and Jin Hoseung. You have passed the test. Proceed forward.

A voice suddenly spoke from somewhere in the ceiling.

I couldn't help but scoff at those words.

Were they planning to pass it off as part of the test? That would probably be it since there was no way Cube could resist any pressure exerted by the association. Cube had already been overrun by Kim Sukho's subordinates a long time ago.

"Are they dead?" Yoo Yeonha whispered.

I could tell that they were still breathing, but I couldn't go and kill them since that would be a violation of the test rules and I would be framed as a murderer.

"No, but too many eyes are watching. We can't kill them," I shook my head and replied.

My hands were tied, but it wasn't that I had no options. I had already prepared for such a scenario.

I approached the assailants and placed my hands on their foreheads. Then I used [Medicinal Wisdom] and hoped they wouldn't keep chasing after me.

I used up the ten seconds I had left and successfully planted a curse in them.

"Phew..." I let out a sigh and fell to the ground.

Yoo Yeonha and Jin Hoseung quickly approached me.

"Shall we go now?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

I bitterly smiled and shook my head, "No, you go ahead."

"Huh? Why? Let's go together."

"I think... I'm out."

I couldn't feel my body. It was a one-time-use skill, but my body still had to deal with the repercussions of using so much power.

"What do you mean you're out...?" Yoo Yeonha said before she flung my arm around her shoulders and pulled me up.

Jin Hoseung rushed to help her while Yi Jiyeon simply smiled.

"Look at this," she said in a tone that seemed to hint that what they were doing wasn't necessary.

She used her gift and conjured a pair of assistive devices that latched onto my legs. The assistive devices propped me up and completely took the weight off my body.

Surprisingly, I was able to effortlessly move my legs.

"Wow... this is quite... cool," I muttered while moving my legs.

"Right? This is a secret skill I'm trying to master. Ah, don't tell the others about it, okay? It's still incomplete, so I'm embarrassed to show it... Anyways, why don't you try walking?" Yi Jiyeon replied.

Yoo Yeonha and Jin Hoseung let go of me.

I felt weird standing effortlessly on my own, but I soon got used to it and started to walk.

* * *

After the first midterms exam concluded...

Chae Nayun sat in the Pharmacy Club's clubroom and looked out the window. The seriousness on her face seemed to show that she was thinking of something complicated.

She tried to act nonchalant about it, but a torrent of thoughts dizzily rushed into her head every night since she regressed.

'Is grandfather aware of what's going on? What about father? Or are they turning a blind eye to this?'

Chae Nayun was always proud of her family, but the head of her family, her grandfather, had one huge and important flaw. A flaw that didn't make him feel any sadness despite what happened to his grandson.

She didn't blame her grandfather because not being able to feel wasn't his fault, but the price he had to pay for using his abilities. It was the price he had to pay for obtaining such power.

Creak...

The clubroom's door suddenly opened and Kim Hajin came in.

"Ah, were you waiting for me?" he asked.

All of the complicated thoughts in Chae Nayun's head vanished as she brightly smiled and said, "Kim Hajin!"

She stretched out her arms and walked over to him. He didn't avoid her as she wrapped her arms around his waist and buried her face in his chest while he patted her head.

It felt as if she was being reenergized by him. She rubbed her face on his chest for a good five minutes before she, unfortunately, had to sit down.

"Now take a seat," Kim Hajin said. He looked around the numerous plants in the Pharmacy Clubroom's greenhouse, "It's time for us to slowly get started..."

Chae Nayun nervously gulped and asked, "By get started, you mean...?"

"To save your brother," he confidently replied.

A sense of fullness surged from the depths of her heart after hearing his confidence. She tried to cry and hug him again, but he stopped her.

“Rather, what we’re going to do now is...” Kim Hajin said.

“Oh, right. What about the assassins? Are you alright? I heard what happened from Yeonha,” Chae Nayun suddenly interrupted and asked.

“Huh? Oh, yeah. I’m fine. I planted a curse on them, so they’ll piss themselves if they ever see me,” he nonchalantly replied.

The curse Kim Hajin planted in the assassins would trigger the moment they came in contact with him. It wasn’t a fatal curse, but it was more than enough to make them feel intense fear to the point of pissing themselves.

“Phew... That’s a relief...”

Bzzt... Clack...!

All of the lights in the clubroom were suddenly snuffed out. Even the lights outside the window went out.

Chae Nayun instantly shot up and stood in front of Kim Hajin. A single light bulb at the door dimly flickered.

“...”

Both of them were surrounded by five robed individuals, and there were no gaps in the encirclement.

It took only a second for Kim Hajin and Chae Nayun to figure out the identity of their enemies.

“Wow, there are quite a lot of good things here,” a robed woman exclaimed while looking around the greenhouse.

Kim Hajin nervously gulped. It was the Chameleon Troupe. He knew very well that they stood no chance of winning if they fought with just the two of them.

“We can take all of these, right Boss?” the woman asked.

However, Boss flat out ignored the woman’s words, who was most likely Jain. Instead, she stared at Kim Hajin and Chae Nayun.

“Give me the heart,” she said.

“...”

Kim Hajin shook his head in response.

The heart was the key to saving Chae Jinyoon.

“Are you refusing?”

He started to rack his brain as tension flared in the air. He had already used his trump card ability. No, he wouldn’t stand a chance against five of the Chameleon Troupe members even if he still had [Final Radiance].

Then did he have to give up the heart? But that meant that all hopes of saving Chae Jinyoon would disappear forever without the heart.

Kim Hajin racked his brains and even used Bullet Time to slow everything down. He used that time to go over the settings.

“Then... I’ll have no choice but to destroy your heart,” Boss said.

“Fuck off,” Chae Nayun growled with her sword in hand.

She infused mana into her sword and prepared to fight, but Kim Hajin suddenly grabbed her shoulder and gently pulled her back.

Chae Nayun was taken aback by his sudden actions.

He calmed Chae Nayun down before walking over and standing in front of the Boss.

“Yes, I stole this from you guys, so it’s only right for me to return it,”

Kim Hajin said.

“Huh? Stole? When? Are you saying that you stole that from us?” Cheok Jungyeong asked with his eyes wide open in disbelief. He looked at Boss and Kim Hajin before asking, “Is he telling the truth, Boss?”

“...”

Boss didn’t respond. She didn’t even spare a glance at Cheok Jungyeong, but it seemed like her pride was hurt by what Kim Hajin said.

“But we really need this heart,” Kim Hajin said.

He already found a solution to the problem. One that would satisfy the Chameleon Troupe while making sure the heart remained in his possession.

“Instead, we’ll pay you cash,” he added.

“...”

Boss remained silent.

Kim Hajin looked at Chae Nayun and asked, “Hey, Chae Nayun. How much do you have right now?”

“...Huh? Ah,” Chae Nayun looked lost for a second, but soon nodded after realizing his plan. She replied, “Hmm... I have ten billion won in my bank account. It’ll be around fifty billion won if I sell all my stocks and stuff... Ah, there was this thing that grandfather gifted me before. It was an artifact from the Shilla period, a golden incense burner.”

Boss flinched at her words.

Fortunately, it was a positive response. The golden incense burner was definitely tempting for her. The golden incense burner from the Shilla period was an artifact that every single wealthy individual in this world desired.

“How much do you think this heart is worth?” Kim Hajin asked while pointing at his chest.

There was no need for them to fight the Chameleon Troupe if negotiation was possible. They could barter for the heart.

“I mean, you guys should be aware of it too, right? You won’t find any treasure much more valuable than the golden incense burner even if you turn the Amazon upside down. I’ll give that to you.”

“...”

Boss maintained her silence.

However, Kim Hajin already read her, “Fifty billion won on top of the golden incense burner.”

Those words were enough to resolve the conflict in her.

It was quite funny that Kim Hajin was currently negotiating with Chae Nayun’s money and possessions, but it was a cheap price to pay in exchange for their lives.

“...”

Boss looked at Jain and Cheok Jungyeong.

Jain signaled ‘OK’ with her fingers.

‘Incense burner... Incense burner... Incense burner... ’

Jain’s head was already filled with the brightly glowing incense burner.

“How do we know that you’ll keep your promise?” Jain asked.

Kim Hajin nonchalantly replied, “You can just kill us if we don’t keep our promise, right?”

“...I guess you’re right,” Jain replied with a smirk. She turned to Boss and asked, “So what are you going to do, Boss?”

“...Picture. Show me a picture of the golden incense burner,” Boss said.

Kim Hajin looked at Chae Nayun. She nodded and projected an image from her smartwatch.

“You guys will recognize this when you see it. It’s an extremely valuable treasure...” she said.

Ziing!

A hologram was projected from her smartwatch. It was an image of a golden incense burner meticulously crafted in the Shilla Dynasty by master craftsmen. This treasure boasted a status that reached the pinnacle of craftsmanship. Its radiance of grandeur could be felt from the projected hologram.

“Yeah... I know that’s precious...” Jain muttered while dazed by the hologram.

“Also,” Kim Hajin suddenly said as he stepped forward and dispersed the hologram. He continued in a deep voice, “I want to make a request.”

“...A request?” Boss pursed her lips and muttered.

“Yeah,” Kim Hajin replied.

He showed no signs of being nervous and even looked at each of the Chameleon Troupe members with confident eyes.

“I want to give you the opportunity to take everything away from Kim Sukho,” he said.

Silence ensued. Not a single sound could be heard in the clubroom and none of the Chameleon Troupe members’ expressions shifted as they stared at the boy.

Then, a burst of mad laughter broke the silence. It was Cheok Jungyeong.

“Bwahahaha! Someone like you will do what to that old fox? Bwahahaha! What an interesting boy you are!”

On the other hand, Boss maintained her silence while seemingly deep in thought and Jain rubbed her chin beside her.

In the midst of this silence with only Cheok Jungyeong’s mad laughter...

Creak...

The clubroom door opened.

“I gave it some thought and...” Yoo Yeonha said as she entered the clubroom with a stack of files in her arms.

She flinched the moment she bumped into a huge robed man. Then she blinked a few times before looking around the room.

“Hmm... I guess we can talk later,” she said after sensing the hostility and tension in the air.

She closed the door shut and ran as fast as she could.

Cheok Jungyeong opened the door three seconds later and came back with Yoo Yeonha exactly two seconds after he left.

“Let me go! Let me go! Argh! Kyaaaaah!” Yoo Yeonha screamed after she was thrown by Cheok Jungyeong.

Chae Nayun caught Yoo Yeonha.

“Calm down,” Kim Hajin said.

“W-What’s going on?!” Yoo Yeonha screamed.

He patted her on the shoulder and calmed her down, “We were in the middle of negotiation... Hey, you should join in.”

“What?” Yoo Yeonha frowned.

Kim Hajin pondered for a second and concluded that this situation must’ve been quite a surprise for her, but...

“No... Hey, Yoo Yeonha. You should lead this negotiation.”

“...What?”

“You like being in charge, right?”

Kim Hajin passed the reins to her since she was the most adept at negotiating among the three of them.

“Hey, I need to know what’s going on to negotiate... I mean, he just threw me...” she muttered.

However, her words fell on deaf ears as Kim Hajin started the negotiations with the Chameleon Troupe.

Side Stories 79

Chae Nayun (34)

“I hope you’re not thinking money is the only thing that matters to us?” Jain took off her robe with a frown and asked before Yoo Yeonha could say anything.

However, I was pretty sure that wasn’t her true face.

“Does that mean you’re not accepting the request?” Chae Nayun asked.

Jain brightly smiled and replied, “Isn’t that obvious? I mean, we do accept the trade you proposed earlier though.”

“Then what’s your standard when taking requests?” Chae Nayun slurred a bit. She tried her best not to show it, but couldn’t help feeling nervous.

“It has to be exciting. We don’t accept requests that don’t seem fun. What’s the point of doing something that’s no fun? Taking everything away from Kim Sukho? That sounds good, but it’s not fun. Right, Boss?” Jain said and looked at Boss.

However, Boss was looking dead straight at me without a shift in her expression.

Jain flinched and suddenly said, “Hmm... Hmm... Hold on a minute.”

She wrapped her arms around Boss’ shoulders and turned around before whispering.

— Boss, don’t tell me you’re planning to accept their request? It’s not only impossible, but it’s not feasible either.

—... Something is bothering me.

— What? What's bothering you?

— I'm curious why he's trying to go against Kim Sukho.

— Ah, I wonder when did our boss start to get so curious about others?

Boss lightly pushed Jain away and asked me, "Kim Sukho will try to kill you just as you're trying to kill him. However, what grudge do you have against him? Why are you going against him?"

Boss looked at me with inquisitive eyes, but Jain immediately yanked her back before I even got the chance to respond.

"Anyways, anyways! Let's decide on the date of the trade. We won't be discussing anything further today," Jain said after throwing Boss to Cheok Jungyeong.

Boss tilted her head in confusion before looking at me again, but Jain already tore a scroll. The magic engraved in the scroll activated and twisted the space around them.

The clubroom suddenly turned silent again.

"What was that...? Hey, Nayun... What's going on?" Yoo Yeonha asked while looking back and forth between us. "Hello? Excuse me? Nayun? Hey... Will you say something...?"

Only Yoo Yeonha's voice could be heard in the silence.

* * *

The next day, I was in the clubroom watching TV with Chae Nayun. We weren't the only ones as the other members were in the clubroom too.

Rachel was playing with Evandel, Kim Suho was texting Yun Seung-

Ah, Yoo Yeonha was busy doing her own stuff, and even Seo Youngji and Shin Jonghak were there.

“Hey...” Chae Nayun whispered.

I glanced at her and was surprised by her face beaming with happiness. It was the first time I saw such an expression on her.

Was she glad that we could spend such a peaceful and normal day with everyone else?

“What are you going to do if oppa wakes up...?” she looked up at me and asked.

I found her round and clear inquisitive eyes quite funny for some reason.

I patted her forehead and replied, “It’s your brother. You’re the one who will have to think about that, not me.”

“...No, that’s not what I meant,” Chae Nayun grumbled and cutely pouted.

I initially thought that it didn’t suit her, but slowly started to find her cute.

I tickled her chin like I would to a puppy and said, “Who knows? I guess graduating is the first thing on my list.”

Chae Nayun looked away and didn’t reply. Then she started kicking the table leg while looking at the floor.

“What’s wrong?”

“Nothing...”

She sulked a bit longer before asking in a trembling voice, “You won’t suddenly disappear...?”

“...”

I couldn't easily respond to her question. The reason was that this world wasn't my real world. This was not where I was from.

It would've been an easy question to answer if I had no choice but to go back or stay, but I had no idea what my options were at the moment.

I was nothing but a failed author in my world. However, I had my family, friends, and everything else that made me who I was in that world.

I could live happily ever after in this world as long as I gave up everything in that world. I could start a family with someone I wouldn't even dare look at back in the real world. I could even become an influential figure in this world with my abilities.

I... If only I could fully abandon my real world and accept this world as my own...

“...”

Chae Nayun held my hands. She was looking at me with her lovely smile while I was silently pondering over things.

“But... it doesn't matter,” she said while snickering and poking my waist.

I could tell that she was eagerly waiting for my answer behind that smile.

“Because I already told you before, right? I'm going to make it impossible for you to live without me,” she confidently said while staring straight into my eyes.

I could only smile in response as she already achieved a bit more than half of her objective.

However, Chae Nayun muttered in a painful voice this time, “But... I think I already lost...”

I didn’t ask why.

She buried her face in my shoulder and whispered, “I think... I’m the one who can’t live without you...”

Her hands were warm. I glanced around our surroundings before scratching the back of her ears. She seemed to like it as she closed her eyes and flashed a warm smile.

* * *

The midterm exams were finally finished. I was back at the dorm after a long time. My dorm room for this semester was slightly better than the last one as I ranked 451th for this semester.

I decided to look around my room before the pre-semester dorm cleaning started.

An overwhelming presence was waiting for me at my dorm room window. I was suffocated by her aura alone.

However, I tried to act as nonchalant as possible and asked, “Have you read the diary...?”

Jin Sahyuk simply looked at me without saying anything. Her sharp gaze felt like they were stabbing me in my chest, but she soon let out a sigh and nodded.

“...I read it hundreds of times, but I still can’t believe it,” she said before looking at the night sky out the window.

The moon was letting out a gentle luster.

“But I don’t think it’s impossible since I myself went through something impossible and came to this world,” she added.

She leaned on the window sill and started to fidget with her nails before continuing in a low voice, “I was foolish back then. I was drunk on my title as the king that... I lost a lot of things that were precious to me...”

Jin Sahyuk looked visibly tired under the moonlight. She was displaying weakness that went against how I designed her to be.

I felt quite nervous that she would stray from her settings because of this event.

“However, that’s not something I can change... I can’t return to those times, and I can’t go back to that place... In the end, it’s all over... I’ve been drifting aimlessly in this world for far too long,” she said with a bitter smile.

She was in a dangerous state. Her hopeless voice, void of even a hint of enthusiasm, made it clear to me that she lost all reason to live. She could even jump out of the window and end her own life.

“...You can just make a new one,” I said in hopes of deterring her from spiraling into depression.

Her gaze landed on me again.

“I heard that Kim Sukho has a few neutral city-states under his command. You can forcibly take one of them from him and rule over it. You can start anew and build your own kingdom,” I added.

The Jin Sahyuk I knew definitely had the capacity to do that, but she simply shook her head.

“I ruled over that world because it was my world. No, that world probably met its demise because I ruled over it... The continent plunged into chaos after my kingdom fell, and every citizen died because of my incompetence. What’s the point of creating another kingdom when I’m clearly incompetent to rule? I don’t have the plan or will to do something like that. Ah, but don’t worry. I will heed your request,” Jin Sahyuk said before she tapped her smartwatch and projected a hologram.

It was Kim Chundong’s diary that I gave her. She glossed over the diary she read hundreds of times with eyes filled with sadness.

“...No,” I disagreed and activated stigma.

“That world most certainly fell. No, it’s most likely in ruins now, but humans don’t die that easily. Humans are tenacious creatures who will always find a way to survive no matter what. You will be able to call those survivors into this world.”

“...?”

The hologram of the diary disappeared and Jin Sahyuk stared at me with eyes filled with curiosity.

However, it didn’t take long for her eyes to shift into hopelessness again as she snickered, “Hehehe... Someone like you will save the survivors of a world you don’t even know? Someone like you will do something that even I can’t?” she questioned.

“I’m thinking that it’s possible because it’s me,” I confidently replied while pointing at my heart. I added, “Did you forget? I’m connected with Kim Chundong.”

Jin Sahyuk’s eyes shot open and it seemed that she saw a sliver of possibility in my words.

“I’m confident it’s possible,” I continued.

I was actually quite confident that I could pull it off. Stigma was a power that could make anything possible. Although the amount I possessed was just a drop in a bucket, it wasn’t impossible if I placed a restriction such as only using an ability once in my lifetime.

“So help me first,” I added.

Jin Sahyuk continued to lean on the window sill and looked at me. She seemed disgruntled by what I said, but I knew for a fact that she was smiling underneath her expression.

“You’re overstepping your boundaries. I’m going now,” Jin Sahyuk said as she sat at the window.

However, I could clearly see that her expression and body language was a stark contrast to her hopeless self a while ago.

“See you tomorrow,” I said with a smile.

She didn’t bother responding as she jumped out the window. The way she descended wasn’t that of someone who gave up on life. She disappeared into the darkness without making a sound.

I strangely felt that she was no longer the final boss of this story.

* * *

The day finally came.

All of us took one ingredient from the clubroom’s greenhouse and headed to Seoul through the Cube portal. A limousine was already waiting for us at the portal station. We hopped in without saying a word to each other.

“We will depart now,” the driver said.

Chae Nayun simply nodded in response.

All of us looked out the window and saw another vehicle right beside ours.

It was the bodyguards, Tomer and Loelle, that Yoo Yeonha hired under Essence of the Straits.

“Phew...”

I felt nervous while looking at the passing scenery of the Han River. I wondered if it would be possible to wake Chae Jinyoon with the help of these various medicinal herbs, this heart, and Jin Sahyuk’s help.

I had been quite confident in my theory, but still felt nervous now that

D-Day arrived. My mind started to race as various anxious thoughts rapidly occupied it.

“...”

Still, I knew that Chae Nayun was the one who was the most anxious among us. I held her hand tightly since it was now my turn to comfort her.

Her eyes shot open in surprise as she looked at me, but I simply smiled in response.

To my surprise, she smiled back.

I was blinded... No, I didn't mean figuratively, but actually blinded.

I frowned and looked back. A bright ray of light headed towards our limousine.

However, this was also within our calculations as we already expected Kim Sukho to try and ambush us... We didn't expect him to do it so blatantly in the middle of the Han River Bridge though...

Kaboom!

A powerful explosion battered the limousine. The limousine withstood the explosion since it was made out of mana alloys, but it wasn't able to withstand the force and flipped upside down.

We were thrown around before floating in a zero-gravity state for a split second. Then we slammed onto the ground.

“Argh... Is everyone alright?!” Kim Suho was the first to check on everyone.

I was able to come out unscathed thanks to aether. It seemed like everyone else reacted in time and protected themselves with mana.

“Yeah, I'm alright! What about you, Yeonha?!” Chae Nayun shouted.

“Me too...” Yoo Yeonha replied.

“Which bastard dares to...” Shin Jonghak growled before kicking the limousine door open.

Bam!

The mana alloy was crushed by a single kick and the door flung open.

We released our seatbelts and came out of the vehicle.

“Are you alright, Hajin?” Chae Nayun asked while checking every inch of my body.

I nodded and said, “Yeah, but rather than that...”

I looked around our surroundings and laughed in disbelief.

“This is quite the sight...”

The scenery around us was indeed a sight.

The bridge was cut front and back, blocking not only us, but anyone else from leaving. We were basically stranded on top of the Han River. Not only that, our surroundings were flooded with the sounds of civilians panicking and the horns of their cars.

“...This is probably Kim Sukho’s doing,” Kim Suho said in a low voice.

I could sense in his voice that anger was welling up inside of him. He would erupt at any moment.

Kim Sukho was in deep shit now that he enraged Kim Suho to this point.

“Take up your arms, everyone,” Yoo Yeonha calmly instructed.

Chae Nayun took out her [Sword of Highlander], Shin Jonghak smiled and took out his green [Dragon Crescent Blade], and I morphed my Desert Eagle into a machine gun.

“They’re coming,” Yoo Yeonha warned.

Flocks of flying monsters headed toward us and a powerful surge of mana came from underneath the water.

“Are you ready?” I asked Chae Nayun.

She looked back at me and nodded with a smile. Her relaxed smile alone was more than enough to assure me.

There was no need to worry.

Side Stories 80

Chae Nayun (35)

Kim Sukho looked down at the Han River Bridge from a skyscraper in Yeouido.

There was nothing strange about the scenery. The sky was clear, cars and buses went about their way, and sunlight reflected on the water's surface.

Everything was peaceful and serene just like any other day.

"Hoho..." Kim Sukho laughed while biting on a cigar.

Even he couldn't see within the mirror barrier set up over the bridge. Of course, he didn't have to see what was going on inside as those brats would never survive against that person.

"I gave you numerous chances," Kim Sukho said in a low voice.

Those brats were truly foolish.

He wasn't sure if it was because they were young, possessed a strong sense of justice, or just out for revenge. However, their actions could no longer be considered innocent as they reached the verge of utter foolishness.

"I didn't want to go this far..."

Kim Sukho already knew what Kim Hajin was planning. The boy was trying to dig up dirt from his past and use it to threaten him. Of course, thinking it was possible in the first place was a huge miscalculation on the boy's part.

"You only have your own foolishness to blame."

Kim Sukho planned to keep his sturdy stronghold forever. He was going to pressure Essence of the Straight, dismantle Daehyun, and reform the association. He would get rid of his only obstacle, Chae Joochul, and take possession of not only the association, but the entirety of South Korea.

Not to mention, anything dirty or illegal that occurred along the way would be solely blamed on the djinns. Fabricating all sorts of lies would be extremely easy as long as he controlled the association.

“Hoo...”

He belched out a cloud of smoke and smiled. He couldn't stop himself from smiling and it didn't take long for him to start snickering.

“Ke... Kehehe...!”

He let out a sinister laugh and ended up even shedding a tear as he looked out the window again. The shining waters of the Han River, the skyscrapers, and the Hero Association's building were all underneath his feet. South Korea was under his feet.

“All of these...” he muttered.

‘Are mine. My kingdom and my world. No one else in this world will be able to say that these aren't mine. Nobody... ’

* * *

“Hey!”

Tomer, Loelle, and the rest of the protection unit drove over to us. Kim Suho had Misteltein raised as he stood alert while I observed the civilians trembling on the bridge.

“Hey, are you alright? What the hell is going on...” Tomer said, but her voice slowly drifted away from my ears.

A child was crying beside a bleeding man whom I presumed to be the father. An old woman was hugging her grandson and crying out for help. A man was trying his best to pull out his wife from the wreckage of what was once their car. A man with a severed leg cried out in agony while holding his knee...

“Ah...”

I was thrown into confusion at the sudden turn of events. There were hundreds of civilians trembling and crying in fear right now. All of them would die if the bridge collapsed or monsters appeared.

...All of them.

My body reacted before my head did. I immediately transformed my Desert Eagle into a machine gun and pulled the trigger at the countless flying monsters diving down.

I activated my thousand-mile eyes at the same time to count the number of civilians in my vicinity. There were four hundred fifty-eight of them.

I wanted to save them all. This strange feeling started to well up from the depths of my heart.

...Although I was nothing more than the novel's extra.

I separated aether from the Desert Eagle and formed multiple strands with it to gather all of the civilians into one place. Hundreds of civilians screamed in horror as aether yanked them together.

I formed aether into the shape of a dome after confirming that everyone was gathered in one place. An igloo with no entrance stood tall at the center of the bridge.

Kim Suho and the rest of the heroes instantly jumped into action and surrounded the igloo as if they had already agreed beforehand.

“They’re coming!” Kim Suho shouted.

Then, a man wearing a crumpled mask suddenly jumped out of the water.

I knew who he was from his story settings. He was one of the Nine Evils, Destruction.

“...Greetings,” Destruction said with a snicker.

The way he smiled and snickered was quite repulsive for some reason.

“That’s Destruction. A named djinn,” I said.

Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak immediately reacted by cutting down the monster they were fighting and stood in front of Destruction.

“Hohoho! You brats are quite cute...” Destruction nonchalantly said.

However, Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak immediately rushed at him before he managed to finish speaking.

Kim Suho zipped through the air and swung Misteltein with all his weight and mana at the named djinn’s legs. On the other hand, Shin Jonghak rushed forward and swung his Green Dragon Crescent Blade at the named djinn’s upper body. The mana in his spear cut through the air and let out a ripping sound.

That signaled the start of the battle.

The Green Dragon Crescent Blade and Misteltein complemented each other as they faced Destruction. The Green Dragon Crescent Blade made up for Misteltein’s lack of range while Misteltein made up for the Green Dragon Crescent Blade’s weight with its speed.

The two of them had dueled countless times, which in turn, ironically made them aware of how to support each other in combat.

Destruction initially had a smug smirk as he fought against them, but his smirk was soon replaced with a grimace.

“These brats dares to...!”

He was currently getting pushed back by two Cube freshmen. That was more than enough to make him feel ashamed.

Meanwhile, I shot down all of the flying monsters diving towards us while Chae Nayun and Rachel took care of the squid-looking monsters jumping out from the river.

The tides of battle on the bridge completely shifted in our favor.

“Hey! Activate it!” Destruction suddenly shouted.

A light glowed brightly from underneath the river before a massive amount of evil mana spread throughout the surroundings.

I was certain of that despicable evil mana’s objective. It was none other than to wreak havoc. They were planning to cause an explosion that would swallow not only this bridge, but a portion of the surrounding areas as well.

I was flabbergasted for a moment and fell deep in thought.

“...Kim Hajin!”

A single voice pierced through my confusion and I knew at that moment that the owner of that voice was the key to all of this.

Chae Nayun was walking towards me. She was the key.

I hugged her tightly. She flinched in surprise at my sudden action, but I ignored it and poured all of my remaining stigma into her.

Chae Nayun was stunned at the sudden surge of mana in her body.

“You can do it, right?” I asked.

She immediately understood what I meant and nodded.

What we needed to fight against that evil mana was an equivalent amount of mana or even more mana.

“...Sure,” she said.

Only Chae Nayun was capable of unleashing such huge amounts of mana. Her mana capacity was as vast as the ocean. After all, her gift in the first place was called the Sea of Magic Power.

“Phew...”

She calmed her breathing and gripped her sword. Her mana instantly amplified the moment she tightly gripped it and my stigma amplified her mana as well.

The third main catalyst to amplify her mana was none other than the ancient artifact, Eye of the Sun.

Chae Nayun’s mana was now amplified to an extent that was impossible to measure. Her sword emitted a powerful surge of mana that covered the entire bridge.

Baaaaaaaam!

At that moment, her mana covered the entire bridge as a powerful storm of evil mana shot out from underneath the river.

Chae Nayun swung her sword with all her might and faced the powerful storm of evil mana head-on.

Boooooooooom!

Chae Nayun’s mana and the evil mana slammed against each other. The powerful stream of red and blue energies pushed each other with neither giving more than an inch.

Meanwhile, that was the last thing I saw before I fell unconscious.

* * *

“Then... there’s a chance that the child you saved was Kim Hajin?”

Meanwhile, Jain was scratching her head at the Chameleon Troupe's hideout. Her forehead creased as if she was annoyed or upset.

"I'm not saying there's a chance. I'm telling you that he is, so let me go will you? Please let me go..."

A man bound by ropes squirmed on the ground like a caterpillar. The man was none other than Yoo Yeonha's uncle, Yoo Jinhyuk. He divulged everything he knew about Kim Hajin as soon as the Chameleon Troupe abducted him.

"Haaa..."

Jain let out a sigh before looking at Boss. On the other hand, Boss looked like she was deep in thought.

"So, what are you going to do about it, Boss?" Jain asked.

"..."

Boss didn't respond. Instead, she looked up at the empty ceiling as she reminisced about what happened in the past.

"...Beats me," she finally muttered.

Sympathy was a foreign feeling to her now, but that incident took place when she still had some of it left. She was young at that time, but vividly remembered what happened that day. No, it was more like that specific incident was a very memorable one that shaped who she was today.

"A debt must be repaid," she reiterated the iron rule of the Chameleon Troupe.

Jain pursed her lips before replying, "Sure, do as you like. However, we can't be out in the open. You know that, right? We should never ever be exposed."

Boss' debt was the Chameleon Troupe's debt in the end. That was the reason the Chameleon Troupe was forced to agree to her decision.

I opened my eyes and saw Chae Nayun holding me. Her smile made me come back to my senses.

“Are you awake?” she asked.

I couldn’t move my lips and my ears were ringing. I didn’t respond and silently looked around my surroundings instead.

I was in a place that I had visited a few times, the VIP outhouse’s garden in the hospital where Chae Jinyoon was currently admitted.

“...Yeah,” I muttered.

I caught sight of Jin Sahyuk. She was sitting at the entrance of the VIP outhouse like some kind of hooligan while looking straight at me.

I could feel mana all around me. It seemed like she was protecting this entire hospital.

“What happened...?” I asked.

“Seoul is a mess right now, but there were no civilian casualties thanks to you. Your ability is still protecting them as we speak,” Chae Nayun replied.

“That’s a relief...”

“Right? Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, and the others are wrapping up the situation. I used that opportunity to escape with you. The Chameleon Troupe helped us. That lady, Jain or whatever her name was, is probably disguised as me right now,” Chae Nayun explained with a smile.

I nodded in response and stood up with Chae Nayun’s assistance.

I looked at her and smiled, “Then... shall we go?”

“...Yeah.”

“Hey, Jin Sahyuk,” I called out.

She didn’t respond or anything, but followed right behind us without uttering a single word.

We passed the empty corridor and reached the VIP ward. My heart raced after reading the nameplate on the door, [Chae Jinyoon].

I composed myself and opened the door.

Chae Jinyoon was still lying motionless on the bed.

“What about the ingredients?” I asked.

“It’s all here,” Chae Nayun replied.

“It didn’t get contaminated by the teleportation magic or scroll, right?”

“Of course, I had to run all the way here, you know? Do you think I’m stupid or what?”

These ingredients had dense concentrations of pure, raw, and unrefined mana. This made teleportation magic and scrolls fatal to them. The mana within them could be distorted the moment they were exposed to teleportation mana, which could end up altering their entire composition.

“Here,” Chae Nayun took out the Hope Plant and Soul Mana Vermilion.

“Hooo...”

I composed myself again and took out the [Heart of Adaptation] from my chest. Then I offered the Hope Plant and Soul Mana Vermilion to the heart.

I looked at Jin Sahyuk and said, “Put Chae Jinyoon’s soul into this heart.”

“...Soul?” Chae Nayun muttered as her eyes shot wide open.

“Yeah, Chae Jinyoon’s soul is probably trapped right now. We’re going to extract his soul, place it into this heart, and put this heart in his body. That should wake him up.”

It was highly likely that Chae Jinyoon’s soul was trapped inside his own heart. The only person I could think of who was capable of extracting his soul was none other than Jin Sahyuk.

“Can you do it?” I asked.

Jin Sahyuk looked a bit unconfident, but soon nodded in response.

I checked how much stigma I had left to support Jin Sahyuk, but I had exhausted most of it at the bridge and it was just starting to replenish.

“Hold on. Let’s wait for an hour or two before beginning...” I said.

I immediately added a new gift, [Breathing Technique]. It cost me 1,000 SP to add this gift with the effect of, ‘Will increase recovery of stamina and stigma when breathing.’

It took three hours for me to finally recover all of my stigma.

Jin Sahyuk glared at me with a frown, “Are you ready?”

“Yeah, let’s start,” I replied.

“...Then, I’m going to start,” she channeled her mana.

Her mana seeped into Chae Jinyoon’s body. The mana started to heat his body and something like steam rose from him soon afterwards.

I immediately used stigma to assist Jin Sahyuk, and the steam grew more visible.

“Keuk...” Jin Sahyuk groaned as her mana condensed and spread throughout her body like a powerful surge of electricity.

Extracting a soul was something only she could do thanks to the gift [Incarnation], which only she possessed in this entire world.

At that moment, her mana reached its peak and she shouted...

“NOW!”

I immediately stored Chae Jinyoon’s soul in the heart.

Badump!

The heart jumped.

“Is it done...?” Jin Sahyuk asked.

She was drenched in sweat and fell on her butt after her legs gave out.

“All that’s left is to...” I muttered and swallowed the words, ‘put this in him.’

I nervously gulped and brought the heart closer to Chae Jinyoon’s chest. I had to squeeze every bit of my willpower to stop my hands from trembling.

The heart seeped into Chae Jinyoon’s chest.

“Hap...”

I suddenly heard someone lose their breath. I looked to my side and saw Chae Nayun holding her breath while looking over her brother.

No one said a word after that. A complete silence descended on the entire room. It felt as if the entire room was transported into a silent realm only filled with expectation and anxiety.

“Hoo...” Chae Jinyoon exhaled.

It wasn't a silent exhalation, but rather, the breath of someone teeming with life.

A tear dropped from Chae Nayun's eye.

"Nayun..." I wrapped my arms around her.

Chae Nayun looked at me with tears flowing out of her eyes.

"It's time to call your grandfather," I said.

We still had work to do because Chae Jinyoon was in danger. He was still the Achilles' heel of the entire association and Kim Sukho.

The only person in this world capable of protecting Chae Jinyoon until he testified was none other than Chae Joochul.

"Yeah..." Chae Nayun nodded and wiped her tears.

Side Stories 81

Chae Nayun (36)

“...How are we supposed to open this?” Yoo Yeonha grumbled while knocking on the igloo formed from aether at the center of the Han River Bridge.

“Hello? Can you open it from the inside? Hellooo?”

There was no response no matter how much she called out.

The barrier was gone and all of the monsters had been taken care of, but this thing alone hadn't disappeared.

“Do we have to destroy it?”

Tomer and Loelle approached. The pair that was specially recruited by Essence of the Straits played a vital role today.

Yoo Yeonha immediately straightened her back and put on an air of authority befitting that of the guild heir, “Well done, you two. I've realized your worth today.”

“...Huh? Ah, well... sure...”

“Yeah... thanks...”

At that moment, Yoo Yeonha was about to deliver a speech when the aether igloo finally opened.

“Kyaaaak! Uwaaaah!”

The civilians inside the aether igloo screamed and trembled in fright, but all of them soon let out a sigh of relief after seeing the numerous heroes waiting for them outside.

“Ah... So it was as you expected?” Yoo Yeonha said after spotting Kim Hajin walking towards them from a short distance.

He smiled at her and asked, “How are things over here?”

Then, he slipped a piece of paper into her hand.

Yoo Yeonha discreetly glanced at the paper.

[Chae Jinyoon is awake.]

“The situation is under control and there are no casualties,” she replied.

Yoo Yeonha conjured her mana to burn the piece of paper after reading the good news.

Reporters started to flood onto the bridge.

Jain, who was disguised as Chae Nayun, approached the two and asked, “Ah, I’m so tired. Hey, is everyone alright?”

Kim Hajin smirked and replied, “Yeah, we’re fine.”

Flash! Flash! Flash! Flash! Flash!

A continuous burst of camera flashes began.

Yoo Yeonha whispered to Kim Hajin, “Things turned out quite well...”

Kim Hajin nodded in response.

He previously divulged his [Hacking] ability and sought advice from Yoo Yeonha. She contemplated for a while before coming up with the idea to purposely leak that they were snooping around and digging dirt on Kim Sukho.

Kim Sukho would either tremble in fright or anger after finding out that fact. He would rush to silence them.

Things went exactly as Yoo Yeonha planned. Kim Sukho immediately caused a ruckus as soon as he heard that the Pharmacy Club was trying to cure Chae Jinyoon.

Of course, she didn't expect him to get Destruction involved at one of the busiest bridges in the country, but he most certainly overlooked the fact that Kim Suho and Shin Jonghak became much stronger in a short period.

"I'll send you the rest of the files," Kim Hajin whispered back.

There was still work to be done. Their final objective was Kim Sukho's complete destruction and the full cleansing of the association.

"Alright..." Yoo Yeonha replied while hiding her thoughts.

Truth be told, she wasn't only aiming to eliminate Kim Sukho, but also to benefit her own family. She devised a grand ambition of absorbing everything Kim Sukho amassed into the coffers of Essence of the Straits.

"I'll be waiting for those files," she added.

However, she saw no benefit in divulging this part of her plan to Kim Hajin.

* * *

"Is this the right place?" a low voice asked Chae Nayun.

Chae Nayun looked around her surroundings before nodding in response.

They were currently behind the hanok^[1] in Mount Baekdu where Chae Joochul resided.

"Yeah, it's correct. By the way, what was your name...?" Chae Nayun asked.

“You can call me Blue.”

The Chameleon Troupe helped her teleport here. The member who helped her was none other than the one capable of opening a portal to anywhere as long as he possessed enough mana. He was known as Blue or also by his real name, Khalifa.

“Yeah, thanks Blue.”

“...”

The man didn't say anything as he disappeared into his portal.

Chae Nayun glanced at Chae Jinyoon. He was soundly asleep on her back.

They crossed a bridge and walked between rows of trees before finally reaching the hut's doorsteps.

Gulp...!

Chae Nayun nervously gulped as she walked inside the hut until she reached the doors of the master bedroom.

She could see Chae Joochul through the small opening in the door. He was sitting on the floor and silently observing the picturesque tranquility offered by the mountain.

“Grandfather...” Chae Nayun called out in a trembling voice.

Chae Joochul turned his head while holding a smoking pipe. He spotted Chae Nayun behind the door and walked over to open it wide.

“Oh, it's Nayun and even Jinyoon is here,” he said with a smile.

Chae Joochul was not surprised by Chae Nayun and Chae Jinyoon's sudden visit. That was the limit of his emotions.

Chae Nayun visiting with Chae Jinyoon was unimaginable, but Chae

Joochul's emotion was not capable of being surprised by such an unimaginable turn of events.

He had no idea if he was supposed to be angry, surprised, or sad.

"Yes..." Chae Nayun bitterly smiled and replied.

"But why did you bring Jinyoon here?" Chae Joochul asked while looking perplexed.

Chae Nayun first went inside the room and laid down her brother. Then she replied, "Oppa will soon wake up."

"Wake up...?" Chae Joochul muttered while stroking his beard.

Chae Nayun slightly blushed before she replied, "Yes, it is a gift the person I love gave me..."

She looked down at Chae Jinyoon, who was currently breathing much livelier than before. Then she put on a serious face and gritted her teeth.

"So... I have a favor, Grandpa," Chae Nayun said.

Chae Joochul identified the resolute look on her face and asked, "Oh, what is it?"

He was still smiling, but Chae Nayun knew that her grandfather's smile did not look favorably on her. However, she couldn't back out now.

"Go on. Say it," Chae Joochul urged her.

Chae Nayun knew that such a thing as love for his granddaughter didn't exist in her grandfather, but she knew that there was a strict scale inside of him that weighed things.

If she could only tilt that scale in her favor, then...

“Please help us,” she pleaded.

“As I said, what is it you need?” Chae Joochul replied.

* * *

Two weeks had passed since then.

None of us expected the operation to convince Chae Joochul would end soon, but I used that time to go over and polish our plans with Yoo Yeonha.

The entire plan was made under the premise that Chae Nayun managed to convince her grandfather, Chae Joochul.

— I miss you. I miss you so much. I miss you so much I cry every night.

On a side note, Chae Nayun was currently stuck in Mount Baekdu. Well, it was more like she would be there until Chae Jinyoon recovered and she managed to convince Chae Joochul rather than being stuck.

Allowing her to stay was the current extent of Chae Joochul’s permission.

“Me too...” I replied.

Talking over a call was probably better than messaging as this was the best way to convey our full emotions to each other.

Then, she replied.

— Really? You too? I’m not the only one?

“Of course.”

— Hey, hold on a minute... Are you sure you’re not cheating on me?

“Have you gone insane?”

— That’s good... Ah, I’ll go spar with Grandpa. That’s my daily activity these days.

“Yeah, make sure you win.”

— Yeah, I’ll never win.

Our call ended and I was busy stuffing my earphones into my pocket when Chae Nayun suddenly sat beside me.

“Hey, what are you doing?” she asked.

I knew it was Jain. Wait, it wasn’t Jain as I took a closer look.

“...Is it Boss?” I muttered.

Chae Nayun replied with a frown, “You’re really good at seeing through Jain’s disguise.”

“I have excellent eyes,” I shrugged in response.

“Is that so?”

We quietly sat as the award ceremony commenced. We were being awarded a certificate for our efforts at the bridge two weeks ago.

“...I heard that you already knew about the Kwang-Oh Incident,” Boss suddenly said.

I flinched and looked around my surroundings.

Boss whispered to me for reassurance, “It’s alright. Nobody can hear us.”

“...”

I nodded and said, "You're quite stubborn. Yeah, I already knew about it. Nayun told me."

Boss remained silent as if she was contemplating something while looking up in the air. She finally asked, "...Then, don't you want to find out?"

"Find out what?"

"Who was behind that incident?"

"..."

I looked at her.

I had an idea why she was asking all these questions, but I no longer wanted to pry any further into Kim Chundong's past.

I wasn't Kim Chundong, but Kim Hajin.

"I already knew Kim Sukho was behind it, so what's the point? Well, I'm sure someone else pulled the trigger. However, I'm satisfied knowing who the mastermind was. Besides, the mastermind is worse than the hitman, right?"

"..."

Boss fell silent again. It seemed like she had something she wanted to say, but she didn't say anything as her lips continued squirming.

"Hey, what are you two doing?" Yi Yeonghan suddenly interrupted and leered at us with sleazy eyes.

I was about to shrug off his question when I suddenly felt mischievous.

"What else?" I said as I pinched Boss' cheek.

Boss froze on the spot. Even her heart stopped beating for a second.

Her eyes shot wide open in surprise, but I gave no heed as I continued pinching her cheeks left and right.

“I’m bothering her,” I said.

“Oh, you guys look so sweet together,” Yi Yeonghan replied with a grin.

I had no idea what looked sweet to him.

“Shtap...”

I think I heard Boss saying something, but I ignored her and continued harassing her.

“I told you to shtap...”

I immediately took my hands off after sensing a hint of bloodlust in her voice.

Luckily for me, a voice blasted through the speakers and interrupted her train of thought.

— We are now going to commence the award ceremony for the eight cadets!

The award ceremony commenced and the protagonist of this ceremony was none other than us, the ones who saved the civilians in the Han River Bridge Destruction Incident.

— I will now call the names of the brave cadets who protected the civilians from the djinns.

The events of that day made me realize something about this world. This world wasn’t a novel, but rather another reality with countless precious souls living in it.

— Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Chae Nayun, Yoo Yeonha, Kim Hajin, Yi Yeonghan...

That was also why I learned the joy of saving another person. Being able to save those people was probably the biggest joy I could attain in this world.

— The certificates of commendation will be awarded by the previous president of the Republic of Korea and the current chairman of the non-profit organization, UNGO, Chairman Kim Sukho.

Those words made all of us grimace.

An old man wearing a suit came up to the podium. It was Kim Sukho.

All of us stared at him dumbfounded for a moment, but he leisurely smiled at us.

“Haha...” I let out a laugh while looking at Kim Sukho.

Kim Sukho frowned for a split second after locking eyes with me.

— Now, please come up one by one as you are called...

I was curious. ‘I wonder how long you can keep that smug smile on your face?’

* * *

Time passed and our first year at Cube came to an end. Our winter vacation had started.

Chae Nayun was still at Mount Baekdu with Chae Jinyoon.

“Haa... Haa...”

That was the reason we were currently on our way up the mountain since we hadn’t seen her for a long time.

“Ugh... Ugh... Uwha...”

I was busy scaling the side of the mountain when I suddenly heard someone struggling. I looked back and saw Yoo Yeonha hanging by the rope.

“...What are you doing?”

“W-What else? Hurry up and pull me up!”

“...”

I extended aether and pulled her up.

“Phew... Haa... Hoo...”

“Just hurry up and keep climbing.”

“I’m weak against the cold. I think there’s something wrong with this heat vest...” Yoo Yeonha grumbled before she started climbing again.

We finally reached the top of the cliff and landed on flat ground, but a fierce blizzard hindered our vision.

We marched on without the luxury to catch our breaths.

“When will we reach it?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“I have no idea,” I replied.

She closely followed behind while I followed Kim Suho, who was behind Yi Yeonghan and Shin Jonghak.

We walked in a single file line as the blizzard completely hindered our vision.

“Anyways, we’ll be able to obtain a concrete testimony and witness if Nayun managed to convince Sir Chae Joochul,” Yoo Yeonha said while walking. She added, “One cannot rule this world alone. That’s why Kim Sukho has a lot of underlings. However, those underlings will instantly turn on him at the first sight of danger. After all, tentacles with their own will are bound to struggle to save their own skin if they sensed that the head would get cut off.”

“Yeah...” I muttered.

Shin Jonghak, who was at the front, suddenly stopped. All of us stopped one by one after that and looked into the distance.

Our view was still hindered by the raging blizzard, but there was no way we couldn't spot that hut brightly glowing in this storm.

“That's the place...” Shin Jonghak muttered.

All of us gulped nervously as we felt Chae Nayun's mana from the hut with a vast garden that resembled some kind of a dojo.

“Should we sneak in or should we go through the front?” Yoo Yeonha asked in a mischievous tone.

“What if only Hajin sneaks in?” Kim Suho said with a snicker. He added, “I'm curious... I wonder how Chae Nayun's going to react? I mean, it's been four months since you last saw each other, right? Do you think she'll cry?”

“Ha... Retards...” Shin Jonghak grumbled under his breath.

That guy... He was obviously dating Seo Youngji now, but does he still have some lingering feelings towards Chae Nayun?

Kim Suho pouted and sulked after getting cursed at by Shin Jonghak. Then he retorted, “What? Do you still like Chae Nayun?”

“...Shut up. I'm going first,” Shin Jonghak said before he walked towards the hut and left behind the rest of us.

“We're going to go too. You come later, okay Hajin?” Kim Suho said.

“Hmm... I guess it's something like a surprise gift, right?” Yi Yeonghan added.

Kim Suho, Yi Yeonghan, and Yoo Yeonha chased after Shin Jonghak.

“...They’re doing whatever they like,” I grumbled.

I couldn’t help but feel that I wanted to see her for even a split second faster, but I was forced to stay behind and watch them grow farther away.

I tried to imagine what Chae Nayun would look like after we met. The sheer thought of seeing her made me smile against my will.

1. Traditional Korean house/hut. 📌

Side Stories 82

Chae Nayun (37)

Chae Nayun was meditating on top of a boulder like always when she came to Mount Baekdu.

“Hoo... Hoo... Hoo...”

She inhaled and exhaled while feeling the energy from the pristine air around her.

Time passed for a while and she lost track.

Chae Nayun finally opened her eyes when the sun started to set. She felt the surge of mana travel throughout her body. Then she looked beside her.

Chae Jinyoon was sprawled on top of the boulder.

“Ah, what the hell, oppa?” Chae Nayun grumbled.

“I’m exhausted...” Chae Jinyoon replied while shaking his head.

Chae Nayun frowned and said, “You’ll never be able to catch up at this rate.”

Chae Jinyoon was currently immersing himself in training these days to recover his strength, but it wasn’t easy as he spent the last five years bedridden in a coma.

However, he simply smiled and replied, “It’s also good for me if my sister becomes really strong.”

Chae Nayun intently stared at him for a while. He still had his calm demeanor that made her feel at ease whenever she was with him.

“Geez... Really...”

Chae Nayun smiled while thinking, ‘We can finally live like this, right? Just like we used to... You’re not going to suddenly disappear again, right?’

“What are you two doing over there?” a low voice suddenly interrupted them.

Both of them flinched and looked where the voice came from. Yoo Sihyuk was wearing a gi.^[1]

“Follow me. You have guests,” he said.

“Huh...? Guests...?” Chae Nayun muttered as her eyes shot wide open in surprise.

They were currently three thousand meters above sea level. This was the middle point of Mount Baekdu after its peak shot up to five thousand meters above sea level because of the mana explosion that occurred fifty years ago.

“Maybe it’s your friends? You talked about them quite often. You did mention that they were going to come to find you soon,” Chae Jinyoon said as he sat up.

Chae Nayun suddenly flinched after a thought flashed through her head, “Hold up... No way... No way...”

She kept mumbling and suddenly ran. She ran as fast as she could. Chae Jinyoon smiled at her disappearing into the distance.

Thud!

Chae Nayun ran through the blizzard and barged through the back door.

“Ah...” she muttered.

Her friends were there as she expected. Everyone was waving at her.

She smiled in response and looked at every one of these precious friends who braved the cold to visit her.

Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Yoo Yeonha, Yi Yeonghan, Rachel, and... and... Chae Nayun's smile slowly started to fade.

"Huh...?"

She tilted her head in confusion and rubbed her eyes, but the scenery in front of her didn't change. Her friends were still there, but the person she longed for wasn't.

"Ah... Hahaha. Y-Yeah, welcome guys. Welcome..." she welcomed her friends while trying her best to suppress her disappointment.

Kim Suho, Yoo Yeonha, and Yi Yeonghan channeled superhuman self-control to suppress their laughter.

"Wow, I never imagined you guys would come all the way here just to see me... Oh, right... Winter vacation has started," Chae Nayun said while constantly looking over their shoulders.

Everyone's cheeks started to puff up whenever she looked over their shoulders.

"Yeah, winter vacation started. We're here to see you."

"Wow, Chae Nayun! It looks like you've gotten stronger in a couple of months?"

Yoo Yeonha and Kim Suho respectively said.

Chae Nayun tried her best to smile, but her smile didn't look genuine at all. In fact, the way she smiled made it look like she was crying instead.

"Yeah... it's vacation so... but why are you guys here?" she asked.

"Why else? We're here to see you."

“Ah, yes... that’s right... ah... that should be it...” Chae Nayun mumbled while fidgeting.

Shin Jonghak clicked his tongue as if he couldn’t stand the sight of it. Then he pointed back with his thumb and said, “Kim Hajin is waiting outside.”

“Ah... What the hell, Shin Jonghak...” Yoo Yeonha glared at him after her fun came to an abrupt end thanks to him.

Shin Jonghak simply shrugged in response.

Chae Nayun smacked Kim Suho on his shoulder and exclaimed, “You scared the heck out of me! Why would you do that?! You meanies!”

“Haha! Sorry about that. Anyways, you better hurry up and go. Hajin is probably waiting for you,” Kim Suho said as he pointed into the distance.

Chae Nayun ran to where Kim Suho pointed. She bulldozed through the snow with pure brute force.

“Hey! Kim Hajin!” she shouted at the top of her lungs.

Her voice echoed throughout the blizzard.

She was certain that her voice filled with love and longing would reach him through the raging blizzard.

* * *

“Hmm... So what you’re saying is... Hmm...”

Chae Nayun continued muttering and squirming while lying down with her head on my lap. I wasn’t sure if she wanted to say something or if she was forcing herself to come up with something to talk about.

Regardless, I continued to stroke her hair and fiddle with her earlobe while waiting for her to say something.

“Oh right, what’s Jin Sahyuk up to these days?” she asked in a cute voice after finally thinking of something to talk about.

“She’s... preparing to establish her own city.”

“Her own city?”

“Yeah.”

“Wow...” Chae Nayun muttered in amazement before asking, “What game is she playing?”

“No, not in a game, but in real life.”

“Real life?”

“Yes, she’s trying to get approval to set up a neutral city-state.”

“As expected... She’s quite the personality herself...” Chae Nayun nodded with a serious look.

I simply smiled in response while caressing her bun-like cheeks.

Chae Nayun didn’t push my hand away despite making sounds like, “Ah, stop it. I said stop it. I said shtap.”

As we were busy flirting with each other, a shadow towered over us. Both Chae Nayun and I turned around to see who it was.

Chae Jinyoon was looking down at us and smiling.

“Ah, hello.”

I immediately stood up and greeted him.

“Ah... What are you doing here oppa? Is your training already over?” Chae Nayun pouted and asked.

“Yeah, but more importantly... Your name is Hajin, right? I’ve heard a lot about you. Please have a seat,” Chae Jinyoon said as he sat beside us.

I nodded in response and sat on the grass.

Chae Nayun leaned on my shoulder and Chae Jinyoon looked at her with an astonished look as if he saw an alien.

“I knew you were Nayun’s boyfriend, but... she must listen well to you. This is my first time seeing her like this... wait... did she change after growing up?” Chae Jinyoon said in amazement.

“Huh? Ah, she doesn’t really listen to me that well,” I said as I shrugged and bounced her off my shoulder.

Chae Nayun had a protesting look that said, ‘Why? what? why?’ She continued clinging to me. However, I looked at her and saw a hint of fear on her face.

I suddenly recalled her actions until now. She was always scared whenever I got near Chae Jinyoon and had the same look as those times.

“It’s alright...” I said.

Chae Nayun looked up at me with tears welling up in her eyes.

She was probably still worried about Chae Jinyoon. I had no idea what happened to him in her life before she regressed, but I tightly held her hand.

“Don’t worry,” I said.

She soon nodded in response and buried her face in my chest.

Chae Jinyoon smiled and asked, “Before I forget, Grandfather wanted to see you. Is now a good time for you?”

“Ah, yes. Of course,” I immediately nodded and replied.

It went without saying that I came here in the first place to meet Chae Joochul.

* * *

“Will you be alright...?”

I was guided to the interior of the hut by Chae Nayun and Chae Jinyoon.

Chae Joochul was most likely behind those lavishly decorated doors.

“Yeah, it’ll be alright. See you later,” I said as I pulled Chae Nayun towards me and planted a kiss on her forehead.

“Huh...?” she muttered in confusion.

Her entire face flushed red before she started sounding lost, “H-Huh...? A-Alright. See you later, but before you go... one more time... can you do it one more time...?”

I planted another kiss on Chae Nayun’s forehead even though Chae Jinyoon was present. Then I walked towards the door.

“Hoo...” I composed myself.

I knocked on the door before opening it.

Chae Joochul sat in front of an intricately designed folding screen and smoked his pipe. He smiled as soon as he saw me as if he was already expecting me.

“Oh, you’re here. So you’re my precious granddaughter’s boyfriend, Ki Majin!” Chae Joochul said.

“...Huh? Ah, my name is Kim Hajin, sir. Not Ki Majin.”

“Ah, is that so? That kid tends to pronounce things wrong from time to time. Anyways, it’s nice to meet you. Come on in and have a seat.”

I sat in front of Chae Joochul and could feel him inspecting every nook and cranny of my body.

He smiled brightly and said, “Hmm... I see... In that case, I guess you were quite the influence when Nayun said that she wanted to strike Kim Sukho, right?”

Chae Joochul went straight to the point despite his gentle smile. It seemed that he was still hesitating whether he should attack Kim Sukho or not.

No, there was no such thing as hesitation in his emotion. Rather, he was probably calculating the chances of success.

“Yes, and that is why I have prepared a small bribe for you,” I said to pull Chae Joochul’s scale towards us.

His lips curled as he said, “Hahaha! A bribe you say?”

“...Yes,” I replied as I took out a medicine I created after collecting various medicinal plants from various neutral city-states with the Pharmacy Club members.

Chae Joochul tried to feign curiosity, which was another emotion he probably didn’t possess.

“What is that?” he asked.

“It is a medicine that will recover a portion of one’s emotions, sir.”

“...”

Chae Joochul froze for a second and silently stared at me.

“I cannot guarantee its effect as I created it without diagnosing you, but I believe that you will be able to feel more emotions than you currently do once you ingest this.”

Chae Joochul looked down at the yellow medicine in front of him.

I had no idea what he was thinking right now as there was no way someone with emotions could ever tell what was on the mind of someone without emotions.

Chae Joochul finally said with a smile, “Alright, it seems that Nayun’s boyfriend has brought something healthy.”

I could feel the tension and anxiety in my body reduced a bit at those words.

“Yes, thank you very much. I shall leave the medicine with you. Also, is there anything else you wish to say, sir?”

“No, there’s nothing. You may go now. Go and play with Nayun,” Chae Joochul said in a cold voice.

I immediately bowed and exited the room.

“Huh? Why are you out so fast?” Chae Nayun asked as she ran up to me with a worried look. She continued asking, “How was it? How was it? Did grandfather say anything strange after seeing your gift?”

I simply shook my head at her barrage of questions, “Fortunately, he accepted it. The rest is up to you now.”

Chae Nayun let out a sigh of relief and Chae Jinyoon looked relieved as well.

“Then!” Chae Nayun exclaimed before she ran up and kissed me. She confidently said, “It’s my turn to meet Grandfather now!”

I found her confidence quite reassuring.

“Sure, see you later.”

“You’ll be here waiting when I come out, right?”

“I most certainly will.”

“Not only now, but... forever and ever... you’ll be with me, right?”

“Yes.”

“...Promise?”

Chae Nayun extended her pinky.

I stared into her eyes and whispered, “I promise.”

Both of us pinky swore. Chae Nayun brightly smiled and wrapped her arms around my neck. Our lips and tongue intertwined one more time.

* * *

We were guided to our accommodation by Chae Jinyoon.

“Wow, it’s quite cozy.”

All of us expected it to be uncomfortable since the entire place resembled a dojo, but they provided us with every amenity such as beds and even game consoles.

“Yeah, it’s imperative that we get a good night’s sleep and make the most out of our playtime too. Anyways, go on and unpack first,” Chae Jinyoon said.

We unpacked our belongings at his words. Most of my belongings were just a sleeping bag, some magic scrolls, and a few emergency food rations.

“Shall we go eat if you’re done?” Chae Jinyoon asked.

Everyone nodded in response.

“Does anyone know how to cook?” he asked.

Everyone looked at me in unison.

Chae Jinyoon’s eyes shot wide open in surprise as he said, “Wow, my sister’s boyfriend knows how to cook?”

“Yes, Hajin is really good,” Kim Suho proudly replied and placed a hand on my shoulder.

“Alright, then follow me. Let’s go cook. We try to be as independent as possible here,” Chae Jinyoon said.

“Okay,” I replied and followed him to the kitchen.

We walked along the wooden corridor and could hear the cozy sound of wood creaking whenever we took a step.

Chae Jinyoon suddenly said in a soft gentle voice, “Thank you.”

“Pardon me...?”

“I heard from Nayun. You were the one who woke me up, right?”

“Ah... Not really. It wasn’t just me, but everyone worked hard as well.”

“Is that so? Then I should thank everyone then.”

Chae Jinyoon sincerely smiled and I smiled in response.

It was then.

[Episode cleared.....]

A system message popped up in front of my eyes.

However, I didn’t bother reading it and immediately waved it away. I no longer wanted to treat this world, this time, and whatever would happen in the future as mere episodes of a story.

“This is the kitchen. It’s packed with all sorts of ingredients. There’s meat, vegetables... ah, we caught that wild boar yesterday. Do you know how to butcher wild game by any chance?”

The kitchen was quite spacious.

I confidently smiled at his question and rolled up my sleeves.

“Of course, please just stand back and watch,” I said.

Any dish I cooked with the help of [Dexterity] and [Stigma] was bound to be a delicacy out of this world. I was confident that even Chae Joochul would be moved by my cooking.

I looked at Chae Jinyoon and confidently said, “I am extremely talented at cooking.”

1. A gi is a martial arts uniform. More info: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Karate_gi 📖

Side Stories 83

Chae Nayun (38)

Everyone in the Chae family's dojo marveled at my cooking. My cooking was even served to Chae Joochul and he gave it a rare, "It tastes good."

"Even grandfather said it was good. It's my first time hearing him say that!" Chae Nayun exclaimed.

"He was probably just being nice," I replied.

I was walking along the Mount Baekdu trail with Chae Nayun under the bright blue sky. Mount Baekdu was definitely not the best place to take a leisurely stroll, but a stroll felt different depending on who you were walking with.

"No, I'm serious. It's my first time seeing my grandfather's eyes get so big!" Chae Nayun exclaimed.

She discussed some stuff with Chae Joochul for around four hours. I was quite curious about what they talked about.

"So... did he make a decision?" I asked.

"Huh? Oh... That is..." Chae Nayun muttered before she puffed her cheeks and walked ahead.

She walked for a bit before she sat on a boulder at the edge of a cliff.

I hurried after her and sat down as well.

"...That medicine. He said he'll take it when we're together... but I'm scared. I don't know what kind of person Grandfather will be if he gets a portion of his emotions back. I don't know at all..." she said in a low voice.

Chae Nayun looked at me with troubled eyes, "...Is it because I have something to lose now?"

She smiled and leaned on my shoulder.

We were sitting right in front of the clouds within arm's length and underneath us were the lush overgrown forests of Mount Baekdu.

I caressed her shoulder and replied, "It'll all be alright."

She looked up at me and I couldn't resist not hugging her since she looked so cute. A baseless confidence suddenly welled up inside of me from who knows where and I said, "I'm not someone who will be easily lost."

I felt my fingers and toes cringe at my own line, but she laughed in response.

That was more than enough for me. Her laughter and smile were now the most important thing in my life.

"I believe you. I believe," she said while snickering and holding my hand.

I held her hand with the resolve to never let go.

We both looked at the scenery in front of us. She was enjoying the sight, but I saw the world from a different perspective.

The change that started from her spread throughout the world and changed me. It changed me because this world used to be nothing more than a novel to me, but I learned how to love someone inside it.

That was more than enough to breathe life into this novel and turn it into reality for me.

"I believe. I believe Kim Hajin."

This incredible miracle that I would've never imagined in my wildest dreams just a year ago.

"I'll believe you until the day I die."

All of that started with this fool.

* * *

"I have no idea how long we'll have to stay like this."

Chae Jinyoon was sleeping in the VIP ward. No, a patient disguised as Chae Jinyoon was sleeping.

Chae Nayun, or rather Jain, grumbled while longing for freedom.

"Now's when it really starts," I passed a file to her.

Jain received the file and Yoo Yeonha immediately started to brief her.

"All instructions are in that file. Chae Jinyoon might be the most important witness in the upcoming trial, but your role is crucial as well," Yoo Yeonha said.

Jain looked a bit bored as she browsed through the file.

I decided to get straight to the point, "You just have to become someone Kim Sukho killed in the past."

One specific incident among all of the heinous acts Kim Sukho carried out would prove the most critical. That was the massacre he conducted four years ago to protect his position from the person who possessed the ability to take it from him.

That person definitely died that day, but Jain had met that person before they died. To be precise, it was Jain who killed that person. In turn, it would be extremely easy for her to disguise herself as that person.

“You remember what you promised, right...?” Jain asked.

We promised the Chameleon Troupe Kim Sukho’s riches in return. Although I had no idea where they planned to spend all that money.

“Don’t worry about that. Also, we have never met and will never meet in the future as you requested,” I replied.

Jain nodded in satisfaction and burned the file, “Great. That’s what I wanted to hear.”

Both Yoo Yeonha and I looked at each other. Not a hint of anxiety was in our eyes as we had done our part.

We just had to wait for the finale of this incident to come to a close.

* * *

January 7th.

We announced that Chae Jinyoon woke up even before the people could rejoice or feel sad about the New Year. News of the massive corruption was simultaneously reported as well.

Chae Jinyoon exposed the relationship between the association and the djinns. This led to Kim Sukho being arrested.

This event divided the association into two factions, namely the Kim Sukho Faction and the Chae Joochul Faction. The whole world was plunged into confusion because of this.

Kim Sukho vehemently defended himself that the accusations hurled at him were utter nonsense, but we had no plans to drag things out for long. We provided evidence for every excuse Kim Sukho came up with as we continued to corner him.

Not only that, the plan we came up with was put into motion without a margin of error.

We started by subjugating the djinn organization that Kim Sukho was in cahoots with.

“...Those damned brats deserve to be ground into dust and spread across the depths of hell!” Kim Sukho raged as his saliva flew all over.

He felt the back of his neck starting to get strained from the tension.

One of his lackeys asked, “What should we do?”

Kim Sukho glared at him and trembled in anger before standing up.

“Chae Joochul can’t do this to me,” he said while looking out the window.

Both of them exposed their dirty secrets to one another. This meant that both of them were in cahoots for every misdeed they committed. They justified each other’s crimes and murders for the greater good of the world. Every bit of it was sealed in a vault deep underground.

“You shouldn’t have done this... Chae Joochul...” Kim Sukho growled in anger.

There was nothing he could do from this point onwards.

‘You brought this upon yourself. I’ll bring to light everything you did and I’ll drag you to the pits of the netherworld with me...’ he thought.

Tak...

The sound of something getting cut was heard and the entire mansion became pitch-black.

Kim Sukho flinched and got down. His bodyguards immediately surrounded him.

“Please don’t worry, sir. We’re here to protect you.”

“Yes, I’m not worried at all,” Kim Sukho was at ease after hearing his henchman's reassurance.

However, things were already in motion at a place away from his eyes...

* * *

"Alright, you can start now."

"Okay."

As expected, all the guards flocked towards Kim Sukho after the power was cut.

Chae Nayun and I used that opportunity to infiltrate the mansion's basement.

"This place... looks like a dungeon..."

It was difficult to tell if the basement was a forest or a cave.

"What are you going to do now?" she asked.

"Hold on. Give me a second," I replied as I infused stigma into my eyes.

My enhanced thousand-mile eyes spread throughout the entire basement and identified all of the traps. Then I finally spotted the hidden vault deep within the basement.

"I found it."

"Oh! As expected of Kim Hajin!"

All the digital records Kim Sukho possessed were deleted with the help of Kim Hoseup and my [Hacking]. That meant those files in that hidden vault were the only copies left in this world.

"Follow me."

“Okay!”

We ran together down the corridor.

There were all sorts of tarps such as lasers and a mutated cerberus, but we easily bypassed them with my [Hacking] and Chae Nayun’s strength.

“...”

However, someone blocked our path when the hidden vault was within reach. It was a man covered in a shroud of darkness.

“Move. It’s all over,” Chae Nayun said in a threatening voice as she wielded her sword.

The man read the words inscribed on the sword.

[One Slash To Dye Mountains and Rivers With Blood]

It was the Giant Hwando^[1] of Admiral Lee Sun Shin that Chae Joochul gave to Chae Nayun as a gift.

The inscription alone gave the sword great weight and its owner’s mana allowed it to surpass its limitations. Truth be told, we could’ve barged through the front and brute-forced our way in with Chae Nayun’s strength instead of acting so clandestinely.

“...”

Still, Kim Sukho’s loyal minion didn’t back down. Instead, he muttered, “A dog does not abandon their owner...”

Those words were more than enough to tell us that he was resolved to die.

“Sure...” Chae Nayun replied as she closed her eyes and leaned forward with her sword by her side.

It was the stance that allowed her to channel all of her energy forward and end the fight in a single strike.

Bzzzt!

Chae Nayun channeled incredibly high-density mana, but her opponent didn't retreat a single step.

The mana created threatening sparks that spread throughout the basement as Chae Nayun finally opened her eyes.

Then, the space in front of her was cut in half without a sound. That was the end of it.

"Let's go," she said.

I checked the pulse of the man on the ground. He wasn't dead. No, Chae Nayun spared him on purpose.

I nodded and walked towards the vault.

The vault had six magic seals placed on it. It was a truly impressive security system. In fact, it would have taken weeks or even months to crack if I didn't possess the gift [Hacking].

As I was about to use [Hacking] on the vault and its seal, a trap was activated.

Shwoooosh!

The magic seal suddenly shot out a net that swallowed both of us.

"Uwa!"

"Kyah!"

We were stuck like fishes in a net and couldn't help but laugh despite being in this situation.

“Hehe...”

“Haha...”

“Come here,” Chae Nayun said as she pursed her lips and approached me.

That wasn’t all. She kept touching me here and there trying to do something, but I immediately formed a blade with stigma to run away from her.

“Come here for your kissy kissy goo goo.”

“...Enough of that.”

I cut the net.

The net seemed to be some kind of ancient artifact, but stigma’s blade cut it like a hot knife through butter.

I resumed hacking the vault.

[500 SP will be consumed to supplement your lacking stigma.]

As expected, the vault’s security was top-notch and required me to use SP to crank up stigma.

Click... Clack...!

The vault opened and revealed an old accounting book slightly damp from humidity.

I carefully took the book out and could feel a hint of mana from its cover. The book turned out to be a high rank magic artifact that not only recorded the events of that day, but even the voices and images of the people present.

Chae Nayun looked over my shoulder and stuttered, “Hey... Uhm... Why don’t you keep that for now...?”

“Hmm?”

“I mean... What if grandfather betrays you and... you know, just in case...”

Chae Nayun seemed scared, but I simply smiled and shook my head.

“I want you to go and give it to your grandfather. Let’s leave it to his soon-to-return conscience.”

“...”

I passed the accounting book to her without a hint of hesitation. Chae Nayun seemed troubled by how nonchalant I was, but she soon let out a sigh of resignation and nodded.

“Yeah... Thanks... I love you...”

* * *

— In other news, Aileen from the Temple of Justice has run for the position of the new association chairman. Most of the people in the association seemed to be welcoming of her run as she is known to be upright and just when dealing with...

It was already March and the new school year at Cube began.

We didn’t appear on the surface until the situation was resolved. Fortunately, those named giants such as Yun Seung-Ah, Yoo Jinwoong, Aileen, Jin Seyeon, etc. took up arms instead and continued our fight for us after we ignited the initial spark.

“I heard today is the court date.”

We successfully managed to corner Kim Sukho after a grueling two month campaign, but Chae Nayun seemed a bit bitter about something as she clung to my arm.

“Yeah...”

We had no idea what defense Kim Sukho had prepared for the Association Court, but we knew that his old colleague, whom he killed, would come back to life and appear in court.

I wondered what would go through his mind once he saw his old friend, which was actually Jain in disguise.

“I couldn’t sleep these days because of that. Help me sleep, Kim Hajin.”

“Ehem...”

I simply faked a cough and didn’t respond to that. I mean, it was quite awkward for me to respond to something like that when we were in the classroom...

“Hey, Chae Nayun! Dammit... Get out! Class is starting soon. Have you two lost it?!”

The class president, Yoon Jihyun, finally burst into anger after glaring at us for a while.

Chae Nayun simply shrugged her words off as she was ranked thirty-fourth among the sophomores.

“Hey, why are we in different classes? I think someone pulled some strings from behind the scenes... this must be a conspiracy...” Chae Nayun grumbled.

It was exactly as she said. We were in different classes this year.

My luck was quite high, so it was extremely likely for us to be in the same class if it was decided at random. I suspected that the higher-ups got involved after they learned that we were dating.

“Ah... This is so annoying... Anyways, I’ll come running after classes are over,” she said with an expression that made it seem like she lost her motherland overnight.

“Sure,” I replied.

I found her pouting to be extremely cute and had to exercise superhuman self-control to stop myself from patting her head.

Ring!

I suddenly received a message on my smartwatch.

[I hope you didn't forget. I'm currently making preparations.]

It was from Jin Sahyuk. She seemed to be quite skilled with the smartwatch these days.

I immediately replied, [Of course, I'm also done with my preparations.]

This was another crucial event. Jin Sahyuk could turn into the final boss if I failed to keep my promise.

“Oh right, Nayun,” I called as she was about to leave for her class to prevent that scary final boss from appearing.

“Why? Why? Why? Why? Whywhywhywhy?” she instantly ran back to me and unleashed a barrage of whys.

“Let's go on a trip after classes today,” I whispered.

Today was Friday. this meant that classes would finish earlier than usual and we had the whole weekend ahead of us.

“Ah...” Chae Nayun muttered as her ears flushed red.

She failed to keep a poker face and started snickering and giggling, “S-Sure... I mean, if you... want to... hehe... I'm fine with anywhere... hehe... as long as it's with... hehehe... you!”

Three hours later...

“Ah! Really! Damn it! This is so annoying! Why the hell are they here?!” Chae Nayun screamed and stomped in anger when the rest of the Pharmacy Club members gathered.

“I thought it would just be the two of us! I thought we were going to be alone!” she continued her tantrum.

“...What’s wrong with her?”

Kim Suho, Yi Yeonghan, Rachel, and Evandel were dumbfounded. They all blinked a few times while watching Chae Nayun throw a temper tantrum.

1. Korean traditional military sword. More info here: <https://www.kocis.go.kr/eng/webzine/201812/sub06.html>

Side Stories 84

Chae Nayun (39)

“We only managed because Sir Chae Joochul helped us out. It was an extremely close call,” Yoo Yeonha said.

We were on an unknown plain in Central Asia. Things were coming to an end, but I worried after hearing what she said.

Chae Joochul’s emotions had completely dried up when I met him. It had progressed at a much faster rate than I expected, which meant that he was already detached from this world. That was the reason why no one could predict his thoughts or what he would do.

“Yeah, it’s a relief... I guess...? Oh, is that the place?” Chae Nayun said before she brightly smiled and pointed somewhere.

There were buildings erected on the plain. The entire city was empty and resembled an abandoned ghost town. The eerie vibe it was emitting made us huddle together.

“...Huh? Who’s that?” Chae Nayun spotted someone standing in front of the fountain at the center of the city square.

All of us raised our guards after spotting the person. That person gave me the creeps as she sculpted something with a strange smile.

“Hey!” I shouted and waved my hand.

Only then did Jin Sahyuk notice us and immediately changed her expression to a cold one.

“You’re here?” she haughtily replied.

The Pharmacy Club’s destination was none other than Jin Sahyuk’s neutral city-state.

“What is... this place?”

“Beats me. Hey, you said you’re making a city. Is this what you’ve been up to this whole time?”

Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun looked around the place with amazed eyes.

All of the buildings in the city were influenced by Western architecture from the past.

“This is...”

Only Kim Suho was aware of this city’s purpose. He stared at the city with a strange sense of familiarity.

“Anyways, why don’t you guys go and take a look around?” Jin Sahyuk said before she dragged me away from the rest.

“H-Hey! Are you crazy?!” Chae Nayun screamed as she ran up to us and snatched me away.

Jin Sahyuk glared at her, but soon sighed and gave us a tour.

We walked for a while until we reached a small palace, which I assumed was where she resided.

“This is it,” Jin Sahyuk said as she pointed at a mirror installed in the palace garden.

I instantly realized what this mirror that resembled the moon was.

[Otherworldly Mirror] [Mystic]

— A mirror with the power of another world. It may be possible to peek into the otherworld.

This was the dimensional conduit Jin Sahyuk created with her mana.

“Will this be enough?” she asked.

“No, give me a second,” I replied.

I inspected the mirror and could immediately tell that it wasn’t enough. I used my SP to add more details to the mirror.

[Otherworldly Mirror] [Mystic]

— A mirror with the power of another world. It may be possible to peek into the otherworld.

— Establish Passage: It will be possible to establish a passage to the otherworld with the help of stigma and a suitable catalyst.

— Summon: Consume a significant amount of mana to summon a human from another world.

It didn’t consume as much SP as I expected. I wasn’t sure if it was because I added stigma and a catalyst as requirements, but I only spent 1,500 SP.

“Huh? What’s this?” Jin Sahyuk asked as she looked at me.

I could tell that she was greatly surprised when the mirror brightly shone after I finished changing its settings.

I didn’t respond to her and took out a dagger to cut my thumb instead. Then, I wiped my blood on the mirror.

My blood would act as the catalyst to connect me to Kim Chundong on the other side.

“If... that world has truly been destroyed, then nothing will happen. Are you fine with that?” I asked.

“No, I’m certain there are survivors out there,” Jin Sahyuk confidently replied.

I nodded and infused all of stigma into the mirror.

Shwaaaaa!

The mirror shined brightly like the sun before a pillar of light shot up to the sky. Then, the pillar slowly disappeared and only left behind a thick white fog.

“...”

“...”

Nothing happened amid the deafening silence.

As Jin Sahyuk grew distressed, Chae Nayun suddenly grumbled while looking at her feet.

“Who’s this?”

Jin Sahyuk and I immediately turned towards her. There was a child on the ground that I was certain wasn’t there a while ago.

She was wearing tattered clothes and seemed to be four or five years old. She looked severely malnourished and was only skin and bones, but I was certain that she was still alive.

Jin Sahyuk smiled brightly for the first time after seeing the child. She exclaimed joyfully at the top of her lungs, “It’s a success!”

* * *

Murmur...! Murmur...!

The association’s courtroom was quite rowdy. There was a heated exchange between people that eventually led to shouting.

“...What’s going on?”

Thanks to that, Aileen was woken up by the ruckus and let out a yawn.

“...”

However, Jin Seyeon didn't say anything in response. She just continued to observe the trial with a serious face.

Aileen followed suit and observed the trial.

Kim Sukho had his head down in defeat and a woman was standing in front of him.

“...I am certain that Kim Sukho tried to kill me. You should admit it,” the woman said.

Kim Sukho did not refute what the woman said. Instead, he continued to shake his head and muttered under his breath in denial, “This can't be real... There's no way... There's no way this is possible...”

Jin Seyeon explained to Aileen, “That woman was a close colleague of Kim Sukho in the past. Her name is Yoon Yirang.”

“Huh? So? What about her?” Aileen tilted her head in confusion.

“It seems the end has come,” Jin Seyeon said with a sigh of resignation before she stood up.

“?”

Aileen still looked lost at the whole turn of events. She regretted falling asleep during the earlier parts of the trial.

“There seems to be no need to stay any longer...” Jin Seyeon said as she dragged Aileen out of the courtroom.

“Huh? Why? Hey, wait a minute... Hey...” Aileen protested and flailed her arms like a ragdoll.

However, Jin Seyeon simply picked her up and carried her out.

Then they came face to face with two familiar cadets, Kim Hajin and Chae Nayun.

“Huh? You came?” Chae Nayun was surprised, but immediately bowed and greeted them. “My name is Chae Nayun and this is my boyfriend, Kim Hajin.”

“Yes, we know who you are,” Jin Seyeon replied with a gentle smile.

On the other hand, Aileen put on a look full of authority and asked, “What are you guys doing here?”

Kim Hajin was the one who responded to her question, “Ah, that is... Nayun said she was going to meet her grandfather, so I was accompanying her.

Chae Nayun clung to Kim Hajin’s back while he spoke.

“Sir Chae Joochul is?”

“Yes.”

Aileen raised a brow and grumbled, “Why the hell are you two going to meet the esteemed Sir Chae Joochul... Uff! Umph!”

Jin Seyeon covered her mouth and said with an awkward smile, “Haha... I’m sorry about that. We’ll be on our way now, so have a lovely time you two.”

Flash! Flash! Flash! Flash! Flash! Flash!

A barrage of flashes went off the moment Jin Seyeon opened the doors.

“Ugh! What the?!”

The entire place from the entrance of the courtroom to the park in front was teeming with reporters.

“What happened in the trial?!”

“Did Kim Sukho admit to his crimes?!”

“Is Madam Aileen really running for chairman...”

Aileen was dazed by the sudden frenzy unfolding in front of her, but Jin Seyeon calmly slipped her a script she prepared the night before.

“You can just read what’s written there,” she said with a smile.

“...Ah, sure. Okay, listen up you lot!” Aileen enthusiastically shouted before she proceeded to read what was written on the paper.

The content of the script was the common speech one would hear from people running for office such as rooting out corruption, reformation of the association, enacting transparency, and so on. The caveat was that Aileen was using her Spirit Speech to say them.

* * *

The Ancient Castle was a place of records that recorded every single event since the beginning of time.

Chae Joochul could relate to the nameless old castle built by an unknown person who was forced to observe the passing of time.

The reason he was collecting the fragments of this castle was not because of what normal people would call a hobby. No, it was something entirely different from that.

Of course, Chae Joochul was merely an observer watching the movement of time. He was not someone that could enforce his will upon it.

His existence was something even the castle had no recollections of, just as he didn’t know who he was.

“The young lady has arrived.”

A deep respectful voice made him cut off his consciousness from the castle.

He looked at his attaché and said, “Let her in.”

“Yes, sir.”

The doors opened and his granddaughter waltzed in.

He brightly smiled after seeing his granddaughter. His granddaughter did the same as she approached and stood in front of him.

The next thing he had to do was guide her to a more comfortable place.

“Hmm... This place is a bit too stuffy. Come, follow me,” he said.

However, the way he said those words was like a ruler speaking to his subject who was a close friend.

They went to a room with a cozy atmosphere.

Chae Joochul sat on a rocking chair and his granddaughter sat near him.

“Grandpa, so what happened today was...”

His granddaughter started to tell him all sorts of stories enthusiastically. He laughed at the right moments while she told her stories.

She seemed to be encouraged by his responsiveness and continued chatting for a long time, but she soon stopped after she saw the clock.

“Ah, this isn’t what’s important right now. Rather than that, so... grandfather... how was... that...?” she asked carefully.

Chae Joochul knew what she meant by that.

“Hoho! It was fine. Tell that child that I’m thankful,” he replied.

He smiled as gently and brightly as he could, but his granddaughter’s expression soon darkened before she smiled again.

Of course, Chae Joochul could tell that she was forcing herself to smile. Her smile didn’t last long as she lowered her head.

She bit her lips and muttered, “You didn’t eat it... that medicine...”

Chae Joochul contemplated how to respond. He was definitely in a tough position, but he had no choice as she seemed to know already.

“...Yes. It seems that nothing escapes my granddaughter’s instincts,” he said with a warm smile.

She looked at him with visible anger in her eyes and her ears flushed red.

What he had to do next was appease her anger.

“Grandfather! I just—!”

“Nayun.”

“What?!”

“Hoho... Nayun, there is something we call value in this world.”

The words old and scolding went quite well together, but Chae Joochul had never scolded anyone in this life as that required too much emotion.

Of course, he had no idea why it was such a difficult thing for him.

“You might be aware of this, but humans tend to decide the value of things at whim. I’m talking about how they base their decisions on their emotions and rationale.”

Emotions and rationale were the two main things that made humans who they were.

“But those are too difficult for me. I have no idea if what’s right to me is really what’s right. If what’s right for humans is what’s right for the world. If what’s right for the world is what’s right for me...”

Chae Joochul had committed countless bloodshed until he became numb. He had no choice but to walk a path of blood in the lawless world he lived in. It reached a point where even the emotions that guided him to commit bloodshed back in those days had disappeared from his heart.

“So, is it really right for me to regain my emotions or is it the wrong thing to do? Will it have more value or not? Those are answers I won’t be able to find and this world will not give those answers to me.”

A person could not live in this world with rationale alone. Such was the fate of Chae Joochul, who was now detached from the world. He could no longer place any value on things after he lost his emotions. Everything became equal in the present and he could no longer put a value on things.

If someone were to ask him who he would save between an elderly person and a child drowning, he would question why it was a must to save another human in the first place.

He was now nothing but a robot without guidance or a living breathing plant.

“But I have one belief that I hold onto.”

Truth and lies, cause and effect, justice and injustice, glory and shame, repentance and fall, good and evil.

These things were not important for someone like him who possessed no emotions. However, there was one belief he held onto that was left behind by his old self before he lost his emotions. This allowed him to study what unfairness meant despite not possessing any emotions.

“My granddaughter is right.”

That belief was none other than to treat his own family above others. This belief was Chae Joochul’s only measuring stick to determine something’s value.

He could’ve been an evil person in the past, but he was determined to walk such a path once again if his family deemed it right.

“My motive to move lies in that.”

Knowing what his granddaughter desired, understanding her underlying emotions, and acting on his analysis was the method he came up with to replace his lack of emotions.

“So, I will not hurt you even though I lack emotions... No, I will never be able to hurt you because I don’t have any emotions...”

Chae Joochul was explaining how his thought process worked, but he was soon faced with a sight that he couldn’t understand. He was past eighty years old now and his emotions were frozen solid, which made it even harder for him to understand what was going on.

Sniff... Heuk... Heuk...

His granddaughter was crying.

He could tell that she was not simply crying out of sorrow. There was something much deeper than that. He analyzed the situation to the best of his abilities to find out what emotions his granddaughter was currently showing.

However, he understood her emotions a little bit too late.

That was how long it had been since he last saw this emotion. This emotion was filled with remorse, pity, and sorrow.

Chae Joochul could not understand why his granddaughter was showing such emotion right now. He had already strayed too far away to understand such complex emotions.

The only thing he could do was embrace the young girl calling out to him while crying. He did not push her away or stop her from walking into his embrace.

Ironically, he did all of that without a hint of emotion and acted out of a sense of duty instead.

As he embraced her, he felt something for the first and last time.

He was certain of himself.

“Waaah! Waaaah!”

Her wailing suddenly reminded him of an old memory. The memory of a baby crying and everyone gathering around the child. The baby wrapped in a white blanket cried so loud that it could probably be heard from the other side of the globe.

A long time had passed since then and that child was crying once again.

Chae Joochul could only nod after he connected the dots.

“ ... ”

This strange sensation welling up inside of him was Chae Joochul’s emotions... It was only then that he finally realized.

Side Stories 85

Chae Nayun (40)

Two months passed and Jin Sahyuk came back when the midterms were about to end.

“...It’s already reached that point. We’re planning to start official exchanges in three or five years,” she said.

I sat on a grassy hill overlooking the city. The once ghost-like city was now teeming with life. Children were running on the streets, the scent of grilled meat filled the air, and the chattering floating around was full of hope.

The city’s residents were enjoying their lives and thankful for everything.

“Yeah, don’t rush too much,” I replied.

The number of people successfully evacuated was exactly 7,517. That number was far greater than what I initially expected and the Jin Sahyuk from that world only took one year to grow up to twenty years old.

One year didn’t sound like a lot, but they had to survive an entire year in that desolate and ravaged world.

“What about Kim Chundong...?” I carefully asked after failing to suppress my curiosity.

The smile on Jin Sahyuk’s face disappeared as she looked at me and replied, “...He’s dead.”

“Dead? Who did you hear that from?”

“I met him three months ago through the mirror.”

Jin Sahyuk sighed and looked at the sky with teary eyes.

“I apologized... but he said there was no need... In fact, he even thanked me. He thanked me for giving him a reason to live his meaningless life.”

“...”

A reason to live his meaningless life... Those words struck me even though I had never met Kim Chundong nor was I familiar with who he was...

“Thanks,” Jin Sahyuk said out of the blue.

I doubted my ears for a moment. I never expected to hear those words from her.

I stood flabbergasted for a good minute before I finally muttered, “Huh...? Y-Y-Yeah... No, well, I should be the thankful one.”

“Okay, you should go down then. Your friends must be waiting for you.”

“Yeah...”

I stood up, but Jin Sahyuk remained seated as she continued to look at the city.

“I’m going now...”

“Sure.”

I descended the hill and the city appeared in front of me. The new city was glistening under the sun.

The Pharmacy Club members were interacting with the citizens. Yoo Yeonha was teaching the Korean alphabet to the children, Kim Suho was explaining modern contraptions and technologies to the adults, and Yi Yeonghan and Shin Jonghak were helping a bunch of youth with earthwork construction.

“Kim Hajin!”

I was ambushed from behind, but I easily carried her on my back.

“Hey, where were you? I was looking for you,” Chae Nayun asked while sticking her head over my shoulder.

“I was just taking a look around the city,” I replied.

“Taking a look? Well... I guess this place has quite the views.”

I smiled and nodded. Then I looked at the streets and appreciated this place teeming with life. The atmosphere was filled with warmth and made me feel warm to my deepest core.

“Hey, Hajin...” Chae Nayun said with a smile while looking at the same place I was. She asked, “What should we do from now on?”

Her realistic question dragged me back to earth. However, I didn’t have to think for long.

I gave a short, yet concise response, “What else? We need to graduate first.”

* * *

On top of a dead tree hidden behind overgrown branches.

“Boss, is it all good now?”

Boss didn’t respond to Jain’s question and continued to observe Kim Hajin and the children down in the city.

“Well, do you have anything else you want to say?” Jain asked.

Boss shook her head and finally replied, “No...”

She was currently thinking of the Chameleon Troupe’s unity.

“Don’t tell me you’re still thinking that you’re still indebted? Boss, we’re criminals. We’re not called the Righteous Troupe, right? You shouldn’t think of repaying your debts.”

“I know.”

Boss was resolved to live a life that was no different from hell on earth. That was why she was living such a life.

“Then what?”

“...”

Boss looked down without saying anything.

Jain shot lasers out of her eyes and glared at her.

“Alright... I’m fine now, so let’s go...” Boss shook her head after getting tired of those eyes.

“Yes, that’s how it should be. We still have a lot of stealing to do. Follow me,” Jain said.

Khalifa opened a portal.

“...”

Boss looked back one last time. She looked back at the child who was born among the corpses she piled up.

“If you’re a hero...”

‘I thought you would become someone like me if I spared you... Hell was what greeted you after you were born, so I thought you would become the same type of a person and I was creating another orphan like me.’

Ironically, her expectations were way off the mark.

“...It seems I was wrong,” Boss muttered before she disappeared into the darkness.

* * *

Kwaaachiiiiik!

Chae Nayun swung her mana greatsword, which was much larger than a normal sword. It cut through everything in its path.

That single attack laid waste to everything a few hundred meters in front of her and hundreds of monsters were obliterated.

One was bound to leave their back exposed after delivering such an attack, but Chae Nayun wasn't worried about her back.

A monster that sneaked behind her extended its claws, but it wasn't able to lay a finger on her.

Shwaaa!

Only a splatter could be heard as a bullet shot from afar killed the monster behind Chae Nayun.

“Hey, where are you shooting from?” Chae Nayun asked into her earphone after pulling back her sword.

— Somewhere a bit far from where you are.

“Hmph...” she frowned and scoffed before suddenly talking about something entirely unrelated. “Hey, why did you watch a movie without me?”

— Is that important right now...? Also, you can't stand horror movies, right?

“I can if I watch it with you!”

— Do you want to destroy the cinema?

“I won’t destroy it...” Chae Nayun grumbled in response.

Then someone shouted at her, “Nayun! I told you not to lower your guard!”

It was Chae Jinyoon.

“Hold your sword!” he shouted.

Chae Nayun flinched, but simply nodded and replied, “Yes. Yes, I will.”

They were now in their third year and taking their guild internship. Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin applied to Essence of the Straits.

Of course, both of them easily passed.

Chae Nayun had no problems entering as she was one of the top cadets, but Kim Hajin’s acceptance stirred quite a controversy as he wasn’t even in the top one hundred cadets.

There were a lot of rumors flying around that he only made it in because of Chae Nayun or that he was a gigolo etc.

Thanks to that, an Anti Kim Hajin Group was even created.

...Actually, the founder of the group was none other than Kim Hajin himself. He did it out of his stubbornness to earn a sliver bit more SP.

He did all that because he knew that he had to become stronger to stay with Chae Nayun.

“Haa... I’m so tired...”

The battle finally ended. It was an eighteen hour marathon and Chae Nayun was exhausted to the point that she fell on her butt.

“Are you alright?”

A familiar voice instantly washed her fatigue away. The tip of her mouth curled up, but she tried her best to pout and sulk instead.

“Yeah, but you won’t know since you’re just staying still and flicking your finger, right?”

“I can’t do anything about that.”

Kim Hajin sat in front of her and hugged her before she could even say anything. He infused his stigma into her and she was taken by surprise.

She could feel herself recovering dramatically. The recovery wasn’t because of the mana, but Kim Hajin himself.

“Are you better now?” he asked.

“...Yeah,” she covered her blushing face and replied.

She looked around and realized that they were at the foot of the mountain. She never realized where she was as they busily fought. Thanks to that, they were all alone now.

Chae Nayun licked her lips as sensual thoughts flooded her mind.

As she unbuttoned her outerwear, he suddenly pointed somewhere and said, “Look over there. The sun is coming up.”

“...Huh? Oh, you’re right.”

They mobilized in the morning, but it was now morning again.

Chae Nayun looked at the sunrise on the horizon. The morning sun was rising and illuminating their surroundings.

That light filled her heart.

“...Hey, Kim Hajin.”

Happiness welled up like a wave inside of her.

There were many things they could do together. They were happy together. They could dream the same dreams together and they could love each other.

All of this sent shivers throughout her body.

“Yeah...?”

“I love you.”

Her emotions made her blurt out a confession.

Kim Hajin tilted his head in confusion before he smiled and replied, “What an amazing coincidence. I love you too.”

Chae Nayun blushed, but then brazenly took off her outerwear.

“Let’s get up now.”

On the other hand, Kim Hajin pulled her hand and she was forced to her feet.

“Let’s go. They must be waiting for us,” he said.

“Huh...? Ah... Sure...” she mumbled in response.

She thought it was a bummer, but she could try again at a later date and decided to brush it off for now. However, she couldn’t help but sulk and pout.

They descended the mountain.

The scenery in front of them was brightly illuminated by the morning sun. They took their time to admire it as they walked slowly.

The world looked wonderful.

Chae Nayun stopped pouting and immediately regained her bright, beautiful smile.

“Ah! There they are! Hey, Chae Nayun! Kim Hajin! What were you guys doing?!”

They could see their friends in the distance waving at them. Both of them smiled as they walked towards them.

All of them enjoyed the scenery together. The sound of nature’s creatures crying in between the trees could be heard.

The world was no longer just a novel and embraced them.

* * *

The sunlight entering through the gap in the curtain woke me up. I squinted and saw Chae Nayun.

She was grinning while staring at me.

“Hehe. Kim Hajin is awake,” she said.

I nodded before I pinched her cheeks and asked, “When did you get up?”

“I sink avout thwo hors aghoo? You look sho acute slleeping, Kim Hajin.”

She couldn’t pronounce her words properly as I was pinching her cheeks. I found that extremely adorable.

I snickered while pinching her cheeks and got up. The blanket covering us flowed down the bed and the sun shining brightly on us made me cough in embarrassment.

“Ah, what was our intern schedule again?” Chae Nayun asked while rolling on the bed.

I dressed up first and checked my smartwatch.

“We have a theory review.”

“Ah... Theory again... that’s going to drive me crazy one day...” Chae Nayun covered her face.

I covered her with the blanket instead.

“Ah~ Ah~ Ah~”

“Just hurry up and get dressed.”

“You undressed me, so you should dress me up.”

“...”

I ignored her and went to the kitchen. I was preparing a simple breakfast when Chae Nayun walked into the kitchen wearing my dress shirt.

We ate together before preparing to go to work. We washed up, got dressed, and hopped into our car.

“Yawn...! Let’s go!”

It was quite bright outside and the road looked brighter than it usually did.

[Self-driving to Essence of the Straits will now commence.]

The car drove itself, so I removed my hands from the steering wheel and held Chae Nayun’s hand. We locked our fingers together as we enjoyed the scenery passing by us.

This world’s scenery and that world’s scenery started to blend. They had the same name, but they were two completely different Seoul.

I would remember that world from time to time. The world where I could spend time with my mother, father, and friends.

This longing and lingering regret would definitely last forever inside me.

Did I abandon them in the end? But this world was no longer just a novel. This world had become precious to me and this person was the most precious person to me who made it that way.

“Kim Hajin,” Chae Nayun called my name in a stiff voice.

“Hmm?” I muttered in response and looked at her. I was quite shocked.

She was looking at me with trembling eyes as I caressed her cheek and asked, “What’s wrong?”

“Huh? No... Just that... your expression just now... are you alright?”

It seemed that I was too immersed in my thoughts and it showed in my expression. I simply smiled and started playing with her earlobe.

“I’m alright,” I said.

However, she still looked nervous.

“I’m extremely content,” I added. “You don’t have to worry about it. I’m already content with what I have now. No, if it was possible... I would like to spend the rest of my life with you.”

“Tsk... You scared me... Why would you put on such a scary expression?”

“Scary? Who? Me?”

“Yeah, you did. Just now.”

“Oh, my bad.”

Just like you said last time, I can't live without you anymore.

"Ah, forget about it. Hey, Kim Hajin. Help me out a bit with that theory thing later. You know, give me something that anyone can present simply by memorizing it. I don't want to embarrass myself during theory review..."

I started my day with you, and I hope you'll be by my side together, forevermore.

Side Stories 86

What If Story (1)

Yoo Yeonha woke up before sunrise. She stayed still with her eyes open for a while before she yawned and stretched.

“Yawn...”

She checked the time. It was three thirty in the morning. She went to bed around one, so she slept around two hours and thirty minutes.

She got up and opened the curtains. It was raining outside.

“Yaaawn...”

She yawned again. Strangely enough, she felt refreshed even though she only slept for two hours. In fact, it felt as if she slept a good eight hours.

Was this bed really that good or...?

Yoo Yeonha pressed the mattress a few times before she suddenly felt someone's gaze.

“Kyahk! You scared me!” she screamed after seeing Kim Hajin peeking at her from between the small gap in the door.

He was holding a mug and sipping what she assumed was either coffee or red tea.

“What are you doing?!” Yoo Yeonha shouted while arranging her messy hair.

However, Kim Hajin looked surprisingly calm. No, he even looked at her in disbelief.

“What...? What’s your problem...?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“This is my room,” Kim Hajin replied.

Yoo Yeonha froze. This was her mansion, but she was currently on the third floor that her special attendants used. Her personal space began from the fourth to sixth floors. This meant the third floor was technically his floor.

“I don’t recall allowing you to peek!” Yoo Yeonha retorted.

“Hey, this is my room. I already told you. You should’ve gone to sleep in your room,” Kim Hajin nonchalantly replied while looking straight at her.

Yoo Yeonha avoided his eyes and grumbled with a pout, “...But this is my house.”

“Fine, I’ll just resign and move out then,” Kim Hajin replied with a shrug.

He was currently working as Yoo Yeonha’s bodyguard. She highly valued his abilities and found it a shame when he dropped out of Cube.

However, she ran into him by pure coincidence two years after he dropped out and managed to hire him after offering an excellent package.

Of course, he didn’t live on the third floor right away. He commuted to work like others for around six months, but he was soon made to stay after his work requirements changed.

“Forget about it. I’ll let it slide just this once.”

“Let what slide...?”

“I said I’ll let you off the hook! Now move.”

Yoo Yeonha shoved Kim Hajin aside and left the room. She sat on the couch in the living room with the mug of coffee that Kim Hajin prepared for her.

She switched her smartwatch on and browsed the news.

[Yoo Yeonha's involvement in the guild... Will it lead to mutiny?]

[Yoo Jinwoong is silent as usual.]

[An anonymous report says that...]

The whole world was gossiping about her and her name was being thrown all over the place.

“Haa...” she let out a sigh.

She was getting head-splitting migraines from this involvement and the mutiny they were talking about.

“You have a press conference today,” Kim Hajin said as he followed her to the living room.

“So what...?” Yoo Yeonha curtly replied.

“Aren’t you going to prepare for it?”

“I already did.”

Yoo Yeonha had been on the edge ever since news of her excessive involvement in the guild was published. No, she was already quite sensitive long before that. However, the news made her even more sensitive and she barely got any sleep for two entire weeks.

By sheer coincidence, she happened to lie on Kim Hajin’s bed. She didn’t have much expectations for it, but the bed turned out to be extremely comfortable.

After that day, she had been stealing Kim Hajin’s bed and sleeping on it ever since.

It was still a mystery why the bed felt so comfortable and helped her sleep, but she definitely knew that it wasn't because of him...

Kim Hajin sat beside her, but Yoo Yeonha moved away from him.

"Don't worry about me and just focus on your work."

"My work is protecting you."

"It's guarding, not protecting."

"That's that."

Kim Hajin laughed while Yoo Yeonha glared at him with discontent. To be honest, Kim Hajin had been too relaxed around her these days. He did renew his contract and got a huge raise after that incident, but he hadn't been doing anything for the past eighteen months aside from making fun of his employer.

Yoo Yeonha got up and said, "I'm going now. I'll leave arranging the bed to you since I'll be using it again tomorrow."

"Whoa, first it was excessive involvement and now you're power-tripping?"

"Damn you!" Yoo Yeonha growled before she jabbed her elbow at his head and stormed off.

"Kekeke!" Kim Hajin burst into laughter and fell on his back.

Meanwhile, Yoo Yeonha trembled in anger as she heard him cackle. Strangely enough, her body was trembling to the beat of his laughter, which annoyed her even more...

* * *

There was a saying, 'If you can't avoid it, just enjoy it.'

I used to be immature and said that I would never do something I didn't want to, but I learned how to compromise as time went by.

A human's brain was quite the fascinating thing. It would boost the other half's output if half of it wasn't being used. As if it was forcing us to not even spare a glance at closed doors or waste our time knocking on them.

Thanks to that, I became a part of this world and adapted because I couldn't do anything about it.

This was a world I created, but all of the episodes I created disappeared and I wasn't able to return to my own world.

—... The team leader is entering the conference room.

One of the bodyguards reported through my earpiece. I didn't bother responding and just acted immediately after hearing the report. I enjoyed a certain level of independence compared to Yoo Yeonha's other bodyguards. That was all thanks to the big thing I did around a year ago.

"There she is!"

"Get the camera ready!"

The conference room started to get rowdy and the doors soon opened. I observed Yoo Yeonha walking towards the podium. There wasn't a single part of her that looked disheveled like this morning.

She was walking with a straight and confident posture in formal attire.

Yoo Yeonha walked to the front of the podium and flashed a smile before greeting the reporters on the front line.

"Hello, how have you been?"

"Huh...? Ah, y-yes. Good. Hahaha..."

Yoo Yeonha gently nodded in response before she went up to the podium and started her speech without a single paper in hand, “I am here today to refute all of the rumors about me...”

The press conference started and I observed the entire thing. Yoo Yeonha confidently articulated and delivered her speech to quell the rumors, but the reporters barraged her with both legitimate and baseless questions.

However, she replied to their questions and skillfully avoided the ones that were difficult to answer. She was doing quite well, but the main problem was the number of enemies. There were roughly six to seven hundred reporters in the conference room and all of them were out to get her.

Yoo Yeonha did her best to answer as many questions as she could, but the press conference soon came to a close as there wasn’t enough time to respond to everyone’s questions.

“I will show with my actions instead of words from now on,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“What do you mean by that? How will you show it by actions?”

“Is Essence of the Straits a kingdom?! Why the nepotism?!”

The reporters that didn’t get their turn shouted at the top of their lungs when Yoo Yeonha tried to end the press conference, but she flat-out ignored them and left the room.

It was now my turn. I ran up to her and blocked off the cameras and reporters trying to get close to her. I was quite good at it as I had the gift, [Bodyguard].

“Wow, you were quite eloquent,” I praised her.

The team leader, Yoo Yeonha, gritted her teeth while trying her best to not smile after getting praised.

Our way back after the intense press conference was no different from a war.

Yoo Yeonha wiped her eyes with her sleeve and was surprised when there was a droplet of water. She discreetly looked sideways and saw Kim Hajin busily on his smartwatch.

“What are you doing?” she asked.

“Nothing, just reading the news.”

“What news?”

“Your news,” he replied before projecting a hologram.

[Yoo Yeonha from Essence of the Straits has refuted all allegations of excessive involvement...]

[Yoo Yeonha’s tear-jerking effort to wash her image...]

“They say it was tear-jerking.”

“Hey... I told you to stop that...”

Yoo Yeonha waved her hand over the hologram and cleared it away. Her information guild was already analyzing the media’s reaction to the press conference, so she wanted to avoid seeing these tabloid-like headlines for the sake of her mental health.

“Hey, I’m asking this just in case, but can we proceed with the hunt?” Kim Hajin asked.

Yoo Yeonha had to busily move about starting next week to solidify her position as the team leader. The main reason there were such rumors about her in the first place was due to the prejudice that Yoo Yeonha was not talented enough to be a hero.

“I have to. People are calling me an administrator instead of a hero.”

“Really? Then I’m taking tomorrow off.”

“I know right? Does it make sense for them to say this about someone who graduated ninth from Cube?!”

“...Are you even listening to me?”

“What?”

Kim Hajin smirked in response. Yoo Yeonha found his smirk to be quite annoying.

“Sigh...”

In the end, she could only sigh in resignation and looked out the window.

The limousine soon reached the mansion gates and both of them got off at the parking lot.

Clack... Clack...

Kim Hajin suddenly extended his hand towards her, but Yoo Yeonha flinched and distanced herself from him.

“What are you doing?” she asked.

“It tried to bite you,” he replied as he opened his hand to show a mosquito.

Yoo Yeonha frowned and grumbled, “...You’re quite the odd one.”

“That’s good to know.”

* * *

The third floor of Yoo Yeonha’s mansion, which was basically my house, was filled with all sorts of furniture I created with [Dexterity] and [Stigma]. Not only that, all of them possessed a special effect.

For example, anyone who saw a portrait that I randomly scribbled would feel at ease. Anyone who sat on the chair I made would feel their spine and pelvic bone realign and anyone who slept on the bed I made would feel all their fatigue wash away.

These were all extremely practical, yet magical effects.

“I should probably make her a bed...”

That was probably the main reason our esteemed team leader took over my room in the first place. I could see her burying herself in my bed and sleeping with a smile like a kitten.

“Hmm... Rather than that...”

I went over the news articles.

Yoo Yeonha’s excessive involvement was a part of the story setting I wrote, but I never expected it to happen as all of the story settings I wrote were removed.

“What should I do...” I rubbed my chin and contemplated.

First off, I wasn’t sure if this episode would play out as I wrote it or if it would branch off in a different direction.

I couldn’t help but hope that this wouldn’t cause significant damage to Yoo Yeonha. I mean, I guess she kind of grew on me these past two years. More importantly, she was the key to my retirement...

Not because she was my employer, but because most of my investments were tied to Essence of the Straits’ stocks.

“Tsk...”

I confirmed that she was fast asleep before I went over to the armory on the third floor.

The next morning, Yoo Yeonha didn't pressure her team to perform in this hunt. After all, she was the one who had something to prove and not her team.

She leisurely stepped on the field just as she always did with her six teammates right behind her.

"Alright, we're going to report this dungeon," Yoo Yeonha said with a smile while looking down a small hidden passage.

Finding this hidden dungeon was one of her main accomplishments today.

"Yes, ma'am!"

Yoo Yeonha smiled before she turned around and radioed someone.

The new recruit who was taking pictures of the dungeon entrance raised a brow and looked at Yoo Yeonha.

"Who is team leader talking to?"

"Hmm? Ah, that one?" Lee Hojun, a third year hero and warrior, flashed a grin. "That's probably the security team."

"Huh? The security team?"

"Yeah, we were ambushed once before. The team leader has made it a habit to frequently stay in touch with them. I mean, you probably heard of that incident a year and a half ago, right?"

"Oh, right... Was team leader there as well?"

"Yep."

The new recruit's face darkened as he recalled the worst catastrophe of this decade that resulted in thousands of civilian casualties.

Something certainly changed in the team leader after that incident.

“Are you there?”

— Yeah, I’m watching over you right now. Why?

“...Don’t respond so late.”

— There are no threats around you.

“Tsk... Alright...”

Yoo Yeonha clicked her tongue and faced her team members with a bright smile.

“So, how does it look?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“We reported our findings. We can go in as soon as we get permission,” one of the team members replied.

“I see. That’s great news,” Yoo Yeonha said with a nod.

Side Stories 87

What If Story (2)

I was watching over the dungeon's interior from the top of a tree on the mountain ridge. My thousand-mile eyes pierced through the thick mana fog and reached the raid team that entered the dungeon just now.

There were a total of seven people in the team including Yoo Yeonha.

I was munching on some snacks while watching over them.

— Phew...

Yoo Yeonha wiped her sweat with her sleeve. It seemed that her body stiffened up from the excessive anxiety she was feeling. I suspected that the past incident was still affecting her mental state.

Then, I suddenly saw a silhouette of the catastrophic disaster that day.

— Can you hear me?

The djinns' artillery barrage rained down on civilians and thousands died. Their corpses were littered all over the ground while the ravaged concrete streets were soaked in rivers of blood.

— Hey...?

Thousands of people were minced to pieces. Both the old and young had their bones and organs mashed together into a paste.

— Hey!

I snapped back to reality from the sudden scream.

I replied, “Yeah, yeah. What?”

— Hey! Why?! Why?! Why are you responding so late?!

It felt as if her shrieking voice was digging through my ear canal.

I simply smirked and replied, “Sorry, my bad. You can keep continuing. You’ll find it up front...”

— So it’s funny? What’s so funny? Ha?! I asked you what’s so funny!

“The dungeon will get agitated if you keep causing a scene.”

Yoo Yeonh gritted her teeth and grumbled.

— Don’t get distracted.

“I’m not.”

I looked at her. She was surprisingly looking back at me despite our distance.

“I only have eyes for you,” I added.

She flinched at my words and stuck out her tongue while pouting. It was our supreme team leader’s habit that usually came out whenever she was taken aback.

— What are you saying...? Stop saying such nonsense and focus on your work...

Yoo Yeonha grumbled, but her cheeks were flushed red for some reason.

* * *

The hidden dungeon was surprisingly easy. The team itself was quite skilled, but the fact that they didn’t need to concern themselves with scouting played a huge part.

“It really is amazing... How is it possible to see the inside of the dungeon from outside?”

Yoo Yeonha’s fellow Cube alumni, Yi Jiyeon, asked.

She was the same age and graduated the same year as Yoo Yeonha, but always made sure to not cross certain lines when they were working.

“Yeah, I’m surprised myself. I thought he was only good at being a bodyguard,” Lee Hojun said while fiddling with a pot.

The smell of ramyun was teeming from the boiling pot. Yoo Yeonha could feel her mouth salivating at the smell.

She discreetly swallowed her saliva.

“He is quite talented in numerous ways.”

“Oh right, he’s also a Cube alumnus, no?”

“Yes, but he dropped out before the first year even finished and worked as a mercenary for three years before signing a contract with me.”

“As expected, you really have an eye for talent, team leader.”

They were currently cooking inside the dungeon. They cleared the entire dungeon in only twelve hours, but had to replenish the nearly ten thousand calories they lost in the process as they could suffer from exhaustion if they didn’t.

“Ah, the ramyun is finished.”

Their menu for tonight was ramyun, pork belly, and other high-calorie food. In short, it was food that not only commoners enjoyed, but Yoo Yeonha also took delight in.

“Oh right, team leader doesn’t eat ramyun, right?” Yi Jiyeon asked with a hint of worry in her voice.

“It’s alright. It’s childish to be picky with food in these kinds of situations,” Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly replied.

She sat down in front of the food and picked up a good chunk of the noodles from the pot and transferred it to her plate.

“I’ll give it a try...” she muttered while reminding herself not to slurp the ramyun and eat it as gracefully as possible.

“...”

It was tasty as she expected, but she couldn’t deny that it suddenly reminded her of Kim Hajin. After all, the ramyun he cooked was miles better than this one.

“How is it? I guess it doesn’t live up to your taste buds...”

“No, I’m fine. I can stomach it.”

Pork belly, tenderloin, instant rice, ramyun, bibim noodles, boiled eggs, etc...

Yoo Yeonha could eat all of these to her heart’s content without having to be conscious of other people thanks to the extremely convenient excuse that they were inside a dungeon. Of course, she didn’t forget to pretend that it wasn’t really good, but ate all of her portions anyway.

“Shall we wrap it up?” Yoo Yeonha ate her fill and moved on to check their results for the day.

“Armor... sword... armband... necklace...”

They gained a total of four relics. All of them would definitely be worth billions of won judging by the dense mana that they emitted.

Yi Jiyeon walked towards her with a satisfied smile, “We got quite the haul. That accessory relic is the jackpot...”

Accessories fetched the highest prices among relics, which was why Yi Jiyeon was fixated on it. However, Yoo Yeonha couldn’t take her eyes off the armband that looked perfectly suited for a marksman.

She continued staring at the armband and thought, ‘It would be perfect for him.’ The thought made her jump in surprise and she slapped her own cheeks.

‘What’s wrong with me? Am I going crazy?’

“Everyone... Let’s get ready to go back. Pack up the relics and let’s go...” Yoo Yeonha said.

* * *

The next day, Yoo Yeonha returned to the guild with her spoils from the dungeon. Even the media came since the relics she gained were worthy of such attention.

“Four relics...? These are really good! The necklace looks like it’ll be at least an ancient tier,” the appraiser of Essence of the Straits marveled at the relics.

Yoo Yeonha smiled and replied, “That’s great news. Please store them in the vault.”

“Yes, ma’am!”

Yoo Yeonha walked to her office as she still had to plan for her business trip next week.

“Aigoo~ Hello, team leader!”

She ran into the vice guild master.

Yoo Yeonha loathed the idea of even calling that sleazy weasel’s name as he approached her with his entourage.

Yoo Yeonha put on a smile and greeted him back, “Hello, how are you, vice guild master? You seem to be in a good mood today.”

“Of course! Our beloved team leader came back with four relics, so isn’t that a cause for celebration? Hahahaha!”

The man’s laughter annoyed Yoo Yeonha, but what annoyed her even more was the fact that he placed his hand on her shoulder.

“I hope that you will continue working hard for our guild. Oh right, we don’t care about the rumors about you, not at all. I mean, team leader is just the team leader, right?” the man said with obvious sarcasm.

However, Yoo Yeonha simply smiled in response.

“Also, I heard that you’re going to China on a business trip next week. Please do your best for that as well! But don’t worry, we’ll clean up after you if you fail, so just relax. Bwahahaha!” the man said before he walked away with a burst of boisterous laughter.

Yoo Yeonha leaned on a wall and muttered under her breath, “Ah... So annoying...”

That man’s very existence was a source of stress for her. She could feel another migraine pounding on her head.

She closed her eyes and massaged her temples when a low voice asked her out of nowhere, “Are you alright?”

“...?”

She flinched and opened her eyes to find Kim Hajin right in front of her.

“Huh? What?”

Why was he here? She wondered while tilting her head in confusion.

He was still in his combat suit and smirked as he placed his hands on her temples. He intended to place his hands on her temples, but ended up covering her entire face because her face was so small.

“W-What are you doing?”

“Just stay still.”

Kim Hajin infused stigma’s mana into her to cure her migraine. Blue light glowed from his hands and made her stop resisting as the soothing feeling spread throughout her entire body.

Not long after Kim Hajin removed his hands, she wobbled and leaned against his chest.

“Haa...”

She let out a moan after noticing that the pain had disappeared and looked up at him with out-of-focus eyes.

“What are you doing here...?” she asked.

“Stalking,” he replied.

“Stalking...?”

“Yeah, you don’t have to know anything other than that.”

Yoo Yeonha was about to ask what he was talking about when they suddenly sensed someone’s presence on the staircase. This made her come back to her senses.

“Get away from me!” she screamed and pushed him away.

“Whoa!”

Kim Hajin was pushed to the end of the corridor. Yoo Yeonha put on her haughty nonchalant expression and greeted her guild members.

A month before...

A mana field appeared in Northern China. Fortunately, there were no civilian casualties as they predicted the field's appearance. However, the field was so large that it couldn't be cleared by the Chinese guilds alone.

In the end, the Chinese government decided to auction the right to raid the field to various prestigious foreign guilds. Essence of the Straits was planning to participate.

The auction was being held at the largest auction house in Shanghai, China: Wigitzen.

Yoo Yeonha steeled her resolve as she arrived at the portal station. She was greeted by the tall skyscrapers of Shanghai along with a wave of reporters.

Her security detail paved the way for her and she barely managed to get into her limousine.

"You here?" I greeted her with a smile inside the limousine.

Yoo Yeonha took off her sunglasses and went straight to business, "My first schedule is the round table meeting, right?"

The auction would take place over five consecutive days and more than one hundred guilds were participating. However, the Chinese government restricted entry to only fifty guilds per day.

The purpose of the round table meeting was to prepare before participating in the auction.

"Did you finish your preparations?" I asked.

She didn't respond, so I peeked at the hologram she was looking at.

“I think Deshwing will be too difficult,” I commented.

Only then did she finally look at me.

The field was auctioned off into twenty-seven fields and Deshwing was regarded as the most difficult one among them.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly asked, “Are you going to participate?”

“Me?” I frowned in response.

She tilted her head and said, “My bad. That came out wrong. You’re going to participate.”

“Huh...? Really? When was that decided?” I shrugged.

I didn’t really feel like participating, but that didn’t mean I didn’t want to. I could gain some SP if I joined the raid and I was trying to come up with more ways to earn SP these days.

“This is your reward,” she said as she took something out of her bag.

It was an armguard that covered one’s thumb all the way to the elbow.

“They said it’s an ancient relic. It’ll be quite useful to you.”

“Is this a bribe?”

“I’ll give it to you if you promise to participate.”

“Okay... Well, I want to be with you so I guess it’s fine,” I said with a smile and put on the armguard.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly flinched for no reason and grumbled, “Ah. Stop, will you? Don’t joke about things like that.”

“Why?”

“It’s giving me goosebumps,” she said while scratching her arm.

She sounded quite serious for no reason, but it was probably because she was nervous about the upcoming meeting.

“Sure.

“Ehem...”

Yoo Yeonha faked a cough while trying to stop herself from smiling. She seemed to be embarrassed and tried to change the topic.

“I think that’s the place,” she said while pointing at two huge buildings outside.

One of the buildings looked like a gigantic fish while the building next to it looked like a dome or a colosseum with a lid on top.

“The meeting will be in that colosseum and you’ll be coming with me.”

“I have to go...?” I asked while tilting my head in confusion.

“Yes, we’re allowed to bring in one adjutant to the meeting and I chose you as mine.”

“...Why?”

I couldn’t help but find it strange. Yoo Yeonha was always conscious of her image and tried to distance herself from any scandals. That was also the reason why she avoided talking to me in front of others.

The only time we were able to talk was during a dungeon raid, traveling in the limousine during working hours, or at the mansion where paparazzi and spies couldn’t infiltrate.

Of course, the round table meeting was also an official matter. It would be strange and attract a lot of attention if she brought along a mercenary instead of a hero as her adjutant.

“Do you remember Lee Hojun? The one who participated in the last dungeon raid...”

“Yeah.”

“I was thinking of bringing him along as my adjutant, but it turns out that he was the one who sold my information to the press...”

“Oh...” I awkwardly scratched my head.

Yoo Yeonha seemed embarrassed about it and flashed an awkward smile. Then she added, “I thought about bringing Yi Jiyeon since she’s talented, but... she’s too dumb...”

Yi Jiyeon possessed excellent talent and decision-making abilities as a supporter, but she was the worst person to bring in these kinds of situations.

“You’re the only one I can trust right now...”

I finally understood her intentions after listening to her.

Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh and covered her face with her hands.

I watched her for a few seconds and asked, “How long do you want me to massage your head before you sleep?”

“...What did you just say?”

“It’ll feel really good. It felt good last time, right? Your head will clear up.”

“...I don’t really need it,” Yoo Yeonha scoffed and turned her back towards me.

She was probably asking for it right now.

I placed my hands on her temples and it only took exactly three seconds before a moan escaped from her lips.

Side Stories 88

What If Story (3)

The order of entry to the round table meeting was decided based on the guild's world ranking. Both the world's last ranked guild and the top guild, Creator's Sacred Grace, participated.

That was the reason why Essence of the Straits couldn't help but attract attention since they were second in the world ranking.

"Phew..." Yoo Yeonha stood in front of the door leading to the meeting hall and arranged her clothes.

She sharpened her collars and made sure there wasn't a single crease on her clothes.

— The representatives of Essence of the Straits, Yoo Yeonha, and her adjutant, Kim Hajin, are entering.

A voice announced our entrance.

Yoo Yeonha was about to enter when she stopped and scanned me from head to toe. She seemed dissatisfied about something as she extended her hand towards my necktie.

"Can't you put this on properly? It's crooked."

"...I never wore one before."

She nodded in satisfaction after fixing my necktie.

"Alright, let's go now."

The doors opened and a large round table appeared with numerous guild representatives and their adjutants already seated.

Yoo Yeonha held her head up despite the attention she was receiving as she walked to her seat.

Clack... Clack... Clack... Clack...

The sound of her high heels resonated in the room as she walked. I was walking right behind her.

— The representative of Creator's Sacred Grace, Yun Seung-Ah, and her adjutant, Kim Suho, are now entering.

As expected, the last to enter was Creator's Sacred Grace.

I eagerly looked at the door in anticipation of seeing a familiar face. Yun Seung-Ah and Kim Suho entered shortly afterwards.

Both of them looked no different from when I was in Cube.

Kim Suho winked at me the moment he saw me... Gross...

The meeting finally started after everyone took their seats. The moderator of the meeting was an executive of the Hero Association, Kim Jonghyuk.

He raised his glasses and said, "Then, we will now commence the meeting.

The first topic at hand was choosing the auction date. Yoo Yeonha chose the first and fourth days of the auction, which were the dates when most of the difficult fields were allocated. Creator's Sacred Grace made the same choice as her.

Yoo Yeonha was the youngest representative in this meeting, but she led the meeting with charisma. After all, there was no way anyone could speak ill or look down on her simply because of some rumors flying around when she was the representative of the second most powerful guild in the world.

"I am aware that Essence of the Straits is currently raiding a large dungeon and attempting to raid a high-level field at the same time.

That is simply too reckless.”

“We can attempt it at the same time because it is a field. A field has no time limit, unlike a dungeon and...”

The representatives were in a heated exchange when the representative from Frost Sanctuary pointed at me and asked, “But... I heard the adjutant from Essence of the Straits is a mercenary. Am I correct?”

I simply nodded in response.

“Then what’s your main weapon? Ah, I’m just asking because I heard some strange rumors that you use a gun.”

Yoo Yeonha replied with a frown, “Yes, he does use a gun.”

“Hmm... Then, is he participating in the field as well?”

Yun Seung-Ah and the other representatives watched with intrigued looks.

I looked at the back of Yoo Yeonha’s head, but didn’t see our dear supreme team leader attempting to respond to the question.

In the end, I simply shrugged and replied on my own, “Yes, I will be.”

“Ohh... Will that work? A field is as dangerous as a dungeon, but taking a gunner as your adjutant...?”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t respond, which made the other guild representatives look at me with curious eyes.

I was a bit burdened by the attention I was receiving, but I simply smiled and replied, “I’m the type that gets stronger when protecting someone. I’m confident in my protection abilities.”

This wasn’t a bluff. The gift [Bodyguard] that I spent a year’s worth of SP on was more than enough to clear the field.

“Really?”

Some of the people in the room gasped at my words. Even the representative from Frost Sanctuary attacking me just now seemed taken aback, but he soon flashed a smug smile.

Everyone else looked back and forth between me and Yoo Yeonha.

I could see steam rising from Yoo Yeonha’s head. Kim Suho seemed to be trying his best not to burst into laughter.

“Hahaha! Then, I look forward to your exploits.”

I wasn’t sure if my response was enough, but the representative from Frost Sanctuary withdrew his blade and stopped attacking me after that.

Wait, should I have said tongue instead of blade...?

* * *

Yoo Yeonha stormed out as soon as the meeting was concluded.

She checked her watch. The time was seven thirty in the evening and the first auction would start exactly an hour later.

She looked back and said, “...I’ll go to the auction alone.”

Strangely enough, she found it difficult to look Kim Hajin in the eyes. Fortunately, there was a fifty person limit for the auction so it was a convenient excuse to avoid him.

“Alright then, I’ll be waiting outside,” he replied with a smile.

“Do what you want,” she curtly replied and walked away.

However, she couldn’t help but keep looking back for some reason. She would involuntarily glance back after every two steps she took. In the end, she let out a sigh and decided to tackle the issue head-on. She knew that she wouldn't be able to focus on the auction at this rate because her curiosity got the better of her.

"Hey..."

"Hmm?"

"What did you mean a while ago?"

"Mean what?"

Yoo Yeonha couldn't respond to the nonchalant response and just stared at him. She never expected that he was this type of a man.

"I mean..." she squirmed while trying to come up with the words, but soon shook her head. "...Never mind."

"Hey, what is it?"

"I said never mind."

They continued walking for a while before both of them came to a halt. Yoo Yeonha looked somewhere and her eyes shot wide open.

Kim Hajin's eyes followed to where she was looking.

"Oh..."

It was Shin Jonghak.

Yoo Yeonha froze in place after seeing him talking to some woman.

Kim Hajin furrowed his brows and nonchalantly said, "...I'll be going first."

Yoo Yeonha couldn't stop him from leaving. She thought of stopping him, but it was too late as Shin Jonghak spotted her.

He looked exactly like how he used to.

“Hey, Yoo Yeonha. You’re here?”

“...Yeah.”

Yoo Yeonha looked beside him at the beautiful woman. She had no idea if that woman was his colleague or lover, but bowed and greeted her.

“You caused quite a scene,” Shin Jonghak said.

He wasn’t the representative for Desolate Moon, but was technically higher ranked than the representative. That was why it wasn’t weird for him to be there and know what happened at the round table meeting.

“Why did you choose a mercenary of all people to be your adjutant?”

Yoo Yeonha shook her head at the criticism and replied, “He has the skills to back it up.”

“Still, you have to think of his background.”

“Anyways...”

Shin Jonghak figured that talking about it any further would just spoil the mood, so he decided to change the subject, “Which dungeon are you guys going for?”

“I’m not sure...” Yoo Yeonha muttered in response.

Shin Jonghak rubbed his chin.

Yoo Yeonha stared at him. He was her first love and she loved him for the longest time. However, that love stopped after eleven years, three months, and thirteen days.

“I can’t tell you that,” she said.

He wouldn't come to her no matter how much she loved him. He wouldn't come no matter how long she waited. That was why she stopped and replaced her feelings with a grand ambition.

"I guess you're right."

"Yeah."

Shin Jonghak patted her on the shoulder and said, "I wish you the best."

It was quite rare for him to touch someone else, but this was his way of showing friendship to another person.

"You too, Jonghak... No, I wish you the best, next vice guild master of Desolate Moon," Yoo Yeonha said.

Shin Jonghak smiled in response. It was the same smile he had ever since he was a child, an innocent yet haughty smile.

* * *

The auction came to an end. Yoo Yeonha managed to get the field one level lower than Deshwing, which was Yijieng. It could be considered a success based on the results alone, but the real problem was choosing the raid members.

"Haa..."

She was looking at the hologram monitor to sort the guild members out, but her faction was lacking in many ways. After all, most of them were new recruits or had been in the guild for two years only.

She couldn't involve her father, Yoo Jinwoong, because that would further complicate things. In the end, she had to choose someone from the vice guild master's faction, but...

Yoo Yeonha closed her smartwatch and the hologram disappeared. The skyscrapers could be seen out the window.

She was currently staying at the most luxurious hotel in Shanghai, The Essential. It went without saying that this hotel chain was a subsidiary of Essence of the Straits judging from its name. She was currently staying alone on the hotel's penthouse floor.

“Let's think about it after we survey the field...” she muttered to herself.

It wasn't a dungeon, but a field. Surveying it in advance was an absolute must. There were things on the field that couldn't be seen through videos or reports. That was why it was imperative for the person in charge to personally visit the field and survey it.

Yoo Yeonha gathered her thoughts and sent a transmission to someone.

“Hey, I'm done with my work so you can come now,” she said.

However, there was no response no matter how long she waited.

She tilted her head in confusion and sent another transmission, “Hello? Are you sleeping?”

All she received in return was silence.

“Hey?”

She thought there was something wrong with her smartwatch, so she shook it a few times.

“Hello?”

Then, she tapped on it a few times as well.

Tak! Tak! Tak!

“HEY!”

— Yeah, what?

Only then did she finally receive a response.

She was about to say something when she heard someone snickering from the other end of the line. It was quite high-pitched and sounded something like, Kekekeke! or Kyakyakya!

“...What are you doing right now?” she asked with a hint of disgust.

—... I’m watching you.

“I said, what are you doing right now?”

— I told you. I’m watching you. I can see you all the way from here.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha gritted her teeth. She felt dizzy for a second as her entire body started getting hot.

“Come here.”

— Huh? Why? I can see you from here.

She couldn’t help but feel annoyed by him right now. She brushed her fingers through her hair and clenched her fist. Her palms were sweaty.

“I said come here.”

— Why?

“Hey...”

Yoo Yeonha felt like her pent-up anger would erupt at him, but she immediately changed her plan.

“Cough! Cough!”

She started coughing and spoke in a faint trembling voice, “...I’m sick.”

— All of a sudden?

“My head hurts and I can’t sleep...”

She suddenly heard someone ask, ‘Who are you talking to?’

It was broken Korean, but she was certain that it was a woman. He was currently with a woman right now.

Yoo Yeonha lost her cool and screamed, “COME HERE!... I said.”

—... Wow, there’s absolutely no respect for workers’ rights here. You should let your employee rest when they’re resting, you know.

“I don’t know. Just do what you want if you don’t want to come,” Yoo Yeonha retorted and hung up.

She lay on the sofa as rage started boiling inside her. She gritted her teeth and switched the TV on.

— 在这次会议上.....

There was a news report of what happened during the round table meeting. It was roughly about how the representative from Essence of the Straits brought a mercenary as her adjutant.

Five... ten... twenty... and thirty minutes passed.

Yoo Yeonha was restless while watching the news. She couldn’t help but feel bothered.

Where was he right now and what was he doing? How dare a bodyguard go fool around and not protect his employer! Who was that woman?

‘Ha! Unbelievable! Why am I surrounded by disloyal people...? Yeah, I’m not mad because I’m mad. I just wanted to act like I was mad to make him nervous. I mean, why is he fooling around instead of doing his job? A bodyguard should dedicate himself to protecting his employer... I'm stuck in this penthouse while he's fooling around with some woman... '

"Ah... I can't take it," Yoo Yeonha grumbled and stood up.

However, she instantly made a detour and went back to the sofa after seeing that the elevator was coming up to the penthouse.

Ding!

The elevator door opened and someone's footsteps could be heard. Yoo Yeonha pretended to be asleep on the sofa.

The stench of perfume lingered in the air.

"Are you asleep?"

Yoo Yeonha didn't respond to the question.

Kim Hajin laughed and looked down at her without saying anything. Then he started playing with her hair.

"...Goodnight."

Those words made Yoo Yeonha act impulsively. She opened her eyes and pretended that she just woke up.

"Where have you been...?" she asked.

Her acting was perfect. She was confident that anyone would be fooled by her acting skills.

"I was making some money in the casino," he replied with a shrug.

"I heard some woman's voice..."

He smirked and replied, "I made quite a lot, so she clung to me. I think she works at the casino or something."

“ ... ”

Yoo Yeonha was speechless and couldn't find the right words. She continued staring at him before suddenly remembering what he said earlier today.

'I'm the type that gets stronger when protecting someone. I'm confident in my protection abilities.'

She was certain the someone he mentioned was her.

In the end, she ended up smiling and spoke in a completely different voice, "...Please don't go to places like that from now on."

Kim Hajin was quiet for quite a while. Was he thinking about how to respond to that?

Yoo Yeonha could feel her heart race while looking at his serious face. She couldn't understand why her heart was beating so fast in the first place.

Then, Kim Hajin finally replied...

"Who the hell are you to tell me what to do?"

Side Stories 89

What If Story (4)

We got up early in the morning the next day to survey the field. We hopped into an SUV and made our way towards the field that we won in the auction, Yijieng.

Yoo Yeonha didn't say a word during the entire trip. No, it would've been a relief if she didn't say anything at all.

"Hmph!"

She would immediately scoff and turn her head away from me whenever our eyes met. I tried to tell her that I was simply joking last night, but she didn't budge an inch.

"Hmph!"

The local agent driving the SUV looked into the rearview mirror and asked, "...But are you really a mercenary?"

"Yes," I replied.

"You use that gun?"

"Yes."

"I see..." the agent muttered in half-disbelief and half-amazement.

The mainstream mindset was that modern guns didn't work on monsters. They weren't technically wrong since guns were basically ineffective against monsters ranked intermediate or above even with mana bullets.

"How do you plan to do the survey, team leader...?" I carefully asked

Yoo Yeonha.

I was forced to mind my words because someone else was in the SUV with us.

Yoo Yeonha narrowed her eyes at me and shrugged, “What would a person like me know? I’ll leave it all to you.”

“...”

“Hmph!”

The SUV came to a halt while Yoo Yeonha did her best to sulk.

The driver turned to us and said, “This is the place.”

Clack...!

Yoo Yeonha opened the door and got off. I followed suit.

A fresh breeze greeted us from all four directions. In front of us was a vast plain without any obstacles in sight. It was an extremely vast plain that stretched into the horizon.

“Hmm...” Yoo Yeonha inspected the field with a serious look.

I used my thousand-mile eyes to survey the area as well. I was able to see the entirety of the field and even the entrance from where we were standing.

“Then, I’ll be going back now,” the local agent said with a bow before he took out an electric kickboard from the SUV’s trunk.

Well, it was a bit strange to call it a kickboard since it was extremely fast. Anyways...

I spoke casually to her again, “Are you going in?”

A field was similar, yet different to a dungeon. They were both created from mana, but the field that appeared in China was closer to a barrier.

First of all, an entrance existed in fields. In short, this meant that a field was nothing more than empty land from the outside, but the interior was entirely different from what could be seen. Also, there was no way to tell what the field would look like from the outside.

“I’ll go in alone. I’m nobody after all,” Yoo Yeonha grumbled with a hint of sadness in her voice.

“Sure. Do what you want,” I replied with a shrug and turned around to walk back to the SUV.

However, I stopped in my tracks after feeling a powerful surge of killing intent from behind. I could feel the hair on the back of my neck stand.

“Ehem...! Ehem...!” I faked a cough and turned around again.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha’s lips were trembling. Was she holding back tears by any chance or was she trying to push down her anger?

I smiled after getting my answer as she trembled in anger. I should stop playing with her now.

“I’m just joking. Let’s go in together,” I said.

Only then did Yoo Yeonha’s expression finally relax.

“I think that’s the entrance,” I said while pointing at a tree near us.

The tree was around three meters tall. Its branches spread wide apart as if opening its arms. I could see a transparent entrance right underneath its branches.

“Yes, that should be it. Let’s go,” Yoo Yeonha replied.

We walked towards the entrance.

Yoo Yeonha extended her arm in front of the entrance and waved. Her milky white and smooth arm disappeared into the entrance.

“Shall we go in?” she asked.

“Yeah.”

“Alright, who goes in first?”

“Up to you.”

“Fine.”

She sounded quite confident with her response, but I could tell that she was obviously hesitating judging from the fact that she was squirming in place. In the end, I had no choice but to play my part as the bodyguard and enter first. Then I grabbed her hand sticking out in mid-air and yanked it towards me.

“Whoa! That scared me!”

“How is it?” I asked.

We immediately scanned our surroundings when we entered the field.

“Hmm... It looks like nothing special.”

“Yeah, I agree.”

The interior looked like an abandoned house from the slabs of concrete and steel rods littered here and there. Vines and moss were growing on top of the debris.

“There’s a high possibility that it’s a reenactment of the past,” Yoo Yeonha said.

There were some cases where a field would recreate a past scenery, so we could find out what happened if we looked around.

“What should we do?” I asked.

“You know better than I do. We’ll have to stay here for at least thirty minutes for a proper survey,” Yoo Yeonha replied before taking out various pieces of equipment from her bag.

The first thing she took out was her whip followed by a mana density measurer, a compass, an automatic map drawer, and other items that were mandatory when surveying fields.

I drew my gun and infused aether into it just in case. I turned my Desert Eagle into a shotgun powerful enough to blow away an intermediate rank monster.

“Shall we go?” I asked.

“Yes... please lead the way,” Yoo Yeonha replied while clinging to the hem of my shirt.

* * *

Two hours passed.

“I think we hit the jackpot...”

We did some light hunting while surveying the field. I nodded in agreement after inspecting the few remains of the monsters we defeated.

We defeated some cordyceps and a cyclops. The cordyceps was a fungi parasite monster that took control of other monsters while the cyclops was a distant cousin of ogres, except it only had one eye.

We hit the jackpot because their remains had immense value.

It was needless to explain why cordyceps were so valuable while the cyclops’ eye was a medicine highly sought after by wealthy people.

“It’s an excellent hunting spot,” I said.

“Then...” Yoo Yeonha took out a dagger and personally disassembled the cordyceps and extracted the cyclops’ eye. Her hands didn’t get dirty since she conjured gloves with her mana before working on the monster remains.

“Let’s head back,” Yoo Yeonha said after storing the cleanly cut monster remains in an icebox.

“Sure,” I replied.

We walked to the tree bathing underneath the moonlight with all of our equipment in tow. We marched into the entrance... but nothing happened.

“...?”

Both of us blinked. What was going on?

Yoo Yeonha spun on the spot and walked into the entrance again.

Whoosh... Whoosh...

She tried numerous times, but nothing happened.

“What’s going on...?” she asked while looking at me.

I was confused and decided to inspect the entrance again. Then I found something bizarre.

“Huh?” I muttered.

“What’s wrong?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“...The entrance is gone?”

Six more hours passed. I took a few naps while Yoo Yeonha was busy arranging some documents on her smartwatch. We didn't have internet access, but it was still possible to use a smartwatch to work on some documents offline.

"This is taking quite a while..." I grumbled.

"It should be back sooner or later. Don't worry so much. It's not like it's never happened before, right?" Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly replied.

She was as calm as ever.

It was exactly as she said. Instances where the field's entrance suddenly changed to another place had happened during a survey. It was quite rare, but there were precedents of it documented.

"I guess... but are you alright?" I asked.

"Does it matter if I'm alright or not? It's not going to take that long for the entrance to return and I have a mountain of work to do anyways," Yoo Yeonha replied just as I expected she would.

Her response made me feel at ease.

I stretched my arms and lay on the grass. I looked up at the sky when suddenly...

Pat!

A water droplet fell on my face.

"...Huh?"

Pat... Pat... Patpat... Patpatpat... Tututututu!

A downpour occurred even before I could ask, 'Is it raining?'

Yoo Yeonha looked surprised as well.

“Does it rain inside fields as well?” I asked her.

“I heard it’s possible, but a field is still a mana dimension so... it’s quite dangerous...”

“Let’s take shelter first.”

There were a lot of abandoned buildings in the area that we could use for shelter from the rain.

However, Yoo Yeonha shook her head and said, “What if the entrance appears during that time? We don’t know when it’ll appear again, so we have to keep watch over it.”

“Hmm...”

Her logic was quite convincing, but we couldn’t afford to stay under mana rain known to be more potent than acid rain.

“Then you stay here for a bit. I’ll go and look for things we can build a shelter with. Let me know if the entrance comes back,” I said before standing up.

She suddenly grabbed my hand. I looked back and she was looking at me with wet eyes.

“...What?” I asked.

Yoo Yeonha didn’t say anything, but I noticed her lips were squirming again. She exhaled as a rain droplet flowed down her long eyelashes.

“Let’s go together... I don’t want to be alone...” Yoo Yeonha said as she put her long fingers into my sleeve.

* * *

Patpatpatpatpatpat...!

The rain showed no signs of stopping, but we managed to build quite a cozy shelter. The old tree in front of the field's entrance underwent a renovation and had a roof now.

Of course, [Dexterity] didn't forget to add an artistic touch to it regardless of the situation we were in. Our shelter was more like a mini-mansion if I slightly exaggerated.

"I think I almost died..." I grumbled while checking the bruises on my body.

The entire shelter took four hours to build. This was exactly why every drop of mana rain was so dangerous.

It wasn't an exaggeration to say that it was more like hail, but with steel shots instead of water.

"How are you? Are you alright?" I asked Yoo Yeonha.

She blankly stared at the sky before looking down. She seemed to have lost it for some reason...

"I'm alright, but don't you think it's taking too long...? We can't afford to waste time trapped here like this..." she said.

She tried her best to sound nonchalant like usual, but I could tell she sounded different this time. In fact, she was sitting with her knees curled up to her chest. This posture was something our beloved supreme team leader would never do.

"We're losing too much time... If we fail to leave this place and they find out that something happened to me here..." she muttered repeatedly with her face buried in her knees.

I was slightly taken aback by the dramatic shift in her emotions. No, was she pretending to be alright this entire time?

"Yeah... Hmm..."

I guess I had no choice. I took out a thick book from my rucksack. I originally planned to give this to her at a critical time, but this was probably the most effective thing right now to stop her spiraling depression.

“Hey.”

“...”

“Aren’t you going to respond?”

“What?” Yoo Yeonha retorted and glared at me.

I felt mischievous all of a sudden and thought of teasing her. She had a big droplet at the edge of her eyes. I wasn’t sure if she caught a cold from the air or not, but her nose was bright red as well. Her breathing was labored and she swept her hair back a bit too often.

It seemed like I didn’t pay enough attention to her while I was engrossed in building our shelter.

“It’s nothing much, but... Here, take this,” I said as I gave her the gift.

“What is this...?”

“Just take a look.”

Yoo Yeonha tilted her head in confusion as she received the book.

“An accounting book...?” she muttered.

“Yeah, I was busy tailing everyone from the vice guild master’s faction,” I proudly replied.

I not only tailed them, but also asked Kim Hosup to hack their smartwatches. Anyways, it was the result of my painstaking efforts. I found that accounting book after tailing individual after individual.

The accounting book was created by some hero who was scared of being abandoned. It contained a list of misdeeds the vice guild master asked from the hero.

“Come on... There’s no way...” Yoo Yeonha muttered with a hint of skepticism.

She opened the book without much thought. The teardrop disappeared from the corners of her eyes and she straightened her posture.

She was entirely focused and kept muttering while reading every line in the book.

“I stole that, so it can't be used as evidence in court. You know that too, right?” I said.

I felt proud and embarrassed at the same time. After all, this was probably the best gift anyone could give her.

“Well, I’m sure you’ll find a use for... Woah!”

Bam!

However, something smashed into me before I could even finish. Yoo Yeonha had flung herself towards me.

She remained in my embrace without saying anything. No, she did say something, but it was so faint and difficult to understand because of her sniffing.

“Is... Ish thish weel...?” she asked.

I replied that it certainly was, which made her cry.

She turned her head away and covered it with her sleeves. Maybe she didn’t want me to see her crying, but she was doing a bad job at it as she kept shrugging while wiping her face with her sleeves.

It looked like she was dancing...

“Stop crying. You can win against the vice guild master once you get out of here,” I said.

“Haha... Hahaha...” Yoo Yeonha brightly smiled in response.

Her smile seemed to say, ‘When did I ever cry?’

I liked the way she smiled just now.

* * *

Four hours before the incident...

I looked at the night sky and looked back down at the table I made. Yoo Yeonha was writing something on her smartwatch. It seemed that our beloved supreme team leader was drafting a press conference speech.

“I’m done!” she gleefully exclaimed like an elementary student who just finished their summer vacation homework.

Yoo Yeonha proudly smiled and triumphantly walked towards me, “Let me show this to... Kyak!”

She tripped while walking over to me. This was all because she stubbornly wore high heels even to this place.

Thud!

She ended up in my embrace after I caught her from the fall.

“Ugh... my ankle...” she groaned in pain.

She looked quite cute. Her messy look without washing her hair or changing clothes for a day made her look like a street kitten.

“Are you alright?”

“...!”

Yoo Yeonha instantly shot up after realizing what was going on.

“Ah, I have to make some edits...” she muttered and ran to the chair.

Then she glanced at me after moving three meters away.

Our eyes met and her cheeks blushed.

I bitterly smiled and opened the door to our shelter.

“Huh? Where are you going?” she asked.

“It’s time to sleep, so I’m going to craft some beds out of wood.”

“We won’t be staying for long, so why bother making a bed...?”

“Who knows, right?”

“Geez... Can you not say unlucky things like that?” Yoo Yeonha grumbled and narrowed her eyes before meekly muttering, “Also... I don’t want to sleep alone. I’ll come with you if you’re going in...”

Side Stories 90

What If Story (5)

Time passed as the sun set and the moon rose. The time we spent here turned from hours to days.

We had been stuck here for four days now according to our smartwatches. The rain stopped after a day, but it was immediately followed by snow afterwards.

I moved about the snow-white fields. I figured it was a waste of time to just sit around and do nothing, so I went out to hunt monsters in the field while Yoo Yeonha studied the accounting book I gave her.

“...You have to get out to use that,” I muttered and threw down the remains of a wild boar in front of the shelter.

Yoo Yeonha was busy typing on her hologram keyboard, but glanced at me and said, “We will get out. Also, I’m already expecting all sorts of scenarios and making preparations for them every day since we got stuck here.”

“That’s amazing, but what about food? Are you going to eat?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha looked at the wild boar I caught. The wild boar’s thick muscles looked quite tasty even before it was butchered.

She gulped and said, “Give me thirty minutes.”

I started to skin the wild boar and butchered it. I cut off a juicy chunk of its belly and grilled it on top of the campfire. Then I ground some herbs I found in the field to season the meat, cut it into a steak, and plated it.

Yoo Yeonha was already at the table licking her lips.

“Let’s eat,” I said.

“Alright,” she immediately replied.

It was snowing outside, but we didn’t mind as we sat across from each other and enjoyed our meal. I grilled the remaining meat after she slurped hers up and started eyeing mine.

Today was quite peaceful just like the blanket of snow outside.

Yoo Yeonha finished her meal and took a shower before she sat on the bed and said, “You know...”

“What?”

“...”

I paused the game I was playing on my smartwatch.

She seemed interested in the game.

“Is it fun?”

“I just play it for a bit before going to sleep. Why?”

“Well, nothing much... just that... my hair’s all tangled up, so...” she said as she brushed her fingers through her wet hair.

I scoffed in disbelief. I offered to do her hair for her three days ago, but she refused.

“You want me to brush it for you?”

“Well... only if you want to...”

Yoo Yeonha pursed her lips while feigning ignorance. I conjured a brush with stigma and she looked at it with eyes full of anticipation.

Seuk... Seuk...

I brushed her long, flowing hair. I was her personal hair stylist for around ten minutes and finally stopped after her hair dried.

“It’s time to sleep,” I said.

“...Okay, good night,” she replied with a hint of regret in her voice.

She stiffly lay down like Dracula, but it didn’t take long for her to curl up like a shrimp. It seemed that our beloved supreme team leader had a very bad sleeping habit. She slept like a newborn baby and I was worried that her back would be uncomfortable once she woke up.

I used to watch her sleep simply because she amazed me, but I noticed her hands were trembling this time and cold sweat was forming on her forehead.

“Ah... ughh... Let go...”

It looked like she was having a nightmare judging from how she kept biting her lips and moaning.

I gently held her trembling hand.

“...”

Then, her cold sweat dried up and her expression also loosened. The moonlight shone down on her.

“Huff... Huff...”

I smiled while watching her peacefully sleep. I figured that getting stuck here wasn’t really a waste of time in the end.

I would definitely find a way back, so I didn’t mind spending a bit more time with her alone.

And... the entrance appeared the next morning because of that thought.

* * *

Yoo Yeonha spotted the entrance first while brushing her teeth in the morning. She immediately called me and we hurriedly packed our belongings before heading out.

“See! I told you we would make it out!”

“Yeah, but...”

The first thing we did as soon as we got out after six days was to check our smartwatches.

“This is... amazing...”

Our smartwatches were filled with all sorts of gossip.

[Yoo Yeonha chose to elope instead of facing the mounting pressure?!]

[The team leader of Essence of the Strait eloped with her bodyguard?!]

[Was there an accident during the survey or did they really elope? Essence of the Strait filed a missing person report and is now searching.]

[The vice guild master of Essence of the Strait hopes Yoo Yeonha is safe.]

Yoo Yeonha called her father while I was busy reading the articles. I could hear him from the phone.

— Yeonha! Hey! Where have you been this entire time? Did you really elope?!

“No... what do you mean elope? I’m not dating anyone right now.”

— Are you sure?! Do you know how worried your mom is? Are you together with that mercenary right now?! The entire family is...

I bitterly smiled.

Yoo Yeonha's family was one of the most prestigious families in South Korea. Ironically, it wasn't strange to call them nobles.

Anyways, the issue was that I was just a mercenary compared to them.

— Put that mercenary on the line if he's there! Hurry!

“Ah, I don't want to. I'm going home soon, so hang up!”

— What did you say?!

Yoo Yeonha was actually breaking out in cold sweat while speaking on the phone. Meanwhile, I hopped into the SUV that was still parked. There were quite a lot of footprints around that probably belonged to journalists.

“Sigh...” Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh of resignation as she hopped into the back seat.

I switched on the SUV's ignition and asked, “So what do you plan to do now?”

“We will proceed as planned. I sent the file to my close subordinates and Falling Blossom too.”

As expected of our beloved supreme team leader, she was quite fast with her actions. She looked resolute and her tightly shut lips showed her resolve. Was she Gyebaek^[1] or something?

“I guess things are going alright,” I said and stepped on the accelerator.

“Yes, everything is turning out well thanks to you,” she replied.

Those were the last words she said as she closed her mouth again. I kept stealing glances at her through the rearview mirror, but I already knew what she wanted to say.

The SUV didn't shake even once while we descended the mountain, but that wasn't a good thing at all as the deafening silence was further amplified.

"So... I was thinking..." Yoo Yeonha said in a trembling voice.

I feigned ignorance and replied, "What?"

"Our contract... What do you think if we end it here? There's no truth to the scandal... but... I don't think we should be seen together from now on. I mean, it's going to cause harm to you as well so..."

Yoo Yeonha was Yoo Yeonha as expected. She didn't beat around the bush and went straight to the point.

I nodded in response. I wasn't surprised at all and already expected this even when we were stuck in the field. She mentioned that she was drafting various scenarios for when we managed to leave.

"Don't mind me—"

"I'll definitely reward you handsomely for the accounting book."

I was fine until she said those words. I felt somewhat offended and tightly gripped the steering wheel.

I didn't do that expecting a reward. Of course, I found all sorts of excuses to give her, but I was just doing what I wanted. There was no price tag behind my motive...

"Is that so?" I replied as calmly as possible.

It would just look like I was throwing a tantrum if I raised my voice. More importantly, the fact that she only thought to reward me rubbed me the wrong way.

However, I completely understood. I understood her because she was Yoo Yeonha. After all, repaying her debts was her life motto.

“You should be prepared to give me one of your subsidiaries,” I joked.

Yoo Yeonha laughed at my joke. She seemed to loosen up and leaned forward, “You’re already one of our shareholders, no?”

“You knew?”

“Well... I’ll reward you with ten times what you hold right now. Oh right, what do you think about setting up a premium furniture brand? I’ll support you to the fullest if you do.”

“Will you model for the advertisement?”

“Hmm... Only if I like the product.”

Yoo Yeonha placed her hands on her chin and brightly smiled.

We reached an urban area and it was amazing how we were already surrounded by reporters. I had no idea how they found out, but they rushed at us like a horde of zombies.

Yoo Yeonha put on her sunglasses when the cameras came rushing towards us.

“Thanks for your hard work.”

“Yeah, you too.”

“Don’t bother coming out. I’ll handle it myself.”

Yoo Yeonha opened the door and left the SUV. She was instantly swarmed by the cameras. A camera tried to take a picture of me through the SUV’s window, but the tint was simply too dark for them to get a good shot.

I had no idea where this bitter feeling was coming from. I could smile and all, but I only sighed for some reason.

Then, I suddenly felt embarrassed. I had no idea why and couldn’t even laugh about it. Was I a teenager going through puberty or something? Why was it so hard for me to admit it?

I slapped my cheeks as I looked at Yoo Yeonha disappearing into the sea of reporters.

* * *

[“I will definitely reveal the corruption.” Essence of the Strait, Yoo Yeonha.]

[The vice guild master of Essence of the Strait says the numerous news articles exposing his misdeeds is a cowardly and malicious political slandering campaign.]

Yoo Yeonha went on the offensive this time. It seemed that the time she spent trapped in the field had helped her.

She was known as a ruthless and emotionless person, but the six days she spent trapped in the field labeled her as a lovestruck young woman who eloped with her lover. She denied all the rumors about eloping, but it wasn't all bad as this helped to tone down her cold image.

A week passed since the incident and Yoo Yeonha was now holding a press conference.

She traced the details in the accounting book and already gathered enough evidence. She formed an airtight case against those involved. The only thing left was to expose this to the public.

“I stand here today as a whistleblower. I am prepared to dirty myself for the sake of cleaning our beloved guild...”

Yoo Yeonha stood her ground and exposed the numerous corruption and scandals within the guild in front of the barrage of camera flashes.

Bribery, blackmail, raiding of unreported dungeons, embezzlement, and dozens of other cases were exposed. However, she didn't release all of it and kept some bullets for later. She planned to strike the vice guild master hard if he ever decided to refute the allegations made against him.

However...

“What happened to the bodyguard in your scandal? I heard the bodyguard named Kim Hajin was terminated last week!”

It was ironic that the reporters were more interested in gossip rather than the truth.

Yoo Yeonha looked at the reporters who asked the question and let out a sigh, “Firstly, that was not a scandal. We were trapped in the field and he upheld his duty to protect me while we were trapped.”

“We heard you gave a lot of privilege to that bodyguard! There are reports that you lived in the same house too!”

“There are more than three hundred staff living in our mansion. He was just another one of our staff.”

The camera flashes continued.

“Secondly, we did not terminate him. His contract ran out. Our terms of contract were until the auction. I will no longer be answering questions related to this matter,” Yoo Yeonha said and went back to the main topic.

The press conference continued for quite a while after that. There was a lot to be said and asked.

Questions about Kim Hajin popped up from time to time. They wanted to know if the adjutant was helpful in the field, why she chose him as her adjutant, did the adjutant confess to her in the field...

— The press conference has concluded.

Yoo Yeonha left the press conference while reiterating the names of the reporters who asked those silly questions. She gritted her teeth in anger while vowing to exact revenge against them as she hopped into her limousine.

“Welcome, ma’am.”

That person wasn’t in the limousine today. That person always sat beside her in the backseat, but was no longer there. He was replaced by another bodyguard.

“Yes, it is a pleasure to meet you,” Yoo Yeonha replied.

The new bodyguard was a knight called Rain. She was a newly scouted hero by Essence of the Strait who was an expert in wielding the shield and sword. Not to mention, she was a hero personally trained by Yoo Yeonha’s father, Yoo Jinwoong.

“Please rest well,” Rain said.

“Yes, I will,” Yoo Yeonha replied with a smile before she looked out the window.

The moon was shining brightly as the limousine silently sped through the night.

Yoo Yeonha told herself that this was the best outcome. Truth be told, Falling Blossom had suggested keeping Kim Hajin around to improve her image. However, Yoo Yeonha didn’t want to do that. She didn’t want to be so cruel as to keep him by her side when she knew she couldn’t give him any confirmation or assurance.

Not to mention, she wasn’t prepared to face the scandal head-on just yet. There could be short-term benefits in keeping him around, but there were bound to be bigger issues later on once word got out.

She was certain that both of them would end up hurt if that happened.

“Haa...”

But why... why did she feel frustrated? She felt stuffy inside as if a huge rock was pressing down on her stomach.

Yoo Yeonha leaned against the window and calmed herself down.

'I don't know my own heart yet. I don't want to be the one waiting even if I did. I have something more precious even if I have to wait.'

'My life is filled with ambition that I sometimes question if I was born for the sole purpose of being successful.'

'I was filled with a competitive spirit and ambition ever since I was a child without even understanding what those were, and those feelings created the Yoo Yeonha of today.'

'I didn't do anything to satisfy others, not for my family, but for myself and myself alone.'

'That's why I can't abandon my ambition. Giving it up will confuse me and make me lose my path. That's why keeping him far away from me is the right choice... '

Yoo Yeonha steeled her resolve and closed her eyes. She slowly fell asleep, but suddenly saw his face.

She looked at him and realized she was probably dreaming right now.

1. A general in Ancient Korea. More info here: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gyebaek> 📖

Side Stories 91

What If Story (6)

In her Essence of the Strait office, Yoo Yeonha rested her chin on her palm and looked out the window. She looked quite picturesque, but the air around her was sharp like a blade.

“I apologize...”

A woman was kneeling in front of her and trembling in fear. It was Yi Jinah, an intermediate-high rank hero who aligned with the vice guild master's faction to get ahead in her career.

“It might sound like I'm making excuses, but I really had no idea he was doing those things...”

She was telling the truth. Yi Jinah wasn't involved in anything illegal and the only reason she sided with the vice guild master was because she loathed Yoo Yeonha for rising up the ranks as Yoo Jinwoong's daughter.

Yoo Yeonha knew what she was thinking.

“I know and that's why I was thinking of...” Yoo Yeonha tapped on her desk.

Yi Jinah's shoulders flinched at the rhythm of the tapping. She tightly shut her eyes while waiting for the next words.

“...Leaving the field we won at the auction to you.”

However, something was strange. Yi Jinah's head turned blank at those words.

She was probably mistaken, right? Or did she mishear what Yoo

Yeonha said? What did Yoo Yeonha just say?

“...Pardon me?”

“I said, I’ll leave the new field to you.”

“...?”

Yi Jinah had the ability and was worth bringing along. Besides, she could simply leave the guild and join some other foreign guild if she was punished.

More importantly, Yoo Yeonha wasn’t the foolish emotional type who would lose a talented subordinate because of personal grudges.

“P-Please leave it to me! I’ll work hard and dedicate my life to it!” Yi Jinah shot up and exclaimed while repeatedly bowing.

Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly nodded and said, “Then, shall we go out together?”

“Y-Yes, ma’am!”

Yoo Yeonha stood from her seat and Yi Jinah followed closely behind with her head down.

Both of them came out to the corridor. It was Yoo Yeonha’s way of announcing that Yi Jinah had been forgiven for her transgressions.

They went to the elevated parking lot.

“Go ahead and rest for today. You’ll be quite busy from now on,” Yoo Yeonha said.

“T-Thank you! Thank you!” Yi Jinah repeatedly bowed once again and thanked her.

Yoo Yeonha hopped into her limousine. She looked at Yi Jinah profusely bowing to her and scoffed, “Hmph!”

Yi Jinah used to ignore Yoo Yeonha in the past, but that all changed the moment she realized that who she believed to be a strong backer turned out to be a bust.

“I shall depart now.”

“Yes, please do.”

Yoo Yeonha checked her social media accounts.

Numerous people posted various messages of support and the media was having a field day with the vice guild master. It seemed like this saga was coming to an end.

“Hmm...?” Yoo Yeonha muttered when she came across a picture.

It was a picture she personally uploaded when she was walking in Paris. Ironically, she could see Kim Hajin in the corner of the picture. He was wearing sunglasses and following her from behind.

“Ah...”

Then, she realized that he was always there whenever a picture of her was taken. He was eating ice cream on the beach, sitting a few rows behind her in a fashion show, and randomly making a snowman outside her mountain villa. He was like a permanent background decoration that never left her side.

“Hehe...” Yoo Yeonha smiled.

Things turned out well for her thanks to him. She wondered if it was possible for them to help each other out from a distance even if he was no longer by her side as her bodyguard.

“We have arrived.”

She reached her mansion while she was lost in her thoughts. Yoo Yeonha walked up the stairs and reached the third floor, which used to be Kim Hajin’s accommodation.

Then, she was shocked by what she saw.

“W-What happened here...?”

The entire third floor was empty. All traces of him staying there for the past six months were wiped clean from the room.

“Who did this?!” Yoo Yeonha screamed in anger.

Her voice reverberated across the mansion and a servant hurriedly rushed to her side.

“P-Pardon me, ma’am...?”

“Why is this place tidied up? It was fine until yesterday...!”

The servant was surprised by this side of her that she never showed before, but he immediately bowed his head and replied, “H-Hajin came yesterday and personally took everything.”

“What did you say just now? He came and left?”

“Y-Yes, that is correct...”

Yoo Yeonha looked dazed for a while before she muttered, “...Is that true?”

“Yes, he mentioned that he left a gift upstairs,” the servant replied.

Yoo Yeonha rushed to the fourth floor and found a huge bed in her living room with a note on it.

[You can have it. I figured you liked this bed. I thought about making you a new one, but it's better to use something you're familiar with, right?]

[P.S. You don't need to repay me for this.]

Yoo Yeonha stood still and read the letter over and over again.

You don't need to repay me for this... That last line sounded off for some reason. An ominous thought flashed across her mind.

She immediately called Falling Blossom, "It's me. About what I said last time..."

Yoo Yeonha was planning to give many benefits to Kim Hajin within the legal boundaries, but...

— Ah, I was about to report...

Yoo Yeonha nervously gulped at the pending words. Soon, the ominous feeling she had turned into reality.

— He disappeared.

"..."

— He sold all of his stocks and even his house and just disappeared. We were quite surprised by it...

Yoo Yeonha stood up without saying anything. She was trembling like a wilting tree swaying in the wind. Whatever Falling Blossom said after that fell on deaf ears.

* * *

— Yes, I'm currently at the headquarters of Essence of the Strait.

Yi Jiyeon filmed with her advanced camera that cost tens of millions of won. The content of her vlog was Essence of the Strait.

Her video already hit three million views thanks to her army of two million subscribers.

— As you can see, there's nothing special about heroes. When we aren't mobilizing we tend to play, study, analyze dungeons... Oh! Vice guild master!

Yoo Yeonha was caught on camera. Yi Jiyoona zoomed in on her and I flinched. I was expecting her cameo after she became the vice guild master, but she appeared too suddenly.

— So, what do you think of our awesome vice guild master Yoo Yeonha? She was promoted to intermediate-high rank hero last week and placed fourth in our batch. You know, the golden batch with Kim Suho, Shin Jonghak, Rachel, Yoo Yeonha, Chae Nayun, Shen Yuan... The golden batch... It's a shame I was in that batch... I could've graduated with a single digit ranking if I was born a year earlier...

It seemed that a lot of things had happened in the past six months. The former vice guild master of Essence of the Strait lost everything and ran away. That once decorated man was reduced to a wanted fugitive.

Yoo Yeonha trained like crazy fearing that the fugitive would retaliate and that training catapulted her into a intermediate-high rank hero.

She became stronger than me in that short period.

— But she doesn't smile. Oh right, she smiled once when our guild became the top guild in the world three weeks ago... Also, there are some rumors about this. Do you guys remember the scandal?

The guild's value shot up after Yoo Yeonha took the reins. They took first place from Creator's Sacred Grace three weeks ago.

— Her romance with that bodyguard... Well, we all know it's not true. Surprisingly though, it was around the time our vice guild master started immersing herself in training. Not only that, she stopped smiling ever since then as well, so some people are saying that...

— Yi Jiyoona?

Yoo Yeonha suddenly appeared from behind Yi Jiyoona's shoulder like a ghost.

Yi Jiyoona's face turned ghastly pale as she put down her camera and Yoo Yeonha glared at her.

Then, she was bombarded with various nagging questions like, ‘Are you crazy? What are you doing right now? We’re going to raid the dungeon soon, but you’re filming a vlog? Can you please grow up?’

— Edit me out of the video.

The Youtube video ended with those words and a fierce glare from Yoo Yeonha.

“Pfft...!”

She hadn’t changed at all.

I had a good laugh and grabbed my bow. Then I pulled the bowstring and shot an arrow. The arrow flew ten kilometers and struck a monster.

“You’re quite good without even using mana.”

The lady beside me, Jin Seyeon, was thoroughly impressed by my archery.

I simply shrugged and replied, “I still have a long way to go compared to you.”

I was currently in the Amazon in South America on top of a tropical tree and doing something like a competition with Jin Seyeon.

“Long way to go? I hate to admit this, but you’re much better than me if we’re only talking about archery,” Jin Seyeon said as she aimed her bow.

My meeting with this cool and humble archer was a complete coincidence. No, it was more like luck to be honest.

I came to the Amazon hoping to become stronger and it turned out that Jin Seyeon was here for charity work too. We started talking to each other before we found common ground in archery, which helped us become closer.

“Rather than that... Shall we go at it again?” I asked.

“Yes, that sounds good to me. I should be more proactive in our bet this time,” Jin Seyeon put on a serious face and pulled her bowstring.

Taaang!

I watched in amazement as her arrow shot forward like a cannonball. I picked up my bow and pulled the bowstring to erase the lingering face of my beloved supreme team leader from my head.

I shot my arrow towards Jin Seyeon’s arrow.

* * *

Taaaang!

The sound of a gunshot roared.

“...!”

Yoo Yeonha was shaken awake by the loud sound.

“That was scary...”

It was a dream, a nightmare. Kim Hajin was in her dream. He was always her savior even in her dreams.

However, he wasn’t there when she woke up. Everything disappeared like a mirage.

“Haa...” she let out a sigh and arranged her disheveled hair.

A year had already passed since then. She always thought that she could meet him any time she wanted, but that wasn’t the case anymore. So much time had passed that her memories with him were nothing more than a fleeting dream now.

Knock! Knock!

Someone knocked on her door.

“Come in,” Yoo Yeonha said.

The door opened and an old friend walked in.

Yoo Yeonha smiled after seeing her friend.

“Oh, you’re already Vice Guild Master Yoo Yeonha.”

Both a little girl and a lion coexisted within the body of Chae Nayun. She took a look around the room before snickering.

“Yeah, Nayun. Are you ready?”

“Yeah, I’m ready.”

Chae Nayun spent her time training on Mt. Baekdu as soon as she graduated. She finally descended from the mountain after becoming a powerful swordsman.

Chae Nayun sat down and smiled brightly.

“Then, Nayun. You will have to take care of...”

“Oh right, I met him. Kim Hajin.”

“...?”

Yoo Yeonha doubted her ears for a moment.

“Huh?”

“Kim Hajin. You don’t know him? You know that bastard who kept pestering me to use a sword instead? Don’t tell me you already forgot about him?”

Chae Nayun found it odd that Yoo Yeonha was acting strangely all of a sudden.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly realized that Chae Nayun wasn't aware of the scandal since she was up in the mountains all that time.

She bitterly smiled and replied, "Yeah, I know him... Where did you meet him?"

"I bumped into him at the casino. Hey, you know, he was sucking the place dry!"

"What did you do after you met?"

"I had a few drinks with him."

"..."

Yoo Yeonha suddenly felt something heavy and painful in her stomach. She had to hold her breath and try her best not to show it.

"Had a few drinks...?"

"Yeah, but he was chased out right after having a drink. He earned too much, so they didn't seem to want him there. Hey, he was racking up billions per game, you know? Damn it... I lost three billion after trying to imitate him..."

"I see..." Yoo Yeonha replied with a smile.

Then, she took out an envelope from her drawer.

Chae Nayun frowned after seeing that Yoo Yeonha's hand was trembling.

"Did you develop a tremor?"

"Huh? No, what are you talking about? Anyways, take a look at this. This is your mission."

“How important is the mission that you’re trembling?” Chae Nayun grumbled while taking the envelope.

“The specifics are all written there...”

It was then.

Bzzt! Bzzt!

Chae Nayun’s smartwatch vibrated.

Yoo Yeonha’s eyes instinctively went to the smartwatch.

Chae Nayun checked her smartwatch before smirking and said, “Then, I’m going first. My dad and brother are waiting outside.”

“Who’s that?” Yoo Yeonha grabbed her wrist and asked.

“Huh? Who what?” Chae Nayun tilted her head in confusion.

“That,” Yoo Yeonha pointed at the watch and continued with a hint of emotion in her voice, “Who was that message from? Was that from your father?”

“No?”

“...Then who was it?” Yoo Yeonha bit her lips and asked.

Chae Nayun flashed a mischievous smile and replied, “Hehe, I’m not telling you.”

She immediately left the office while snickering.

‘H-How dare that lowly member do that to the vice guild master!’

Yoo Yeonha didn’t even have the energy to rage. She just stood still like a dazed person and muttered, “Ah...”

This went on for around two minutes before she suddenly pressed her temples and muttered, “I feel dizzy...”

She thought of Chae Nayun’s smartwatch while pressing on her temples. She noticed that Chae Nayun’s expression changed the moment she saw her smartwatch.

‘Was it a message? It was a message, right? Then who was it from? Who sent it? Don’t tell me... Was it that person? Did they do more than have a few drinks...?’

“Oh, right...” Yoo Yeonha suddenly remembered a shocking old memory.

The person he liked during his Cube days was none other than Chae Nayun. He kept pestering her to use a sword instead of a bow, which turned out to be significant advice for her.

The person who gave that advice and confessed that he had been watching Chae Nayun for the longest time... was none other than Kim Hajin.

He liked Chae Nayun...

“No...”

Yoo Yeonha felt dizzy again as her surroundings spun, but she shook her head and came back to her senses.

“This isn’t the time for me to be like this...”

She immediately booted up her desktop PC and clicked on her task for the day.

[Dungeon Raid Report – For Government Report]

She still had a lot of work to do.

But what if she didn’t say that to him back then? What if she asked him to stay by her side?

‘If I did... would he be by my side right now...?’

She didn’t have the luxury for such thoughts. It was none of her business if he dated someone or was trying to win his old love, Chae Nayun’s heart. That was really none of her business.

Yoo Yeonha bit her lips and focused on the document.

The gut-wrenching thoughts only lasted for a minute as she became immersed in her work.

That day, the vice guild master made simple typos in her report, which was something she never did in her life. To be exact, there were thirty-nine typos in the file.

Side Stories 92

What If Story (7)

“The Amazon is a competitive ruin.”

Essence of the Strait was busy meeting while it was heavily snowing outside. Their main focus this time was none other than the Amazon. They were aiming to dig up the artifacts buried deep within its jungles.

“Quite a lot of guilds sent their scouts to survey the Amazon, but most of them didn’t take any actions after that.”

Some guilds showed interest in the Amazon, but it was a place that required great effort, sacrifice, and time. It wasn’t guaranteed that they would find any treasures there, so it was an inefficient use of their time.

“We are certain that it will be an extremely inefficient raid, but it’s worth a shot now thanks to the advancement of modern technology and...”

“Rather than that... our guild possesses the exact gift needed for that place,” Yoo Yeonha continued the guild analyst’s words.

The analyst looked at her and nodded in agreement, “Yes, that is correct. Hero Yi Jiyeon possesses the ability to neutralize the disease in the Amazon. Hero Zellin also possesses the ability to control temperature. Both of them will play a huge part in the Amazon raid.”

The Amazon raid team formed by Essence of the Strait was composed of the golden batch from Cube such as Yoo Yeonha, Yi Jiyeon, Chae Nayun, and other cadets.

The meeting continued after that as they discussed support personnel, division of the loot, analysis of government reports, and other essential information before they concluded.

“Alright, go back and rest for now. We’ll conclude the meeting here,” Yoo Yeonha said.

She left the meeting room and headed straight for her office. Then she switched on her smartwatch as soon as she sat in her chair.

[Chae Nayun★]

The first thing she did was check Chae Nayun’s official social media account. The account had been inactive for two years, but it recently came back two weeks ago.

“Hmm...” she scanned through the posts without much thought.

There wasn’t much on her account. She posted a few pictures she took with her brother today, a picture of her pet dog, and a picture with Rachel.

“It’s probably not...” Yoo Yeonha muttered.

She was trying to find any clues to what had been bothering her. No, she was curious this entire time about the relationship between Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin. However, that didn’t matter anymore as there didn’t seem to be anything between them.

She wouldn’t have cared if there was something between them. She was just curious in general, so she checked... A person had to be curious to succeed... was the self-justification she came up with.

“...”

She carefully scoured the social media pages and flinched in surprise when the smartwatch on her wrist vibrated.

Bzzt!

“Ah... I thought I liked something by accident...” she grumbled.

She calmed herself down and looked at the screen. It was from one of her organizations, [Falling Blossom].

“What is it?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

— We heard some interesting rumors.

“Interesting rumors?”

— Yes, it isn’t that important, but it’s something related to your previous bodyguard.

Yoo Yeonha’s shoulders flinched at those words, but she pretended to be calm and replied, “Is that so? I completely forgot about him.”

— Then, I shall not report the matter.

“No, go on.”

— Yes, he was spotted in the Amazon. There is a rumor that he’s hanging around Jin Seyeon these days.

“...Jin Seyeon?”

Jin Seyeon was a world-renowned archer and a top-tier hero who reached the pinnacle with the bow. Not only that, but she was also revered for her flawless beauty.

“What are they doing together?” she asked as nonchalantly as possible.

— We aren’t sure about that, but there are rumors that Jin Seyeon accepted him as her disciple. Other guilds are keeping a close eye on him right now.

Yoo Yeonha immediately checked Jin Seyeon’s social media account after hearing the report. The latest post was three months ago with no updates after that.

“Alright, you did well... Continue observing them.”

— Thank you.

The call ended and she buried herself in her chair. She stared at the ceiling for a while before reclining in the chair.

Creak!

Her upper body was now lying flat in the chair.

“Ah... Why do I feel so annoyed...?” Yoo Yeonha grumbled.

* * *

A base camp for heroes and mercenaries existed in the South American Amazon. Actually, it was more like an inn and there were at least thirty customers a day in this place called [Amazon's Rest].

“They say Essence of the Strait is coming to the Amazon, Hajin,” Jin Seyeon said while watching the news.

I was watching TV with her.

“Yeah, it seems so.”

I had no idea how we were watching TV in the middle of the dense tropical forest, but that wasn't the most surprising part as we were watching Korean channels right now while eating a pack of potato chips.

— Essence of the Strait is expected to raid the Amazon with the help of the latest mana-tech technologies from Essential Dynamics.

“It's risky to advertise it like that. I know it's essential to do it for the guild's image, but...” Jin Seyeon looked concerned.

I nodded in agreement and said, “...There are a lot of djinns lurking in the Amazon.”

I was surprised at first. There were a lot of tribes residing in these forests. Most of them were actually djinns. I suppose they had no choice but to become djinns as the environment they lived in was quite hostile and rough.

“But aren’t you going to make a comeback?” I asked out of curiosity.

She tapped her chin with a finger before shaking her head, “I’m not sure. I don’t have any plans right now. Besides, the world is fine without me anyways. I’d rather help those who really need my help for now.”

She came to the Amazon to make money and used that money to do more charitable work.

Jin Seyeon smiled and asked, “What about you, Hajin?”

“Hmm... I’m not sure as well,” I replied and took a sip of my tea.

The red tea tasted excellent. Oh, and a cup of this tea was worth fifty thousand won.

“Why not? You’d win against me with just archery. I’m sure there will be a lot of guilds willing to take you.”

“...”

I simply smiled in response.

I wanted to go back to Seoul one day... After all, the person I liked was there. I missed her every night, but I didn’t really miss her once the sun came up. I couldn’t sleep at night because I wanted to see her, but then I didn’t really feel like going back once morning came.

I guess they called this bipolar disorder.

“Oh right, I was quite curious, but...” Jin Seyeon looked at me straight in the eyes and asked, “Was the scandal between you and Yoo Yeonha real?”

I could feel curiosity oozing out from her eyes and voice.

I smiled and shrugged, “Well, technically there wasn’t anything, but...”

I suddenly recalled the memories from that event a year ago when we were in the car together.

“If I think about it...”

There was a motive behind Yoo Yeonha’s words at that time and I left on my own accord after not being able to accept her motive.

That was why...

“I guess I was dumped?”

Jin Seyeon’s expression changed as if she was watching a drama...

* * *

It was now February and the rivers were frozen solid.

Essence of the Strait arrived at the portal station in Houston, USA to raid the Amazon.

— Yoo Yeonha! Yoo Yeonha!

— Please give me your autograph!

— It’s Chae Nayun!

They were greeted by a huge crowd as they moved to the hangar. The military plane that would transport them to the Amazon was already waiting in the hangar.

It was a modified ES-3 specially designed to deal with flying monsters. One of these would cost one trillion won and it was the masterpiece of Essential Dynamics.

“Let’s go,” Yoo Yeonha said.

The guild members entered the ES-3 and the plane immediately departed after everyone got on.

“Wow... this is amazing. Wow... We’re already this high up?” Yi Jiyeon exclaimed while filming her vlog.

On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha kept glancing beside her.

Chae Nayun reclined her chair and was fast asleep with her mouth wide open. She mentioned that she had dueled or something last night and that she was tired.

Bzzt!

Chae Nayun’s smartwatch vibrated, but she didn’t show any signs of waking up.

“Lala~ Lalala~ Lala...” Yoo Yeonha hummed a tune while discreetly extending her hand towards Chae Nayun’s wrist.

[Please bring your eyes closer or enter your passcode.]

However, she was blocked by the smartwatch’s security system. Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh.

Only two or three hours passed and the ES-3 was already flying over the heart of the Amazon.

The plane landed and Yoo Yeonha gave the command, “Everyone, move out!”

The guild members hopped off the plane at her command.

Their first order of matter was to scout for a suitable spot to erect a base camp. They searched for about ten minutes before they found a flat land surrounded by trees and built their base camp there.

They used a new technology called mana-tech fortress. It was a small twenty-five square meters structure when seen from the outside, but the interior was big enough for fifteen adults to comfortably stay.

Yoo Yeonha divided the guild members into teams, "...I will take care of the most dangerous eastern path. Zellin, Yi Jinah, and Hazuki can handle the northeast path. Yi Jiyeon and Rain will stay behind in the base camp as support or reinforcements."

The first batch sent by Essence of the Strait consisted of seven heroes. Establishing a foothold was imperative when it came to raiding these kinds of dangerous places, so they didn't have the luxury to rest.

"Move out!" Yoo Yeonha gave the command once again.

She trudged through the eastern path to the ruins with Chae Nayun. They were confronted by a bunch of monkey monsters known as darkies as soon as they stepped on the path.

"Kyaruk! Kireuk!"

The darkies were one of the more annoying monsters to deal with in the Amazon because of their long poisonous nails, but they were easy prey for Yoo Yeonha and Chae Nayun who were fully armed with artifacts.

"Wow, there are quite a lot of monsters here. It's crazy," Chae Nayun said while swinging the blood off her blade.

There were at least hundreds of monsters hiding behind the foliage and monitoring them.

"Yeah," Yoo Yeonha nodded and smacked her whip into the ground.

Bzzzaaaat!

An electric shockwave appeared on the ground and spread throughout the area through the humidity.

Bzzt! Bzzt! Bzzt! Bzzt!

The leaves were burnt to a crisp and the area reeked of burning flesh. Almost half of the monsters around them died after Yoo Yeonha used her ability, Lightning Field of Destruction.

“Wow~ What was that just now, Yeonha? That was one hell of an AoE attack. When did you learn that? Have you thought of a name yet?”

“Name...?”

“Yeah! Hey... don’t tell me... you haven’t yet? Ah, then I’ll make one for you. Hmm... What do you think of... Ah! Electric Kablam! What do you think?”

Yoo Yeonha bitterly smiled and shook her head, “Forget about its name. Hey, Nayun...”

“Yeah, what?”

Yoo Yeonha continued walking to ask the question as naturally as possible.

“Are you seeing anyone these days?”

“Huh?”

Then, Chae Nayun frowned and grumbled, “We came all the way here and you’re talking about dating...?”

“Hmm? Ah, no. Just to ease the tension, you know. We talked about these kinds of things quite often back in Cube, right? We’re only in our mid-twenties, but I felt we were living like a bunch of oldies.”

Chae Nayun smirked after Yoo Yeonha gave all sorts of excuses.

“Well, I guess you’re right. I wasted a lot of time on Mount Baekdu. But well, there’s really no one right now. I haven’t met anyone who piqued my interest.”

“...Really?”

“Yeah, but you’re asking because of Kim Hajin, right?”

Yoo Yeonha froze on her spot at those words.

‘How did this klutz figure that out? Don’t tell me... Did she already talk about that with Kim Hajin?!’ Yoo Yeonha panicked inside, but licked her dry lips and replied, “Kim Hajin... Who was that again...?”

Chae Nayun held her laughter back and looked at Yoo Yeonha with her cheeks inflated like a frog.

“What are you doing?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“...Pfft!”

“Hey, stop that.”

“...Pfft...!”

“I said stop it.”

They bickered for a bit until Yoo Yeonha jumped on Chae Nayun to deflate her cheeks. Chae Nayun turned around to make a run for it when she suddenly spotted something.

“Hey, Yeonha. What’s that...?” she asked while pointing into the distance.

There was smoke rising from their base camp. It was a signal fire requesting for help.

“Let’s go!”

Both of them ran as fast as they could. They used their mana to run faster and arrived at the base camp in no time.

What greeted them was a shocking sight.

“What the hell...?”

The base camp was surrounded by hundreds, no, thousands of monsters. It wasn't only surrounded by land, but it was surrounded by air as well. Strangely enough, there was a monster resembling a pterosaur hovering above the base camp and a man with tattoos all over his body wielding a spear was riding it.

"Vice guild master! It looks like djinns!" Rain shouted while valiantly defending the base camp with her sword.

Chae Nayun immediately infused mana into her blade and Yoo Yeonha tightly gripped her whip.

However, Yoo Yeonha wasn't confident. The combined powers of thousands of monsters and the djinns weren't something to look down on.

But where the hell did they come from...?

"Yeonha, let's fight," Chae Nayun said.

"No, we rescue our guild members and retreat."

"I don't think that's possible right now...?"

Alligators, monkeys, snakes, mosquitoes, and a bunch of dinosaur-like monsters living in the Amazon were gathered here.

Yoo Yeonha gripped her whip and Chae Nayun swung her sword.

Krrzzaaah!

The electric current burned the insect monsters to a crisp while the gigantic blade cut down the alligators and monkeys.

It was then that a spear filled with demonic mana came flying down from the sky.

Yoo Yeonha rolled on the ground and avoided it, but the spear exploded when it made contact with the ground and swept the whole area with a powerful explosion.

The area was covered in dense fog and crackling fire.

Yoo Yeonha grimaced, but Chae Nayun only snickered.

“These guys aren’t easy. It’s going to be fun.”

“What fun are you talking about?”

“Relax. Take a look at that,” Chae Nayun said as she pointed at the sky.

The sky was covered with flying monsters and djinns mounted on them.

However, what happened next was...

A silent ray of light pierced through the pterosaur and the djinn riding on top of it.

Yoo Yeonha’s eyes shot wide open at the destructive power of that light. She immediately recalled someone and her heart started to race as she thought of that person.

Side Stories 93

What If Story (8)

The battle was intense. Arrows flew from a distance and struck down the djinns, Chae Nayun swung her sword and dominated the ground, and Yoo Yeonha sent out her electric currents to fry the monsters hiding behind the foliage.

Yi Jiyeon and Rain broke through the encirclement and joined the two of them.

“Who’s shooting these arrows, vice guild master?” Yi Jiyeon asked with her back against Rain.

“I have no idea,” Yoo Yeonha replied.

Mana arrows were raining down from the sky. The number of arrows alone seemed like they were coming from a huge army.

In the end, the djinns seemed to have realized that they were at a disadvantage and retreated, but the numerous monsters remained and attacked the guild members.

“Hap!”

The battle didn’t last long after that. It was concluded in less than ten minutes thanks to the archer’s support fire coupled with Chae Nayun and Yoo Yeonha’s specialty when it came to facing numerous enemies.

“Hey, are you alright, Yeonha?”

“Yeah, I used up quite a bit of mana, but I’m alright...”

They were on the ground resting when they suddenly noticed someone’s presence from behind the bush.

Everyone looked towards the rustling bush. Yoo Yeonha, especially, gulped in nervousness as she wondered who would pop out from behind the bush... if it was that person.

Then, the person finally appeared. However, it was Jin Seyeon.

“Huh?! It’s the Divine Archer!”

“What?! Wow!”

Yi Jiyeon, Rain, and even Chae Nayun rushed up to her.

“...Huh?”

On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha continued looking over Jin Seyeon’s shoulders, but nobody came out after that no matter how much she looked.

Jin Seyeon approached and greeted her, “It’s nice to meet you, Vice Guild Master Yoo Yeonha.”

“...Ah, yes. It’s nice to meet you too,” Yoo Yeonha replied while shaking her hand, but her eyes were wandering all over the place.

Jin Seyeon smiled after seeing her and asked, “Are you perhaps looking for someone?”

“No... I’m not... I was just...”

At that moment, the ground suddenly crumbled.

Boooooom!

The ground they were standing on caved in and darkness swallowed them before they could react.

Thud!

They were dropping underground, but something broke their fall. It felt like a rubber-like material was suspending them in mid-air.

It took Yoo Yeonha a moment to realize the situation they were in.

“W-What’s going on?”

She looked around, but all she could see was darkness.

“Is everyone alright?”

“Y-Yeah, I’m alright. That scared me. Why the hell did the ground cave in all of a sudden?” Chae Nayun grumbled.

After that, the other guild members made it known that they were alright.

“Are you alright—?!” Jin Seyeon asked from the surface.

As expected, she seemed to have dodged the moment the ground caved in.

“Yes, but...” Yoo Yeonha replied when she was suddenly interrupted by a loud sound.

Dudududu...!

A sudden sucking force appeared and the Essence of the Strait members were pulled up by something.

Yoo Yeonha had no idea what was pulling them up. First, she looked up to identify what was making that loud noise.

It was coming from the propeller blades of a helicopter.

“Why is a helicopter here...?” she questioned.

However, her question was soon shattered into a million other questions after she got into the helicopter.

“Are you alright?”

A calming voice asked her while pulling her up. She looked up and saw a familiar face smiling at her.

His arm was wrapped around her waist and connected to aether.

* * *

“Wow... Where are we?”

The Essence of the Strait members arrived somewhere in the Amazon on Kim Hajin’s helicopter after losing their fortress.

Yi Jiyoona was the first one to exclaim in awe after arriving.

The entire area was filled with various wooden sculptures and furniture such as beds and sofas. A pristine lake could also be seen behind the sculptures. The place looked like the Amazon version of Disney Land.

“I was just killing time and trying to increase my proficiency and ended up making all of these,” Kim Hajin answered.

“Proficiency?” Yi Jiyoona tilted her head in confusion.

Kim Hajin simply smiled in response.

He created this place to increase the level of his [Dexterity] gift. The place turned into this without him realizing it.

“Anyways, you have to be careful in the Amazon. There are a lot of djinns here and countless traps spread across it.”

“The ground caving in earlier was a trap as well?”

“That was probably magic. The djinns here have quite a few tricks up their sleeves.”

“Ah...”

Yoo Yeonha stole glances at Kim Hajin and Yi Jiyeon chatting. She practiced again and again under her breath on how to greet him.

‘How are you? How have you been? Why did you suddenly disappear?’

She had a lot of things she wanted to say, but couldn’t muster the courage to approach him first.

“Hey, aren’t you going?” Chae Nayun nudged and asked her.

Yoo Yeonha feigned ignorance and shrugged, “Go where? I’m a bit tired, so I’m going to go rest.”

“Really? Oh, well suit yourself,” Chae Nayun replied with a smirk and walked towards Kim Hajin.

Yoo Yeonha’s eyes shot wide open as she stared at Chae Nayun walking to him.

“Hey, Kim Hajin! Long time no see!”

“What long time? We just met last time, no?”

“Yeah, that’s why it’s been a long time. Hey, wanna see the swordsmanship I mastered? No, do you want to duel instead?”

“Not really...”

“Keke! Are you scared?”

“Yes.”

Chae Nayun happily chatted with Kim Hajin and Yoo Yeonha felt herself becoming smaller the more they smiled and laughed.

‘I’m not usually like this... I’m quite confident and outgoing, but... why is it only with him that I... ’

“Hey, Yoo Yeonha.”

It was then that Kim Hajin called out to her.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and doubted her ears for a second, but Kim Hajin called out to her again.

“Can’t you hear me?”

She feigned ignorance and nonchalantly looked at him.

He smiled and asked, “If you’re looking for a ruin, then there’s one I found nearby. Do you want to go there?”

* * *

The next day, Yoo Yeonha arrived at a cave with the Essence of the Strait members.

The ruin entrance was decorated with statues and vegetation. The cave entrance itself resembled a snake opening its mouth, which gave it quite an eerie vibe.

“Indeed, it is a ruin,” Yi Jinah said as she grouped up with the main forces.

“Yes,” Yoo Yeonha nodded in response.

Essence of the Strait easily found the ruin in the Amazon thanks to the map that Kim Hajin drew.

“Wow... That Kim Hajin really is something. His map is super accurate. Have you ever thought of scouting him to our guild, vice guild master?” Yi Jiyeon asked.

Yoo Yeonha ignored her. She knew that Yi Jiyeon was aware of that incident and was probably doing this on purpose.

“Shall we go in?” Yi Jinah asked.

Yi Jiyeon replied with a hint of worry in her voice, “Isn’t it better if we go together...?”

“Go together with who?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

“Huh? Who else? I’m talking about Kim Hajin and the Divine Archer.”

“Are they our guild members?”

“No, but...”

“We will be burdening them far too much if we keep asking for help. Don’t you know that, Ms. Yi Jiyeon? I asked you a question. What’s wrong with you?”

“...I apologize,” Yi Jiyeon muttered with her head down.

“Hmph!” Yoo Yeonha scoffed and gripped her whip. Chae Nayun smirked after seeing her reaction.

“Get ready, everyone. We’re going in.”

* * *

Essence of the Strait successfully raided the ruin. They tried their best not to damage the ruin while excavating the artifacts hidden within it.

They managed to excavate hundreds of artifacts. That was an amazing result even though there were only a handful of ancient artifacts among them.

The results they gained were good enough to put an end to their first excursion.

“...”

However, the vice guild master wasn’t happy about the results. She sat on the ground and watched the flickering campfire.

The people around her were in a festive mood.

“I was really scared to death when that mole monster popped out from the ground!”

“Those are the easier ones to deal with. We’re fortunate there weren’t any riddles. I hate those the most. By the way, it seems that you grew stronger, Jiyeon?”

“Divine Archer! My name is Hazuki. There’s something I wanted to ask you...”

The smell of grilled meat, the scent of alcohol, and lively chattering filled the air. On the other hand, Yoo Yeonha was in a dilemma.

What was she supposed to do now?

“Haa...” she let out a sigh and made her decision.

She stood up and walked over to Kim Hajin. He was sitting on a chair and reading a book.

He lowered the book when a shadow loomed over him and looked up at her.

Her heart started beating wildly after meeting his eyes.

“How have you been...?” Yoo Yeonha asked as nonchalantly as possible.

It was a question that was long overdue.

Kim Hajin smiled and replied, “I’m good. What about you? You seemed to be doing well.”

“Yeah...”

“Come, sit here,” he pointed at a wooden chair beside him.

She sat without much thought, but the chair was extremely comfortable once she sat on it.

'Is this what they call true comfort?'

Yoo Yeonha rubbed her butt on the chair.

"Do you like the bed?" Kim Hajin asked.

"...!"

Yoo Yeonha immediately looked around her surroundings. She was scared that someone might have overheard what he said.

Kim Hajin bitterly smiled at the fact that she was still the same.

"Yeah, I like it..." she replied under her breath.

Kim Hajin nodded before taking a sip of wine as Yoo Yeonha simply stared at him.

"Do you want some?" he asked and offered her a glass.

She took the glass and drank it.

"Ah... That's strong..."

"A hero can't get drunk if it's not strong."

"Yeah, I guess... Hey, you know..." Yoo Yeonha said while looking at Chae Nayun in the distance.

She was busy slicing up a steak. It seemed that she liked the steak as she stuffed her mouth until both of her cheeks were puffed like a squirrel.

"Why did you suddenly disappear without a word that time...?" Yoo Yeonha asked.

Kim Hajin didn't reply to her question. Instead, he just continued staring into her eyes.

Then, he suddenly changed the topic, "Hey, doesn't this remind you of the good old days?"

"Good old days...?" Yoo Yeonha frowned in response.

"Yeah, that time we first met after graduating from Cube."

"..."

"You looked like a loser back then."

"What did you just say...?" Yoo Yeonha's eyebrows became sharp at those words.

'Oh my god, me? A loser? Nobody's ever said something like that to me! No, I wouldn't have let them live another day if they dared say that to me!'

"You had no friends and you worked all the time. It was really bad that time. I suspected there was something wrong with your personality or something," Kim Hajin said while snickering.

Yoo Yeonha could only sigh in disbelief at his words.

"Are you kidding me? I have a lot of friends," she retorted.

"You think of them as your subordinates, not your friends."

"No... I have friends too..."

"You were a loner, so you kept clinging to me. You kept getting mad if I disappeared."

"I don't remember anything like that."

Kim Hajin brightly smiled.

Then, Yoo Yeonha suddenly thought of something after seeing him smile, 'I... I missed this person... '

"You were cute back then."

"..."

Her heart skipped a beat at those words. That made her involuntarily hold onto the hem of her clothes.

Kim Hajin didn't miss that.

Both of them didn't say much after that.

"Hey, Kim Hajin."

An annoying voice suddenly destroyed the melancholic, yet sweet atmosphere.

Yoo Yeonha glared at where the voice came from. It was Chae Nayun.

"What?" Kim Hajin responded.

"Come here. There's something strange about this."

"What is it?"

Kim Hajin stood up and was about to go to Chae Nayun, but Yoo Yeonha grabbed the hem of his shirt.

"...Hmm?"

Kim Hajin tilted his head in confusion, but Yoo Yeonha didn't say anything as she stared into the campfire. However, she soon let go.

She didn't have the courage to want something more than this, not now.

“It’s nothing. Hurry up and go. Nayun is calling you.”

“Alright.”

Kim Hajin went to Chae Nayun.

Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh after seeing them disappear into the forest.

“Should I just go back to Korea...?” she muttered under her breath as she suddenly felt depressed.

‘Why am I such a frustrating person? No, I’m not. Who else is as smart as me? It’s all because of him. Yes, I become strange whenever he’s around me. I can’t stand how I act whenever I’m around him... ’

But that was strange... It was really strange...

‘Am I being like this because I haven’t seen him for a long time? Or... ’

Yoo Yeonha looked at Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin again.

Chae Nayun was holding a sealed artifact and saying something to him. He explained how she could unseal it.

It was then. Chae Nayun glanced at Yoo Yeonha and their eyes met.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and tried to look elsewhere, but she caught Chae Nayun flashing a smirk before looking away. It was a mischievous smile that seemed to openly taunt her.

“Why that little...”

Yoo Yeonha lost it for ten seconds. She realized later that she spent those ten seconds coming up with a plan on how to get Chae Nayun away from him.

Side Stories 94

What If Story (9)

Essence of the Strait sped up their raiding in the Amazon. They were able to progress much faster thanks to their extremely capable pathfinder.

Their pathfinder knew the location, information, inhabiting monsters, etc. of Amazon's dungeon down to the tee. Essence of the Strait was able to raid a lot of dungeons by following his information.

They busily went from dungeon to dungeon without much rest until it was finally time for them to go back.

Yoo Yeonha was fishing on the riverbed when a voice suddenly surprised her.

"I heard it's time for you to go back next week."

It was Jin Seyeon.

"...Yes, our work is coming to an end," Yoo Yeonha replied.

The maximum time she had for this excursion was three weeks. The second team would come and switch places with her soon. Of course, they didn't need to send in the second team judging from the success of Yoo Yeonha's team. It would take them at least six months to dispose of the immense artifacts they gathered.

"I see..." Jin Seyeon nodded before she threw a harpoon into the water.

A fish was skewered by the harpoon.

"..."

Yoo Yeonha pouted and looked at her fishing line floating in the water. She was certain a fish was about to take the bait if not for the disturbance...

Jin Seyeon suddenly asked, "Aren't you talking to Hajin these days?"

Yoo Yeonha frowned and asked in response, "Why are you asking about that?"

"Hmm... I'm just curious."

"Why would a top hero like you be curious about something like that?"

Jin Seyeon brightly smiled and replied, "I wonder myself. Maybe I'm getting old."

Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh and changed the subject, "Oh, right... I prepared an artifact to give to you. Would you like to see it? It seems like a very valuable artifact for an archer. Also, please tell me if you need anything else..."

Jin Seyeon was a tremendous help in this Amazon raid. She personally went with them to a few ruins, so Yoo Yeonha felt that it was only natural to give her something in return.

"..."

However, Jin Seyeon looked at her without saying anything. Then she smiled brightly after seemingly thinking of something.

"Ah, now I get it."

Yoo Yeonha tilted her head in confusion and asked, "Get what...?"

Jin Seyeon's face became quite serious as she said, "Why Hajin left you. I get it now."

"What did you just say?" Yoo Yeonha retorted with a hint of anger in her voice.

She rarely displayed her emotions before top heroes, but she failed to suppress it this time. She was more in disbelief than angry after hearing those words.

“Excuse me, what do you mean by that?”

* * *

It was late at night.

Yoo Yeonha sat by the lakeside and thought of what Jin Seyeon told her.

“Not everyone in this world thinks like you, vice guild master. Favor, that’s a good word, but don’t think that everyone is after that simply because most people are after it. I did this for you, so you do this for me has the tendency to diminish a person’s sincerity into a trade.”

Jin Seyeon put it as gently as she could, but was indeed lecturing her.

“The same goes for me and Hajin. We wanted to help you without expecting anything in return. We wanted to help and not make a trade.”

Jin Seyeon extended something to her.

“What is this...?” Yoo Yeonha asked at the time.

It was a brightly shining jewel.

Jin Seyeon replied, “It’s called the Jewel of Dream. It’s a treasure I obtained in the Amazon. It’ll allow you to dream of an important memory. Why don’t you try using it? It was a big help to me, so I hope it’ll help you too, vice guild master...”

Yoo Yeonha came back to her senses and took out the jewel that was brightly shining just like the lake.

“What are you doing here?”

Someone suddenly asked from behind, but Yoo Yeonha already sensed the presence and wasn't surprised.

She turned around and said, “Hey.”

“What?”

“Come here...”

Kim Hajin braved through the thistle and sat beside her.

“What are you doing? And why are you asking me to come like a dog?”

“Look at this... It's called the Jewel of Dream... Jin Seyeon gave it to me,” Yoo Yeonha said as she showed off the jewel.

“So...?” Kim Hajin asked in response.

“So I was thinking... Do you want to have a dream together...?” Yoo Yeonha asked with a hint of embarrassment in her voice.

She instantly regretted it after saying those words. What the hell did she mean by, ‘Do you want to have a dream together?’ How stupid did that sound?

“Hmm? Ah, you can't use that with someone else,” Kim Hajin replied as he shot down the offer.

Yoo Yeonha's eyes narrowed at his response and asked, “How do you know what this is?”

“Ah, I gave that to Jin Seyeon. Just use it alone. I'll stay beside you while you're using it.”

Those last words he said made her melt inside.

“...You don’t really have to.”

“Anyways, do you know how to use it?”

“Of course, I just have to do this...”

She hid her blushing face and gripped the jewel. Then, she infused her mana into it. Her vision slowly started getting hazy as she descended into a dream.

It felt as if her body was floating.

She suddenly shot her eyes open and found herself in a limousine.

‘I think this was three or four years ago...’ She couldn’t exactly remember the date, but she was sure this was when she went on a business trip to China.

She was currently on her way to Shanghai from Beijing and was leisurely looking at her smartwatch.

Dudududu...

The ground started shaking and Yoo Yeonha glanced out the window. It didn’t really disturb her though.

It was then that a dark-reddish tornado appeared and the limousine exploded.

Kaboom!

Her hair was burnt by the flames and her eardrums popped. She sustained burns even though she covered herself with mana and was violently thrown out of the car.

She was down on the ground and could feel herself covered in blood, bone shrapnel, and brain particles. It was what remained of her driver and bodyguard in the limousine.

She couldn't think straight after that. She just sat on the ground dazed as the entire world grew further and further away from her.

"Kyaaaaah!"

"Kyaaaaahk!"

The screaming all around woke her up.

The storm of evil mana was mercilessly slaughtering the civilians. She was forced to watch it unfold right in front of her eyes.

Blood, bones, and organs dyed the streets with rivers of blood.

Yoo Yeonha tried to move, but her body was frozen stiff and the impact from a while ago messed with her head.

The evil mana was spreading all over the place. Her instincts were screaming at her to get out of there.

'I can't win. I can't win against that djinn. That's why I have to run away.'

She forced herself up and was about to run away, but a large assailant was blocking her path. She couldn't tell if it was a human or a monster as the assailant's body was covered in metal.

Yoo Yeonha retreated a few steps, but suddenly felt dizzy from the explosion. The blood and brain matter clinging to her body started to weigh her down.

Then, the djinn gathered its evil mana in both hands.

She was going to die.

'I was going to die here.'

As she was overwhelmed with fear, a bullet that looked more like a missile flew out of nowhere.

It was actually a shotgun shell.

The djinn took the full brunt of the shotgun shell from close range. It was extremely powerful and the djinn's upper and lower body was severed in half.

The djinn turned into dust and scattered in the wind.

"Are you alright?" he approached her and asked.

She had no idea what she was doing on the floor and why she was on the floor in the first place when he asked. Instead, she was crying.

"Huuk! Huuk!"

He extended a hand to her despite how shamefully she was crying.

"Stop crying and follow me. I'll protect you. I'm your bodyguard, right?" he said in a warm gentle voice.

Yoo Yeonha took his hand and stood up. Then she clung to him. She clung to him tightly like a child and didn't show any signs of letting go.

She could feel a strange sense of warmth and comfort after she buried her face into his chest. No, something much more powerful was welling up from inside of her.

Perhaps... that was the start of everything...

'I refused to acknowledge the emotions budding inside of me. I didn't at that time... at least... I... I've liked him since that day... '

Yoo Yeonha slowly opened her eyes and saw Kim Hajin's face. She was lying on his lap.

"What kind of dream did you have?" he smiled and asked.

Yoo Yeonha didn't respond.

He smirked and guessed, “Did you dream of becoming the president? Or was it that the entirety of Gangnam belonged to you?”

Yoo Yeonha shook her head, but didn’t say anything. She suddenly recalled what Jin Seyeon said.

“The same goes for me and Hajin. He wanted to help you without expecting anything in return. He wanted to help and not make a trade.”

“Hey...” she muttered.

“Yeah, what?” he nonchalantly replied.

However, Yoo Yeonha hesitated. She had no idea what she was supposed to say. She wasn’t used to speaking purely out of emotion without any intent to create a network or do a business deal.

She was completely oblivious to this. She never learned about it, did it, or expected that she would be in this position.

“Shall we... fish...?”

In the end, that was the best she came up with.

* * *

The time for them to leave the Amazon had come. Essence of the Straits checked their inventory.

[Total Relics Excavated: 737]

[Total Ruins Raided: 33]

This was more than enough to trump whatever record Creator’s Sacred Grace managed to set. Well, at least for a week...

Yoo Yeonha clenched her fist and smiled in satisfaction.

The ES-3 was on the way to pick them up.

“Huh...? Ah... Dammit... She’s at it again...” Yoo Yeonha grumbled after spotting Chae Nayun casually chatting with Kim Hajin.

Yoo Yeonha pouted and butted in between them.

“Oh, hi Yeonha,” Chae Nayun greeted her with a mischievous grin.

Yoo Yeonha looked at her with disdain and said, “Hey, Nayun. We have to go now. Can you help the others pack our things?”

“Oh, really? Sure thing,” Chae Nayun replied while flashing a sleazy smile.

Yoo Yeonha glared at her as Chae Nayun disappeared into the distance. Then she turned her attention to Kim Hajin.

Kim Hajin met her gaze and shrugged, “What?”

“Nothing... just...”

Whiiiiing! Whooooosh!

A powerful gust of wind blew as the ES-3 appeared in the sky. Yoo Yeonha looked at it before she grabbed the hem of Kim Hajin’s clothes and said, “Nothing much, just... when are you coming back to Seoul...?”

Kim Hajin scratched the back of his neck and replied, “Hmm... I’m not sure. Probably a few years?”

Yoo Yeonha lowered her eyes at his response. She had something she wanted to say before leaving, but was scared that she wouldn’t be able to say it this time again.

She breathed in and out before mustering the courage, “What do you think of... coming with me?”

Those were extremely difficult words for her to utter. She wasn’t even this nervous when she was being grilled by Congress.

Still, she mustered her courage one more time and said, “I want... I want to hire you as my bodyguard again.”

She realized it in that dream. It might be too late now, but she liked him ever since that moment.

She did her part and it was now his turn to respond.

“No,” Kim Hajin shook his head.

He didn’t even hesitate for a second. He immediately refused the offer as soon as Yoo Yeonha said it.

It was so harsh that her brain automatically translated ‘no’ as ‘fuck off.’

“At least, not yet,” he added.

Those words gave her hope, but his single word of refusal before was simply too harsh to make her cling to this hope.

Yoo Yeonha’s legs trembled, but then a vein popped up on her forehead.

Kim Hajin bitterly smiled and said, “Both of us... We’re still used to being alone, right?”

Yoo Yeonha clenched her fists. She wanted to deny it. She wanted to tell him how much she regretted it after letting him go. How much her heart ached without even knowing why it was aching.

That was why... she wanted to be with him no matter what it took. She didn’t care if he thought she was being selfish.

She only felt safe beside him.

“You’re right...”

However, her response was quite the opposite of her thoughts.

She maintained her cool and her brain replied before her heart got the chance to. It was the result of her training that allowed her to maintain her cool in these sorts of situations.

“Then, we’re going now,” Yoo Yeonha said with a slight nod.

Kim Hajin suddenly put a necklace around her neck and said, “Yeah, have a safe trip back. Also, this is a gift.”

“What’s this...?”

“What else? Can’t you tell it’s a necklace? Just throw it away if you don’t need it.”

There was nothing special about the necklace. It was sculpted with wood and covered with silver.

Yoo Yeonha fiddled with the necklace and nodded without batting an eye.

“I’m not going to throw it away, but I won’t use it. Anyways, take care. We’re going now,” she said with a hint of coldness in her voice.

Essence of the Straits boarded the ES-3 and the guild members waved at Jin Seyeon and Kim Hajin.

“Wow, it’s finally time to go home.”

“But it wasn’t that bad, right?”

“We’re going to get three years' worth of paycheck as our bonus this time, right?”

“Just three years? I think we can expect to rank up as well!”

The ES-3 was filled with the merry chattering of the bunch.

Yoo Yeonha quietly sat in her seat and looked out the window. She smirked after seeing Kim Hajin waving at them, but that smile almost immediately disappeared.

“Ah... My stomach hurts...” she grimaced and went to the toilet.

She turned on the tap, locked the door, and plunged her face into the basin.

“...”

She was trembling. Tears and snot were coming out of her eyes and nose. She suppressed her voice while crying, but then she noticed something strange.

It felt like she wasn't crying tears, but tears of blood instead. Her heart ached and felt like it would kill her any moment now...

‘I barely got to see him after such a long time, but... why did I have to leave again...?’

However, those thoughts didn't last long in her mind.

She continued crying until she found it difficult to hold back. She cried and cried without thinking about anything. The tears she held back gushed out uncontrollably as if the floodgates were opened.

“Ugh... uh... huuf...!”

Then, the sound of Chae Nayun playing a game outside could be heard. She was playing a loud fighting game and intentionally blasted its sound to the max.

Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding!

Tak! Tak! Tak! Tak! Tak!

The noise coming from the fighting game drowned the sound of Yoo Yeonha's crying.

Side Stories 95

What If Story (10)

Two years passed and winter arrived.

Essence of the Strait's vice guild master appeared in front of the crowd at the Essential Stadium and completely captivated them.

She was wearing a black dress, high heels, a very down-to-earth yet luxurious necklace, and holding a black clutch bag.

She wasn't overdressed or underdressed for the occasion as she sat in the VIP seat to watch the duel in the stadium.

"This is the report on Rookie," her secretary passed her a file and stole a glance at her necklace.

Yoo Yeonha always changed her fashion style, but that necklace always remained. It was a beautiful piece of accessory. However, wearing it all the time seemed strange. There were rumors that it belonged to her lover who passed away. There was no way to confirm that though.

"Okay," Yoo Yeonha replied as she took the file.

She was scanning through it when the whole stadium turned pitch black. She finally placed the file on the table in front of her.

Spotlights shone down on the two heroes on the stage.

Today's match was the title defense match of The Beast Jinhwan against his opponent from Austria, The Giant Bifran.

— And now, what all of you have been waiting for...!

She rested her chin on her palm and watched the show.

The match started once the host was done talking. The heroes in the ring channeled their mana and used their skills.

However, it wasn't that entertaining to her.

— Ah! Jinhwan used his signature Fire Strike and struck Bifran in the abdomen!

The champion, Jinhwan, glanced at Yoo Yeonha after making a nice move.

Yoo Yeonha smirked in disbelief after seeing what he did. How dare he act strong when he had never entered a dungeon before?

The CEO of the duel arena, Yun Hojong, asked with a smile, "What do you think? He has the potential to be a star, right?"

"I heard a lot of cadets are joining the duel arena these days. I guess the rumors were true," Yoo Yeonha replied out of courtesy.

Yun Hojong proudly nodded and replied, "Haha! It has become another career choice for them! We have worked extremely hard so that a large guild like Essence of the Strait will be interested in us!"

Essence of the Strait recently jumped into the entertainment industry. That was the reason for Yoo Yeonha's visit to the stadium today.

"Is that so?"

"Yes! The collaboration between the arena champion and an active hero would definitely capture the attention of the masses. If vice guild master wants, then..."

Yun Hojong started his sales pitch while earnestly bowing. That was how big Yoo Yeonha became in just two years. In fact, she was one of the top ten most respected individuals among cadets.

—... Bifran is down! K.O.! Jinhwan defeated the Austrian Giant just six minutes into the fifth round! He has defended his title!

The match was over.

Yoo Yeonha politely refused Yun Hojong's repeated offer to introduce her to the champion.

She left the stadium and the entire surroundings were covered in snow. The snowy white scenery somehow made her feel melancholic.

"Your outerwear, vice guild master," Rain said as she passed a white mink coat to her.

The reporters lurking outside the stadium immediately ran up to her and started taking pictures. Yoo Yeonha smiled at their cameras.

"Your furry hat is really cute," Rain whispered from behind.

"..."

Yoo Yeonha glanced back at her and whispered back, "Is it normal for a bodyguard to call their superior cute?"

"I am saying this because it looks like an Inuit's hat."

"...How rude. It's called fashion, okay?"

Their limousine arrived. Yoo Yeonha immediately went over the various reports as soon as she got into the limousine, but a bright-colored parcel that Rain was holding caught her eye.

It was a bag of potato chips.

Yoo Yeonha blinked a few times while thinking, '...That looks good.'

She shook her head, switched her smartwatch on, and logged into her social media account to distract herself.

She searched for the username. She found out about his social media handle around six months ago thanks to a comment Chae Nayun left behind. She never knew he used social media and found out that he uploaded at least once a week.

He uploaded three pictures today.

“...He’s still overseas.”

Kim Hajin was going around the world from the Amazon to Mongolia and Austria. He was now in a vast plain in the United States.

“Pfft!” She couldn’t help but smile after seeing his posts.

Kim Hajin grew a lot stronger just like her. He was now a top mercenary and took a lot of pictures with celebrities. She looked at all of the pictures he posted.

Then, she let out a sigh, “...Sigh.”

Two years had already passed, but she still clearly remembered that day. She felt pain in her heart whenever she recalled it.

Because she was embarrassed.

“Tsk...”

Yoo Yeonha switched her smartwatch off and looked out the window.

It was snowing outside.

* * *

“Isn’t it time for you to start thinking about getting married, Yeonha?”

Yoo Yeonha was eating with her family after a long time when her mother, Jin Yeojung, went on the offensive.

Yoo Yeonha was cutting her steak and retorted with a frown, "I'm only in my mid-twenties, Mother. Please come to your senses."

"Yeah, what's this marriage talk about..." Yoo Jinwoong grumbled, but he was forced to pipe down when his wife fiercely glared at him.

"Listen to your mother. You should start dating from now on so you won't feel like you missed out when you get married later. Will you keep working for the rest of your life without even dating someone?" Jin Yeojung asked.

"You threatened to kill me if I got into a relationship... did you not?"

Jin Yeojung vehemently opposed it when the scandal between Yoo Yeonha and Kim Hajin broke out three years ago. She repeatedly told her daughter that it was the wrong choice and she suggested treating him like a plaything and throwing him away later on. Then, she changed her mind and told her daughter not to get involved with a mercenary even if he was merely a plaything.

"He was a mercenary. You can't get romantically involved with a mercenary. How dare that mercenary come after you... You need to be mindful of your public image."

"Ha? It depends on what kind of a mercenary he is, no?" Yoo Yeonha shook her head and stood up. Then she said, "I don't feel like eating anymore. I'm going now."

"Nobody asked you to get married now. I said start dating. I'll find some good men for you. Ah, you know that handsome American hero, right? That guy is a fan of yours, so..."

"Forget about it."

Yoo Yeonha took her coat and left the mansion. She rushed out the front door as if she was running away and walked towards the cars in the parking lot.

Her schedule was quite full until three in the morning. She still had a lecture to give at Cube...

Beep! Beep! Beep! Beep! Beep! Beep!

Suddenly, her smartwatch started blaring sirens.

Not only Yoo Yeonha's smartwatch, but also the mansion gardener's, Yoo Yeonha's secretary, and even the limousine driver's smartwatch started ringing.

Yoo Yeonha immediately checked her smartwatch.

[Emergency Alert: An explosion has occurred in the Southern Region of Korea. The tower that Frost Sanctuary and Creator's Sacred Grace are raiding has exploded.]

[An emergency notice has been issued to the Hero Association and top guilds in the country.]

An emergency draft notice was issued by the association and government.

Then, someone called Yoo Yeonhwa.

— This is the association. They have failed the Tower of Memory raid. We are now in a state of emergency due to the tower's effect. We request your guild to mobilize.

* * *

The news of the raid's failure spread throughout the world in no time. Every government sent their condolences and some countries even sent their heroes as reinforcements.

“Wow! It's Yoo Yeonha!”

“Please tell us what happened, Vice Guild Master Yoo Yeonha!”

“What do you think about Creator's Sacred Grace failing? Please tell us your thoughts!”

The Tower of Memory was located between Hadong City and Mount Jiri. There was already a massive crowd of reporters and heroes gathered there.

Yoo Yeonha nonchalantly passed through the parade of camera flashes.

“...”

It was utter chaos. Mana was littered all over the place and the air was filled with dense mana that made it difficult for even heroes to breathe.

“I knew it...”

Creator’s Sacred Grace was divided into two factions. First was the guild master, Jin Inho’s faction while the second was the vice guild master, Yun Seung-Ah’s faction.

Yun Seung-Ah took Kim Suho with her to America and raided a dungeon there while Jin Inho forced it by raiding the Tower of Memory.

In the end, their growing feud led to this catastrophe.

“The tower is completely cut in half,” Yoo Yeonha said.

Yi Jinah nodded and replied with a serious look, “Yes, this is the worst among everything I have seen so far.”

There was mana flowing out from the tower cut in half and the tower’s mana was seeping into the ground. The result of that was the surrounding area turning into a much rougher environment compared to a tower or a dungeon.

“Hey~ Yeonha~” Chae Nayun called out while waving.

She was accompanied by Yi Jiyeon, Zellin, Hazuki, and other Essence of the Strait members.

Behind them were the vice guild master of The General and Luterin, the handsome American hero Jin Yeojung was talking about. Hoften, the vice guild master of Desolate Moon, Shin Jonghak, Kim Horak, and other renowned heroes were also there.

“What are we going to do about that?” Chae Nayun asked while looking at the tower and its surroundings.

The area was now getting contaminated with mana and a thick mana fog started blocking their vision.

“We will have to find a solution,” Yoo Yeonha replied.

Then, a high-pitched voice suddenly called out to Yoo Yeonha.

“Huh? It’s Essence of the Strait’s vice guild master.”

The kid had white hair tied in double ponytails. No, it was actually Aileen.

Yoo Yeonha greeted her with a bow.

Aileen nonchalantly floated in the air and met Yoo Yeonha at eye level.

“Do you know what’s going on?” she asked.

“No, I just arrived here. I do not have the full picture yet,” Yoo Yeonha replied.

“Ah, the tower’s mana is fragmenting the space around it.”

“Fragmenting...?”

“Yeah,” Aileen replied before she crossed her arms and explained, “That tower isn’t called the Tower of Memory for nothing. The dimension within the tower was split into dozens of different dimensions when it was destroyed. Every single one of those dimensions is now trying to create its own dimensional space. In short, it's something like a mixed puzzle now. We will have to clear those dimensions first if we want to stabilize the tower."

The insight of the Human Dragon from the Temple of Justice was truly remarkable.

"I guess we will have to go in..." Yoo Yeonha said.

"Yes. We might have no clue what's inside, but we have no choice but to march on. Besides, it's not something that we can see from the outside. We have no other... Hey! Damn it!"

Aileen suddenly glared somewhere and cursed loudly. A group of people who were either heroes or mercenaries were loitering behind the thick fog.

"Fuck off!" Aileen shouted and kicked them out of the area. She grumbled under her breath, "Ah, I should form a barrier around the tower to keep the flies away..."

She waved her magic staff and shouted, "Barrier! Construct yourself!"

Rumble... Rumble...

The ground shook before an earthen wall shot out from the ground.

"That will do for now. Anyways, I'm thinking of creating an advanced party. What do you think, vice guild master?"

"I have no objections. Time is of the essence in these kinds of situations."

Prioritizing limiting the tower's effect was the textbook reaction to these kinds of situations. The golden time they had was only a mere four days. This entire area would be conquered by the tower if they failed to stabilize it within that time.

In the event that happened, the chances of reclaiming the area were close to zero. The land would be contaminated forever.

Korea was already a small country and losing this entire southern region would be a massive blow to the country.

“Alright, but I’m only going to allow intermediate high rank, tier two heroes or above. The rest will be stationed outside until further orders are given.”

Hazuki was removed from the group as she was an intermediate high rank, tier three hero. Yi Jinah, Yi Jiyeon, Zellin, Chae Nayun, and the rest were qualified for the advanced party.

“But are you sure you’re going to tag along? Isn’t it better for you to stay behind and take command of the situation?” Aileen asked.

Yoo Yeonha smiled and replied, “I am also a high rank hero now. I can’t call myself the vice guild master if I shy away from challenges.”

“Hmm... If you say so,” Aileen replied with a satisfied nod.

She smacked Chae Nayun on the shoulder after she caught Chae Nayun looking at her with a certain set of eyes.

“Hey! Why are you looking at me like that?” Aileen growled.

“Hehehe... I just thought that you never age. That’s all,” Chae Nayun replied with a dumb grin.

“Shut up. Anyways, I’ll leave your guild to you. I’m opening the door now,” Aileen said before she opened a portal with the words, [Exclusive Portal – Essence of the Strait], written on it.

“We’re going immediately right, Yeonha? We already prepared all of our gear and necessities,” Chae Nayun asked while pointing at her rucksack.

“Yes, this counts as a contribution too. Besides, who knows what we might get from the tower?”

“Okay! Then, let’s go! This is going to be fun!” Chae Nayun snickered and exclaimed as she led the way.

Essence of the Strait walked towards the portal.

“Don’t forget to envelope yourself in your aura. We might get separated or our vision could get disturbed. Don’t forget to tighten the rope around your waist.”

“Roger that!”

They made their final preparations and tightened the ropes around their waists before marching into the portal.

They walked for five minutes when Yoo Yeonha suddenly felt an eerie chill crawl up her spine. The entire area was already covered in fog and nothing was visible ahead.

Yoo Yeonha felt an eerie sensation from the thick cold fog, so she called out to the others. However, her voice wouldn’t come out. No, it was more like she was trying to speak, but the air wouldn’t carry the soundwaves she was emitting.

It felt like she was in a vacuum.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly stopped walking amid the eerie silence. She saw a sign in front of her.

The sign was right above an entrance that stretched deep into the darkness like a cave.

[...Evacu Shelt...]

The words were smudged so it was difficult to read, but she was certain that this was one of the fragments of the Tower of Memory.

Yoo Yeonha grabbed the rope connecting her to her guild members and bravely marched into the tunnel.

Side Stories 96

What If Story (11)

Evacuation Shelter? Yoo Yeonha read the letters on the sign. Was there an evacuation shelter around here?

She tilted her head in confusion, but decided to enter the tunnel in the end. The fog became even thicker inside and her vision and hearing were completely hindered.

She relied on her remaining senses as she walked. It was truly not a pleasant experience. She felt extremely frustrated from not being able to see or hear anything. Her anxiety grew with every step she took as her back started to break out in cold sweat.

However, she didn't have to worry so much. Her body was tied by a rope with her other comrades, so...

She reached out and fiddled with her lifeline, but felt chills spread throughout her entire body.

The rope was cut. The long rope that should have connected all of them was cut cleanly and less than a meter was left behind her. The rope was sturdy enough to withstand any attempts from most monsters to cut it since it was manufactured with the special fiber created by Essential Dynamics, but...

No, that wasn't what was important right now.

Yoo Yeonha froze on the spot like a statue while holding onto what was left of her rope. Panic slowly set in and she started to be shaken.

Her mental fortitude had strengthened after becoming a hero, but there was one thing she couldn't personally handle.

Alone, no one else but her in this vast space. She couldn't see or hear anything.

Her trauma slowly started to creep in and sapped the strength from her legs. She sat on the ground and covered her face. Then a hallucination started whispering in her ears.

The sound grew louder as it turned into a scream and her fingertips were covered with a hot, thick liquid.

Yoo Yeonha gritted her teeth and screamed at the top of her lungs, but couldn't even hear herself. This, in turn, only caused her to feel more fear and anxiety.

She trembled in horror within the darkness. She had no idea if her eyes were opened or closed. Her vision and hearing were stripped away from her. The only thing that remained with her was her consciousness.

This experience was truly horrifying for her, but it was at that moment...

She heard footsteps in the distance and looked in that direction. A wind was gently blowing away the thick fog and a man's silhouette was walking towards her.

Everything looked like a hallucination.

That man, Kim Hajin, was smiling at her.

Yoo Yeonha was dazed for a moment, but immediately walked towards him. She tried to say something, but couldn't utter a word. In the end, she hugged him and cried in his embrace.

He was flustered at her response, but soon patted her on the shoulder.

Then...

He suddenly crumbled into dust and Yoo Yeonha fell face-first onto the ground.

He was an illusion.

* * *

At a mountain peak with a bird's eye view of the tower cut in half.

“...Do you see it?” this informant called Yoo Sunghwan asked me.

“Yes, I see it,” I replied.

The entire area around the tower was getting contaminated by its mana. I had no choice but to hire an expert around this area.

► [Master Sharpshooter]

[High Rank] [Permanent] [Growth-Type – Proficiency Tier 2] [Experience – 15%]

My Master Sharpshooter was quite high-leveled, so I was probably the best out there. I could even see through the disturbances spread across the tower.

I was busy looking into the tower when a kid suddenly popped out of nowhere.

“You can see it? Are you lying right now? I think you’re lying... You’re lying, right?” the kid nagged while waving her magic staff.

I let out a sigh and replied, “I am not lying.”

“How can I believe you? Even I can’t see what’s going on over there,” Aileen retorted while waving her hands to disturb me.

Thankfully, Jin Seyeon appeared beside her and grabbed her shoulder with a smile, “Please stay still, Aileen. He’s an expert that I hardly managed to convince to come.”

“What the? You know this guy?” Aileen narrowed her eyes and asked.

“Yes, Hajin operates under the alias Black Wolf,” Jin Seyeon replied with a gentle smile.

“Oh... Really?” Aileen muttered. Her eyes shot wide open as if she recognized me.

“Do you know me?” I asked.

“There’s no way she doesn’t know you, Hajin. After all, you have quite a stellar record,” Jin Seyeon replied instead.

Well, I guess I did work quite hard to become somebody...

Aileen still seemed dazed before she said, “Yeah, I know you. You do a lot of small jobs in the United States and the Middle East, right?”

“What do you mean by small jobs, Aileen? Hajin stopped a calamity,” Jin Seyeon corrected her.

“What are you? His lawyer?” Aileen snapped back.

I ignored the two and continued analyzing the situation as my thousand-mile eyes helped me get a satellite view of what was going on around the tower.

“...I think there are around forty-eight fragments,” I said after I analyzed the situation.

The entire area was about sixty-six thousand square meters. There were forty-eight fragments in it. Every single one of them was separated into their own independent spaces and we would have to subjugate them one by one to bring this matter to a close.

“Around?” Aileen said as she tried to nitpick at my words.

However, Jin Seyeon placed her hand on her shoulder.

“Damn it!”

I ignored her rambling and continued, “There are forty-eights aboveground, but we can’t exclude the chances of some existing underground as well.”

I looked at Yoo Sunghwan and said, “We will need to create a map first. Please prepare large paper and stationeries.”

“Yes, sir.”

Every fragment had different entrances. One could enter from the north, but they would find themselves in the east while another could enter from the east and find themselves in the south. I didn’t want to exaggerate, but there was no one else who could create a map for this complex structure aside from me in this world.

There could be a hero out there who was as good as me, but drawing a map required quite the dexterity at the same time. I doubted that any hero would possess that.

No, I was certain that nobody else possessed both abilities as I did.

“A map? Is that even possible?” Aileen sneered as she asked.

“Yes, but I think it will take a long time to complete,” I replied.

It was definitely going to take a long time. An A4 paper was nowhere going to be enough to completely draw what was going on over there. The entrances and exits were intertwined, yet independent from each other. People were bound to get lost if I didn’t meticulously draw the map.

“I brought what you requested,” Yoo Sunghwan said as he passed me the paper and stationeries.

It was impossible to draw the map with a computer. I had to manually draw it with the help of my [Dexterity] gift.

“Will this be enough?” he asked.

“Yes, it’s more than enough,” I replied as I started to draw the map.

I started to move my hand to draw the flow of mana, the entrances, the form of the fragments, the exits, etc. and people soon gathered behind me.

“Wow... you’re like a computer, Hajin.”

“Hmm... I guess he has a trick or two up his sleeves.”

Jin Seyeon was thoroughly impressed by me while Aileen refused to acknowledge my skills.

“There. It’s complete,” I said as I wiped the sweat off of my forehead.

It took me three hours to complete the map.

Yoo Sunghwan looked shocked and was in awe as he stared at the map, but he immediately came back to his senses and called for somebody.

“Scan this map at once and print it out! Disburse it to all of the parties and upload it to all guild databases! We don’t have time to waste. Hurry!”

They moved quickly.

I massaged my tired arms and eyes before I stood up.

“Are you going to enter, Hajin? I heard Yoo Yeonha went with the advance party,” Jin Seyeon asked.

Yoo Yeonha. That name was a bit burdensome to me, but I nodded without any hesitation.

“I will have to go...”

“Yes, did you see where she is?”

“I will start looking now.”

I opened my eyes and infused stigma into them. My eyes started glowing blue as my vision expanded into the thick fog...

* * *

How much time had passed?

Yoo Yeonha didn't have the luxury to wonder about that. She even forgot how many tears she shed.

However, she came back to her senses after crying a river and was slowly adapting to her situation.

She continued walking with the resolve to make it out of the fog. Her body moved out of pure instinct.

“...?”

Then, she spotted a silhouette in the fog and felt her heart drop in fear. The silhouette started approaching her and was getting closer and closer.

Yoo Yeonha's eyes shot wide open when the silhouette emerged from the fog. She recognized this face. He looked younger than she recalled, but she was certain that it was him because of his distinct facial features.

It was her father, Yoo Jinwoong.

He looked exactly like he did when he was younger. He was carrying a blanket in his arms and there was a baby soundly sleeping in the blanket.

Yoo Yeonha ran towards him as if she was possessed. She desperately grabbed his arm and tried to say something. However, she couldn't utter a sound.

Yoo Jinwoong continued to look at the baby in his arms before crumbling into dust.

Yoo Yeonha collapsed on the spot.

Thud...!

Thud...!

Thud...!

She suddenly heard a strange sound in her ears. She covered her ears, but the sound kept ringing in her mind.

A portion of the fog suddenly cleared up and she looked towards that spot.

A dark figure was approaching from the end of the tunnel.

Thud... Thud...

The figure was tall and wearing a long weathered robe. Its face was half-disfigured and the sound of his footsteps sounded sinister for some reason.

The man's hideous appearance was difficult to put into words and he soon looked at her with excited eyes.

“Hello...”

His voice was just as hideous as his appearance.

“It was you... as expected...”

His voice was quite difficult to put into words as well. It sounded like numerous tones were mixed and as if he was purposely manipulating it to sound strange. The voice was a mix of a man, a woman, and a child every time he spoke.

One thing was for certain. He was not a human being.

Yoo Yeonha gripped the whip on her waist.

“So it was you, Yoo Jinwoong’s daughter.”

Those words suddenly lit a light bulb in Yoo Yeonha’s head and she recognized the hideous disfigured face.

It was one of the Nine Evils, Destruction, who was also her father’s old nemesis.

“It’s nice to meet you,” Destruction said.

“Hap!” Yoo Yeonha swung her whip.

Destruction easily caught it with his hand, but that was what Yoo Yeonha was hoping for. She infused her mana into her whip and sent electric shockwaves through it.

Bzzzzt!

The electric shockwave zapped and illuminated their surroundings. Destruction crumbled into dust and her surroundings became dark again.

Was Destruction also an illusion?

She couldn’t tell what was real anymore after having her sense of sight and hearing stripped from her. The only thing she could do now was tremble in fear again.

“...!”

Then a hand suddenly grabbed her shoulder.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and turned around to swing her whip, but instantly froze on the spot after seeing a familiar face.

“Ack!... Kim Hajin?” her voice flowed out.

He rubbed his arm after getting hit by the whip and bitterly smiled, “O-Ouch... That really hurts... What are you doing here?”

His voice. It was real. It was really him without a doubt.

Yoo Yeonha felt a hot sensation well up from the depths of her core. She covered her mouth with both hands.

“Real...?”

“What do you mean by real?”

She shed tears before hugging him.

Kim Hajin was taken aback by her sudden action, but soon patted her back and consoled her. He comforted her while she continued to cry and listened to his warm gentle voice.

However...

She was certain that she was in his embrace, but... her body suddenly tilted in midair before she crashed into the ground.

Thud!

A sharp pain radiated from her hips and shoulder.

She sat on the ground and looked around her surroundings in a daze. She looked like a lost child looking for her mother. It was at that moment that she realized...

“Waaaaaaaah!”

It was another illusion.

* * *

“Ah, all of that was fake? Damn, that’s giving me the creeps...” Chae Nayun said while shuddering.

I lit the flashlight into the tunnel and asked, “Yeah, but more importantly. You got separated in there?”

“Yeah. The rope suddenly got cut, but everyone’s probably in there,” Chae Nayun replied.

I bumped into her around half an hour ago. She was putting on quite a show all alone at the tunnel’s entrance.

She looked like she was going wild swinging her sword and wasting her mana, but she said that she was fighting to the death with a horde of monsters. It was definitely the tower’s doing.

“But it’s amazing how nothing is happening when I’m with you,” she muttered in amazement.

“That’s because I have a gift that makes that happen...”

Things like hallucinations wouldn’t work on [Master Sharpshooter] while my other gift, [Bodyguard], also rendered Chae Nayun immune as long as she was under my protection.

“Wow~ Really?”

“Yeah, it’s useful for protecting others.”

“Wow... no wonder Yeonha likes you.”

“Pfft!” I almost spat out the water I was drinking. I cleared my throat and nonchalantly pretended that I was alright.

—... So you are Kim Hajin.

A hideous voice suddenly came from somewhere in the ceiling.

Both of us flinched at the voice and retreated a few steps.

— I have been watching you... paying attention to you...

The voice sounded like a corrupted voice note. ‘Geez... Would it kill him to speak properly...?’

Chae Nayun frowned and retorted to the ceiling, “What the fuck do you want? You want a fight? Who the hell are you?!”

— Your past is in my memories too... including the culprit...

“Stop hiding and show your face! Moron!” Chae Nayun continued taunting the voice, but the voice didn’t seem to be affected at all and kept going.

— The name of this place is... the Kwang-Oh Evacuation Shelter.

“Hey, aren’t you going to come out? I’ll beat you up only a little bit if you come out now or else I’ll beat you to death if you make me come looking for you!” Chae Nayun threatened with her sword drawn out.

I had no idea what she learned on Mount Baekdu, but she became extremely violent for some reason...

—...

However, the voice no longer said anything after that.

Then, the tunnel lit up and a downward slope that led deeper into the tunnel appeared.

Tik... Tik... Tik...

The sound of a light bulb flickering made it seem more eerie.

“Is it asking us to go down? What’s your plan? Do you want to stay here?” Chae Nayun asked.

I went over my gear and calmed myself down. It wasn’t that hard for me to calm down since the world’s most talented swordsman with the most hidden potential was by my side.

I nodded in response and said, “Let’s go. We have to look for Yoo Yeonha.”

“...Wow, what a romantic you are.”

Side Stories 97

What If Story (12)

“Ah... This wind is annoying me...” Chae Nayun muttered while we were walking.

She shuddered in disgust and rubbed her arm whenever the air touched it.

“Endure it,” I said.

“Hey...” Chae Nayun tapped me on my shoulder.

“What?”

“You... since when did you like Yeonha?”

“...”

I continued walking without saying anything. Chae Nayun looked at me before placing both hands behind her head. She walked like a two-legged lizard before her eyes suddenly shot wide open.

“Over there! It’s Yi Jiyeon! That’s Jiyeon, right?”

“Looks like it...”

Yi Jiyeon was dancing not too far from us.

We went over to her while she was busy dancing like a ballerina with her eyes closed. I grabbed her shoulder and she finally opened her eyes.

“Kyaaaak!”

“Pipe down,” Chae Nayun immediately covered Yi Jiyoong’s mouth.

She looked at me and Chae Nayun before letting out a sigh of relief.

“Hey, Yi Jiyoong. Have you seen the others?”

“No... I was at a party when I opened my eyes...? Huh? Where the hell am I?” Yi Jiyoong asked while frivolously looking around the tunnel with eyes wide open from shock. Then, she let out a scream before running into Chae Nayun’s embrace.

“Where are we, Nayun? Where the hell is this?!”

“Hey, quit it... Damn it... I have no idea myself. Anyways, we have to keep moving. We might find the answer once we reach the end of this tunnel.”

“Where are WE?!”

“I said shut up and follow us.”

We marched onward with Yi Jiyoong added to our party. We didn’t really walk that deeper into the tunnel when we came across another hideous being.

It wasn’t Destruction. If I had to put it into words, then... a zombie?

However, the zombie looked too full of life to be considered a zombie. Perhaps... it was a hero turned into a zombie...?

“I think we need to fight that thing.”

It was then.

Shwaaaaa!

A gentle breeze blew from behind and pushed away the stench in the tunnel. It was a warm and gentle breeze that was full of vitality.

I immediately knew where this breeze came from.

The one who summoned the breeze proudly smiled while wielding her sword, Galatine. She ran towards us as fast as she could.

It was Rachel.

“Huh? It’s Rachel!” Yi Jiyeon was the first to react.

Rachel came up to us.

“What the heck? Why are you here?” Chae Nayun asked.

“I’m the reinforcement. I came after looking at the map Hajin drew,” Rachel replied.

I simply smiled when she looked at me.

“That’s a relief. It’s good to see that you’re alright, Hajin,” she said.

“Well, yeah. Anyways, it’s nice to see you here.”

“What the heck? Have you two met before...?”

“Yeah, a bit.”

I helped Rachel once before so she could awaken as an elemental.

“Anyways, now that you’re here...” I said before I took out my Desert Eagle.

The zombie was already emitting hostility towards us.

“Shall we fight together?”

“Yes, that’s why you’re here in the first place, right? But... where’s the vice guild master?”

For some reason, it felt like Rachel was more worried about Yoo Yeonha than I was.

I guess the little princess had grown up to become a shrewd businesswoman.

* * *

“That was too powerful to be called a zombie... Was it a fragment of the tower?” Rachel said while wiping Galatine and letting out a sigh of relief after the fight.

I was exhausted as well, but I nodded and replied, “Yeah, it probably was.”

“Huh? Why? I’m still so energetic!”

On the other hand, Chae Nayun was busy showing off her stamina.

I tried to walk, but one of my ankles gave out and I ended up falling down.

Chae Nayun helped me up and asked, “What’s wrong with you?”

“I have no idea... give me a second,” I grimaced and checked my Achilles tendon.

There were no cuts, but it felt like my Achilles tendon gave up on me as I couldn’t exert any force into my feet.

“Did something strange hit me...? Hey, help me up first,” I said.

“Alright, leave it to me,” Chae Nayun grabbed my arm and flung it over her neck.

She suddenly flashed a mischievous smile and said, “Hehe... I’ll tease the hell out of Yeonha if we meet her.”

“Tease? Does she even get teased?”

“Huh? Hey, do you want to bet on it?”

“Bet on what?”

Chae Nayun kept smirking like a mischievous little kid as she said, “I wonder what kind of expression Yoo Yeonha will make...”

“Oh right, Hajin. I heard about your scandal with the vice guild master!” Rachel suddenly exclaimed after eavesdropping on our conversation.

I bitterly smiled and shook my head, but her eyes were already twinkling with curiosity.

She calmed her breathing down before she asked in a serious tone, “Hajin... if everything goes well this time... Can you be the mediator for the English Royal Court guild and Essence of the Strait...? I mean... I know this isn’t the right time, but... never mind. We should hurry and save the vice guild master!”

* * *

Yoo Yeonha conjured a large orb with her mana and locked herself in it. This was the best she could come up with to protect herself from the darkness.

She resisted the hallucinations and just breathed like a plant. Time would pass and she would soon be able to leave this hellhole.

She was able to find hope in this hopeless situation after thinking of one specific person.

Yoo Yeonha thought about his face. She always regretted it and was always thankful to him.

She missed him. She missed him like crazy. Imagining him was no longer enough for her. He was the only thing in this world that could stand on equal footing with her ambition. Her feelings for him grew stronger the farther apart they were. Her memories of him now only tormented her day and night. Those memories stabbed her heart like a dagger.

That made her all the more certain now. No, she was certain since a long time ago.

She liked him, and she loved him.

Knock... Knock...

Someone knocked on the orb, but Yoo Yeonha didn't react to it. It was probably another hallucination.

Knock... Knock...

Yoo Yeonha shuddered when it knocked again.

Then, a warm gentle mana brightly illuminated her surroundings.

“...?”

Yoo Yeonha looked up at the light descending on her like it was granting her salvation from this hell.

Kim Hajin was looking down at her.

Yoo Yeonha rubbed her eyes a few times. His arm was around Chae Nayun's shoulder and he was leaning on her.

...This was probably another hallucination.

Yoo Yeonha looked at Chae Nayun, who had a stupid smirk.

That smirk looked all too familiar.

...Still, it was probably another hallucination.

“Why? What?”

Chae Nayun kept smirking while raising her eyebrows. Her sleazy smile looked exactly like what she would do whenever she was being mischievous.

“Are you jealous?” Chae Nayun asked while fiddling with Kim Hajin’s fingers.

Yoo Yeonha’s eyes turned cold as she sharply glared at her. Chae Nayun was nothing but a hallucination. Yoo Yeonha was certain of it, and that was why...

She immediately stood up and swung her hand with all her strength the moment Chae Nayun locked fingers with Kim Hajin.

Paaaaak!

The destructive sound reverberated across the tunnel.

* * *

Destruction was observing them from behind his mask. He smiled while hiding behind the thick dense fog covering the tunnel.

How long would they be able to keep smiling?

This thought alone sent chills down his spine and made him feel ecstatic. In the end, he ended up jizzing himself when the ecstasy overwhelmed him.

He became interested in Kim Hajin three years ago. The boy was a nobody that he wouldn’t have given a second look normally, but it was a different story if he was related to the Yoo family.

Destruction first found out about him when the scandal about Yoo Yeonha broke out. At the time, Destruction was also busy digging up dirt on Yoo Jinwoong in Pandemonium.

The truth that he found out by sheer coincidence was the Kwang-Oh Incident. The sole survivor of that incident was none other than that boy, Kim Hajin.

In the end, Destruction no longer felt the need to endlessly toil just to bring down the Yoo family. That incident alone was a ticking time bomb.

There was no way Kim Hajin would be able to forgive the family that destroyed his life and killed his parents. He was a human after all, and humans were very bad at forgiving others.

‘I want to see it... I want to see your face as your daughter gets betrayed by the man she loves. I want to see your face as your family starts crumbling. I want to see it as you start killing each other. I desperately want to see it.

I, Evil Destruction, will definitely make it happen.

Yoo Jinwoong, your daughter is going to die here today.’

* * *

Yoo Yeonha awkwardly scratched the back of her neck while looking at Chae Nayun’s swollen cheek.

“I’m sorry, Nayun...”

“No problem. I won the bet thanks to you, but...” Chae Nayun replied before she narrowed her eyes and grumbled, “You guys look fucking annoying to look at right now. I mean, you don’t have to cling to each other like that, you know?”

Yoo Yeonha was hugging Kim Hajin as close as she could under the premise that she was helping him walk. They were so close that they were probably going to jump under the sheets if a bed magically appeared along the way.

“Come on. What’s wrong with you, Nayun? Just let them enjoy themselves,” Yi Jiyeon said with a smile.

She already took dozens of photos of them. The internet didn’t work here so she couldn’t upload them, but she made sure to take as many pictures as she could with her smartwatch.

“What do you mean by enjoy? I am helping him walk, Yi Jiyeon,” Yoo Yeonha said as she started to berate Yi Jiyeon.

Then, Yoo Yeonha looked at Kim Hajin and smiled happily, “Hehe...”

However, she was scared deep inside. What if this was just another hallucination...?

“It’s not a hallucination. Don’t worry,” Kim Hajin assured her as if he could read her mind.

“Y-Yes... Okay...” Yoo Yeonha couldn’t look him in the eye, so she replied after lowering her gaze with her cheeks puffed up.

“I am glad you are safe, vice guild master,” Rachel said in a gentle voice.

Yoo Yeonha smiled and replied, “Thank you. It is all thanks to you, Guild Master Rachel. I hope we can sit down and chat later on.”

Rachel looked overjoyed at those words.

“Hey, Yeonha. So Destruction is here?”

“Yeah, he has something with my father. They used to be comrades before, but...”

“Ah, so that Destruction was your father’s lackey~~~!” Chae Nayun shouted as loud as she could.

Yoo Yeonha couldn’t understand what she was doing, but the tunnel showed a reaction to those words and started to lightly tremble.

“It’s working. Kekeke! That stupid moron,” Chae Nayun snickered with an evil smile.

“Destruction was Yoo Jinwoong’s lackey~~~! I guess it’s true~! Look at him hiding~ You’re a lackey if you keep hiding~~~” Chae Nayun continued shouting a bunch of childish insults.

Yoo Yeonha didn't bother stopping her as the tunnel shook whenever she roasted Destruction.

However, the taunts weren't as effective later on.

* * *

Twelve hours later...

"Wow... this is crazy... Can we take a break first?" Yi Jiyeon asked while drenched in sweat.

Twelve hours. We walked for twelve straight hours. This tunnel seemed to have the ability to tire us out. Yi Jiyeon was the first casualty of the march.

"No... not yet..." Yoo Yeonha said.

As she was about to say something, she was interrupted when someone exclaimed.

"Oh!"

Someone appeared from within the tunnel and everyone prepared for battle.

However, the person who appeared was a little girl.

Everyone lowered their weapons after seeing that it was a little girl. The little girl walked towards them with a blanket in her arms. Then she stopped at a distance not too far away from us.

We walked over to the girl and talked to her, but she didn't respond to anything we said.

We suspected this was another hallucination, but my eyes were telling me it wasn't. I looked inside the blanket and what I found made me grimace.

“Why? Is it someone you know?” Yoo Yeonha asked.

I shook my head and checked the baby’s arm, “No.”

However, that tattoo engraved on the baby’s arm was the same four streaks of stigma that I had. At that moment, I was extremely confused by what was going on.

Chae Nayun muttered without a thought, “The baby has a tattoo...?”

“A tattoo...?” Yoo Yeonha muttered as she checked the baby’s arm. Then she immediately looked at me.

She tilted her head in confusion. She knew that I had a tattoo and saw it when we were trapped in the field in China, in the Amazon, and when we spent a long time together.

However, why did this baby have the same tattoo...? I was sure this tattoo was my stigma, but why...?

Was it possible that the past and present were starting to overlap and it was causing some strange phenomenon?

Yoo Yeonha suddenly grabbed my arm and rolled up my sleeve. She saw that my stigma looked exactly the same as the baby’s tattoo.

“This is...” Yoo Yeonha muttered before she looked at me with a serious look.

I shook my head and pulled back my arm before I said, “It’s a hallucination.”

Side Stories 98

What If Story (13)

I was deep in thought.

Why did this child in the tower's fragment possess the exact tattoo as mine?

I couldn't come up with any theories. The only thing I could come up with was the small price this world had to pay after I was transported here — Kim Chundong.

It was likely that the child was Chundong in the past.

The Tower of Memory's hallucination tended to show the past in the present. This baby had the stigma's tattoo on its body since it was Chundong when he was young.

However, I still couldn't understand why this memory was being played right now in the present.

“...”

We walked without saying a word. Chae Nayun whispered while walking since she wasn't used to staying quiet while I and Yoo Yeonha looked quite haggard for some reason.

“I wonder what happened... Have you entered this place before, Hajin?” Rachel carefully asked while stealing glances at Yoo Yeonha.

“I'm not sure,” I replied.

“Are you related in some way to Destruction?” she asked.

“I ran into him in the United States.”

I did run into Destruction in the United States now that I thought about it. I didn't personally meet him, but the terrorist organization I thwarted was under Destruction's command.

"Hey, put this one on," Chae Nayun said as she threw me a gas mask.

The evil mana in the air was getting thick, so I guess we were getting closer to Destruction.

"Hmm... Does that mean you were born somewhere around here? You're an orphan, right?" Yi Jiyoona asked.

Chae Nayun flinched and whacked Yi Jiyoona for being too straightforward, but I didn't really mind it.

"Who knows?" I shrugged.

However, it was the hideous voice that replied instead.

— That is correct.

We stopped and looked around our surroundings.

It was Destruction. He was definitely hiding in the thick dense fog ahead. We could see his face covered by his hideous mask.

— This is where your past is.

I almost let out a sigh as I sensed that something quite troublesome was about to start.

— This is where your memories are at.

Yoo Yeonha grabbed the hem of my shirt and I pulled her shoulder closer to me.

Then, a sinister smile formed on Destruction's face.

Seeuuuu...!

The fog grew thicker in the silence before it showed us a scene from the past. A part of the fog turned into humans while another part turned into sounds.

[Kwang-Oh Evacuation Shelter]

The safe refuge was built at the end of the long tunnel.

There were numerous people in the evacuation shelter called the Kwang-Oh Evacuation Shelter. All of them were civilians who gathered there for their own survival.

We flinched and looked around our surroundings.

— Are you alright?!

— Y-Yeah... but not yet...

Two people caught our eyes. One was a pregnant lady holding her husband's hand. She already started giving birth and the people around them were helping her give birth.

— B-Breath! Breath!

Thud!

It was then that the evacuation shelter's steel doors opened and everyone looked towards the door.

Two people were standing there. One was an adult male while the other was a small girl.

The people in the evacuation shelter continued looking at them.

— Have a good look, Byul.

The man said before he started the massacre. A person's head went flying whenever he swung his hand.

The heroes that were guarding the evacuation shelter tried to stop him, but it was futile. They were either blown to smithereens or had their heads cut off in a single swoop.

“Blurgh...!” Yi Jiyeon puked at the sight of the carnage.

On the other hand, Chae Nayun rushed at the man and swung her sword. However, this was only an illusion.

Chae Nayun’s sword cut through the air and she failed to stop the massacre that occurred in the past.

“What the fuck is this...?” she muttered under her breath.

All of a sudden, the pregnant woman’s heart was pierced with mana and her husband lay motionlessly as he was forced to watch his wife’s demise and shed tears of blood.

— Can you do it?

The man asked the little girl.

The girl looked at the massacre with lifeless eyes. Then she slowly approached the pregnant woman.

—...

She looked down at the baby that was just born and extended her shadow to snuff out whatever life remained in the room. However, the baby was still alive.

The little girl stared at the baby for quite a while.

Then, the scenery changed to something else. They were now outdoors with a river flowing beside them.

The little girl was holding the baby wrapped in a blanket and a large man stood next to her.

—... Is this the child?

Yoo Yeonha flinched after hearing the familiar voice. She watched in horror as the man's face became visible.

It was Yoo Jinwoong.

The girl nodded in response.

— I see...

Yoo Jinwoong looked at the baby and returned it to the little girl.

—... I'm sorry

Yoo Jinwoong bit his lips and said.

That was all Yoo Yeonha had to hear to understand what was going on.

— Disappear where nobody can see you. Don't ever appear in front of me or Chae Joochul. That is the best I can do for you...

—...

A breeze blew and the little girl turned into a shadow before disappearing.

Then, the baby was abandoned at an orphanage where he grew up as an orphan.

“...”

The scenery disappeared and they were back at the tunnel where nobody said a single word.

I looked at Yoo Yeonha.

— Do you get it now?

Yoo Yeonha looked downcast. She was trembling and despair was written all over her face. Tears were welling up in her eyes.

I was flustered and had never seen her this shaken before.

— This is the past that you have been searching for. You roamed the world to find your past, didn't you?

“...?”

I wondered what nonsense he was spouting. Don't tell me Destruction thought that I was roaming the world in search of the past that had nothing to do with me...? He was absolutely wrong, but that didn't stop Yoo Yeonha from trembling.

— The Tower of Memory recreates a portion of someone's memories. I'm sure you realized by now that the tower only speaks the truth.

I didn't know what to say, so I remained quiet.

Chae Nayun grabbed my shoulder and said, “Hey...”

She looked quite serious as well.

It was probably because the name Chae Joochul was mentioned in the memory.

On the other hand, Rachel and Yi Jiyeon had the same reaction as Chae Nayun.

“Hajin...”

“Did I understand things correctly just now...? So I was correct that you were born here...?”

I felt my head stop for a second.

Destruction was smiling triumphantly. However, I didn't feel anything to be honest. I was sorry to Chundong, but... No, I didn't even know who Chundong was in the first place.

Still, I had no idea what I was supposed to say.

However, it didn't take me long after seeing Yoo Yeonha's face. All I could think about right now was saving her.

“...”

I glared at Destruction and wanted nothing more than to crush that smug face smiling so triumphantly.

To do that, I had to lie.

“I already knew about it.”

I could hear gasps after what I said. Not only was Yoo Yeonha shocked, but everyone else was as well.

I combed my hair back with my hand and continued, “I knew about it. Everything.”

—... Utter nonsense.

The voice behind the hideous mask started to shake.

However, I replied after pulling Yoo Yeonha closer to me, “So it's alright.”

Yoo Yeonha looked like she was about to cry any second now.

— Stop bullshitting!

Destruction exploded in anger. His entire body was radiating evil mana as his tentacles shot out from his back. His evil mana and heat were slowly starting to fill the tunnel.

“Let’s talk about the specifics later.”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha still looked lost, but dealing with Destruction was our priority right now.

“Everyone,” I looked at Chae Nayun and Rachel.

Thankfully, both of them were ready for battle.

“Yeah... We can talk about it later, Kim Hajin,” Chae Nayun replied as she gathered mana into her sword.

Rachel summoned her spirits.

Destruction continued to gather his mana until he slowly started to change form. He was no longer a human at this point and looked too hideous to even be called a djinn.

He was now nothing but a monster surrounded by tentacles.

I took out my Desert Eagle and aimed at him.

* * *

We got into formation immediately.

Rachel and Chae Nayun were up front while Yi Jiyeon and I were at the backlines. Yoo Yeonha was supposed to be at the center as an attacking supporter, but she was still not in the condition to fight.

“Haaap!”

Chae Nayun swung her sword and pushed Destruction back.

Destruction had grown to the size of a golem, so he easily blocked the giant sword with his hand and shot out tentacles from his back.

I changed my Desert Eagle into an assault rifle and focused on all of Destruction's tentacles. My main role was to shoot down his tentacles while Chae Nayun and Rachel dealt with him.

Chae Nayun was the tanker and damage dealer while Rachel watched her back. Both of them were already powerful enough to stand toe-to-toe against Destruction.

"Get a grip! Yoo Yeonha!" I shouted at her while supporting the other two.

Yoo Yeonha gripped her whip while crying. She wrapped it around a tentacle before channeling her mana.

"You son of a bitch!" Chae Nayun cried out as her sword grew bigger.

Yi Jiyeon cast her buff on the sword that was now the size of a pillar.

Kwaaaaang!

The blue greatsword slashed Destruction.

He tried to block the sword with his hands, but Rachel swung Galatine and cut his wrists off.

"...!"

Destruction was no longer a human at this point. He let out a hideous cry befitting a monster and gathered mana into his mouth.

I was waiting for this moment. I changed the assault rifle into a rifle. It was a rifle that could only hold five bullets in its magazine, a lever-action rifle. This rifle was far stronger at close range compared to a sniper rifle, and it was designed to maximize the damage a bullet could deal.

I activated [Bullet Time].

[Setting Saved – Exorcist Bullet]

[You have consumed 100 SP to change the bullets' settings.]

I added a setting to my bullets by adding [Exorcism] to it. On top of that, I infused stigma into the bullets.

Click! Clack!

I unleashed the five bullets that were strong enough to eliminate Destruction.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang!

The bullets went straight for the monster's mouth.

“...!”

The bullets struck the evil mana the monster was gathering, and the sound of shattering glass reverberated in the tunnel.

The shock was visible in the monster's eyes as the shattered evil mana went wild.

Chae Nayun seized the opening to swing her greatsword and cut the monster's body.

Kwaaaaaaaaang!

A red light started coming out from where Chae Nayun cut.

“Oh SHIT!” Chae Nayun screamed.

Destruction self-destructed.

* * *

I opened my eyes. The sun was shining down on me, and a gentle breeze enveloped me.

I felt someone gently caressing my hair. I looked up and saw that it was Yoo Yeonha.

“...”

I didn't say anything since it felt like a dream. On second thought, I hoped we didn't die together after getting swept up when Destruction self-destructed...

However, Yoo Yeonha didn't say anything as she smiled sadly.

I couldn't hold it in any longer and asked, “What happened?”

“We obtained one fragment, but Destruction managed to escape...” she replied and took out a fragment from her pocket.

It was a golden shard.

“Then where are we?”

“We're still stuck in the tower's fragment. It's such a hassle, right?”

“What about the others?”

“They already went to raid the other fragments. They wanted to give us some time alone.”

That was all Yoo Yeonha said. It seemed like she wanted to say something else, but she continued hesitating.

“Hey... about that...” she muttered as tears started forming in her eyes.

I could hear just how hard it was for her to squeeze her voice out.

“I have something to say...” she said.

I let out a sigh and scratched the back of my neck, “What is it?”

“Umm...”

The sound of the tree branches gently swaying gave us a sense of tranquility. Yoo Yeonha hurriedly avoided my eyes and looked at the tree branches.

“This is a secret...” she muttered.

I started racking my brain thinking of a way to deal with this situation. I lied at the spur of the moment, but now I had to clean up after the mess I caused...

“This is something I really wanted to tell you before it’s too late... for the last time,” she continued.

The final words, ‘for the last time,’ stabbed my heart like a dagger.

The sun was no longer shining down on us. A shadow in the shape of leaves covered Yoo Yeonha’s face.

She smiled sadly.

I had no idea how much she had contemplated and how difficult it must’ve been for her in that short period.

“I love you.”

I clenched my fists after hearing those words.

My heart was screaming at me right now, and I knew that I had to tell her the truth...

...Before it was too late.

Side Stories 99

What If Story (14)

“I love you.”

I grabbed Yoo Yeonha’s arm as soon as she said those words and pulled her into my embrace. I could smell the scent of roses from her.

She froze and her breathing stopped. She didn’t move even a bit, so I had to check just to make sure she was still alive.

I poked her waist and she flinched.

“Euk...! Let go...! I...”

“I also have a secret.”

I didn’t give her the chance to speak. I wrapped my arms around her waist and gritted my teeth. My heart was beating wildly, but I couldn’t tell if it was my heart or hers that was beating right now.

I could feel her breath on my shoulder, and tension gripped my neck.

I was worried. What if she thought that what I was about to say was just a bunch of lies? Or what if she thought that I had gone insane?

However, I really had to tell her this. I wanted to tell her this at least.

I breathed in and placed my hand on the back of her head before saying, “I... I’m not from this world.”

“...?”

I couldn’t see her reaction properly, but I could hear her uneven breathing.

She was probably in disbelief right now and doubting what she just heard. I mean, even I never imagined that I would end up saying something straight out of a sci-fi movie.

I swore to keep it a secret and not tell anyone in this life, but I guess...

"I might sound insane, but I'm not lying. I'm from another world."

"..."

Yoo Yeonha still didn't respond.

I started to tell her numerous things. I told her about the other earth in a parallel world where neither monsters nor heroes existed. I told her how I was just an ordinary person in that world...

However, I didn't tell her that I was a writer in that world. I also kept the fact that she was just a character I wrote a secret as well.

Aside from that, I told her everything else.

"So that's me in a nutshell. Do you believe me?" I asked as I slowly let go of her.

Yoo Yeonha held onto my shoulder and stood up.

She looked at me and said something strange in response, "I heard that these kinds of things happen from time to time..."

"Huh?"

I was surprised when she said that. Did Kim Suho tell her the truth as well?

"Yes, the brain tends to fabricate a memory to justify their own strength and cover their weaknesses."

“...”

“I’m not saying there’s something wrong with you, but... I suspect that the condition for using your ability is the distortion of your memories. I’m used to stories like this since it’s quite common,” Yoo Yeonha calmly replied.

I intently stared at her for a moment before flicking her forehead.

Tak!

The sound of a walnut cracking could be heard.

“Kyak! What are you doing?!”

“Ha... I mustered the courage to tell you, but you’re treating me like a mental patient...”

To be honest, her theory was quite convincing. However, I didn’t doubt my memories one bit. The one absolute proof I had for that was the stigma on my body.

“Hey... T-That hurt...” Yoo Yeonha complained while rubbing her forehead. Then she asked, “So you’re really telling the truth...?”

“Yes, so I wasn’t born here. That’s why the past that Destruction showed us doesn’t apply to me since that wasn’t me in the first place.”

“Then whose past was that...?”

“I have no idea... I’m guessing the me from this parallel world who switched with me. Both are probably me, but we’re different at the same time.”

I made up a convincing answer on the spot, but it seemed that Yoo Yeonha was still suspicious of me. Well, I didn’t blame her since she was probably used to suspecting others as she was the vice guild master of Essence of the Strait.

She would probably be just a corpse if she stopped suspecting people...

“Are you sure you’re not making this up...? Ack!”

I flicked her forehead again and it was swollen after I hit the same spot.

I let out a sigh and muttered, “Ah~ It feels so liberating after telling this to someone~”

“Still, why don’t you go and get tested... Kyak!”

I didn’t hit her three times in a row. I simply pretended that I was going to and she immediately raised her arms to block her forehead.

I used the opening to place my hands under her armpits and tickle her.

“Hiyak! W-Wait... S-Stop it...!!”

She fell to the ground at my ambush and she laughed while crying in agony. We rolled on the grass until we were face to face with me on top of her.

The green grass as the backdrop made her eyes look especially lovely.

“You told me that you love me, right?” I asked.

She blushed and avoided my eyes.

I caressed her cheek and made her look into my eyes again.

“I too, will try to become a person fitting for you.”

These were my honest feelings. I wasn’t particularly handsome or well off. My height was slightly above average at most. The only thing I had was [Setting Intervention] and stigma, which was nothing compared to Kim Suho’s gifts.

However, I wanted to become a person suitable for her. A person she wouldn't feel embarrassed having beside her...

Rather than change her as a person... I wanted to be the one to improve.

'You can stay the same as you are. I will be the one to change. After all, I'm the visitor here that has to adapt to his surroundings.'

"A-Alright... I got it, so can you..." Yoo Yeonha tried to push me away.

I pushed her hands away and pressed myself closer to her.

Yoo Yeonha tried to free herself from me, but I held the back of her neck to prevent her from escaping.

I stared right into her moist eyes that were forming waves like a calm lake.

"H-Hey...!"

I kissed her.

Yoo Yeonha tightly closed her eyes and closed her mouth, but soon let out a moan and opened her mouth. I gently tickled her lips with my tongue.

Our lips started to naturally intertwine with one another, and our bodies pressed against each other.

We could feel each other's body heat as we got closer and closer...

* * *

"H-Hey, we're here. Was everyone waiting for us?"

We went back to the others while making awkward faces. They looked at us with suspicion in their eyes and closely inspected our faces.

“What were you guys doing?” Chae Nayun asked with her arms crossed over her chest.

I glanced at Yoo Yeonha before replying, “It took some time for me to wake up.”

“Is he telling the truth, Yeonha?”

“Yeah, he slept for quite a long time.”

Fortunately, our vice guild master’s acting skills were impeccable. Yoo Yeonha calmly brushed her hair and approached the others.

“Rather than that, what happened to Destruction?”

“We’re chasing him down. They say he’s at the center of the fragments. I think he’s the one who interfered with the tower raid in the first place.”

“Really? Is there anything happening in particular to the tower aside from that?”

“No... but more importantly... Tell us in detail. You know, what we saw at that evacuation shelter. Were you really aware of it all?” Chae Nayun asked.

Ding! Ding!

Our smartwatches rang at the best time after reconnecting to the internet. All of us immediately checked our smartwatches. This was how scary smartwatch addiction could be...

— Can you hear me, Hajin?

Jin Seyeon was the first to call me.

“Yes, I can hear you. What’s the matter?”

— Nothing much. We are proceeding smoothly with the fragment subjugation thanks to your map. Only two or three fragments remain.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly stretched out her hand and grabbed my smartwatch. She tried to yank it from my wrist, but failed to do so.

‘I mean... these are locked with fingerprint biometrics... you know?’

“Argh... Why won’t this thing come off...” she grumbled while wrestling with my smartwatch.

I let out a sigh and took it off for her.

— Hello? Hajin? Hello?

“Yes, this is the vice guild master of Essence of the Strait, Yoo Yeonha speaking. Please speak to me instead.”

— Ah, okay. The largest fragment is at the center, and we are going to gather at the center to subjugate it. There will be a limit of one hundred participants, so I advise that you come as fast as you can. I will send you the coordinates of the map.”

“Alright, then I will be hanging up now.”

Yoo Yeonha ended the call and put my smartwatch in her pocket.

“Hey, why are you keeping that?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t say anything. Instead, she blinked at me a few times. I tried to put my hand in her pocket, but she slapped my hand before retreating a few steps.

“I have something to check,” she said.

“But that’s my smartwatch...”

“So? Who gave you permission to speak to her?”

Yoo Yeonha walked out after that.

Chae Nayun, Rachel, and the rest looked at me with intrigued eyes thanks to Yoo Yeonha's unnatural behavior.

* * *

Eighteen guilds and one hundred heroes gathered to subjugate the tower. There were even heroes from the Temple of Justice, magicians from the magic tower, and three of the top heroes as well.

All of them used the map I drew and quickly subjugated the fragments. We were now at the last fragment after a while.

"This is quite the army," Yoo Yeonha muttered while looking outside our tent.

I nodded in response.

Chae Nayun, Yi Jiyeon, and Rachel already joined up with the rest of the army.

"Yeah, they're all people I've heard of."

"I agree, but..."

Yoo Yeonha started squirming once again. I wondered why she had been acting like a worm since a while ago...?

"What is it?"

"This..."

She pointed at my hand on her shoulder. I was using her as a crutch by making excuses that Destruction injured me.

"Aren't you better now? Can you let go...? Until when do you plan to keep holding onto me...?"

“I am, but... you can make me let go then.”

It was embarrassing for me to admit it, but Yoo Yeonha was stronger than me in terms of strength. I was an irregular who excelled in certain fields, but my stats were hopeless.

“I mean... that’s not what I meant...”

“Then what?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha blushed and didn’t say anything after that. I buried my face in her shoulder and laughed. I guess I tickled her judging by how her body shook whenever I laughed.

“Haa... you really... please don’t do that...”

Anyway, this was probably enough. I pulled back my arm and gently pushed her forward.

“It’s time for you to go and rack up some achievements. I’ll be protecting you from afar.”

“Ah... sure... okay...” she grumbled once I let go of her.

I stared at her.

I, no, we confessed to each other in the fragment. The vice guild master sincerely accepted my feelings, but I had no idea what she was going to do about it from now on.

I cupped her chin and kissed her.

“...!” Yoo Yeonha gasped in surprise.

It was a short kiss, but it was more than enough to sap the strength out of her body and make her fall into my embrace.

We stayed like that for quite a while until she suddenly moved her hands and touched my clothes. Unfortunately, she was arranging the creases on my clothes. She straightened my collar and patted the dirt off my shirt.

“Don’t run away this time...” she muttered.

I smiled and nodded in response.

“You’re one to talk. Are you sure you’re not going to pretend I’m a stranger when tomorrow comes?”

“...I’m not like that.”

“Really? Dang... I liked that part of you...”

Yoo Yeonha narrowed her eyes and glared at me. I pinched her small cute nose in response.

She flinched when I pinched her nose.

“Ah, really! Can you stop teasing me?!”

“I think you’re enjoying it.”

“W-When did I? Are you crazy? I think you’re crazy...”

Yoo Yeonha blushed before she let out a sigh. The clouds receded and the sun shined brightly. Her smile was still brighter than the sun in my eyes.

“Then, I’ll be going now.”

“Okay.”

“I hope you’ll learn how to differentiate business and personal matters from now on.”

“Like I said, you’re one to talk.”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about? I’m very good at it. Anyways, I’ll be going now. Watch my back. You’re back to being my bodyguard, remember that.”

“Sure, sure~”

Yoo Yeonha patted my shoulder and turned around. I watched her back just like she asked me to before climbing up a tree.

— Wow~ That’s Yoo Yeonha.

She finally reached the main tent and various people came up to shake hands with her. I leaned against the tree and involuntarily smiled.

I was feeling a sense of happiness that I had never felt after coming to this world. I felt content with life... Of course, I could no longer return to my real world.

I would no longer be able to see my family, friends, and everything else I left behind. There were times this thought came crashing down on me and made me spiral into depression, but this world taught me one thing.

If you couldn’t avoid it, then just enjoy it.

Some people might think I was just brainwashing myself and self-justifying my predicament, but it didn’t matter if I was self-justifying it to run away from the truth. I was now able to sincerely enjoy life thanks to my vice guild master.

Then a voice in my earpiece disturbed my train of thought.

— Are you watching? Are you watching over me?

Her playful voice tickled my ears.

“Yeah,” I replied with a smile. “I’m only looking at you.”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t respond and continued nonchalantly talking to the other heroes. However, I could clearly see with my own eyes that her ears were flushing red.

I suddenly felt teasing her, so I whispered.

— !

Yoo Yeonha flinched after hearing my voice.

— Vice Guild Master? Are you alright?

— I-It's nothing... I'm okay.

The heroes around her were concerned, but she was busy looking around trying to find me.

“Hey, aren't you going to respond?” I playfully teased her.

— I mean... I told you not to do that all of a sudden... I told you to differentiate between business and personal matters... Ah? No, it's nothing. I received a report, that's all. Yes.

She tried her best to continue her conversation with the heroes.

I laughed and teased her one more time, “Aren't you going to answer me? I'm going to run away again if you don't~”

Yoo Yeonha puffed her cheeks and frowned. Then she whispered in a tiny voice.

—... Me too.

Side Stories 100

What If Story (15)

[Breaking News. The tower's effects have been successfully neutralized. The heroes used the map drawn by the professional mercenary Black Wolf and...]

It only took 52 hours, 30 minutes, and 15 seconds to neutralize the tower's effects and subjugate it. Unfortunately, they failed to catch Destruction, but there were other massive benefits to this event. One example would be that the tower fragments we collected held the potential to be an extremely valuable source of energy.

"You want me to use it?" I asked.

Yoo Yeonha took out a vial containing a tower fragment and gave it to me. The fragment was giving off a luster like moonlight.

"Yes, we obtained four and decided to give you one. I'm sure you'll use it well. Besides, you're quite good at making furniture, right?"

"What does that have to do with this...?"

"I'm sure you can make some weapon out of it, right?"

I was in the limousine with Yoo Yeonha, who was completely leaning on my shoulder. I reached around with my free hand and played with her earlobe while we chatted.

"Hang~ Hey, why do you keep playing with my ears? Do you have an ear fetish or something? Are you a pervert?"

I responded by putting my finger in her ear. She trembled before slamming her head into my chin.

“Hey, that hurts...”

“Please... don’t touch my ears...” she said with moist eyes.

I rubbed my chin and switched on my smartwatch.

[The specialist Black Wolf is Yoo Yeonha’s ex-bodyguard?]

[Black Wolf and Yoo Yeonha reunite with a strange vibe between them...]

“But what do we do? There seems to already be a scandal about us,” I said and projected a hologram of the article.

Yoo Yeonha read the article and replied, “It’s fine. We don’t have to concern ourselves with gossip like this.”

Bzzt!

Yoo Yeonha was confidently smiling when she suddenly received a message. She switched her smartwatch on and checked it.

Then, she froze after reading the contents of the message.

I peeked over her shoulder and read it too.

[Vice guild master, the paparazzi took a picture of you and Black Wolf getting into the limousine. They are asking what your relationship with him is.]

It seemed like a major news outlet this time judging from how they contacted Essence of the Strait before publishing the news.

“Huh? What’s with your face? Are you going to brush it off again?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha didn’t say anything in response to my sneering. She looked like she wanted to say something, but both of her cheeks puffed up.

I tapped her puffed cheeks with my finger.

“Pwuuuuu!” she spat out the air in her mouth.

“I’m alright, so you can do whatever you want. I don’t mind even if you keep it a secret forever.”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh and buried her face in my chest. She wrapped her arms around my waist and said, “...I’ll tell them.”

I patted her back in response.

Then, she added, “...Not now, but someday. Now’s not the time.”

I knew she would say that and flicked her forehead.

“Ack!”

* * *

Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep...

It was four-thirty in the morning. My alarm was ringing earlier than usual to start the day.

However, I was already long awake even before my alarm rang. I just couldn’t move because Yoo Yeonha was clinging to me. Both of her arms wrapped around my body and her leg was on top of my stomach.

I felt like a body pillow for some reason...

Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep... Beep...

The alarm kept ringing.

I pressed Yoo Yeonha’s nose, cheeks, and lips. However, there was no response. I pinched her nose and she grimaced while making sounds that showed she was annoyed.

Still, she didn't wake up.

"What beautiful lips you have..." I said as I traced my finger on her lips.

Tap... Tap... Tap... Tap...

I tapped my finger on her lips when they suddenly spread open and devoured my finger.

I flinched and pulled my finger out. Then, I instinctively smelled my finger. It surprisingly smelled good like the scent of roses... How was that possible...?

I placed my finger on her lips again, and she devoured it just like before.

She sucked my finger for a while and opened her eyes when I slowly pulled my finger out.

"..."

She stared at me for five seconds without saying anything.

Then she said in a sleepy voice, "...Food."

I smiled and got out of bed.

"What do you want to eat? Ramyun?" I asked her.

"I don't like ramyun," she brazenly lied through her teeth.

I massaged her shoulders before heading to the kitchen. Kimchi stew was probably the best for breakfast. I quickly whipped up breakfast for my hard-working vice guild master.

She was already on the table with her spoon and chopsticks in hand.

“Here,” I placed the food in front of her.

Yoo Yeonha suddenly grabbed my shoulder and kissed me.

I patted her on the head and said, “You didn’t brush your teeth.”

“I can forgo washing every day and it won’t matter. It’s one of my gifts.”

“Really...? That’s interesting...”

Did she possess such a gift...? Anyways, I just nodded and sat opposite of her.

“Please send me the schedule for today,” she said while scooping the stew into her bowl.

Ziing...

Her smartwatch projected a hologram image.

“How does it look today?”

“Who knows?”

Yoo Yeonha smirked and stretched her legs towards me. She placed her feet on my chair.

“What do you think it will look like~?” she asked before flashing a sensual and playful smile.

No, she was trying to look sensual, but to me, she looked more like a king and I was her servant...

I stared at her for a while before grabbing her ankle and running my fingers between her toes.

“What are you doing?! Hiik! W-Wait... Ah... No... Stop... S-Stop... I’m sorry... Haaang... ~”

This was not my intended use when I created [Dexterity], but it sure did come in handy in situations like this.

* * *

I wore a coat and left the mansion. It was currently six in the morning, but the sky was still dark since it was winter.

“What happened to the shard I gave you last time?”

“Oh, that one?”

Yoo Yeonha asked me as soon as we got into the limousine. I opened my hand and showed her aether.

“I stuck it in here.”

“Oh~ Good job~” Yoo Yeonha nodded in satisfaction.

She was looking at me with a smile, but I couldn’t help but feel that she was scanning my face right now.

“You know...” she said in a serious voice.

“Hmm?”

“I’ve been thinking about this since last time, but... you’ve gotten more handsome, you know that?”

“Pfft!” I failed to suppress my laughter.

Just on a side note, I did enchant aether with [Killer Smile] using my [Jar of Greed].

The effect of that was...

— The user's charm stat will increase by 0.002 every twenty-four hours and will increase by a maximum of one. (However, it will not be able to exceed nine under any circumstances.)

I added this three years ago, so I already increased my charm by one and the Fragment of Memory further enhanced aether's effect.

— Aether's effect +40%

I gained an extra 0.4 charm, which brought my total to 5.8.

The limit for a human being was nine and most people averaged four. Now I could say that I was within the top ten to twenty percent of the population based on looks alone.

"I think you're just blinded by love," I replied.

After all, I saw no reason to come clean.

Yoo Yeonha retorted with a frown, "Blinded by what? Don't you know that I'm a very objective person?"

"But I'm really good, right? Maybe it's because of that?"

I wasn't really bragging, but I performed very well thanks to [Dexterity]. Also, I could use my SP and add a suitable gift if my performance started to slow down later on.

Yoo Yeonha flinched and pushed me away, "W-What are you talking about? I... I have no idea what you mean...!"

We arrived at the portal station. I got out of the limousine before she did. Yoo Yeonha muttered something along the lines of, 'It's nothing like that, so don't misunderstand me...' while getting out.

Our destination today was London. We were passing through the VIP lane at the portal station.

"Wow..."

My eyes widened as soon as we arrived in London. There was a huge crowd waiting for us. Everyone was there to greet the vice guild master of Essence of the Strait and the CEO of Essential Dynamics.

The crowd screamed and followed the limousine that Yoo Yeonha's double was in.

"Is it our turn to go now?" she asked.

We were hiding at the corner of the portal station in disguises. Her hair was golden because of the wig.

"Sure," I replied.

This was my first time going on a date like this, but it wasn't bad at all.

I wrapped my arm around her shoulder as we walked. We stopped by here and there without being conscious of the people around us.

"Hey, do you want to eat ice cream?" Yoo Yeonha asked while pointing at an ice cream stand on the street.

"Sounds good."

We went to buy two ice creams. I ordered chocolate vanilla while she ordered mint chocolate.

"Is that even good...? Doesn't it taste like toothpaste...?"

"It's alright, but why did you order chocolate vanilla? Are you a kid or what?"

I looked at her while she busily slurped her ice cream. Then I stole her cone away and shoved it in her face.

"Ack!"

The ice cream cone was clinging to her forehead and made her look like a messy unicorn.

“Look, it’s a mint chocolate unicorn.”

“You... really...” she muttered while glaring at me.

I shrugged and retorted, “Who told you to order mint chocolate? Why are you eating toothpaste?”

“...”

Yoo Yeonha wiped the ice cream off her face with mana. Then, her hand shot out towards my ice cream.

I immediately reacted by showing immaculate weaving.

“Ha, amateur.”

“Dammit... Hand it over. I’ll turn you into a chocolate vanilla unicorn...”

A scuffle for the ice cream broke out between us, but it soon came to an end when my hand touched her armpit.

Yoo Yeonha went, “Hihhi... hehehe...” before falling to the ground. “Hang~ Don’t... Don’t do that... that’s cheating...”

In the end, she pouted and ran into my embrace after losing. I wrapped my arms around her waist and embraced her.

London's cool, gentle breeze blew and the sun was shining down on us. Quite a lot of people were glaring at us because of our public display of affection, but we didn’t care. We didn’t even stop to think, “What if we get caught?”

Whatever happened would happen. What was important to me was that I was with the person I loved.

We finished our three hour date and reached the meeting place, Clancy Islet.

“We were waiting for you, vice guild master,” Rachel greeted us.

She was waiting for us at the Royal Tower located on the island of extravagance.

Yoo Yeonha smiled and replied, “Yes, it is nice to meet you, Guild Master Rachel.”

“Have you enjoyed your tour around the city?”

“Yes, the scenery was quite nice. It is indeed London.”

Both of them chatted on the way to the meeting room.

“This is the place,” Rachel guided us to a room with a round table.

Various guild executives and government officials were waiting for us at the table.

“Please, have a seat,” an old butler guided Yoo Yeonha to her seat.

I stood right behind her.

“Now, we shall commence discussion on the alliance between Essence of the Strait and the English Royal Court guild...”

An English official started the presentation followed by a speech from Yoo Yeonha and Rachel. The meeting itself was quite casual. The participants even threw around light banter here and there.

“...”

Everyone was laughing except for me. There was a place I had to visit on this island and it wasn't this meeting room.

I suppressed a yawn that nearly escaped my lips. Thankfully, I was saved by an announcement that they would take a break.

Yoo Yeonha glanced at me before saying, “You can go out and have fun if you’re bored.”

“Really? Alright then.”

“...Huh?”

I immediately went out and started walking to the casino like a diligent employee. I ran into Rain, who was interestingly my successor and predecessor.

‘Hmm... I guess I can trust her.’

I approached her and said, “Hello, Knight Rain. I have to go somewhere for a bit. May I request that you keep watch of Vice Guild Master Yoo Yeonha?”

“Ah, certainly. I will go to her at once.”

The knight easily agreed and I merrily ran to the casino.

* * *

I returned to our Clancy Islet penthouse with a huge bag of cash, but I flinched the moment I stepped through the doors.

Yoo Yeonha was sitting on the sofa and glaring at me. I could feel a drop of sweat travel down the back of my neck after sensing my impending doom.

She motioned with her chin for me to sit down.

“Where have you been?”

“Oh... I was making money. Look at this.”

I showed her the bag full of cash and gold bars. She peeked into the bag and scoffed in disbelief.

“I made one billion won with one hundred million won. I was hoping to contribute to our expenses...”

“Boring.”

“...I was trying to be funny.”

“Hmph!” Yoo Yeonha scoffed and turned her head.

I wobbled and sat beside her. Then I stared at her face.

“You told me to go. I just did what you told me to.”

“...It’s not because of that, you know?”

“Then what? Was there a problem in the meeting?”

Yoo Yeonha frowned and glared at me. However, she couldn’t say anything since she really did tell me to go. She knew very well that I wasn’t the type who would bother trying to understand what she really meant.

In the end, she let out a sigh of resignation and said, “You know...”

“Yes?”

Yoo Yeonha changed the subject.

“I was thinking about it for a while now... Is it true? I mean, is it really true?” she muttered while looking at my collarbone.

“Hmm? What’s true?” I tilted my head in confusion.

I found it challenging to understand what she was talking about. I wondered what she was considering to be fake this time...?

I kneaded her cheeks and asked, “What do you mean by that?”

Only then did she look up at me before immediately looking down at the floor. She replied, “...What you told me last time. The thing I said about your brain making things up... you know... that thing where you’re from another world...”

“Oh, that’s all true,” I replied without an ounce of hesitation.

I looked her straight in the eyes and said, “There’s no lie in it. It’s all true. I can’t return to my world anymore. I’ve lost everything already.”

“...”

“So you’re my everything now.”

Yoo Yeonha was dumbfounded for a moment before her face turned bright red like a tomato.

I noticed that her eyes suddenly became lively again as if she had something to look forward to in life now.

Her eyes shot open when I pushed her down and gently bit her neck.

“Eup... W-Wait...” she moaned while trying to push me back.

However, I didn’t stop. I ran my fingers up her waist before pulling her into my embrace.

I licked her lips and she let out a sensual moan while digging her fingers into my back.

We could feel our hearts beating against each other. Our skin, lips, bodies, and hearts became one for the remainder of the day.

...We spent the entire night together until we fell asleep in each other’s arms.

Morning came, and shockingly...

News articles about our romantic relationship spread all over the world.

Side Stories 101

What If Story (END)

The news articles popped up almost simultaneously around the world.

I could see steam coming out of Yoo Yeonha's ears.

“...”

“Let me take a look,” I said as I pushed my face towards her smartwatch.

[The vice guild master of Essence of the Strait was found on a date with her bodyguard in Paris. Both were wearing disguises.]

[Vice guild master Yoo Yeonha left for London at two-thirty in the afternoon to meet with the English Royal Court guild and...]

“What the? Isn't that today?”

It was indeed a picture of us in Paris. It would be difficult to refute it since we were together the entire time.

Yoo Yeonha let out a sigh, “Haa...”

“How did they find out? Was it someone on the inside?”

“Phew...”

“But this news outlet has balls. I have to give them that.”

The vice guild master of Essence of the Strait, Yoo Yeonha, was powerful enough to shake a country's very core. Digging up the personal life of someone like her indeed required guts.

I couldn't help but be in awe of their bravery while wondering if they were actually just stupid.

"No," Yoo Yeonha shook her head. She pointed to the end of the article and added, "It's my mom."

"Huh...? Your mom? I mean, your mother?"

Yeohwa News was a well-known news outlet that was acquired and run by Jin Yeojung's family.

"Tsk..." Yoo Yeonha clicked her tongue.

I didn't know what to say, so I just ended up scratching the back of my neck.

I knew that Yoo Yeonha's mother, Jin Yeojung, tended to act rashly. I never imagined it would be this bad...

"I think I know what her intention is, but..."

Yoo Yeonha gritted her teeth and switched off her smartwatch.

I started to massage her head to reduce her stress and tension.

"Ah, ah... Hang... ~"

Those kinds of sounds escaped from her lips.

"It's not bad... Ah, yes... right there... Hiik!"

"What's not bad?"

"That is... ah... so I was saying... hang~... Yeohwa News is currently planning to establish a cable channel, but those opposed to it are preventing it by mentioning Yeohwa News' ties to Essence of the Strait. After all, my mom owns the news outlet... Hiik! Hang... ~ but this will prove that there's no relation between the two and..."

I was amazed at how she was able to think about this situation objectively from a business point of view.

“Haa... That’s enough. My head has cleared up now.”

I stopped massaging her head and hugged her from the back.

She leaned against my chest and continued, “But I’m glad the news broke out while we were on Clancy Islet. Normal reporters can’t come here.”

“I think all hell will break loose once we step out though...”

“Oh, right... You have a helicopter, right? I remember you using it,” she turned around and said.

“Yeah, I have one.”

I recently started using a helicopter that I modified with [Settings Intervention]. It was connected to my smartwatch, so it could come wherever I called it and would go back if I told it to. It wasn’t a living breathing creature, but more like it was programmed to understand my commands.

“I can call it as long as the English government allows it, but this islet is off-limits to flying vehicles, no?”

“Hehe... Do you really think they’ll refuse?” Yoo Yeonha said with a haughty smile.

* * *

— That’s why I told you not to get too close with a mercenary. Anyways, I guess there’s no helping it. How can I sit by and watch my daughter go down the wrong path?

The next day, Yoo Yeonha was forced to grab the back of her neck because of her mother’s brazenness.

She was currently in a limousine parked in Gangnam.

“Mother...”

— Enough. I’m going to hold a press conference soon. It’s up to you to decide what is best for all of us.

“...”

Yoo Yeonha gritted her teeth while thinking, ‘I see... So this is how you want to play it... but how can someone be so petty towards their own daughter...?’

“Alright. I’ll do as you say. It’s up to me to decide,” Yoo Yeonha said before ending the call.

“...Shall we go?” Yi Jinah asked from the front seat.

Yoo Yeonha nodded and replied, “Yes, let’s go.”

“Alright,” Yi Jinah said before she got out of the limousine and opened the door for Yoo Yeonha.

Yoo Yeonha stepped out of the limousine and a horde of cameras and microphones ran up to her.

“Vice guild master! Please look here!”

“Picture! Please take one picture for us!”

She walked through this chaotic stretch while being reminded of a childhood memory. She was teased by others for coming from a family of slaves solely because her grandfather used to be one of Chae Joochul’s servants.

She was young back then and the teasing completely shattered her self-esteem. She didn’t know how to stand up for herself.

However, that child started to harbor a grand ambition.

She swore to bring all of them under her feet one day and made sure they would regret every word they said to her. She would show them that she was much better than them by becoming someone they would never dare to even dream of.

That resolve probably created who she was today.

The question now was... what would that ambitious side of Yoo Yeonha do about this situation?

This issue wasn't related to her success or ambition. It was quite cruel to put it this way, but Kim Hajin wouldn't be that helpful in achieving her goals.

He wasn't a hero and was only a somewhat famous mercenary.

She wondered what the repercussions would be the moment she admitted to their relationship, but she knew in her head that this relationship would cause more losses than profit.

More importantly, it was too early.

The public never looked favorably at the romantic relationship of a young celebrity. Their reaction would be obvious if the other party was a lowly mercenary. Some would try to defend him by saying he was her bodyguard, but that didn't change the fact that he was a mercenary in the end.

The problem with being a mercenary was that they were no different from treasure hunters or scavengers who did anything and everything for their own profit.

She knew very well that her one million young followers would turn their backs on her the moment she admitted to the relationship.

...She suddenly realized that thinking about all of this after calling for a press conference only gave credence to the fact that her mother, Jin Yeojung, knew her very well.

Her mother knew what she would think, what choices she would make, and what she would do. Basically, she was dancing in her mother's palm.

Yoo Yeonha found herself standing in the press conference hall after arranging her thoughts.

“Haa...”

She was trying to compose herself before starting the press conference, but her attempts were continuously disturbed by the cameras flashing in her face.

Yoo Yeonha looked at the cameras before proceeding to read her script, “Hello, I am here today to make a statement regarding the numerous issues around me these days...”

She stopped and looked around the press conference hall. Chae Nayun was in the third row with Kim Hajin beside her.

Chae Nayun smirked after they locked eyes.

“I am the vice guild master of Essence of the Straits as well as an intermediate high rank hero. I understand that the public and media are curious about my personal life, but these kinds of excessive...”

Yoo Yeonha stopped mid-sentence, which was uncharacteristic of her.

Her eyes were looking at Chae Nayun again while she was busy chatting with Kim Hajin. She was nonchalantly touching his shoulder, pushing her face towards his, and even touching his thigh.

Yoo Yeonha crumpled the script she was holding and threw it to the floor.

“I, Yoo Yeonha, am not dating the Black Wolf Kim Hajin,” she said.

The cameras went wild with their flashes again as the reporters nodded. They said stuff along the lines of, ‘I knew it’ or ‘Why would she?’ They were ready to put this scandal to rest.

Everyone was one hundred percent certain that Yoo Yeonha would deny it even if it was true.

However, her next words were so shocking that even the cameras stopped taking pictures of her.

“We are getting married.”

Chae Nayun and Kim Hajin’s jaws dropped. The reporters also dropped everything they were doing and looked at her.

“We are not dating. We are getting married.”

Silence ensued in the hall for exactly three seconds before all hell broke loose.

* * *

We were on our way back to the mansion after the press conference.

“...Will you be okay after doing that?” I asked while patting Yoo Yeonha on her back.

She had her head buried in my thighs while trembling. I had no idea if she was embarrassed or regretting what she said, but she stayed like that for quite a while until she suddenly turned towards me.

“It’s all because of Chae Nayun... No, never mind...”

She tried to sound as nonchalant as possible, but I could see her cheeks and ears still flushed red from embarrassment.

She wiped her tears away and told me while fidgeting restlessly, “I’m content with you. No, I’ve decided to think like that from now on.

“Hmm... You knew I would agree to marry you?”

“What? Is that what’s important right now? Argh!” Yoo Yeonha drew her claws and charged at me.

I avoided her attack and hugged her, “I’m just joking. I’m okay with it, but what about your mother?”

“I have no idea... but it doesn’t matter if I manage to convince her or not. I’ve decided to be a disobedient daughter from now on,” she grumbled.

I simply smiled and tapped her pouting lips.

“...You know,” she muttered and held my hand.

“What?”

“Then... are we really going to get married?”

I frowned at her sudden question. Did she suddenly develop dementia or something? ‘Hey, you’re the one who said that without consulting me...’

“Well...”

However, I couldn’t stop myself from smiling. I decided to let her hear what she wanted to for a change.

“I will marry you ten times over if you want to.”

* * *

[Yoo Yeonha’s shocking announcement...]

[Who is the mercenary, Kim Hajin?]

[Essence of the Strait is shaken by Yoo Yeonha’s sudden announcement. Their subsidiaries’ market values are taking a beating.]

[The truth behind the rushed announcement...]

[Are they truly in love?]

[Yoo Yeonha and Kim Hajin have made their first official outing as a couple.]

[Yeohwa News has finally obtained the rights to start a cable channel after one year...]

Time flew by quickly thanks to the endless stream of news about us.

Quite a lot of things happened over the year. I raided a dungeon with Yoo Yeonha, accompanied her to a field, and resumed my mercenary work.

The number of terrorist plots I stopped numbered twelve and I was awarded the title of ‘Top Mercenary’ in South Korea. It was an award equivalent to being an intermediate high rank hero.

[Essence of the Strait’s partnership with the mercenary Black Wolf.]

Today, I would become an official member of Essence of the Strait. This was the reason why I poured everything I had into working as a mercenary.

“Here you go. It’s your name card,” Yoo Yeonha said as she passed a stack of cards to me.

I scratched the back of my neck in embarrassment and said, “Then is it over?”

“Yes, you’re now the top mercenary and are more than qualified to be our partner,” Yoo Yeonha replied while fidgeting with my name card.

“Hmm... Then that means...” I muttered before ambushing her lips with mine.

Yoo Yeonha flinched at the sudden kiss, but didn’t bother pushing me back or anything.

“Geez... Do you like me that much?” she grumbled.

“Yeah, I can’t hold myself back.”

“Hoho~ How are you going to survive without me?” Yoo Yeonha asked with a triumphant smile.

— A year has passed since the vice guild master of Essence of the Strait, Yoo Yeonha, announced her marriage...

The news was playing on TV in the mansion’s living room.

Yoo Yeonha placed a finger between her lips and innocently said, “They’re talking about us.”

“Yeah.”

— However, there has been no further news despite a year having passed. There has been a lot of speculation that they broke up, but Kim Hajin joined Essence of the Strait as an official partner today and...]

Poke... Poke... Poke... Poke...

Yoo Yeonha poked my shoulder.

I tilted my head in confusion and looked at her.

She smiled and asked, “But when are we going to get married?”

“...I think I should be the one asking that question, no?”

“What about next month? I already picked a wedding dress.”

“...Huh?”

I frowned at her words. Didn’t the bride and groom usually pick out the wedding dress together?

“Why did you pick one alone? I saw on TV that couples tend to do that together.”

“You were busy. Besides, I can just change it if you don’t like it. I’ll wear whatever you want.”

“I’m sure you look beautiful in it. Can you show me?”

To be honest, I didn’t really want to go dress shopping. I heard it was both tiring and stressful...

Yoo Yeonha flashed a mischievous smile before going into her walk-in wardrobe as I stood outside the door blinking like an idiot.

Around fifteen minutes passed and she finally came out.

The smell of roses filled the air as she appeared wearing a dress that would certainly steal every eye that ever saw it.

“...”

I felt my heart skip a beat.

“What do you think...?” she asked while feeling a bit embarrassed.

Her bare back was slightly exposed, her hair was held up by a pin, and her facial features looked sharp even without any makeup... Every inch of her looked perfect like an immaculate picture.

Did it make sense for someone to be this beautiful...? Could a person really be this beautiful...? Wait... was this what people called being blinded by love?

I nervously gulped and said, “Let’s do it today.”

“Today?”

“Yeah, let’s have a mini-wedding right away. No, let’s do it right now while you’re wearing it.”

“...Do it while I’m wearing it? That sounds a bit weird...?”

“Not at all.”

I lost control over myself as I pounced on her. Every man probably wondered at least once in their life if it was possible to do anything while their bride was wearing a wedding dress.

“Wait! You’re going to rip it! Haaaang~” Yoo Yeonha tried to resist and pushed me away, but I restrained her by licking her ear.

All of her strength left her body along with her desire to resist me. I used this opening to dig in here and there in her wedding dress.

Ring! Ring! Ring! Ring!

That damn alarm...

Both of us looked at our wrists while intertwined with each other in the wedding dress.

“...It’s a mobilization order.”

“Yeah...”

I wanted to ignore it, but that would defeat the purpose of joining a guild in the first place.

Then, I suddenly recalled a resolution I recently made. I wasn’t content with being happy alone in this world since I couldn’t go back to my own world, so I decided to live a meaningful life instead of just surviving in this one. I wanted to sacrifice a part of myself to improve the lives of others living in this world with me.

Yoo Yeonha placed her hand on my shoulder and said, “Let’s go together.”

“Sure, and let’s continue where we left off once we’re back.”

“...I don’t know about that.”

Yoo Yeonha ran into the walk-in wardrobe, slammed the door, and changed her clothes.

I waited until she changed into her suit, and we set the coordinates on my smartwatch.

“Done?”

“Yeah, it’s ready.”

“Okay~”

Both of them shouted ‘Hwaiting!’ before setting out on their mission.

The bed was still warm from their body heat in the empty mansion that they left behind. The plates they didn’t wash after eating, the hologram TV with a doll that looked like Kim Hajin sitting on top, the picture frames on the wall, pictures of them laughing together, the neatly folded wedding dress on top of the sofa, and a place where the husband and wife would live happily ever after.

This place was no longer just another part of a novel.

It was now a place where they would make new memories and achieve their dreams together.

Maybe, perhaps, forever.

< FIN >

PDF-by: traitorAIZEN